The Cheyenne Tribe includes about 5,000 Indians, and there are numerous other tribes having varying numbers, some as small as 400. The work has been started among the Otoe Tribe also, and the gospel message has spread to the Pawnees and other tribes, and many have become interested.

On April 11th by the provision of the officers of the general conference, the morning service was devoted to the interests of the Indian work, the time being occupied with addresses by the missionaries who had been working among them and the two Indian elders named above.

Another thought introductory to the addresses which follow is that the saints of the Reorganized Church believe that the Indians are of Israelitish descent, according to the teachings of the Book of Mormon which purports to be a history of their ancestors who came out from Jerusalem 600 B. C. and settled in America, growing into two great nations called Nephites and Lamanites after their founders Nephi, and Laman. The Lamanite people rejected God and the gospel at the beginning and entered into barbarism, and after 1000 years overthrew the Nephite people and the two amalgamated. The prophecies of the Book of Mormon indicate that many of the remnants of those early nations will in the latter days come again into the knowledge of God through the gospel and will rise in the scale of civilization. Thus the planting of the work of the gospel among them is in harmony with these prophecies.

ADDRESS OF ELDER HUBERT CASE.

In the opening remarks of this service, I wish to say that there comes to my heart a thrill of joy as I stand before you today, and have the honor of introducing to you two men of renown; though dusky they are. We call them the Red Men, and they are men who have participated in the affairs of state, and have been the representatives of thousands of their people in the affairs of State at Washington. Only one year ago, Chief Three Fingers, and Phillip Cook, the interpreter, have both united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ.

I am going to read a little this morning, and especially in behalf of the young people of the church, who have been studying the Book of Mormon in the Religio work for the past several years, and have been feeling, many of them, that they would like to see the fulfillment of some of the promises made therein. It is a well known fact to the people to whom we are talking today, that this little volume came forth and was translated by the power of Heaven, when the God of Heaven sent his angels to bring forth the record of this benighted people who had wandered in darkness here for hundreds of years; and the spell or silence of more than a thousand years was broken by God's voice once more being heard from the heavens. And in the hearts of Latter Day Saints, whose heads have grown gray in the service of this work, there has been a looking forward to the time when the sons of Lehi would accept of this great gospel message, that we believe is absolutely true in all its hearings.

Let me call your attention to this point today, as I read a statement or two to you from the Book of Mormon. But this work did not start in one day among the Lamanites or Indians, and there have been efforts made in days that are past to get the gospel before them, but no man can accomplish one thing in this work without the aid of Almighty God. I believe now, by the past three years experience I have had in missionary work among this people that the time is at hand for the gospel to be preached to them, and the promises of God to be fulfilled, and my strongest reason for believing this is the fact that from the time we began our work among them about three years ago, the Spirit began to work among that people, and it has gone like an electric shock through the tribesmen of Oklahoma, where we find something like twenty or thirty tribes. I started out to the Cheyenne tribe at Kingfisher one Sunday and met with these people, one of whom was a brother by the name of Leonard Tyler, who was buried last Saturday,—one of the grandest men I ever saw, and loved by thousands of people. He was standing, talking, in the house of Reuben Taylor when he had an open vision, and he said "There is a man coming now on the road, and he will step into our midst soon, and he is a servant of God, with a message to this people." Presently I stepped into the midst of the congregation; and he gave way and sat down over against the south wall of the house. The front room was filled with the men, and the dining room was filled with the Indian woman and children; and I stood there with the Spirit of God upon me and preached for an hour, and made a strong appeal to the people upon the line of the prophecy God has given to them, and told them that the promises made in this regard are true and this [The Book of Mormon] is the true history of the people.

I showed them the necessity of coming into the kingdom of God, and that it was more than a church. It was the ark of safety where God would take hold of their hands, as he did with their ancestors hundreds of years ago, which tradition is still among all the tribesmen of America today. After I got through, this man Tyler repeated this statement two or three times, "Good sermon" and told all the Indians to shake hands with me, and told me that day; "This is the first sermon I have heard. I have been a Christian for thirty years, and this is the first sermon I ever heard in all my life that the Spirit of God touched my heart," and he said, "It burned my heart and I want to hear more of that preaching." That Indian, my friends, that good old man Tyler, was touched with that sermon, and other Indians were touched as well, and sometime later I met with this same Indian, and in conversation with him, related the effect of that meeting upon his life and expressed his desire to come into this church, but asked for time.

In the meetings we have had in the past three years, I have spoken with the Cheyennes, and the Arapahoes, the Kiowas, the Cherokees and others, and some of the Cherokees have come into the church, and many of the Indians of other tribes in the western part of the state in the past two or three years, and it seems to me that God has more firmly fixed his work in their hearts; From these meetings we have had representatives of the different tribes, and upon one occasion, last September, there were five thousand Indians in one meeting at the Indian Fair at Watonga, and we had the opportunity of talking with that people and mingling with them, and this same man I referred to, Leonard Tyler, said to me, "Your gospel has just reached many of these Indians here and they are beginning to believe that you have the true church.

I believe the Spirit of God is doing that work, and it never could be done until God, by his Spirit, did teach that people. I wish to read, then, the statement of two men from the Book of Mormon.

And then shall the remnant of our seed know concerning us, how that we came out from Jerusalem, and that they are descendants of the Jews. And the gospel of Jesus Christ shall be declared among them; wherefore, they shall be restored unto the knowledge of their fathers, and also to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, which was had among their fathers. And then shall they rejoice; for they shall know that it is a blessing unto them from the hand of God; and their scales of darkness shall begin to fall from their eyes; and many generations shall not pass away among them, save they shall be a pure and a delightsome people."—2 Nephi 12: 12, small edition.

And now because of their steadfastness, when they do believe in that thing which they do believe; for because of their firmness when they are once enlightened, behold the Lord shall bless them and prolong their days, notwithstanding their iniquity; yea, even if they should dwindle in unbelief, the Lord shall prolong their days until the time shall come which hath been spoken of by our fathers, and also by the prophet Zenos, and many other prophets, concerning the restoration of our brethren, the Lamanites, again, to the knowledge of the truth; yea, I say unto you that in the latter times, the promises of the Lord hath been extended to our brethren, the Lamanites; and notwithstanding the many afflictions which they shall have, and notwithstanding they shall be driven to and fro upon the face of the earth, and be hunted, and shall be smitten and scattered abroad, having no placing of refuge, the Lord shall be merciful unto them; and this is according to the prophecy that they shall be brought to the true knowledge, which is the knowledge of their Redeemer, and their great and true Shepherd, and be numbered among his sheep."—Helaman 3:8.

Was there ever a truer prophecy made than that very one? Look how the people have been driven and scattered to and fro upon the land and hunted like wild beasts until the Lord says, "I will begin to be merciful to that people," and he took them by the hand and located them in Oklahoma and other places, and in 1873 our Government began by appropriating something like ten thousand dollars for educational purposes, but now it runs into the millions, and today we have something like thirty to fifty government schools where these people can send their children, and have them educated in all things. And God, I believe, has touched that people and he has done this, in order to prepare them for the very work we have today to introduce among them. Today these people can speak English—The Chief here does not speak it, but the majority of them do. They speak just as good English as we do, and I have preached in English, and some of them could not understand, and for that reason we have the interpreter most of the time; and these people are beginning to believe in this gospel, and are beginning to give their names for baptism.

Nearly two years have passed since I set my heart upon taking the advice of the leading men when they said they believed it was the gospel of the Son of God, and I set my heart upon this point, "I will baptize the leaders among that people." They advised me to do that, and I am thankful that today on this platform are two of the leading representatives of the five thousand living Cheyennes today, one of the largest tribes of the state. We have baptized a number of the leaders among that people, and the Spirit of God is beginning to work with them, and by the manifestation of his power, we could stand here today and tell you of manifestation after manifestation that has been given confirming this gospel unto them. And taking into consideration the promises that he made that they were more firm and steadfast than their brethren, the Nephites, centuries and centuries ago.

Now, friends, we are going to get these people into the church as God will move upon them and we can bring them in, and when the Lord sets the seal upon their hearts, I believe like their ancestors of old, they will be firm as the Rock of Ages, and that is what we expect, and I am thankful this morning, that I have the privilege of saying to the people as we introduce these brethren to you for a short talk, that we have certainly felt glad to be in the work that we have done among that people—not that we have done wonderful things—I think we have simply started the work—that is all we have done, and it has taken patience, perseverance, faithfulness and prayerfulness.

I want to speak of one experience that has been the greatest confirmation to me of all my experience since I became a Latter Day Saint. Thank God, I was convinced that this work was true, and God has borne that witness to my heart that this church is the true church of Jesus Christ upon this earth. When I was working with these Lamanite brethren the past summer there came to me the supreme moment of my life. While sitting in the front room one morning I was instantly wrapped in a heavenly vision, and for one hour or more the Spirit of God surrounded me, and I saw the grandeur of this work, and I felt his power in that endowment of power that I believe we are entitled to, to qualify us for the service of God, as I never had experienced in all the days of my life. At the time the joy and the peace that filled my soul, and the grandeur of this great latter day work as it loomed up before me, under that divine power that surrounded me there during this period of time; passed the ability of mortal tongue to describe. I could not understand why such an experience should come to me upon that occasion. I understood it later—as I see the work at hand in such wonderful magnitude. A wonderful work, I believe, my friends, is to be done among this very people, and I believe that this was my preparation, for after this time I began to lead that people into the waters of baptism, and God by his Holy Spirit, has confirmed that people, until today we have living witnesses among them. We are pleased to introduce now, for your hearing, the eminent Chief, Three Fingers, living near El Reno, Oklahoma.

ADDRESS OF CHIEF THREE FINGERS, OF THE CHEYENNE TRIBE.

I thank God that he has brought me here before you as an Indian, as one of the Lamanite brothers, standing here before you, and I cannot understand your words, nor I cannot speak English at all, but I have faith in God. I had many experiences that I went through in my former years. I am a man of fifty-six years of age.

I have had the experiences of the other denominations or churches for several years, and I know what they talk about. And it has been just a short time ago since Mr. Case and Mr. Christensen came to us and told us about this new gospel, and ever since I heard their talks, I can feel that the Spirit touched my heart, and by that I know that it is the true gospel that has come to us.

When these missionaries commenced to talk to us about this true gospel, my head was just uncovered and I could see the glimpses of light in the way that they point us to go, and by following their advice and the promises that had been sent to us through their lips, I believe that my people will come, if the Lord will keep on sending his servants to that place.

Ever since I joined the church of these Latter Day Saints, that I feel better and had more joy in me than I have during the past life. Now I come here to learn. I come here to learn, and see what I can learn from you people, and I thank the Lord that I have learned from you, so I am here with you; and we say at this time, we need your help, we need your help in a financial way that there should be a home for these Indians where they can go and worship their God like you people—you have a place for your people to come and worship their God; and since if there is no home for us to go and worship, there will be a kind of draw-back, but if there is a home for us where we can go and worship our God, the other Indians will keep coming in, that they will see the interest that will be shown over us by attending to our meeting.

That is all I wish to say now.

Elder Philip Cook, interpreter.

ADDRESS OF PHILIP COOK, "MEDICINE MAN," AND INTERPRETER.

I have not any special topic or any subject that I wish to take up to interest you people, but having to look at your hymn that you sang, there is a paragraph there that strikes me, that I am going to talk about for a little while. The 4th stanza:

"Before your nations knew us,
Some thousand moons ago,
Our fathers fell, in darkness,
And wandered to and fro."

That means before you knew me, before you knew my people. You people were away across the ocean when I am living here alone. This was a goodly world for our Indians. God has blessed us in such a way so that we can live here alone, without having any troubles from anybody. He gave us all the game, all the fruits, so we did not have to dig the ground or work hard to make our living. These things were going on before you knew us.

Now some thousand moons ago there was a time when you people came over as foreigners. At that time you did not bring over this gospel. You were looking for a place where you can live; and when you came to my people you find that they had a gospel among them, and that Indian gospel was the gospel that the Indians had lived up to ever since they knew their Creator. We are here alone in this America. Red men, what you call, lived peaceably, lovingly and kindly.

Even at this time you never hear a word from the Indian that uses the profane language. We have no words that we can use in profanity. That shows that their God, their Creator, who blessed them here in this America has taught them that they must not use any other kind of language except the language that he wanted them to use. They were gospel people; they were praying Indians. They were great worshippers through sacrifices and offerings.

They believed in God—they believed that the Great Spirit, (what they termed as their God at that time), the Great Spirit can talk to them, if they shall go to the tree or fire, that God can talk to them most anywhere, and that was their way of worshipping in these times.

We have no written language of any kind, but by their traditional ceremonies that have been handed down to them from their ancestors even up to this time, the Indian is still keeping up these traditional ceremonies, the worshipping, like the white people have. If there was not any gospel for you, you would not have any way to worship God. The gospel is your God and teacher, and that is the way with these Indians in these times.

They have no written language or gospel that they can depend upon, but there is a way that God can work in the minds of these Indians, so that the Indians may know that they can worship God in their own way.

"Now the next verse says: 'Our fathers fell in darkness.' What makes them fall into darkness? They were living pure, peaceable; they were no darkness of their way of living, but if there was the gospel, my people would not have had to fall into darkness, but you people was the one that caused my people to fall into darkness. That makes why the Indian fell into darkness, because of the temptations that had been brought over by you foreigners. They are entirely lost.

Now after awhile, after sometime, the Baptist Missionaries, and the Congregationalist, and the Episcopalians, and the Lutherans, they send out their missionaries amongst us where we were and they come there and proclaim their church; each of these denominational churches claim that their church is the real established church of God; and while we learn these are the churches of God, we do not know what to do, because there are too many branches, you know if you was to go out here on the road, and strike another road that leads off, but looks just like the road you are following, and another road comes in there, you cannot follow two or three roads at the same time, and that is just the way that these denominational churches came to us. If we had two or three persons in us, we might divide ourselves and follow this other road, but we cannot do it. So I came in contact with the Baptist Missionaries. I work with them for 14 years, interpreting their preaching to my people.

Now through those long years I have been feeling, searching my true God where he could be found, but I have not found him yet. I can hear his promises by these denominational churches and by his servants, but I have not felt the Spirit that I ought to have felt. But these missionaries, your missionaries, Hubert Case and Christensen came amongst us where we had our meeting of our own worshipping our God in our own way. They came in there with this new gospel and I was selected as the interpreter for them, and while I am interpreting what they say, I had my mind on it, and when they get through, they ask us what we think of it. The boys say, "That is alright; I can feel that the Spirit seems to touch my mind, the Spirit was in the room when they were talking to us; and these missionaries asked me what I thought of it. I told them that I had to think it over, and study it over, and see how it would come out; because I have learned a good many other denominations' doctrines, and it is very hard for me to adopt this new gospel just the very moment I heard it. I got to study it over and think it over.

So about six months went by, and we had another meeting and I interpreted it, and they kept on asking me what I think of it, and I told them to wait a little longer, and so the last meeting we had before I joined the church, I got up and make a short talk to my people. Told them what I had learned at school, and the experience I had for these years when at school, and I told them that this is about the first time that I had ever heard a good sermon from God's servants. I told them that the Lord touched my mind and my heart, and that I can feel that the God of the whole universe is within me, and I told them I am going to join in; I am going to take this new gospel and I know it is true, and I want to live up to it as long as the Lord lets me live.

And I told Hubert Case, I am not only going to just join in the church, just to make others come in and follow me, but if the Lord wills, that I want to take up the work and put in my whole time to preach this gospel to my people; and so that is why I am here. I am here like a hungry man. I am here to see if there is any fragments dropped down from your lips, I will catch them. I am hungry after the word of God, and what I have learned from you people, I will take it back to my people, that it might do them some good.

And I have to say like what Chief Three Fingers, says, we need your help in a financial way. We must have a home for ourselves, where we can go and worship our God. So we ask you to help us in any way you can in reference to this church business.

ADDRESS OF JAMES YATES, ONE OF THE MISSIONARIES AMONG THE INDIANS.

We call attention to a statement of the Apostle Paul touching the latter day movement, when he said, "blindness in part is happened to Israel" until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." It is not necessary to make any particular further reference to this, for Latter Day Saint people to understand what it means; and if the time has come for that period of blindness in part that had happened to Israel, to be broken, and that our brethren of Israelite blood shall begin to see again the light of the gospel, it also means that in accompaniment with that, the fulness of the Gentile time is drawing near. Also in connection with that; that when the cup of wickedness of any people is full, there follows destructive disasters. The prophecies indicate this, and the pages of our newspapers show that they are true, and it is time that we, as his children, make an effort to stand in holy places before him.

We recite to you as briefly as we can, our work upon the way up here to the general conference, among the Otee people. We had been laboring among that tribe and one of the teachers in that locality had been hostile toward the gospel for sometime, and telling the people, "The old manner of religion is good enough for us." These Lamanites did have revelation from God among them, even before the gospel came in touch with them, and it has preserved their understanding of revelation from God by revelation unto the present time. The chief told his people, "We will not care to listen to the doctrine," but after awhile he came in touch with it himself, and listened through the interpreter, and a few short weeks ago I was called upon to enter his home, and he said through the interpreter to me, "Do you see this picture? He is my friend who has been dead now for some thirty years, and this man appeared to me in a vision in the night and spoke to me and said 'baptism is for the remission of sins, and this is the gospel and you should enter into this gospel work.' and he said furthermore, that the man, who had been dead thirty years, said that he himself expected to be baptized when he had the opportunity. He said he spoke to his wife concerning the matter and she told him she had been ready sometime ago, to unite with the church. She is an intelligent and interesting woman. I was delayed on my way to the conference by having to stop and baptize that man and his wife into the Covenant of Jesus Christ, the Church of Jesus Christ upon earth.

These things show the movement of the Spirit of God. What was it that brought the gospel to that man there? Was it the work of man alone? We might have preached to that man for years, and to no avail if it had been by man's power alone, but the heavenly Father, by the Holy Spirit has enabled us to do the work.

Elder Alva Christensen also gave an address which we are obliged to omit because of its length.

WHY AND HOW TO FAST.

Only sufferers and sinners will understand this. Because only sinners and sufferers are the ones who need it.

Don't be needlessly apprehensive at the start—this isn't a missionary tract. Missionary literature is distributed by persons who are good. But I, being both a sinner and a sufferer, am not good, therefore this is not a missionary tract.

Give me a hearing. Open your ears and your hearts to me, but close your eyes and your lips, Take what little good there may be for you, and leave the rest.

An extreme fast,—say from twenty to forty days, is just as apt to wreck a man as it is to rescue him. Unless it is properly conducted and completed.

Sane fasting never injured anybody, sanitary fasting has often done it. And people shrink from the fast because of the follies that usually accompany it.

Fasting in itself is purely a negative process. It must be supplemented by a positive regime. There are only two excuses for taking a crutch from a cripple; when you can give him a better one or when he can stand alone. The whole human race is crippled. And their crutch is the food habit.

I know people who have acquired the fast habit. They starve about a third of the time. Just as foolish as to eat all the time—and a lot more uncomfortable.

Having once solved the personal equation in fasting, you need not resort to it unless you care to. But how many have solved it? The great Messiah, before he voiced his message, had to take the extreme fast to get perfectly clear. And I have yet to find the freethinker who is more worthy of emulation than Jesus, the Master Christ.

Fasting is not merely denying oneself food. The extreme fast must be based upon, and adapted to, some dominant purpose. Some people fast with the sole idea of cleansing their bodies. I call that starving, not fasting. For health or purely therapeutic purposes, a number of short fasts would be better, ranging from two to seven days each, and occurring at intervals of about three times their own duration. Moreover their effect will usually be enhanced if you take acid fruit-juice unsweetened, in addition to pure water. The juice of a half-dozen oranges a day, or three lemons diluted, or half a pint of grape-juice in a pint of water; such gentle febrifuge, stimulant, laxative and germicide will hasten physical recovery perceptibly. Indeed a strictly fresh fruit dietary adhered to for a week or two every Spring and Fall would almost obviate any need for a fast at any time.

The fasting that I have in mind is not so much for health, although that is incidental to the other motives, but preferably for mental strength, psychic power, spiritual development and conquest of self.

During a long fast you learn for yourself what's the matter with you. Both physically and psychically. Because the fast reaches directly the three vital centers whence all disturbance, arises, digestion, thought and sex.

Be willing to believe. Man's one irredeemable error is to scoff at what he cannot understand and will not investigate.

People won't follow a long face, a full moon looks more inviting than a hatchet. Reform fails because it frowns.

The reason the world won't be reformed is because it shouldn't be. It should be instructed and inspired. But most of all smiled upon. The world wants truth but it does not want the errors, deficiencies and excesses of the professional exponents of truth. Whenever you find a man complaining that the people won't accept his message, you find a man whose message is incomplete. This is a digression.

You read in the annals of the church how many weeks a certain saint fasted. And you image to yourself a lugubrious visage, with cadaverous cheeks, compressed lips, aquiline features, furrowed brow, haunted eyes, palid flesh and a pitiable aspect in general.

How could you expect an audience or a live man of the world to be attracted by such a person, even though he had a message labeled "Truth?" We should smile more than we frown. Don't be anti-anything, be simply non. Sooner or later every knocker pounds his own thumb.

To eat for pleasure is to eat for pain; but to eat without pleasure is to eat without life. Soul suffers most when body seeks enjoyment for itself.

Work for the joy of working, play for the joy of playing, eat for the joy of eating,—and fast for the joy of fasting. In Doctrine and Covenants 59:3, we read: "And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Verily this is fasting and prayer; or in other words, rejoicing and prayer."

I have been asked "How can you fast for enjoyment?" Well, a materialist can't. But a materialist won't ever undertake a conquest fast. So such are eliminated. Only those will enjoy a fast who can enjoy both soul and sense.

During the fast, you should be happier everywhere save in two small patches of your anatomy,—your palate and your brain. But they don't deserve to be happy, they have been insubordinate too long. After the first week or so, discomfort vanishes here also.

It might be well to state that during the first week of the fast, the enjoyment of your friends and neighbors will not be particularly enhanced. They'll make it worse for you and you for them. Very likely this effect of a longfast was the reason why Jesus retired from his friends and neighbors during his forty days fast.

We are told by our friends the metaphysicians that happiness is harmony. If that be so, you will find yourself growing supremely happy toward the close of a two-weeks', three-weeks', or four-weeks' fast. They say every fibre of your body will be attuned to nature, every quiver of your soul made seraphic with the melody of truth. That long lost child-sensibility will steal over you once more, a child being proverbially happy because its soul is fed on the inner forces of earth and air and ether; forces cut off from men by their grosser environs of civilization.

Habit is the "family-entrance" to that notorious resort called Hell. Most of the people who go there use this side door. I do not exaggerate in thus defining habit.

Analyze all the crime, disease, and misfortune among men, and you trace it to a habit. Drink-habit, drug-habit, tobacco-habit, food-habit, passion-habit, worry-habit, gossip-habit, fear-habit, greed-habit, credulity-habit, hypocrisy-habit, and health-food-habit; these with a hundred more of their close kin are directly to blame for humanity's blind bondage to the surface form of things.

The only harmless habits are those newly-created by a self-conscious soul for its own individual use. No other habits are based on absolute sincerity. I was a Democrat, because my father was; a Catholic because my mother was; a classicist, because my teacher was; a beefsteak-eater, because my cook was. Needless to say I was "doped" all through, pardon the slang. Man, the only being with the upturned face, is the only being with the downcast eye. Is it not pitiful?

Small men are "creatures of habit," great men are creators of habit. This explains hero-worship. Since creature always worships creator. Either we make our habits or our habits make us.

A "bad habit" is a good thing, to outgrow.

Few souls are strong enough, brave enough, sane enough. But the soul in a thousand who is ready for the conquest fast is worth more than all the rest. The fast makes you free in more ways than I can mention here. The result of a properly conducted fast will be a complete change in life-habits.

Your thinking, your feeling, your believing, your desiring, your planning, your hoping, your loving, should be your own after the fast. It is safe to say they are not before you fast.

Every day of a long fast you will find your brain growing clearer. Keeness of discernment, depth of insight, quickness of decision, breadth of vision, finality of judgment; all this you may possess as never before.

The initiation of originality is a basic element in human power. This also the fast will enhance, perhaps awaken for the first. Great ideas are born in souls not content to adopt small imitations. And a soul strong enough to take an extreme fast in defiance of race-belief voluntarily puts itself in tune with the Infinite; in touch with creativity. And when God sees in one individual a soul that dare dream for itself, with a brain that dare think for itself and a will that dare act for itself, God loves that being peculiarly, blessing it in some special sense.

Almost invariably those who reject the letter of the Bible lose also its spirit. Because the Book of Books records some things that may be human superstition; the Freethinker denies therein more that is divine truth. God reveals to man only so much as man is ready for. So our light should be greater, rather than less, in comparison with the early seers and apostles. But they had the attitude of belief, some of us have the attitude of doubt.

Why and how do we lose our faith? Because we do not think, feel, and act for ourselves. That's all. In every crisis of life, comes the guiding whisper of instinct, intuition, inspiration, revelation or some other voice of the soul. But the din of the world without has deafened us, the shadow of appearance has blinded us, the advice of false friends has dissuaded us. Next time the voice sounds weaker. Presently it is still.

Then has doubt settled into despair. We have bartered the certitude of soul God gave us for the mazz of mind offered by men.

Briefly, the office of a conquest fast, is to establish the three kinds of faith I deem most vital; faith in nature, faith in self, faith in God.

Faith in nature insures health.

Faith in self ensures success.

Faith in God ensures abiding peace.

Courage, virtue, and spirituality may all be obtained and enhanced by the conquest fast.

Spirituality is not piety. Many a pious man is good, in spite of his religion. Good, but not spiritual. A corpse is always good.

Spirituality is not solemnity. It is not credulity. A man may be religious and ignorant. He cannot be spiritual and ignorant.

Spirituality is not regularity. Many a man who has not missed church a single Sunday for two years has missed God every Sunday for two years.

Spirituality is not loquacity, or loyalty or charity or subtility. Nor does spirituality attend seances for the purpose of materializing itself to order.

Spirituality is not authority. It resides in no book, is limited by no creed, and cares for no man's opinion. Spirituality is its own sanction. You cannot add to it by any revelation given another, you cannot take from it by any revelation denied another. It in itself is final, nothing can make it more so.

Spirituality is not morality or poverty.

A man may be poor and immoral, a sufferer and a sinner, yet he may be spiritual enough to commune with God and receive revelations from him. And if he is an officer in active service in the church he may receive divine guidance in line with his official duties and prerogatives. All these things spirituality is not; what then is it?

Spirituality is a man's permeability with the inflow and outflow of the Spirit of God. It is the capacity of an incarnate soul to do two things; first to isolate itself from sense-elements and become stored with the primal pulse of Omnipotence; then infuse itself thus charged into whatever or whomever it touches. Any being is spiritual whose perceptions are all open heavenward and whose faculties are equally open earthward. Brain and body must be still while soul receives its endowment; then must brain and body rouse every atom for the materializing of the message. A dormant faculty in the brain; a dead fibre in the body; a thought of failure in the mind; a feeling of constraint in the heart; a stoppage anywhere, however slight, will make a man less spiritual by so much. It is a moral impossibility for a lazy man to be spiritual.

Perhaps this explains why so few clergymen are spiritual.

How to become spiritual? has been the perennial problem of church authorities for centuries. The answer is "by fasting and prayer."

The conquest fast reveals the insignificance of the brain. And this we must sense very strongly before we dare trust our souls. We might liken the brain to a telegraphic instrument, and the soul to a Marconi transmitter. One needs a network of mental machinery, the other a single flash of sunlight. We shall probably never be able to dispense wholly with telegraphic instruments. But nothing save the wireless can reach the ships at sea. There are many human ships disabled on the sea of life who need the wireless message from heaven.

The operation and results of wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony are types or shadows of the conditions that obtain when the divine receiving instrument in our being is in tune with the Infinite Transmitter at the throne of Truth.

The conquest fast refines the reasoning faculties. By a process of clarification it first frees the soul, then quickens the brain to fulfill the soul's behest. It should raise you to the acme of all your powers, or at least show you how to get there.

Inspiration, is not confined to any one creed. But anyone who places himself in a position to receive, will receive the Master's word, will receive light.

Fasting will not take the place of study and common sense, but it will stimulate both. It is not a panacea for human ills. One who enters a fast of considerable duration should do so with understanding. A phenologists should be consulted to ascertain your temperament. An extreme mental temperament should not undertake a long fast. Preferably a series of short fasts would be advisable. A person of high mental temperament might become insane through the effects of a two weeks' fast.

The physiological complement of fasting is elimination. The waste channels of the body, bowels, kidneys, lungs and pores, should be kept peculiarly active till the latent impurities released through the fast are brought to the surface and swept away. The mere stopping of the mechanism of digestion causes stagnation along the entire tract. So that extra precaution is required to offset this inertia. Here is a case in point. A certain hygienic healer of national reputation advised a patient to try a two weeks' fast. The patient consented, and forthwith stopped eating. That's all, just stopped eating, and elimination stopped also. Meanwhile the man was in agony, the good effect of the fast was lost, and the rightness or wrongness of the remedy could not be established in the minds of those who witnessed the perverted application. Simply because the healer forbade all artificial stimulus to elimination, he didn't believe in massage, he thought enemas were weakening, and he deemed cathartics the devil's ammunition. The folly of his course seemed to prove the folly of his theory. And so people judged. They condemned the practice of fasting, instead of the unwise practitioner.

Each fast must be governed by individual instinct. When the time comes for decision in a crisis, when the need for action arises, then must your own soul direct you, no voice from without is competent to do more than interfere.

Do not neglect to provide against the strain on the soul. It is no light thing to controvert in the space of a few days or a week all the habits of a lifetime and the thought heritage of a race; there have been newspaper reports of people made insane through fasting, through faulty fasting. There must first be an inner incentive, second an outer wisdom. Forced starving is more fatal than forced stuffing, since both soul and body protest. Fasting is never to be advised as a penance. Fasting is not sorrowing, it is rejoicing. You must want to fast more than you want to eat, before you can fast with absolute safety.

Decide on what purpose you want to fast for. Your answer will determine the time, the duration, the method and conditions of your fast. Discrimination of this kind will enable you to avoid confusion, hesitation, mistakes and disappointment. For instance, suppose you wish to strengthen your will power and establish your courage beyond assault. Then decide on a certain duration, five, ten, or fifteen days, and keep to it if the heavens fall. Suppose however you seek inspiration or revelation primarily. Then fast a day or two at a time; you cannot set periods and seasons for the Almighty. If your object be merely therapeutic, then a series of short fasts will usually bring better results than a single long one. Often the adoption of a specific diet will avail more to cure disease than any fast at all. Especially as few people are free to leave their home or their business for any length of time. If you work you must eat, and some of us feel rather obliged to work, in order that we may eat. Such an endless chain.

This question has been asked: "How can the average wife and mother manage a long fast, with her husband, her children, her household and her social duties to consider?" The answer is prompt and concise. "She can't."

Choose summer or spring for the conquest fast. Because fresh fruits and vegetables may be had before and after the fast. The temperature and atmospheric conditions favor purification. You can perspire freely without special effort. Sunbaths, moreover, are as indispensable to restore vitality as to quicken elimination. Nature attracts us to the open. You can't take a conquest fast in the house.

Prepare for the long fast by the experience of a few short ones. Otherwise you might think you were going to die the second day. Fasts of from one to three days or longer concluded safely may embolden those who haven't the nerve for a month stretch at first. The harder the struggle the greater the triumph. Judge for yourself how strong you are.

Plan work congenial but not compulsory. Under no circumstances attempt a long conquest fast while subject to the rules, orders, and suspicions of the average employer. You will lose more than you gain.

Don't even tell your friends and relatives you expect to fast. Unless perchance you are blessed with that rare gift, a comrade or sweetheart who understands. Go out camping; hire a house-boat; get lodgings at some distant farmers, coming in only at night; best of all, roll up a few accessories in a strong sleeping bag and big you to some solitary spot away from civilization.

The week preceding the fast, let your diet be wholly laxative. This to correct the invariable tendency to stoppage noticed the first few days of the fast.

During the fast, think of something besides fasting. Music or books will assist in this.

Devote the first three days to special elimination. That is, stimulate bowels, kidneys, lungs and pores to do double service. Fully half the benefit of the extreme fast is lost if impurities be allowed to remain in the body in excess of the body's capacity to expel them. Vapor baths are therefore in order; enemas; deep breathing exercises; abdominal massage; copious water drinking, hot unsweetened lemonade is most efficacious; friction baths; perhaps a single stomach lavage; even a dose of liver pills in case the colon flushing falls short of the stoppage. The usual headache will stop about the third day.

Drink at least two quarts of water every day. Acid fruit juice cannot be surpassed as an aid to elimination. Orange juice, lemon juice, grape juice, or limes, diluted in water are excellent. The juice of three oranges a day will allay fermentation, dispel noxious gases and lessen the mental strain of breaking, suddenly the eating-habit fastened on the race.

Break the fast with a morsel and a prayer. A single article is enough for the first meal, two will suffice for the second, three for the next four. Eat whatever you crave most. Wait six hours before you eat the second meal.

Remember:—Forty chews to one swallow.

Once at an inquest I looked into a dead man's stomach but I didn't see a single tooth there.

Most of the foregoing statements were gathered from magazine clippings and medical books. Some of them are the results of personal experience and observation.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Seattle and British Columbia District, Greeting:—

We are entering into another conference year. It is due to us that we take a retrospective view of the year that has just passed with this thought that it has not gone not to appear again, but that it is on file to be called for at the appointed time when the books are to be opened and each one is to be judged by that which is written in the books.

There are so many whom it is impossible to see personally, therefore we have adopted this means of having a little talk with you. There has been committed unto us a work that pre-eminently above all else that exists by way of importance, and that is the custody of the plan of redemption, and strange though true our responsibilities begin when we learn of what our duties are. What are they? May be asked with all propriety, can we recall with what feelings of joy we entered into covenant relationship with our heavenly Father through the ordinance of baptism, and is it not a fact we wanted every one to know and taste of the joy we experienced by obedience to the word of God, there was nothing that seemed too hard for us to do that we may please him. It was then we received that Spirit that filled us with the ambition to do something for the master.

It is a high and holy calling to be associated with God in the redemption of our fellows, how wonderful it has been arranged that we may share the joys if we are willing to share the responsibilities and the sacrifices, some are called upon to leave home and loved ones for years of service with only an occasional parole. Is it a sacrifice? Try it. What was the first sacrifice? Earthly attainments. What was the prospect now for this world's goods? Others are called upon to make the sacrifice in another way, but it is much pleasanter to the writer's mind, to remain at home and pay to the Lord that which the law provides for, even our tithes and offerings, "And, again, thus saith the Lord unto you,

O ye elders of my church, who have given your names that you may know his will concerning you: Behold, I say unto you, that it is the duty of the church to assist in supporting the families of those who are called and must needs be sent here to the world to proclaim the gospel unto the world; therefore, I, the Lord, give unto you this commandment, that ye obtain places for your families, inasmuch as your brethren are willing to open their hearts; Doctrine, and Covenants 75:3.

The following is as emphatic as the command to be baptized: "Behold, now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after today cometh the burning; for verily I say, tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up; for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remain in Babylon. Wherefore, if ye believe me, ye will labor while it is called today." Doctrine and Covenants 64:5. A great many have no tithing, but all of us have a little offering, if it is only a mite each month it will be acceptable to the Lord and it will be as much to your credit as though it was more, providing it is done with willingness that is not grudgingly given. Let it be with cheerfulness and with love for God and his work, "Behold, it is not meet that I should command in all things, for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful servant; wherefore he receiveth no reward. Verily I say, Men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their free will, and bring about much righteousness, for the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good, they shall in no wise lose their reward. But be that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth commandment with doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned." Doctrine and Covenant 58:6.

I appeal to you as your brother, send your tithes and offerings every month whether it be much or little, let us be as prompt with our heavenly Father as we are with our earthly obligations, you will be duly receipted if it is only 50 cents. Remember the address,

Wm. Johnson.

To the saints and friends of the Eastern Oklahoma District

Greeting:—Having been appointed assistant minister in charge, I kindly and sincerely indulge your assistance.

The field is new to me and quite a large territory, and only three missionaries, Brethren E. A. Erwin, John Harpe, and myself, and of course we will not labor together very much of the time, and would be pleased to have as much assistance from the local brethren as possible.

We are all laborers together with God; not only the ministry but the brother at the plow or anvil. Let us all put forth our best efforts and as the Psalmist has said let us go with weeping, sowing precious seed, and at the end of the year our sheaves will be many. We desire as much as possible to follow the instructions of the Master to the traveling ministry as found in Doctrine and Covenants 122:7, and the hearty co-operation of all the saints to help us read the angel's message to the world, you could do this by informing us of any new places where we can enter in and occupy, and by your faith and prayers we humbly pray that we may have a prosperous year in our labors with you.

Brother Erwin lives in the district, Bro. Harpe will soon be there. My field address will be Wilburton, Okla., home address 421 Eubank Ave., Independence, Mo. Please let us hear from you isolated saints and of any new openings and we will do the very best we can to assist all. We are servants and not lords. Praying and trusting that when this year is past, we can say like Paul, thanks be to God who has given us the victory through Christ.

I am sincerely yours in gospel bonds,

W. P. Bootman.

THE WHEAT AND TARES.

The parable of the wheat and tares as related by our Lord in Matthew 13:24-30, with its interpretation in verses 37-43 outlines the history of Christianity from the days of Christ to the end of the world, and since it covers the time in which we live, it is worthy of a careful consideration.

SOWING THE GOOD SEED.

"The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field." "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man." Christ with his chosen ministry under the pure light of divine inspiration set forth the heaven-born truth known as the gospel, which was designed for the bringing of men to righteousness and salvation. God was interested in that sowing. He sent his Son and manifested to him clearly the things which he would have him say and do, so that every word which he should say and every act which he should do, would be untainted with error or wrong. Jesus in turn carefully instructed his disciples what they should say and do as they went out to sow the seed, and for a time permitted them to work under his personal supervision, but as he was about to leave them he said: "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." Luke 24:49. They must come into closer touch with God before they would be qualified to carry the work of sowing into all the world; they must have the continual inflow of the "Spirit of truth" in order that the seed they should sow would be free from the taint of error as that which had come from the Master himself. Under this divine light was their sowing done, and the seed was good.

SOWING THE EVIL SEED.

"But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat." "The enemy that sowed them is the devil." Satan is an enemy to all who work good, and his methods of opposition are revealed in this parable. By stealth, and while men—the keepers of the field—slept, he crept in, unawares to men, and sowed the evil seed "among the wheat." He had nothing good of his own to offer to men, and the evil he sought to force upon them they would not accept if it were presented in all the hideousness of its real character, hence his necessity of sowing it with the wheat that it might be cherished and preserved to bring forth a harvest of disappointment and eternal loss at the end of the world.

Satan did not leave the kingdom of God alone and go among the unbelieving or the heathen to sow his evil seed, but he went where the Lord had sowed his good seed and sowed his tares among the wheat. Error was planted in the field of truth. Wicked men were established in the place of the righteous, and it was at a time when men—the keepers of the field—were asleep—a time of darkness.

How literally has this portion of the parable been fulfilled! How truly did Jesus and the apostles tell that the night was coming when no man could work, John 9:4; that the kingdom would be taken by the violent, Matt. 11:12; that false teachers would privily (Satan's method) bring in damnable heresies, 2 Peter 2:1; that the man of sin—the son of perdition—would be revealed, and that in the church where he would usurp God's place in counseling and inspiring men, but whom God would not destroy until the coming of his Son, 2 Thess. 2:3-8. Following the days of Jesus and the apostles there came a period when all the conditions described in these Scriptures existed. Revelation and inspiration through the Holy Ghost ceased, the holy men of God were destroyed, and with them went God's endorsement of the church which had become the habitation of false teachers and corrupt practices, and from the head of the corrupted body there flowed tyranny instead of love, revenge instead of charity, compulsion instead of persuasion, vindictiveness instead of kindness, falsehood instead of truth, lust instead of virtue; all evidences of the terrible sowing which had taken place. The darkness of that night was so great that the world itself has called it the dark ages. It was while men—the men of God—slept.

TIME OF GROWING.

"But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also." The word "tares" is translated from the Greek word Zizania meaning degenerate or bastard wheat, and such a weed is found in Palestine to this day. One traveller says that it resembles wheat so much that it is with difficulty that it can be distinguished from it until it begins to head when the stalks are found to be shorter than those of the wheat. The wheat and tares grew together, they looked alike, and only by a careful investigation could they be distinguished the one from the other.

The parable shows that during the period of growth the tares would flourish with the wheat, the error with the truth, and the evil with the good, and that the evil would be in such a form as to be deceptive, being accepted as good. It is apparent that the tares cannot refer to the heathens in their unbelief and spiritual darkness, nor especially to the unbelieving and non-professing in Christian lands, for no one is liable to take either of these for "children of the kingdom," or their principles for the doctrine of Christ. So the tares must be sought for among the wheat, and false doctrine will be found with the truth. Yes, Satan's greatest work will be found within "Christianity," and he will be found "sitting in the temple of God," or that which was originally the temple, or church of God but which was corrupted and debased by his influence until divinity fled.

The history of the world shows the introduction of false doctrine and practices into the work of Christ until today more than a thousand churches professing his name teach as many different systems of faith and practice. The divided state of "Christianity" proves the sowing of the tares, for without them there would have been but "one body and one Spirit, . . . one Lord, one faith, and one baptism." Eph. 4:4. The truth has not been destroyed from the earth, but it has been mingled with error so intricately that men who have sought and accepted the truth have been under the necessity of unconsciously accepting and supporting the error, just what Satan designed in sowing the tares, and on the other hand men who have perceived the error have been inclined to reject the truth in order to avoid accepting the error.

TIME OF HARVEST.

"In the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn." "The harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels." No interference by the Lord would take place until the harvest time when he would send his angels to separate all represented under the term wheat from all represented under the term tares. The line of distinction would be drawn between truth and error, between good and evil, and between the righteous and the wicked.

The work of separation is to come before the end when the burning takes place. It is to be accomplished by the ministrations of angels, which is contrary to one of the teachings of "Christianity" so called which declares that angels do not, and will not, minister to men as anciently, (one of the tares). It will of necessity require some time in which to accomplish the work, and as in every other work in every age, men will be called to assist.

THE GATHERING.

"Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn." One feature of the work which God would do through his angels at the time of harvest is the gathering together of the wheat into the barn. The tares are to be gathered in bundles in the field for the burning, but the wheat will be gathered into the barn.

According to this parable there must be a gathering place for God's people just before the end, and many prophecies of Scripture agree that God will gather his people Israel in the last days.

THE HARVEST BEGUN.

In these last days God has again opened the windows of heaven and his voice has been heard among men. The word of truth which has been shrouded in mystery and superstition through false tradition and vain practices, has been clarified through a new revelation of God's truth. Angels have come restoring the lost power and authority belonging to the gospel, and through their ministrations the place of gathering has been pointed out, and the gathering together of God's people is made a part of the gospel work in this dispensation. The gospel is being carried throughout the world where the upright upon coming in contact with it recognize it as the pure gospel of Christ unadulterated with the errors of the dark ages, and those who come in become the children of God and are prepared for the gathering.

It is the "dispensation of the fulness of times" when God is gathering together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth." (Eph. 1:10). It is the time when iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold, when men have "a form of Godliness but deny the power thereof," when forms of worship are multiplying without bringing the world nearer to God. (Perhaps these multiplied forms are some of the bundles). All the developments of the times are in fulfillment of the parable so fittingly used by our Lord, and since so much has been fulfilled we have confidence that all will be, and that God's people will be gathered in preparation for the coming of their Savior.

SOME LAMANITE SAINTS

In the middle stands Elder Hubert Case, the missionary who opened up the church work among the Indians of Oklahoma. At his left is Chief Three Fingers, head of 5,000 Cheyenne Indians, with Lulu Bearshield his grand-daughter at his side. To the right of Elder Case is Philip Cook, an educated Indian, the most influential man of the tribe, and occupying the position of "Medicine Man" or spiritual advisor; with him stands his wife Leah Cook. These Lamanites have been baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ within the last year, and Chief Three Fingers and Philip Cook have both been ordained elders and made ministers to their people. All were in attendance at the recent general conference at Lamon, Iowa.

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

By the recent changes made in the quorum of apostles there has been put upon the record an interesting combination of names. Among the apostles we now have such ancient names as Peter, James, John, Paul and Cornelius. While the names are ancient the men are modern,—living apostles.

We are informed that since the Curtis-Carl debate at Joplin twenty-five have been baptized including the deacon of the Baptist Church who was presiding moderator at the debate, his wife and daughter. Bro. Curtis is also to hold a debate with Elder W. G. Roberts of the non-progressive wing of the Christian or Disciple Church, at Iuka, Kansas, beginning May 15th and lasting twelve nights. Also a twelve night debate at Lucerne, Kansas, with Elder Wm. Ellmore of the same denomination beginning June 9th, Judging by the results of the Joplin debate there is no occasion for anxiety in the prospective ones.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Delightful rains fell during most of the day on Sunday refreshing and beautifying the landscape and giving hope of a bounteous harvest. The showers of material blessing but show the loving kindness of our heavenly Father as ministered to all men, and represent higher blessings of the spiritual life which are freely bestowed upon all who put themselves in a condition to receive.

Elder M. H. Bond was the morning speaker and Charles Fry spoke in the evening. The afternoon sacrament meeting in charge of Bro. W. H. Garrett, R. Bullard, and others was strengthening to the saints, encouragement being given through the spiritual gifts.

A parents-teachers' club of the Columbian school has recently been organized with Mrs. A. L. Yingling president, Mrs. D. J. Krahl, Mrs. A. Mills, Mrs. Wm. Aylor and Mrs. R. C. Brocaw, associate presidents, Mrs. George Eastwood secretary, and Mrs. Profit treasurer. The club is organized under the auspices of the National Congress of Mothers, and its work is designed to deal along the line of child welfare in relation to education. An open meeting was held at the high school Tuesday evening in which the work was discussed by leading educators.

The interests of the work at the Walnut Park Mission are being maintained by the saints in that part of the city, the Sunday school and Religio are growing, and the interest in the church services is good. Elder George Jenkins preached Sunday morning and Elder George Shearer in the evening.

Bro. John Zahnd has been placed in charge of the Englewood Mission. This is a mission to the west of Independence which has been carried on for some time by Bro. W. O. Hands with good success.

The monthly business meeting of the Independence Branch was held Monday evening. Considerable business of a routine character was done.

Bro. Edward Rammie who has labored under affliction for some time has recently undergone an operation for its removal at the Independence Sanitarium. His many friends will be pleased to know that it was quite successful, and that he is improving nicely.

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

Several weeks have elapsed since last we invaded your columns, but in the interim we of the first branch have not been idle. Far from it.

We have had the gospel story told us, both interestingly and entertainingly, not only by our regular pastor but by others, among them Bro. Ed Miller, Russell Archibald, and Alvin Knisley. And truly the sweet old story is ever new and we never tire of its beauties.

During general conference in the absence of Bro. Goodrich we were privileged to witness the first efforts of two of the fledglings from our home nest, to soar into oratory. We refer to Priest D. C. Wilke and Elder Roy R. Fifer and to say that the attempts were brave ones, is but mild commendation. They showed an unexpected strength, and some day we have no doubt they will leave the home nest and go forth to carry the glad tidings to other honest hearts.

We have been cheered and encouraged by the splendid reports from the late conference. Truly it was a momentous one, and a thrill of new life seems to have sent its waves circling over all the earth among all the saints, reviving and refreshing and inspiring them to renewed diligence, a more complete consecration, and a glad realization that God still acknowledges this people.

During the conference we were rather upon the ragged edge of anxiety lest we be left without a shepherd (and if ever a flock needed one we do) but we tried to pray in faith and resignation to God's will and now we are joyfully relieved to find so excellent a provision made for us. While we do not forget our dear brother Goodrich and the good work of his ministry among us, and his blameless life before the people, and while we are sad indeed to part with him, yet we are glad that our heavenly Father moved upon his servants to send us one whom we feel sure will be in every way competent and willing to carry on the work here, and we take pleasure in welcoming Bro. B. J. Scott among us, and trust every member of the branch will rally to his support nobly.

Sunday, April 27th, Bro. Goodrich preached his farewell sermon, and tears flowed unrestrained from the eyes of those to whom he has endowed himself in his six years' ministry among us, as they listened to his farewell words, and we feel sure there was not one who did not in their heart, bid him God speed in his new field of labor.

May 4th Bro. B. J. Scott preached two excellent sermons to large and attentive audiences in which he was blessed by the Spirit to our edification and instruction.

On this date the regular sacrament service was observed at five o'clock. A goodly number of the saints partook of the sacred elements, thus renewing once more their covenant with the heavenly Father. The prayer service following was all too short.

Our Sunday school is holding its own bravely, and steadily encroaching on the ranks of the enemy, and the neutrals, we achieve as new members are being recruited from both sources. Activity is the slogan of our superintendent. He has the advancement of the school very much at heart, and results follow of course.

The Religio also is keeping up splendidly, nice programs and good prayer meetings, etc.

These two auxiliaries are our joy and pride. The piano committee will give a social next Monday evening. A nice program is promised, also refreshments. Obviously the proceeds will go to the piano fund. There will be baptism next Sunday at 5:15 p. m.

Sr. Maggie Wright of Burlington, Iowa, and Sr. H. E. Wilke and daughters, Violet and Margaret, of Jacksonville, Texas, worshipped with us Sunday.

ST. JOSEPH, THIRD BRANCH.

Since the last contribution to the Ensign, our little branch has made a very noticeable improvement. A time card was introduced in the Sunday-school, reading in large black letters, at or before 9:45, "I am on time," after 9:45, "I am tardy." Nine star classes were also organized. An interesting competition is now under way.

March 2d, Bro. Toddiken preached in the evening on "The parable of the pearl of great price." A question of interest to all was asked, "Do we as saints value the pearl of great price as highly as we should?"

The Young Woman's department of the Auxiliary for social service gave an open meeting, March 18th at the church. After a short extra fine program, refreshments were served, proceeds for the benefit of the piano fund. The young ladies with Sr. Grace Knowles as superintendent are straining every effort for the advancement of their department.

Bro. J. E. Yates stopped at St. Joseph en route to his mission and preached a sermon, his subject being "The Indians." He told many interesting facts that were new to his hearers. One peculiar trait that he forcibly impressed upon our minds was their quick perception of the Spirit of God, or the Great Spirit as they express it.

Last Religio meeting our program varied from the usual plan. After the lesson study those present enjoyed an old fashioned spelling bee. Sides were chosen in the good old way and the match finally ended in a tie, four persons standing on each side who couldn't be spelled down. The evening was decided to be quite a success by everyone.

Grace Woodside.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

The young people's prayer service, April 20th, was reported as having been especially good. Our superintendent, Bro. H. C. Burgess gave a very interesting talk to the Sunday school, his subject being "Monotony."

Bro. E. C. Bell was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, his theme being "Christ brings life." The evening of the same day our pastor, Bro. Archibald, was the speaker, using as his text, "Christ and his Father will take up their abode with us if we keep their commandments."

The morning of May 4th Sr. Anna DeJong gave a very interesting talk to the Sunday school, her theme being one of the sweetest, that of "Mother."

The Peace Congress which was held here in St. Louis, May 2d, was good fortune to us, for we were privileged to receive two excellent discourses through Apostles Sheehy and Rushton, who with Bro. Archibald and T. J. Elliott of St. Louis, were appointed by the conference as delegates to represent us as a church. Bro. Sheehy delivered the morning discourse. In his opening remarks he commended the St. Louis choir, who under the direction of their leader, Bro. Bell, had just rendered two beautiful anthems. His theme was "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." He preached for the Lansdowne saints in the evening. Bro. Rushton occupied in Lansdowne in the morning and spoke for us in the evening, his theme being "Peace." May God's blessings go with them in their work. Bro. Joseph Betts of Belleville, is seriously afflicted and we sincerely desire the prayers of the saints in his behalf. He was remembered at the sacrament services in St. Louis and Belleville and we trust he will be raised up.

Sr. Gall reports good news from a visit to her mother in Oklahoma who was seriously ill, but through not of the faith was administered to and received a great blessing.

Sr. Wm. Anderson of Lamoni who was called here by the death of her brother, has been in attendance at church services.

Elizabeth M. Patterson.

2739 Greer Ave., April 5.

SECOND ST. JOSEPH BRANCH.

General conference is over at Lamoni and people here are beginning to ask for the news of our branch.

Four more heads of families were baptized recently by Bro. F. R. Gist and Bro. J. L. Bear all of whom were left almost persuaded to enter the waters when Elder J. S. Roth held his series of meetings here which closed for conference, at which time he baptized eight choice men and women. Those 12 disciples came out for the first time to hear this forceful speaker.

We think that Elder Roth has a method of preaching that is plain and easy to be understood by the out side people that his way of putting the real thing before them whether they belong to other churches or non members when they come out a few times they are sure to come into the fold sooner or later. Elder Roth visited the writer and family on his return home from conference and was glad and rejoiced when he learned that four others had been baptized.

It is a grand sight to see such large audiences in attendance. We hardly know some times how to make room for so many people.

Our prayer meetings are a spiritual feast even to those who never came out before, and the outward spiritual manifestations are frequent.

Sunday evening the 4th at our prayer meeting Bro. August Ehlers sang to the tune "Nearer my God to thee" by the Spirit a hymn beginning "Nearer my Saints to me." The writer and Bro. Ehlers being in charge of this meeting.

The step daughter of the writer, Miss Lucile Erler will soon begin to report all prophecies, songs, sermons, etc., as she has about completed her course of study in stenography and typewriting, having first tried her hand at reporting two sermons delivered by Elder Roth here during his meeting.

April 26-27, we had a two days meeting in charge of Elder I. N. Roberts of Stewartville and Bro. Middleton of Edgerton, large attendance was reported and a good time enjoyed.

The writer was appointed to go to the Okalida Branch to hold a two days meeting there which he did, his wife accompanying. Bro. Benj. Constance was also appointed to go but could not get away and appointed in his stead Elder F. B. Farr, to assist me.

We had good meetings, well attended by people not in the faith. The president, Elder Colman Suider and family and his mother entertained us nobly while there. The choir singing was the very best, and we believe about all took part in the prayer meeting.

Elder I. E. Yates of Guthrie Oklahoma, missionary among the Indians preached Wed. 21st to a large audience at our branch. He had a very large and attractive chart showing advancement and progress in inventions from 1830 to the present time.

A. A. Richardson.

May 5, 1913.

LAMONI, IOWA.

The annual conference of 1913 is among the events of the past, a matter of history, and over the results very much satisfaction has been expressed by many and perhaps by all who were present. During the first part of the time the weather was too rainy for comfort, but wherever they were found the saints were not gloomy but optimistic, in the main. There were some apprehensions but these largely disappeared and nearly all rejoiced in the things wrought for future guidance. Confidence and hope increased, especially near the close and at the end. The presence of the Lamanite saints, two men and two women; intelligent, honest, and worthily looking people of the red race, was a cause of satisfaction and pleasure to all the gathered saints.

After the session came work for the quorum of twelve, the High Council, the bishopric and for other administrative bodies of the ministry who tarried awhile.

On Sunday April 27th, the sermons in the Lamoni house of worship were by Bro. G. W. Thorburn and J. C. Crabb, the first named being of the missionary force appointed to Montana and the other appointed to Saskatchewan. For a man of his age, Bro. Crabb holds out with remarkable vigor.

At the two homes for aged saints the speakers that evening were Bro. O. B. Thomas and F. M. McDonald. Bro. Thomas is sent to Eastern Iowa, this year. It is about forty-five years since he began his ministry work in the Hopkins Branch, Allegan county, Michigan.

Previous to the general conference, Bro. R. M. Elvin visited the town of Worth, Missouri, and preached about a week, thus continuing work which he began last year.

Since writing former notes some faithful and beloved saints have passed to the world beyond. I give here brief statements of their lives:

Susannah Atkinson died April 23rd at the age of nearly sixty-nine years. Her husband Levi, died last year. Both were members of the church during a long period. She was baptized at Franktown, Nevada, in 1870. They also lived at Kewanee, Illinois, and came to Lamoni about thirty years ago. She was a diligent worker in the church and in all her life duties. Her five daughters were all at her bedside before her death, one from Nevada, one from California, two from Chicago and one living in Lamoni. Bro. John Smith preached the sermon, assisted by Bro. R. M. Elvin and H. A. Stebbins.

Bro. Erasmus Martin, member of the Evergreen Branch, died at his home seven miles from Lamoni, April 25, aged 56 years. Born in Denmark in 1863 he came to America in 1871 and to Iowa in 1875. Received the gospel in 1893, baptized by Bro. T. J. Bell, and made an unexcelled record for honesty and worthiness of life. He leaves a wife and seven children. Services were held in the Evergreen chapel on Sunday, April 27th. There was an overflowing house of Saints and non-members in honor of his memory. Bro. A. B. Young and D. D. Young, conducted the services and Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached the sermon.

Sr. Isabelle, wife of Bro. John Midgordon, died April 27, aged fifty-three years. Consumption caused her declining health for long years. She was baptized in 1874 at the well-known Mission Branch, La Salle County, Illinois, by Bro. Thomas Hougas. In 1888 married Bro. John Midgordon and he and two sons survive her. They moved from Illinois to Lamoni about two years ago. Funeral service in charge of Bro. John Smith. Bro. J. F. Garver preached the sermon.

Another death was that of Juanita Gertrude, infant child of Bro. and Sr. Samuel Young, grand-child of Bro. and Sr. David D. Young of the Evergreen Branch. She was 7 months and 27 days old and ill from time of birth. The parents now live in South Dakota but the mother was here visiting her parents, when the child died. Funeral service in charge of Bro. Oscar Anderson. Sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins.

Some other aged and feeble ones have been failing and may go soon.

On yesterday the speakers here were Bro. F. A. Smith, O. B. Thomas, Frank Hackett and J. D. Schofield. At An-dover, Bro. John Smith filled the appointments. A week ago yesterday Bro. D. C. White and August Johnson occupied there, and Bro. R. M. Elvin at Bloomington chapel.

I learn that in the Bloomington Branch four were baptized yesterday by Bro. Vaughn Bailey, his first baptisms. They were confirmed at the sacrament and prayer service by Bro. L. G. Holloway. Owing to the continued rain he did not preach although he went out for that purpose. Several were baptized in the Lamoni font during the conference and one since then.

NEBRASKA CITY.

Sunday, the 27 was a splendid day here; all life seemed filled with renewed energy. Our beloved pastor H.

May 5th.

A. Higgins gave us a good sermon Sunday morning his text being "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." We can say the spirit of the Lord was with him in great power.

Field our Religio class as usual at six thirty Sunday evening with good attendance, and close attention. Bro. Higgins gave us another good sermon in the evening.

The young people of the church are forming a choir, making themselves ready to take the place of the older ones. They have choir practice every week.

Mrs. E. D. Briggs.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Please explain Genesis 6:2

The inspired version makes it plain in the following: "And Noah and his sons hearkened unto the Lord and gave heed; and they were called the sons of God. And when these men began to multiply upon the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, the sons of men saw that their daughters were fair, and they took them wives even as they chose. And the Lord said unto Noah, the daughters of thy sons have sold themselves, for behold mine anger is kindled against the sons of men, for they will not hearken unto my voice." Gen. 6:1-3.

Is it right for L. D. Saints to be regular attendants at the services of other denominations, and to send their children to their Sunday schools, when there are no services of their own to attend?

This is not a question of right or wrong but of what might be wise to do under given circumstances. Generally we would prefer to attend, and have our children attend the services and Sunday schools of some denominations than to attend none. Where there are several children in a family, parents might do more for them by holding a Sunday school session at home teaching them the truth; but any church would be better than turning the children upon the streets upon the Sabbath.

Is the word millennial or millennium found in the Bible?

These words are derived from the Latin word millie meaning a thousand, and often applied to that period of 1000 years described in Rev. 20. They are not found in the Bible.

Please explain the tithing law.

Tithe means tenth. Tithing as understood by the church today is one tenth of the increase rather than the income as some teach. When a man comes into the church, whatever he possesses is his increase up to that time, and the Lord requires one tenth for the accomplishment of his work. His increase from that time should be tithed annually or at other periods. This system is absolutely just and equitable for every man helps according to his ability, and the man who has gained nothing owes nothing, if he has gained a little he pays a little, and if he has gained much he pays much. To tithe the income is not just for men's incomes do not represent their ability to pay. The law of Christ further provides for offerings and consecrations for those who are in a position to make them.

Please explain: "He that is tithed shall not be burned"

The passage refers to the time of the coming of Christ when "all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in babylon." Those who are not living under the law of Christ will not be able to stand when he comes in glory. See Doctrine and Covenants 65:5; Malachi 4:1; 2 Thess. 1:8.

Where did Lehi land in America? trace his journey northward. Locate the lands bountiful and Desolation.

The Committee on archaeology appointed by the general conference in 1894 concluded that the place of Lehi's landing was upon the western coast of South America, not far from the thirtieth degree of south latitude. This is near Valpariso. From the landing place they "journeyed in the wilderness" probably east and north, and it was probably not far from the coast that Lehi died. The colony divided into Nephites and Lamanites, and in time the Nephites moved northward and established themselves at a place they called Nephi, which the committee locates in Peru, at Cuzco. Still later when the Lamanites had followed them endangering their existence they moved north to the coast of the Caribbean Sea where they attained their greatest strength. Bountiful is supposed to have included the Isthmus of Panama, with Desolation to the north of it.

In issue of May 1st, in editorial "Accepting a Revelation" on first page, last line of first paragraph in third column should read "the church under Joseph Smith was in no wise responsible for it," the word no having been inadvertently omitted.

CORRESPONDENCE

GREENWOOD, S. D., April 6.

Dear Ensign:—I would like to tell through your columns a little of my experience of late. On the 1st of January of this year I received an appointment to the Indian school here, the Yankton Training school as teacher of the higher grades. I came at once, bringing my boy with me. He is in one of my grades.

This is a boarding school with about 90 pupils. I find the work agreeable. They are apt pupils in some branches. We have to cut out a great deal of the technical part of grammar, music and arithmetic however on account of their inability to reason well. Any branch that they can master by the use of their eyes, or ears, or hands, they progress in swiftly. They write beautiful hands, spell perfectly, draw and sing well. They are affectionate and are easily governed. I have become really attached to them. They seem to like me very much. I feel no difference in my affection for them and the white children I taught last winter. I often think of this little poem in connection with them:

"Beautiful faces are those that wear
The light of a pleasant spirit there,
It matters little if dark or fair."

They look so nice when they are ready for Sunday school. The boys have blue suits and caps, military style. The girls wear gray dresses trimmed in red or black braid, with large bows of ribbon on their hair. I am proud to take them to Sunday school every third Sunday.

There are two churches here, the Presbyterian and the Episcopal. The kindergarten teacher accompanies those who attend the former and I those who attend the latter church. The minister has asked me several times to play the organ or teach a class and I have always done so. This morning he seemed to have no helpers but he never asked me to take a class, so after Sunday school I told him that at any time I could be of any help I would be perfectly willing to do so.

He thanked me in a very gentlemanly way but said he would like to ask me more about my faith and the church to which I belong, and asked if I would let him read some of my church literature. He said "Some say, that you have come in here as a missionary from the Utah Mormon church."

I told him as much as I could, in the few minutes we had between Sunday school and church, of the differences between us and the Utah church and also told him that I would certainly be pleased to have him read our literature, that I had none with me but my weekly papers the ENSIGN but that I would send and get some others for him. I have run through all my late ENSIGNS marking the places bearing on the subject and find plenty in them to convince any fair minded person that we are not guilty of the crimes of which we are accused. I believe this has come as a direct answer to my prayers. I have prayed that the people here might be made to know and understand what we believe, so they would not think of us as Mormons, but there seemed no chance unless I would just walk up to them and say "I am not a Mormon," which of course would have sounded aggressive as well as abrupt.

Mr. McGeorge was here a couple of weeks last month. Business called him back to Oklahoma however. I will be here until the last of June then I will return to Oklahoma for my vacation. I hope I will be able to be there for a reunion. Please renew my ENSIGN for another year and send me the enclosed list of tracts I haven't offered my literature to anyone yet but they better not ask me for any if they don't want it for I am only too glad to give it to them.

People seem to think we have something we are ashamed of. They don't give us credit for having sense enough to get out of a place even if we found it to be the wrong place. I told the minister that if there was polygamy in this church I would not have remained in it and neither would my husband. He said he was very glad to hear me say it and he would like to read some of my papers. He seems very open and straightforward about it. I hope and pray that I may be able to convince him that my church as at least as pure as his own, in origin as well as faith and practice.

The minister at the other church has been a missionary to these Indians here for about 50 years. He has lived among them and speaks their language as fluently as they do themselves. The morning services are in the Dakota language at both churches. In the evening they are in English. My heart yearns over these Lamanite people when I see them feeding on husks when this beautiful restored gospel huds out so many precious promises to them. I enjoyed the vision mentioned in one of the late articles in the ENSIGN about them helping to build up Zion.

Easter Sunday there was a meeting in the afternoon in which several fine looking Indian men spoke in their own language. Their oratory impressed itself upon me even though I could not understand a word they said. I have to attend a dance every other Friday night given for the benefit (?) of the pupils. The employes all have to be present and look after the children. The Fridays in between are devoted to social games and plays for the little folks. I enjoy these because they seem to have such a good time, with our help. I must not occupy too much of your valuable space. I would like to know if there are any Latter Day Saints near here. I would be pleased to meet them. Trusting in the final triumph of this gospel of peace I am

Your sister in the Faith,

Editor Ensign:—I herewith present to the readers of the ENSIGN, what I believe to be a very valuable point in the controversy over the question as to the consciousness of the soul between death and the resurrection. This item I have never seen presented in any of the many arguments I have read on this great question.

In the following texts of Scripture where the grave is unquestionably meant the Hebrew word is "geber," proving almost beyond question that "sheol" should never in any single instance have been translated "grave" as it is so many times in the King James translation, but should have been always "hell," or the "unseen state" of the dead.

Genesis 50:5; 2 Samuel 3:32; 2 Samuel 19:37; Exodus 14:11; 1 Kings 13:30; 1 Kings 14:13; Numbers 19:16, 18; 2 Kings 22:20; 2 Kings 23:6; Nehemiah 1:14; 2 Chronicles 34:4; 2 Chronicles 34:28; Job 3:22; Job 5:26; Job 10:19; Job 17:1; Job 21:17; Psalms 88:5; 88:11; Isaiah 14:19; Isaiah 53:9; Isaiah 65:4; Jeremiah 8:1; Jeremiah 20:17; Jeremiah 26:23; Ezekiel 32:22, 23, 25; Ezekiel 37:12, 13; Ezekiel 39:11.

In Hosea 13:14, Psalms 49:15 where "sheol" is translated "grave" and should have been "hell" in lieu thereof, a strong point in favor of the redemption from that undesirable place is made.

In the field the elders are so often called to meet these questions with Advents, Millennial Dawners etc., that I thought the above would be of service.

Very respectfully your brother,
Edgar H. Smith.

However several important questions were answered and a better understanding was gained on a few points. Meeting adjourned. Benediction by Sr. S. R. Burgess.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

WHICH IS THE SABBATH?

BY ELDER J. S. ROTH,

An open letter in reply to an epistle and tract from a friend who holds Saturday to be the Sabbath.

Dear Brother:—I have just returned home from my mission field to rest for a few days and found your very interesting communication awaiting me. In the first place it was missent, and went to Spickardville ere it came here.

In the first place you write as though you were sure that the game was all blocked and that there could nothing more be said; and that you had firmly fixed the Sabbath question forever; but then at the close you request me to reply to your writing; just as much as to say, "I have given you my views, but I am not satisfied with them myself, please give me more light on this subject." If that is your desire, I will certainly help you out of the old mists.

Yes, all those texts I gave in the sermon you refer to, says "God is unchangeable." But, my dear brother, if the old Sabbath law given by Moses is still in force, then God is changeable; but if it has served its time and purpose and has been changed as God said it would be, then he is not changeable. You certainly will admit that Christ was the Son of God and that he came to do the will of the Father; and that he has a right to add to the law. You say that the ten commandments stand forever. Let us see how that agrees with what Jesus says in Matthew 5:17. "Think not that I have come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all shall be fulfilled."

Now let us see how Jesus understood that law. He did not say that he came to do away the law; no, but to fulfill. How do we fulfill a contract? I make a contract with you that I will pay you a hundred dollars next week; I pay you, and thereby fulfill my contract, and now it is no more in force. So Jesus fulfilled all the law, and nailed it to the cross. Matt. 5:20, "For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Say brother, what was the matter with those good Sabbath keepers? They observed the Sabbath strictly, even more so than Jesus did. Now see the 21st verse, "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, (Moses time), Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment: [Now listen] But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment." O, hold on, Jesus, you have no right to change that perpetual law! But he did.

Now read the 27th and 33d verses, and you will find Jesus changed both of those verses of the perpetual law. See John 8:29, "And he that sent me is with me, the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him." Did it please the Father when Jesus changed one of those precious commandments? Let us see whether Jesus kept the Sabbath. Now see John 9:16, "Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the Sabbath day." If he did not keep it, he broke it, didn't he? What do you think of Jesus as a Sabbath breaker? You see he had fulfilled the law, now it was no more in force. Now see John 5:16, "And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the Sabbath day." O, was it not just awful, that Jesus was not as good as those hypocritical Sabbath keepers? And they were going to kill him just because he would not keep the Sabbath. Now the 17th verse. "But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, [on the Sabbath,] and I work." The next verse says again he broke the Sabbath. Say! will Jesus be annihilated for breaking the Sabbath? If not, then I will not either. See Mark 2:24, he broke the Sabbath again. 27th and 28th verses: "Therefore the Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath."

Now read the 3rd chapter of Galatians and the 6th, 8th, 9th and 11th verses: "But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident; for the just shall live by faith." What good is your perpetual law, if no man is justified by it? Now note the 13th verse: "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law," etc. Also the 18th and 19th verses, "The law was added till the seed should come," that is Christ. Read verses 20-25. "But after faith [Christ,] is come we are no longer under a schoolmaster." (That old Mosaic law. 26th verse, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus," and not by keeping the old Mosaic law. For that reason God made a provision for the change or rather the fulfillment and abolition of that old law which could not save a man, and gave the gospel law instead thereof.

You cannot find one place where Jesus ever said keep the Sabbath. Please tell me where Paul ever said keep the Sabbath; and yet he said in Galatians 1:6-9, If a man or an angel preached anything else, or any other gospel than he preached, he should be accursed. Will Paul be cursed for not preaching the Sabbath?

I will now answer several of the theories advanced by the Adventists to support the Sabbath theory. I have met some of your strongest men on that question. There used to be one in Nevada, Iowa, by the name of Finch, who was counted one of your best posted Sabbatarians. Well, when I had a talk with him one hour, he joined the true church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and died years later rejoicing in the fact that he was lead to see the light before he was called hence.

The first quotation you use to prove the Sabbath to be perpetual is Gen. 2:2,3. Please read that, and if you can find the word "Sabbath" in there, I will give it up. You cannot find the word "Sabbath" in the Bible for about 2500 years after the creation. Next you quote Exod. 20:11 to prove that God made the Sabbath at creation. That is too far fetched; the 19th chapter says that they had left Egypt, and had come to Sinai, so that does not refer to the creation at all, but to the time that the law was given on Mount Sinai.

Second, You say, "It was observed before the law was given on Sinai." That sounds a little strange—that they kept the law, before the law was given. That is merely an Advent assertion without proof, for we have no proof of any Sabbath being kept at all, up to the time that God gave it to Israel, and to them alone, as I will prove. But it does look reasonable to me that when the gospel was preached to Abraham, as Paul says it was in Galatians 3:8, as I do not believe that they preached only part of the gospel to Abraham, and left out that notable event, the resurrection of Christ, when we read in Genesis 14:18, that they brought forth bread and wine, and Jesus said in Matthew 26:26, this is my body, this is my blood; also in 1st Corinthians 11:26, "For as often as you eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." If they kept any Sabbath at all, it was the first day of the week, in commemoration of the resurrection of our Savior; for Paul says if he did not rise, then we are of all men most miserable.

But now I will prove that it, "The Sabbath," was not given in Eden nor to any other people but the Israelites. (Deut. 5:2,3). "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb;" mark you it does not say in Eden but in Horeb. Now 3d verse, "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." Were Adam and Cain and the rest of Adam's folks there that day? No, Moses says that they were all alive that were there that day when God gave them the law. Now what law was that which they received that day, which their fathers did not have? The 6th verse tells us that it was the law or the commandments. Now if Moses told the truth, that the law was given to them there for the first time, and not to their fathers, then the Sabbatarians are wrong. Which will you believe?

Now why was the Sabbath given, and to whom? 15th verse will tell us. "And remember that thou [Who, Adam? No, those who received the law on that occasion] wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." If that is not plain enough, I do not know what more would be. In the first place it tells that the law, the ten commandments were given to those who were servants in Egypt. In the second place it tells them that they should keep the Sabbath in commemoration of their deliverance because he brought them out of bondage. I think it would be a surprise to old Adam, if one of our good Advent brethren should meet him, and begin to talk to him how that he was a bondman in Egypt, and how the Lord brought him out and how he had to keep the Sabbath after that. So you see that Moses did not keep the Sabbath because that God had rested, but because of the fact that God delivered them from bondage. And in every place where we read of the Sabbath, or the law, it refers to those who were in bondage. See Deut. 16:1; 15:15, and many other places—all to Israel who had been in bondage.

You say that God rested on the Sabbath. (Gen. 2:2,3). The Bible does not say so. It says that God rested on the seventh day. Now I will show you that God worked on the seventh day. See Gen. 2:2. "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made." You see he finished his work; he was not quite done on the sixth, so finished it all up on the seventh. So he did not rest the whole day, but just the time remaining after he had finished or ended his work. And that agrees with what Jesus says in John 5:17. "But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." That work of the Savior was done on the Sabbath. So Jesus must have had the mark of the beast, if the Adventists are right.

Adam was made on the sixth day. (see Gen. 1:26), so that the seventh day of creation was Adam's first day; then if Adam rested, (for he must have been awfully tired) he rested on his first day, and so all through his life. The record says that God rested, it is a matter of history. We read that God told Noah to build an ark; therefore we must too. We read that Joseph built corn cribs; therefore we must also. We read that God rested on the seventh day; therefore we must too. O, what twaddle, and then call it law!

Did the Israelites keep Saturday, or was it the seventh day only? Let us see. Exod. 12:2. "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you." Exod. 13:3,4. "This day came ye out in the month of Abib." Will somebody be kind enough to tell on what day and month the first day of Abib is, in our time? We will see how the Jewish Sabbath was kept; I will call it Jewish because it was given to the Israelites only, and to nobody else. Now see the Jewish calendar. Abib is the first Jewish month. It has 30 days. Exod. 12:15,16. "And in the first day [Sunday] there shall be an holy convocation, and the seventh day [Saturday] there shall be an holy convocation to you; and no manner of work shall be done in them, [Saturday and Sunday] save that every man must eat, that only may be done of you." This shall be an ordinance forever. Where is the difference there, between the first and seventh days?

Now we will examine the first month of the Jewish time: Abib had 30 days. Sunday the 1st, Monday 2nd, Tuesday 3d, Wednesday 4th, Thursday 5th, Friday 6th, Saturday 7th. Saturday 14th, Saturday 21st, Saturday 28th, Sunday 29th, Monday 30th. That ends Abib. Now we enter on Zif, the second month. This month has 29 days. Now remember we closed Abid on Monday, then we enter Zif on Tuesday the 1st, Wednesday 2nd, Thursday 3d, Friday 4th, Saturday 5th, Sunday 6th, Monday 7th. Now we have our rest day, the seventh, on Monday, instead of Saturday. Monday 7th, Monday 14th, Monday 21st, Monday 28th. This is the last rest day in Zif. Monday 28th, Tuesday 29th; Tuesday is the last day of Zif. The next month is Sivan, the third month, and it has 30 days, and if Tuesday is the last day of Zif, Wednesday must be the 1st of Sivan, Thursday 2d, Friday 3d, Saturday 4th, Sunday 5th, Monday 6th, Tuesday 7th. So our rest day in this month comes on Tuesday, as it must come on the seventh, no difference what day it is; just as our 4th of July always comes on the fourth, but not always on Monday, so the Jewish Sabbath always comes on the seventh, but not always on Saturday. Now follow that line of counting and see when you will get another rest day on Saturday, and as all the Jewish months had only 29 or 30 days, in three years they lost just thirty days, making it necessary in order to get back to the correct time, to the day that they left Egypt to add one month. Then they were square again with the correct time. I have never been able to learn what that extra month was called. But that does away with the idea of a Saturday Sabbath.

Now I will proceed to answer your other quotations. You say "The Sabbath will exist in the new earth." Isaiah 66:23. All right sir; did you never notice that the Jewish Sabbath never enjoined any worship? All they had to do, was not to do any work on that day, no worship at all. But the first day Sabbath enjoins both rest and worship, the word Sabbath means rest, so on the new earth from Sabbath to Sabbath, "shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord." That verse helps you nothing; for they shall worship as well as rest on the new Sabbath.

But let us see what Jesus thought of those strict Sabbath keepers, Matt. 16:6. "Then Jesus said unto them, take heed and beware of the leaven (doctrine) of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." Also in Matthew 5:20, "For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." What was the matter with them? I am sure they were all strict Sabbath keepers. Just because Sabbath keeping is not the gospel. Paul says in Galatians 3:2-26. "This only would I learn of you, Received ye the spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, (and not by keeping the Sabbath or the old law) preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." "But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident; For, The just shall live by faith." Where goes your salvation by the old law, the ten commandments now? For no man is justified by that law. "Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added (added to what?) to the gospel that was preached to Abraham, for there was nothing else to add it to) because of transgression till the seed (Christ) should come to whom the promise was made." "Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there has been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by law."

It seems to me that ought to settle it, that the Mosaic law could not give life. "But before faith came, we were kept under the law (of Moses) shut up in the faith which should afterwards be revealed, wherefore the law (of Moses) is our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, (into the gospel) that we might be justified by faith," (in the gospel) and not in the law of Moses. 25th verse. "But after that faith [the gospel] is come we are no longer under a schoolmaster." No indeed, when the gospel has come we are free from that old tyrant the Mosaic law or schoolmaster. Thank God for the gospel. "For ye are all the children of God [by keeping the ten commandments? No.] by faith in Christ Jesus." "For as many of you as [keep the fourth commandment? no, that is man's doctrine] have been baptized into Christ [into his church] have put on Christ. Not a word there about keeping the fourth commandment, as necessary to get into the kingdom. That twaddle about the Sabbath is all the tradition of man, instead of the law of God, the gospel law given by Christ.

I wish, dear brother that you would give me just one quotation where Christ or one of the apostles ever told one of his or their hearers to keep the Sabbath. No, not one place have I ever found yet that they taught any one to keep the Sabbath.

Next you claim, "That the disciples rested on the Sabbath while Christ was lying in the grave." Luke, 23:56. That is correct. For I think that they had a very bitter lesson just a day or so previous to this, when they saw their Lord put to death just because he was not a good man in the estimation of the Jews and broke the Sabbath. I do not think that they wanted to have another trial of that kind from those self-righteous Sabbath keeping Pharisees. One lesson of that kind was quite enough for them,

Next your paper says, "It was Paul's manner to make the Sabbath a preaching day." Acts 17:2. Correct. But you must remember that Paul wanted to preach to the people, and he well knew that if he preached on the first day of the week that his congregation would be about the size of our congregations when we preach in an Adventist settlement on the Lord's day. Therefore in order that Paul might get a hearing, he was compelled to preach on the old Jewish Sabbath. Next your tract says, "Finally, in the last mention of it [the Sabbath] in the Bible, it is called the Lord's day." Rev. 1:10. Exo. 20:10 Isa. 58:13. Mark 2:28. The comparison between Rev. 1:10 and the other texts is too far fetched for that purpose; the last text belongs to the Lord Jesus Christ only, while those in the prophets do not. Rev. 1:10. "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." We are told very boldly by the Adventist that was on the Saturday Sabbath, but that is an assertion without proof.

What do we understand by the "Lord or the Lord's day?" There is a good reason why in the gospel the "Lord's day" is Christ's day. Officially and emphatically he is the one Lord in this dispensation. Thus, "All power in heaven and in earth is given" to him. (Matthew 28:18). "The Father, hath made him both Lord and Christ," Acts 10:36, "that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord," (Philippians 2:11). In the gospel there is "one Lord," Christ, and "one God" the Father. (Ephesians 4:5,6.), "One Lord—Jesus Christ—by whom are all things, (1 Cor. 8:6). Now see Rom. 14:10. All must stand at his judgment seat. We are to keep his commandments, (John, 14:15). Now show me where Christ ever commanded to keep the Sabbath, fulfill his law, the law of Christ. Gal. 6:2. Commandments to be baptized in the name of the Lord, Acts 10:48. They were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Acts 19:5. All through the New Testament, the title "Lord" commonly refers to Christ, for that is his official name and position in this dispensation. See Luke, 2:1., "A Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Luke 10:1., "The Lord appointed their seventy." Luke 24:36. "The Lord is risen." John 13:14. "I then, your Lord," John 20:28. "My Lord and my God." Is that not enough to convince any one that Christ is the Lord? I might give more of the same kind to show that Jesus is the Lord of the Gospel. Therefore the Lord's day is the day of Christ, and not the old Jewish Sabbath day. As Rev. 1:10, was under the gospel dispensation it was the Lord's day, that is Christ's day. The Jewish Sabbath was abolished at the cross. See Colossians 2:16. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or the Sabbath days." Every one of them. The fact that the term "Lord's," immediately after the time of John, whenever used by the early church, was always applied to Sunday, and never to the Saturday Sabbath, settles its meaning in Revelation 1:10. It is probable that the resurrection day was not called the Lord's day immediately after the resurrection, but by the time John wrote the Revelations, perhaps about 96 A. D. it had come to be a well known name for that day.

Now I will take up your next question. Why do we keep Sunday for Sabbath? I have given you plenty of reasons why I do not keep Saturday. Now for the reasons for my Sunday keeping.

First, because Christ changed the Saturday rest, to a first day of rest and worship, as I have shown, that the Jewish Sabbath was for rest only.

Now see Matthew 28:16. "Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw him they worshipped him." "There we have a previous appointment to meet him on the first day of the week, on the Lord's day, on the noted day of his resurrection. There we have the positive statement that Jesus had made the appointment for his disciples to meet him, and that they worshipped him. And from that time on, the gentle church met on the first day of the week and also the Jewish converts, as you will see in Acts 20:6-11, that indicates clearly that the disciples held their meetings and communion on the first day of the week. . . Paul had been there seven days including the Jewish Sabbath, yet not a meeting was held. No, not a hint is given of any meeting on the Jewish Sabbath. It is even not mentioned. Why was that? Because Jesus had appointed them to meet him on the first day now. For in the 7th verse it is carefully stated that "upon the First day of the week the disciples came together [what for?] to break bread," to commemorate the death and resurrection of the Lord. And Paul preached unto them. This shows that Sunday was the day on which they were accustomed to hold that sacred service to commemorate his resurrection. There is not the slightest intimation that Paul called them together for a special meeting. But on the contrary, the record plainly shows that he waited till they came together in their accustomed service. He then embraced the opportunity to preach to them. The claim that this meeting was on Saturday night is falacious. Merely an assertion without foundation as I have showing before, for the day began at midnight, and therefore could not have been Saturday night.

As you will see in Nehemiah 13:19." And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the Sabbath, I commanded that the gates should be shut, and should not be opened till after the Sabbath. "That positively shows that the Sabbath not only did not begin at sundown, but did not begin till after it was dark. Now I will show you that it was so in Christ's time also. See Matthew 28:1. "In the end of [mark that in the end of] the Sabbath, as it began to dawn towards the first day of the week." Now when does the Sabbath end? Just when it begins to dawn towards the first day of the week. Does it begin to dawn for the next day at sundown? O what inconsistent positions some will take in trying to establish the doctrine of man, instead of the commandments of Christ! The day begins to dawn soon after midnight. So that settles the time when Paul preached; it was on Sunday, and he preached till midnight, that was their regular meeting day.

To prove that we turn to John 20:19. "Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and said unto them, "Peace be unto you." You see they followed the command of Jesus to meet him on the first day of the week. You say that in John 20:19. That they were not assembled to keep the Sabbath, but had closed the doors for personal safety. Correct. They had not assembled to keep the Sabbath, for the emphatic reason that the Jewish Sabbath had been abolished and now they met to worship on the first day of the week as Christ had appointed them to do. And to prove that they were right in doing so, Jesus met with them and blessed them wonderfully. Read it. Of course they had to lock the door for safety, for those prejudiced Jews, who built more on keeping the Sabbath, than on all the rest of the gospel law, would kill them, just as soon as they did the Savior, for not keeping the Sabbath.

Now to prove still stronger, that the first day was the day for worship, see the 26th verse. "And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them; then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst and said, Peace be unto you—and saith unto them receive ye the Holy Ghost," and he gave them power to remit sins." I wonder if Jesus was not afraid by this time when meeting with his disciples every Sunday as he had appointed them and blessed them so wonderfully that he was getting the mark of the beast? But perhaps he had not heard of that Adventist idea yet. There we have the unvarnished record that he met twice with them in succession on the first day of the week.

But the Advents say that in the last case noted, it does not say it was on the first day, "but after eight days." That could not be the next Sunday, for after eight days would bring it on Monday or Tuesday. Well, we will try that subterfuge and show its folly. In the German language the word "after eight days" is universally used to designate in a week from that day. And now I will show you that it was also so used in Bible times, and that will settle it. Mark 8:31. "And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and be killed and after three days rise again." "Say, was that four or five days after he was killed? Matthew 27:63. "Saying, Sir, we remember that the deceiver said, while he was yet alive, after three days I will arise." Matthew 17:23. "And they shall kill him, and the third day he shall be raised again." Now was he raised on the third day? If he was then "after three days" means on the third day, and if so, then "after eight days" means on the next Sunday. Is that reasonable and logical, and is it Scriptural? What think you?

Next you say, "There is no divine command for Sunday observance." That expression is vague. Do you mean by that, the day we call Sunday? If so, then you are wrong just as in all the rest of your objections to God's law. The name "Sunday" stands for the first day of the week, the Lord's day; the day that the Lord appointed his disciples to meet him, and they worshipped him; and that was the day that Jesus met with his disciples. So there was and is a divine command. Or do you claim that Jesus was not divine? Next you say, "Christ never changed the Sabbath." No he did not change it, but he abolished it entirely, and gave us a day of rest and worship instead of that old Jewish Sabbath. He did it when he rose from the tomb, and appointed his disciples to meet him on the first day of the week.

Next you say, the word "Sunday" never occurs in the Bible." Correct. But what of that? The word "First day of the week" occurs there, the Lord's day occurs there, the day the Lord arose from the dead, occurs there; and it occurs that the Lord met with his disciples on that day, sanctioned their worship by meeting with them, and blessed them wonderfully, for they obeyed his commandment; he was pleased as they met to worship him, as he had appointed them. But why did you not tell me where the word "Saturday" is found in the Bible? But there is about as strong a command given by Moses to keep the first day, as for the seventh. See Leviticus 23:7. "In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein." 24th verse, Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, In the seventh month in the first day of the month shall ye have a Sabbath, a memorial of blowing of trumpets, an holy convocation. Ye shall do no servile work therein." Also the tenth day was set apart. And it shall be a statute forever in all your dwellings throughout your generations.

My friend, how dare you break that law, and not keep the first day? 32d verse, "It shall be unto you a Sabbath of rest [tenth day], and ye shall afflict your souls: in the ninth day of the month at even from even unto even, shall ye celebrate your Sabbath." In the 36th verse, it says that the eighth day shall be a day of rest. What day is the eighth? If Saturday is the seventh, then Sunday must be the eighth. And in the 39th verse we have the first day, the eighth day and the fifteenth day, as Sabbaths. If the first, eighth and fifteenth are not Sundays, what days are they? Webster says "Sabbaths" the day of religious rest, Sunday. And Moses says that it shall be a statute forever. If I was a Saturday keeper, I would keep all of them, or quit saying that I kept the law.

Now I will give you the ten commandments from the new law or covenant that Jesus said he would make with his children, when the other waxed old or had filled its mission, lest you might think that we had no law. See Heb. 8:8, 9. (1) Worship God Rev. 22:9. (2) "Little children, keep your selves from idols," (1 John 5:21.) (3) "I say unto you, swear not at all; but let your communication be, Yea, yea; nay, nay." Matthew 5:34, 35, 37. (4), "For it seemeth good to the Holy Ghost and to us to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things." (Acts 15:28.) That fourth commandment does not read like the one from Moses. (5) Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right." (Ephesians 6:1.) (6) "Thou shalt not kill." (Roman 13:9.) (7) "Neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, shall inherit the kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 6:9, 10) (8) "Steal no more." Eph. 4:28) (9) "Wherefore put away lying speak every man truth with his neighbor." Eph. 4:25 (10) (Covetousness let it not be once named among you." (Eph. 5:3.) Say, brother, can you give us any better law or commandments than Jesus and his apostles did? If you can not, then do not object to that which they gave us, and ask us to go back to the old moral law again.

Now my dear brother I have answered all of your questions, and more too, but as there is no end to the argument against the Saturday Sabbath, and in favor of the Sunday rest and worship, I will just add a few more reasons why I keep Sunday.

(1) It is the resurrection day of Christ, the grandest event of all the gospel record left to us in this world.

(2) On the first day of the week Jesus established the fact of the resurrection and of a future life and so confirmed all the promises of God and the hopes of the church by his resurrection. (Acts 17:31.)

(3) On this day he was declared to be the Son of God by the resurrection from the dead, Rom. 1:4.

(4) On this day as I have proven to you, he repeatedly appeared to his disciples. See Mark 16:9-11. Matthew 28:8-10. Luke 24:34. John 20:19: 23, and others. So then it became a day of joy and gladness, John 20:20, also Luke 24:41.

(5) On this great day Jesus blessed them and bestowed upon them the gift of the Holy Ghost. See John 20:19-23. On this day the disciples were begotten again to a lively hope by his resurrection, (1 Peter 1:3.)

(6) It is generally admitted that Pentecost was on this day, when the church was so signally blessed with the gifts of the gospel, See Acts 2:1-20. On this day Jesus ascended to his Father and received all power in heaven and in earth. On this glorious day many of the saints arose from their graves, Matt. 27:52. On this wonderful day death was conquered, the grave overcome. Rev. 1:18, the devil defeated, salvation secured, while earth and heaven rejoiced.

Around this day clusters all the hopes of a lost but redeemed world. Jesus might have died, what good would that have done us; man would still have been lost. It was through the resurrection that death was conquered and immortal life brought to the body. Memorable day, one that should stir the heart of every one who loves the Savior, and move sinners to repentance. "The Lord's day," no more appropriate title for that grand day on which our Lord triumphed over all and laid deep and secure the foundation of the church of Jesus Christ. Most appropriately, then, has it become the one memorial day of the gospel, the day of gladness and rejoicing. Shall we then call it a pagan day? The pope's day? The mark of the beast? A day hateful to God and an abomination to Christ? God forbid. Those who do that are in "the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity."

You claim that we must all keep the same Sabbath from sundown to sundown, all around the whole world at the same time. O how inconsistent; for instance the sun sets in Missouri on Friday night. It also sets in the far north on Friday night. It rises in Missouri on Saturday morning, but in the far north it does not rise again for about six months, then it shines about six months, then sets again for the same length of time. So a Sabbath up there would be just twelve months long. How would you like that kind of a Sabbath, brother? Rather a long time to do without fire, or to do any kind of work. And that was the law for the Jewish Sabbath. See Exodus 20:8, 9, 10. Also Exodus 31:13-17, whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death. That is your Sabbath law; you do not keep it. I have seen Advents feed their stock, cook victuals, go to church on the Sabbath day; did you ever stone one of them to death?

You said in your letter to me, "That God could not change his law," or Christ would not had to die. "Now read Exod., 35:2, 3 whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death. Ye (Advents) shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the Sabbath day. Do you really observe all that? Or has God changed that law to accommodate you people? Now either he has changed his law or you do not keep it; which position will you take? So you see that the Jewish Sabbath was only for the Jewish country; and God has not changed either. But when you read the 23d chapter of Leviticus, you will find that the 1st, is a Sabbath, the 10th, the 9th, the 15th, the 8th, the 7th, those are all called Sabbath. And just as binding and stand just as long as the 7th, do you observe them? If not, why not? Has God changed, or have the Advents changed God's law?

Then we are boldly told that all the heavenly host keep the law of Moses including the Sabbath. Well it will sound strange to one who has left this earth, and goes to heaven, and the first morning he hears the announcement; "today we will stone to death Brother Greedy, for working his oxen and mules on last Sabbath, and all the heavenly host say, Amen." And on the second morning we hear the sentence, Today we will stone to death Brother Freeloze, for fornication, all say Amen." And every morning some new case of breaking one of the ten commandments would be tried; someone might be out picking up sticks, and of course he would have to be stoned, for the law forbids him to be out of the house on the Sabbath; or has God changed and modified that law? O what nonsense for those who believe, or at least claim to believe in Christ, I wish that they would not only believe in him, but believe what he said. "That he came to fulfill the law," just as he did. And now we are no longer under that law, Gal. 3:25.

I might fill pages, and heap evidence on evidence to show why I keep Sunday, while you have none for Saturday. O yes, you have one, and that is the old hobby, "The Lord rested on the seventh day, therefore we must. Yes, the Lord worked on the seventh day, therefore we must. See Gen. 2:2. 'And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made:' So God worked when he ended, or finished his work, he did not get quite done on Friday, so he finished up on Saturday. I am glad he did; or this world might not be done yet. But when I turn to Acts 20, we find the apostolic example for Sunday meeting, and we are to follow them as you see in 2nd Thessalonians, 3:7-9, 'For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us.'

In 1st Corinthians, 16:2 here we have a meeting on the first day of the week, here is a direct command of an apostle to observe the first day of the week for a religious purpose. 1 Corinthians 1:2, shows that this instruction is to all the church everywhere, Paul says 1 Corinthians, 14:37. "The things I write to you are the commandments of the Lord." And yet in all his writings he forgot to ever mention about keeping the Sabbath. And yet he says in Gal. 1:12, that he was taught it by the revelations of Jesus Christ. Is it not a little strange that if it is essential to salvation, to keep the Saturday, that Jesus when revealing to Paul what to preach, that he entirely forgot that very important point? And yet in the 8 verse he says that if man or angel preach any other gospel than that he preached, he shall be cursed. Now Paul did not preach the Saturday Sabbath. If God has not changed that day, and it is essential to salvation, it puts Paul, and Christ who revealed to him what to preach into rather a bad light, for I will hold them responsible for my salvation, if they taught me wrong, and neither ever mentioned in any of their doctrine that I must keep the old Jewish Sabbath.

But let us see what Paul says in 2 Thessalonians, 1:7, 8, 9, "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them [who keep not the Jewish Sabbath, O no, that is man's doctrine, and not of God,] on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." Not one word there about the Sabbath either.

Now where in the gospel shall I find that I must keep the law of Moses, or be cursed? Jesus says in John 14:15. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." In Paul's letter to the Hebrews 6:1, 2, says that the principles of the doctrine of Christ are faith, repentance, baptisms, laying on of hands the resurrection, and eternal judgment, and keeping the Jewish Sabbath(?) O, I guess I got some man made doctrine into that last quotation. For Jesus never commanded to keep the Jewish Sabbath. Neither will I. Now dear brother, may God help you to see the light in the gospel of Christ as it is, and as thousands of others see it, even as Christ wants you to see it. Ask God to help you out of the old Jewish mists, throw off the old veil, and take the pure gospel of Christ as your guide to glory.

May God bless you in your search for light is my prayer.

ATTENTION, GOOD LITERATURE COMMITTEES.

With a desire to co-operate with the Good Literature Committees, who are doing such a good work in distributing church literature, we have decided to allow them, for the balance of the year, to send subscriptions for the ENSIGN to non-members at 50 cents a year. This gives eight months, from the first of May till the last of December, time enough to accomplish a great work. Others can co-operate with the committees in making the work thorough, that the greatest good may be accomplished. The only restrictions are that the paper be sent to non-member families, and not transfers from a member to a non-member in the same family, nor must it be for parties outside the United States' possessions, where the postage alone is 52 cents a year on each paper. Address Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Mo.
W. H. Deam, Manager.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE.

The First Seventy adopted the following in memory of our beloved brother, Wm. S. Pender, who deceased during the conference year, and not knowing the address of Sr. Pender, I trust that this will reach her, and by reason of this publication I may receive her address:

"Whereas, In the providence of God it has pleased him to remove from our midst our beloved and esteemed brother, Wm. S. Pender, after long and faithful service of devotion and sacrifice, the later years under great affliction, during which he accomplished efficiency in the Spanish language, and with Bro. W. H. Mannerling, opened the Mexican Mission, under Apostle F. M. Sheehy.

"We regret deeply our loss and that of the church, as well as that of the bereaved ones, but we bow to the overruling providence of Him who doeth all things well, to whose grace we comended the bereaved ones, and extend to them our sympathy, in copies presented, and in suitable publication."

Very respectfully,

CORRECTONS.

EXPOSITION—TEACHERS' NOTES.

Please note the following and mark it in your Exponent, current quarter:

On page 71, Lesson 1, under caption, "Whom God loves he proves," this question occurs: "If God intended that Abraham should kill Isaac why did he not tell him to offer him as a sacrifice?"

The not is in the wrong place. It should read: "If God did not intend Abraham should kill Isaac why did he tell him to offer him as a sacrifice?"

Again on page 74, lesson 7, May 18, the "aim" is given thus: "To show God's people may be governed by law." It should read, "Aim: To show God's people must be governed by law."

These errors crept in when the typist copied the editor's manuscript and were printed as submitted.

April 30, 1913.

To those interested in Mission No. 4, Greeting:—
With the object in view of obtaining the best possible results during the ensuing conference year I have arranged the following and trust that accordingly everyone interested will put forth every effort "to build up the kingdom of God and to establish its righteousness."

Bishop J. A. Becker will have financial oversight of the three districts of Kirtland, Ohio and Pittsburg, and will report his missionary labors to the associate minister in charge of the Kirtland District.

Richard Baldwin will act as associate minister in charge of Kirtland District, and to him Brn. Samuel Brown and Jesse Hardin will look for the necessary directions and to him they will report. C. Edward Miller will have charge of Kirtland-Temple during the summer months and later may travel delivering lectures on Book of Mormon etc., his reports will be sent to R. Baldwin.

N. L. Booker will be my associate in charge of Ohio District and assisting him will be John Davis, C. E. Bozarth Wm. C. Hidy. He will direct the labors and receive reports etc.

Leon G. Burdick will be my assistant in charge, direct the labors and receive reports of A. V. Closson and J. E. Bishop, and has supervision of the Pittsburg District.

James C. McConaughy is my assistant in the Virginias, and if Fred Moser, Jr., will accept the appointment to labor this year he will receive instructions relative thereto from Bro. McConaughy and I will endeavor to send more help later.

H. E. Moler is my associate in charge of Kentucky, Tennessee and Southern Indiana, and will have as his assistants Brn. J. G. Halp, J. W. Metcalf, J. A. Roberts, W. S. Shupe, S. E. Dickson and Chas. Nolan. Evangelical minister F. G. Pitt upon his return from the Australian mission will labor in those districts.

J. R. McClain and A. C. Barmore will labor in Southern Indiana District and I would deem it advisable to elect Bro. McClain district president at the ensuing district conference. To Bro. Moler all reports will be sent and he will direct the labors of the brethren as he may consider for the greatest good.

That the general interests of the church may be preserved it will be necessary before final arrangements for debate are concluded that consent be had of the minister in general charge.

The increasing alertness of the enemy of our cause makes it incumbent upon us that for the general benefit of the kingdom of God we throw about the bestowal of the priesthood all the safeguards possible; therefore that such may be more completely done we advise that before such honorable responsibilities are bestowed upon any man consent be obtained from the minister in general charge or the district conference.

It being almost impossible for the minister in general charge to visit all the local congregations of the mission during this year, and the district conferences and reunions being the most convenient places for him to meet the scattered membership of the mission it is advised that the setting of such days of meeting be delegated to the officials thereof and the minister in general charge so that he or one of his assistants may be present to look after the general interests of the work.

We would encourage the mission and local authorities to make all the new openings possible, and when so made to cautiously and prayerfully advance the interests of the kingdom of God by every legitimate means.

The recent general conference being one of marked encouragement to those within the fold it behooves us individually and collectively to observe not only the revelations of past years but to become thoroughly acquainted with the instructions and admonitions of the Lord given April 14, 1913, and live by every word thus given.

The assistant ministers in charge will see that their helpers are supplied with the necessary blank forms for quarterly and yearly reporting and to have this work done in order the following rules should be observed: Send to the assistant minister in charge at the end of each quarter your reports closing June 30th, Sept. 30th, Dec. 31st, and Feb. 28th, and your annual March 1, 1914, which will by the fifth of the following months forward to the minister in general charge.

With a united prayerful effort we can accomplish great good during the ensuing year, therefore to that end let us all walk hand in hand with each other and the divine Guide and in so doing the Lord will abundantly bless all thus engaged. May the peace of the Holy Spirit abide with each and all.

Your co-laborer for final triumph of righteousness,

R. C. Russell.

Minister in general charge of Mission No. 4, 135 Selkirk St., Chatham, Ont.

To the ministry and saints of Mission No. 13, comprising Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida:—

Having been placed in charge of the gospel work in the above states, I take this means to address you. I consider we are entrusted with the greatest work on earth, assisting in building up the kingdom of God.

I enter upon the work this year with great hope and confidence, that if we do our part God will not forsake us. Jesus said, "Without me you can do nothing." Also Doc. and Cov.: "Behold I speak unto you, and also to all those who have desired to bring forth and establish this work, and no one can assist in this work, except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things whatsoever shall be entrusted to his care." Remember these injunctions are still in force. I hope we will have these qualifications, if so our work will be effectual.

I select the following brethren to assist me in charge. Hubert Case, Western Oklahoma District; B. F. Renfro, Central Oklahoma; W. P. Bootman, Eastern Oklahoma; J. T. Riley, Arkansas and Louisiana; F. M. Slover, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida. The brethren laboring in the above districts and states, may report to the men in charge. Those in Texas may report directly to me. Reporting dates are July 1st, Oct. 1st, Jan. 1st, and March 1st.

The financial arvo of the church is not in as good condition as it should be, the reason for this, is, some have not done their part in paying their tithing and consecrations. I believe the fault is to some extent with the ministry, they have been too backward in teaching this subject. Let us see to it that this part of the work does not lag.

In this our preaching we ought to avoid personal attacks on other denominations, preach our gospel in the affirmative, tell the people what we have and why we have it. This way we will make more friends and convert more people. If we are attacked we have the right to defend; but let us work on the defense, that way we will have the sympathy of the people, and do more for the cause we represent. Also I think we ought to preach more sermons in a place where we have an interest, and less traveling, and in that way save expense, our missionary work takes on the form of visiting too much sometimes.

Those who have their families in the field, should not count the time spent at home, as in the field. When our year's work is done, I hope we can look over the reports and say of all, they have done well.

My home address will be Independence, Mo., 824 South Cryser St. Mail sent here any time will be forwarded to me as ever your brother and co-laborer.

W. M. Aylor.

April 29, 1913.

To the saints of Spring River and Central Oklahoma Districts, Greeting:—

Having just closed one of the most important and far reaching conferences that has ever come to the church, I feel to congratulate you as the people of God and assure you that our work was never on a more prosperous and permanent basis.

As our noble ministry for Christ go out to their appointed work, leaving home and loved ones, I hope and firmly believe our hearty co-operation with them and God will not be wanting but that a keen sense of personal responsibility will be felt and a faithful, loving effort to assist in the redemption of mankind will stimulate us all to renewed diligence and service.

Let us not forget our duty in tithes and offerings so that the work will not be hindered, and let the watchword be one of courage and on to the victory.

Your brother in Christ,

Ellis Short, Bishop.

A DIVINE CLEANSING.

While Jesus was journeying through Galilee and Samaria on one occasion ten lepers approached him and said: "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us." The answer was: "Go show yourselves unto the priests." It is further recorded that "as they went they were cleansed." Luke 17:14.

Leprosy was to human skill an incurable disease, and those afflicted with it were shut out from the associations of their fellowmen. Having evidently heard of the wonderful works of Jesus these ten men appealed to him for healing, and were bidden to go and show themselves to the priests as required in the law of Moses.

A TEST OF FAITH.

The law required that one suspected of this dread disease present himself before the priest for examination, and if leprosy were found he became an outcast, and only upon the decision of the priest that such a one was free from the disease could he return to his former associations.

The Lord did not touch these men, nor say, "Be ye clean," but simply told them to go and show themselves to the priests. Surely there was no virtue or healing in that for had they not already once gone and as a result had been sent away to die in dreary desolation? As they looked at their disfigured hands, still white with the terrible scourge what assurance had they that the priests would say "Ye are clean?" Jesus had not healed them, and the priests could not, wherein then was their hope?

Their faith was on trial. If they truly believed in the power of the Son of God to heal they would do his bidding. Their faith was shown by their earnest and immediate steps to do his will and "as they went they were cleansed." Doubting, and failure to do as commanded, would have left them under the curse of the dread disease, and they would have had an apparently good reason for believing that Christ was unable to do for them what he had done for others. Their blessing was due to their faith as manifested in their willingness to do what the Lord commanded.

SPIRITUAL LEPERS.

Today there are moral and spiritual lepers and like some of old many are crying "Lord, have mercy upon us." The means of spiritual cleansing have been given by the Lord for all time, and is included in the command given to his apostles: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark 16:15. In harmony with this command Peter, under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost while preaching on the day of Pentecost said to those who had been made conscious of their need of spiritual cleansing: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise [as well as the command] is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 2:38.

MEANS OF CLEANSING.

This rule for spiritual cleansing is a universal one and applies to "every creature" of "all nations," and is still further emphasized by Christ in

John 3:5, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Every man needs the cleansing and the means of cleansing are offered to every man alike, just as the ten lepers having the same need under the same conditions were given the same direction. There is no other way by which a man can be cleansed, even as there was no other way by which the lepers could be cleansed except to do as the Lord instructed. To doubt the correctness of the instruction and to hesitate in performing it is to leave upon the soul the disease of sin. Paul, after asking: "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" was told to "arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Acts 22:16. The rule is for all.

MAN'S WAY.

But it is often said to the spiritually sick: "Just accept Christ in your heart, and leave all to him; he will make you whole. There is nothing you can do, Jesus died for you and if you only trust him he will save you." Had these lepers said to Jesus: "Yes, Lord, we believe you are the Christ and we will just resign our case to you," and had returned to their caves, would they have been cleansed? But the Lord required of them a faith that was strong enough to be shown in works,—just what he requires of all men,—and had they failed or refused to perform the works there would have been no healing.

A merely passive belief will save no one. The faith required in the gospel is like that required of the lepers—an active faith manifested in works, and that is the only faith that brings divine blessing and approval. To doubt the virtue of the command and fail in obedience is to remain under the old conditions, for "he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord: James 1:6; but "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

CHRIST'S WAY.

The blessing of spiritual cleansing with consequent salvation does not come by merely believing, or just accepting Christ as some hold, but by fulfilling the requirements of the law of Christ, and this was evidently the thought in the mind of James when he wrote: Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." (2:24.) Other passages of Scripture are frequently used to show that there are other ways of being saved, one of the most common of which is "The blood of Jesus, Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin," 1 John 1:7, but a careful reading of the whole verse gives it an entirely different meaning; "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin."

Here again the cleansing is dependent upon what is done by the individual, and can only come when he walks in the light as Jesus did. One of the steps taken by Jesus was the entering the waters of baptism, which act brought him into the light and approval of his Father, because in doing it he had fulfilled the law. See Matt. 3:13-17. Can a man refuse this ordinance and still claim to be walking in the light as Jesus did? The application of the blood of Christ for the cleansing of the sinner can only be made when he is "walking in the light" as Jesus did.

In baptism one may not see wherein the water has any virtue, but the virtue lies in a faithful obedience based upon an intelligent faith. This brings heaven's acknowledgment and makes the doer thereof a child of the kingdom, a joint heir with Jesus Christ.

Next week we expect to begin a series of short editorials dealing with the doctrine of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ and the doctrines of Christian Science in comparison. This upon request of a friend who has been investigating both. For several weeks the Historical Sketches have been crowded out and as soon as the editorials mentioned above are completed, we hope to renew them.

The love of God flows like a river into our lives. It is manifested through temporal blessing of bounteous harvests and increased wealth, as also in spiritual endowment. But the value of a river is determined only by the blessing which it brings upon the cities and towns and homesteads, with their multitudes of people, along its borders.

So the stream of God's love which flows into the individual life is measured by the amount of blessing it conveys to others. The man who has been blessed with divine intelligence and imparts nothing to his fellowmen is scarcely worthy of the blessing, and like the unfaithful servant who buried his one talent, may lose what he has. The man who has been blessed with an abundance of temporal means and reserves the whole for personal pleasure and delight fails to meet the demands of his common brotherhood, and adds no blessing to those around him.

The Spirit of the 'gospel leads men to regard the needs of their fellowmen, and so open their souls toward them, that the stream of God's love shall overflow in those who have been most blessed until others, drinking of the same, shall be thereby led to the fountain itself and receive a fullness.

THROUGH TEARS.

A poet was gifted with genius,
And he sang, and he sang all the days.
He wrote for the praise of the people,
But the people accorded no praise.
Oh, his songs were as blithe as the morning
As sweet as the music of birds;
But the world had no homage to offer,
Because they were nothing but words.

Time sped. And the poet through sorrow
Became like his suffering kind.
Again he toiled over his poems
To lighten the grief of his mind.
They were not so flowing and rhythmic
As those of his earlier years,
But the world? lo! it offered its homage
Because they were written in tears.

So ever the price must be given
By those seeking glory in art;
So ever the world is repaying
The grief-stricken, suffering heart.
The happy must ever be humble;
Ambition must wait for the years,
Ere hoping to win the approval
Of a world that looks on through its tears,
Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

NEW BOOKS.

A HUNDRED YEARS OF MISSIONS—By Rev. D. L. Leonard, D. D., Associate Editor of the "Missionary Review of the World." Third Edition, 12mo. Cloth. Price $1.20, net. By Mail $1.33.

An interesting account of the beginning and growth of Christian missions in all lands, and in the islands of the seas, showing heroic self sacrifice by many of the early missionaries, many of whom gave their lives in seeking to plant Christianity in lands covered with spiritual darkness. Each race or nation is dealt with separately, including the Society Islands, and other groups of Islands, and valuable information and statistics relative to the Indians of North America and the work of evangelization among them are given.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE SPIRITUAL LIFE—By Prof. George Lancing Raymond, L. H. D., Professor of Ethics in George Washington University. Funk and Wagnalls Company, New York. 12mo. Cloth. Price $1.40 net. By Mail $1.53.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Sunday was Mothers' Day at Independence and numerous tokens gave evidence that many mothers were remembered, some of whom had passed on to a higher life. Many sons have wandered far away from the old homes where remain anxious mothers waiting month after month, and even year after year for some word from the absent ones, but in vain. Such mothers are not perhaps forgotten but neglected. A frequent letter to mother from the absent ones will give her great joy.

Excellent services marked the day. Bro. J. W. Rushton speaking in the morning and Bro. Peter Anderson at night. The afternoon prayer service in charge of Bro. Garrett, Bond and H. A. Higgins of Nebraska City, was full of peaceful encouragement and help. The Sunday school had an attendance of 832 including 60 visitors, and a collection of $15.58. There were 20 perfect classes. The superintendent, Bro. D. J. Krahl, spoke about "Mothers," and asked for absolute silence for 15 seconds so that each one might think of some good thing that mother had done for him.

Following the morning service a special meeting was called by Bro. Harrington to consider the advisability of conducting a summer school. Resolutions were passed favoring the project and requesting the branch to appoint a board of directors including the branch president, to provide for and carry out the work.

The Men's League held its regular meeting at 4:15 in charge of its president, Bro. Orris K. Fry. The league is growing, two new departments having been added, viz., Law, in charge of A. H. Parsons, and Sociology, in charge of John Zabard.

Many saints rejoiced to see Bro. Carl Lewis, son of Bro. C. G. Lewis, present on Sunday after a long absence due to illness covering nearly a year. For a long time his life was despaired of except that by faith in the power of God with the administration of the gospel ordinances hope was retained, and by which he has been restored to a fair condition of health and strength, with hopes of further improvement. Bro. Carl was baptized some time ago during his sickness.

On Saturday last the Essos closed up shop and the "Force" with their families departed by conveyance to a sequestered spot beyond Atherton near where the Little Blue empties into the Big Missouri River. It was the occasion of our annual picnic, and the day was spent in fishing (?), gathering wild flowers, playing ball, etc. Morning showers, cool winds, and unwilling fishes did not succeed in preventing a good time being had by all, though one small fish delighted the heart of a little boy by getting on his hook and making him the champion fisherman. The return journey cast upon the evening breezes the strains of Zion's sweetest songs.

In a school contest of the pupils of the different schools of Independence, Miss Edna, daughter of Bro. and Sr. B. J. Scott, won first prize for the best temperance essay over all others of the seventh grade; and Miss Velma, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Royal Brocaw, received first prize for the best essay in the sixth grade, the respective prizes being gold and silver medals. Children of the church usually keep in the lead in all things moral and intellectual.

FAREWELL CONCERT.

Miss Marie Riggs, daughter of Sr. Hattie Riggs of Kansas City, will give a farewell concert at the New Casino, 1023 Broadway, on Monday evening, May 19th, at 8:30. Sr. Riggs is wonderfully blessed with musical talent and, in harmony with divine instruction, has sought to develop it. Last winter she was privileged to meet the great master L. Hivonne when he was in Kansas City, and upon hearing her play was so well pleased with her work that he immediately arranged to have her study with him, and great credit was given her teacher—Mrs. Carl Bush—who had directed her development thus far. Her studies will be continued in Europe.

When Bro. and Sr. O. H. Riggs were living at Cincinnati, Ohio, and Sr. Marie was but a mere infant, the shadow of death spread its wings over her and the physicians said there was no hope, but through administration of the gospel ordinance by Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser who pleaded for her life, she was restored to health, and in this blessing it was said that if her life was spared she would prove herself worthy of the blessing. The Exton wishes Sr. Riggs abundant success in her worthy efforts and that by the perfecting of her gifts the Lord shall be honored and glorified.

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL.

The spiritual condition of the Lansdowne Branch is good. Last Sunday we had the opportunity to hear both Bro. Rushton and Bro. Sheehy. Bro. Rushton gave us one of his excellent discourses in the forenoon. At the sacrament service at 3 p. m. we had a splendid prayer meeting at the close of which Mr. Thoman requested baptism. He was immersed by Bro. Vandel presiding elder of the branch, and confirmed by Bro. Rushton.

There had been so many prophecies and testimonies concerning Mr. Thoman's coming into the church that it was a special cause of rejoicing to witness the fulfillment of the prophecies made. In the evening Bro. Sheehy preached a good sermon especially adapted to a babe in the kingdom.

It was our last Sunday in East St. Louis as we are taking up our residence in Gary, Indiana, where a mission Sunday school is just being started. The Lansdowne Branch is especially interested in the progress of the work in Gary, and we feel that their earnest, united prayers will be a great support in the work here.

In this, my last report of Lansdowne Branch, I want to say that I do not consider the respect of the community at large which the Lansdowne saints have gained for their church by their industrious and consistent lives, the smallest of their accomplishments. They are doing much good for their Master and it is with regret that I find myself separated from them.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Dear Ensign readers, I scarce know where to begin to gather up the broken threads occasioned by the ending of the old and the beginning of the new conference year. We passed the period without an anxious thought, feeling assured of the ruling of the great Head of the church, and there comes to us a satisfaction as the result. So with sails filled we start a new year feeling a zeal to make it still better than the past.

The city sacramental service was good, the time being well occupied. Bro. Hartsgrove was the evening speaker. The service in Oakland was also very good and spiritual a gladsome message from the Lord was given, in which young Bro. Alma Saxe was designated as a future armour bearer in the work. Bro. E. D. Beckley who is aged and almost blind received a very comforting word—the saints were admonished to diligence and unity. At night the pastor spoke from Deuteronomy 19:14 with attentive listeners.

We attended an excellent rally day at Tulare on the 27th of April at which their church was dedicated. The scattered saints were gathered in from various points from 10 to 16 miles in autos and buggies. The neat little church was well filled at the dedicatory service at 11 o'clock under the general charge of the pastor, Bro. A. J. Damron, Bro. C. W. Deuel making the opening prayer and it developed on the writer to do the other work save the singing which was sweetly done by the choir composed mostly of the sisters. In the afternoon we sped away some eight miles in autos and Bro. Deuel baptized a mother and daughter into the fold. We held services at night also on Monday and Tuesday nights with good attendance. We also found a splendid Sunday school under the care of Bro. "Bud" Smith, also the same kind of a Religio under the care of Sr. Mina Deuel. We greatly enjoyed our short stay at Tulare at the peaceful home of Bro. A. J. Damron.

As we are to continue here another year we have arranged and are heartily supported by the membership to hold a series of meetings, and as Bro. F. G. Pitt and A. C. Barmore are to arrive here on the 15th we arranged to begin our services on Sunday 18th, and thus get some service from them. The meetings will continue as interest demands.

On visiting Fresno we were delighted to learn of the splendid increase of the work there. Bro. J. B. Carmichael the elder has baptized fourteen within a short time; we met some of them at a meeting on Wednesday night and found them thoroughly in love with the blessed gospel and what was pleasing having confidence in their pastor. We also met there Bro. and Sr. Merrick whom we knew in Chicago, also a sister whose maiden name was Morton from St. Joseph, Mo. The branch own a lot in Fresno and will build a house when able. Success Bro. J. B. keep the gospel mill grinding. We spent two pleasant days and nights with the Ceres Branch attending two services, to one of which Bro. Ira Phelps and I rode seven miles (not in an auto either). We had a pleasant time and retired at one o'clock. The meeting was at the home of Bro. and Sr. Blake Vent very earnest workers. Friday night we spent with our congenial Bro. and Sr. L. J. Searcy that efficient section boss, where we enjoy hearing the ponderous trains "that pass in the night."

All are pleased to have Bro. F. M. Sheehy with us another year. Our latch string is on the outside.

Bro. J. D. Stead is down the valley looking for a suitable place to begin tent work. He wrote from Repton.

NEBRASKA CITY.

Today has been a muddy day; not very many at Sunday school or church.

Bro. Zara Gouldsmith did the preaching Sunday morning, and Bro. W. M. Self in the evening.

Our pastor H. A. Higgins, wife and daughter, Sr. Ruby Faunce, Sr. Amy Parr and Bro. Fremming were absent having gone to Kansas City and Independence to spend a few days.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith has been poorly of late but was able to attend prayer meeting last Wednesday evening and also today. The aid society is moving along nicely, we have two work days in each week, with all the work we can do and plenty of willing workers.

Everything looks fine; good prospect for all kinds of fruit; the strawberry fields are getting white with bloom.

Mrs. E. D. Briggs.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Whom should we consider as our neighbor?

When this question was asked Jesus he answered by relating the account of the man who fell among thieves on the Jericho road and almost killed. The priest and Levite passed him by, but the Samaritan tenderly bound up his wounds and carried him to the inn where provision was made for his care while recovering. The illustration developed the thought that the man who helped the helpless in time of need was his neighbor, and shows that the term neighbor as used in the law refers to one who has a solicitous regard for his fellow men especially in meeting their legitimate needs. Under this definition it is possible to "Love thy neighbor as thyself," for what true man would not do all in his power to help one who had shown a willingness to help him?

The apostles alone had the power of laying their hands on others that they could perform the many miracles spoken of in the Bible, as healing, giving sight to the blind, speaking in tongues, etc. Now when the apostles, and the men living in the apostolic age, died, did not this miraculous power cease?

Laying on of hands is said by Paul in Heb. 6:1, 2, to be one of the foundation or permanent principles of the gospel, and as such it belongs to no particular age but to every age whenever the gospel is extant. The laying on of hands is not for the purpose of enabling men to work miracles, heal, speak in tongues, etc., but for the bestowal of the Holy Ghost, and this gift is promised to all who obey the gospel, and its presence required in all who would gain salvation. See Acts 2:38, 39, John 7:39; 3:5, etc. The apostles were not the only ones who observed this ordinance, for Ananias laid his hands upon Saul, Acts 9:12-20, and some not apostles laid hands upon Saul and Barnabas for their ordination, Acts 13:1-3. Paul later warned Timothy to "lay hands suddenly on no man." 1 Tim. 5:22. The right to lay on hands belongs only to the ministers of Christ who have been authoritatively ordained, and all who accept the gospel by faith and baptism are entitled to receive the laying on of hands for the Holy Ghost, and this brings other gifts as enumerated in 1 Cor. 12:4-11, "dividing to every man severally as he will." The miraculous power did not cease with the apostles only as men became corrupt and unworthy of it, and through the restoration of the gospel in latter days this power is again had among the people of God.

What is your authority for using instrumental music in the church?

The human soul seeks various avenues through which to express its thanksgiving and praise to its Creator, and reason based upon experience, assures us that the God-given gift of music is one of the most perfect means by which the deeper sentiments of the soul can be expressed. The sweet singer of Israel, David, left in his Psalms the highest expression of human appreciation of God, and in the use of these songs of praise various instruments were used. One of these inspired songs says, "Praise the Lord with harp: sing unto him with the psaltery and an instrument of ten strings. Sing unto him a new song; play skillfully with a loud noise." Ps. 33:2-3. See also 43:4, 71:22. More directly our authority is based upon a revelation given to the church in the latter days which says that in the services of the house of the Lord we may "use therein instruments of the music and of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct. Let the young men and maidens cultivate the gifts of music and of song." Doctrine and Covenants 119:6.

Please give a description of the flag carried by the camp of Israel mentioned on page 474 of volume one of Church History.

We know of no description further than the reports of the enemies that it had "Peace" on one side and "War or Blood" on the other, but this was denied by the leaders, and in support of their denial the flag was exhibited to a committee of the enemy.

Should members or ministers of the church engaged in mercantile business sell cigars and tobacco?

The Lord has said that the elders should be "without blame in word or deed," and one of the ways specified by which they may be free from blame is to "avoid the use of tobacco." D. C. 119:3. He has further said in latter day revelation that "tobacco is not good for man." D. C. 86:1. Another reason given for avoiding the use of tobacco is "that your council to be temperate may be made effectual by your example." While the sale of tobacco by church members is not forbidden either by the law, or by conference resolution, both urge its avoidance, and if Paul's instruction to "Abstain from all appearance of evil," is observed, saints will hardly indulge in the practice. To engage in the cultivation, manufacture, or sale of those things which are not good for man, and which should be avoided, is to encourage a disregard of the counsel of God.

INDEPENDENCE, MO., May 8.

Editor Ensign—This morning we received a letter from the president of the branch at Redickville, Ontario, enclosing $133 for the United Order of Enoch. This amount came from six individuals, and we are inclined to think it is a fine contribution for that number in one branch and worthy of mention. We trust that all will sense the situation and do what they can for the good of this institution of the church for the benefit of those who are willing to comply with the whole law as set forth in the books.

In bonds,
M. H. Siegfried.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 8.

Editor Ensign—We are back to Salt Lake City, after our trip to general conference, but working over time to get ready for our move to our new field, New York District. We think to be ready to move from here by June 15th, and it may be July 1st before we reach New York.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

CHRIST IS BUILDING HIS CHURCH.

BY PATRIARCH CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

Jesus Christ as the one authorized of God to build "the church of God, which he purchased with his own blood," (Acts 20:28; 2 Cor. 1:1) has observed the rule of the wise builder given by himself in Matthew 7:24,25, as follows: "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which buildeth his house upon a rock: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock." He showed himself to be a master workman both by his teaching, example, and by his work. "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." John 4:34. "The Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him." If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love."—John 8:30;15:10.

THE ROCK AND FIRST FOUNDATION.

Christ said to Peter, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matthew 16:18. He meant I am the Christ of God; the one anointed and authorized of God to build his church. I am not an impostor, and shall succeed in my work. "Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation; he that believeth shall not make haste."—Isaiah 28:16. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." "And did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ."—1 Cor. 3:11; 10:4. Sometimes Christ is referred to as a corner-stone, or the head of the corner. Some might ask, "How can he be the foundation and head of the corner?"

The writer understands these several statements referred to above as teaching clearly and fully that Jesus Christ is the chief minister of the covenant, holds the highest authority, and in all things has pre-eminence. Paul says, "Consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus."—Hebrews 3:1. It pleased God to make his Son the representative of his power, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. (1 Cor. 1:24,30).

REVELATION IS THE SECOND FOUNDATION.

For Christ to be the Savior of the world, and the builder of the church, his divine Sonship must be revealed, as follows:

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus said, "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 16:16,17. "Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."—1 Cor. 12:3. "To some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he was crucified for the sins of the world; to others it is given to believe on their words, that they also might have eternal life, if they continue faithful."—D. and C. 46:5. The above refers to direct revelation given of God to the disciples of Christ, which makes them truthful witnesses of his resurrection, ascension, glorification, and Sonship. If we can establish the fact that there is one individual living today who can truthfully testify that Jesus is the Christ, then we have established the fact that God still lives and speaks—that there is present and continued revelation. If we deny present revelation, we admit that all are in darkness and sin, and that the church as an organized body has ceased to exist.

THE THIRD FOUNDATION IS THE GOSPEL.

The third foundation is the gospel, which is eternal truth. Christ is revealed in the gospel, as well as by direct revelation, as may be seen from the following: "But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."—2 Tim. 1:10. The gospel reveals the righteousness of God, which means that it reveals Christ, for Paul said, Christ the power, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption of God."—1 Cor. 1:24,30. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed."—Romans 1:16,17. "Build upon this rock, which is my gospel."—D. and C. 10:11. "Behold, verily, verily I say unto you, this is my gospel, and remember that they shall have faith in me, or they can in no wise be saved; and upon this rock I will build my church; yea upon this rock ye are built, and if ye continue, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you."—D. C. 22:3. "I am Messiah, the King of Zion; the Rock of heaven, which is broad as eternity."—D. C. 36:10. "I am the good Shepherd and the stone of Israel: he that buildeth upon this rock shall never fall."—D. C. 50:8. These three foundations combined makes the foundation upon which Christ is building his church.

HOW CHRIST AND HIS APOSTLES ORGANIZED HIS CHURCH.

Christ preached the gospel of the kingdom, made disciples, and calling his chief ministers from their various vocations as he passed them by. The preparation Christ made before organizing the church, is stated as follows: "And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom he named apostles."—Luke 6:12,13.

Jesus and these twelve ministers preached and more converts were added to their number, from which he chose seventy others, and sent them out two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come."—Luke 10:1. This is what Paul refers to when he wrote: "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12:28. A number of officers are evidently referred to as helps and governments, that are not specifically named, but may refer to various grades of officers and ministers. Paul refers to the officers of the church as follows: "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come to the unity of the faith, and to the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ; that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up in him in all things, which is the head, even Christ; from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."—Eph. 4:11-16.

Before referring to other grades of church officers we wish to state that the work required of the officers and ministers already referred to is so vital to the life, growth, perpetuity, and perfection of the church, that it is difficult to understand how any true Christian can believe that some other form of origination introduced by uninspired men would do just as well. To them, under the direction of the Spirit, was this important work to be done. It is God's way of perfecting the saints, and this work is needful today as it was when the apostle penned this instruction.

Able and watchful ministers should stand at the head, next to Christ, to direct and regulate the work of the ministry in all the world; that the body of Christ may be properly edified and educated in religious matters, that no false teachers could lead them away from Christ, the church, or the gospel of the Son of God. If this work had always been done as carefully, and as wisely as the Master desired, there would be in the truest sense one God and Father of all, one Savior, and but one church, and one religion, and that religion would be God's eternal truth, and "the power of God unto salvation."

Referring to other grades of ministers Paul has written as follows: "Paul and Timotheous, servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons."—Phil. 1:1. "For this cause left I thee at Crete, that thou shouldst set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee."—Titus 1:5.

Without making any technical argument, and confining the evidence adduced to that taken from the New Testament, considering some evidence to follow, the officers were placed in the church about as follows: Jesus Christ the living head, and Savior of the body.

TWELVE APOSTLES, WHO ARE SPECIAL WITNESSES.

Prophets, seventies, bishops, evangelists, elders, pastors, teachers and deacons. These ministers were called by inspiration, ordained in harmony with the voice of the church, and were authorized to preach the gospel, administer its ordinances and feed the church of God. See Acts 13:1-3;20:28. Referring to the call of the ministry we find the following: "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." This minister was called by revelation through the prophet Moses, and this is one of the important duties of the prophets in the church of Jesus Christ.

"So also Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, today have I begotten thee." As he saith also in another place, "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec."—Hebrews 5:4-6. Christ did not call himself, or undertake to represent God till he was called, authorized, and sent of his Father. Paul writing of this call and authority conferred upon Christ and his ministers writes: "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus."—Hebrews 3:1.

What was this heavenly calling of which Christ, Paul, and the holy brethren were partakers? Does it not indicate that these men were called of God, and clothed upon with the same priesthood as was Christ? Most assuredly it does. Jesus said, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you."—John 15, 16. As the writer understands this language of the Saviour it means; I have given you the necessary instruction, or charge, and I have conferred upon you authority, the priest-hood, that makes you my legal agents, and you can properly officiate as my ministers. When Jesus appeared to his ministers after his resurrection, he said: "Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and said unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost: Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained."—John 20:21-23. God sent Christ as the High Priest over the church, and Christ had chosen these men to assist him in his work, and he had ordained them to the same priesthood. And Paul said: "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation, to wit, that God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God."—2 Cor. 5:18-20.

An "Ambassador, n. An envoy of the highest rank sent to a foreign government."—Webster. These ambassadors of Christ were sent to represent God and Christ, and their heavenly kingdom, among all the nation of the world, and to preach the gospel to every creature, and God has pledged himself to recognize and honor their legal acts, as though they were done by Christ in person.

Jesus Christ presides over, and directs the subordinate officers of his church, and through them he has given to his church the right, in harmony with the provisions of the gospel, to remit sins for those who comply with the conditions, or retain the sins of those who have disobeyed and stand out in rebellion against God. This is a prerogative that belongs only to the Church of Christ, and cannot be exercised by self-appointed ministers (See 2 Tim. 4:1-5.) or a church that came into existence by the efforts of men only.

I know it is often said by ministers and others, "It makes no difference what you believe, so you are sincere. It makes no difference what church you belong to if you are only sincere. This line of reasoning is false, it would make salvation non conditional; but it has pleased God to incorporate the conditions of salvation in the gospel, and his church is authorized to see that they are honored. Kind reader, would you not much rather belong to the divinely appointed and authorized body known as the church of God? I am sure you would feel safer, and happier if you did.

Writing to the church Paul says: "But ye are come unto Mount Zion and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."—Heb. 12:22-24. "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named."—Eph. 3, 14, 15. The family here referred to is the church of God, or the "church of the firstborn," whether it is heaven or on earth, or in both earth and heaven. Jesus Christ is the firstborn referred to, and it is but reasonable to expect that the church Christ is building should be called after his name, or be known as the Church of Jesus Christ; and as we are now living in the last days, it is but reasonable that the church should now be known as "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." The people of God have ever been known as saints, it is one of the oldest names in the Bible. The phrase "of Latter Day Saints" as used by the church is merely an affix, indicating that this church actually exists in latter days.

THE UNITY OF THE CHURCH.

All saints or Christians a unit in faith and doctrine, and belong to the inspired body of Christ. "Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace. There is one body, and one Spirit, even as we are called in one hope of our calling, one Lord, on faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."—Eph. 4:3-6.

We may reasonably infer from this last citation that there is but one God, one Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, one faith, or rather one religion, and one body, which is the church of Christ.

"And he is the head of the body, the church;" For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior; who will have all men to be saved, and come to a knowledge of the truth. For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus."—1 Tim. 2:3-5. This last citation is in harmony with the one preceding it, and they confirmed what the writer has said about the unity of the church. "So we, being many, are one body (church) in Christ, and every one members one of another."—Rom. 12:5. That is, as Paul affirms in 1 Cor. 12:12-26, there are many members, saints, or Christians, yet there is but one church, or body of Christ. The church is as perfectly formed as the human body, and God has placed every officer and minister, and member in the church as it has pleased him, that they should have the same care one for another, abide in union, and labor together in love; that there should be no "schism in the church; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it."—1 Cor. 12:25, 26. "For by one Spirit (the Spirit of God) are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit."—1 Cor. 12:13. Jesus the unity of the church by saying, "I am the vine, ye (all his disciples) are the branches: (yet but one vine.) He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing."—John 15:5. Christ prayed that the church might remain a unit, and his disciples remain one: "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, (as we are.) Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through thy word; that they all may be one; as thou Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one: I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me."—John 17:11, 20-23.

The Savior teaches the unity of the church, and the oneness of the disciples of Christ in such forcible and consistent words that it seems unnecessary to make any comment. Anyone who reads his teaching in faith and with a prayerful heart, and under the guiding influence of the Spirit, can but understand.

To be the church of Christ in fact, the disciples should be properly and fully organized in harmony with the instructions given of God, and thus bear the form and image of Christ, and be called by his name, and have the truth in its possession, and her ministers be able to preach the gospel, "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven."

THE CHURCH IS THE CUSTODIAN OF THE TRUTH.

"But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth."—1 Tim. 3:15. "God will have all to be saved, and come to a knowledge of the truth." "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32. "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."—John 17:17. "God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."—John 4:24.

The truth should be as fully stored in the hearts and minds of the disciples of Christ, that the church might be as an overflowing fountain of living water, gushing forth to refresh, strengthen direct, help, bless, and save itself, and all those who are willing to hear and receive the truth, even to the utmost bounds of the earth.

THE ONENESS OF THE DOCTRINE OF CHRIST.

"I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you. Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing."—Phil. 3:14-16. "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."—1 Cor. 1:10. If this instruction had always been, and was still carefully observed, and fully taught by all ministers, and believed by all Christians, would it not have preserved that purity of doctrine that would have firmly cemented the followers of Christ into one body, and the members of the body of Christ would still bear his image, and they would have true fellowship with each other and their Lord, and the blood of the Lamb of God would cleanse them from all sins.

"But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1:7. If we pursue the course here suggested we can live in peace and labor in love, and we would receive an answer to our prayers, and God by his power would ever be near to bless, direct, deliver and save. "And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him." John 8:29. If our hearts condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things. Beloved, if our hearts condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God. And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight."—1 John 3:20-22.

THE HORSE IN ANCIENT AMERICA.

Interest in the subject of the following article is due to two facts, first, The Book of Mormon states that the ancient inhabitants of America possessed the horse as well as other animals; and second, that prior, and for many years subsequent to the publication of the Book of Mormon it was universally held, except by Book of Mormon believers, that the horse never existed in America until brought by the Spaniards after the discovery by Columbus. The absence of any known proof that the horse did exist here was urged as an objection against the claimed divinity of the Book, but in later years exploration parties began to unearth the remains of the horse and it has long since been conceded that its ancient habitat was in America, and incidentally that the Book of Mormon was upon that point correct.

Some years ago we saw in the British Museum in London many fossil remains of the horse from America, and the description accompanying them contained the following:

"More than thirty species of Equidae (horses) have been found fossil in North America, ranging from Eohippus (?) in the lowest Eocene, to Equus in the quarternary deposits. Of these, Protohippus of the older Pliocene, equalled the ass in size. It had three toes on each foot but only the middle one reached the ground. This genus most nearly represented Hipparion of Europe; whilst Pliohippus had lost the small hoofs and was in other respects the most equine. The true horse appeared in the upper Pliocene and extended over the whole of North and South America in post tertiary times, though soon afterward becoming extinct. . . . Nearly all the fossil remains of the horse found in recent deposits and in caves belong to the existing species Equus Cabalus, which through the agency of a man has become worldwide in its distribution."—Editor.

I find in Bulletin 52, Bureau of American Ethnology, report on,—Early man in South America, by Ales Hedlicka, Curator of the Physical Anthropology U. S. National Museum, issued 1912. Beginning on page 153:

"The Lagoa Santa remains are by far the earliest finds in South America that bear on the question of ancient man; these, which were discovered by P. W. Lund, a Danish explorer of note, between 1835 and 1844, in certain caves in the district of Lagoa Santa, Brazil, along with the bones of fossil as well as of recent animals, consist of a large series of more or less fully mineralized human bones."

Page 156—"He had explored up to that time nearly 200 caves, and the number of mammal species alone were found amounted to 115, of which only 88 are still living in the region."

Page 157—"It is then proved by these evidences, in the first place, that the population of Brazil is derived from very remote times and undoubtedly anterior to the historic period. Naturally the question presents itself, Who were these most ancient inhabitants of Brazil?" etc.

Page 159—"Having expressed himself on this part of the question, Lund proceeds to the examination of the bones from the zoological standpoint, with the result that some of them are found to belong to species still living, while others belonged to animals which have already ceased to exist in that locality. Among the latter specimens were some bones of the llama, but great surprise was occasioned by the presence also of some bones of a horse. These did not belong to either of the two species of fossil horses known in the country, but indicated a different species, so nearly similar to the domestic horse that no characteristics could be found in the fragments to distinguish them therefrom, though their proportions were notably superior to those of the races of the horse introduced into South America by the conquerors."

Then follows a description of the caves and bones found, and on page 163-5 is the following: "Besides the above, Lund found in the same cave, as reported in his earlier letter, the bones of a horse, differing from those of the two fossil species of this animal which existed in Brazil, but exhibiting "great conformity with the existing domesticated horse." However these bones came from a stronger, taller animal than the ordinary horse of Brazil. They lay in the yellow as well as in the more reddish clay with blackish discolorations, and this state of decomposition was similar to that of the bones which surrounded them. They were calcareous, and in part petrified. Lund says: This last circumstance creates a new and unexpected difficulty, the solution of which may one day lead to important results. No one could pretend that the exhumed bones of this animal belonged to individuals descended from the horse introduced by the Portuguese scarcely 100 years ago. The relations under which these bones were found, with their state of decomposition, prove incontestably a more remote age. . . . The examination to which I have submitted the contents of the cave has thus led me to the following conclusions: The occupation of South America by man extends not only beyond the epoch of the discovery of this part of the world, but far back into historic times [i. e. historic time in general], and probably even beyond this into geologic times."

On page 184 is this statement, "In 1864 F. Seguin, a collector of and dealer in fossils, brought to Buenos Aires some fragments of human bones, which he said were found in the Pampean deposits of the bank of the Rio Carcarana, about 25 leagues north of Rosario in the northern part of the Province of Buenos Aires, together with bones of the fossil, bear and horse."

Ameghino, also, refers to these bones found by Seguin, and Hedlicka seems to be of the opinion that they are related to the fossil bones as reported in Lund's discoveries. These fossil bones seem to be of not much antiquity but are smaller and have no relation to those first discovered by Lund.

THE CHURCH AND THE KINGDOM.

I find that I have been misunderstood as to my position upon the above matter, and lest a greater misunderstanding should follow, I would ask a little space to state my position more plainly.

It is a fact that in the past and at the present time, the church has been called the kingdom; and the terms are used interchangeably. The church is an organized body with governmental powers, although very limited. And yet it must be apparent to all that there is to be an organization differently constructed, composed of people more thoroughly and perfectly developed, clothed upon by an authority having greater prerogatives reaching even to the ruling of nations, which organization will in every sense supersede the church as it is and has been.

The church has in it the element of progress and development, and is a means to an end, and especially speaking, it might be truthfully put, The church—the means; the kingdom—the end. Hence the kingdom in a sense would be the result of church development, or in other words, a production of the church, and could well be symbolized by "The woman" bringing forth the "man child."

The statement made in Rev. 12:7, Inspired Version, should put the matter at rest in every one's mind who believes in that book. "And the dragon prevailed not against Michael, neither the child, nor the woman, which was the church of God who had been delivered of her pains and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ." Not the kingdom of God and also Christ, but the kingdom that belongs to both God and Christ.

The Christ received that kingdom-power, because of overcoming. Those of the Church who are overcomers shall also receive of the same and sit down with him in his throne and rule, not only the church by a priesthood power, but the nations of the earth with kingly power. See Rev. 2:26. In view of that the church and the kingdom cannot always be used interchangeably.

REPORT OF PRESIDENT OF WOMAN'S AUXILIARY FOR 1912 AND 1913.

We shall leave the secretary to tell you of the numerical growth of the society for the past year, while we will confine ourselves to general conventions.

Judging from present indications we do not hesitate to pronounce the future outlook of the society, as decidedly good. Evidences of the need of this work are forcing themselves upon us continually, and not only upon us, but the conviction is general. It is not the mature in years alone that are convinced of this, but the young also are aroused and their eyes are opened to see the awful conditions that threaten society in the future, if something is not done to check the onward march of sin and ignorance.

Not only do the conditions of society admonish us that we must put forth every effort in our power to offset evil, but the recent catastrophes also remind us that God's judgments are at our very door, and it behooves us to rise to the heights to which God has called us. In his recent admonition he reminds that "Time is ripe! my work must hasten!

Whoso will may bide the hour,
Naught can harm who God protecteth
Elements confess his power.
Up ye then, to the high places
I have bid you occupy!
Peril waits upon the heedless,
Grace upon the souls who try."

Is there not a message in this for every one of us? Can we sit idly by and let these conditions overwhelm us, and those for whom we may be responsible? Surely not! As one mighty phalanx let us join hands in this great work of enlightenment.

If the work has not been started where you live, do not wait for someone else to make the move to start it, but go to work yourself. Perhaps others are waiting for you, and just a word or two from you may start the ball rolling. It may require an effort on your part, but if you preserve it in prayerfulness and humility, you surely will be blessed. We have often been buoyed up in our work, by the admonition of God to Joshua when he was about to lead the children of Israel into the land of Canaan. It was, "Be strong and of good courage, and I will not forsake thee." He certainly does bless our efforts when we labor with a resolute purpose to do his will.

We are still in the incipient stage of the new order of our work, and for different and sufficient reasons, some of the new departments were late in getting into working order. It would of necessity take time for newly elected officers in new fields of work, to grasp the situation and outline a plan of work, but all are now in shape to carry on their respective lines of work, and we look to see much more accomplished by each next year than has been done in the past.

While the assessment plan for our finances gives us a certain amount that we can depend upon for our own expenses, it is not going to be sufficient to allow all that is necessary for the development of the work, so we must of necessity depend upon the generosity of the sisters and their love for the work, to supply what more is needed. We close the year out of debt, except for our book account, and that is paying itself as the books are sold, but we have not very much on hand for carrying on the work for the coming year. Right here we wish to call attention to our books "Fireside Talks With Our Girls," and "Our Boys." They are worthy a place in every home.

We think there are quite a number of locals that do not subscribe for our leaflet, and we wish as many of them as can would do so. The subscriptions we receive for them do not nearly meet the expenses of them, yet we can scarcely get along without them. If we had more subscribers we should do better.

We appreciate the faithful way in which our editors have supplied our columns in the church papers, with material, much of which has been valuable, but we would very much like to see more items of interest from the locals in those columns. Cannot our locals appoint some one to take notes of some of the best thoughts presented at their meetings and such items as may be a means of encouragement or suggestion to other locals and send them to the editor of one or another of our columns? Not always perhaps, but to be ready to pass anything especially good, and, of course, allowing the editor to judge as to the merits for the column.

We note a suggestion from Sr. Gardner, Supt. of the Young Womans Dept., which we wish to emphasize. It is, that enquirers concerning the work of any department be directed to the superintendent of that department. It is impossible for the Advisory Board to enter into all the details of each department and the superintendents have been appointed for that work. They are therefore the ones of whom such inquiries should be made.

We think our field workers and superintendents of departments surely have done effective work during the past year when we consider that over thirty new locals have been organized and over six hundred members added to our numbers and with the experience of the past year to work on we may reasonably expect good results next year.

Mrs. B. C. Smith for the Advisory Board.

PASTORALS.

To the saints of Western Nebraska.—

You are doubtless aware ere this that I have been appointed to labor this conference year in Northwestern Nebraska, and as the bishop wishes me to still look after the fithes and offerings in Western Nebraska please respond along this line as the Lord may prosper you. I am indeed grateful to you for the effort you made last year to comply with this part of the gospel law. I think it is indeed a blessing God has bestowed upon us, giving all an opportunity to help on the great work. Paul says: "We are laborers together with God," and that "Every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor." Then, as we are "laborers together with God," let us do our best, so there will be nothing lacking on our part. May the Lord bless you in every righteous effort.

Money may be sent by check or draft to my address at Comstock, Nebr. Please accept my thanks for your many acts of kindness to me during the many years I was with you as an ambassador for Christ. Your loving kindness for me will only be forgotten when my knowledge of the things of this earth ceases. May the God of Israel bless you all.
 C. W. Prettyman.

I want to say to all the saints in the Northern Indiana District that if they see any chance for holding preaching meetings in any part of the district and wish me to make an effort, you will please write me, for I want to do all I can to spread the gospel this year and you can help me this way.
 Your brother in the f. th,
 Wm. Dowker.

6610 Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

To the Saints and friends of those portions of Missouri, Kansas and Illinois included in Mission No. 2.

Greeting.—Having been placed in charge of the work in this field by the church, I take this way of outlining the work for the new conference year; and also of introducing myself to you, trusting to become personally acquainted during the course of our work.

The field and its conditions are altogether strange to me and I will therefore need your patience and help in a larger degree than if I were acquainted with the work and its needs. Through there are the same abiding principles which underlie our work everywhere, there are still the local peculiarities and color which necessarily have to be taken into consideration and can only be appreciated by experience.

The purpose of our work in all places is to preach Christ that souls may be saved. Everything must be subordinate to this supreme end and nothing must be permitted to obstruct our work in this regard. We are therefore only able to justify our claims as a church in proportion as we identify ourselves with him in his ideals, spirit and methods.

It is also important that in this portion of the field particularly that we ever keep before us the object of our work in these latter days, which is to build up the kingdom of God and so commence the work of bringing human society into that condition of organization which recognizes and responds to the immediate rule of God. This is of course the building up of Zion, and of all places in the world we should here, at the centre stake of Zion and the regions round about be able now to give to the world an object lesson as to the practical results of our eighty years culture under the spirit and law of the restored gospel.

In this pastoral letter we therefore feel especially directed to summarize the policy which we trust will obtain among ministers and lay members, individually and collectively. Remembering always that character is the foundation of all society and to secure the kingdom of heaven the first demand is the heavenly character.

I call especially attention to the effort which has been decided upon this year by the Bishopric together with the Joint Council of Presidency and Twelve, and that is to make a very strenuous effort to raise the extraordinary sum of $75,000.00 in order to reduce the immediate pressure of debt upon the church. We earnestly invite the hearty cooperation of each individual member to make this a success by complying with the policy which the presiding Bishop may advise.

The missionaries for this field will labor as herein directed for the present. It will be observed that we have discontinued the appointing of sub-ministers in charge as we prefer to keep in direct touch with the ministry both local and general and shall be glad to hear from each and all and to consider any suggestion which may be offered.

We would advise that there be close and intimate co-operation between the local and missionary officers and each working together either in initiating or supplementing as circumstances may afford.

Especially so in the case of the Independence Stake do we advise this course and at any time, we wish the brethren to respond to calls made by the stake officers for help in such places as may be opened.

I request that all will please be prompt in reporting to me at the usual times and request that all correspondence be directed to the above address.

Independence stake:—George Jenkins, F. L. Sawley, R. O. Self and T. W. Chabrun.

Faithful yours

John W. Rushton.

To the saints and ministry in Mission No. 1, comprising Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Alberta, Manitoba, and Saskatchewan, Greeting.—

Inasmuch as I have been placed in charge of the above mission, I desire to make a few observations relative to the work in this part of the conference field that I trust will be of interest to those directly concerned and likewise conserve the interests of the body.

First let me remind you of the statement of the Apostle Paul wherein he declares: "I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." Such fidelity to the confidence imposed in him, at once challenges our admiration, and strengthens the desire within us to emulate the example of such a noted representative of Christ.

Now we have no other object than to represent Christ in the world as he would represent himself in the spirit of meekness and love, forgetful of his own personal interests. If we do this I am confident that no weapon formed against the works of the Master will ultimately triumph.

I am glad to be associated with such a body of co-workers; I am glad to be numbered as one of the many lively stones that is to form the tabernacle of God. Let us therefore, as saints, whether in branches or in isolated condition, remember that we are a part of the church, the body of Christ, consequently we cannot afford to let the little things, so incident to life estrange us from our brothers or sisters or the love of the work. If we as saints have some little difference let them be lost in the thought: "The work of the Master must move forward at the sacrifice of these little things that are neither here nor there as compared with the gospel."

I have decided not to appoint sub-ministers, but am going to ask that all make their report directly to me. I am sure this will be satisfactory to all, and I assure you, brethren of the ministry, that I will be glad to hear from you and will also be pleased to give you any assistance relative to the work. I want and shall try to merit your confidence. The best counsel I can offer is that we as ministers co-ordinate to the accomplishment of the great work intrusted to us. Please observe the dates for reporting: July 1st, Oct. 1st, Jan. 1st, and March 1st, and get them in promptly so that I can make my report to the First Presidency.

I am, yours in bonds,

James A. Gillen.

Permanent address, 635 So. Fuller, Independence, Mo.

To the ministry and saints in Kentucky, Tennessee and Southern Indiana, Greeting.—

Again the task of looking after the work of the ministry, as an associate minister, in the above named territory has been allotted to the undersigned. We therefore take this opportunity of most earnestly asking for the assistance and co-operation of both the ministry and the saints in the endeavor to make this a successful year in the building up of the church, and in the extension of the gospel through this territory.

Our ministerial force is much larger than for some years past. Let us make a special effort to make as many new openings as possible without neglecting the work already started. To this end we ask the assistance of all the saints and friends in securing places to preach the gospel, whether churches, school houses, or private houses. Inform us of the opportunities or prospects, and we will respond as promptly as possible.

Elders Alma C. Barmore, J. R. McClain, Jacob G. Halib, and Priest Charles A. Nolan will labor for the present in Southern Indiana. Bro. Halib may do some work in Kentucky later. Elder J. W. Metcalf will labor in Northern and Central Kentucky for the present.

Elders J. A. Roberts, S. E. Dickson and W. S. Shupe will labor in the Kentucky and Tennessee District for the present. Evangelical minister F. G. Pitt will labor in the Kentucky and Tennessee District, as per appointment, but may also divide his time with the Southern Indiana District.

Let us not forget that the increase of our ministerial force means also increased expense for their expenses and for the support of their families. So do not neglect to send in your titles and offerings to the bishop's agent of your respective district.

We are desirous to keep in touch with the saints of the mission, and we hope all will be free to write us concerning the needs of the work in the various localities. Mail sent to my home address will be forwarded promptly to me in my various locations in the field.

Yours, hopefully for the coming year,

H. E. Moler.

Box 144, Holden, Mo., May 11, 1913.

To the ministers and Saints of the Kirtland District; Greeting:

Having been appointed as assistant minister in charge of the district I thus address you.

I wish to say to the ministers that a great responsibility has been placed on us as the ministers of Jesus Christ, and we are sent out to represent him and not ourselves. I feel that each one senses this fact and will do so.

We ask the co-operation of all the local ministry and members that we may do all that is possible for us to do this year to make the year a success in building up the kingdom of God, and thus be instruments in his hand of helping to save the souls of men. We have been admonished of the Lord, "He that is warned, let him warn his neighbors."

To those that are living away from the branches, that can get a place for an elder to preach, write, and as soon as we can, will respond to the call, and have someone come and do the preaching. We can all do something if we will just think so.

Let us all go to work in earnest and do all the good we can, remembering that when the year has passed we can never live it over again, for we only pass this way once.

Let the watchword be first, last and all the time, the salvation of poor souls, and every move that we make let it be to save. As ministers for Christ let us not wait for something to turn up, but get busy and not let one moment be lost for the work the Lord has intrusted to our care, and we must answer to God for our stewardship while here. Let us ask ourselves the question, how many souls will there be around the pleasuring bar of God that will have the crown of everlasting life placed upon their heads by reason of our assistance to them in helping them over the rough places in life.

May the good Lord add to each such blessings as will be for his good and his glory.

Your brother and co-laborer for the great work of God,
 Richard Baldwin.

Archie Anderson. Died at Colorado Springs, February 19, 1913, after a prolonged illness. She was willing to depart, yet, possessing the anxiety of true mother, was anxious to remain and care for her four children. A father and three sisters awaited her coming to the realms of peace. Husband, mother, two sisters, two brothers and her four children remain to revere the memory of one who truly did her part to sanctify the lives of those she touched. Services in charge of F. A. EDITORIAL

TESTIMONY OF PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH AT THE INDIAN MEETING AT LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 18, 1913.

Brethren and associates in the gospel: I am impressed by the Spirit of the Master to offer that which is impressed upon my heart and in my mind. I have been very strikingly, and to me, very pleasantly blessed since I have come to conference. I had no hope a year ago to stand with my feet upon the floor of this house at this session of conference, but it has pleased God that, weak as I am in body and suffering in pain as I am from time to time, I am still favored of him to receive the administration of his Spirit and the voice of this Spirit of consolation and peace impresses me to say in behalf of the ministry of all classes and departments who have labored this last year, God has been well pleased, and they have nobly filled the mission unto which they have been called.

Those who have presided and have had the care of the different departments, have trustfully taken me into their counsel whenever they have had need and we have labored together acceptably; and the Spirit assures me, as I trust it does them, that they have labored well and diligently and their reward rests with the Master as that which is placed in security, in trust, to be received by them.

I feel impressed with the surety of our hope, and that the prophecy of the Book of Mormon touching our Lamanite brethren may have found an opening that shall continue until there shall be a full awakening among them everywhere and they shall learn to know him from whom the tribes departed so long ago and yet who have been remembered as the remnant mentioned and seen by the prophets that prophesied and wrote of them.

I have this morning even to thank God for that affliction, the loss of sight which has come to me. I have not yet felt the spirit to repine. I have felt the force of the consecration that I made at the time my brother David was afflicted and I became conscious that it was a hopeless infirmity from which the Master could release him but from which he would not be released in this life. I had wandered from Plano half way to the city of Sand wich, and there, alone, on the grassy side of the railway track, out of sight and hearing of man I offered my prayer of anguish, tried to be reconciled and became unconscious. How long I lay I do not know. It was not long, but as I came to myself again I felt the sudden impress of the power of the Spirit, and from my heart arose these words: "I will trust him, though he slay me," and from that hour I have had no dubiety, no reservation, no other hope than that that was born in me by virtue of my baptismal covenant in which I have tried to serve God; and I have had reason to thank him not only for the Spirit's testimony to me, but that to my associates, on the right hand and on the left, everywhere, near and remote, there has come the testimony of the Spirit which has made us companions and associate laborers in the greatest work ever confided to man.

And so this morning, I, out of my common custom—for few have ever heard me much in the prayer meeting, I bear my testimony, not with regard to myself, not with regard to men, but that Jesus is the Christ and that the doctrine is true, and that upon this great work, with my associates, I expect to continue to labor until the Master shall have said, "It is enough." I am ready—I have been ready to lay down the weapons of my spiritual warfare and permit those whose right it is now to take charge of his work, and who have been in charge of his work, to take up the burdens that we may have borne together, and carry it on to its greatest success.

Especially do I feel to bear a testimony to the cordiality in which President Kelley of the Quorum of the Twelve has counseled with me; the brethren of the Seventy who have had occasion to counsel with me; Bro: Joseph R. Lambert who has presided over the Patriarchal Order, and others who have had occasion to ask me for counsel, and I have been thankful, and now bear testimony to their integrity of purpose, their honesty and their sincerity of conviction, which bowed in reverence to God but held no man in fear and no man in undue favor, for which I have always been thankful regarding those with whom I have associated.

Now, now, henceforth and forever may the loving kindness and Spirit of God rest and abide with his people, Amen.

A DIVINE CALL FOR ECONOMY AND SACRIFICE.

The revelation last received by the church contains one paragraph with which every member of the church should have a daily familiarity until the purposes for which the instruction was given are accomplished. The instruction and advice belongs to every member and every officer and properly applies in the work of the individual members, as well as the work of branches, districts, and all other secondary organizations and departments within the church. It is as follows:

"The Spirit saith further unto the church assembled and at large: In order that the temporal affairs of the church may be successfully carried on and the accumulated debt of the church in its respective departments where debts have accumulated may be properly met and in due time discharged, the church is instructed both as members and as the body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment, or otherwise expending the tithes and offerings of the church in that which may not be essential unto the continued forward progress of the general work; and both in private and public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be needful to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body. And the Spirit counseleth the church in this regard."

From this divine instruction the following points and conclusions are evolved:

1. That the continued forward progress of the general work is of first importance to the Lord, and should be to every officer and member of the church.

2. That the expenditure of private and public funds by members and officers for purposes which were either unnecessary, or of secondary importance, and which might have been devoted or reserved to the general interests of the work, has hindered the accomplishment of the work.

3. That the church as members and as a body is able to meet the present and continued needs of the work as to finances by following the instruction divinely given.

4. That the way the present and future needs of the church may be met is by sacrifice, and economy in both private and public expenditures, avoiding all unnecessary expenditures, and devoting the funds so saved to the purposes of the general work.

5. That in the event of failure to heed this instruction the indebtedness of the church will not be met, and the general progress of the work will be halted.

The saints today are reaping the benefits of others' sacrifices. They are enjoying the fruits of the divine plantings in ancient as well as in modern times, and this rich harvest has cost the greatest sacrifices the world has known. The greatest treasures of all other dispensations are being gathered together in this last one, and the chief recipients are those who have been called into fellowship with Christ in these last days, and shall those who have inherited so much make no sacrifice so that the blessings they have received shall be extended to others of their fellow men, and that the purposes of God in the redemption of his people shall be fulfilled?

Truly many are sacrificing today, but to the church as a whole the Lord says the sacrifice made is not enough, that more can be done, and should be done, that too many of the temporal blessings with which he has blessed its members are being used for personal pleasure and delight rather than for the carrying on of his work in the salvation of souls. He has said: "Verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people," and the great results can only be attained by a denial to self of those things which can be dispensed with, and consecrating the means so saved to the help of God's work. It is not a question of ability but of willingness upon the part of the whole body.

The great world-wide work of God should be of first concern to every Latter Day Saint, and it should be his greatest joy to share in the sacrifices borne by the Son of God and his people of other ages, and thus bring about the consummation for which all have wrought and sacrificed, even the redemption of Zion and the final establishment of the kingdom of God in power and glory upon earth.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

FOREWORD.

Some time ago a friend who had been investigating the doctrines of both the organizations named in the heading of this article wrote to the presiding patriarch asking for further information relative to both. A discussion of them required more time and labor than the patriarch was in a position to give and upon the suggestion of our "friend" the matter was referred to the editor for discussion in the ENSIGN.

In our examination of these doctrines we shall assume an impartial attitude so far as we are able to do, occupying as we do on one side of the subject, and shall with all due respect acknowledge the standing which Christian Science has in the world, and accede to its legitimate demand for a fair examination. In order that we might do this we have refrained from reading any article or book written against Christian Science, and have made our investigation solely in and through the Christian Science text book—"Science and Health," By Mary Baker G. Eddy, the eighty-eighth edition.

Both bodies accept the Bible subject to the different interpretations which each one places upon it, from which it will be apparent that little can be determined by considering the respective doctrines in the light of what the Bible teaches, for the same Scripture means one thing to one body and another to the other. For this reason in presenting the principles of the Reorganized church we shall use almost entirely the Book of Mormon and the book of Doctrine and Covenants, which are distinctively Latter Day Saint, though an occasional reference to the Bible can hardly be avoided. Our purpose and desire are that truth may be made more clearly apparent.

GOD.

All religious worship is dependent upon faith in some superior and over-ruling power, and to most civilized people that power is God. But God is no more to any people than what their highest conceptions make him, and because of a multiplicity of conceptions, or many degrees of conception, there are a multiplicity of ways in which he is worshipped, and each conception suggests the form of worship and determines the character of the worshippers.

A right conception of God is essential to right living and right worship, and since all people consider "God" as a superior being, (most people as a supreme being), it is apparent that if man is to have a right conception of him it will only be attained through God's own revelation of himself. It is admitted that this revelation is found in the Bible, and Latter Day Saints hold that God also revealed himself to the ancient people of America the record of which has come by God's special provision to the church in the Book of Mormon, and that God has further revealed himself through his word directly to the church in these last days.

IS GOD A PERSON?

The accepted Scriptures of the Reorganized church teach that there is a personal God who is supreme in intelligence, power and goodness. The first chapter of the Book of Mormon relates a vision had by Lehi in which he "saw God sitting upon his throne, surrounded with numberless concourses of angels in the attitude of singing and praising their God." Verse 7. When the Jaredite people were journeying toward America according to the command of God it is recorded that "the Lord did go before them and did talk with them as he stood in a cloud, and gave directions whither they should travel. Ether 1:27, and upon a later occasion the leader of this people conversed with the Lord who stood in a cloud, as one man talks with another.

But not alone did men of ancient time have God revealed to them in person, for the very work which the Reorganized church is maintaining today had its beginning in the personal revelation of God to man, giving visible and audible evidence of his existence in glory and power. Still later through the power of the Holy Spirit the heavens were opened to two men who stood at the head of the church, and they testified that "the glory of the Lord shone round about; and we beheld the glory of the Son, on the right hand of the Father, and received of his fullness; and saw the holy angels, and they who are sanctified before his throne, worshipping God and the Lamb, who worship him for ever and ever. And now after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the only begotten of the Father." Doctrine and Covenants 76:3.

These are direct testimonies, but these Scriptures are full of other evidences showing that God has manifested himself to many individuals in many ways, all clearly indicating that God is a personal being, and that he may and does have direct dealings with men. These testimonies agree with the Bible which tells that Moses talked with the Lord face to face, and that Stephen saw him sitting upon his throne, and that others heard his voice or felt his power.

The teachings of the book "Science and Health" seem to be quite different, and to present the Christian Science conception of God we quote:

"QUESTION.—What is God?

ANSWER.—God is divine Principle, supreme incorporeal Being, Mind, Spirit, Soul, Life, Truth, Love.

QUESTION.—Are these terms synonymous?

ANSWER.—They are. They refer to one absolute God, and nothing else. They are intended to express the nature, essence, and wholeness of deity. The attributes of God are justice, mercy, wisdom, goodness, and so on." p. 461.

To one who has already held the idea of a personal God these statements may not be altogether clear, hence we refer to other statements which will more clearly define the conception of God, held by the author of Christian Science. We note the following:

"Christian Science. . . reveals God. . . as divine Principle." p. 21.

"He is therefore divine Principle." p. 198.

"Life is God." p. 89.

"Mind is God." p. 135.

"Spirit is God." p. 85.

"In Science, Truth is God." p. 183.

"The Christian Science God is universal, eternal Love, which changeth not." p. 34.

"Few deny that Intelligence apart from man, and which neither man nor matter has created, forms and governs the universe, and it is generally admitted that this Intelligence is the eternal Mind, or divine Principle." p. 166.

From these quotations it appears that "God" is Principle, including all goodness, truth, love, etc., rather than a personal being having these qualities as attributes of his character. To reverse the statement of John that "God is love," so that it reads "Love is God," expresses an entirely different thought, and defines a different God. But further investigation develops more clearly what this "Principle" is:

"By interpreting God as a corporeal Savior, but not as a saving Principle, we shall continue to seek salvation through pardon, and not through reform." p. 181.

"I, or Ego, [defined as] Principle, Spirit, Soul, incorporeal, unerring immortal, and eternal Mind. There is but one I, or Us, but one Principle, or Mind." p. 579.

"Mind. [defined as] The only I, or Us; the only Spirit, Soul, Principle, Substance, Life, Truth, Love; the one God; not that which is in man, but the divine Principle, or, God, of whom man is the full and perfect expression." p. 582.

"Man. . . coexists with God and the universe." p. 162.

"They [men] are in and of God, divine Mind, and so forever continue. God is one. The oneness of deity is his altness." p. 163.

"The individuality of Spirit is unknown." p. 225.

"God, without the image and likeness of himself would be a nonentity, or Mind unexpressed." p. 199.

"Man is God's image and likeness." p. 198.

Thus is God portrayed through Christian Science as impersonal Principle, coexistent with man, and non-existent without man, and dependent upon man for a true expression of himself; not capable of definitely revealing himself, but to be sought for and discovered by man.

It is readily seen that the two conceptions of God held by the people of the Reorganized Church and the followers of Christian Science differ in the extreme. The latter says: "We know him only as divine Mind, as Life, Truth, and Love." (p. 33), while the former says: "This is the testimony which we give of him, that he lives, for we saw him." D. C. 76:3.

We have presented briefly the two positions and leave the reader to draw his own conclusions.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The usual Sabbath activities were had on Sunday in the various departments of church work, some of the workers abiding in the home branch while others went out to various other places to dispense the word of truth and assist in building up the kingdom. Early morning prayer services were held as usual at the church, followed by Sunday school. In the main auditorium Elder Rudolph Etzenhouser was speaker being assisted by Elders F. C. Keek and W. H. Garrett. At the same time Elder G. E. Harrington gave an illustrated talk to the children in the lower auditorium on the subject of repentance. Bro. Harrington is providing mouthy talks adapted to the young, and his efforts are invaluable to those who hear and should be well supported.

Sacrifice was the theme of the afternoon social service, the first remarks being made in view of the fact that some of the missionaries were about to depart for their mission fields leaving their families alone. While it is a sacrifice for such families to do without a husband and father so much of the time, attention was called by the speaker to many others who may not even look for the return of the loved one because of having been taken by death. The Spirit of sacrifice is a necessary condition in all who would truly help to carry on God's work. The gospel was founded in sacrifice, and all that has ever been accomplished was through sacrifice, and in this dispensation God has called upon all to make such sacrifices of the things of the world as are essential to the carrying on of his work. Elder H. O. Smith was the evening speaker.

The work at the South Side Branch is being maintained under the presidency of Bro. H. W. Gould, the various auxiliaries doing their part in carrying on the work. Bro. H. O. Smith was the speaker Sunday morning and Bro. H. W. Gould in the evening. The usual prayer service was held in the afternoon which was profitable.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its regular session at 4:15 p. m. The election of officers was the special business of the meeting.

Street work is being continued in Kansas City by the brethren and on Sunday afternoon Bro. H. W. Hattey and C. E. Guinand held an open air meeting on Market Square where they had a good attendance; and later Bro. Hattey held a meeting on 12th Street. Arrangements are being made for a male quartette to assist these brethren in their good work.

The semi-annual convention of the State Religio Association will be held at Pertle Springs, near Warrensburg, Mo., June 14th and 15th, at which a large attendance is looked for. A strong program is being prepared and a pleasant as well as profitable session is expected.

The Missouri State Board of Horticulture in one of its bulletins reports the prospects of the general fruit crop of Missouri to be the best of any in the past decade, the prospects for peaches being especially good, giving promise of a full crop.

The Independence Co-operative Society held an open meeting in the church hall on Tuesday evening at which speeches were made by F. M. Sheehy, M. A. Etzenhouser and John W. Rushton. Many questions were answered, and a report of the society was read showing a very satisfactory gain for the first quarter. It was said that the experimental stage is over and the progress of the movement is assured.

A large delegation of the Independence saints attended the farewell concert given by St. Marie Riggs at the New Casino, Kansas City, on Monday evening. Our young sister showed great talent and skill in her work, and was greeted by a very large and appreciative audience. St. Marie Riggs has before her an enlarging field of opportunity for the accomplishment of great good under chosen work.

KANSAS CITY, MO., FOURTH BRANCH.

432 AND GARFIELD.

The regular monthly business meeting was held on the 5th at which all of the priesthood gave written reports, which showed that all had been busy in the Master's work. The Religio and Sunday School also reported.

Bro. L. A. Fowler, branch president communicated to the saints that our young Bro. Elmer St. John was called to the office of priest. After some discussion, Bro. St. John said that he had received evidence of the call. He was ordained by T. J. Sheldon, and J. I. Young who also testified of receiving evidence of the brother's call during the ordination.

Bro. Fowler was re-elected presiding elder, Bro. St. John, priest, Bro. J. Fisher, teacher, Bro. Ernest Munro, deacon Sr. Hazel Fisher, clerk, Bro. O. Brannan, librarian, Sr. A. V. Armstrong, chorister, with power to choose organist.

The Religio with Bro. W. L. Vail, as president, has had a good attendance for several months.

The Sunday school with Sr. Armstrong as superintendent, has a good interest, and is gaining slowly in numbers.

Bro. J. I. Young and daughter of Colorado Springs, visited with us at one or two services, they will probably locate here, and help swell our number.

Bro. Wm. Ayler, one of the young men lately called to the quorum of the twelve, gave us two splendid discourses to a good audience, on the eleventh. One lady gave her name for baptism, and several more are near the kingdom, as the result of the efforts of Bro. J. A. Gillean, George Jenkins and others during the winter months.

Our choir met in practice on Monday evening, the 12th, and judging from the splendid interest they are taking in the song service, we hope to be of material aid in the services of our branch.

Our midweek prayer meetings are fairly well attended, as also the prayer services at 6:30 on Sunday evenings.

Mrs. A. V. Armstrong.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Bro. and Sr. F. G. Pitt, Bro. and Sr. A. C. Barmore and Bro. and Sr. Cornelius arrived today, 15th, on the S. S. Tahiti, all feeling well and reporting a very pleasant voyage. Bro. Pitt and Barmore will conduct a series of meetings next week in the Oakland church followed by a series in the city church, if they remain long enough. Bro. Cornelius will locate somewhere in California, probably in Stockton. He is an elder and comes well recommended as a solid saint.

We filled our appointment at Windsor and Santa Rosa last Sunday, having very spiritual meetings at both places. An M. E. minister who has been attending our services at Windsor, said as he clasped my hand at the close, "Do you remember the conversation between Paul and Agrippa—'almost thou persuadest me.'" We hope he may be fully persuaded. At Windsor the few saints are about to buy a house and to transform the house into a church house. A worthy move we think and should be encouraged by all. At Santa Rosa we found the usual warm welcome with Bro. and Sr. W. E. Case in whose auto we had a pleasant ride from Windsor.

The city branch was favored with an interesting mothers' day at their Sunday school—the program was appropriate. The morning sermon was by Elder E. Ingham. Bro. Cecil Hawley was the evening speaker. In Oakland the morning speaker was Elder E. J. Clark and Bro. Archey Severy spoke at night. The attendance was encouraging.

Our reunion enthusiasm is already active, we have received some orders already for accommodations. The committee will soon meet to perfect the details. The time and place is already determined—at Irvington the usual place—the time being August 15-23 inclusive. Orders for tents, mattresses and rooms received and listed at any time.

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

On Tuesday evening May 6th, the regular monthly Sunday school teachers and officers business meeting was held. This was a genuine "get together and talk things over" meeting, and was greatly enjoyed by all who attended.

Wednesday evening the 7th, the annual election of branch officers took place, resulting as follows—President Elder B. J. Scott, priest, E. E. McCormack, teacher, J. O. Worden, deacon John Blackman, clerk, D. C. Wilke, chorister, Paul Pugsley, organist, Mary Kinnaman, member library board, D. C. Wilke. This is a corps of officers in whom we place great confidence, feeling assured that they will render good service in their respective offices. The election passed off pleasantly and with the best of feeling so far as we could judge. This evenings work closed the official service of our retiring president, Elder V. M. Goodrich who at its close addressed the assemblage in a short but feeling speech. Friday evening the Religio had a fine attendance and a good program, the chief feature of which was a splendid talk by Elder B. J. Scott.

Sunday morning ushered in "Mother's Day." The day was gloomy and chill but, the saints gathered for the day's services cheerfully, and in numbers. As we entered the Sunday school room, the first pleasant sight that greeted our approving eyes was the smiling countenance of our superintendent who is a stickler for punctuality and who though it was yet quite early stood at the door to welcome his constituents. The large table on the rostrum was a mass of bloom the center piece being a sheaf of carnations contributed by the Woman's Auxiliary in honor of the day. The opening prayer by Bro. Roy Fifer, a talk on Mother's Day by the superintendent, Bro. Harry Tilden, and the benediction by Bro. William Burlington were heartfelt and inspiring.

Bro. B. J. Scott preached a fine sermon, prefaced by a touching reference to mothers at 11 o'clock.

At four o'clock The Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting meeting and at 5:15 Bro. Goodrich had the blessed privilege of leading into the baptismal waters six precious souls; two men and four children, three boys and one little lass. At the prayer service following all were confirmed under the hands of Bro. Goodrich, Scott, Fifer and Curtis. The new brethren, Roy Weamer and William Bell are "good men and true" and we gladly welcome them among us, while we are sure the little ones will some day, do their part in this great work.

Previous to the confirmation, Bro. John Nixon having been duly recommended and set apart was ordained to the office of deacon by Elder V. M. Goodrich assisted by Elder Roy Fifer. Bro. Nixon is a worthy young man. He will make good.

The sermon at eight o'clock by Bro. Scott to a large audience closed a busy and eventful day.

Monday evening the social given by the Religio was well attended and netted a nice sum for the piano fund. Sunday the 18th, the entertaining feature of the Sunday school was a fine review given by the intermediate department under the direction of its superintendent, Sr. G. W. Best. Preaching at eleven o'clock by Elder Roy Sly. His discourse was pronounced excellent by those who heard it.

Evening prayer service was well attended, both by the saints and the "Comforting Spirit." The evening sermon was by Bro. Goodrich, and was one of the most touching appeals we have ever heard from him. He never came nearer to our hearts than in that hour of parting counsel. The congregation sang "Think Thou of Me" and "God be with You till We Meet Again," after which Bro. Goodrich asked all to take his hand in farewell as this would be the last time he would meet with them. It was some time before all had wished him "Good Speed" as there was a large congregation present. He leaves in company with Bro. Roy Sly on Wednesday for their respective fields of labor in California. Bro. Goodrich's family will remain with us for some time at least. Bro. Sly's companion will join him in a couple of weeks.

Bro. B. J. Scott is taking up his work with an interest and energy that bodes well for the work here. Bro. Roy Fifer preached at the Wyatt Park Mission in evening.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

The morning of May 11th, Sr. Maude Parrish gave a fine talk to the Sunday school, her subject being, "Order in the house of God." The same morning our district Sunday school superintendent, Bro. Walter Betts of Belleville, also gave a short talk to the school. He with Bro. L. Joerndt of Lansdowne met with others of the district officers to arrange for the convention to be held by the district Sunday school and Religio, June 14th. Bro. Granville Trowbridge delivered the morning discourse, his subject being, "Evidences of Christ's coming as found in the Old Testament prophecies." In the evening Bro. S. A. Burgess, recently returned from Lamoni, delivered the discourse.

Bro. George Reeves favored the school with a nice talk May 18th, and Bro. Archibald delivered the morning sermon his theme being, "Sincerity in the work," giving an admonition to attend church services rather than places of amusement. In the evening Bro. George Vandel of Lansdowne spoke for us, his subject was, "Not being satisfied until we awake in his likeness," and the way to reach such a condition is to exercise charity, developing into the pure love of God.

Our regular business meeting will be held the first Tuesday in June at which time branch officers will be elected.

District officers are to meet to discuss the reunion question next Sunday afternoon.

We are very thankful to hear that Bro. Betts of Belleville is some better, in answer to our prayers but let us continue to remember him as he is still very weak.

Your sister in Christ,

QUINDARO BRANCH.

On account of the space in the ENSIGN being needed for the report of the conference we have not reported for some time, but we are still alive in the work.

Some very interesting sermons have been preached by visiting brethren, Bro. George Jenkins being one of the number. Some of our prayer services have been very spiritual, the Lord speaking to us in the gift of prophecy. Two of the brethren were called upon to take upon them the burden of this work, one to the office of elder, and the other to the office of priest. At one of the Sunday evening social services a beautiful vision was shown to one of the sisters. The Lord is remembering his people here in this place.

April the 4th, at the close of the Religio service all retired to the home of Bro. Roy Barron where ice cream and cake were served in honor of his birthday. About thirty-five were present. Sr. Mildred Weedmark and Sr. Maria Tucker assisted by others rendered a fine program, consisting of vocal and piano solos. It was a complete surprise. When it came time to separate everyone expressed having had a good time.

The bazaar which was given by the ladies aid society April 28th and 30th was a financial success; the net proceeds were nearly one hundred dollars. So now the debt on our church is all paid, with enough left in our treasury to paint the building and finish the inside, including lights. The members will meet Decoration Day to do this work, and the society will serve dinner and supper.

Easter Sunday our services were good; two beautiful solos were sung, one by Sr. Shelton entitled "Victory," and one by Bro. Tucker, entitled "Easter Day shall crown him King."

Last Sunday our speakers were Bro. J. I. Young in the morning from his chart on the fall and rise of the gospel, in the evening Bro. C. S. Barron. Both sermons were very instructive.

NEBRASKA CITY.

Sunday the 18th was another beautiful day; the Sunday school was fairly well attended. Bro. Chas. Roberts of Thurman, and Bro. Mortimer of Hamburg, Iowa, were visiting the saints here today. Bro. C. E. Butterworth has been with us the past week and gave five excellent sermons, by which we were greatly blessed, and we hope that the brother will return in the near future. The Sunday evening sermon was on the "perfecting of the saints, from the text "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

We are planning to repair our church so that it will be more beautiful. Our young choir is improving, and we are so glad to see our young people move out in this line of the work.

CORRESPONDENCE

BURLINGTON, Iowa, May 12th.

The fact that the Burlington Branch has not reported through the ENSIGN for sometime does not indicate that we are asleep. We have not reported oftener, partly because there did not seem enough of general interest to write more frequently, and partly because it has for a time been a physical impossibility for the correspondent to do much writing of any nature.

Our Branch has not grown in numbers, but we feel that there is an effort toward development spiritually that promises much for the future. One of our workers told in a letter to the ENSIGN of the first sacrament service of the year, when the Spirit spoke through Bro. Joseph Arber admonishing us to greater unity, and telling us that if unity prevailed there was a great work here for young and for old. Earnest, humble effort in that direction has brought forth promise by the voice of the Spirit through Bro. Ed. Schweers at our sacrament service Sunday, May 11th. Eyes were filled with tears of gratitude as we sang praises to the Lord for acknowledgement of our effort and the promise that if we would come closer He would pour out blessings such as we were not now able to endure. The influence was felt strongly throughout the service which lasted for nearly an hour and a half with scarcely a moment lost, and through administration at the close, when comforting promise was given.

The writer has, herself, had cause within the past few months to be very humbly grateful for the assurance of help and comfort in time of need. Threatened with incipient cataract, the need was presented in fasting and prayer by the branch, other locals of the district, and friends elsewhere, and assurance was given of help and restoration. Whether the help should come through our physician or directly, the Source shall be acknowledged. Realizing that every promise is coupled with the admonition to be humble and faithful, we are praying earnestly that these conditions may prevail and our Father's name be glorified.

Bro. O. R. Miller has, by conference appointment, been returned as pastor of the branch, and we understand is planning to make added effort toward reaching outsiders. There is some talk of a summer school, and the press, perhaps, more favorably disposed than heretofore.

A debate is anticipated between Mr. W. G. Roberts representing the Non-progressive Christians (who challenged Bro. Miller through one of our daily papers), and Bro. E. E. Long representing us, the debate to be held during June owing to the disposition of our opponent, this did not seem altogether desirable to some, but with an able speaker to present our cause, some good should be accomplished and some prejudice cleared away. We are hoping and praying that such may be the case.

Our last district conference and convention held here in February were exceptionally good in attendance and interest, and gave promise of the future. It is to be hoped that the approaching one at Ottumwa, June 6th, 7th, and 8th will bring as good a representation.

The auxiliary work is doing reasonably well, the Religio still in charge of Bro. W. H. Thomas and the former superintendent still retained. In the latter department, some difficulties were met in the new lesson work, but these are being met with determination by our teachers, and we are satisfied that good work is being done. Much depends upon the teachers—even more, it seems, than in larger schools—and our teachers have responded loyally, making little need for providing substitutes. The beginners' class was divided early in the year and five advanced to the primary work, in charge of our assistant superintendent, Sr. Jule Ortleb. That class soon had an addition of two, and the beginners' bids fair to reach its former proportions before a great while. Much interest centers in our primary corner, and justly so. Especially gratifying, too, is the interest taken by the parents, who are helping both by attendance and interest to make the school a power for good that it could not be without them.

The first Sunday after the general conference the morning service was given to short talks by the priesthood of the branch,—priest, teacher and deacons, and the pastor in conclusion. The talks were both interesting and helpful.

GREEN CITY, Mo., March 5.

Dear Ensign:—It has been fifteen years since husband and I, with several others, obeyed the glorious restored gospel, and was organized into a branch, by T. W. Chatburn. We had a prosperous little branch, for about five years, and I remember with love God's servants that have taught the gospel here, but the spirit of unrest, came in our midst and four families, including some of the officers went west, took to the larger part of our little branch. So the few of us that remained were scattered, our branch became disorganized though my husband, the priest of our branch, still preached as circumstances permitted.

Oh! how often has my mind wandered back to the blessed and spiritual meetings we used to enjoy, and to the absent ones whom we first learned to love by the Spirit of the Master in the restored gospel. Though our loss is others gain, in some other parts of God's vineyard. I hope we can have an elder come after conference as there has been several requests for meetings by outsiders and five are ready for baptism. I do pray that our branch may be organized again, for which I sincerely ask the prayers of the saints, for in the unity of the Spirit there is strength. One of the five who are ready for baptism is our son, ten years old our only child living, two have gone on to the paradise of God. I have had sad sorrow and many spiritual blessings since I accepted the restored gospel.

I feel I am the most unworthy of God's children and sincerely ask the prayers of the saints, also that the honest in heart may be gathered out here, and a branch organized. May we all live worthy of God's blessings is my prayer in Jesus' name.

Emma Burch.

BILOXI, Miss., April 14th.

Dear Ensign:—I find this part of the field of labor prospering nicely with almost every part of the work. Some are studying the normal lessons.

I just closed a series of meetings at Escatawpa, and three Rivers. With good attendance and good results. Four precious souls were placed beneath the watery grave and arose to walk the narrow ways with all who love Christ and his gospel. This was at the former place mentioned.

On the last Sunday there the thirteenth I preached at the prison house and camp where a large number of men were imprisoned for violating the laws of the land, also over a hundred visitors there of white and black. I used the 16th chapter of Acts 25-31, and had good liberty. The day will be long remembered of all who attended. The guard requested me to come and as often as I could. I hope there were thoughts dropped that will have great weight for good among all that were there. The light is beginning to shine in this country, but lots of room for improvement.

I left Escatawpa the 14th for Biloxi, where I am in settlement of Catholics holding forth, with large attendance. This is a beautiful little city with a population of about ten thousand, and only about 3 or 4 families of saints here. All are principally Catholic of French descent. I guess conference will be over and gone down in history when this gets on file. I regret I couldn't attend. However I may have done more good by staying here than to have attended.

May God grant that this year's work be greater than last. Let us all co-operate together and make it so.

As ever your brother in Christ,

A. G. Miller.

KINGFISHER, Okla., May 10.

Editor Ensign:—As there has been inquiry as to the progress of the work among the Lamanites I will write a few lines. The Lamanite elders are at work now, Chief Three Fingers Philip Cook and Reuben Taylor all preached last Sunday, following a sermon by the writer to a good audience at Bessie, Okla., where we had never preached before. There were many questions asked and much interest manifested, and five were baptized, all of them good Indians, and two more names given, to be baptized after a better understanding of the work is had, which is very proper.

We are just getting the work started for the year and hope to do a good work that will stand. They are a very peculiar people, and at the present many of them are very much taken with the idea of the old time religion, and their utter contempt for the many conflicting claims of religion. They are very eager to receive the Spirit, and believe it is possible to find it, so our claims appeal to them.

I would like to see the saints send for the tract, "The church the Indians have long looked for," also the new tract written by Bro. Christensen, for the work among the Indians. The work should be presented to the leaders of the various tribes.

Hopefully your brother,
Hubert Case.

Editor Ensign:—I will try and write a few lines this lonely Sunday evening. It is lonely because my soul is longing for heavenly food and no place is there here to find it only in humble prayer to Jesus. There are no Latter Day Saints around here that I know of. I have not been to a saints' meeting for two years. Do you wonder why my soul is longing for food? My parents do not belong to the church and are so against it. But thanks be to God, I had my little sister and brother, blessed in the church when I was taken in to the blessed fold. Thank my heavenly Father for it all, and I sincerely hope and pray that papa and mamma may see the light before it is too late.

Dear brother's and sister's many times when the road has seemed so heavy that nothing could save me, and I have knelt down in sincere humble prayer to God, he has helped me; saved me; and blessed me and has kept me truer to him.

Jesus has proven a true and sincere friend to me and he will to all, who even try to follow him. We may not all do right. We are all of a sinful nature but if we show God we are in earnest and want to do right he is always ready and waiting to help us. I ask some of the young brothers and sisters to write to me.

I am 19 years old this fall. How I love and long to be with some of the young people again. They all seem so near to me, and so I sincerely hope I may hear from some one in the faith. I ask the prayers of all the saints and may God be with and bless each one.

Your sister in the work

GAY, W. Va., May 2d.

Dear Ensign:—I enjoy reading the good sermons and the good letters from the dear saints as we have no meetings nor Sunday school in this part. It seems I would be lost to the knowledge and understanding of the progress of the church if I did not have the ENSIGN and Herald to read. I have enjoyed reading the instructions, Bro. Joseph gave to the saints at the conference and my prayer is that we may all profit by the counsel and be found worthy when the Savior comes to claim his own.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

ARE PROPHETS NECESSARY FOR THE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF GOD'S WORK?

BY ELDER J. B. WILDERMUTH.

Yes; for many reasons. The following are some of them; "God's Work" herein referred to, we believe to be His Kingdom, Matt. 4:17. Luke 12:32 and 17:20-21. "God's Work;" The Bride of Christ Matt. 25:1-14, Luke 14:15-24. The wife of Christ, Rev. 19:7-8. The body of Christ 1st Cor. 12:27-8. God's work, being the Bride of Christ, or as stated in 1 Cor. 12:27-8. The body of Christ, like an honest virtuous spiritual man who, if opportunity is afforded selects for a wife, his ideal in beauty, form, and health, we believe Jesus Christ would select for his bride, his ideal in purity, virtue, form and organization.

Prophets (Seers) "One who sees, "Prophet of God, one who by the Spirit of God may see or foresee the things pertaining to God, "his work" or his people. Prophets in the "Church of Jesus Christ" are like eyes in a human body, or any body containing life that may have come into existence by the operation of God's law for mankind, or his lower creation. Eyes are by far the most useful members of the body.

ELDER J. B. WILDERMUTH

A blind body is quite helpless as it cannot see. "Where there is no vision the people perish" Prov. 29:18. "Stay yourselves and wonder; cry ye out and cry; They are drunken but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink. For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes; the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered" (Isaiah, 29:9-10,) are the conditions of the churches of men. Blind and deaf, they cannot see the beauties nor hear the inspiration of God's Holy Spirit." Inspiration is needed.

The people who compose the organized body of Christ upon the earth should know from time to time the Father's will. The prophets in the church receive instruction and revelation from God for the church. "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants the prophets," Amos 3:7. Jesus said, (after his resurrection) "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. St. John 16:12. This dear reader is one of the texts which aids in preparing the honest mind for the restoration of the gospel. (God's work) in latter days. See Rev. 14:6-7, Matt. 24:14, Zech. 2:1-5 and Amos. 3:7, et al.

A prophet is necessary, and prophets, are better, in the carrying on of God's work. The prophet and president of the High Priesthood, may receive revelation and commandments to be written for the church, while lesser prophets may receive revelation but not as commandments to the whole church, see Doctrine and Covenants 27:2 and Sec. 107 and latter part of verse 29, also number 11:26-29.

Oh how lovely it would be today, if all the servants and handmaidens of God, would live close enough to God to enjoy the "Seer's" gift, the gift of prophecy, then "methinks" God's children would avoid many of the heartaches, sorrows, trials, disappointments and misunderstandings to which the flesh is heir to, in our earthly life and its experiences!

There should be prophets, so they can council and advise with each other. "Where no council is the people fall; but in the multitude of councilors there is safety." Prov. 11:14. The same is true in this dispensation. Doctrine and Covenants 27:1-2. We are told that "Order is heaven's first law," and if the saying is not Scripture it is at least good logic and should be observed, hence, the president of the church, should be the one to receive revelation and commandments from God to be written for the whole church and to individuals who may ask of him for divine wisdom and guidance when, ever it be God's will to so reveal.

Every Apostle or Seventy when presiding over a mission, may receive revelation and wisdom from God for the good of the department over which he has charge and this is true also with every high priest or elder presiding over a district, stake or branch even the presiding officer of a prayer meeting should have the gift of discernment, as God will speak through whomsoever he will, but the gift should bear the discerning test of the presiding officer.

The men in charge of all departments, "Church Historian," Recorder, "Secretary" and all officers who bear the responsibility and authority of the priesthood should have, to the measure of their office and responsibility, the spirit of prophecy, see Rev. 19:10 and Num. 11:26-29.

Every officer should be respected in his office as long as he is not found in transgression or does not teach false doctrine. See Doctrine and Covenants 125:18.

Our critics have said, "You people have a head to your church on the earth, a prophet at the head and therefore you are wrong as Christ is the only head the church should have hence your prophets are false." Let us see, Brother Critic! As we have quoted above, the church is to be the "Bride" or "wife" of Christ; now I am a man, I have a wife, and my wife has a head of her own, and if your wife does not have a head of her own, she is surely different from any wife I have ever seen.

Jesus is the head of the church as the husband is the head of the wife (Eph. 5:23), and Master of the house, but while the wife, is obedient to the husband, as the church is to be obedient to the will of Jesus "and keep his commandments which he has given," nevertheless the "church of Jesus Christ," the "Lamb's wife," the bride of Christ, the work of God, should have a head where the body is, or a head on the body and the head of the body contains the eyes of the body hence the head of the church or God's work "contains the eyes of the church. So with the head of each department; the head of the department contains the eyes of the department hence the need and use of "lesser prophets," and for these reasons the writer upon this subject feels as Moses did," would to God that all the Lord's people were prophets and that the Lord would put his spirit in them. Num. 11:29.

A church without apostles or prophets or the gifts is like a ship at ocean that with the current drifts Without a chart or compass or rudder to direct Soon on the shoals and breakers she hopelessly is wrecked.

If God's church were without prophets (eyes) she would be where the man-made churches of the world are today, "Aliens to the commonwealth of Israel, strangers to the covenant of promise," Eph. 2:12, . . . and if the blind lead the blind both shall fall into the ditch," Matt. 15:14 and Luke 6:39.

Let us search for the church and kingdom of God, the bride the Lamb's wife, who has a perfect form, a perfect organization with a perfect head and perfect eyes (prophets), pure and immaculate, and let us hope that we may ever be a part of that body.

Oh what joy will be there
At the great resurrection
When the saints meet in air
In their robes of perfection.

Prophets are necessary to the carrying on of "God's Work" because God has set them in his church to stay as long as he has a church on the earth, and until "He comes whose right it is to reign." "Wherefore he said when he ascended on high he led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men. . . . and he gave some apostles; and some prophets; and some evangelists; and some pastors and teachers. For the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ, till we all come to the unity of the faith, and knowledge of the Son of God. Eph. 4:8-13.

Prophets are necessary to the carrying on of God's work, for God created them and set them in his church and they are there to remain as God does not deal in non-essentials, nor does he place any officers in the church great or small, without a purpose.

Prophets are necessary, to see and foresee coming events and by wise, diligent and careful advice, aid God's work and his people to be ready and prepared for them and emergencies which do and might arise. Patrick Henry said, "Whatever anguish of spirit it may cast, I am willing to know the whole truth, to know the worst and to provide for it."

Such in our opinion should be the attitude of the church, ("God's Work") and such the willingness of mind of the members, who compose the kingdom of God on earth, and whereas no man of his own wisdom can foresee the future, inspiration is needed, and prophets are needed to receive by revelation the mind and will of God and offer to God's children for their instruction and guidance, that by obedience they may obtain "the greatest gift of God unto man—Eternal Life."

"WHAT CONSTITUTES A PROPHET?"

BY ELDER JOSEPH ARBER.

Many and varied would be the answers were we to turn to the Christian world for an explanation of the above caption. But now we are called upon to give our rendition, from our view point. The word is defined by Webster as follows: 1. One that foretells future events; a predictor; a foreteller. 2. A person illuminated, inspired, or instructed by God to announce future events. 3. An interpreter; one that explains or communicates sentiments.

In order to observe the divine injunction, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God," it is necessary that we acquaint ourselves with a description of that kingdom. This description is partially presented by the apostle in 1 Corinthians 12:28. "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets." The leading officers of the church are thus stated to be apostles and prophets. The work that is assigned these officers is and must necessarily be of a very onerous as well as ponderous nature. "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ."—Eph. 4:11,12.

In order that the genuine may be in evidence as proof against the spurious, there was and will also be the need of the presence of these men enlightened with discernment that the church be protected against the ever encroaching curse of false prophets. Indeed this was their duty, "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine."—Verse 14.

From the fact that God has chosen prophets in every dispensation of the world's history is one of the best evidences we can produce to show that there was a necessity, and always will be, until the people shall be both edified and perfected in the sense God intended they should be, and it would almost seem unnecessary to argue the continuance of these God-appointed officials, but since the Lord, foreseeing that evil and error with all their elusiveness would continue to assail his church and people, has declared they would remain "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."—Eph. 4:13.

It is a matter of common consent that a statute is in force so long as it is found upon the statute book. It becomes inoperative only when a repeal is ordered; and God has enacted that prophets shall be in the church. He set them there. And this enactment occupying a place upon the statute book, will, until annulled, remain there. Since the Bible teaches the unchangeability of God, one prominent distinction between our faith and that of many others is manifest in this: We believe that God had prophets in every dispensation of the world. Their special duties and callings were to officiate in the service of God. It is recorded in the word, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Amos 3:7. "And the Lord came down in the pillar of the cloud, and stood in the door of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam; and they both came forth. And he said, Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream."—Numbers 12:5,6.

The method then God himself has chosen is to reveal his mind and will, through the instrumentality of men called prophets. This is in full agreement with the above definition. But there is need for the exercise of much care and study, that we do not accept any, and everything, that may be given as the word of the Lord, for such deception has been perpetuated in the ages of the past. For we are again informed by the eternal Fountain of intelligence from above, so that we should make no mistake along this line.

"If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, and the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them; thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." Deut. 13:1-3. Again we read, "And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the Lord hath not spoken? When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him."—Deut. 18:21, 22.

Oh, that the world could get one glimpse of God today, and the institution wherein is the power of God, revealed by the medium of prophets as of old; but the people have wandered away from the gospel, and the church, established by God himself, and have built churches of their own, and taught doctrines to suit their own fancies. God cannot therefore put his seal of approval upon that which is not his. Hence, the old, old appeal which God authorized the prophet Jeremiah to make is still in order today. "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls."—Jer. 6:16.

The definition of a seer, and that of a prophet are much alike. A seer, is literally, one who sees; in a supernatural sense, one who sees things past and things future. A prophet is one who foretells, or reveals that which has been imparted to him through divine agencies. The Bible makes no distinction between the prophet and the seer. We are informed in 1 Samuel 9:9, that "he that is now called a seer," declared the will of God, and spoke with a surprising confidence and freedom to both kings and people.

We are indebted to the teachings of the Book of Mormon for further light on the subject. In speaking of the "interpreters," Ammon said to King Limhi, "Whosoever is commanded to look in them, the same is called a seer." When the king said, "that a prophet is greater than a seer," Ammon replied: "A seer is a revelator, and a prophet also; and a gift which is greater, no man can have, except he should possess the power of God, which no man can; yet man may have great power given him from God. But a prophet can know of things which have past, and also of things which are to come; and by them shall all things be revealed, or rather, shall secret things be made manifest, and hidden things shall come to light, and things which are not known, shall be made known by them; and also things shall be made known by them, which otherwise could not be known. Thus God has provided a means that man, through faith, might work mighty miracles; therefore, he becometh a great benefit to his fellow beings."—Mosiah 5:72-81; also 12:18-21; Nephi 2:10.

Many, if not all the books of the Old Testament were the work of the prophets of God. Moses received from God an account of the earth and the inhabitants, from the creation to his time. Samuel, Nehemiah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and many others, were permitted to write books, that we find so valuable. Joseph Smith, too, like prophets of old, was instrumental in this day of darkness and confusion, when many were stumbling for lack of spiritual light, of bringing forth the word of God. And through the inspiration which God endowed him, he has accomplished a great work. The fact that he had such phenomenal success, was in that he was inspired by the Holy Spirit to lay the foundation of the church, and build it up according to God's plan.

With appreciation we may well sing that beautiful song found in the Hymnal,

We thank thee, O God, for a prophet
To guide us in these latter days;
We thank thee for sending the gospel
To lighten our minds with its rays;
We thank thee for every blessing
Bestowed by thy bounteous hand;
We feel it a pleasure to serve thee,
And love to obey thy commands.

The manner in which "prophets" were to operate in their callings is indicated by the Prophet Malachi. In part he tells of the work in the last days: "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."—Mal. 4:5, 6.

Prophesying of distressing times yet in the future, we are warned of coming events by St. John. "And there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months. And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and three score days clothed in sackcloth. These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth. And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed. These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophesy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will. And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them. And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and a half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves. And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth. And after three days and a half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them. And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither, and they ascended up to heaven in a cloud and their enemies beheld them."—Rev. 11:1-12.

And again, the Apostle Peter, reiterates, the prophecy of the Prophet Joel, "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit and they shall prophesy."—Acts 2:17, 18.

It will be seen therefore, that the Lord, using his own methods, to accomplish his purposes, in every dispensation of time, called men whom he named prophets, speaking through them for the good of his work, and people.

RIGHT TO THE POINT.

Some of our enemies say we believe too much. We think they are unsafe because they believe too little. Christ said: "Oh fools and slow of heart, not to believe all that the prophets have written." God doesn't condemn men for believing too much but for accepting too little. Now who are the safest?

If you are not in the kingdom of God you are out of it, and if you are out, where are you anyway, and what promise have you? Friend, better get in right away—water was made to use.

Jesus Christ will not take second place in any man's affection.

If your mother was a good woman and lived up to all the light she had, and never heard of the restored gospel as taught by the Latter Day Saints, and has died, she is safe, because if she had heard of this additional light which has come into the world she would have accepted it. If you have heard and will not obey, you are not living up to all the light you have, therefore when you die you cannot go where your mother is.

If Christ has more than one church on earth today, and as the church is his bride, how many wives is he going to have at his second coming? We are opposed to the doctrine of polygamy, but evidently our religious contemporaries are not, and point to Jesus Christ as setting the example!

The assertion: "It doesn't make any difference what you believe, just so you are honest," will not bear intelligent analysis. Will the same desirable results follow if a person honestly believes in a colossal falsehood, as if he believed the divine truth? If a mother gives her child strichnine, thinking it soothing syrup, will her honest belief change the effect of the poison? The mental attitude of an individual toward a principle doesn't change it a particle. We can only be saved by the truth.

When you reject the gospel you reject Christ. Now why are you doing it?

No man need be afraid of bumping his dome of thought in going in at the door through which Jesus Christ has passed.

C. Edward Miller.

AN ADVANCE STEP.

In answer to criticisms on the wireless diplomatic dinner given by Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan, he issued the following statement:

"We did not intend to magnify, by mentioning it, the importance of the non-use of wine at the dinner given to Ambassador Bryce Monday night, but as the papers have made some inaccurate references to the matter the facts might as well be known.

FIRST DIPLOMATIC DINNER.

This was the first dinner which we have given to members of the diplomatic corps and therefore the first time when we came into conflict with the social custom of serving wine at dinner. The seven other ambassadors then in the city and their ladies were invited to meet Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce and as all the gentlemen guests present were from foreign countries I thought it proper to explain to them the reason for our failure to conform to what seems to have been customary in this matter. Believing that the issue should be met frankly in the beginning, I told them, when we sat down to the table, that Mrs. Bryan and I had been teetotalers from our youth, as were our parents before us, and had never served liquor at our table; that when the president was kind enough to tender me the portfolio of state I asked him whether our failure to serve wine would be any embarrassment to the administration and he generously left the matter to our discretion.

ENJOYED THE EVENING.

I suggested that I thought it unfair to assume that those coming to us from abroad would judge us harshly or be unwilling to tolerate the maintenance of a traditional custom and expressed the hope that our friendship would be made so apparent to them and our hospitality so cordial that they would overlook this weakness in us, if they regarded it as a weakness. My remarks were applauded by the company and we never spent a more enjoyable evening.

That is all there is to the matter and we can consider the incident closed and the custom established so far as we are concerned.

THE RED MAN'S RALLY.

The redskin is not altogether dead and out. That the comparative monotony of civilized life threatens the disappearance of remaining Indian tribes in but borne out by figures. On the contrary, the total number of these aborigines has increased from 248,253 in 1890, to 265,684 in 1910, on addition of 17,430 individuals in twenty years. Broadly speaking, States northeast of the central group show a diminution. The same is the case with Nebraska and Minnesota. Along the Mississippi there are but 2,612 Indians, where formerly 3,596 were registered. Pacific States have lost a few hundreds. Other groups show an increase.

The red man has increased at a rate of seven per cent only, against an advance of over eleven per cent among negroes and fifteen per cent among whites. The fact is, he is becoming assimilated. Only in Oregon, Arizona and the two Carolinas is intermarriage forbidden. Also, the red man is adaptable. Of Indian blood to-day there are breeders, planters, bankers, ministers, lawyers, doctors, journalists, schoolmasters, artisans, and working-men. According to the law of 1887, it is permissible for every Indian to become an American citizen, provided that he lives apart from his tribe and cultivate a plot of ground. In consequence, the number of Indians paying regular taxes, and so entitled to the rights of citizenship, is largely increasing. In Arizona, 8,000 Indians have the right to vote. In Idaho are 3,860 Indians electors; in Minnesota, 9,160; in Montana, 6,000; in New Mexico, 7,000; in California, 3,500; Nevada boasts 2,000, and Oklahoma, the star total 32,000.

Calumniators have neither good hearts nor good understandings. We ought not to think ill of anyone till we have palpable proof, and even then we should not expose them to others.—Colton.

LABOR PARTIES UNITE TO PREVENT WAR.

In the parliaments of two great European Powers whose rivalry in commerce and armament is threatening to bring them into conflict, there is now a considerable proportion of the membership pledged to counteract this tendency. Recently the one hundred and ten Social Democratic members of the German Reichstag joined with the forty-one Labor members of the British House of Commons in singing the following peace manifesto:

"The Parliaments of both Germany and England have again decided to grant the naval demands of their governments and enormously increase the burden of armaments. The representatives of the working classes of both countries—the members of the Social Democratic party in Germany and the Labor party in England—have fought against this increase and voted against it. But they are not strong enough in their Parliaments to prevent the acceptance of the military and naval budgets. Consequently the competition in armaments continues its fateful and fatal course, putting on the shoulders of the people at a time of a general rise in prices for all commodities a new and heavy burden and at the same time aggravating the danger of a dreadful war.

The workmen of Germany do not entertain any hostile feelings for England, nor do English workmen for Germany. Most decidedly they stand against all who incite to war in both countries. They do not demand an increase in the capitalistic competition in armaments, but its abolition; not an incitement to war, but a mutual understanding between both nations.

A war between England and Germany would lead to such a catastrophe as history has never yet seen. All those who cause such a danger commit an infamous crime on humanity. The possibility of preventing this catastrophe lies in the hands of the working classes of both our countries. We, as representatives of the organized, class-conscious workmen in both countries, therefore urge the whole body of workmen in both Germany and Great Britain to join our organizations to prevent civilization and culture being pulled down into the abyss and human lives annihilated.

Workmen of England and Germany! Wherever you meet you must always remember that you have an historical part to play and the general welfare of the nations to advance. Agitate and organize for the mutual understanding of peoples and for peace."

The poet Neihardt has dedicated his latest volume "The Stranger at the Gate," to mothers.

"The book sings the old song of birth with a voice of music and of mystery. The sweep of the sublime process of creation through all living things comes into the imagination through imagery and suggestion; the vast world waits and makes ready for its countless births:

"O'er the brooding summer
A green hush clings,
Save the sound of weaving
Wee, soft things:
Everywhere a mother
Weaves and sings."

Persons sending in articles for publication will please sign their names. We must have these for various reasons, although they need not be published.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 3, 1913.

To the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service.—During the year I have performed the usual duties incident to my office, consulting the President and attending meetings of the Advisory Board. For a couple of months, however, owing to poor health, I have not been able to assist.

I believe that we have many reasons for feeling encouraged over the Woman's Auxiliary work. The object and purpose of the society is becoming better known and more highly appreciated each year by both the women and men of the church. Many of the ministry are becoming interested and are anxious to help.

Although we may not have accomplished all that we had hoped, in adding our new departments and attempting thereby to meet the demands, still, on the whole, the results from the workings of the society for the year have been good.

The board has not been desirous that all locals should organize classes in each department, this would not be practicable in many locals, but we have been anxious that the various departments should supply helpful and sufficient material toward the intellectual and spiritual uplift and development of the women of the church in their various needs.

Personally, my interest in the Woman's Department of the church deepens each year. It has been my privilege to attend lectures by people of prominence, who have studied the various phases of the many woman's movements throughout the world; I have also followed for myself, as closely as possible, the workings of woman's organizations; their failures and successes, with their noticeably strong and weak features, and I feel to congratulate the women of our church that from the beginning our society has been characterized by a spirit of wholesomeness and stability, with its platform one of ameness and conservatism that will safely stand the test of time as the many changes, which are inevitable, shall take place in society. In order that the homes of the church may remain sacredly intact, and that the inmates thereof may be found each succeeding year living on a higher plane, intellectually and spiritually, than the last, we need, an intelligent and competent motherhood and womanhood and the Auxiliary as organized is capable of contributing materially to this end.

It has given me pleasure to serve as a member of the Advisory Board for five years. Owing to the many demands upon my time and strength I find it necessary to ask to be relieved, for the present, from all active Auxiliary work.

Your active,
Mrs. F. M. Smith, Vice Pres. W. A.

INDEPENDENCE MO., April 4th, 1913.

To the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service, Greeting.—The work of the Woman's Auxiliary this year has been represented by sixty-nine locals, four district organizations and thirty-eight field workers. There has been organized forty-four new locals, viz:

St. Louis, St. Louis Mite Society, Cheltenham Victoria Society, Landsdowne Society of East St. Louis, Gallands Grove Branch at Dunlap Ia., Deloit, Ia., Elk Mills, Md., Willer, Neb., So. Brandman, Mich., Traverse City, Mich., Millersburg, Ill., Grant, Mich., McKenzie, Ala., Marion, Mich., Ft. Scott, Kans., Mapleton, Kans., St. Clair, Mich., Detroit, Mich., Veve, Mo., Belleville, Ill., E. Jordan, Mich., Flint, Mich., Cressat, Ia., Bozeman, Mont., Deer Lodge, Mont., Calumet, Ok., Disley, Sask., Viceroy, Sask., Frazee, Minn., Pittsburg, Kans., Lewis Station, Mo., Nebraska City, Neb., Joplin, Mo., Appleton, Wis., Boston, Mass., Denver, Colo., Oakland, Cal., Tulare, Cal., Eustis, Neb., Francis, Sask., Hazel Dell Branch. (Just reported). Also three locals just organized in the Kirtland District, by Sr. M. E. George; the names of the towns were not given.

Four locals have been disorganized: Bartlesville Ok., Oelwein, Ia., Davenport, Ia., and Runnells, Ia. Nine of the old locals upon our record have failed to report and four new locals organized since Jan. 1913.

We have reports from forty-four locals, and four district organizations comprising sixteen locals.

MEMBERSHIP.

The membership of the organization, as nearly as we can estimate is 1222. An increase of 695 over last year. This is only approximately correct; we are satisfied the membership would be greater had we complete reports from every local.

DEPARTMENTS.

We have record of 25 Home and Child Welfare Depts.
1 Eugenics.
5 Literary and Educational.
5 Domestic Science.
31 Sewing and Aid.
5 Young Women's.

DISTRICTS.

There has been an increase of two district organizations: Montana district, comprising locals of Bozeman and Deer Lodge, and Saskatchewan District, comprising locals of Francis, Disley and Viceroy. Total number of locals in districts 16. An increase of 10 this year.

FIELD WORKERS.

There has been appointed thirty-eight field workers. Twenty-two report results of their work; others have been diligent in explaining the object of the organization, distributed literature and written many letters to branches in their respective districts. There have been twenty locals organized by field workers: eleven home and Child Welfare departments, thirteen Sewing and Aid, one Literary and Educational, one Domestic Science, one Young Woman's. They have visited personally 37 branches. Sr. Mina Kearney of Clinton, Mo. District has organized the largest number of locals, seven. Sr. Myrtle Trowbridge of St. Louis Mo. organized three locals last month consisting of 71 members and sent in at once $7.10 per capita assessment.

As the above report indicates our work is assuming larger proportions as to territory and numbers. Quite a number of societies throughout the church have affiliated with us and many inquiries have come in, and are coming in, regarding the various departments of our work.

If the convention will recall that in our report for the year 1911 we stated the number of new locals organized for the year was four, and that this year's report records forty-four, it will give us some idea of our growth numerically in the past two years. The contribution to the general fund for the year 1911 was $30.46, this year it is $98.81, an increase of 68.35. The per capita assessment alone for this year is $62.40.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. D. J. Krahl, Gen. Sec.

PASTORALS.

To the Ministry and Saints of the Rocky Mountain Mission, including the states of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Colorado, Greeting:—

Following the custom of the missionaries in general charge, allow me to say that the brethren in the general ministry named below will labor as follows the ensuing year:

- Arthur Mills, Colorado, Denver, objective.
- Samuel Twombly and R. E. Bozarth, Western Colorado.
- F. A. Russell and J. D. Curtis, Central Colorado.
- J. R. Sutton and J. F. Petre, Eastern Colorado.
- J. M. Stubbart, Southern Utah.

Lymon Fyke and New Madden, the country between Weiser and Hagerman.

L. E. Hills, Eastern Montana, Bozeman objective.

W. R. Smith, George Thorburn and A. J. Moore, Montana.

Bear in mind, brethren, that there is no intention to establish closely drawn boundary lines. Should you find a good opening in the vicinity of your appointed field, do not hesitate to step over and occupy.

I trust to your good will and judgment to occupy wisely and well in your appointed fields; to labor together as brethren should, diligently, and yet, "in honor, preferring one another," also considering the rights and feelings of the local ministry, as they will yours, so that there may be harmony throughout, all striving to conserve and advance the interests of the Master's cause.

You will remember the times for reporting. I only need to ask you to be as punctual and prompt as you consistently can, and report conditions in your respective fields as fully as possible. All may report directly to me. My home address is 419 East 5th St., Cameron, Mo., but I hope to be able to publish my field address before July 1st.

Will the brethren who have not yet received their letters of recommendation, please write me, and I will forward at once.

To the local brethren and saints, I want to say that your service is as useful and honorable as that of the general ministry, and I hope that you will continue to sustain the work financially and otherwise, as the Lord may prosper you. All may feel free to write me as to conditions, needs, etc., in their respective localities, and I will do my best for you, either in person, by correspondence, or otherwise.

Let us all pray and labor together for a successful year in the mission.

Respectfully, your brother,
Peter Anderson.

To the Saints in various localities throughout the Independence Stake, not in branches:—

Having been asked to assist in arranging for missionary services, by the missionary in charge, Elder J. W. Rushton, and wishing the co-operation of the members in these various localities, I desire all such to communicate with me, expressing themselves relative to the opportunities and advisability of holding services at these places. Elders George Jenkins and R. O. Self have the stake tent at their disposal and will begin operations in Independence shortly, from this point they will go where it is thought the greatest amount of good can be accomplished. Elder W. S. Macrae will be available to a limited extent, and because of conditions, will labor in close proximity to his home town. Bro. Rowe of the local force, will also be available. We desire that all who can, will arrange so that services can be held, as far as possible, that each minister engaged in this mission work may be in action to the extent that they are able and that as a result of the combined efforts and sacrifices, we may have an ingathering of souls that will reveal the depth of interest we feel in the work.

There will necessarily be expenses created as a result of the movements of these missionaries, which perhaps will make it necessary at times for sacrifices to be made in order that the work of the Lord may be extended.

It is a sacrifice for the missionaries to leave their homes and this should not be increased by the failure of those among whom they labor and belonging to the church, to contribute to their necessities.

Trusting that with thoughtful and prayerful earnestness, we may co-operate to the end that the offers of salvation may reach the homes of many, as yet unacquainted with the latter day work.

Yours very sincerely,
G. E. Harrington,
Pres. Independence Stake.

To the disciples of Christ in Mission No. 3, comprising Maritime Provinces, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, and District of Columbia, Greeting:—

The church has appointed to labor in your mission the following named brethren who rank in office from those of the lower priesthood authorized to travel, to those occupying in the leading quorums of the church. With such "gifts" there should come to the mission, especially to the church, joy and rejoicing, and a well balanced spirituality leading to commendable works. This will be the result if heed is given as it should be to the teachings of all these ambassadors for Christ.

The following assignments have been decided upon:
To Eastern Maine, H. A. Koehler, G. W. Robley, Jonesport objective point.

To Western Maine, J. F. Sheehy.
To Western Maine District and Nova Scotia, F. J. Ebeling and H. L. Rushfelt; if tent work can be arranged for by these brethren in Nova Scotia, their efforts to prosecute the work in that way should receive proper support. Removal from Nova Scotia will likely be advisable as winter comes on.

To the Massachusetts District, H. O. Smith, R. W. Farrell, Boston objective point; A. B. Phillips, Fall River objective point; Wm. Anderson, Cape Cod objective point; J. W. Davis.

To the New York District, A. E. Stone, B. L. McKim, A. M. Chase.

To the New York and Philadelphia District, J. R. Lentell, A. D. Angus, W. W. Smith, Philadelphia objective point; J. A. Koehler, Philadelphia second church objective point; E. B. Hull, Brooklyn objective point; T. U. Thomas, Scranton objective point.

A humble well-informed minister for Christ who is wisely aggressive will be able to do much good.

Times of reporting, July 1, October 1, January 1, and March 1. Let prompts characterize this matter, lest reports be delayed in reaching the presidency. Get blanks from the Herald Office.

Let each one of the missionaries develop his personality, and feel free to take initiative steps along all lines that contribute to the success of the Lord's work.

Criticism coming from anybody unless actuated by a desire to extend the glory of God, is hurtful,—fault-finding is unchristian and should by all be rendered unpopular.

It is a joyful service to participate in Zion's cause; therefore, let all her institutions be sustained, and the treasury of the church be kept replete with funds to draw from instead of allowing a condition to develop that makes it necessary to appeal for funds to support the general administration of the church, the ministry and their families. He who expects to be saved through the church should cheerfully sustain the church.

By making known and then sharing burdens there should be no room for discouragement.

Mail addressed to 343 Medford St., Winter Hill, Mass., will safely reach me. With faith in the triumph of our work,

I am,
Paul M. Hanson,
Minister in general charge.

To the Saints of the Pacific Slope Mission comprising British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Republic of Mexico, Territory of Hawaii, Greeting:—

As co-workers with God in that part of the work assigned to Jesus the Christ, we are favored to enter another church year, conscious and appreciative of past and present recognition of divine love, we may consistently look to the future hopefully. The gospel is still potential, and as time moves onward will be found ready for any possible and legitimate demand. The evidence is confirmative accumulative that we are living "in the dispensation of the fullness of time." Let us arise to the dignity of our calling and work.

The conference has made some change in the personnel of our staff. The following arrangement on general lines seems best to us for the present:
Seattle and British Columbia District to have Daniel MacGregor, P. Premo, P. T. Plumb. (The latter two labor together in tent work). Wm. Johnson, who attends to the duties of district president and bishop's agent.

As Bro. MacGregor is general superintendent of Sunday school, don't neglect to utilize him some on those lines.
M. H. Cook and D. M. Shippy continue their missionary labors as heretofore.

C. E. Crumley will look after church interests in Southwestern Oregon District.
M. Cannon in Northern California and Southern Oregon, and C. W. Earl may associate with him as the way opens.

J. M. Terry as district president of Northern California with Oakland as objective point.
C. A. Parkin as bishop in care of finances and also such missionary work as he may find opportune.

J. D. Stead and S. M. Reiste look after the tent work in San Joaquin Valley as wisdom may direct.
C. W. Deuel follow lines as formerly made by his labors in California, entering Nevada when opportune.

Roy F. Slye and C. J. Cady, we will more directly arrange for later.

V. M. Goodrich as per appointment, Los Angeles objective point.

Wm. Manning and S. D. Condit in Arizona.
T. J. Sheppard and W. A. Bruner in New Mexico.
M. A. McConley and J. B. Barrett in Hawaii.

Most sincerely, your fellow laborer,
F. M. Sheehy,
J. E. Kelley.

P. S. That part of Washington including the Spokane District has by agreement with the First Presidency and minister in charge of Rocky Mountain Mission been attached thereto.

At present, correspondents and reports may be sent to my mission address, 281 Castro St., San Francisco, Calif. Bro. Kelley will settle on address later.

F. M. Sheehy.

Having been changed from Clinton District to Far West I take this means of notifying all parties concerned. Will the saints and friends of Far West District please put forth an extra effort to help me in new openings. Write me when you can use me in a meeting.

E. L. Henson.

We as missionaries need your help. Let me know of new openings, or where I can help you, and I will be glad to do so, may God bless us all in doing all we can for Father's cause is my prayer in Jesus' name.

"OTHER SHEEP I HAVE."

The identity of modern Israel has been sought by many ethnologists and theologians of modern times though little of certainty has been established by them. As to the Israelitish origin of that remnant known as the Jews there is no doubt, but they represent only a fractional part of Israel.

To Abraham the original founder of the race the Lord said: "I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth," and to Jacob the immediate founder God said: "And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south. . . . And I will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of." Gen. 28:14.

When Moses gave the law under which the people of Israel could be established as a nation in Canaan they were promised national prosperity on conditions of obedience and righteousness, but should they turn away from God and his law, Moses gave this warning: "And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people from the one end of the earth even to the other; and there shalt thou serve other gods, which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone." Deut. 28:64.

The truthfulness of these prophecies can hardly be questioned, and while the Israelite nation grew to considerably proportions, the Biblical history clearly records the evidences of their transgressions and their rejection of God. Under these circumstances God permitted judgments of various kinds to come upon them to bring them to repentance, and frequently they were attacked by their national enemies and brought into subjection or carried away to other lands. In 721 B. C., Salmazer, king of Assyria, came against the ten tribes composing the kingdom of Israel and "carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes." 2 Kings 17:6.

From this it will be seen that these people were distributed in various and distant parts of Assyria, a practice of the ancient nations by which they broke the national power of their conquered nations. Esdras speaks of an assembling of these scattered Israelites who took their journey toward the north, but it is evident that those thus assembled could have been but a fraction of the whole scattered nation.

At a later time the Babylonians took the kingdom of Judah and carried its people to Babylon distributing them throughout all parts of their vast domains, and seventy years later through the kindness of Cyrus, king of Persia, the conquerer of Babylon, Ezra was permitted to lead back to Jerusalem 42,360 people for the rebuilding of the temple and city, but again these were but a part of the whole number who were scattered throughout the Medo-Persian countries. At various other times, and through various causes, numbers of Israelites wandered away from their home-land and were lost by amalgamation with the nations with whom they mingled, or formed colonies which grew into tribes and perhaps nations, in fulfillment of the promise to Abraham that he should be "a father of many nations." Gen. 17:4.

All the history known of Israel shows the literal fulfillment of the prophecies, relative to their being scattered, but those same prophecies tell that though God would withdraw himself from them, and leave them in darkness to suffer the results of their transgressions, he would not forsake them, but would "remember mercy;" and would ultimately gather them again from all the lands whither they had gone. The greater part of Israel is unaware of its own identity. The fact that Israel was to "forget God" and worship gods of wood and stone for "days without number," would incline us to look for them among the heathen nations today, though they might also be found among civilized nations.

The Book of Mormon tells of a colony of Israelites who left Jerusalem 600 B. C. and settled in America where they grew into two great nations of whom the American Indians of today are understood to be the remnant. If this claim be a correct one then the Indians are Israelites, and their present condition is in complete harmony with what the prophets said would be. The Latter Day Saints are not without some scientific support in this claim for a number of ethnologists and archaeologists have reported Israelitish features, customs, words and archaeological remains among them, setting forth the theory of Hebrew origin. Similar theories have been held that the Abyssinians of Africa, the Hindoos of India, the Japanese, as well as the Teutonic nations of northern Europe, are of Israelite descent.

It was evidently with an understanding of Israel's scattered condition that Jesus said to the people at Jerusalem:

"Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold, them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." John 10:16.

He is the "Shepherd of Israel" and was sent "to the lost sheep of the house of Israel," and since those at Jerusalem were but a small remnant of his "sheep," it is but consistent that the "other sheep" should be remembered by him, and hear his voice that they might have the privilege of coming into the "one fold."

In this connection the Book of Mormon records that during the forty days intervening between Christ's resurrection and ascension he visited his people upon the American continent, giving them the same message of salvation that had been given to those at Jerusalem, and opening the door of the kingdom to them. To these people he also said "I have other sheep, which are not of this land, neither of the land of Jerusalem . . . but I, have received a commandment of the Father, that I shall go unto them, and that they shall hear my voice, and shall be numbered among my sheep, that there may be one fold and one shepherd therefore I go to show myself unto them." 3 Nephi 7:24-26.

One of the purposes of the restoration of the gospel in this dispensation is set forth in the Scriptures—both Bible and Book of Mormon—to be the gathering out of God's chosen people from all the lands, and from among all the peoples, where they have been scattered. That work of gathering is to be done by the preaching of the gospel, and those who are truly the "sheep" will hear his voice, for Christ said, "the sheep follow him: for they know his voice." John 10:4. Before the end comes the Lord says that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations," and later revelation shows that this gospel in latter days is to be preached first to the gentile nations, and then to Israel.

The book of Doctrine and Covenants refers to Israel to whom the gospel is to go in the last days as "nations, the heathen nations, the house of Joseph." 87:3. This gospel will bring to lost Israel a knowledge of the Abrahamic covenant and the promises made to his posterity, and they will learn through a fulfillment of the promises in them their true identity, and will know that they are of Israel.

Not all the lineage of Israel will accept the message, and such will not be numbered with the house of Israel, while there will be many of the gentiles who will come in and through obedience will be numbered with God's people. God is remembering his promises and has again planted the gospel standard for the gathering in of his people.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 2.

THE NATURE OF GOD.

Having set forth the evidences of the two diverse views relative to the personality of God, it will be necessary in order to arrive at a definite understanding of what the respective bodies hold as their conceptions of God, to consider somewhat further the doctrines held by each regarding him.

While the Reorganized church holds that God is a personal Being occupying a definite place referred to as his "throne," or "heaven," from whence he governs and rules all his creations, it is further held that "he comprehendeth all things, and all things are before him; and all things are round about him and he is above all things, and in all things," and the light of God "proceedeth forth from the presence of God to fill the immensity of space. Doctrine and Covenants, 85:3, 10. As the Creator and Ruler of all things "he hath given a law unto all things," Man is subject to the law of God and by it "they . . . are sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ." Doc. and Cov. 85:11, 5.

As revelation was necessary in the giving of God's law to man, so God's government of man necessitates perpetual revelation, hence it is to be expected that the books of the church should teach present revelation and that God's servants should "from time to time, as shall be manifest by the Comforter, receive revelations to unfold the mysteries of the kingdom." Doc. and Cov. 87:5.

The revelations of God show him to be omnipotent, eternal, and unchangeable; that he "forgiveth sins, and is merciful unto those who confess their sins with humble hearts," Doctrine and Covenants 61:1; that he is omniscient and "looketh down upon all the children of men; and he knows all the thoughts and intents of the heart," Book of Mormon, Alma 12:110; that "he comprehendeth all things," and that as Ruler he executes justice and judgment, so that "judgment goeth before the face of him who sitteth upon the throne, and governeth and executeth all things."

These brief references are representative of the whole teaching of the Book of Mormon, and the book of Doctrine and Covenants, which with the Bible are accepted by the Reorganized Church as the basis of its faith, and according to these records God is an intelligent supreme personal Being occupying a definite place, and whose power and glory "fill the immensity of space," and who in the government of the world executes justice and judgment in wisdom and mercy, revealing his law and choosing and qualifying men to teach it. He is not so far removed from man but that when approached through obedience to his law he will reveal himself. He is the author of our life and the Source of our intelligence and knowledge.

In turning to Science and Health for the Christian Science teachings we find that "Love, the divine Principle, is the Father and Mother of the universe, including man," p 152; that Truth is God, and God has no opposite," p 183; that "God is what the Scriptures declare Him to be,—Life, Truth, Love, God is Spirit, and Spirit is divine Principle. Principle is divine Mind," p 226. "Life Truth, Love, Good, are not mere attributes of Deity, but the highest terms we can employ to express our thought of God," p 171; that "God controls all, as manifesting Mind, not matter," p 239.

In harmony with the non-personal conception of God it is but consistent that Science and Health should be silent as to any revelation emanating from God, and as to any direct dealings he might have with man. It teaches that "Truth communicates itself," p 251; and "all that we correctly know of Mind comes from God, divine Principle, and is learned through Christian Science," p 250. "It [Christian Science] reveals God . . . as divine Principle, supreme Being, Mind, exempt from all evil," p 21.

Thus it is seen that this conception of God makes him non-communicative, and without power to hear and definitely answer a specific prayer, or to directly intervene in the interests of men. He cannot forgive for "the destruction of sin [by Life, Truth, and Love] is the divine method of pardon . . . Being destroyed, sin needs no other form of forgiveness." p 234. He holds no right of judgment for "No final judgment awaits mortals; for the judgment of wisdom comes hourly and continually, even the judgment by which mortal man is divested of all material error." p187.

It will be seen that the two conceptions of the nature of God are as diverse as those of his personality. One views him as a just and merciful administrator of a perfect law which operates to "bring to pass the immortality, and eternal life of man." Doctrine and Covenants 22:23; the other as a "Principle" of truth or love, to be discovered and explored, and applied by man. One holds him as exercising judgment over men as distinct beings, rewarding the righteous and punishing the wicked that they might be turned from their evil way; the other as "Principle" or "Truth" which administers itself. One as a Being having such a regard for his creatures, men, that he will speak to them and reveal himself, his will, and purposes relating to man; the other as a "Principle" so fully and easily accessible that there is no need of "revelation" for "Truth communicates itself." p 251.

In the consideration of other subjects in this series, especially that of Christ which will be taken up in the next number, further light will be thrown upon the foregoing, and final conclusions more easily reached.

The editor would be pleased to receive numerous short articles upon gospel themes. Do not wait until you can write a lengthy paper, but jot down your thoughts if they make only one paragraph providing it has at least one good point in it. From one paragraph to a page is a desirable length.

We have received a copy of a neat four page folder announcing the meeting of the Gallands Grove District conference at Mallard, Iowa. In addition it contains programs for the Sunday school and Religio conventions, a historical sketch of the Mallard Branch, and a list of names of missionaries who have labored there. Members and non-members are invited to attend the sessions.

CAMPAIGN FOR NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

It has been announced by the Headquarters Committee of the Anti-saloon League of America that the time is ripe for the inauguration of a campaign for the securing of national prohibition. It is said that more than half the counties of the republic, multitudes of incorporated villages and cities, and nine entire states, containing upwards of forty-six millions of people—fifty percent of the population—embracing above two thirds of the entire territorial area of the country have outlawed the saloon. The traffic has been driven from the army and navy, from emigrant stations, and from the national capital, but the greatest triumph of the temperance forces of the nation was the passage of the Webb-Kenyon bill. National prohibition will be sought through a constitutional amendment. The Latter Day Saints stand for all that will make the nation better. The "Citizen" edited by Judge Wallace of Kansas City says: "The Latter Day Saints are solidly for temperance. They carried Independence 'dry' in the great prohibition fight of 1910."

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Our stake president, Bro. G. E. Harrington was the speaker Sunday morning giving some practical counsel to the saints, and in the evening Bro. F. M. Sheehy spoke upon American archaeology, using a series of lantern slides. In the afternoon the place of the usual prayer meeting was taken by the Home Department of the Sunday school, in rendering a pre-arranged program of special music and addresses dealing with the home department work. An effort was made to gather in as many as possible of the scattered home department members. The service was in charge of Bro. D. J. Krahl.

On last Thursday evening a special business meeting was called to consider the matter of conducting a summer school. Bro. O. K. Fry, John Lentell, and St. Emma Criley explained the nature of the work and methods followed in carrying it out. The movement was favored and a board of directors was appointed consisting of G. E. Harrington, W. H. Garrett, O. K. Fry, D. J. Krahl, and Ellis Short, to prepare for the conduct of the work. A special provision was made that the means for conducting the school should be raised by subscription and the board to proceed when the necessary funds were assured to carry out the work. This is a worthy cause and should receive the hearty support of the saints, as it furnishes lines of education and training for the children not found elsewhere, and at a time when they would otherwise be neglected.

Fire destroyed the casket factory of Bro. G. A. Erickson situated near the Afton depot last week, the building and contents being valued at about $5,000 which was not covered by insurance.

Bro. Charles B. Eaton, musical director of the stake Religio, announces the following hymns in Zion's Praises for use at the convention to be held at Perle Springs, and requests local choristers to familiarize their locals with them. Nos. 120, 100, 110, 103, 28, 228, 8, 141.

CHILDREN'S CHORUS RECITAL.

The children's chorus of about 125 voices under the direction of Sr. Audentia Anderson will give its semi-annual recital at the church on next Tuesday evening, June 3d. An excellent program has been prepared consisting of choruses, solos, duets, readings etc. A collection will be taken for the purpose of purchasing music for the class.

Sr. Anderson has done faithful work in maintaining this class in singing and developing the children along the musical line in harmony with divine instruction, and her efforts should receive the hearty support of the Independence saints.

CENTRAL CHURCH, KANSAS CITY, MO.

This is our first report since general conference. Because of conference and convention news, and the stress of other matters devolving upon the writer, no report has been made.

The conference authorities have seen fit to return Bro. Tanner to Central for another year, which judgment from what the writer has been able to see and hear, meets with the approval of the members of the branch in general. If there are those dissatisfied, the least they ought to do is to render such support as lies within their power.

One very encouraging feature about the work here is, the time has never been in the history of Central when so many strangers and outsiders were in attendance at the preaching services. This at least affords an excellent opportunity to present the work to those not acquainted with it; and our pastor is just now discoursing on a line of subjects that will interest this class, as well as do good to those already identified with the church. Last Sunday morning the subject, "Origin of Modern Polygamy," was discoursed upon, and will be continued next Sunday morning. At the evening services, the subject, God's dealing with the human family in all ages of the world is being considered. Bro. Tanner's manner of presenting these questions is interesting and edifying, and we feel assured good will result. The attendance and interest is increasing.

At the last business meeting no change was made in the personnel of the branch officers; except that of the presiding priest, Bro. A. L. Lightfoot was selected for this place. A financial board was provided for to assist the deacon in caring for the financial end of the work, which was shown to be in poor condition. The matter of repairing and redecorating the church was referred to this board.

Quite a number of people have moved into our midst of late from other parts and are becoming identified with us in the good work.

The Sunday school is showing some improvement in the way of attendance, and a determined effort to improve the quality of the work done is being made. Children's day exercises are under way, and the day will be celebrated the fourth Sunday evening in June.

The Religio under the management of Bro. D. H. Blair and assistants is doing business at the same old stand. With few exceptions the programs are very interesting and beneficial. Attendance is about up to the average.

LAMONI, IOWA.

"Mothers' Day" was celebrated in the Lamoni Sunday school by having a program of song and two readings at the opening of the regular exercises on May 11th, the appointed day. It has come to be of national importance in remembrance of the mothers and their work. Attendance 552, and on May 18th, attendance 580, ninety-four being primary pupils.

Previous to the day for voting on the issuance of bonds to erect a new high school building there was some anxiety felt as to the result, but when the time came the vote showed nearly eight to one in favor of forty thousand dollars in bonds to build it. One hundred and twenty-one women voted, all but seven of whom favored the bonds to make better the condition for educating the children of Lamoni, looking not only to the present necessities but also to the future and its certain needs.

Just now Graceland College has special prominence because of the annual exercises and contests. In them is manifest the progress being made by the youth, and by them they win special benefits and honors through their natural ability and much study. In the senior contest of oratory this year the most proficient, according to the judges, were Austin Dobson and James Waste. After the orations there were addresses by Bro. E. L. Kelley, Albert Carmichael and S. A. Burgess upon the advantages of obtaining an education, and in behalf of Graceland College.

Also the pupils in vocal and instrumental music gave a recital one evening and on May 24th at the saints' church came the oratory recital of the under-graduate class. All these events demonstrated persistent study and application in order to succeed. There will be other exercises and contests on the evenings of May 26, 27, 29, 30, and June 1, 2, and 4; also a banquet to the alumni on May 31st.

On the evening of May 22nd occurred the graduating exercises of the Lamoni high school. There were seventeen graduates to receive diplomas, the largest number of any year in Lamoni's history.

Bro. and Sr. Heman C. Smith went to Omaha, May 8th, he to attend a meeting of the Mississippi Valley Historical Society. He also preached on Sunday, May 11th to the saints of Omaha. They returned home May 12th.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins returned May 23d from a two weeks' trip to Des Moines, Boone, and Knoxville, Iowa. He preached at Boone, May 11th and 12th, and twice at Des Moines, May 18th, and at Knoxville taught the gospel to some who had invited him.

More deaths of saints whose life labors on earth have closed. They were as follows:

Sr. Elizabeth McDaniel died near Davis City on May 16, 1913, at the age of 47 years, 10 months, and 2 days. She was never married but was the faithful helper of her mother in the care of home and her seven brothers, all being younger than herself. She united with the church in 1897, baptized by R. S. Salyards. Her funeral sermon was preached by Bro. R. M. Elvin, assisted by Bro. G. W. Blair.

Sr. Nancy McDiff died at Davis City, May 17th, at the age of 85 years. She united with the church in 1865, in Marshall County, West Virginia, baptized by Bro. J. W. Gillen. Her aged husband survives her. Funeral sermon by Bro. R. M. Elvin.

Yesterday was "Memorial Day" and Bro. R. M. Elvin preached the sermon; services in charge of Conrad John Smith. Decoration Day is also to be observed by exercises in Central Park on May 30th. There will be a procession led by the cornet band, followed by the old soldiers and the teachers and pupils of the Lamoni schools. Bro. J. W. Wight will give the address.

On Sunday, May 18th, the morning sermon was by Bro. E. A. Smith, and in the evening was the high school baccalaureate sermon by Bro. S. A. Burgess.

Yesterday evening the saints had the pleasure of again hearing Bro. E. L. Kelley. The speakers at the homes for the aged Bro. F. M. McDonald and G. R. Wells.

At outside points yesterday the following brethren filled the appointments, namely: O. E. Thomas at Evergreen chapel, Joseph Roberts at Andover chapel, H. A. Stebbins at Bloomington chapel, and Roy Young at the Smith school house. No preaching at Oland.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Sunday last was a gala day in the bay cities branches. Bro. F. G. Pitt and A. C. Barnore gave the two branches four excellent spiritual sermons which were highly relished by the many hearers. The attendance on both sides was good and the music very inspiring. The brethren alternated in the two branches.

In Oakland the Sunday services was the beginning of a series of meetings which thus far have surpassed any effort of the past in deep interest and attendance. Bro. Pitt preached an excellent sermon Monday night to a house well filled. Bro. Barnore following on Tuesday night to an attentive audience—which was followed on Wednesday night by an eloquent effort of Bro. C. E. Crumley who was enroute to his field. The series will close Sunday night.

The city branch will commence a series of meetings on Sunday night June 1st to continue as interest justifies.

Bro. and Sr. F. G. Pitt started east on the 21st, Chicago being their objective point. They will visit Sr. Burton at Colton, Cal., on their way. Their short stay with us was very much appreciated and did good. Bro. and Sr. Barnore remained with us to help us through our meetings with his able presentation of the word and she in the use of her musical talent in a vocal way. Bro. C. A. Parkin visited Irvington and San Jose on the 11th, preaching in each place. Bro. I. A. Phelps is holding monthly appointments at a school house with success also looking after the interest of the Ceres Branch under his fellow officer, Bro. Searcy.

Bro. C. W. Deuel opened a new field at Badger where he held a number of meetings. Badger is 48 miles from Tulare and he made the trip in a buggy kindly furnished by Bro. A. J. Damron who is ever ready to help the good work.

We were called Wednesday to attend the funeral of Sr. Mary M. Swams, formerly Tregrove, in Stockton, Cal., at the funeral parlors. There was a large attendance and a beautiful display of flowers. She was a firm and faithful saint and did much for the cause in her way.

One of the most important helps in the Oakland meetings is the excellent music rendered by Dr. Bush's choir, with solos and duets beautifully rendered. O how delightful the work when all work in harmony—nothing can stay it when the saints unite.

J. M. Terry.

1202 14th St., Oakland, Calif.

HOLDEN, MO.

Bro. H. J. Davison of Colton, California was with us the first of the month speaking for us on Sunday morning and evening also twice through the week. Bro. Davison and family lived here a year or so and we were all glad to have him with us again.

Closing day of school are here and we are glad indeed to know that the children of the saints are numbered among the graduates, one from the high school, and eight among the grammar school, sister Hattie Odell being valedictorian of the grammar school.

Bro. Layton president of the branch gave Sunday the 18th over to the priests of the branch, J. W. Roberts acting priest of the branch occupied the pulpit in the morning and F. M. McWitty the evening hour, both efforts were good and good counsel was given.

We lost three of our young workers this week, Sister Flossie Hiles and her two brothers Perry and Fred, who leave for Rock Island, Texas, where their parents moved some eight months ago, we feel sad to see them go so far from church privileges, trusting that the way may open up before them that they will soon have church privileges again. If any saints are near that place write to them they will receive a hearty welcome from Bro. Geo. Hiles and family.

The vocal class under the direction of Bro. H. E. Moler is doing fine work, some 33 pupils.

Mr. L. Wilson from West Virginia was baptized Sunday the 11th by Bro. B. Thompson. Some are trying to discourage him in the work. We can only hope and pray for one so young and coming out from those who are so opposed to the work of God, that the kind Father will give him strength to overcome. He seems to be earnest and much interested in the work. We are anxiously looking for others to come soon.

Bro. J. W. Paston left last week for his mission field, others will leave soon.

Sunday the 25th the little son of Bro. and Sr. Neff was baptized, also their little babies were blessed, R. O. Self and A. C. Christenson spoke morning and evening respectively.

Mrs. R. O. Self.

THE ROUND TABLE.

When and by whom was God's kingdom set up on earth, and why did it fail?

It is held that the church—presumably what is meant by "kingdom,"—was established in the days of Adam and renewed from time to time. In the New Testament times it was probably begun by John the Baptist and developed by Christ and his apostles. Matt. 11:12 shows that the kingdom existed from the days of John the Baptist. In every instance where the church has failed and become disorganized unfaithfulness and transgression upon the part of its members were the causes. The New Testament church was lost in this way, but the Lord restored it again in the last century.

Who was it that named the disciples "Christians" at Antioch, and why?

Acts 11:26 says that "the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." This was about ten years after Christ's ascension and if the Lord designed to give this name for his people it would undoubtedly have been given before. It is reasonably implied by this chapter that the name was one of derision given by the persecutors of the church.

Explain "diversities of gifts," "differences of administrations" and "diversities of operations," in 1 Cor. 12:4-6.

The gifts described in this chapter are those obtained by special endowment of the Holy Spirit, though they usually conform to the gifts with which one is endowed by nature. They are given as wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, prophecy, tongues, etc., and are the diversity of gifts." While the work of the Spirit is always in harmony with the law of God, its ministrations differ with men. For instance, a number of persons may have the gift of knowledge given them by the Spirit, but the Spirit does not lead everyone along the same line, but leads different individuals into different branches of knowledge. One who may be a minister doing pastoral work will be blessed with such knowledge as best fits him for that work, another doing missionary work will need knowledge in a slightly different line, another occupying the office of bishop will need the special help of the Spirit in understanding business affairs and law, a member teaching in a college will need his gift of knowledge in understanding science, the mother will need it in the training of her children, and so with many others. The "diversities of operations" bring this knowledge to men in different ways. To one it may come by imperceptible enlightenment while in study; to another by faith or intuition; to another by dream or vision; to another by immediate revelation; to another by the power of memory of what has been read and experienced. The Spirit operates according to their respective offices or duties, and the demands made upon them.

How do you explain the seeming contradiction in 1 Cor. 14:21-24?

The difference arises from looking at the gifts of tongues and prophecy from two viewpoints. One of the purposes of the gift of tongues is that the gospel might be preached more readily to strangers and foreigners who understood not the tongue of the speaker. To such as understood it would be for a sign knowing that the speaker did not of himself understand the language in which he spoke; but when non-members come into the assembly of the saints and hear a "tongue" in a language which they do not understand it is profless to them being to them as gibberish, though it is a confirmatory sign to them that believe. Prophecy is especially for the members though in verses 24 and 25 Paul shows that a prophecy which reveals "secrets of the heart" of an unbeliever who comes into the assembly of the saints is a convincing sign to him so that "he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth."

Explain Ezekiel 3:20. I thought the Lord never laid a stumbling block before anyone, and that a person's righteous deeds would never be forgotten, but that they would receive a reward for every good deed.

The verse reads: "Again, when a righteous man doeth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling block before him, he shall die; because though hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his own righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I required at thy hand." The verse plainly shows that the putting of the stumbling block in the man's way would be when he turns from his righteousness. The Lord puts no stumbling blocks in men's way when they seek to do the right, but when the righteous turn to do evil, the Lord shows his interest in them and care for them by restraining them even to putting obstacles in their way. When a man repudiates his former good works, and seeks to destroy their effects as some do, he cannot expect a reward for them.

Was the blessing Isaac bestowed upon Jacob temporal or spiritual? If temporal when did he come into possession of it?

The blessing pronounced upon Jacob must be understood as applying to his posterity as well as to himself. Gen. 27:28 clearly promises temporal blessing in "God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine," while the next verse indicates intellectual and spiritual blessing and superiority. "Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee, and be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee."

In Haran Jacob obtained great wealth through divine blessing which probably exceeded the wealth of Esau who inherited the possessions of his father. It is not possible to trace the descent of all of Jacob's posterity, and so determine the degree of temporal and spiritual prosperity, but it is well known that all that the world has had of the gospel, including the Scriptures also, has come through Jacob's posterity. Jacob himself was blessed with communion with God during his life.

CORRESPONDENCE

Hao, Tuamotuan Island, April 15.

Dear Ensign:—As we are here attending the Islands Conference, will tell a few of our pleasant and unpleasant experiences in reaching this Island. We spent two weeks in Papeete, where we were located at the Mission House, with Bros. and Mrs. May and Savage and their happy little families. Here Elder Pitt held many meetings, and Bro. Savage kindly interpreted, and they as well as the natives, rejoiced in this privilege. The Saints with Bro. May and Savage having chartered a sailing vessel named "Toerau" which was to take about a hundred saints from different islands to conference, we left Papeete, February 28th, about four p. m. for the long voyage. We had anticipated a two weeks trip, and felt brave in undertaking the new experience.

After reaching the first port, Makatea Island, where we had many new and wonderful experiences, especially going ashore in a small boat, with the sea very rough, and as the little boat was raised high with the huge waves, we were told to jump, and then were caught by men who pulled us up on to the landing, we finally reached a cool shady spot in a Niau House, one made of cocconut leaves and branches of the trees, and here we had a refreshing rest and a good dinner served by a Chinaman cook in the house of one of our members. We left this part of the island, which is famous for the phosphate fertilizer for the ground, millions of tons being shipped to all parts of the world, and walked fully four miles to the city part of Makatea, and that walk we shall not soon forget. The heat was intense, and not yet being acclimated, we both felt completely exhausted. We rested several times under the great tall cocconut trees, when fortunate enough to find a little breezy spot, and occasionally refreshed ourselves with a drink of the cocconut, which we had learned to like very well.

We reached the city part about six o'clock, and here we were escorted to the governor's house, he being a member of the church, and here we found a number of large comfortable American rockers on the veranda. Here also, most of the saints gathered to welcome us, and after the customary "Urana" had been spoken, and we had seated ourselves, we heard the familiar request "Hymna," meaning sing a hymn. We both felt so rejoiced in having a pleasant spot to rest and remain for the night, for the vessel was not to leave until the next day, that we sang many hymns for them. Having learned to ask them all to sing together, in their tongue, I requested them by saying "Hymna Oto," and they seemed delighted, that we could speak to them, and they sang; and such wonderful singing is beyond my descriptive powers, as it must be heard in reality to have any idea of it. We oftentimes remarked, as we journeyed on our way, after hearing the saints of the different islands sing, that they are natural musicians and orators.

That evening at Makatea, Elder Pitt was requested to preach, which he did, Brother Savage, as interpreter, and the saints felt to rejoice in meeting with us all. We were presented with two beautiful quilts, the handwork of the sisters, and many beautiful shells of all descriptions, some being very rare and pretty. We left next day for Rairoa, and had anticipated reaching there in a couple of days, but the wind was very unfavorable, and we were delayed in reaching each port. At each island, we were welcomed by all the saints, and as we entered the church immediately upon our arrival, they all arose and sang "God be with you, till we meet again." Then after prayer, they came up one by one and said "Urana" and presented us with shells, necklaces, rings, and many beautiful souvenirs, and also sum of money.

The natives are very fond of giving, and feel that they cannot do enough for the missionaries sent among them.

After calling at the Islands of Makatea, Rairoa, Kaukara, Ahe, Takara and others, reached our destination to this island of Hao. March 28th, having spent just twenty-eight days on the voyage, and to say we were delighted, is not expressing all we felt. Many times on the voyage, we felt we could scarcely arrive, so unpleasant were the experiences. There were about seventy natives on board, and they sat around in the front part of the ship. There was just one little cabin, with five berths, one occupied by the captain, two by Elder Pitt and, and two by passengers. There was a little store room, with one berth occupied by Sr. Savage and baby, and with all the boxes, packages etc., crowded in, it was almost impossible to get in sometimes. The little dining table was in the cabin, in front of our berths, and you can imagine how one felt sea-sick, and no escape from the fumes of the dinner being served, just at one's side.

Fortunately when we had fair wind the vessel scarcely rolled at all, but when there was not much, it tossed and rolled, until we were almost all ill. The writer felt fairly well part of the time, and at such times, was usually busy, as biscuits seemed to be very much in demand, and we Sr. Savage and I made them usually twice a day, and occasionally made sponge cake, chocolate pudding etc. The native cook, a man, cooked the vegetables and attended to the meals, in general. How happy we were when the cocconut trees of Hao appeared in the distance, and how fortunate we were in having just sufficient wind at the right time, to get through the pass. It had been so calm all morning, that the captain was fearful of not getting through that day, but just as we approached the Pass, the wind came to our rescue, and we passed through quickly, and sailed into the entrance of Hao.

Bro. May was there to welcome us, with the natives, he having gone there on a Motor schooner, two weeks later than we left Papeete, and arriving there a week earlier. They were all delighted to see us, as they had watched eagerly for days and days, for signs of the little sailing vessel. Upon our arrival on shore, Elder Pitt and we are escorted to our little built home, the house, which is called a Niau house, built of cocconut leaves and branches. We are very comfortable and happy here and with our work we are kept very busy. The writer scarcely finds time to attend but one meeting a day, as we like to keep caught up with our work as much as possible.

Brother and Sr. Lake and the saints from Niau were delayed in reaching conference, on time, on account of unfavorable wind for the voyage, and did not get here until Friday, two days before closing of conference. There are about 500 in attendance. There is a pleasant rivalry between the singers of the different islands, and while each group of singers from each island, deserve special mention, yet, Niau, where Bro. and Sr. Lake had been for four or five months, just before coming to conference, seemed to carry off the honors, at least the other island singers, so decided. Bro. and Sr. Lake had taught them many of our beautiful Zion's Praises selections, and they seemed to take well with the conference. We feel that all are doing excellent work in every line. It is marvelous how easily they memorize, and with what enthusiasm they enter into all the lessons and meetings of the conference. We have taken many photos of different groups, and scenes, and trust that some will be good ones.

The time is drawing near, when we shall have to bid them all good-bye, and we cannot help feeling sad, as we have grown to love these dear ones, and as we try to visit with them, the tears are in their eyes many times, as we say to them, "Eita Parau Tahiti"—meaning cannot speak Tahitian. We expect to leave in a day or two, by the Heitiare, a sailing and motor schooner, for Papeete where we hope to have a week in preparing for our long voyage to San Francisco, on the R. M. S., Tahiti, leaving there May 3rd.

The conference has encouraged many to move forward in their various duties the coming year, with renewed interest, and we hope to hear of much good having been accomplished, after the great efforts put forth by Brothers Lake, May and Savage. They have been untiring in their efforts to make the conference a success. They are excellent workers, and seem to enjoy their labors in the islands very much. Sr. Savage is a great help to Bro. Savage, and is kept very busy in various ways, especially in calling and caring for the sick ones. Sr. Lake is always busy, we are told, as she teaches and translates for the natives. Sr. May cannot do all she desires in that line as her little family keeps her time fully occupied.

We have learned a few minutes ago that the "Heitiare" our vessel we leave on, sails tomorrow, so we shall be busy packing tonight.

"Farewell, our little Island Home

We leave you now, elsewhere to roam.

We are feeling sad to go away.

But, perhaps, we may come back some day."

Your sister in the gospel,

Kosa Parks Pitt.

ALTON, Ill., May 9th.

Dear Editor:—A few lines from this place may interest some who have done work here for our Master.

We have rented a store room to hold our services in, and expect to have a series of meetings, beginning Sunday 11th, we are advertising, and feel encouraged with the fair write-up in our daily paper.

There are some interested. We hope much good will be done. Our city expects to entertain the G. A. R. convention, May 20th, to 22d. Many thousand people will be here. There ought to be some Latter Day Saints among them.

If there are saints expecting to come we would be pleased to have them look us up.

Our place of worship is No. 1,000 East Second street, and Central Avenue. Bro. J. L. Anderson lives back of our hall, and would be pleased to give information about the meetings.

If any of our ministers pass this way, we would be pleased to have them call on us. We have had our cloudy days and now we are about to enjoy the sunshine.

Your sister in the gospel,

Miss Mary McDonald.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

THE REWARD FOR SERVICE.

Sermon by Elder J. A. Tanner, delivered at the Stone Church, Independence, Mo., Sunday morning, March 9, 1913.
REPORTED BY BELLE ROBINSON JAMES.

I shall call your attention this morning to two texts—you will find one of them in the last two verses of the twelfth chapter of the book of Ecclesiastes: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter; fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."

The second text is found in the 16th chapter of St. Matthew, the 30th verse—I am reading these texts from the Inspired Version: "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."

The thought of a judgment day and the distribution of rewards to the children of the Lord is not a new subject to Latter Day Saints. We have heard it discussed upon numerous occasions, and from every point of view from which it is possible to be discussed, by the many individuals who represent the Lord Jesus Christ as his servants. Sometimes, however, our views differ with reference to our belief and understanding of the judgment. Many of us have been traditioned in other beliefs and faiths, and it has been hard for us to eliminate some things that we have learned. In former institutions we were taught along doctrinal lines to believe certain things, which when we came into the church of Jesus Christ, we found it necessary to unlearn, that we might clear the way to learn the new truth that dawns upon our minds.

The general idea that prevails in the world at large, so far as I have been able to glean, is that the judgment day is something that is terrible, and it is so featured to us, not only in the sermons that are preached, but in the conversations that take place between religious people when they are talking upon that topic; and it is even incorporated in their songs and hymns until they sing about it, and it is so expressed that it has a tendency to make one very fearful of that time; and the mind naturally reflects upon the great Judge before whom we must appear, wondering sometimes, just what kind of a character he is. Because it is said that there are but two conditions that confront us; and that the purpose of this judgment is to decide in which one of these conditions we shall occupy; whether we shall be placed in that happy home called heaven, or whether we shall be consigned to the lower regions known as hades; and we are impressed further, that if we go to heaven, we shall of course remain there throughout all time to come, in eternal happiness and joy; and likewise, if we are assigned to the other place, that we shall remain there throughout all eternity under whatever punishment the divine mind sees fit to inflict upon us; and this idea has prevailed to that extent in some parts of the world at least, until a great many honest men and women have turned skeptics; and if they have not turned skeptics so far as their belief in God is concerned, and in the divine revelations that came from him, they have turned skeptic to the work that the Christian world is trying to do; and they believe that the Christian world is deceived and that their work doesn't amount to very much, as far as the question of salvation is concerned.

The thought that encourages us as a class of people is that which is pictured in our text which we have selected, and that is, that when the judgment does take place, that it is for the purpose of God giving to every individual a reward; and that when the distribution of rewards is taking place, every person will receive according to the work that they have done. We try to present that feature as a matter of fairness; we tell them that that is a picture of God's justness, that he is dealing upon the basis of equity so that no man or woman need fear. If men have done good works in life, they are going to receive a reward for that work; and if, upon the other hand, their work has been of that character that the judgments of God must rest upon them and they receive punishment, they will be punished commensurate with the gravity of the work that they have done that has not been pleasing to our heavenly Father.

Now I presume that there are not very many people at least but who would deeply appreciate that position, and that which appeals to us as a matter of justness of a character tending to lead our minds toward God, and to want to serve him because we love him and want to keep all of his commandments, because of our belief that he is just and that he will deal righteously with us as his individuals.

I presume that we are all familiar this morning with a number of texts to which your attention might be cited in evidence that God deals with his people according to their works. The texts have been quoted and they have been stated in our hearing time and again, but we shall call your attention to just one or two probably, to preserve the thought that we have been presenting.

When the Master was talking to one class of people, as you will find recorded by St. Luke, he calls their attention to the fact that he who knows the law of Christ and knows to do good, and fails to do it, that he would be beaten with many stripes; while he who was ignorant of the law, did not understand it, and did things contrary to it, he shall be beaten with a few stripes. Now I think that all comprehend that that means a graded punishment and that if rewards are to be received according to our works, then of course will be graded also.

Now this thought is again emphasized by the Master when talking with his disciples, giving them instruction about going into various cities and preaching the gospel, and he tells them in some places the cities where they would be rejected, they should depart out of those cities and shake the dust from their garments as a testimony against them; and then he says it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than it will be for those who had heard the gospel and to whom the light came. The phraseology as we find it there in the statement that it will be more tolerable indicates again this thought of graded punishments and of graded rewards.

You are acquainted with the text given by the Apostle Paul, in 2 Cor. 5:10, and the one in the 20th chapter of the book of Revelations in which all of the dead shall be gathered around the judgment seat and there they shall receive a reward according to the deeds done in the body, so I shall not burden your minds any further with these. But I shall endeavor to draw your minds to the question at issue this morning, which is, if God is going to reward us according to our works, what do we expect to receive as a reward when we reach the other side? "Well," says one, "We are going to inherit the earth if we are the Lord's children." Another one suggests that there is going to be a great home over there, a mansion, and in that mansion there are a great many rooms; and that we shall be permitted to inhabit one of them. Others have suggested that there will be great mansions erected over there by the eternal Father, and they will be decorated with all kinds of precious metals; and there will be such a beautiful city there; that its streets will be paved with gold, and we are going to be permitted to inhabit that city and receive some of its mansions as a reward for our work here in doing good, in trying to live right and to keep the commandments of our heavenly Father.

Is it possible that as a class of people that the idea that God is going to reward us over on the other shore commensurate with the works we do, that the highest thought that we have in the receiving of a reward is upon the physical side of the question? That the very best that we can see is in the reception of land or some portion of the earth, or some beautiful home that we might occupy? If so, may the Lord have mercy upon us as his children. If that is the highest conception of the rewards that we are going to receive for the work that has been done here, then there is much for us to learn yet, or at least I think so.

Here is a proposition that I would like to lay down, and I do not know that I shall have time to discuss it as minutely as I would like to; in fact I know I shall not, but we shall touch upon some facts in connection with it. Not only will God reward men and women in the day of judgment according to the works that they have done, but they shall receive a reward commensurate with the ability that they have developed, and the qualifications that they have acquired to retain the reward after God has given it to them. Now do you catch that thought? May be I had better repeat it. Not only will God give us rewards according to the works we have done here, but he will reward us commensurate with the ability that we have developed as his children and the qualifications we have acquired to retain the reward, of whatever character it is that he gives to us. I know that that is laying down a rather broad platform, and I am aware of the fact that it would take sometime to discuss such a proposition as that logically to make a proper defense of it and to prove it clearly all the way along.

Possibly, to convince some minds, at least, it would be well for us to investigate a few texts this morning that will support us in this thought. I ask your attention to a conversation that took place upon one occasion between the Master and a rich young man. This young man came to him and called him God Master, and he says, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Jesus asks him why he calls him good, and he says, "There is none good but God;" and then he tells him to keep all the commandments, and enumerates some of the decalogue to him; such as, "Thou shalt not bear false witness; thou shalt not steal; honor thy father and thy mother," etc.; and he responded like this: "All these things have I kept from my youth up; what lack I yet?" "If thou wouldst be perfect, go, sell all thou hast, and give to the poor, and come, follow me."

Now I am not interested very much this morning in this conversation, so far as the rich young man was concerned, but the apostles and the servants of Jesus Christ were present and heard this conversation and they seemed to be touched with it. One of these individuals, evidently speaking the sentiments of his brethren says, "Master we have forsaken all and followed thee. What shall we have therefore?" Now, don't you see, this idea of getting something dawning upon their minds? They heard that the young man asked with reference to eternal life; they heard the responses of the Master to him and the instruction that he gave. "But we have left all," just like you asked the young man man to do—what are we going to get for it? Now, note the thought—"You, who have followed the Son of Man through his regeneration, shall, when he comes in glory [and our text says that the Lord is going to come in glory and bring his angels with him, and then he is going to distribute his rewards to every man according to their works] you shall, when he comes in his glory, sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

Now there is nothing said in the Lord's answer about any golden mansion, about any golden paved streets, about the inheritance of property or land or anything of that character—there isn't any reference made to the physical side of the question at all, but it simply leads the mind up to that that is intellectual in its character, and it presents the thought at once, as I suggested awhile ago in the proposition that I laid down, that men will be rewarded commensurate with the ability they have developed and the qualifications they have acquired to retain the reward and to do the work that God gives to them over there.

And so we find this thought expressed by the Master himself that when these men should be rewarded for the work or sacrifice that they have done here in laying all at the Master's feet to go out and preach the gospel to all the world; that they should receive as a reward over on the other shore for the work and service that they have done here, more service! That is the reward they are going to get. Now what does that mean to us? Do you not think that those men would have to be qualified for work of that kind, if Jesus gave it to them? Would they not need to develop ability so that they could rule well in such a responsible position when it is conferred upon them? Why, certainly, and if it were found that they were inefficient for work of this kind and that reward of service there isn't any question in my mind, that the Master who apportions his work wisely, would take it from them and give it to those who were prepared to receive it.

I pass along from this passage of Scripture; and call your attention to a parable that is found in the 25th chapter of Matthew. After Jesus had related the parable about the ten virgins, five of whom were wise and five foolish, he again presents this one. He likens the Son of man to a man who was a householder and who calls his servants unto himself, and tells them that he is going to take a very long journey and it will be sometime before he returns; and he gives unto his servants talents and the record here says, "according to their several ability." Unto one he gave five, unto another he gave two, and to another one, and he says, "Occupy till I come."

Now the thought is, they were to occupy according to their several abilities, because the talents were given, based upon their ability to receive such talents from his hand. The Master goes upon the journey; later, when he returns he comes to his servants; and the man who received the five talents, with joy beaming upon his countenance, with his soul happy, thrilled in the thought of the accomplishment of his work, he runs out to the Master and says: "See, Master, I have ten talents. You gave me five. I have doubled upon them, and now I have ten." Jesus commended the man for his work and he says: "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou has been faithful over a few things—I will make thee ruler over many. Here is the thought again; that the reward for service is more service in the economy of Jesus Christ and in the distribution of rewards given to the Lord's children over on the other side.

The other man with two talents was just as joyful as the first. His soul beamed with just as much gratitude and delight and he was just as happy, and he says, Master, see, I have got four talents; you gave me two, I have doubled upon them. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, inasmuch as you have proved yourself successful and faithful and righteous in that which has been committed to your trust, I make you ruler over many things as well as the other individual." More service! A reward of service for the work that they had done.

The man that received one talent was somewhat reluctant about going out to meet his Master. He didn't care much about doing it, and he moves out slowly, his countenance has fallen; it seems as though he cannot look the Master straight in the face and the Masterspake to him about it. "Well," he says, "I knew that you were an austere man, and that you would reap where you had not sowed, etc. I was fearful about it, and I took the talent that you gave to me and I wrapped it in a napkin, and dug in the earth and hid it." He failed to develop upon his talent. The man was fearful when the talent was given to him. He expresses his fear here now when he meets the Master, when there comes the time of accounting for the work that was expected at his hands. He recognized that he had failed to do anything; and I presume that that would be the case with many of us in the Lord's kingdom when we shall stand before the great tribunal of Jesus Christ to receive a reward according to the deeds and the works that have been done by us as individuals.

I apprehend that we may have some feelings of reluctance about approaching the Master and exhibiting our work and the talent that he has given to us, and that which we may have accumulated; and why? Because we permit our human weaknesses—we permit the tendencies that we have here in this life to retard our progress, to enter in and create within us a feeling that we are incompetent to do that which the Lord asks of us? And rather than to assert ourselves and move forward in doing that work, we will sit upon the stool of do-nothing and accomplish nothing, and consequently there has been no increase of talent, nor is there anything commendable for us when we stand before the great Judge; and that was the way with this individual.

Now the Master, while speaking rebukingly to him, yet he spoke in kindness, and after referring to the work that he should have done, he then said to his servants: "Take the talent from this man and give it to the man who has ten talents." What? Take all that the poor fellow has, that which you gave to him, and now give it to the man that has got so many talents? Why certainly, why not do so, if we are to receive according to the works that we do. Then why give the first individual so much over there and this other man so little? Why take all that he has from him? Can you not see the thought that we expressed awhile ago in the proposition that we laid down? This individual failed to develop ability. This person did not acquire qualifications, and were the Lord to make him ruler, were the Lord to give him work and service over there, he would be incompetent to do it. He could not appreciate nor properly use the reward that would be given to him, and consequently it must be taken from him and given to somebody that has improved upon his talents, that has been occupied in faithful service, and has developed the ability to do the work required over there.

We can see clearly from the few texts noticed that it means something for us in the kingdom of Jesus Christ, more than to just simply get our names upon the church record. It means something more than just to come to church and be a good Latter Day Saint in the sense of bearing our testimony, offering up prayers to our heavenly Father, and giving alms once in awhile to the poor. But it will require a gradual development along the lines of intellectuality upon our part, that we shall be fitted, when the time comes to know as we are known and see as we are seen, and if we are not fitted for it, why, we will have to take a back seat—that is all there is to it. It is our own fault, the fault will not remain with anyone else.

In the 8th chapter of the Hebrew letter the thought is presented that Moses should build all things when erecting the tabernacle and its worship, according to the pattern of things in heaven. Now my idea of that is this; that the Lord's kingdom when revealed to the children of men and restored to earth in these latter day—or in any other dispensation, is after the divine thing itself that is in heaven. That thought is conveyed in the prayer that the disciples of Christ were instructed to pray: "Our Father who art in Heaven; Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." We refer to the kingdom or the church of Jesus Christ here, as being in it militant state, in a state of warfare, trying to fight the battles of life and overcome; to fit ourselves that when the great kingdom-itself comes down out of heaven in all of its triumphal glory, and there shall be the amalgamation of the militant and the glorified kingdom of Jesus Christ, that we shall be fitted to dwell in that kingdom and that we can enter into the rewards of service in laboring for the Master in things given to us because in his kingdom here we have developed the ability.

Now if I should pass all along through life without trying to inform myself with reference to the workings of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, without getting acquainted with its organization and its construction and the purpose of the divine mind in that kingdom and its intent in the world among the children of men; if I am practically ignorant of the custom and the usages of the church and its polity and policy and everything connected with it, how do you think I would feel over on the other shore if I were placed in the triumphant kingdom of Jesus Christ, and there the Master would place some responsibility upon me, and tell me that this was given as a reward because I had been good down here in praying and testifying, but of course I had not tried to develop here intellectually in getting acquainted with the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

It appears to me something like this: I would feel a good deal like the man who had gotten down to the gutter and had about lost all personal respect for himself. No one else cared very much about him, but yet an individual who is kind in his soul and large hearted sees him there and he fixes him up and ushers him into one of the homes of one of you Latter Day Saints. And in his degraded state, as he takes a seat in that home, he hears you talking about the good things of God; he listens to the beautiful hymns and the sentiment that is expressed in them as you sing them. You ask him to bow with you in prayer, and he listens attentively to the words that you breathe to your heavenly Father and after awhile, you look around and you find your visitor is not there. You ask where is he, and you hear that he has just passed out of the door. Why has he disrespected you in this way? Why didn't the man have courtesy enough about him to excuse himself if it was necessary for him to pass out of the room? Why, that man found out that what was heaven to you was a veritable hell to him; he was out of place; he could not appreciate such a condition as that. If you would give him that for a reward, and ask him to preside over that home in his degraded state, what could he do? Could he retain it very long? Now he had not developed any Christian ability whatever, no spiritual qualifications had been received, and it would have been foolishness for you to commit such a trust to him. And so it will be with us on the other shore, if we are not fitted for service, for the Lord to give us a reward of service when it is given to us.

I call your attention to another text that is found in the Book of Revelations chapter 2:26-27 and I select this from the Inspired Version because the reading is much better than the King James. This purports to be the Master talking to John upon the Isle of Patmos. "And to him that overcometh, and keepeth my commandments unto the end, will I give power over many kingdoms; and he shall rule over them with the word of God; and they shall be in his hands as the vessels of clay in the hands of a potter; and he shall govern them by faith, with equity and justice, even as I received of my Father." Now that is beautiful thought. I love to read that passage of Scripture. My mind has dwelt upon it time and again. To him that overcometh. That person is going to have the privilege of sitting down in the kingdom of God,

He is going to have a trust committed to him. That trust would be to rule over nations and he should rule over them with the word of God. In the exercise of his rule and his judgment, it should be upon the basis of equity, with righteousness and justice. That will be a glorious time when we get such a rule as that, and people who may have to come under that rule, to receive instruction and guidance at the hands of the Lord's children who have such a trust committed to them, evidently will feel thankful to God for his kindness and mercy in extending such a help to them as his creatures here.

But here is the thought; if we are going to be judged according to our works, as the wise man said, and as the Master himself stated, what kind of works have we done here? What have we developed as individuals? Some one says this has reference to our moral condition, and the individual that has been good morally, has eliminated the immoral features out of his life, that that individual will receive commendation from his heavenly Father. That is true—we do not object to that, but are we going to stop there? Is that the only work that God has reference to in these revelations that come to us, or are the works that we are trying to do in the kingdom of Jesus Christ as the opportunities are afforded to us here, and the responsibilities placed upon us, to be taken into consideration and judged just as well?

So far as I am personally concerned, I believe that I will have to answer to the great Giver of all good for my works as a minister in trying to execute under the law of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, that which is expected at my hand, under the divine honor that the church has committed or reposed in me. And I believe that that applies to every other minister in the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

Then our ministerial works, our spiritual works, all that we are doing in the kingdom of Jesus Christ are to be taken into consideration and judgment passed upon them by the divine mind. Well, now. "He that overcometh." What! His immoral tendencies? and wrongs? Yes, that is the very first thing that is necessary and essential; but he that overcometh his inefficiency, his weaknesses as an individual in the service of Jesus Christ and makes himself strong and develops ability and acquires qualification, shall receive a reward of service—more service for work already done, "I will make him a ruler over kingdoms," and he will rule with the word of God in which he has been educated. He will do it in justice. He will do it upon the basis of equity; he will do it in righteousness because he is schooled in righteousness. He is trained and fitted for the service and he can do the work. That means something, doesn't it? It means something to overcome. It is a struggle; it is a battle; it is a fight, and sometimes it is the very strongest fight too.

Suppose that we refer to an instance or two upon the pages of history! My mind reverts back to the one that I took the text from—Solomon. We read of that man, his great work, and of the wisdom that he was blessed with. We read of that man as he goes to God in prayer, and when the Lord asks him what he desires, and he desired wisdom that he might rule wisely and with righteousness over the kingdom of Israel—and it was a wonderful blessing to have conferred upon him. We appreciate what the man has done—we admire his works, and he goes along and develops that kingdom of people into a very wealthy nation. And there seems to be a universal reign of peace so far as his kingdom is concerned, and they meet with the approval of all the other kingdoms that they are surrounded with. But later along the man takes steps—and I don't know why—I am not going to argue that this morning—in which he goes out into the other nations, disregarding the former commandments that God had given to him, and he selects to himself wives of the daughters of these various kingdoms and noted dignitaries of the surrounding nations.

Later along we find their influence led this man to a worship of idols. He goes into a condition of idolatry, leaving the God that he once had learned about, forgetting him who had bestowed his favors upon him, and when he had gotten into that condition,—laying the moral phases of it now and his immoral practices to one side,—what is the result? He loses his ability. He loses his qualification; he ceases to develop along the line, and consequently is not fitted for service, and can no longer control and handle the people that he was presiding over as a King. And why? Because he failed to overcome self. He could not control self, and that is absolutely true with every other individual—it doesn't make any difference what his occupation in the kingdom of Christ may be, whether he is a deacon, an apostle, a high priest, elder or lay member in the church.

The individual who cannot overcome self in every respect and develop this ability, cannot possibly expect or hope to have a full appreciation of the work and get the reward upon the other side. But if he does make the development, he will appreciate the reward and rejoice in it. So let us get away from the physical side of the rewards that are to come. Let us not look upon that day as the great fearful day in which God is going to mete out his wrath to the children of men, but that it will be a day of blessing. And instead of keeping in our minds only the material possession, or some great eternal home, let us think of the reward of service to serve Christ, to continue under his tutorage, and to remain in his blessed kingdom, laboring with him in the carrying forth of his work.

Such a reward as that is the reward that we ought to work for, and ought to try to develop ourselves so that we can be prepared for it, when God gives it to us.

FAIRFIELD, Nebr., May 9.

Dear Ensign—A desire has come to me today to write a few lines to your dear pages. Only the isolated ones know how I appreciate your weekly visit. It seems as if every page and column is freighted with just what I need to help, instruct and encourage me to a higher life.

My opportunities for hearing gospel sermons are very limited, and sometimes heart and soul hunger and thirst for the message which comes only through the properly ordained ministers of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. So the "silent preacher" is very welcome.

My great desire is to be able to help others to see the glories of the restored gospel as I have seen them. Every day I live I thank the Lord for this great blessing he has accorded me.

Predjudice runs very high here. The most of the people insist on confusing us with the Utah people. While we are able to make some understand that we are separate from them, there are some who think they know more about it than we, and insist that we are the same, in spite of all we can say to the contrary.

I am trying in my weak way to do all I can for the Master's cause, with God lies the issue. I am striving to raise my children so they will have a full and complete fellowship with God. But I am alone and it is discouraging sometimes. But I know by experience that if we do the will of God he will be very close to us and he will help us over difficulties and discouragements if we will but put our hand in his and follow where he leads.

Oh for the time when Zion will be inhabited by the pure in heart.

Truly we are living in perilous times, times of earthquake, famine, pestilence, tornado, floods, wars and rumors of wars. May the Lord hasten the time of his coming. Pray for me that I may always be found at my post doing what the Lord has for me to do.

THE PRAYER UNION.

Our column this week contains a matter which is of great importance to us, as it concerns the re-establishment of the one time prosperous Sister's Prayer Union. Through the humble, consecrated efforts of its members, whether isolated or otherwise, great blessings were received during its existence. We have noted during the past year or more, through the Herald column that there are those who remember, and greatly desire to renew this department in the home. We hope the Spirit of Him who has so apparently directed the revival of the Prayer Union will find many among us in receptive state of mind and heart.—Editor.

A DREAM.

It seemed that I went to a Latter Day Saint church, and as I entered I saw a very young woman seated near the door; she seemed to be a little more than a half grown girl. She held in her arms an infant which she handled awkwardly like one inexperienced. There appeared to be something wrong with the child, it seemed to be suffering. I felt such a pity for it that I lifted it from her arms, then I found what was wrong with it. The child had no backbone. I exclaimed, "Why, its back is broken!" I got a pillow and placed it on the seat by the woman, laying the baby on it. I told the woman that she was hurting it in handling it, to let it lie on the pillow.

Again I dreamed I went to church at the same place. I took a seat at one side about two-thirds of the distance from the door. Soon after I saw three men enter; one was carrying an infant wrapped in a woman's skirt. All three walked straight to me. The one carrying the child placed it on my lap, and with a wave of his hand towards it said, "You take care of it." He appeared like Brother Hilliard.

I looked at the child and said, "It's that same baby I saw before." They all three nodded their heads, and the speaker repeated, "You take care of it."

It was not spoken like a request; he did not ask if I was willing, nor did it seem like a command, rather a demand. It did not occur to me whether I wanted to care for it or not.

I took off the woman's skirt, which was of peculiar make and color but clean. The child was dressed just as I had seen it in the first dream, in a dark calico slip much soiled. I went and got some new material of white goods and made some clothes. I washed the baby and dressed it in new clothes. It began to grow strong in my hands. Its backbone grew so that it could raise itself up and sit up. As I sat holding it the man returned. He looked at it in a satisfied way, saying, "It's much improved." Then I awoke and found it morning, Eleanor.

INTERPRETATION.

Later, as I thought over the details of the dream, the following was received, which appears to me to be the interpretation:

The child as I first saw it represented the Prayer Union in its present disorganized state, shown by the absence of backbone, and in the hands of those who do not understand it or its aims.

In the second dream by some authority I was required to reorganize it, which I did, shown by the new backbone. The new white clothes were the reestablishment of its original purpose, which was prayer and the study of the three books in connection with the subjects for which prayer is offered. Eleanor.

TO THE PRAYER UNION.

Dear Sisters: After presenting the matter to the consideration of the First Presidency of the church, have decided to reorganize the Prayer Union on the lines approved by them in their letters to me. Hoping thus to avoid entirely the errors into which the union formerly fell.

First. It is that those taking part will do so in their own individual homes, either alone, or with their children as in family prayer.

Second. That there should be no assembling together for this purpose. The object being to study the Scripture lessons, and to offer concerted prayers for the subjects provided. This is the way that was first intended, but at the request of many the sisters began meeting together, where they assembled to exercise the gifts, bearing testimony, etc. These things are objectionable outside of the regular prayer meetings presided over by the proper church authorities. So to avoid these errors we are to return to first principles, namely: to observe the hour alone at home.

Our Union is not a society in the accepted term, therefore, there is no need of officers. The sole object, other than those set forth in the prayer subjects, is an increased growth in faith and spirituality. To lay aside all cares of the mind, all temporal pursuits, to devote ourselves to spiritual concerns. The question of Christ to his worldly followers, "Could ye not watch with me one hour?" should be our motto. To give the time thus employed to him alone. The Scripture lessons selected are intended as a guide to the study of the subjects and prayer. All three of the standard church books will be used.

There are many prophecies in all of them, that are beginning to be fulfilled, and with study and prayer we shall be more alert in watching their fulfillment. They must all be fulfilled before the coming of the Lord. So, as we see them come, they will be like the spring that fortells the coming summer and we will not be caught asleep or without oil in our vessels.

The auxiliary departments of the church furnish scope enough for raising all the financial aid needed that is not provided for in the temporal law of tithes and offerings. Therefore, we do not think it desirable to associate the Prayer Union with any aid society work.

As will be seen, we have changed the subjects somewhat from the old program to meet more nearly what seems to be present requirements.

The time set apart is from two to three p. m. But where there is unavoidable hindrance for this hour, any other hour of the afternoon or evening will be right. We can see no objection to the father of a family taking part if he is a member of the church and is present at the time.

This new plan may be a disappointment to some who prefer to meet together, but it will also be a relief to the mothers of young children, and I am quite convinced that it will accomplish more real good as here outlined and approved by the authorities.

With love,

Your sister,

Eleanor Waldorf Kearney.

SUBJECTS OF PRAYER FOR THE PRAYER UNION.

First Thursday in June. The church, its priesthood and lay members, that all may earnestly engage in the building up of Zion to the ideal condition of oneness and equality revealed in the revelations to the church. Pray that each member of the church may be clothed with that charity which will lead them to speak evil of no one, but regard the reputation of our brother or sister as we regard our own. That greater power may be had in the healing of the sick.

See John 17:11, 21, 22. Zechariah 8:16, 17.

ATTENTION, GOOD LITERATURE COMMITTEES.

With a desire to co-operate with the Good Literature Committees, who are doing such a good work in distributing church literature, we have decided to allow them, for the balance of the year, to send subscriptions for the Ensign to non-members at 50 cents a year. This gives eight months, from the first of May till the last of December, time enough to accomplish a great work. Others can co-operate with the committees in making the work thorough, that the greatest good may be accomplished. The only restrictions are that the paper be sent to non-member families, and not transfers from a member to a non-member in the same family, nor must it be for parties outside the United States' possessions, where the postage alone is 52 cents a year on each paper. Address Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Mo.

PASTORALS. VALEDICTORY WORD.

To the Order of Evangelists and all whom it may concern:—Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Nearly four years ago I was intrusted with the grave and important responsibilities belonging to the president of the Order of Evangelists. I understood from the beginning, of course, that my occupancy in that position was only temporary, indeed I fully expected that it would have terminated long before it did. But, as usual, God has been watching over his work, and now, in the light of unfolding events, and the testimony of the Spirit of truth, I am fully convinced that Bro. Frederick A. Smith, was called and ordained as the successor to his father (and per consequence I was released), at precisely the right time for the good of the work in general and the order in particular, also the personal good of both Bro. Smith and myself—not in a selfish sense, but in the best interests of the cause of God.

I have tried to do the best I could, under existing conditions, for the order in particular and the Lord's work in general. I am comparatively happy in the belief that the order has made a degree of progress, which is as it should be, for progress, all along the line, is the urgent demand of the hour, and without it the condition is an anachronism. I am your ex-president now, but it will be my good pleasure to do all I can in my office and calling as a patriarch in the church of God. I shall too, God being my helper, do all within my power to assist and help our v president to perform the important duties which belong to his important office and calling. Dear brethren of the order, it is our reasonable duty to do this, and a sincere and intelligent discharge of personal and ministerial duty will be the most effectual way of sustaining our president, which will, of course, include our faith and prayers for his success.

If we do this, we have a right to expect that he will do all he can do for us, as members of the order, to whom, in part, has been committed the weighty and important interests of the restored gospel.

I herewith express my profound gratitude to God that, through his grace, I have been permitted to care for the interests of this important department of the church work, during the interim between the departure of Bro. Alexander H. Smith and the call and ordination of his successor.

I also keenly appreciate the kindly support afforded me by the members of the order and the leading authorities of the church.

I am, as ever, your brother and co-worker for Christ.
J. R. Lambert.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 22, 1913.

PRESIDING PATRIARCH.

To the Evangelical Order and the saints of God, Greeting:—

In response to the call of God and the action of the general conference I assume the responsibilities and duties of "Presiding Patriarch and Evangelical Minister of the whole church," sensing keenly my own weakness and the grave responsibility that attaches to the office, I shall seek for aid divine to in some measure supplement my weakness and give the needed wisdom and strength essential to properly conduct the office.

I feel that it is justly due the retiring president of the order, Joseph R. Lambert, who has been acting since the death of Alexander H. Smith, to say that I appreciate the hearty support and good will he has shown me since accepting this office. It is needless for me to say he has done all his health would permit in the interests of the order; and while he is relieved of the burden and care as president of the order, he will still do all his health will permit as an active member of the Evangelical Order.

I shall be glad to avail myself of his wise counsel and experience so far as possible.

In my travels during the last few years it has been forced home to me that many of the branches were in sore need of some help to revive them and build them up spiritually. For the missionary force to do this was to neglect, to some extent at least, the work in the missionary field, and subject the missionaries to severe criticism. Furthermore in many instances their efforts were seriously minimized by those who opposed them, because it was believed that such work was not the duty of missionaries, and that they had no business in the branches. The question would arise, where is the help to come from, if not from these men who were in condition to spend the time and study necessary to bring about the results desired? The only answer I saw then, and see now, is, that God had provided for the necessity by giving to the church the Evangelical Order of Ministers, who should be free from the care of the local work as presiding officers, free from the entanglements that to a greater or less extent will come to those who are under the necessity of settling the differences that arise from time to time; and who can devote time and study to the work commensurate with its needs.

While this has not been fully understood as it should be, I am hopeful that a better understanding may obtain, and that the order may receive the recognition and hearty support by the various officers in charge of mission, stake, district and branch; that should be accorded those called of God for the advancement of his work. Then will the members of this order be able to do the work that justly belongs to them, and then will the value and blessing of God's provision for the needs of his children in providing this order be manifest to the church.

Believing as I do that the work of building up this church of God, should be co-operative, and that no department is independent of the other, and since the Lord has made provision in the law that the evangelical ministers are not subject to the direction of the ministers in charge, the burden of care and direction of this line of work will fall on the First Presidency and the President of the Order.

Feeling that some system is necessary in order to facilitate the work and do the greatest amount with a minimum cost; I appeal to the ministers in charge of the various fields and the missionaries in the field to co-operate with us in this work so far as they can. There should be no conflict or jealousy between these two arms of the great army of the Lord, as one should follow and sustain the work of the other. The one going before gathering in from the fields of sin, the other following up instructing and strengthening those reclaimed. I do not intend to convey by this that others cannot hold revival meetings, for I am of the opinion that others of the priesthood both local and missionary can hold such meetings if necessary. Nor would I have any disregard the general oversight of the ministers in charge of the various fields.

In order that the work of this order may be systematized and prosecuted to advantage and without unnecessary loss of time or money, I desire the hearty co-operation of the local officers, and since the order has no jurisdiction over local organizations, and to more effectually carry out the work of co-operation I recommend that all stake, district and branch presidents who feel the need of, or desire the assistance of an evangelist in their stake, district, or branch, (where such is not already provided for by appointment), or for some special occasion, correspond with the First Presidency, who will at once take the matter up with me as president of the order, and we will seek to make such provision as will meet the necessity or desire, and in this way we can work together as the law directs, in building up the spirituality of the church and obey the mandate of God: "Come up higher."

I am conscious of the limited number in the order who can do the work outlined as belonging to a revivalist, but as an order we are anxious to utilize what we have to the best possible advantage. It is true that some of the order have been assigned to special fields and will labor therein unless an urgent demand is made; but in special cases, or where exigencies may arise not provided for by such appointment, the First Presidency and Presiding Patriarch will endeavor to meet the demand by special appointment, or change.

If reunion committees will write me or the presidency when desiring the assistance of a member of this order at their respective reunions, stating their preferences, if they have any, we will try to arrange the work so as to get the one they desire. But they should give time for correspondence in case we could not get the one wanted, so we can get one who will be satisfactory.

In order to help this work along I earnestly request the members of the order to keep me informed as to where I can find them and what appointments they have ahead of them from time to time. In this way we may be able to save some traveling expense as well as time.

I stated in accepting this office that I would urge the revivalist part of the work belonging to the office, and the more I study the work of the order the more convinced I become that we should make this the primary work of the order. By this I do not say that I would discourage the giving of patriarchal blessings, for I realize that it is a very comforting part of the work of the evangelical order. But this is more particularly to the individual and while it is accompanied by much of the Spirit of God, and may carry that which is prophetic, which would all be strong factors in building up the spirituality of the individual, nevertheless I believe there should be some preparation upon the part of the candidate for such a blessing in order to obtain the good desired, as well as the officiating patriarch, and I believe that one of the ways in which this preparation can be made is through an effort along the revival line, where they can be instructed as to the purpose and benefit to be sought through this ordinance.

When this work is done, and the revivalist by holding meetings, preaching, instructing, visiting, encouraging, exhorting, etc., supplements the work of the stake, district and branch presidents, the visiting priests and each doing their own particular part in the work of building up the church, working together, then will the value of the Order of Evangelists be made more manifest and the church be strengthened and built up spiritually, and God be honored. We ask an interest in your prayers and your hearty co-operation that we may all be co-workers with God.

Frederick A. Smith,
Pres. of the Order of Evangelists.

THE WHOLE COUNSEL OF GOD.

From a letter of a friend in Oklahoma we extract the following query:

Why do the churches preach only a part of Christ's doctrine? Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Does this mean that nothing more is required? It seems that some believe that water baptism is sufficient, and that they can do almost anything if they have been baptized and belong to a church. Is not water baptism preached more today than the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and is not the latter as necessary as the former?

Paul says the gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and again he refers to it as "the law of the Spirit of life" and names its principles showing that it is not composed of a single principle, but is a system of life and conduct associated with the redeeming work of Christ which must be observed entirely if salvation is to be gained. No part of the gospel can be held to be a non-essential, but every part equally necessary in its place. Human creeds and systems too often magnify one principle and minimize another, and perhaps ignore others altogether, but the true servant of Jesus Christ, like Paul, will not fail "to declare the whole counsel of God."

The failure of any church to advocate the whole doctrine of Christ is evidence that that church has not been commissioned of him, and is acting without his authority. The magnifying of one doctrine and minimizing another is also contrary to the methods which Jesus followed and tends to misrepresent him. So that with the teaching of Christ that "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," it will not do for any person or church to say that baptism of water only is sufficient, while others say that the baptism of the Spirit is all that is required. Both are urged by the Lord and his apostles, yet there are multitudes who, claiming to represent him, deny either one or both.

A reception of these two ordinances includes an observance of other commands of the gospel, for Jesus clearly shows that the reception of the Holy Spirit is only on conditions of keeping the commandments, as may be seen from John 14:15-17:

"If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him."

Repentance from sin, or "ceasing to do evil," is a pre-requisite of water baptism, but the progressive work of "keeping the commandments," or "learning to do well," is the pre-requisite of the baptism of the Spirit; and persons who claim to have received the latter without the former, and without the pre-requisites having been complied with, are claiming that which is inconsistent with the Scriptures, and are either deceiving themselves or are being deceived.

Merely having been baptized and holding membership in a church, even though it be the true church of Christ, offers no guarantee of salvation unless "the law of the Spirit of life" is observed afterward. It is he that walks in the light and is "faithful unto death" that receives the crown of life. On the other hand he who has been called into the kingdom of God and keeps not the commandments will come under greater condemnation than he who never knew the truth, Jesus says, for he that knew his Lord's will and did it not shall be beaten with many stripes, while he that knew not his Lord's will and did it not shall be beaten with few stripes.

Salvation comes by the development of the divine character, and the divine character is attained only by the daily operation of the Holy Spirit within the individual, and that Spirit can come to abide in the individual only after he has separated himself from the world and its sin through repentance and baptism. Faith in God leads one to seek God and to learn his will that the service offered will be in harmony with his law. Besides these the laying on of hands, the sacrament of the Lord's supper, with all the principles of charity and love are parts of the gospel, all of which have their place and cannot be omitted or ignored if salvation would be gained.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 3.

JESUS CHRIST.

Through Jesus Christ is God revealed to the world. He is God manifested in the flesh, and hence to arrive at a true conception of God one must have a proper understanding of Christ.

THE SON OF GOD. The Christ which the Book of Mormon presents to the world says of himself: "Behold I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God . . . I was with the Father from the beginning. I am in the Father, and the Father in me." 3 Nephi 4:44; and the author of the revelations received by the church declares: "I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God. I am the life and light of the world. I am the same who came unto my own, and my own received me not." Doc. and Cov. 10:12.

As the Son of God these books teach that he was born of the virgin Mary, that he existed as a personal entity prior to his coming to this world, to dwell in the flesh, and that it was through him that the Father created the heavens and the earth, and formulated the plan of redemption for man. "I am he who was prepared from the foundation of the world to redeem my people. Behold I am Jesus Christ." Ether 1:77.

THE REDEEMER OF THE WORLD. The church recognizes man's need of salvation and the Book of Mormon teaches that "all mankind were in a lost and in a fallen state, and ever would be, save they should rely on this Redeemer. 1 Nephi 3:6, and "no flesh can dwell in the presence of God, save it be through the merits, and mercy, and grace of the holy Messiah." 2 Nephi 1:73. With this the Doctrine and Covenants agrees: "I, the Lord God, gave unto Adam and unto his seed, that they should not die as to the temporal death, until I, the Lord God, should send forth angels to declare unto them repentance and redemption through faith on the name of mine only begotten Son, and thus did I, the Lord God, appoint unto man the days of his probation; that by his natural death, he might be raised in immortality unto eternal life, even as many as would believe; and they that believe not, unto eternal damnation." 28:12.

A RESURRECTED AND LIVING CHRIST. The authoritative books of the church including the Bible clearly teach that Jesus not only rose from the dead, but that with a glorified body he ascended to heaven to sit on the right hand of God, and that he lives today. The Book of Mormon states that Jesus showed himself to the people upon the American continent, who were Israelites, after his resurrection, and they were permitted to touch his body, and saw the wounds in his hands and feet, so that they knew that he was in fact the resurrected Christ whom the prophets had said should come to them. The wonderful works he did among them further attested his Sonship, as also the gospel which he taught them was the same as that taught to his people at Jerusalem. Thus a nation testifies of the resurrection of Christ.

More than four hundred years after, Moroni speaking of the time when all men should stand at the judgment bar of God, says: "And then shall ye know that I have seen Jesus, and that he hath talked with me face to face." Ether 5:40. Like John the Revelator he had seen the Lord even after his ascension and had talked with him face to face, showing that Jesus lives.

In latter days Joseph Smith Jr., and Sid. Rigdon, by the power of the Spirit were permitted to testify that he lives. In a heavenly vision they saw the "only begotten Son, who was in the bosom of the Father, even from the beginning, of whom we bear record, and the record which we bear is the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ, who is the Son, whom we saw and with whom we conversed in the heavenly vision. . . . And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God." Doc. and Cov. 76:3.

These statements of doctrine relative to Christ are representative of many others found in the standard books of the church, viz. the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. While quotations are given entirely from the two books last named, it is because as stated in the first number, they are distinctively Latter Day Saint. From our understanding of the teachings of the Bible, however, there is found a perfect agreement. Many other points might be set forth but space forbids, but these are sufficient as fundamentals under the subjects dealt with, as setting forth the position of the church.

SCIENCE AND HEALTH.

Coming to the Christian Science text book we find teachings regarding Jesus Christ which considerably differ from those held by the Reorganized Church. In a statement of religious tenets the author says: "We acknowledge His Son, and the Holy Ghost, and man as the Divine image and likeness." p. 493. and "Jesus" is defined as "The highest human corporeal concept of the divine idea, rebuking and destroying error, and bringing to light man's immortality." p. 580. "Christ" is defined as "The divine manifestation of God, which comes in the flesh, to destroy incarnate error." p. 574.

Throughout the book Christ and Truth are made synonymous, which is shown in such statements as "In the name of Christ, or Truth." p. 29; "The Magi of old foretold the Messiahship of Truth." p. 261. "They [Christian Scientists] bow before Christ, Truth, to receive more of his reappearing, and silently commune with the divine Principle thereof." p. 340. "Truth heals the sick." p. 28. "Truth will be to us the resurrection and the Life." p. 188. It has been shown that God is defined as "Principle" and the definition of Christ as "Truth" is in harmony therewith.

While Christ is often referred to as "the Son," it will be necessary to know the sense in which that term is used in order to understand the way in which Christ's Sonship is held. Jesus seems to be but a man having a higher conception of divine things than other men which entitled him to the title "Son of God," or Son of God,—the terms God and Good being used synonymously. "The Christ [Truth] is the divinity of the man Jesus. It is this divine Principle, this godliness, which animated the man Jesus." p. 331. "Divine Truth, Life, and Love, gave him authority over sin, sickness, and death." p. 331. "There is a tradition that Publius Lentulus wrote to the authorities at Rome: The disciples of Jesus believe him the Son of God." Those instructed in Christian Science have reached the glorious perception that God is the only author of man. The Virgin-mother conceived this idea of God, and gave to her ideal the name Jesus." p. 334.

This last quotation carries the veiled thought that Jesus was not conceived by the Holy Ghost as the Bible and Book of Mormon teach, but by the voluntary will of the "Virgin-mother" through a superior perception of a higher law. But the veil is partly lifted in a subsequent statement which says: "The illumination of Mary's spiritual sense put to silence material law, and its order of generation, and brought forth her child by the revelation of Truth, demonstrating God as the Father of men." p. 334. Not only is the operation of God through the power of the Holy Ghost in connection with the sending of his Son Jesus Christ into the world set aside, in this teaching, but man is made equal to him as to divine sonship. This thought is followed out in various parts of the book, and especially in the teaching that the power of "demonstration" comes into the hands of anyone who learns the system of "Truth" and by it they can, independently of the personal Christ, perform the same miracles of healing, casting out devils, and raising the dead, etc. The disciples "after gaining the true of their glorified Master, they became better healers, leaning no longer on a leader, but on the divine Principle of their work. p. 352. "One who understands Christian Science can heal the sick on its Principle." p. 391.

The literal resurrection of Jesus is admitted, though the purpose seems to have been merely to give evidence to the disciples' physical senses that he had power over death, and that at the time of the ascension the physical body of Jesus passed into oblivion. The following sets forth the position of the author upon this matter:

The divine idea, or Christ, was, is, and ever will be inseparable from its divine Principle, God. Jesus referred to this unity, saying: "Before Abraham was, I am;" "I and my Father are one;" "My Father is greater than I." By these sayings he meant, not that the human Jesus was eternal, but that the divine idea or Christ was so, and therefore antedated Abraham; not that the corporeal Jesus was one with the Father, but that the unseen idea or Christ dwelt forever in the bosom of the Father, God; not that the Father was greater than Spirit, which was and is God, but greater, infinitely greater, than the mortal Jesus, whose earthly career was for a day. The invisible Christ was incorporeal, whereas Jesus was corporeal or bodily existence. This dual personality, of the seen and unseen, the spiritual and material, the Christ and Jesus, continued until the Master's ascension; when the human, the corporeal concept, or Jesus, disappeared; while his invisible self, or Christ, continued to exist in the eternal order of Divine Science. p. 229.

Here it is seen that the corporeal Jesus was not eternal and hence does not exist as a real resurrected being, the corporeal part having "disappeared," or passed out of existence at the time of the ascension, while the spiritual Christ, the Truth, remains today as he, or it, always was. Under this teaching the personality of Christ is gone, and his personal power as a Redeemer of the world ceases. It was "divine Truth, Life, and Love which gave him authority over sin, sickness and death," (page 331) and all others who learn "Truth" will have the same authority.

Christian Science brings no evidence of the present existence of Christ, except to say that "Truth," a synonymous term, ever exists. Instead of offering any evidence of his personal existence as does the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, which support the testimony of the Bible, it takes away the personal Savior and leaves no one upon whom the hope of salvation can be based.

Bible believers often speak of Jesus Christ as a man, but it is with the understanding that he was also the Son of God having been conceived by the Holy Ghost. The Christian Science text book seems to use the term "man" as referring to Christ, leaving out the idea of his actual divine Sonship. He is referred to as "that righteous man," (page 342), "the best man who ever trod the globe," (p. 357), and "if that godlike and glorified man were physically on earth today." (p. 369). "Physical causation was put aside, from first to last, by this original man, Jesus." (p. 182). What God, "Good," did for Christ will be done for every man who makes use of his privileges; and all that Jesus did by "the wondrous glory which God bestows upon manhood," (p. 347), man may also do, even to the raising of the dead.

The atonement is defined as "the exemplification of man's unity with God, whereby he reflects divine Truth, Life, and Love." Jesus attained this unity through an understanding of the truth and his atonement was an example for other men, by which they could attain the same unity and accomplish their own atonement.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

A goodly number of the brethren went out and dispensed the word of truth on Sunday at the various adjacent branches, missions, and upon the streets. An opening was made at Sugar Creek about three miles north of Independence Sunday evening by Bro. M. H. Bond and R. Ballard, and meetings are being continued through the week with good interest. At the church Bro. G. E. Harrington was the morning speaker and Bro. R. Etzenhouser spoke in the evening. The afternoon sacrament service was in charge of Bro. Garrett, assisted by a number of others. A similar service was held at the same time in the upper auditorium for the young people in charge of Bro. John Lentell and Clifton Resch.

Seventeen were received by letter, including Bro. and Sr. W. E. LaRue from Brooklyn, N. Y. Branch, at the business meeting Monday evening; two received letters of removal, and one was expelled. This with the usual number of baptisms shows how the branch is growing. Other branches in the regions of the center place also seem to be steadily growing. Upon the recommendation of Apostle Peter Anderson the branch approved the ordination of Bro. Arthur Mills to the office of elder.

At the Second Independence Branch, otherwise known as the South Side, "Children's Day" was observed, and the morning hour usually used for preaching was surrendered to the children for the rendering of their program which was enjoyed by all. Both children and adults participated in the evening program which was also good. The branch numbers 325 members and is one of the flourishing branches of the stake, having been organized three years on June 12th. At the election on Monday evening all the officers were re-elected, viz: H. W. Gould president, J. T. Curtis priest, P. A. Sherman teacher, G. W. Eastwood deacon, Delbert Barnett librarian, E. S. Losey chorister, Sr. Carr historian, W. S. Loar reporter, Sadie Bailey cler.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

By invitation wife and I went to the home of Bro. Geo. and Sr. Addie Taylor recently to spend a quiet evening in talking over gospel work. When we arrived we found the house in total darkness—on entering however someone touched the button "and there was light," and there was the voice of gladsome greeting and surprise from over fifty of our choice flock, the "pure wheat,"—it was a surprise. Bro. J. W. Presley stated the object of the meeting as a token of appreciation for past labor of our pastor and his companion, and a token of joy at their reappointment. The speech was replete with well-phrased kindly thoughts and feelings, prophetic of Joseph's future as an expounder of gospel truths. He introduced Bro. George Taylor as chairman of the occasion who presented a most beautiful and enjoyable musicale. Dr. Bush with his cello, Claud with his flute, Mand, Ethel, Nellie and Pearl at the piano. The pastor and wife expressed their appreciation as best they could.

Our series of meetings closed on Sunday night by an excellent sermon by Bro. A. J. Barmore. It was the most successful in attendance and spirituality of any we have yet held. The city branch begins a protracted effort next Sunday, the writer being asked to preach the introductory sermon.

We were delighted with a pleasant, yet short visit from Bro. V. M. Goodrich and Roy F. Sly direct from St. Joseph, Mo., enroute to their field in Southern California. It was almost like a visit to our dear home in years gone by, to hear from so many of the saints to whom we still retain a near feeling. The brethren were cheerful and anxious to get located and at work. Bro. Goodrich goes to the city of Los Angeles.

In the city branch Bro. A. C. Barmore preached the morning sermon Sunday last, and at night Bro. Geo. Daley was the speaker, he also preached in Oakland in the morning. The auxiliary work is moving along and doing good.

Bro. and Sr. Barmore left us Monday for a visit in Kansas with his mother, then on to his gospel field. Their stay with us was pleasant and he was kept quite busy, at his profession.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

As our regular correspondent has gone on a trip it falls to our lot to fill our space so graciously given by our silent preacher, the ENSIGN. We have given our copy containing our last branch letter away to do missionary work. We feel to tell the many readers of the good feast we had spiritually on May 11th, "Mothers' Day." The day was gloomy and chilly but the children gathered for Sunday school after which we enjoyed an excellent sermon from our branch president. His sermons are appreciated as our attendance proves, by its increasing numbers. Our worthy bishop's agent, Bro. Faul and wife from Stewartville, Mo., spent the day with us and he occupied the pulpit in the evening, using as his theme "Mother." Oh, we wish that our well filled little church could have held all mothers of this city for that evening.

This being our regular sacrament day we enjoyed this feast as well as spiritual manifestations given through Bro. Bear and others.

On Tuesday, May 13th, the Religio gave an ice cream social on the lawn back of the church which must have been a success judging by the attendance. Our young, energetic deacon and Religio president deserves more support in his effort to make the Religio a help to all members, of this branch instead of the few who are its faithful workers.

Sunday the 18th all meetings were well attended; the morning hour being taken up by Bro. P. I. Rogers, Fred Rapp and our deacon, Robert Beadnell, who delivered his first sermon on this occasion to the benefit of all present.

Our correspondent, Bro. A. A. Richardson, while on a business trip through Iowa stopped over at the Bartlett Branch where the president, Bro. John Houston invited him to preach for them morning and evening to a full house, more than half being outsiders. He was the guest of the branch deacon, Bro. Wm. Eyster, during his stay there.

Wednesday the 21st, prayermeeting was a sort of love feast as nearly all present testified of God's goodness to them, and the full hearts run over to give touching reference to our faithful, well beloved branch president, Bro. J. L. Bear.

Sunday morning the 25th, Elder I. N. Gore gave us a model sermon which if applied to our lives would make our conversation heavenly, as Paul so fervently urged the former day saints to do.

Last Wednesday evening was business meeting and Thursday at 8 p. m. Bro. J. C. Christensen, missionary from Tigris, Mo., on his way to Mahad City, Utah, preached for us; his sermon took so well that we dispensed with Religio on Friday evening for him, and he also occupied at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning, June 1st.

On account of "Children's Day" prayer service was dispensed with, the church having been beautifully decorated with a bower of roses was filled long before 8 o'clock. The little ones did their parts well without disorder, and it was indeed a credit to the committee who worked hard and faithful.

E. M. Richardson.

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

As a final token of their esteem a large company of saints gathered at the home of Bro. Goodrich Monday evening, May 19th, for a parting social hour. A pleasant evening was spent in cheerful converse, and the partaking of dainty refreshments, after which the parting handclasp was given, the farewell word was spoken, and the friends departed for their homes, saddened by the thought of the many partings of earth life but comforted by the knowledge of the time to come when there will be no more partings. The little babe of Mr. and Sr. Fisher was blessed during the evening by Bro. Goodrich.

Wednesday the 21st, Bro. Goodrich and Sly left for California. They intend to make several stops enroute one at Salt Lake City, where we understand Bro. Goodrich was to speak on Sunday to the little band of saints there.

Bro. B. J. Scott now has his family established here on 16th St., just one block from the church, and we are glad to welcome them among us and hope they will find us as kind and congenial as we are sure they will be.

Sunday the 25th, the preaching hour was occupied both morning and evening by Bro. B. J. Scott, and we heard it remarked that it was a pity that there was not a greater number of the saints out to hear those excellent sermons. In the afternoon we were made to rejoice over the baptism of five adult people, two men and three women, from the little village of Elwood across the river. They were baptized by Bro. Coventry Archibald, whose labors in conjunction with those of Bro. Henry Taddicken were the means of bringing them to knowledge of the truth. They were confirmed afterward by Bro. Archibald, Taddicken, Best, Fifer and Scott. And so, slowly but surely are the honest in heart gathered in. The six o'clock prayer service following was very good.

Wednesday evening the 28th, election of delegates to the district conference took place.

Conference convenes with the Third St. Joseph Branch June 7th and 8th. A large attendance is expected. Apostle John W. Rushton will be in attendance and after the conference has adjourned will deliver a series of sermons at the First Branch, commencing Monday evening, June 9th, and continuing four evenings. His subjects for the respective evenings are as follows: "Our belief in God," "Our belief in Jesus Christ," "Our belief in the Holy Ghost," "Joseph Smith and Mormonism." A large number of cards announcing the meetings have been printed and are being sown broad cast in the hope of getting people out to hear pure and unadulterated doctrine.

Sunday June 1st, Class No. 10 furnished the entertaining feature of the Sunday school and did it well. Preparations for the observance of "Children's Day" are under way and we hope to have an attractive program the evening of the 15th.

Preaching at eleven o'clock by Bro. W. W. Scott who has just returned from a few weeks sojourn in Oklahoma. His talk was interesting and edifying.

At six o'clock the sacrament of the Lord's supper was served; Bro. John Davis and B. J. Dice of Stewartville being in attendance were invited to break the bread by Bro. B. J. Scott, who with Bro. E. E. McCormack was in charge. A spiritual feast followed and the time was all too short in which to enjoy it.

Sr. Mary Kinnaman who has been in the hospital for the past two weeks has so far recovered as to be able to be removed to her home, where we trust she will rapidly convalesce, as we miss her so much.

Bro. David Powell of Stewartville, and Bro. William Worden, senior and junior, also of Stewartville, spent Sunday with us.

BATTLE WON—VICTORY OURS.

LUKA, Kan., May 29, 1913.

Dear Ensign:—On the 15th of present month a debate began between the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and the "Church of Christ," J. F. Curtis for the "Latter Day Saints," W. G. Roberts in interest of the "Church of Christ."

The questions for debate were church propositions affirming each church "identical in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice. The Latter Day Saints church was discussed first for six evenings afterwards the "Church of Christ" for six evenings.

Much interest was manifested by the people in the debate some came over forty miles in automobiles. It was held in a large tent with seating capacity of over four hundred.

Before expressing myself as to results, will explain how this debate was brought about, there are a few saints living at this place that are alive and love the gospel, and have only belonged to the church about two years. Through their efforts several of the ministry came here and preached the gospel, which, as is usual, aroused opposition. Dr. Athal Cochran and wife, W. Cochran and wife, Sister Collier, comprise the entire number living here. Dr. Cochran was asked by a member of the "Church of Christ," scolded if the Latter Day Saints, would debate. He said that he thought they would, and wrote to the writer about the matter.

Bro. J. F. Curtis was in charge of this field, it was turned over to him and this debate was the result.

I am thankful it all came about as it did, this part of the "great state of Kansas" is largely new to our work, the Utah siders have done much work in these parts. Old St. John, only twenty miles away from their headquarters for Kansas, Missouri and Colorado. One thing above all others was accomplished, viz., showing the difference between Utahism and the "Reorganization," which would in the ordinary way of preaching have taken years and lots of money to accomplish and then not so well as the twelve nights debate has done.

W. G. Roberts tried very hard to work on the prejudices of the people against the "Saint's church," by relating all the old stories about Joseph Smith's character, using such evidence as found in John D. Lee, Mrs. Stenhouse, Bennett, Shook's New Book on "Mormonism," the "Nauvoo Exposition," et al.

On one evening of the debate Roberts made the statement that he could read out of the Expositor the testimony of ten women at the same time holding in his hand what he said was one of the old expositors' that said they were sealed to Joseph Smith as wives. Bro. Curtis asked him to read it. Said he would the next night, but it was never read, it was a stunner on Mr. Roberts, it was clear that he was trying in every way to keep Bro. Curtis from bringing his evidence from the Bible in support of this latter day work, but Bro. Curtis couldn't be stopped by Roberts.

All his trash was answered completely. Curtis made the best effort in taking all the old statements against Joseph Smith up and answering, I have yet heard. Bro. Curtis has the books and is acquainted with them.

When it came to Roberts' time to show. Why his church was the Church of Christ. He only gave us a rebash of what he gave on the first proposition. He did nothing in bringing out the origin of his church. The Lord blessed Bro. Curtis wonderfully several times during the debate, and all that wanted truth could see where it was.

Bro. James Kelly of the twelve stopped on his way to his mission, for the debate, and helped in every way he could. We were glad he could spare the time to be with us. I am glad that this church has reached the condition that the church can meet what the world's people call strong men and answer their objection as it does now. Bro. Curtis is the man to meet Elder Roberts and good will come out of this debate in years to come.

Your brother in bonds,
J. Arthur Davis.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 11.

Editor Ensign:—It has been sometime ago since I have written to your columns, and as I feel a desire to write a few words, I will do so, hoping it will encourage some lonely and trying soul to keep on struggling for the glorious cause of Christ.

Many times it seems that the powers of darkness get the upper hand within us, but, by persistent effort to keep the enemy at bay, we will, through the grace of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, be able to overcome the obstacles that lie along our path. But if it was not because of the glory of struggling to overcome our infirmities that we may win the prize of future bliss, life, indeed would be as a very cloudy day to live through.

We should certainly have cause to rejoice that life is made more happy by being able, through God's love, to overcome the evils that so easily beset our earthly tabernacle.

Having been isolated from church privileges for years, I can sympathize with all those who are, and have been in like circumstances; yet there is much consolation in the thought that we are in the hope to meet and enjoy each others company, and to share the joy from our works here in this preparatory life, in the sweet by and by. If it was not for this blessed hope and faith within our being, our faith in God would indeed be vain and fruitless.

Dear saints, it is a pleasure to know that our late general conference was the best that was ever held by our church. I am glad that we are thus progressing as a church, not only as to largeness but in right living, and to exercise obedience to God's commandments.

I feel that I am one of those who are not doing very much to spread the gospel message, but I feel that God will excuse me on account of my imperfect speech, as I am not able to take part in this glorious warfare to bring souls to Christ. Yet, I will do what I am able to do in the ways that God has opened for me.

I am anxious to come to Zion or to come and be with the saints in some part in the east where I will feel more contented. And if any of the saints need a helping hand on a farm, or otherwise, I would be pleased to hear from them; give full particulars.

Wishing great success in all parts of God's vineyard, I am your brother in gospel bonds,

Oscar Peterson.

DERBY, Ind., March 24.

Dear Ensign:—The ENSIGN is a very welcome visitor to my home. I look forth with joy each week for its coming. The letters from different parts telling of the great work being done, and the good sermons, I enjoy, as we do not have much preaching here.

We have a branch here known as the Hope Branch, but sad to say it seems that some have almost lost hope; but we are still striving to keep the banner raised, and we are trying to come together in a united effort to build us a house of worship this year. May we put ourselves in a condition to receive our heavenly Father's approval of our efforts and aid us in getting our means together to build a house in which to worship. Our missionaries have been Bro. Moler and Halb.

Could any of the saints furnish me with the September and November numbers of Autumn Leaves for the year 1911. Would very much appreciate the favor.

I have a husband and five little ones that I hope to see firmly established in the faith once delivered to the saints. I am trying to live as become a saint and do what I can for the spread of God's work. I ask an interest in the prayers of the faithful; that I may with God's help continue to the end.

Your sister in Christ,
Mrs. Gladys G. McPeck.

McKENZIE, Ala., May 13.

Editor Ensign:—At 9:42 p. m., May 8th, wife and I left Independence, Mo., for McKenzie, Ala., where we expect to make our headquarters for the summer, and possibly for the entire conference year. It was a hard trip, two nights, one day, and until 10 a. m. the next day. Wife took a severe cold on the way, and is now sick as a result; but we are hoping the Lord may come to the rescue, restore her to health and strength, and open up the way before us that we may do a successful year's work for the Master. This will be our address, and we ask our friends to please take notice.

Hoping for success, and asking an interest in the prayers of the Lord's people, I am as ever, yours in the one faith,
Isaac M. Smith.

PENSACOLA, Fla., April 30.

Dear Ensign:—Having removed our post office will write a few lines to the paper, also enclose $1.00 for new subscription. I have often thought how sad I would be if I should not be privileged to read the precious paper, and I have experienced it since our removal. We are living near Olive, Fla., twelve miles from Pensacola, and feel very lonely as there are no saints that we have heard of near us.

Myself and husband both belong to the church and are trying to live faithful, but as we all have trials and temptations to bear it seems at times that we are not worthy of the name of the church. We have both been members some nine years and have done very little as we have had so much sickness and trouble, but we are thankful for the blessings that God has been bestowing upon us from time to time.

I have three children, the oldest two are girls and baby a boy; we have had them blessed. I think there would be a good opening here. I wish some of the elders would come this way, and would be more than glad to take care of them. If Bro. Albert Miller or Bro. Slover or Bro. Dubose sees this please write us and let us know if some one of the elders cannot come down here and hold some meetings for us.

Asking the prayers of all the saints in behalf of my husband's mother who is sick and thinks she has consumption, and for our little family, I am as ever in the one faith,
Rosa Wadkins.

CUMMINGS, Ia., May 21.

Editor Ensign:—I have felt impressed several times of late to write to your columns, but next would come the thought—what can I write that will help someone? Many times have I been cheered and blessed from reading your columns and the other church papers. Have felt the Spirit as I read the letters and articles and they have given me a greater interest in the gospel.

It has been my desire in life to bless and help humanity. A sister's testimony given at the late general conference has been uppermost in my thoughts today. She said that she wanted to do all she could to help and bring relief to the sick and suffering. What a noble ambition!

Life is largely what we make it. We can make it pleasant for ourselves and everyone around us if we choose. The Master has said, "This more blessed to give than to receive. I find we need our heavenly Father to lead and direct us in all things. It is so much better for us if his will is done. The blessed gospel will give us more peace and happiness if we but live up to its teachings than anything else in this world."

During the last year I have associated mostly with people of the world and have found some good moral people among them. And sometimes I wonder how much better are we Latter Day Saints living than these true upright people. I have found good true friends among the Catholics. It has been a question with me how to present the gospel to them.

I have tried to sow the seed of truth among my associates this year. Can only wait for God's blessing upon it. He has been so kind and good to me and led me by an unseen hand as it were. I believe greater efforts could have been put forth but hope and trust my work here has not been in vain. Have attended Methodist Sunday school and taught a class of girls.

Dear saints, pray for me for I want to live worthy of a heavenly Father's blessing. May we as Saints let our gospel light shine forth.

Yours for truth,
Clara Johnson.

PIGGOTT, Ark., May 19.

Dear Ensign:—I am sending in fifty cents for six months subscription for ZION'S ENSIGN which I certainly do enjoy reading, as that is the only relation we have with the saints as there are no saints' here.

It is so lonesome and if not for the help of God would give way and not try to serve him or claim relationship to the church but there is such comfort to think of God, always being near and ready to help in time of need.

I would be so glad to have a minister visit us and get to hear one more good old Latter Day Saint sermon.

Dear saints, our little daughter has been afflicted for so me four or five years with the St. Vitus Dance and have tried several doctors and have failed, doing no good whatever, and I ask all of the saints to pray for the healing of her as everything else has failed but God never fails, and if he sees fit to heal anyone he certainly will and if not his will be done. Asking for your prayers

I am truly
S. J. Stone.

FORAKER, Okla., May 20.

Dear Ensign:—You are certainly a welcome guest at our house, for we never get to hear any sermons only through your columns.

I would like to enquire if there are any Latter Day Saints living in or near Foraker. We live on a farm six miles southwest of Foraker, where we moved from Missouri last December and would like to meet some of our brothers and sisters.

Your sister in the faith
Laura Storm.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.

Dear Editor:—Thought perhaps a few lines from Northern California might be acceptable to your readers as all do not go to general conference.

We were very much more impressed with the services this year, than any former occasion. The music was delightful, and it "The song of the righteous is a prayer unto me," the Lord certainly was delighted with what was offered at the late general conference.

The sermon of Bro. J. A. Gillen, the new apostle was certainly inspiring. The cordiality of the people of Lamoni and Independence would make one think he was in Zion "sure enough." Wife and I were made happy to meet old acquaintances at Lamoni in the person of Sr. Cobb and Fred B. Blair and family. Many others too numerous to mention.

We stayed two weeks at Independence with our dear Bro. and Sr. Robert J. Parker and family. They made us feel at home and gave us a desire to want to go again. Anybody ought to be happy with "Robert and Nellie." We think so. When the time came for us to leave, Robert, Nellie and Amy went to the depot with us. We left the Missouri Pacific Depot at 4:37 p. m. on Monday, the 5th of May, and arrived home Thursday at 6:30 p. m. the 8th, after a most delightful trip on the Missouri Pacific, D&G and Western Pacific—the most beautiful route for nature's scenery of any we ever traveled. And now we are at home and to our field of labor, strengthened and aided by what we saw, heard and felt.

The latter day gospel takes on greater proportions each year. Its boundaries are extending, its opportunities widening and it is viewed in the radiance and splendor of God's "Marvelous work and a Wonder." And now the thing that most interests one is, to do our part as a unit of the great whole. To be "faithful in that which is least as well as that which is much." To regard it first and last and all the time as that which is incomparably greater than anything else in the whole world.

C. A. Parkin.

HEDESVILLE, Mont., May 21.

Editor Ensign:—I am now in my field of labor and wish to state to the saints of this field through your columns that I am here for work and would be pleased to hear from anyone in regard to the needs of the work in their locality and the prospects for doing gospel work.

My address is 121 S. Fuller St., Independence, Mo., and a letter addressed me there will reach me in due time. I hope to hear from many of the saints at once.

W. R. Smith.

GLIDDEN, Iowa, May 22.

Editor Ensign:—"I am thankful for the church going habit" said Bro. George Juergens, president of the Lanesboro Branch, when returning with his interesting family from the Cooper school house where the families of Bro. Herald and Ether Salisbury and a few others assist him in a weekly church service and Sunday school held in a country place. I noticed some in their Sunday school of the third or fourth generation of Latter Day Saints. Bro. Juergens lives six miles from the meeting place but with auto and carriage conveyances the family and visitors are soon taken to the appointed place of worship.

Bro. Orman Salisbury, president of the Des Moines District was ordained a deacon in this little branch and afterward he held the office of priest, then an elder and now we are pleased to note that the late general conference recommended him to be ordained a high priest. May continued success attend him.

For the last twenty years I have made this branch annual visits and some who heard my first sermon listened to me last Sunday, and Mr. Editor, they are still strong in the faith which fact was evidenced by tithing receipts for. We missed the pleasant fact "Honest Jobu" Byerly as he is often, yet truthfully called, and his faithful wife. They are numbered with the faithful saints.

The saints in the historic Gallands Grove, Iowa, District, comprising twenty other counties, would hardly expect the writer to sign his name to a letter, even to the ENSIGN without mentioning church finances, hence these closing words to every one having tithes and others to spare for the Lord's work.

Please send your gift, large or small, to your branch agent or mail it to me at your earliest possible convenience. Do what you can and do it now. The missionary arm of the church has been increased, as you already know, in order to meet more of the urgent demands upon the ministers in general charge for hearing the gospel of assurance that has cheered your hearts and blessed your lives. We should with the bright and growing prospects before us, make a reasonable effort to save, then remember the Lord's store house by paying our portion according as we have been prospered. The Master enjoins it of you, his work has need of it.

After consulting with Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley and Bishop Bullard of the Independence Stake I have, in order to get better schooling concluded to locate my family at Independence, Mo., by the first of September, but my mission address will continue to be Deloit, Iowa.

Yours for continued success,
C. J. Hunt.

WINTHROP, Ark., May 13.

Dear Ensign:—We don't get to hear much preaching here. Bro. J. T. Riley was with us in December and baptized two members. I hope that he will come this summer and hold a meeting and bring Bro. Smith with him. Bro. J. D. Erwin is with us but has not preached any yet. I think the saints would enjoy a good meeting this summer.

I love this work and hope that the Lord will bless us all here with a good branch. We would be glad to see any of the elders come. Wishing the grand old ENSIGN good success, I remain your sister in the gospel,

Mrs. Mollie McClain.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

THE NECESSITY OF ORGANIZATION.

BY ELDER JOHN F. GARVER.

The most stupendous task ever assigned man is that of carrying the gospel message to a dying world. Thorough and far-reaching in its effect, the gospel is intended to lead from every hindering condition and bring the lost to final triumph with God. This was the "good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people;" a way opened up wherein now may be redeemed from the fall and be brought back again into companionship with the Great Father of us all. This is the task, then, given man—to bear this message of salvation to the world; To declare the counsels of God, to minister the means of salvation—stupendous indeed!

For this cause came Christ into the world—that man might live. No more necessary was his life, death, and resurrection than was his teaching; for how might man lay hold upon the possibilities of life unless he be taught the way. So, Jesus became at once the Saviour and Teacher of mankind.

In connection with the life he lived, which made effectual the death he died—the offering made, without blemish—in connection with the teaching he set forth, Christ began a work of church building. And why this building? Why, indeed, if not because the purposes of his life and the perpetration of his message could be best served by and through organization?

This church, then, through its membership, was intrusted with the work of declaring to the world the gospel message, men, held together by organization, strengthened and instructed by the power and under the teaching of Christ, received the great commission "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Organized by the son of God, who received "not the Spirit by measure," and who said "I do nothing of myself," "but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works," the church was brought forth because in the wisdom of God the gospel could be preached only by men held together and strengthened after His own order.

THE FORM OF CHRIST'S ORGANIZATION.

Let us notice the manner and order of the organization of the church. This will help us to understand something of the need of organization. If we then inquire into the work of the church we can appreciate more fully the necessity of building, as the same was done, according to the pattern given of God.

John was "sent of God," (Jno. 1:6) to prepare the way of the Lord." (Jno. 1:23). In the work of preparation he preached the "baptism of repentance," (Mark 1:4). Many of Jerusalem and Judea were "baptized of him" (Mark 1:5). With others finally came Jesus and was baptized (Mark 1:9)

Now, one of the features of John's preparation was to testify of Christ of him "mightier" to follow, "he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he" (Jno. 1:33). John saw the Spirit descend, and heard the voice say, "This is my beloved Son," (Matt. 3:16, 17. He could then, and did complete his testimony. He had previously taught that the Messiah would come, he now could say: "This is he of whom I said, after me cometh a man which is preferred before me," (Jno. 1:30); "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," (Jno. 1:29.)

It is of significance that two of his disciples who heard him testify of Christ left off following John and "followed Jesus" (Jno. 1:35-37). And why should they not do so? If they were true disciples of John what else would we expect but that they from henceforth would follow him who was "mightier", him for whom John had made preparation—by preaching and baptizing and raising up a people to receive the Christ at his appearing.

Now "one of the two which heard John speak, and followed him (Jesus) was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother." "He first findeth his own brother Simon and said unto him we have found the Messiah . . . and he brought him to Jesus," (Jno. 1:40-42). "The day following" Jesus addressing Philip said: "follow me." "Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter;" He findeth Nathanael, and said unto him: We have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write." (Jno. 1:44-45).

It is of significance again that these men were all of the same city; that they accepted so readily and joyfully the Christ; that they ran so hurriedly each to the other with the glad message that the Savior had come. Is it too much to conclude that not only Andrew but all these men had been heretofore disciples of John? How else can we account for their thorough knowledge of the mission of Christ, and the readiness with which they accepted him? Is it too much to conclude that in the same city and in other cities there were many more who were anxiously awaiting the coming of the Lamb of God? Would not many of these also gladly leave following John, and now follow Jesus? They would, or else John's mission must have been a failure.

On being informed that "all men come to him" (Jesus) (Jno. 3:26). John answers, it is so to be for "He must increase, but I must decrease." (Jno. 3:30). John 3:29, sets out the fact that John had come as the friend of the bride; to call out a people to receive the Messiah. He is not distressed at the rise of the Christ and the decline of his own popularity, but continues to bear witness, "The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. He that believeth on the son hath everlasting life," (Jno. 3:35-36). So John worked on until cast into prison, laboring only, to the end that he might make ready the bride, bear, bear witness of the bridegroom, rejoicing in his coming and receiving unto himself those called out and anticipating his advent.

Jesus, entering upon his mission, began, then, to gather up the disciples whom John had made; and to declare everywhere "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," (Matt. 4:17); continuing the work of proselyting. He calls to himself Peter and Andrew, James and John, (Matt. 4:18-22). He went about all Galilee "preaching the gospel," his fame went throughout all Syria; "and there followed him great multitudes of people," (Matt. 4:23-25).

APOSTLES CHOSEN.

As the work grew beyond the limitations of his personal ministry alone, after continuing "all night in prayer," (Luke 6:12) "he called unto him his disciples: and of them he choose twelve, whom also he named apostles, (Luke 6:13). These twelve he sent forth to preach "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," (Matt. 10:7): "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me," (Matt. 10:40); i. e., I send you under the same authority to declare the same message I have borne to you.

THE SEVENTY CHOSEN.

As the success of their work grew, so grew the work of church building. The Lord appointed other seventy, also, and sent them two by two, Luke 10:1. These seventy, chosen from among the disciples, were sent out as the twelve were sent, to preach: "The Kingdom of heaven is come nigh unto you," (Luke 10:9); to declare the same message carried by Jesus and the apostles, under the same light and authority.

The Savior was crucified, but the work begun continued on: "tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endured with power from on high," (Luke 24:49) then "go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," (March 16:15). Why this waiting for "the promise of my father" (Luke 24:49), "the Spirit of truth" (Jno. 16:13)? Because in the same sense that the Son can do nothing of himself," (Jno. 5:19), so could the men of this church do nothing of themselves. They had need of the Spirit that would guide "into all truth" and show them "things to come," (Jno. 16:13). As they were to continue to receive truth so were they to receive the light necessary for the completion of the organization of the church. Provision was thus made for the continuation of, the church and the perpetuation of the gospel findings.

OFFICES OF APOSTLE AND SEVENTY PERPETUAL.

From Acts 1, we understand that the church recognized that choice of one to take the place of Judas lay between Joseph and Matthias. After praying "shew whether of these two thou hast chosen," "the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles." After the beheading of James, one of the apostles, and the evident removal of some other from the quorum God made choice of Paul and Barnabas; (Act 13:3 "speaking this time by the Holy Ghost, since the same had been bestowed upon the church on Pentecost. That these men were also numbered with the apostles is shown from Acts 14:14. Other apostles might be mentioned, but there are sufficient to show that in the organization of the church provision was made for a continuation of the quorum of twelve apostles.

At the choosing and sending forth of the seventy Jesus said: "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few, pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth laborers into his harvest" (Luke 10:2). Since he had just chosen these and admonished them to pray that others also might be designated by the Father, it is evident that he meant other seventy. It was the order of God, then, to perpetrate the calling and the quorums of seventy, as well as the calling and quorum of apostles.

BISHOPS CHOSEN.

The church continued its proselyting until the apostles could no longer minister in things temporal, in addition to their especial work as message bearers. At their order seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom" were selected and ordained to the office of temporal ministrations. (Acts 6:1-6).

In 1 Timothy 3:2-7 we read qualifications very similar to those of these seven men: "of good report," "blameless" (of honest report); "apt to teach" (full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom); the men of Acts 6 were to minister in things temporal, coming in contact with the world, those of 1 Timothy 3 must have a good report of them which are without," they also ministering on behalf of the church among the world. It would seem, then, that the seven of Acts 6 were ordained to the office of bishop, as the same referred to in 1 Timothy 3.

The bishop might minister in spiritual things, as well as temporal, as shown by Acts 6, the Stephen of verses 5 and 8 being evidently one and the same. That the work of the bishop was of importance and called him prominently before the world is shown by the persecution and stoning of Stephen at the hands of enemies of the faith.

OFFICE OF BISHOP PERPETUAL.

The church, then, was provided with bishops whose especial work was to look after the temporal interests of the body. As such the calling was both local and general, taking them, as occasion required, beyond the limitations of their own congregations or vicinities. Mention being made by Paul in the connection in which it is made, sets forth the fact that the office of bishop was continuous in the church.

ELDERS CHOSEN.

As the church was built up in various communities need arose for men to be placed in the local congregations to care for and direct the work of each locality. This was provided for as is seen from Acts 14. Paul and Barnabas returning over territory previously visited "ordained them elders in every church" (verse 23). Titus, under the direction of Paul was left in Crete that he might "set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city." (Titus 1:5).

That these men were called of God through the Holy Ghost and were thereby made shepherds over the local flocks is established by Acts 20:28. Here Paul very touchingly reminds the elders of the sacredness and importance of their work in the church. Each local organization was to be held firmly to the faith by the work of such men as Paul addresses here, and under the direction of such men as Paul, himself; they working together under the direction of the Holy Ghost that had called them all.

PASTORS, TEACHERS AND DEACONS.

In enumerating some of the officers of the church in Ephesians 4:11 Paul mentions pastors and teachers; in 1 Timothy 3:8 he mentions deacons. These offices of pastor—local minister or priest—teacher and deacon seem restricted and local in their character, of more limited authority than those we have before mentioned, the men occupying therein not being brought so prominently before us in the record. Yet the church could not hope to succeed without this quota of standing ministers to supplement the work of the elders in shepherding the various flocks.

EVANGELISTS.

In Ephesians 4:11, Paul mentions the evangelist. Now Timothy was an evangelist, (2 Tim. 4:5). Philip, also, seems not always to have continued as a bishop, but to have later been called to the work of an evangelist, (Acts 21:8). A careful reading of the letter of Paul to Timothy satisfies us in the conclusion that the first and especial work of Timothy was to the church. The instruction given was such as a young minister would need who was sent to admonish the church to remember prayer; to instruct all as to their duties and manner of life; to warn them against fables and endless genealogies, profane and vain babblings; to declare against false doctrine, calling attention to the sound teaching of the Scriptures. We conclude, also, from these letters that the evangelist was not necessarily restricted in his ministrations, but was called to labor among the saints everywhere and whenever his work of evangelist was needed. From the many warnings of Christ and the apostles the need of this kind of work would be continuous, hence the office of evangelist was continuous.

HIGH PRIESTS.

In Hebrews 5 Paul refers to the office of high priest, each to be "called of God;" "every high priest" indicating a plurality. A close reading of the Hebrew letter justifies the conclusion that the high priest was to minister especially in spiritual things. Since spiritual upbuilding was a requisite throughout the body the calling of a high priest might be to a locality or an aggregation of localities, not being necessarily restricted in character. Inasmuch as the whole purpose of church building was to the end that the saints might be brought "into the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ" (Eph. 4:13), in spiritual development, the office of high priest was continuous.

THE HEAD OF THE CHURCH.

Christ is declared to be the head of the body, the church" (Col. 1:18), in the same sense that the husband is the head of the wife" (Eph. 5:23). If the illustration be a true one Paul understood that as the husband directed the affairs of the family addressing himself to the head—intelligence—of the wife, so Christ directed the affairs of the church by addressing himself to the head thereof. This suggests that the church recognized some one to whom she looked as the head upon earth.

That the church expected some such appointment is evidenced by the contention arising among the apostles prior to the crucifixion: "There was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest." (Luke 22:24). The Savior rebuked their ambition, stating that he who would become "chiefest" would not do so exercising "lordship," but as the servant of all. There would be one to serve all, as head and president.

That in the final development of the organization there was a recognized head and that James, the brother of the Lord, mentioned in Matthew 13:55, occupied in this calling is established by the records. In Galatians 1:19, this James is named in connection with Peter as being at Jerusalem. Galatians 2:11,12, shows James settling a sharp contention between Paul and Peter, sending his judgment by certain messengers. Acts 15 sets out the facts of a certain council called upon the occasion of a disputation over the question of circumcision, the contenders coming to Jerusalem for adjudication. After "much disputing" and argument from such men as Peter, Barnabas, Paul, and others, James disposed of the matter by saying "My sentence is that we trouble not them which from among the gentiles are turned unto God." This judgment, or decision, rendered upon the evidence submitted, and in the light of the inspiration of the occasion (verse 28) "pleased the apostles and elders, with the whole church." The matter was finally and forever settled, so far as church action was concerned. The church, then, had a recognized head upon earth, James occupying as such.

It hardly need be suggested that the office of president was continuous. As new developments arose requiring action, as the church broadened its field of labor, requiring continuous direction, so would the church be provided continuously with one in this calling. Various authorities, Dr. Wm. Smith in his Bible Dictionary, Christian Antiquities, by Bingham, Pictorial Bible, David C. Cook and Co., Eusebius, and others, agree in the fact that James was the head or president of the church at Jerusalem, the church dignitaries referring to him as the brother of the Lord. Eusebius adds that for a considerable time thereafter this presiding calling was retained in the family of David. So the church was organized with a directing head, ordering its affairs in an intelligent and consistent manner, the light of inspiration being received as required.

THE DIVINE ORGANIZATION ONLY CAN MEET THE WORLD'S NEEDS.

Having followed carefully the organization of the church with the thought that we ought thus to be better able to understand the need of organization we have already come to an appreciation of such need, even before turning our attention directly to the work carried on by the church. We have seen that a great work of proselyting was done by a perpetuated quorum of apostles, and continuous quorums of seventy; that the spiritual necessities of the saints were looked after by a corps of high priests, elders, priests, teachers and deacons, laboring locally or in broader fields as their calling required; that the temporal interests of the body were cared for by the bishops; that the membership everywhere received the fatherly counsel of the evangelists in their work of gentle reproof and encouragement, each being admonished to follow faithfully the sacred word and remain diligent in his respective place; that over and directing all according to the wisdom of his calling and the spiritual light received, stood, the revered president of the whole church. A mighty work indeed! Well worthy not only of organization, but of the best counsel of the great God, which counsel was had in the bringing forth of this, the most efficient of all organizations.

In the provision so abundantly made for the rise and maintenance of the church, the institution of God among men for the promulgation and perpetuation of the means of salvation, this church became not only a proselyter, as we have seen, but also an asylum for the building up of those of the faith. Of what profit would be the work of those battling on the frontiers if the converts were left to stand alone against the terribleness of the world, the weaknesses of their own natures and the wiles of the devil; and to fall upon and destroy the faith of each other with their conflicting opinions. Coming as they did from various walks of life, from diverse religious persuasions, from idolatry, from skepticism, what a war of words would arise, and what a devastating conflict, tearing from the weak and vacillating hearts of those new-born, the hope that had given them life in Christ Jesus. Hence, shoulder to shoulder, and of equal importance marched the great army of the Lord—the missionary wing bringing in the raw recruits, the care-taking wing marshalling the new arrivals for war against the world, the flesh and the devil.

THE SOCIAL NEED.

The great question, the burning question of all time in all stages of society has been the question of accumulation and distribution—the question of social justice—the problem of "a square deal" for every man. This problem has been in the process of marking from the very beginning and for its solution has been given the best blood and the best thought of all ages. Even in the enlightenment of this twentieth century men's hearts despair of ever being able to fight out the battle alone. Baffled in one form, it arises in another—ever onward, endless, terrible in its magnitude. Without its solution man has ever recognized that he cannot arise to his best and most majestic heights.

Now this struggle has been always known to the great Father who long ago gave the basic principle to social order: Love to God and love to man. In his wisdom he has known that these supreme heights, the loftiest possible, to mankind, are mounted only under proper temporal as well as spiritual surroundings. In the organization of the church he has not forgotten the slogan, equal opportunity to all—the great human need, environment favorable to achievement.

In Acts 2:44-46, and Acts 4:32-35, in connection with Acts 6:1-6, we find set forth the order in the church which brought about social justice within the body. Recognizing with the Psalmist that "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof"—the common heritage of all the people,—"the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one soul," none counting "ought of the things he possessed his own." Those holding possessions in abundance turned in to the church that portion due, that distribution might be made "unto every man according as he had need." Thus was bread broken "from house to house," each in his own temporal possession, rendering his portion or receiving the same as he "had need." This collection and distribution was done orderly and justly, first by the apostles, later by the bishops, under the light of his Spirit, (Acts 5:1-11; Acts 6:3). So the church had "all things common," recognizing the things of this world not man's by right, only by possession, and requiring from each, rich and poor alike, a proper rendering of his holdings in justice to every other man and to the society.

God, then, in this church of his organization solves the problem of social justice. The man possessed of temporal strength renders that account which keeps from his soul the demon avarice; the man unfortunate or deficient, yet worthy, not holding temporalities is supplied with opportunity or substance, and from his soul is kept the cancer covetousness. Both, unhampered by "the deceitfulness of riches" are untrammelled in their upward progress.

ORGANIZATION NECESSARY.

Little wonder that church organization was found necessary. Such gigantic work as set before the disciples of Christ would have called for organization even to their short-sighted vision, not to mention the far seeing eye of the Author and Finisher of the faith. None but an infinite one could have brought forth an institution that in its making was intended to bring out of chaos order and out of seeming defeat, victory. Hence, the building of the church after the heavenly Pattern, and the placing therein the light of the divine mind.

The age old problem, the death struggle goes on and on. Fiercer grows the conflict as man seeks emancipation from the darkness incident to the apostasy and breaking up of the church of God's organizing, into fragmentary and inefficient factions. Yet with all the achievement of the present age sin and social injustice go unconquered, the way being strewn with the ever increasing wreckage of men and societies. Conscious of their inefficiency, the various orders engaged in Christian work have sought from time to time to strengthen their organizations. They continue after such attempt, powerless as before.

Will man never learn that the old, old struggle is ever the same! That it can only be met by an institution organized again after the order of God! By a people—cautioned by the infirmities of those who formerly failed—holding themselves to integrity and to obedience! By a people fired with the zeal of sainthood, and led by the inspiration of heaven!

DIVINITY NECESSARY IN ORGANIZATION.

If church organization according to divine pattern and under continuous divine light were ever needed it is needed today. An unbelieving world to bring to the light of the truth; an enfeebled people to recover from the ravages of evil; men of greed to be made over into a common brotherhood; the adjustment of all disorder—these issues continue as in the time of Christ and the apostolic church. Their solution lies only in divine organization under divine light. Thank God! the organization and light have come.

WAS THE DELUGE CAUSED BY THE FALL OF A VAST WATERY RING LIKE ONE OF SATURN'S

One of the last works of Isaac N. Vail, the famous geologist, is a very ingenious booklet designed to show that the deluge was caused by the fall of a vast, watery ring from the sky.

Mr. Vail was a well-informed scientist who endeavored to make all natural facts conform to the literal accuracy of the Bible. In describing the creation of the world the Bible says: "Let there be air in the midst of water, making a division between the two waters."

Mr. Vail argues that this must mean that there was a watery body suspended in the firmament above the earth. This body, it is most reasonable to believe, was a watery ring similar in form to the ring which now surrounds the planet Saturn. The fall of this ring is the only phenomenon that could explain such an enormous fall of water as the flood of Genesis, lasting for forty days.

The existence of this ring, distributing the sun's heat over the whole earth and turning it into a greenhouse, would explain the torrid period of life evidenced by geology. Then the ice contraction of the ring as it cooled would explain the glacial period, which science shows to have prevailed upon our planet. Finally the ring fell, and that was the flood.

The Bible also tells us that after the flood the Lord said that He would give man the rainbow as a sign that no such a calamity would occur again. Mr. Vail interprets this to mean that a rainbow was not possible when a watery belt hung suspended over the earth and after the water disappeared from between sun and earth the rainbow became a possibility.

"Away out toward the boundaries of the solar system," says Geologist Vail, "we may behold that beautiful clockwork of worlds, of which the planet Saturn is the centre. In addition to his eight moons, three stupendous rings revolve about him, two composed of meteoric and one (the inner) of aqueous matter. There, 19,000 miles from his surface, revolves an ocean, 8,000 miles broad and 100 miles thick—an ocean above Saturn's firmament or atmosphere. Were we situated upon that planet, in order to behold those revolving waters we would have to look upward, and could readily understand how two bodies of water could be separated by a 'rakia,' an expanse—by a firmament. If that aqueous ring were now overcanopying our little earth, no person would say the firmament could not be a natural and philosophical partition between the divided waters. Every man would see a literal and true interpretation of that mysterious passage inscribed on the very face of the heavens. The infidel would see himself confronted and denied by the book of nature on which he so confidently relies.

"Well, then, are we to understand that the earth was at one time surrounded by an aqueous ring, or belt, of waters? We turn again to Genesis: 'And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament; and it was so.' To him who stands by the integrity of the Mosaic account of creation, there can be no doubt upon this subject. The declaration is unqualified that there were waters above and waters below. Those below were on the earth, for it was said, 'Let the waters under the firmament be gathered together that the dry land might appear.' Then the waters above were overhead. But the language of science, unimpeached and unimpeachable, is that no such body of water could possibly exist there unless it should revolve about the earth as a ring, or belt.

"Geology tells us that there was a time when the native heat of the earth repelled vast quantities of vapor and mists from its surface. These could not avoid being thrown into belts by the rotary motion of earth. In fact, it might be said that such formations are the necessary consequences of the evolution of worlds from their primitive state.

"The most eminent astronomers now living claim that both Saturn and Jupiter are to-day repelling, by their native heat, their waters into space. Both are characterized by the presence of aqueous belts, in double or multiple layers, that must successively condense and fall as oceans upon those planets when the heat that now holds them in space ceases.

"And I presume it will not be denied very long that our oceans have many times been augmented by the successive participation of waters from space beyond our atmosphere.

"Since then we have the plain declaration of Scripture that there were waters above and beyond the firmament; since we see waters so placed above the surface of other planets, and since such bodies of water must revolve about the central body, I claim that the earth in antediluvian times was surded by a huge belt of waters. That it was visible to the first inhabitants as the last remnant of waters falling to the earth. These waters originally formed in and repelled from that great laboratory, the primitive earth, skirted the boundaries of a vast and remarkable atmosphere with which the chemist, the geologist and enlightened astronomer are familiar. Well, such an object must have had a name. Mark that the waters on the earth were called 'seas.' The alone remaining Hebrew word which could refer to the waters we render the 'Great Deep.' It was so called because all mankind formerly believed that the clouds were fed from above. They beheld them grow dark and heavy and expand until they rent themselves and emptied their contents upon the earth.

"When the aqueous ring began to descend upon earth there must have been in the torrid and temperate zones a down-rush of water, but at the poles a down-rush of snow. This explains why we can find in Siberia and other Northern regions bodies of mammoths and other animals that were suddenly engulfed in the ice.

"From the retreating glacier the remains have been falling for thousands of years," says Mr. Vail. "Whole cargoes of elephantine ivory and other fossils are picked up from the surface or dug up from the frozen soil. There only are they found upon the surface.

"During the fall of the waters here supposed, on that part of the earth sloping toward the North Pole, there must have been a great rush of the same toward the latter. Everything that could float would be swept thither.

"The travels of Erman in Northern Siberia have proved that such a wave did sweep from the Altai Mountains to the Arctic regions. Skirting the Northern Ocean, he says, there are hills 300 feet high, made up in great part of whole carcasses of mammoths and other mammals cemented together by layers of frozen mud and ice. Driftwood piled equally high—trees with their trunks thrown upon each other in the wildest disorder, forced up in spite of gravitation, and with their tops broken off or crushed as if they had been thrown with great violence from the south on a bank and there heaped up."—San Francisco Examiner, By Courtesy of Bro. Geo. F. Trishman.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Who was the editor of the Pearl of Great Price? And was it ever endorsed by the Reorganization? Did Joseph Smith Jr., ever possess any Egyptian mummies, and a record of Egyptian characters from which he translated by the Urim and Thummin a book called the "Book of Abraham? Did it contain any teaching endorsing polygamy or other evils?

The Pearl of Great Price was a small pamphlet originally published at Liverpool, Eng., in 1851 by the Utah church, and contained several matters including the "Book of Abraham." It was later published in revised form by the Utah church. This Book of Abraham was translated by Joseph Smith Jr., from some Egyptian writings which some church members purchased with several mummies from a Mr. Chandler in 1835. It does not teach polygamy, nor kindred evils. In its translation Joseph Smith, so far as we can learn, did not use the Urim and Thummin for it is understood that these were returned to the angel with the plates of the Book of Mormon years before. Neither the church under Joseph Smith, Jr., nor the Reorganized Church have ever passed upon the work to endorse or reject, and no teachings found therein have ever been made a part of the faith and doctrine of the church. We are not aware that divine inspiration in the translation was claimed by him, but the work was done merely as an individual work. It may also be stated that there is no record that the Lord either commanded or directed its translation, or that he subsequently endorsed it. Hence neither the Lord nor the church are committed either to the correctness of the translation or to the correctness of its teachings. The work was purely an individual matter and commits none but the translator, and he only to the translation. Efforts have been made to prove the translation incorrect but the evidences presented are far from convincing. Whatever people may believe regarding the translating of the Book of Abraham, it cannot affect the Book of Mormon as a translated book for it is capable of standing alone.

How are we to understand the statement that "an evil spirit from the Lord troubled" Saul? 1 Sam. 16:14.

The Inspired version reads: "But the Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit which was not of the Lord troubled him." Evil spirits are not "sent" by the Lord, though when the Spirit of the Lord is withdrawn because of transgression, the way is clear for the evil spirit to take its place.

Was Moses a murderer because of killing the Egyptian?

John says that "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." 1 John 3:15. Murder is a condition of the heart which results in willful killing. Moses had no intention or desire to take the life of the Egyptian, but his motive was to defend the just rights of his people against the unjust cruelties of slavery, and in his struggle with the Egyptian taskmaster he became the unwilling cause of the man's death. Moses may not have been without blame in the matter, but should the case recur today no civil court would hold him guilty of first degree murder.

In Nephi 6:11 of the Book of Mormon the statement "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you," is the same as found in Matthew 6:33 of the King James translation; but in the inspired version it reads: "Wherefore seek not the things of this world; but seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Now if this passage is translated wrong in the King James, why was it not corrected in the translation of the Book of Mormon?

The difficulty lies in supposing that every change made in the "inspired" version as compared with the King James, was in consequence of errors of translation in the latter. The title page of the "inspired" translation, (which is partly a misnomer) reads: "The Holy Scriptures, Translated and Corrected by the Spirit of Revelation, by Joseph Smith, Jr., The Seer." We understand that only such portions of the book as are not found in the King James, were translated by the Spirit of revelation. The incidental changes, such as the one referred to in the query, were corrections made by the Spirit of revelation; and some of these corrections partake of the nature of improved readings, and do not necessarily carry the thought that there had been any mistranslation, or that the texts so changed were dangerously wrong. Latter

Day Saints accept the rendering of this passage as it is in the King James Bible, and the Book of Mormon, and hold the changed reading of the inspired in the nature of an improvement. It is a mistake to look for absolute perfection in any work which in part or in its entirety is the product of human hands, and we have never claimed that the standard books of the church, which are accepted as inspired, are free from imperfection in language, though it is held that the principles taught therein are the principles of divine truth. The Lord's injunction should be remembered, not to "make a man an offender for a word."

WHAT DO MOTHERS OWE TO THEIR CHILDREN?

MRS. MAUDE MILLS.

(Read before the Woman's Auxiliary, April, Independence, Mo.)

In giving this subject special thought I am convinced that there is much in it. That I may in a short paper be able to bring out a little of its importance is my earnest desire.

There are existing in the world just about as many types of mothers as there are types of children. And the ratio will probably remain the same so long as motherhood, and its work and influence, is viewed in such various ways. That is to say that each type of mother exerts an influence over her child according to the view she holds, and that child is governed accordingly; results being inevitable. There are side influences which affect the child, but the principal power is that of the mother. Presuming then that you agree with this philosophy, do you think we can afford to treat our duties lightly?

I believe we owe our children all we can possibly do for them. I do not believe that we should, with our own hands, do our children's tasks for them, only as they are unfitted for them. In fact the very best development is to be obtained by being taught to do themselves all suitable tasks. Then they should be taught properly, and patiently labored with till they perform tasks in a right manner.

Their dispositions should be molded from infancy. This can only be done by a careful, constant watchfulness and adherence to duty. Any undesirable trait must be persistently cared for till it has disappeared. Then as the child grows older, he must be reasoned with patiently, firmly, and a clear view of the right path shown him.

One great factor in our success in this line is perfection of the mother's own character. One example is worth such a vast amount and counts with the child as very important. We cannot hope to make our children what we are not, in the fundamental qualifications. Take for example truthfulness. If we want our children to be truthful we must take a very searching scrutiny of our own lives and acts. In order to make good impressions and be well thought of, we often make remarks which are absolute falsehoods. Women in particular are addicted to this sin, for it is so considered in the sight of God. We shall notice a difference in our children when we courageously take hold of this wrong and right it; as individuals.

Careful treatment physically is a plain duty a mother owes her child, and a very important one. All other development is dwarfed when the physical is not given sufficient importance, and in fact much moral degradation comes from careless mothering.

I do not believe that any mother can do her duty to her child if she frequently absents herself from him for long periods of time, with his time free to be occupied as he chances to fancy. So we owe to our children our association. And it largely depends on the mother whether that association shall extend on through the years when they are no longer children. It is a fact today that many children from homes of good parents, prefer to spend all unoccupied time in other places and in other company. There is some reason existing from the child's training, or lack of it why that home and mother do not remain sufficiently attractive to claim the child's attendance and enjoyment. We owe it to our children to live with them. When children first attend school they begin to come home with (to them) the most interesting experiences. Sometimes mother is very tired and nervous and the prattle and recital of these (to her) trivial experiences annoy her. But beware! If that feeling of annoyance comes up to your lips and you are prompted to hush the children, be very careful lest you blight the bud of confidence, which is developing between your child and yourself. It is a precious plant, tender and delicate and hard to rear, but it bears golden fruit. So be very careful to take it with its first unfolding of its seed leaves and nurture it and it will grow almost without fail, if you are very careful.

It is my conviction that in dealing with my children I must not leave to Providence anything which I can possibly overcome myself. I must continually ask God's help but I must work in the accomplishment of His purposes. Watch your child vigilantly. If in the process you discern anything amiss or which needs development or eradication proceed at once to do all in your power to accomplish your purpose. Do not trust to the child outgrowing or forgetting or waking up of his own accord. Help him and do not wait to do so.

Many of the mother's most successful attempts at helping her child are to him invisible and undiscerned. Commands and threats and punishments are unavailing, where a little tactful leading will accomplish wonders, and develop the character, then our work for good is accomplished.

Mothers owe it to their children to make of their houses, homes. This duty is made plain when we observe that many children are driven from home while yet young, in fact it is usually at the period when they most need home's restraining, guiding influence. The mother is sometimes to blame for this condition. She is not willing to make things pleasant at home at the sacrifice of her ideas of good house-keeping and order in the house. True, much can and should be accomplished when children are early taught to be careful of home, and still their associates and sometimes they themselves disturb the immaculate house. Their young blood demands open windows where mother was carefully keeping it closed, to protect a fine curtain and keep it clean, etc. But when they cannot have a reasonable amount of rightful freedom they soon seek other places at the great risk of the questionable character of the places where they may go.

Will say in closing that a mother's duties towards her children extend from before its birth till she has given all the help and blessing within her power to train the child, so that in his adult years he may have within him the love of right, and the power to discern, so he may choose aright. He will then be useful and a blessing to the world. In a mother's work in the family, as the minister in the church, she needs to absorb the Spirit of the Master which gives forth a life of love, service and sacrifice.

the pioneers of the gospel in Ohio, was born January 4, 1913, died May 12, 1913. Funeral sermon by N. L. Booker, at saints' church at Limerick, Ohio. Little Ezra was a sweet baby and we cannot understand why he was not permitted to remain and bless the home, but the Lord knows why, his will be done.

RECENT BOOKS.

SABOTAGE.—By Emile Pouget. Translated from the French by A. Giovannielli who also wrote an introduction. Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago. Cloth 50c; paper 25c, post paid.

Sabotage is a new term in industrialism not yet found in the dictionaries, but this book explains all about it as a means used by the labor unions of Europe in the place of the strike to attain their demands of capitalism. Many hold that sabotage is immoral, but the author sets forth what to him are justifiable reasons for the practice.

SOCIALISM.—Its Strength, Weakness, Problems and Future. By Alfred Raymond Johns, New York. Eaton & Mains. Cloth, 50 cents net.

In this work the author presents in concise form the good and bad features of socialism, giving credit for the good and pointing out the impracticable. The relation of socialism to government, and to religion, and the principle of collective ownership are discussed, also the attitude of the members of the socialistic party toward the liquor traffic.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

J. N. PRESLEY, Oakland, Cal.—I am interested in this latter day work, and the good articles published in the ENSIGN help me to understand the work better. We have a good branch here with a good pastor, Bro. J. M. Terry. We are pleased that they are again with us for another year, and we hope this may be the banner year for building up the work not only in Oakland but all over the land. God speed the right.

ELBA LODD, Seneca, Mo.—We have not any branch here now but we are striving hard to get the work built up, and I believe much good can be done. We have two priests with us and have preaching every Sunday. Four have been baptized in the last year and it encourages me very much to know that our weak efforts have not been in vain. I am surely glad that the angel's message has reached me and that the Lord has blessed me with a knowledge of the gospel.

ROSY LAWSON, Washington, Okla.—I have been a member of the church ten years and I never have been ashamed to acknowledge it. Some say they would not belong to this church for they could not bear the name, but may God help me to stand faithful to the end and grow in strength. There are a few scattered saints at this place but we have no elder so we don't get to hear much preaching. We would be glad for some of the elders to come here and preach.

J. G. MORGAN, Port Huron, Mich.—The Port Huron Branch is taking on new life and we have a fine lot of young saints and some older ones too, but some are a little cold. Elder Otto Fetting held meeting the 11th in the I. O. O. F. hall with a good crowd out. We are going to move our church down town and remodel it, and we are trying to raise money so that we can do it.

MRS. T. J. THORSEN, Sisseton, South Dakota.—I am the only L. D. S. around here. My wishes are that all pray that some day not far off there will be a way to get the gospel in this neighborhood.

Mrs. May Deck, Winfield, Kas. I would like to request the prayers of the saints in behalf of my little boy. He is over three years old and has never been able to walk. O! if it is the will of God, I pray that he might be made whole.

Grant Burgin, Ana, Mo.—Elder J. T. Davis came and preached twelve nights and baptized eight, which with four previously baptized by the writer made twelve new members, and more say they are coming. We have organized a Sunday school, and are having preaching three Sundays in the month; prayer meeting Wednesday nights, and a lively branch.

W. A. and C. Doty, Swedenburg, Mo. The ENSIGN comes every week laden with heaven sent blessings to our isolated home. There are no saints near us that we know of—just my good wife and I. We are getting old, getting old, passing the milestones one by one, and have passed seventy, but the road seems brighter farther on. We have belonged to the church 32 years.

The following poem was written by Joaquin Millier a few days before his death. It was given to his wife with the words: "This is my last message to the world."

"AT FINAL PARTING."

Could I but teach man to believe,
Could I but make small men to grow,
To break frail spider webs that wave
About their thews and bind them low,
Could I but sing one song and lay
Grim doubt; I then could go my way
In tranquil silence, glad, serene,
And satisfied, from off the scene.
But, ah, this disbelief, this doubt,
This doubt of God, this doubt of good,
The damned spot will not out.
Wouldst learn to know one little flower,
Its perfume, perfect form and hue?
Yea, wouldst thou have one perfect hour
Of all the years that come to you?
Then grow as God hath planted, grow
As Jordan oak or daisy low,
As He hath set His garden; be
Just what thou art, or grass or tree,
Thy treasures up in heaven laid,
Await thy sure ascending soul,
Life after life—be not afraid.

THE DIVINE BIRTHRIGHT.

As the firstborn son of Isaac, Esau was the heir to the birthright. Just what the birthright consisted of seems not to be clearly defined in the Scriptures, though under the patriarchs it seems to have included a succession to all the rights belonging to the patriarch, of leadership, and property, and since the patriarch also held the office of priest for his people, the right of this priesthood would also fall to his successor. Thus it is seen that the birthright carried blessings and responsibilities which were both temporal and spiritual.

But while the patriarchal and Mosiac laws recognize in the firstborn the right of succession, the history presents a number of instances in which others than the firstborn were chosen to positions of leadership both civil and religious, showing that in order to exercise the prerogatives of the birthright the claimant must have the necessary qualifications of mind and character, with a willingness to exercise his prerogatives in harmony with the law.

Between Esau and his twin brother, Jacob, there was a wide difference of character, so great in fact that the Lord said "Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." This difference is shown in the twenty-fifth chapter of Genesis where it is recorded that Esau very willingly sold his birthright to Jacob, for a compensation that was very disproportionate to its value, and which shows the low esteem which he held for it. The account concludes: "Thus Esau despised his birthright." On the other hand Jacob showed a desire for this birthright and sought it diligently, and by legal purchase secured it for himself. The unworthiness of the one and the worthiness of the other are clearly shown.

But Isaac loved Esau more than Jacob, and the time came when he was about to place upon Esau the blessing which belonged to his heir. Perhaps Isaac did not know of the selling of the birthright, or if he did, was unwilling to recognize it, but Jacob through deception in representing himself as Esau before his blind father, received the blessing. In this Jacob was but securing his rights though the manner of doing do cannot be commended.

It is not reasonable to suppose that the Lord who inspired the blessing given through Isaac to Jacob was deceived, and in bestowing upon him this blessing the Lord acknowledged his rights which he had purchased from his older brother, and which he was qualified to use properly, though without necessarily approving of the deception used in gaining it. It is evident that Esau could not have received from the Lord a blessing that the Lord designed for Jacob, and had Jacob used more honorable means in securing what properly belonged to him he would have gained it as readily.

While Esau inherited the property rights of his father, Jacob came into an inheritance of all the spiritual blessings which had followed his ancestors and became the head of a nation which God chose out of the world to carry out his purposes among the nations. The history of the world surrounds Jacob and his posterity, and all the spiritual blessings the world has received have come through them, while the influence of Esau and his posterity has been small indeed.

BIRTHRIGHT IN THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

Through the great work of redemption wrought by Jesus Christ an inheritance has been purchased in the kingdom of God for every man, but it is left for every man to decide for himself the manner in which he will hold that birthright. He may like Esau despise it, or he may like Jacob esteem it so precious as to seek for it with all his heart. He may by careless indifference sell it for the merest trifle, or by faithful perseverance qualify himself to effectually maintain and use it to the glory of God, his own salvation, and the blessing of his fellow men. How often men yield their opportunity and their hope of eternal life—sonship with God—for some fleeting pleasure, selling their birthright for worldly gain!

A man's estimation of his rights and privileges in the kingdom of God is shown by the manner in which he treats them. If he seeks wealth at the sacrifice of righteousness, if he spends for self-enjoyment and neglects the poor and needy, if his time is given to pleasure while suffering ones are needing his service, if he builds up worldly institutions with his wealth and influence and neglects the church of his Redeemer while it languishes, then he is despising his birthright, and selling it for temporary gain. He proves himself unworthy of the great purchase by which his eternal heritage was offered him.

But he who seeks "first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," and makes the things of this world secondary to the more vital matters pertaining to his birthright, who develops and perfects the qualifications for his inheritance through obedience to the gospel ordinances, and the reception of the Holy Spirit, who builds up the kingdom of God by a whole-hearted service and liberality, he is the man who is worthy of his birthright, and the claims of no other can stand in the way to hinder his reception of it.

The appeals of the world are alluring and seductive, and in many cases the "much good" of a movement is sufficient to hide its weakness and evil, and draw the support of many men of honest intent who believe that in giving such support they are rendering service to God. It has been said that the good is the greatest enemy of the best, and in many cases it is true, for the movements which have some good in them, though mingled with error, are generally accepted by people who see the good and fail to see the error, and thus they are led to support and build up many things which accomplish little as to the great and final results designed in the gospel, and by this they are led away from the gospel and lose their birthright.

The divine birthright is offered to all men though they be aliens to God, through adoption, and they who are "born again" into the kingdom of God have a legal claim to it. But a man may then so far neglect his duties and privileges, and so far yield himself to the things of the world as to reach the point of despising his birthright. He may sell it for some worldly honor, or pleasure, or wealth. To enter into a realization of the blessings which belong with the birthright there must be the personal qualification and worthiness such as the gospel requires. Membership alone in the kingdom of God without the qualities of character that belong to the children of the kingdom will not be sufficient to gain and maintain that birthright either in this world or in the world to come.

It remains for each individual to develop the qualifications which will fit him for the exercise of the divine birthright.

OPTIMISM.

Optimism, which rests on faith in God and the victory of his truth and right over error and wrong, is wholesome and delightful. But that optimism which is self-deceptive, and consists simply in the negation of evil, which, ostrich-like, hides its head and considers its whole body covered, is delusive and dangerous.—Sel.

"Behold, I command you, that you need not suppose that you are called to preach until you are called."—D. C. 10:8.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 4.

THE HOLY GHOST.

As Christian Science says but little about the Holy Ghost it will not be necessary to present many Scriptural references in order to set forth the belief of the Latter Day Saints.

It must be conceded by all Bible believers that less has been revealed in the Scriptures relative to the Holy Ghost than of the Father and Son, and this holds true with the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, though we believe there is a perfect harmony in all that these books teach upon this subject. While the things which have been revealed belong to men, it is said that "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God, (Deut. 29:29), hence we shall not attempt to say more upon this subject than what has been revealed.

The Holy Ghost is sent forth by the Father through his Son, Jesus Christ; B. of M. 3 Nephi 13:23; 1 Nephi 3:24. It does not dwell in unholy temples, (Isaiah 2:59), but is given to those who through repentance from sin, baptism in water for the remission of sins, and the exercises of faith, meekness, and humility, "unto a fulfilling of the commandments," prepare themselves for it. Moroni 8:29; D. C. 32:2,3. It is given through the ordinance of laying on of hands, and through fervent prayer. D. C. 32:3; 42:5. It bears record of the Father and the Son, (D. C. 22:17; Ether 5:41), and reveals the truth, (D. C. 16:4); with things to come. Mormon 1:81. It persuadeth men to do good, (Ether 1:106), and by it men are cleansed, and brought into communion with God, and by it have God revealed to them that they may know of his existence, 3 Nephi 12:33; Moroni 6:4. It gives gifts to men such as wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, prophecy, tongues, interpretation of tongues and languages. Moroni 10:7-14; D. C. 46:4-8; in harmony with 1 Cor. 12:1-11. It quickens the understanding and gives discernment between truth and error—good and evil. Moroni 7:10.

More might be said of the work of the Holy Ghost but this is sufficient to give a fair understanding of the belief of Latter Day Saints.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VIEW.

In comparison with this we refer to Science and Health, the Christian Science text book and find the following definition:

"Holy Ghost. Divine Science; the developments of eternal Life, Truth, and Love." p. 579.

"His students then on the day of Pentecost, received the Holy Ghost. By this is meant, that by all they had witnessed and suffered they were roused to an enlarged understanding of Divine Science, even to the spiritual interpretation and discernment of his teachings and demonstrations, which gave them a faint conception of the life which is God." p. 351-2.

"The magnitude of Jesus' work, his material disappearance before their eyes, his reappearance in idea, all enabled the disciples to understand what Jesus had said. Heretofore they had only believed; now they understood. This understanding is what is meant by the Descent of the Holy Ghost,—that influx of Divine Science which so illuminated the Pentecostal Day, and is now repeating its ancient history." p. 348.

As to the work of the Holy Ghost in relation to the birth of Christ we have the following:

"The illumination of Mary's spiritual sense put to silence material law, and its order of generation, and brought forth her child by the revelation of Truth, demonstrating God as the Father of men. The Holy Ghost, or divine Spirit, overshadowed the pure sense of the Virgin-mother with the full recognition that Being is Spirit." p. 334.

Its place in the God-head is thus given:

"Life, Truth, and Love constitute the triune God, or triply divine Principle. They represent a trinity in unity, three in one,—the same in essence, though multifarious in office: God the Father; Christ the type of Sonship; Divine Science, or the Holy Comforter. . . . The Holy Ghost, or Spirit, reveals this triune Principle, and is expressed in Divine Science, which is the Comforter." p. 227.

It has been previously shown that in Christian Science God is "Principle" and Christ is "Truth," and here it is given that the Holy Ghost is but an enlarged understanding of this "Principle" and "Truth," otherwise known as "Divine Science." No ordinance of baptism or laying on of hands is necessary to its reception, neither prayer. This Holy Ghost does not reveal truth for it is itself the understanding of truth, and no mention is made of any of the gifts which the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants say will come through the Holy Ghost, though healing is held as having place in the movement. The reader is left to draw his own conclusions.

EXISTENCE OF ANGELS.

The Latter Day Saints believe in the personal existence of angels who surround the throne of God rendering service to him, and that they are frequently sent to earth to perform such works as the Lord may require, working either independently of men or in conjunction with them. The Bible tells of angels coming to men, but Science and Health says "Angels are not etherealized human beings. . . they are pure thoughts from God, winged with truth and love." p 194. Again Mrs. Eddy says: "My angels are exalted thoughts." "Angels are God's impartations to man,—not messengers or persons, but messages of the true idea of divinity." p 195.

Against this teaching are the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants which the Reorganized Church accepts as inspired records, for they abound in references to the work of angels in ministering to men, bearing messages, revealing the past and future, working miracles, and assisting men in the accomplishment of God's purposes.

It was by the hand of an angel that the Book of Mormon was revealed and placed in the hands of men. An angel from the courts of glory brought the priesthood and ordained two men by the laying on of hands, giving them power to establish the work of God in the last days, and later by the ministration of three other angels these men were empowered to set up the kingdom of God and administer in all the ordinances of the gospel. See Doctrine and Covenants 26:2-3; 17:2.

One of these messengers is described as a "personage . . . standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked, and his arms also a little above the wrist. So also were his feet naked, as were his legs a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare . . . his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance truly like lightning . . . He called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me."—Church History Vol. 1, p 12.

EXISTENCE OF DEVILS.

The same contrast exists in the teachings of the respective bodies relative to the existence and nature of Satan and that class of supposed beings known as devils. One holding that they are non-existent, and the other holding that they are real personal entities.

Science and Health says: "There are evil beliefs, often called evil spirits, but these evils are not spirit." p 102. "Since God is All, there is no room for his opposite." p 234. "The supposition . . . that there are good and evil spirits, is a mistake." p 236. "Nothing is more disheartening than to believe that there is a power opposite to God, or Good, and that he endows this opposing power with strength to be used against himself." p 379. Devil is said to mean evil or error, having neither corporeality nor mind, and spirits are but mortal beliefs or hallucinations, and hence have no existence except in the mistaken beliefs of human beings. Like God who is defined as "Principle," Satan and his supposed angels are but Principle, or rather the absence of principle.

On the other hand the Scriptures teach that "an angel of God, who was in authority in the presence of God, who rebelled against the only begotten Son; whom the Father loved, and who was in the bosom of the Father; and was thrust down from the presence of God and the Son, and was called perdition: for the heavens wept over him; he was Lucifer, a son of the morning. . . We beheld Satan, that old serpent, even the Devil, who rebelled against God, and sought to take the kingdom of our God, and his Christ; wherefore he maketh war with the saints of God." Doctrine and Covenants 76:3. "Behold, Satan came tempting him saying Moses, son of man' worship me. And it came to pass that Moses looked upon Satan, and said, Who art thou? . . . Get thee hence Satan, deceive me not." Doctrine and Covenants 22:8-9. Not only did Satan rebel by which he lost his place in the presence of God, but "also a third part of the hosts of heaven turned he away from me because of their agency; and they were thrust down, and thus became the devil and his angels," Doctrine and Covenants 28:10.

Thus Satan and his angels are represented as real personal beings, not made as devils by the Creator, but became such by choice because of their agency. They sometimes appear as angels of light working deception upon men, Doctrine and Covenant 110:20, tempting them, and stirring them up to wickedness and crime. Book of Mormon 6:20-23.

The fact that these beings do not have material bodies does not prove their non-existence. It may here be stated that the researches of science of late years have proven beyond a doubt the existence of spirit intelligences apart from human beings.

By the courtesy of Pres. E. A. Smith, associate editor of the Saint's Herald, we are privileged to give our readers the article "Joseph Smith, Junior, as a Translator," found elsewhere in this issue. This will answer a number of queries received at this office of late relative to the work of Bishop Spalding and comments on the same in current periodicals. The article is worthy of a careful reading.

Bro. Hubert Case writes from Eagle City, Okla., that he and Bro. Alva Christensen are having splendid interest there in tent work and that he was looking for Bro. Aylor on Sunday, June 8th, to attend the Indian meeting at Watonga.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The growth of the gospel work in the central stake may be imperceptible during the period of one week, though the week just past has undoubtedly added its proportion to the ultimate accomplishment of God's purposes. The ministrations of the many elders and other officers in the preaching of the word and in the ordinances in the various localities, the distribution of literature by committees and individuals, and the work of the various auxiliaries and individual members in building up righteousness, and in helping the distressed, cannot but improve the conditions, and help the whole body on toward perfection.

Elder F. M. Sheehy preached Sunday morning at the church to the edification of the saints, and in the evening Elder G. J. Waller of Honolulu gave an appreciated recital of his experiences in connection with the church work in the Hawaiian Islands. The planting of the gospel there where so many nationalities are represented seems to be the opening of the door to many nations so that the gospel can go to them by those of their own tongue who have been converted. The usual afternoon prayer service was held, after which the men's league held its regular session.

Bro. F. C. Pitt and wife arrived from the west on Thursday last and spent a day calling upon old friends and acquaintances. Bro. Pitt was a welcome caller at the ENSIGN office and seems to have borne his labors of the last three years well. These labors have taken them around the world and were performed in Great Britain, Palestine, Australia, South Sea Islands, and other places. They left on Friday evening for Chicago and other points where Sr. Pitt will meet with home friends.

Bro. G. I. Waller in company with Pres. F. M. Smith dropped in upon the ENSIGN force on Monday morning to extend friendly greetings. He was on his way to Honolulu from Washington, D. C. where he had been upon governmental business.

Sr. Anna Clark who has been an active and faithful saint here for many years passed away Tuesday morning at the ripe age of 86 years and nine months. She leaves 108 descendants, 5 children, 38 grand-children, 63 great-grandchildren, and 2 great-great-grand children.

At the regular meeting of the local "Woman's National Daily Vacation Bible School League" of Kansas City, Mo., on last Monday afternoon it was "Resolved that membership in this league be refused to members of the Mormon, or the Latter Day Saints Church." This action is aimed at members of the Reorganized Church and bars some most excellent workers, and according to statements of members of the league, who are not saints, the action sprung from adverse feeling engendered by the study of "Mormonism, the Islam of America," by Bruce Kinney, D. D.,—just such a result as might be expected from the character of the book.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Owing to the inclement weather the different services were not so well attended Sunday, 8th inst.

Sunday school at 9:30, with Bro. Dilley, superintendent in charge, attendance 193, collection $5.31. At the close of the school a vote of thanks was extended to all who were not members of the branch, and who assisted in the exercises on "Children's Day."

Preaching at the morning hour by Bro. M. H. Siegfried which was a very able effort. At night Bro. G. E. Harrington, president of Stike, was the speaker and it was also a good effort, and must be attended with good results.

A very spiritual time was had at the afternoon prayer and testimony meeting, presided over by Bro. Warnock and Curtis. All left feeling that it was good to have been there. On next Thursday evening, June 12th, will be held a good old fashioned evening meeting; each will tell what good the organized branch has been to him. This was suggested by the president of the branch, the day being the 3rd anniversary of its organization.

CHICAGO, FIRST BRANCH.

The oath of allegiance, which was the sacrament of the Roman solitary was no doubt confidence inspiring to all who witnessed or participated in those ancient days, but in these latter days we are witnesses to events at our sacrament services, (where we pledge our allegiance to a greater law), which are faith inspiring and life giving in their operation to all who partake. As they are with us, so likewise must you all, who are of the great body of Christ, enjoy the blessings of a sacrament service.

Our last meeting was very well attended, and many took an active part. We are blessed with a goodly number of active young people, and it is indeed a great satisfaction to see so many of them take an active part.

The missionary sent here by the authorities, Elder David Dowler, is certainly a wonderful encouragement to the young. We hope the more elderly of our people will not take offense at our mentioning the young so often. God bless you and reward you for the stony paths you have made passable for the next generation, for the hope of Zion is with them. With the approaching pleasant weather, we anticipate the call to arms for street service, and when it does come we will voluntarily assist our worthy and earnest missionary.

On Sunday evening a lecture was rendered on the "Ancient American Record," illustrated by a number of splendid slides showing many wonderful ancient ruins on this continent. The effort was well received. We expect to do quite a bit of this kind of work during the coming months. A number of cottage lectures have already been given covering this kind of work, and the results have been very satisfactory.

Both the Religio and Sunday school report favorable progress. On last Tuesday evening the Religio inaugurated the children's prayermeeting, which took place at the close of the service.

Decorations Day was appropriately observed by us; opening the day we first held a patriotic exercise at our church, and later all assembled at a near by park for the balance of the day. The "menu" of sunshine, fresh air, exercise, wholesome food, and good fellowship, ending with a desert of "that tired feeling" was shared by all.

We take great pleasure in reporting three baptisms; Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, a promising young couple, and the young son of Sr. Eutrican.

Recently we were bemoaning our misfortune in the going away of several of our old members, but our sorrow has given way to joy in the anticipation of welcoming the family of Bro. Hoover, of Milwaukee, and Bro. Stedrowsky of Washington. Adding our three recent baptisms, the total added to our membership will be about fourteen.

A few weeks ago Sr. F. M. Cooper our district Sunday school superintendent, spent a short time with us, and the counsel she gave and the encouragement she left with us are greatly appreciated.

CENTRAL CHURCH, KANSAS CITY, MO.

Notwithstanding the exceptionally cool weather of yesterday, the day was well occupied, good meetings were had, and the attendance fair.

At 9 o'clock the normal class meets in charge of Pastor J. A. Tanner; 9:30 Sunday school in charge of Bro. A. H. Parsons, 129 being present, which is somewhat below the average. Bro. E. R. Corthell, state superintendent of the Sunday school association, was present for the first time and gave us a short, but encouraging talk.

The 11:00 o'clock service was given over to the Sunday school, in charge of the superintendent. Talks or papers on Sunday school work were listened to from Sr. D. H. Blair, Bro. J. A. Tanner, Sr. A. L. Yingling of Independence, and Bro. Parsons. All these talks were highly spoken of and appreciated. Next Sunday Children's Day exercises will be held in the evening at 8:00 o'clock, the morning sermon will be to the children especially.

Upon the recommendation of the pastor, the Religio is assuming the responsibility of directing the amusements, entertainments, of the branch, such as games, picnics, outings and the like. A committee has been appointed and operations will be inaugurated at once. This is certainly a move in the right direction as it will have a tendency to furnish the proper kind of recreation surrounded by the most favorable conditions conducive to the general uplift.

The matter of papering and re-decorating the church is being pushed as rapidly as possible, the financial board, composed of the presiding deacon, G. W. Salander, F. S. Anderson, W. R. Pickering, D. H. Blair and the writer, have this in charge. After this work is done, it is quite possible a move will be made to dedicate the church.

NEBRASKA CITY, NEB.

Patriarch C. E. Butterworth has been here the past week and preached nearly every evening.

Our minister in charge, Bro. J. A. Gillen, is here for the first visit with the saints of this place, and he preached morning and evening, good, spiritual sermons. At the afternoon service Bro. H. A. Higgins was ordained to the office of an high priest. Come again Bro. Gillen.

Bro. Walter Self went to Fairfield to do missionary work.

Mrs. E. D. Briggs.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Bro. L. Hemingway of San Diego was in the bay cities a few days and worshipped with us Sunday in our sacramental service.

The two Sunday schools combined on Decoration Day and held a very enjoyable picnic in the world famed Golden Gate Park in San Francisco. Innocent contests and social chat together with a good reunion lunch all conspired to make it an enjoyable time.

The sacrament services were both good. In Oakland the individual glasses were used for the second time with good satisfaction.

The series of meetings in the city are progressing quite well, the attendance being encouraging. The saints are sustaining the services well with presence and music. Sr. Hazel Parr is doing good work as music director.

Orders for tents for our coming reunion have commenced to come in. The outlook is encouraging for a good reunion again. We are in need of a manager for our dining house—any being willing to take this work will kindly communicate with us. Don't forget the time of the meeting, August 15-24 inclusive.

Bro. J. D. Stead has located the district tent at Stockton for a season; he had some difficulty in locating it. He was looking for Bro. Reiste, his Lamoni companion, and in writing he says the two Lamoniens will show us Californians something about gospel work. All right J. D. I am from Missouri.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

The morning of May 25th Bro. George Reeves delivered the sermon and Bro. R. Archibald was the evening speaker, his theme being "So live that our names may be written in the Lamb's book of life."

The blessed influence of the Spirit was felt at our sacrament service the first Sunday of the month, and we were again made to rejoice in the renewal of our covenant to serve our great and loving Creator.

Through Bro. Archibald a call to the priesthood was given to four of our worthy young men, two of whom already held office but were called higher. We trust God's blessings will ever attend them in their work.

The dear little babe of Bro. and Sr. G. S. Trowbridge was blessed under the hands of Bro. Archibald and Cooke and given the name of Walter Sherwood.

Bro. and Sr. Chas. Tanner are rejoicing in the arrival of a fine baby girl.

The regular priesthood meeting was held at 6p. m., June 1st. The eighth chapter of the book entitled "The Law of Christ and its fulfillment" was under consideration.

Instruction was received through a sermon delivered by Bro. Hale W. Smith at the eight o'clock service on the theme "Self Culture." Bro. Dowker and Roberts of Independence assisted.

Bro. Burroughs of Xenia, Illinois, who is suffering with cancer requests the prayers of the saints.

When Sr. R. Dejong was administered to last winter the request was made that she be raised up and again be privileged to testify of God's goodness to her. This prayer was indeed heard, for in our sacrament service her voice was heard acknowledging God's goodness to her.

The Cheltenham saints, with their pastor, Bro. T. J. Elliott, are pleased with the appearance of their little chapel since its spring cleaning.

CORRESPONDENCE

FAIRVIEW, Montana, May 12.

Dear Ensign:—About five years ago Bro. Wm. Sparling came here to preach stopping at the home of Bro. Newby. This was the only family of saints here at that time, and few knew there was such a church till Bro. Sparling came. His efforts were confirmed by the Spirit and several were baptized when he returned the next summer. Hale W. Smith and J. E. Wildermuth assisted.

These saints all moved away except one man leaving the first family almost alone again. Then W.P. Bootman came revived the faith of the remaining saints and baptized their two children. Bro. Bootman came back a year ago last fall and after several weeks effort of the kind only Reorganized Latter Day Saints can do, one subject, myself, applied for baptism. That winter after several weeks more preaching one man and wife were immersed through the ice 27 inches thick.

The next summer another man and wife and a little girl were enrolled as saints and by prophesy we were told of the organizing of a branch if we were faithful, which was done last winter. An elder, two priests, and a teacher were ordained under the hands of O. J. Moore and W. P. Bootman.

We had been having Sunday-school regularly, and prayer meetings when circumstances permitted. We were all young in the work but soon learned of the need of unity and the laying aside of personality and were blessed many times in prophesy through Bro. Newby also Bro. Sam Andes of the Nile Branch about 20 miles west of here.

Often that gentle spirit of peace and love that speaks to those who will listen, of the unsearchable riches that our great creator has for us, and the unfathomable love, kindness and charity of that wonderful Being the Man of Sorrows, comes among us and lifts us out of the turmoil of every day life, into realms of unsurpassed content. We have seen the sick healed almost instantly under the hands of an elder, when the doctor who was called said there could be no relief in less than four or five days. The little children receive the most satisfactory results from the application of oil by their parents. One little girl bothered with an affliction of her eyes was administered to by an elder and has been all right since.

The greatest blessing we have though, is the knowledge of God's tender mercies, that he still hears prayers as in the days gone by, and answers them. So the Lord's arm is not shortened at all, nor his eyes dimmed or ears stopped, but just the same gentle Being who upbraided not, a sure rewarder of those who diligently seek him. Let us therefore go on the way rejoicing, acknowledging our weakness and humbly asking him for the needed strength uniting our hopes, our hearts and our voices in petitioning the almighty God of Israel that as much as possible all mankind be brought to a knowledge of the truth.

Praying that we all may keep the faith, I am
Your Brotherhood in gospel bonds,
A. R. Ritter.

COLDWATER, Mich., April 13.

Dear Ensign:—I will pen you a few lines this evening at the close of a beautiful Sabbath day. Our hearts go out in gratitude and love to our dear heavenly Father for his watchcare and protection that have been over us when perilous times have been so very near us. Surely God is good, and his mercy endureth forever. We as a little band of saints here are striving to work for the cause of the good Master.

We have preaching service both morning and evening on the Sabbath day, and a good lively Sunday school, and Religio at 6:30 p. m., presided over by an energetic young sister. We feel much good is being done through this medium, and our weekly prayer services are grand, and we get near to God and receive much spiritual strength. Oh, dear saints, how little we realize the worth of this meeting, and how much we lose when we absent ourselves from the prayer meetings.

I can well remember when I was a child, the many seasons of refreshing the saints enjoyed in this branch, when they met together, many times after fasting and prayer through the day, how the Lord met with them and how many of the gifts they enjoyed then. Are we living as humble and prayerful now as in those days? Are we seeking as earnestly for the gifts of the gospel and the blessings that the former saints did? I fear not, dear saints.

Oh let us humble ourselves before God and come before him oft in prayer and supplication, for there are many blessings he desires to give unto us if we will only seek for them.

God is not a changeable being. "He is the same yesterday, today, and forever," and the blessings he bestowed upon former saints he will give unto us if we only will seek earnestly for them. Let us be more faithful and patient in our many trials we have to pass through, for God has said, He would have a tried people and they should come up through great tribulation. But we shall stand if only we prove faithful, no power shall come against us to destroy us if we are trusting in the true and living God.

I have had many blessings along the pathway of life, and trials enough to keep me humble I trust, but we must walk by faith and all will end well. With hope and faith in the great work before us.

VERA, Okla., May 17.

Dear Ensign:—In accordance with my appointment at the last general conference. I left my home May 3d for my field of labor,—Spring River District. My first stop was at Webb City, Mo., where I held meetings over two Sundays. There is a good interest among the saints and outsiders there, and Bro. O. P. Sutherland with whom I became acquainted in 1898 is still presiding over the work. After enjoying the hospitality of the Webb City saints and receiving the full assurance that they are the Lord's disciples. I went to Joplin, Mo., and strolled over the Curtis-Carlin battle ground, and as I did so I found abundant evidence that a great victory had been won then for the cause of truth.

The most visible assurance of the victory was the attendance at Religio, which I was permitted to attend, among whom were some who have lately been transplanted from the Baptist Church to the Church of Jesus Christ.

Continuing my journey from Joplin my next stop was at Sherwin, Kans., where I spent a pleasant afternoon visiting our aged Bro. W. S. Taylor. Although Bro. Taylor is sorely afflicted in body yet he is firm in the hope of eternal life.

After spending the night with Bro. and Sr. Matson at Chetopa, Kansas, I came to this place on the 15th instant, where I found a band of faithful, energetic saints, and we hope more will be added their number soon. We begin meeting in the church tonight.

Any of the saints or friends desiring to write me in regard to meetings in your vicinity will address me at Walker, Mo., and it will be promptly forwarded to me.

Your co-laborer,
A. C. Silvers.

KANSAS CITY, KANS., May 20.

Editor Ensign:—Being governed by the belief that there is a paper edited in your city in the interest of the Latter Day Saints Church—though not personally acquainted with it, not even having ever seen a copy thereof—we presume any facts of recent occurrences, meetings, etc., relating to any of the various branches of that church would be of interest to your paper, hence we accordingly note the following from Chelsea Branch, K. C., Kans.

We have recently enjoyed a great intellectual and spiritual feast, the result of a two weeks' series of meetings conducted by Bro. Hale W. Smith, son of our venerable and beloved brother, Joseph Smith the prophet. While we were able to get but few outsiders within the walls, and had no new additions, the meetings were enjoyed by the entire membership to a degree that we feel certain will be the means of a manifest renewal of spiritual strength, increased faith, and a more determined disposition to push forward towards the high calling of Christ Jesus.

The gospel truths throughout the entire meetings having been so plainly and forcibly presented by our brother, we feel have left impressions on many who heard, that will remain with them as long as life lasts and thence on into eternity.

We—the writer—although an old subject are a young convert to the faith of the church of Jesus Christ, and have much to learn of the doctrine, faith, belief and practice of this church, towards which end we have been edified, encouraged, strengthened and built up all along the line of Christian duty to a degree we have never felt and enjoyed before.

And I know I never shall forget the many gospel truths that have been so deeply impressed upon both mind and heart through these series of meetings in having been a member of the Christian Church for forty years formerly. I have nevertheless been made to see, feel and enjoy more exceedingly this gospel as preached by Jesus when here among men, as well as the beauty, simplicity, and sublimity of this Christian religion, and I have a great catalogue of reasons for the great abounding faith I have in it. Few indeed I am led to believe that have more and greater reasons for their faith in the belief and practice of this church, especially as to the laying on of hands, and the healing power through the ordained agencies of the heavenly Father.

We, my wife and I, have been members of this church not quite eighteen months, but have attended it three years, have been members of the Religio over two years. My wife had been seriously afflicted for twenty-seven years with severe cramping spells, fainting and unconsciousness, and had suffered as scarcely any one person ever did. During these years we had moved around over three different states seeking relief in every possible way we could devise. Time and money spent was no object to be considered. Doctors everywhere we went, after trying their skill, pronounced her incurable, and often said could not live three days, and once said not six hours.

One Sunday evening at this church about four months before we became members she had one of these spells in church right in the midst of the sermon. Bro. Bullard was preaching, and a sister suggested—"Why not have her administered to," and I said "I am perfectly willing," so Bro. Bullard did so while yet she was unconscious and did not regain consciousness for fifteen minutes after, and knew nothing of what had been done until she got home an hour after. From that hour to this she has never had even the slightest symptoms of a return of the affliction. All this long suffering, prolonged anxiety, unrest, and multiplied disadvantages to all of our interests has been completely wiped out, we fully believe—to return not.

And why should we not have faith, such as most assuredly we have, that which never can be shaken. We make this statement of facts for the benefit of those who may have doubts to this healing power as proclaimed and practiced by our church. We feel it to be the greatest blessing that ever could have been given us, and none can ever know—save we—how great it has proven to be. Moreover we verily believe we never could have been so perfectly blessed without the means used towards the end that brought such happiness by the relief of suffering, and intense anxiety such as only the Father and we can ever know.

Yet strange it is—as true it is—there are those who are familiar with all these facts as herein stated, in the long suffering, and the final healing, will not believe it to be as it is, and have no faith. But we know and speak with authority, because we are enjoying the blessings that are making our latter days of 81 and 67 the happiest and best of all our lives. And our hearts are abounding with thanksgiving, gratitude, appreciation and love for all that helped to prepare the way for us to receive these great blessings, and our constant song shall be "Blessed, ever blessed, be the name of the Lord from whom all blessings flow."

J. L. Winter.

CORA, Mo., May 6.

Editor Ensign:—Enclosed find check for $1.00 for which please send me the silent preacher for one year. There are no saints living in this country, that I know of for several miles and I am eager to hear the true gospel once more. I lived in Oklahoma near Fern until last December where there is a nice little band of saints at that place. I was baptized by Elder J. H. Baker, in February 1912. I was the 4th member of that community, but as time rolled on others began to "investigate what was contained in the Scripture and found that we were the ones who had the truth and finally obeyed the gospel. My wife among the rest was convinced that this latter day work was of God and came in with us in the fall of 1912. A short while after we decided to move to Missouri where I now reside.

I am very well satisfied with where I live although I don't have the church privileges that some have at other places but I know that God's protecting care is over us here the same as anywhere.

There are four who have been baptized since I left Fern Bro. and Sr. Pettengill, and Bro. and Sr. Hays who were good neighbors and friends of mine and my heart rejoiced when I received the news that they had enlisted in the army of the Lord and my prayers are that if I never see them on this earth that I may clasp hands with them in heaven.

I want to say if any of the saints anywhere happen in around Cora, Mo., inquire for me at G. M. Spencer's store where I am clerking and you can find me in that way and a hearty welcome awaits you at my home. We will be glad to meet any saints that happen to come this way.

With best regards to all the saints everywhere and asking an interest in all your prayers I am

Your brother in gospel bonds,
Roy C. Fanning.

MOUNDVILLE, Mo., June 7.

Editor Ensign:—To do without this paper would be because I was not able to pay for it. The reading of those fine sermons and also the reading of the letters is interesting to me, knowing as we all do this is all the Savior's truth. Oh, how can we praise his glorious name enough, he is so merciful unto his children in all times of trouble and need. My desire is to do his will in all things and give the Lord the glory and praise for ever more.

Your sister,
Hattie Bennett.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

JOSEPH SMITH, JUNIOR, AS A TRANSLATOR.
A REVIEW OF THE WORK PUBLISHED BY BISHOP F. S. SPALDING.

"Joseph Smith, jr., as a Translator," is the title of a pamphlet recently published by Right Reverend F. S. Spalding, D. D., Bishop of Utah, representing the Protestant Episcopal Church. This pamphlet is an attempt to discredit the Book of Abraham, and through it the Book of Mormon, and contains the findings of eight prominent students of Egyptology, who have passed upon facsimiles of certain plates appearing in the Book of Abraham.

We have delayed making any extended reference to this book for two reasons: First, because the questions discussed involved a knowledge of the ancient Egyptian language; and second, because the attack was directed primarily against the Utah Mormon Church. However, in regard to the first consideration, we have concluded that what is needed is not so much an expert knowledge of Egyptology as an application of good common sense to the principles involved. And we are not prepared to concede that the worthy bishop has a monopoly of this valuable commodity. In regard to the second consideration, abundant time has been given the representatives of the Utah Church to reply to the attack, and they have not failed to avail themselves of the opportunity.

There remains yet a third consideration which prompts us to write at this time. Though we may not be particularly interested in the fate of the Book of Abraham, yet when any defects that are supposed to have been found in it are used as a basis for an argument that the Book of Mormon is of spurious origin, the matter becomes one of common interest to all believers in the divine origin of the Book of Mormon. They may not be interested in the Book of Abraham particularly, but they are interested in the arguments based upon these supposed defects.

HISTORY OF BOOK OF ABRAHAM.

The history of the Book of Abraham (which book has been published by the Utah Church, as a part of the Pearl of Great Price, originally having appeared in Times and Seasons, March 1 and 15, and May 16, 1842), is thus presented by Bishop Spalding in his pamphlet, the quotation being from the history of Joseph Smith:

On the third of July, Michael H. Chandler came to Kirtland to exhibit some Egyptian Mummies. There were four human figures together with some two or three rolls of papyrus covered with hieroglyphic figures and devices. As Mr. Chandler had been told I could translate them, he brought me some of the characters and I gave him the interpretation, and like a gentleman, he gave me the following certificate:

"KIRTLAND, July 6, 1835.

"This is to make known to all who may be desirous, concerning the knowledge of Mr. Joseph Smith, jr., in deciphering the ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic characters in my possession, which I have, in many eminent cities, showed to the most learned; and, from the information that I could ever learn, or meet with, I find that of Mr. Joseph Smith, jr., to correspond in the most minute matters.

"Michael H. Chandler,

"Traveling with and Proprietor of Egyptian Mummies." Soon after this, some of the Saints at Kirtland purchased the mummies and papyrus, a description of which will appear hereafter, and with W. W. Phelps and Oliver Cowdery as scribes, I commenced the translation of some of the characters of hieroglyphic, and much to our joy, found that one of the rolls contained the writing of Abraham, another the writing of Joseph of Egypt, etc.

We understand that the rolls of hieroglyphics mentioned in this extract, together with the mummies, were afterward placed in a museum in Chicago, where they were destroyed by the great fire of 1871, so that the original text from which the Book of Abraham was translated is not now in existence. However, there were certain facsimiles made from plates or drawings which accompanied these rolls, which were published in the Times and Seasons in connection with the text of the Book of Abraham, and to these drawings Joseph Smith appended an explanation of their meaning. These facsimiles, three in number, Bishop Spalding has submitted to eight well-known students of the ancient Egyptian language. These students are: Doctor A. H. Sayce, Oxford, England; Doctor W. M. Flinders Petrie, London University; James H. Breasted, Ph. D., Haskell Oriental Museum, University of Chicago; Doctor Arthur C. Mace, Assistant Curator, Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York; Doctor John Peters, University of Pennsylvania, in charge of expedition to Babylonia, 1888-1895; Reverend Professor C. A. B. Mercer, Ph. D., Western Theological Seminary, Custodian Hibbard Collection; Doctor Edward Meyer, University of Berlin; Doctor Friedrich Freiherr Von Bissing, Professor of Egyptology in the University of Munich.

These savants are unanimous in rejecting the idea that Joseph's translation or explanation of the plates is correct, but do not agree among themselves as to the correct translation.

BISHOP SPALDING'S WORK UNIQUE.

Bishop Spalding's approach to the subject under consideration is unique, in that he admits for argument's sake the existence of the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated; but he proposes to challenge the correctness of the translation, by attempting to prove that Joseph Smith was not a competent translator of ancient languages, and attempts to support that argument by the case in point, that of the Book of Abraham. He is also unique in his treatment of the question, in that he approaches it with an apparent spirit of fairness and candor, and avoids all personalities and low reflections upon the life and character of Joseph Smith and his parents and associates, which have been so disgusting and prominent a feature of "Mormon exposes," in years past. In fact, he says:

Those who attacked the Mormons felt moved to publish everything they could discover or invent to the discredit of "Joe Smith" and his parents, while those who believed in him replied with a partisan record of virtues of life, and miracles of power.

And he pays Latter Day Saints the following tribute,

A rather careful reading of the controversy leads this writer to the conclusion that the Latter Day Saints set an example of dignity and courtesy which their opponents rarely followed.

He also has this to say about the Book of Mormon:

If the Book of Mormon is true, it is, next to the Bible, the most important book in the world. This fact has been appreciated by the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and by them alone. . . . On the other hand it is inexcusable that the book has never had the serious examination which its importance demands.

He confines himself closely to his effort to discredit the Book of Abraham, and assuming himself to be successful in that work, bases upon his supposed success the argument that the Book of Mormon is equally unworthy of acceptance as a divinely inspired record.

OUR POSITION.

In considering this little pamphlet we shall take the position that the worthy bishop has not been entirely successful in his effort to discredit the Book of Abraham; and second that even if he were entirely successful in his effort to discredit the Book of Abraham, that fact would not affect the Book of Mormon in the least.

The Book of Mormon must be considered upon its individual merits. Whether the Book of Abraham stands or falls, it can not materially affect the fate of the Book of Mormon.

The Book of Mormon was a divine revelation, and Joseph Smith's ability to translate it was a divine gift. He did not study it out, or work out an alphabet or attempt to get at its meaning by the ordinary mental processes of study in an attempt to interpret from one language to another.

The case of the Book of Abraham was quite different. Bishop Spalding himself quotes Joseph Smith as saying:

The remainder of the month, I was continually engaged in translating an alphabet to the Book of Abraham and arranging a grammar of the Egyptian Language as practiced by the ancients.

This is taken from his diary, and we find another entry as follows:

Tuesday, 17, exhibited the alphabet of the ancient records to Mr. Holmes and some others. Went with him to F. G. Williams to see the mummies.—Church History, vol. 1, p. 605.

This shows conclusively that Joseph Smith had studied out an alphabet and a grammar, with the aid of which he believed himself to be capable of reading the Egyptian language. In fact this occurred at the very time when the "School of Elders," at Kirtland, with Joseph Smith at the head, was engaged in a study of the ancient languages.

DOCTOR BISSING'S VIEWPOINT.

Doctor Bissing, of the University of Munich, one of the authorities quoted by Bishop Spalding, seems to share this view with us. He says that he has been interested for a long time in Joseph Smith's supposed translation of Egyptian texts, and adds:

A careful study has convinced me that Smith probably believed seriously to have deciphered the ancient hieroglyphics, but he utterly failed. . . . He probably used Athenaeus Kircher the Jesuit's work, and there found a method of reading the old Egyptian signs very much like his own.—Joseph Smith, Jr., As a Translator, pp. 30, 31.

Kircher (or Kircher), who lived 1601-1680, was professor of mathematics, philosophy and Oriental languages at the University of Wurzburg. He was one of the pioneers in an effort to unravel the mystery of the ancient Egyptian language, his work along that line now being discredited.

We use this simply to indicate that it was possible for Joseph Smith in 1835 to have worked out a system by which he seriously believed himself capable of translating ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics. Bishop Spalding's own witness seems to conclude that Joseph Smith professed to have studied these things out, instead of claiming to translate by virtue of a divine gift, as in the case of the Book of Mormon, and that he was honest and serious in the matter.

BOOK OF ABRAHAM MUST STAND ON ITS OWN MERITS.

The Utah people have accepted the Book of Abraham as a divine production and have regarded the Pearl of Great Price, in which it is published, as one of their standard church books.

The Reorganized Church has never indorsed the Book of Abraham or accepted it as a standard church work, and has never seen any reason to regard its translation as anything more than a human performance. Consequently the bishop's attack strikes us at a different angle, and we are not particularly concerned with its effect upon the Book of Abraham. Even if he is successful in proving that Joseph Smith's translation is unreliable, that does not affect the Book of Mormon.

In his attempt to get at the Book of Mormon in a roundabout way, he has gone so far around that apparently he has lost his connections.

The Book of Abraham was not adopted by the church in the days of Joseph Smith, or put upon the plane that was accorded to the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. The only language that we are aware of that could be construed to indicate that it was regarded by Joseph Smith as a revelation is that quoted by Bishop Spalding in which he says: "Truly we can say the Lord is beginning to reveal the abundance of peace and truth."

This may or may not have been intended to apply to the Book of Abraham. And even if intended to so apply, he may have had in mind truths which he believed that he had been able to study out of this ancient record with the aid of the alphabet and grammar which he had arranged.

If he was unsuccessful in his attempt as a student to unravel the Egyptian language, he was only one of many who were equally unsuccessful. But his failure as a man in his very human effort to study out this record does not prove that the Lord made any failure in revealing the Book of Mormon and directing in its translation.

HUMAN ERRORS VERSUS DIVINE REVELATIONS.

The Apostle Paul received certain divine manifestations, and the revelation of the divinity of Jesus Christ was granted to him in his remarkable vision upon the road to Damascus. At a later date the apostle studied out certain matters and reached conclusions, particularly upon the question of marriage, which he says in his epistles were not directed by the Spirit and were not given him of God. Proof that the Apostle Paul was wrong as a man in the conclusions that he studied out would not in any way discredit the truthfulness of that which he had received by divine revelation.

OUR WORK NOT TO BE OVERTHROWN SO EASILY.

We must remind Bishop Spalding that the fate of that which the world chooses to term "Mormonism," is not to be determined by the findings of eight scientists. If religions were thus to be disposed of we fear that many of the great central truths of Christianity would soon be overthrown.

Would it not be possible to secure the opinions of eight leading scientists who would affirm that there is no evidence to support our belief in the resurrection of Jesus, and that belief in that great event is belief in that which is contrary to the ordinary processes of nature? In fact, on similar authority many people have asked us to abandon our belief in the Bible as an inspired record.

Bishop Spalding does not permit the conclusions of certain scientists to overthrow his belief in Christianity, but goes calmly on representing one of the great "Christian" denominations.

While due respect should be accorded to the findings of science, and we have no word to say against scholarship and learning, we shall go steadily on, like Bishop Spalding, pursuing the even tenor of our ways. The church that we represent rests upon foundation stones of truth that these scientists have never touched.

There is a cloud of witnesses affirming the truthfulness of the great latter day work that is not to be affrighted and dispersed by the findings of eight men on an isolated work that has no vital connection with the church and her teachings.

"AN ACT TO ABOLISH DIVERSITY OF OPINION."

We now approach the proposition that the bishop is not entirely successful in his attempt to discredit the Book of Abraham. His critics find many flaws in the findings of eight scientists, some of which are of considerable importance.

King Henry VIII, spiritual head of the Episcopal Church, at one time caused an act to pass Parliament, entitled, "An act to abolish diversity of opinion."

Bishop Spalding evinces a desire to resurrect this old act of Parliament, and would have all Latter Day Saints immediately conform to the opinion held by himself and his eight scientists. But alas, so great is the perversity of humanity, he can not enforce King Henry's will even among his little group of scientists. Even there, that horrid and detestable thing, "diversity of opinion," creeps in.

Herewith we reproduce the first of the three cuts submitted to these students of Egyptology.

Doctor Petrie says that this is an embalming scene; Doctor Breasted says it is a resurrection scene. Doctor Myer thinks the reclining figure is a cadaver; Doctor Bissing sees in it the rising god Osiris. Doctor Breasted thinks the bird represents Isis; Doctor Petrie says it is the soul of the dead man; we suggest still another interpretation, see context.

Joseph Smith says that this represents an attempt by an idolatrous Egyptian priest to offer Abraham as a sacrifice.

Doctor Petrie says that it is an embalming scene. "The well-known scene of Anubis preparing the body of the dead man."

With this Doctor Peters agrees, saying that the plate "represents an embalmer preparing a body for burial."

But Doctor Breasted says that it represents a resurrection scene, "Osiris rising from the dead."

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

When doctors disagree, who shall decide? If Doctor Breasted has a right to differ from the learned Doctors Petrie and Peters, Joseph Smith had a right to differ from all three. It can not be both an embalming scene and a resurrection scene; one must be wrong; perhaps both are wrong. Until this matter is settled among the doctors we may venture the opinion that Joseph Smith may be right, and that it is neither an embalming scene nor a resurrection scene, but a sacrificial scene.

Referring to figure 2 in this plate, Doctor Petrie, of London University, says that it "is the dead person."

Doctor Meyer, of the University of Berlin, says, "The body of the dead lying on a bier (bier)."

Doctor Bissing, of the University of Munich, says, "The dead man is lying on a bier."

But Doctor Breasted, of the University of Chicago, says, "Number 1 depicts a figure reclining on a couch, with a priest officiating and four jars beneath the couch. The reclining figure lifts one foot and both arms. This figure represents Osiris rising from the dead."

When Chicago and Berlin and Munich disagree there is a possibility that Kirtland may be right. Doctor Petrie's undertaker becomes Doctor Breasted's priest (Joseph Smith also said that it was a priest). The common corpse that Doctor Petrie and Doctor Meyer and Doctor Bissing see, is to Doctor Breasted the God Osiris rising from the dead. Doctor Breasted's courage in differing from his infallible colleagues across the waters stiffens the backbone of the trembling layman in the presence of such learning. Here is a possibility for different readings! It is not so clear as we had supposed from the bishop's introduction! We had thought that it was all settled and fixed by concerted action of eight great scientists before whom we should be dumb. But here are differences that require explanation.

If learned Egyptologists of the bishop's own choosing, men who minister ever at the right hand of knowledge, see things so differently that whereas one beholds a cold cadaver where another sees a rising god, we may yet withhold our anathemas from the head of Joseph Smith for having seen in the same figure Abraham lying upon an altar.

HAWK OF HORUS? OR POE'S RAVEN?

The figure marked 1, appearing on this plate, in the form of a bird, is said by Joseph Smith to represent the angel of the Lord.

Doctor Petrie says that it "Is the hawk of Horus."

Doctor Breasted says, "A bird, in which form Isis is represented."

Doctor Meyer says, "The soul in the shape of a bird flying above it."

Dr. Peters says, "The soul (Kos) is flying away in the form of a bird."

Here again we find a wide range of renditions, from Petrie to Peters. We have our choice: The hawk of Horus, Isis in the form of a bird, and the soul of the dead man (dead man or rising God Osiris, which was it?) flying away in the form of a bird. Which shall we take in preference to the explanation offered by Joseph Smith? Which would the good bishop prefer us to choose? An attempt is made by one writer to explain these differences by saying that this remarkable bird might have represented any or all of these things.—a sorry explanation, which if allowed to stand, opens the way for us to insist that the versatile fowl may also have represented that which Joseph Smith says it represented.

But hold, we are seized with another thought! This free expression of divergent opinions emboldens us. This bird may even be Poe's raven. And even now it may be croaking to the good bishop, "Nevermore!"

B. H. Roberts comments upon this conflict of opinion among the scientists, and is reminded of the dialogue between Polonius and Hamlet:

Polonius, the tiresome old courtier, has been sent to bring Prince Hamlet to the presence of his mother, then—
"Hamlet: Do you see yonder cloud that's almost the shape of a camel?"

"Polonius: By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed."

"Hamlet: Methinks it is like a weasel."

"Polonius: It is backed like a weasel."

"Hamlet: Or like a whale?"

"Polonius: Very like a whale."

"Hamlet: Then I will come to my mother by and by."

All right, bishop, for one, I will change my belief in Joseph Smith's translation of these Egyptian plates, "by and by," perhaps, but it will not be until there is more harmony among your Egyptologists.

POSSIBLE PREJUDICE AND HASTE.

Other features to be considered are possible prejudice and lack of careful consideration. We have no copies of Bishop Spalding's letters to these men, so do not know his method of presentation. Even scientists are human, and the scientific mind is not always free from prejudices.

It develops, for instance, that though Doctor Peters is set down as of the University of Pennsylvania, he has, in fact, not been connected with the University for about twenty years past, and is now rector of Saint Michaels Church, in New York City. This is the same church that is represented by the Right Reverend Bishop Spalding.

We would have more respect for the decision of Doctor John Peters, of the University of Pennsylvania, in this matter, than for that of the Reverend John Peters of Saint Michaels Church. For Reverend John Peters of Saint Michaels Church is a leading representative of one of the great churches whose enmity Joseph Smith incurred by declaring that their creeds were wrong and an abomination in the sight of God.

Without in the least reflecting upon the good intentions of Reverend Peters, we fear that in this matter it would be impossible for him to prevent his religious right hand from knowing what his scientific left hand was about.

Doctor Von Bissing, of Munich, evidently gave the matter careful thought and respectful consideration, as he says that he had been interested in it "since a long time," and he concludes that Joseph Smith studied out his interpretation just as any student might have done, and that he was serious and honest in the belief that his interpretation was genuine and correct.

But others of this group of Egyptologists, we greatly fear, dismissed the matter with greater haste and contempt than was consistent. Doctor Mace gives it one paragraph of fourteen lines, three more than it receives from Doctor Sayce. Doctor Mace says, "Joseph Smith's interpretation of these cuts is a farrago of nonsense from beginning to end."

This is strangely like the spirit of E. D. Howe, who says of the Book of Mormon, "The God of heaven, that all-wise Being, could never have delivered such a farrago of nonsense to the world."—Howe's work, p. 19.

The appearance of this rather unusual phrase, "a farrago of nonsense," may not indicate that Doctor Mace drew his conclusions from E. D. Howe, though if these two sentences so nearly identical were to be found in the Book of Mormon and the Manuscript Found it would confirm many in the belief that Solomon Spalding was indeed the author of the Book of Mormon.

CONCLUSION.

To recapitulate: There is no vital connection between the Book of Abraham and the Book of Mormon. The power to translate the Book of Mormon was a divine gift, and the translation went on with the aid of the Urim and Thummim. There is nothing to indicate that divine help was even claimed in the translation of the Book of Abraham, certainly the Urim and Thummim was not used. Everything thus far brought to light indicates that Joseph Smith went at this work as any man might have done, in connection with his studies of ancient languages. Though it were to be demonstrated that his translation of the Book of Abraham is utterly unreliable, the Book of Mormon would not be affected. But because of possible haste and prejudice, and because of the contradictory readings returned by these eight scientists, we are not prepared to concede that the bishop has carried his point even to the extent of discrediting the Book of Abraham.

Again, there are thousands of evidences supporting the great latter day work that are not touched, and cannot be touched by a scientific consideration of an isolated fragment of translation having no vital connection with the work in general and forming no part of the church system of belief. Indeed, great though our regard for science is, we cannot conceive of any condition arising under which the verdict of eight scientists upon a given question could overthrow this work.

Elbert A. Smith.

THE BEAUTY OF STRENGTH.

In a recent issue of the daily paper we read an account of a fight between the governor of one of our states, and a leading newspaper man of the same state, as we glanced at the head lines we thought the conflict was necessarily one of the mental or literary combats into which men frequently indulge, but upon closer perusal discovered the conflict was a hand to hand encounter wherein brute strength became the predominating power, and we wondered man or brutes, which? And then we reasoned if their manly traits of character would have asserted themselves, and manly methods would have been employed in attempting to settle the bone of contention between them, how easily it might have been? but in the absence of these things we could only conclude, that at best these men were far below the standard set for them by the master of men.

This however is suggestive of thought, and if we may be able to learn the lesson therein it may assist us in building better and wiser as we pass along the pathway of life.

Strength may be defined in a variety of ways, but the thought we wish to get out of it at present is that which is associated with character—"strength of character is the thought that is paramount."

One may have the physical strength of a Samson, or he may have the intellectual power of an Edison or the oratorical power of a Bryan, and yet if he has nothing more he is far from being strong in character.—Strength of character does not denote brute force, on the contrary it denotes humility, meekness, and love.

In our younger days we heard much said of brave men, brave deeds, and great heroes, and we then thought for one to be brave he must of necessity do something desperate, brave deeds to us became the synonym of animal force, and a hero was one who had fought battles, conquered men and nations, and had made an outward display of his skill and physical endurance; but we have changed our mind in regard to this matter, and with Paul can say: "When I was a child I thought as a child, I spake as a child, and understood as a child, but when I became a man I put away childish things."

Today the brave man—to us—is the one who is ready and willing to stand on the side of the right at all hazards, who will not compromise truth or virtue, and who will not permit worldly pomp or favor, riches, honor, or any other thing to remove him from the cause of justice, and right, and who will speak the truth at all times e'en though at times it seems to be to his hurt.

Christ portrays to the world the strongest type of character that has ever graced the footstool, and it may also be said the bravest man was he who gave his life for humanity, so to get a correct conception of this matter it becomes us to examine his life a little. First we see him shouldering the fleshly passions and inclinations by his prolonged fast of forty days. Next we see him overcoming and subduing personal ambitions, when he so ably answered the tempter with "it is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," and "thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." We trace his life a little further and we see him mute under the tongue of slander, serene under the fire of oppression and persecution, and when vilely reproached and smitten he held his peace. He was ready to pray for the pardon of those who took his life, and shed tears of love and pity for those who rejected him and set him at naught.

This denotes the life of a hero, a brave man, a strong character!

The advice of Paul was: "Finally, brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might."

To be strong in the Lord suggests the putting on of his character, becoming like him in spirit, and reflecting the light of his truth.

If we have the strength of the Lord we will be humble, kind, compassionate, loving, gentle, easily entreated, and very sympathetic. Never given to ridicule, not soon angry, never complaining, without malice or jealousy, in all things preferring others, hence unselfish, generous and meek.

This blessed heritage may be the happy allotment of any one who is ready and willing to possess it, this strength cannot be acquired through selfish means, neither can it be purchased with money, but it can be acquired by every lover of virtue and purity, it is given to every one who seeks it and it adorns the lives of rich and poor alike whose hearts are pure and whose spirit is contrite.

Then Christ being a type of what man ought to be, we may conclude that if more of the animal is beheld in the life and actions of humanity, than there is Christ in them, they are at best living far beneath their privileges and it is only as the Christ nature is put on that the animal nature will disappear.

As individuals then where do we stand, have we sufficient strength of character to lead us on to that place of service in life that will enable us to lay down our lives for others? If we are not there we are lacking in that strength of beauty, that was found in the man of Galilee.

The beauty of the strength of Christ rests in this, that he never did a wrong thing, so in like manner if we put on his strength we will always be found on the side of right, and the ever penetrating love of the Divine will garnish our peaceful abode.
One of the Disciples.

THE HOPE OF THE JEW

It is undeniable that the hopes, if not the expectations, of the Zionists have been raised by the possibilities that might result from the present trouble in Turkey. Anything that would relax the Mohammedan grasp on Palestine would be welcomed.

If the Turk should be turned out of Europe, might not he be persuaded to sell the ancient Holy Land to the "chosen people"? This is the dream which is now agitating the Zionists. Israel Zangwill the famous author, and one of the leaders of his race, does not regard the situation with optimistic eyes as may be gathered from this letter which he sends from England to The Christian Herald:

"Turkey could not sell Palestine without stirring up the whole Mohammedan world, for Jerusalem is also a holy city of Islam. For the same reason she cannot give it away. Naturally, I desire Palestine to become Jewish; but a statement as to Zionist plans and policies should be left to the recognized leaders of the Zionist movement.

"Israel Zangwill,"

Far End, East Preston, Sussex, England.

Other leaders may be more hopeful; but the attitude as a whole is a waiting one. It would be a glorious reclamation and restoration. Come when it may, it is something to which they all look forward with longing eyes and hopeful hearts as the ultimate realization of the divine promise. The Jew shall yet go back to Palestine.

JAMES 1:27.

The widowed mother of a family of five was deeply discouraged over certain overwhelming circumstances which were closing in about them, and threatening them on every side. She had spent the greater part of one morning in tears and suspense when Sr. Frick came to her with the following poem and article from the Youth's Companion. Their themes harmonized so beautifully; and in the reading of them, the picture of this woman left alone to bear the responsibilities of a home—accompanied her thoughts so forcefully that she came to her with them. The mother was greatly strengthened and encouraged by the truths and lesson presented. We are apt to forget the depths of God's love and the fact of His abiding watchcare over us, as we struggle daily to rear our families; and always against more or less adversity. May these "reminders" be as truly refreshing to another!

THROUGH DARK TO LIGHT.

BY NANCY BYRD TURNER.

They have a saying in the Orient,
Age-old, the little bitter legacy
Perchance, of some sad spirit's discontent
That long since ceased to be.
"The more we hope the more we suffer"—so
It counsels wistful age and eager youth,
And to the last, the hearts that harken know
Its word is truth.
Aye, very truth! The more the buried grain
Longs in its darkness for the light of God,
The more it labors up in patient pain
To cleave the prison sod.
The more the chill year years to bring to birth
Blossom and warmth and tender, greenening thing,
The more it travails sore with storms, till earth
Be fit for spring.
And every prayer on some wild Galilee
Toils at its oars an hour before the day,
And every dream bath some Gethsemane,
Some stone to roll away.
For Faith must kneel and plead till be whole,
And Love must bide its resurrection sky;
That which thou sowest is not quickened, soul
Except it die!
Strive and desire and watch and trust and pray,
Grasp every sweet assurance grace will give,
"The more we hope the more we suffer"—yea,
But so the more we live!

THE BLESSINGS OF HARDSHIP.

All day the weather had been sullen. With the falling darkness, the wind began to blow. By ten o'clock snow as fine as sifted flour was flying before a fierce northern gale. Hurrying home from church, where the evening lesson had been on God's care for the lily and the sparrow, more than one person heard clear, silvery notes borne on the gale—the cheery calls of birds buffeted on the wings of the storm.

The next morning the trees and fences of the town were alive with a chattering army of Lapland longspurs—a bird of the sparrow family. They seemed to have become bewildered in the storm, for many had been killed or wounded by striking buildings and telephone-poles, and some lay frozen upon the snow-drifts. The tragedy seemed almost to challenge the lesson of the night before. Does God really care for the lily and the sparrow?

Flower seeds are dashed upon the ground by the wind, frozen into the solid ice, submerged by the overflowing river. Their roots contend with poor soil, and even with rocks; the growing stem elbowed up in competition with the weeds that would supplant them; the rain drenches them, the wind racks them, the sun scorches them, hail punnels them, insects attack them. But when at length the flowers burst into bloom, Christ points to them as examples of God's care.

Birds, from the time their eggs are laid until their young are fully grown, must fight the foes that threaten their treasures. Squirrels and jays destroy their eggs; snakes and hawks kill their young. In the autumn food falls, and most birds have to migrate. On the way southward they are beset with peril from exhausting flights, uncertain food supplies, birds of prey, sudden storms, and murderous guns. They run a similar gantlet when they return to us in the spring. But they come back in full song, and Christ points to them as examples of the Heavenly Father's care.

In caring for us, God uses the means that make the strongest manhood. To expect Him to keep us in ease, without testing our faith, proving our courage, enlarging our sympathies, or deepening our love, and without bringing into our lives the hardships, disappointments, doubts, fears, failures, successes, joys, and triumphs that develop the strongest and noblest character, is to forget that the highest creature of God is man, and that the noblest thing in man is tested character.

GRACELAND COLLEGE.

In the realm of politics it is quite frequent for a platform to be presented by a candidate. This is usually done before election, however, and one ordinarily needs a platform on which to get into office. The work of Graceland College is not political in any sense, nor are we a "candidate" for the position. In fact, had we seen it coming in time we might have been able to dodge, but now having not only been elected, but also "inaugurated," it is a good time to lay down a platform of work and purposes.

Several, referring to a speech made at the conference of 1905, have asked us how we have happened to change so much towards the college; as, first to get on the board of trustees and now to assume a greater responsibility of a president. In the first place, we do not claim unchangeability is only a virtue when combined with infallibility; hence we should take the utmost pleasure in changing a position when it is found to be mistaken, and we hope we will always have the courage to do so. In the second place, and purely incidentally, in 1905 we merely claimed that the church had a right to run the college or to close it, and we are still of the same opinion. But we take no special pride, that this is a fact, but merely state it as a fact. We did not then and do not now say it should be closed.

We are entering this work on that distinct platform, that the college belongs to the church, and not to the board of trustees or the president of the college. What is past cannot be changed. The future and the present are alone open for progressive work. The past is only important as giving us assistance in directing the future course of the work. Our first and best allegiance is due the church, and then to the college as a part of the church work. Hence, we hope to see the college run in such a manner as both to deserve and secure your enthusiastic interest and support.

We believe we are approaching an era in the work of the church that will require trained minds to a greater extent and in a different way than has been the case in the recent past. In our own institution we can and should direct the instruction, so as to get at the same time such training as is given and is readily accredited in other institutions of learning, and also such philosophical and religious training, as will best fit our students for service in life and to the church. Our educational standards should be placed as high as possible, and maintained there. The work of the college should be extended as rapidly as the needs of the church may deem advisable. We are considering the advisability of taking up extension work, or work with those who are not able to take their studies in residence at the college, but would like to know what demand there is for work of this kind. The expense to the church must be considered, as well as the good to be gained.

As to finances, we are planning to treat the present indebtedness separately so that the tuition and regular income for the year may be first applied to meeting current expenses. Bishop Kelley plans to raise means to assist us in materially reducing the present debt, and this money shall be so used and so reported. It is regrettable that the college cannot be run without a deficit, but at the same time we realize that all schools of college rank must be supported from outside, either by taxation, or by endowments.

As many departments as possible should be and shall be, placed on a self-sustaining basis. With the college work proper this is, however, impossible, as it has not been done and is not done in any institution of college rank. For this reason the support of the church will be needed, but to that support of the church there should be and will be the response on behalf of the board and executive officers of the college of reducing as rapidly as possible the debt by means raised for that purpose and running the work of the college in such a manner as to keep within the annual donations. It is your privilege and you have a right to know how it is being run and why. If you know anything you think needs correcting, let us know; that is what we are here for' to try to run the college for the very best interests of the body and to measure its value by its service to the body and to society.

And in asking for your support, we are not asking for money alone but even more for your interest, and by interest we do not mean blind support, but we will gladly receive intelligent criticism if furnished to us where it will do some good; rather than elsewhere where it cannot help.

We are not convinced that it is best for everyone to come to Graceland College, but we do wish to increase our enrollment and help all whom we possibly can. It is not simply the interest of Graceland College we have at heart, but that of our young people as well, and where work can clearly be done to better advantage elsewhere we shall not hesitate to do so. One member of the faculty, Prof. C. L. Woods' class, has been on leave of absence at the University of Wisconsin the past year, and another, Prof. F. M. McDowell, will be away this year, at least, at Clark University in order to take advanced work under Dr. G. Stanley Hall. Others of our young people have been encouraged, and have been and are taking more advanced work in other schools. It is the good of the church in the long run, not the making of a showing for this year, and it is the good of the church and not simply to make a special showing of one department at the expense of others that we have at heart. We want those who wish to do serious work and to secure tangible results to prepare themselves for larger service.

We want your moral support; we want your attendance and interest if we can help you or any of yours; we want in due course your financial support and such an expression from you and from you through the conference as to how you will help the college run. We enter upon the work with no set prejudices, but with open mind to consider the best good of all.

The number desiring to work their way through college is so large that we are forced to permit only those to enroll in the industrial department, who need the work in order to attend, and even then the demands are so large that we cannot accommodate all. The board is continually hoping to be able to enlarge the industrial facilities, so as to admit all those who want to work their way through, as well as all those who must. The Sunday school and the Z. R. L. S. have appropriated a limited amount to help needy students through college by loaning them money to be repaid after the close of school work. This work is in charge of special committees, but we hope to see its power increased for good. Business notes and proper securities will have to be given but in such a way as to make it really helpful to those worthy and desirous of having such assistance.

We look for a large enrollment this year. In fact, the college department will certainly show a marked increase. With each one to help, the burden will not be heavy on any one.

If the support of the church is continued even as it has been in the past it will be possible gradually to reduce the present indebtedness. No new buildings or extensive improvements should be undertaken without the approval of the church.

If it succeeds it will be because the student body is aroused, because the Alumni Association is giving the institution their support; because the church is becoming interested and is giving not only money, but moral support and enthusiasm as well. It will take all of this as well as earnest work by the board of trustees and the faculty of the institution, and the support of the general church offices to make it all it should be. The value of the college is not to be measured by its buildings, but must eventually be determined by its student body and graduates, and by its influence for higher educational standards, using that word in the best sense of intelligence, in other words, light and truth.

PASTORALS.

INDIANAPOLIS, JUNE 5.

To the Saints of Southern Indiana District, Greeting:

Having been appointed bishop's agent for our district, we take this means of acquainting its membership with the needs of the work, and this is an age which deals with facts and figures, we desire to present a few for your consideration.

At the May, 1912, conference, an appeal was made to the minister in charge for more missionary labor, and in harmony with that appeal we have been given three missionaries to labor in our district during the entire year, and two or three others to assist as the needs of the work may demand. We are all aware of the fact that each and every one of us are called into partnership with God and Christ in their great business, the salvation of the world, we are all to be co-laborers in this great project; but do we ever stop to consider the magnitude and importance of it. Southern Indiana, by reason of our residence, is especially entrusted to our care, and we will have to render an accounting of the efforts we have put forth for its salvation.

Our district comprises some 49 counties, with a population of about 1,226,000; also Louisville Ky., with its 224,000, making about a million and half of souls. To accomplish this great task we have engaged, or covenanted to support three missionaries in the field constantly during the year, and we have agreed to support their families while they are laboring for us in the interest of this great work which we all love so well.

Then we have the poor and needy, the unfortunate ones, to care for; and in looking over the field we have estimated that it will cost the district about $100 per month to meet its obligations this year, $1,200 for the year; and while it may look like a large amount, it is not so large when divided among our 400 or more membership; about $3.00 per year per member, a little over 25 cents per month; and, remember, this will keep three missionaries active in the field. We venture the statement that there are a half dozen churches in either Louisville or Indianapolis paying one man double this amount to tickle their itching ears with fables; and a score or more in either place where one man is getting as much, or more, than we ask for the entire work of our district.

Saints, keep these facts and figures before you! Meditate upon them; digest them thoroughly, and in the light of God's revealed word to us, even at the last general conference arise to our duty, impart of our substance to the progress of the work, loosen the hands of God's servants, the missionaries, and we will have a brighter and better year in Southern Indiana District than we have ever known before.

There are many whose names are not yet recorded on our books; we would like to see every name there. All amounts sent in will be promptly receipted, and will be welcomed, be they large or small. Let us manifest our faith by our works and leave the results to our heavenly Father. Trusting that this may be a banner year for the district.

I remain

Your servant for Christ,

Chas. H. Fish, Bishop's agent,

The superintendent of Sunday schools and vice-president of Religio reported the conventions of those organizations and stated the future outlook for both was encouraging. The condition of the New Albany Branch was referred to the district president for investigation. The committee on new district record reported progress and was continued. The resolution of the preceding conference pertaining to members uniting with the nearest branch was amended to read "most convenient branch." The resolution pertaining to reports of the local priesthood was rescinded and the following substituted: "Resolved, That all members of the priesthood who fall to report for two consecutive conferences, without sufficient cause, may be silenced by action of the district conference." On motion general conference resolution No. 312, pertaining to ordinations was endorsed and its provisions extended to cover the Aaronic priesthood in our district. The officers elected for the ensuing year, were: president, J. R. McLain; vice-president, Chas. H. Fish; secretary and treasurer, Edwin Perry. The secretary-treasurer was authorized to correspond with the president of each branch and ask for a collection, upon 5 cents per member, to create a fund to finance the reunion. One of the best features of the conference was the priesthood meeting, at which 13 members of the various offices of the priesthood were present, and much valuable information and instruction was received. The services were well attended and the preaching by Elder R. C. Russell was very instructive and well received. The next conference will be held with the Indianapolis Branch, at call of district president and the minister in charge.

PRAYERS AND ALMS.

Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.—Acts 10:4.

These angelic words spoken to that righteous gentile, Cornelius, associating alms with prayers as the reason for the wonderful manifestation which led him into a greater knowledge of God and a fuller obedience to his law, are worthy of consideration.

Alms, a term which covers all good works, are associated with prayer by Christ, and very properly too for they are so closely related that one would hardly be effectual without the other. It is only when alms are done to the honor and glory of God that they are able to gain his favor and acknowledgment, and the life that is void of such good works will not be the one to receive immediate recognition when the verbal petition is offered.

The Lord mentions the practice of some to make great display of their deeds of kindness and charity, looking for the praise of men, and of some who for the same reason offered long prayers in the most public places, but of all these he said: "They have their reward." Neither alms nor prayers performed with any other than a true purpose can bring a reward from "the Father who seeth in secret."

David said: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." To give alms and offer prayers with a view of securing praise and honor of men are based upon an improper motive constituting iniquity which will bar the divine answer. Isaiah wrote to the "sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity," to "bring no more vain oblations," telling them that their incense was an abomination to the Lord, their new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, and even the solemn meeting, in consequence of which the Lord said: "When ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear."

No amount of good deeds will compensate for sin while the heart is untrue; no number of prayers will secure the divine sanction so long as the soul cherishes evil; but an honest heart having a pure motive will impel both alms and prayers to God and invite recognition. In the case of Cornelius the alms were as effectual as his prayers because they sprang from a pure heart and were prompted by a true love for man. They could not be ignored by God, and coming to him with fervent petitions for greater good he could not refuse an answer.

Prayers which have no good works nor any intention of good works accompanying them, have little justification for reaching the throne of God. The petition of the sinner who stood afar off and said: "God, be merciful to me a sinner," had justification because, while it was without previous good works, there was a recognition of sinfulness and a desire for righteousness, and an intent to live the better life. The heart was true, Saul of Tarsus too, did evil works but his intent was good. He thought he was doing God service, and it was because of his integrity that God miraculously called him into the way in which his works should harmonize with his desire.

The man who is unwilling to comply with the law of God when he has been made acquainted with it will find it difficult to receive answer to his prayers, for "he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination." Prov. 28:9. This shows the necessity for obedience and good works being associated with prayer in order to have divine approval. It brings us very near to the teaching of James that faith without works is dead, and the teaching of Paul regarding works that "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Rom. 14:23.

The man who lives up to the light which he has received, fearing God and giving alms with devotions and prayers like Cornelius, will be the one who will find access to the throne of mercy and grace, and God will lead him into the greater light, where his life will be made still more useful to the greater blessing of humanity and the honor of God. Perfection of character is not the divine requirement for recognition and blessing, but purity of purpose, and when that purpose is shown by previous good works it is a guarantee that the recognition and blessing will be granted.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 5.

THE ATONEMENT.

That Adam, through transgression, fell from a condition of peace and happiness to a condition of death, entailing a like heritage upon all mankind, made necessary an atonement is held by the saints as a Scriptural belief. Since death was passed upon all men, it becomes apparent that any deliverance from it must come from someone of superior power to man, and hence the statement of the Book of Mormon that "it must needs be an infinite atonement."

This infinite atonement made through Jesus Christ who laid down his life that he might bring about the resurrection of all men and make possible a return to God. Without such infinite atonement, death, "the first judgment which came upon man, must needs have remained to an endless duration," and "if the flesh should rise no more, our spirits must become subject to that angel who fell from before the presence of the eternal God, and became the devil."

The atonement renders possible the resurrection of all men in harmony with Paul's statement that "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15:22. In this way men are redeemed from the physical death and made free from the power of the great enemy of mankind who would otherwise have held them in eternal bondage. The redemption from spiritual death however is made dependent upon the co-operation of men individually, and which comes "because of repentance," and the "time cometh when none shall be found blameless before God, except it be little children, only through repentance and faith on the name of the Lord God Omnipotent."

Little children having been redeemed through the atonement from the physical death, being without sin are also thereby redeemed from spiritual death, and should they die in their innocence are saved in the celestial kingdom of God. "And where there is no condemnation, the mercies of the Holy One of Israel have claim upon them, because of the atonement . . . and they are restored to that God who gave them breath." 2 Nephi 6:53. "Little children are holy, being sanctified through the atonement of Jesus Christ." D. C. 74:3.

Thus appears the necessity for Christ's coming to the earth, his death, and resurrection, and the gospel plan by obedience to which men are prepared for the full redemption made possible through Christ's atonement. Without that atonement no man's body could be redeemed from the grave, nor his Spirit from the bondage of Satan, and man must have forever remained in a state of physical and spiritual death.

A DIFFERENT VIEW.

With an impersonal God, an immortal Christ, and no personal devil, the Christian Science view of the atonement must of necessity be quite different from the foregoing. As has been previously done we let Science and Health speak for itself.

"Atonement is the exemplification of man's unity with God, whereby he reflects divine Truth, Life, and Love." p. 323.

This definition puts every man's atonement in his own hands to work out for himself regardless of the Son of God, and this is further shown in the following:

Jesus aided in reconciling man to God, only by giving man a truer sense of Love, the divine Principle of his teachings. p. 324.

The efficacy of the crucifixion lies in the practical effect and goodness it demonstrated for mankind. p. 329.

The material blood of Jesus was no more efficacious to cleanse from sin, when it was shed upon "the accursed tree" than it was flowing in his veins. p. 330.

One sacrifice, however great, is insufficient to pay the debt of sin. p. 328.

It is vain and selfish to stand still and pray, expecting because of another's goodness, suffering, and triumph, that we shall thus reach his harmony and reward. p. 326.

Final deliverance from error . . . is neither reached through paths of flowers, nor pinning one's faith to another's vicarious effort. p. 327.

In these quotations the author sets forth the view that Jesus lived in unity with God, which is "divine principle," but the at-one-ment, including the shedding of his blood and his resurrection, have no further effect upon mankind than to set an example of love, by which every man can attain unity with this "Principle" called God. In Christian Science Christ's "vicarious effort" brought no "final deliverance from error;" the shedding of his "material blood" had no efficacy "to cleanse from sin;" his great sacrifice could not pay the debt of sin. He was only a man who reflected "divine Truth, Life, and Love," by his "exemplification of man's unity with God."

This doctrine of the atonement is not strange when it is considered that evil is not real but merely "the absence of Good" and that "there is no power in evil." p. 80. "The nothingness of evil" is advocated, (p. 189), and on page 206 it is said "there is no evil." With no reality to evil, there cannot be much reality to the "fall of man, so that there is no need of "an infinite atonement" but every man can put himself into harmony with God, which is defined as "Principle."

It is further said that "the atonement is a hard problem in theology; but its more reasonable explanation is, that suffering is an error of sinful sense which Truth destroys," (p. 328) by which we conclude that Jesus being free from sin and in perfect accord with Truth, knew no suffering either in life or in death.

The contrast in these doctrines is clear, the one holding to the fall of man by which he lost his dominion in the earth, bringing both spiritual death, (banishment from God) and physical death, (separation of body and spirit) which dual death extended to all the posterity of Adam, and must have been eternal except for the coming into this world of one superior to men, Jesus who was not a son of Adam but the Son of God, and who by entering into the regions of death was able to deliver mankind. By his power he will ultimately restore all men to immortal life in the flesh, but the restoration to spiritual life in the presence of God is brought about through the gospel which requires the co-operation of men in fitting themselves for that condition. Jesus is the author of the gospel and it is through his sacrifice that it is made effectual and operative. Sin and death are acknowledged, but Christ is superior to both and will ultimately destroy them.

The other doctrine of Christian Science declares against the reality of evil, the necessity of a divinely begotten Son of God, his resurrection as an immortal Being, and dispenses with the need of his power of redemption. It holds that health and life are fully within the power of humanity, and Mind as it exists in humanity is supreme for "Mind is God."

When Phillips Brooks was going abroad, says the Spectator in the Outlook, a friend rallied him about discovering a new religion and bringing it back with him. You had better be careful, Bishop, he said; it might be difficult to get a new religion through the custom house, I think not, observed Mr. Brooks. Any religion popular enough to import would have no duties attached to it.—The Truth.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

A touch of real summer weather such as is common to the upper Mississippi Valley has reached this region, and while it is somewhat depressing to some, it is just what is essential for many kinds of crops especially the corn. Rain is much needed.

Elder F. M. Sheehy was the speaker in the morning at the church and Elder H. O. Smith in the evening, both speaking upon the great subject of Faith. We were confirmed in a previous view that the subject of Faith is an inexhaustible one. The afternoon prayermeeting was fairly well attended and brought strength and encouragement to many. The Sunday school is maintaining its interest under the superintendency of Bro. D. J. Kral and his assistants.

At 4:15 the Woman's Auxiliary held its meeting and discussed the relationship of the present styles of women's dress and morals—a subject which has gained some prominence of late throughout the civilized nations.

The saints of Independence and the community at large owe a full vote of appreciation to Bro. William Cook the faithful care-taker of the church and its environs for the attractive array of flowers and plants which adorn the church yard and the general appearance of neatness over the lawns. Through Bro. Cook's diligent labors the church home is made a place of delight and joy as to earthly things, giving an environment favorable to the enjoyment of the still higher spiritual blessings.

On Tuesday morning a meeting was held of the children and workers of the Vacation Bible School at the church in charge of G. E. Harrington. 48 were enrolled and it was said that the prospects were for at least 250. An excellent talk was given by Bro. LaRue and about nine offered their services as teachers. The school will not begin till July.

The general priesthood quarterly meeting was held Monday evening at which Bro. C. D. Carson gave a lecture on Physiology and Hygiene followed by general discussion. The brethren took a lively interest in the subject and many good points were brought out.

Members returning from the Religio convention held at Perle Springs last Saturday and Sunday report an excellent convention. A good number of delegates were present.

An excellent concert was given on Tuesday evening by the Sunday school orchestra under the direction of Bro. Arthur Mills. It was assisted by the choir, and several violin numbers were rendered by Prof. Paul Rader of Kansas City. This is the closing work of Bro. Mills who soon goes to take charge of the church work at Denver.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

The sun rose in all his splendor, on the morning of June 15th, and gave new lease to life, inspiring a new determined effort to live nearer, and do more for the Lord's work.

Sunday school had an attendance of 182, about 100 short of the usual attendance, the reason for this can be more easily explained by the absent ones. The collection was $5.60.

The presiding teacher, Bro. P. A. Sherman was the speaker for the morning service, and it must be said for him, he did well. Timely admonitions were given, and if heeded will redound to the glory of God, in that a greater unity will prevail.

At the evening service Bro. W. E. Peak was the speaker, and one will be sure that he is in condition to assist in the work for Zion before he attempts to do so for we were given to understand that without the necessary qualifications as described in Doctrine and Covenants; the work had better be left to some one else.

A social was held on Monday evening by the "Sunshine Band" at the corner of College and Hayward streets which proved to be a success.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

The morning of the 8th, Sr. S. R. Burgess gave a splendid talk to the Sunday school, comparing the young people of ancient Israel with those of today, and admonishing our young to not do as those of old, and be led away by the pleasures of the world. Another feature of the session was a song—171 of Zion's Praises, by the teachers.

Bro. Reeves delivered the morning sermon reading from 1st John 5th chapter.

Bro. Hoxie our general chorister materially assisted with his beautiful violin solos, also his playing accompanied by the organ was appreciated by the singers.

At the 6:30 o'clock prayer service the ordination of five of our young men took place. Bro. Chas. Tanner was ordained a priest, R. Lloyd, priest, H. C. Burgess, priest, W. Cowlishaw, teacher, and Frank Smith, deacon.

At our regular branch branch business meeting the following were elected: president, T. J. Elliott; presiding priest, G. S. Trowbridge; presiding teacher, Geo. Reeves; presiding deacon, R. Lloyd; library board, Anna DeJong; correspondent, the undersigned.

Bro. Archibald preached the evening sermon June 8th, reading from 1 Cor. 1:1, 18 his text being the 21st verse.

The district conference, Sunday school, and Religio conventions were held in Landsdowne, June 14th and 15th; Have not heard particulars.

Sr. Holesworth has passed through a very serious operation and is to remain in the hospital for some time. She is truly a sister of trials and we should remember her in sincere prayer for an early recovery and that she be spared for her son and daughter. She has been helped through administration and we trust God will comfort and give her faith.

Bro. Betts, Sr., of Belleville, though some better is still in need of our faith and prayers.

Elizabeth Patterson.

KANSAS CITY, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

Since the last report from this branch we have increased in numbers but not in attendance. Those of our number whom the cold weather of last winter affected seem to suffer in the same way from the heat now, but those who do make the effort to meet together often are blessed and rewarded for the effort as our meetings are all interesting and instructive, especially the prayer meeting. The will of the Lord is frequently made known to us in the gifts of prophecy and tongues and the good Spirit is always with us in our meeting.

We have gained eight by baptism and ten by letter but quite a few of our members have moved away, especially some of our active workers, but the other branches in the city will gain by their presence as active workers will make their presence known and felt, those who want a field of labor can find it anywhere.

The first Sunday of this month was given to the children as their day, and was a pleasant and profitable one. In the afternoon five children was baptized and the confirmation that followed was beautiful. A splendid program was rendered in the evening by the primaries, only six adults taking part. Bro. E. W. Lloyd and Sr. Margaret Robertson will continue their excellent work in presiding over the Sunday school while Bro. Will Hott and Sr. Tyra Lloyd will act in the same capacity for the Religio.

Quite a few are sick and the elders are busy every evening almost, going to administer, several have received great blessings from the Lord through this ordinance. Cottage prayer meetings are held where the members are not able to come to the house of worship and in this way many are cheered and comforted.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Bro. F. Lamprey has located his family in Oakland preparatory to himself taking a business trip to China and Japan to purchase lumber peculiar to those countries for a manufacturing establishment here; he will be absent about four months.

In the city the morning speaker was Bro. G. S. Lincoln and at night Bro. J. A. Saxe the pastor occupied—who also visited Irvington in the morning and held a spiritual meeting with the remnant residing there. In Oakland the pastor spoke morning and evening; the services were good as were the auxiliaries.

Bro. Paul Hanson spent a few days in the city, spending Sunday at Windsor and Santa Rosa, the latter place where he held a debate with Eld. Love of the non-progs. He started east Monday before we knew he was on our coast. We didn't like it Paul but we will try and "folerate" it.

Bro. C. A. Parkin was at Windsor and Santa Rosa Sunday in gospel work. Bro. Harry Lupper sang for the San Jose saints Sunday cheering them with his musical talent. Provision has been made for a supply of the best water in the country for our reunion at Irvington.

Bro. C. W. Deuel recently baptized two at Delano. Bro. Archie Wiles and wife also blessed two bright children. Bro. Wiles is a promising adjunct to the work.

QUINDARO BRANCH, KANSAS CITY, KAS.

We have been having some good sermons by visiting brethren. Three weeks ago Elder Essig from the Second Kansas City Branch delivered a fine discourse. Last Sunday morning Bro. Naoy occupied.

In the evening the children's program was rendered. A large audience was present and the program although short was good. The church was decorated with roses and asparagus.

Monday evening the 19th the teacher's quorum met. Bro. George E. Harrington being present.

Bro. C. Barron is starting up the work again at 19th and Tracy, among our colored brethren. The present outlook indicates a large ingathering.

Bro. P. A. Harrison who has been away almost a year is back again; the children are much interested in his short talks at the Religio.

Our pastor Bro. D. E. Hough in doing some preaching at the Market Square with good interest.

Two weeks ago at the morning hour, our presiding teacher gave us some very good instructions.

Bro. James Kaplinger has been doing some outside preaching with good liberty. We have been having some sickness but thanks to our heavenly Father all are getting better.

Dr. Theo. F. Clark of the Chiropractic Institute. Will give a lecture at our church Thursday night of this week on the subject of Scientific Discoveries.

Sr. Carrie Baron.

SHALL WE QUIT?

At a regular meeting of the local branch of The Woman's League of the National Daily Vacation Bible School Association, held in the Y. W. C. A. rooms, Kansas City, Mo., June 9, 1913, the following resolution was offered by the executive committee and unanimously carried by the league. "Resolved that membership in this league be refused to members of the Mormon, or the Latter Day Saints Church."

Brother O. K. Fry, President of the Men's League, of Independence, Mo., was present with myself when this action was taken. Brother Fry, had a few minutes previous, upon invitation from the chair, given an account of the Bible school work in our church in Philadelphia, where he had co-laborated with the other churches in the National League.

One week previous to this date Brother W. E. LaRue had presented an intensely interesting account of his excellent work in the Vacation Bible school during his pastorate in New York.

When the local was organized the nominating committee had placed my name on the Men's Advisory committee and I had been accepted as such with others. I have withdrawn my name from this committee. Membership on this committee does not require membership in the League. The fee for membership was returned to me.

After this meeting, a lady told us that the women of all the evangelical churches were studying the Latter Day Saints religion and using as a text book, "Mormonism the Islam of America," by Rev. Bruce Kinney. This lady said, "The women of Kansas City are more wide awake in the cause of Christ than those of other cities where the Latter Day Saints had been allowed to participate in the work of the League." She said there were two principals upon which our rejection was based; these principals are, "Present direct revelation from God," and "Joseph Smith as a prophet of God." She also told us that she had two daughters, who had applied to the League for positions as teachers in the Bible schools; but that she would not want them to teach in any school where there were Latter Day Saints.

John C. Grainger.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Are the Latter Day Saints as a body opposed to the preaching of the gospel by women?

Neither the Bible nor other authoritative Scriptures of the church make any provision for women ministering in any official capacity in the gospel, and the church has never seen fit to appoint women for that work. We do not mean by this however that there is nothing that women can do in the church, for "all are called according to the gifts and callings of God unto them," and there are many lines of work that only the mothers and sisters can do as they should be done, but these do not lie in the work of the priesthood in preaching and ministering in the ordinances.

What is the authority for priests in your church?

The immediate authority is the same as for the existence of the church itself, viz., the command of God. A revelation given in 1830 providing for the organization of the church named the office as one to have place in the church and defined the duties belonging thereto. See Doctrine and Covenants 17:8,10. Another reason is that under the general rule followed by this church that a man must be called of God to justify ordination to various offices men are frequently called to the office of priest by the Holy Ghost. Dr. Smith in his Bible dictionary says that it was held "that the old classification of the high-priests, priests, and Levites, was reproduced in the bishops, priests, and deacons of the Christian church," which gives us to understand that priests were in the New Testament church. He says further that "Timothy and Titus had probably no distinctive title, but it is impossible to read the epistles addressed to them without seeing that they had an authority superior to that of the ordinary bishops or priests." This associates the office of priest with that of bishop, just as the revelations to the church do, which make the bishopric the presidency of the Aaronic priesthood which includes the priests. The failure of the New Testament to mention the priest's office by name is not proof that the office did not exist in the ancient church.

Will the earth be cleansed by fire when Christ comes? If so will it again be cleansed by fire at the end of the millennial and little season?

The earth will undergo a partial change at the coming of Christ, but we do not understand that it will have its cleansing by fire until after the thousand years and little season. The many references to the burning at Christ's coming refer to the general destruction of the wicked by the various judgments mentioned in other places as famine, sickness, war, earthquake, fire and tempest. Read Isa. 11:4-9; 24:1-15; Isa. 6:15, 16.

What is meant by the statement in Doctrine and Covenants 64:5 "for he that is tithed shall not be burned"?

The burning comes by the judgments which will fall upon the wicked and disobedient. Those who accept the gospel and comply with the whole law will assemble with the people of God being worthy of a place in Zion where they will escape the judgments. The Lord also says in the paragraph referred to that "I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon," showing that the temporal salvation through obedience and gathering is by the voluntary effort of each individual.

In the statement: "In his humiliation his judgment was taken away," whose judgment is referred to. See Acts 8:33. Please explain.

Christ's. This Scripture was found in Isa. 53:8 where it reads: "He was taken from prison and from judgment," showing that it has reference to Christ being denied a legal trial at the time he was put to death.

What is meant by the wilderness in which Jacob is to flourish as mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants 49:5?

It seems to be a figurative term referring to Israel's present barrenness in the knowledge and righteousness of God. The scattered Israel are to be brought to a knowledge of the gospel and through obedience will bring forth the fruits of righteousness, and are to be abundantly blessed of God.

CORRESPONDENCE

JAEPPER, Tenn., May 28.

Editor Ensign—I thought perhaps a few words from C. L. might interest some that read the ENSIGN. I left home at Independence, Mo., the 15th of this month for my field of labor, the southeastern mission, stopping first at Donelson, Ky., where I held a week's meeting, but was rained out the last night. I preached five times to small crowd with excellent liberty, being cared for while there by Dr. J. M. Skaggs and family, who are noble saints indeed and who are always ready to do all they can to build up this great latter day work. They did not forget that it takes money for the elders to travel from one point to another. God will reward them.

It is said we must ask if we receive, knock and it shall be opened unto us, but this does not mean to ask for money, free-will offerings must be given when we feel the impression of the Spirit teaching us to give. God knows better just when one of his servants needs money than any one else. I have never suffered yet for a dollar since I began to travel as a missionary, neither have I peddled my wants and needs to the people where I labor.

From Donelson I came here, where I labored years ago, and found the few saints that live here, seventeen in number, the most of them living as true saints of God, and the Lord is blessing them with his Spirit, keeping them strong in the faith. They too are only too glad to get the opportunity to assist the elders in their work. I shall never forget their kindness to me in all my labors here among them. I began meetings here last Sunday and have preached five times with good liberty, and some interest among outsiders. The saints have been strengthened in the faith of the latter day work. Will start tomorrow for Mobile, Alabama, where arrangements have been made for me to begin meetings Saturday the 31st. This is Bro. H. E. Moler's field and I trust he may pay the saints here a visit this summer some time.

Arrangements are on foot here to purchase a tent another year to help the missionary in his labors. This is a wise move, if it is carried out. It is hard to reach the people here. I trust the saints in Zion will remember that much is depending upon them in the manner of receiving new saints moving to Zion. In my two years of labor here in Zion I met with numbers of saints very much disheartened on account of the cold shoulder turned toward them by some of the saints. We should be always ready to show a warm feeling for a saint of God, and we ought to treat all as brethren and sisters in the faith.

People are gathering to Zion from different countries, their ways are different, but in Zion we are expected to become one. Why not begin to reach that point now? May we all learn our duty and labor together to build up Zion. Am still in the faith.

C. L. Snow.

MAPLETON, Kan., June 4.

Editor Ensign—I met with the saints at Ft. Scott, Kas., May 17th and 18th and had good meetings and enjoyed the stay with them. We went from there to Heffer, Kas., preached thirteen times at a school house about five miles out. There is a little band of saints, seven in all, who did all they could to make the meeting a success; we had good crowds and good interest.

The saints with the help of their neighbors are running a Sunday school and are getting the work before the people. I was called home Monday to preach the funeral of Sr. Elithorpe's father.

Summer has come again with her intense heat and the pass word is "we need rain. I will say to those that want preaching we will do the best we can do to reach you. May Lord bless all is my prayer.

Your brother,
Lee Quick.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 29th.

Dear Ensign—I suppose the saints would like to hear from this part of the vineyard and what we are doing. I arrived here May the 3d, preached at Springfield, Sunday the 4th, and started a meeting, six miles from here at a school house where I held for a week and baptized 3 fine people—a man and his two daughters. Since that time I have made a new opening in Springfield at a union church we have had good attention and the meeting seems to be a success so far.

From this place I have had two invitations to preach other places at outsiders' homes. Several of the outsiders have asked me to visit them in their homes, one hotel man has invited me to eat at his place. So the Lord has blessed the work so far done and I yet have two places at which to hold meetings and they have sent for me to come back where I baptized three. I don't know if the water will be bothered again or not. I have met some fine saints here and they have helped me in my meetings and have treated me so kindly. I will ask the prayers of the dear saints.

Your brother in bonds,
J. W. Dubose.

KENNETT, Mo., May 31.

Dear Ensign—There has not been any preaching done here by our elders since Bro. C. J. Spurlock and a Bro. Smith preached a series of sermons ten years ago. And there are no saints here except myself. And as I am alone I have no place to shelter an elder, yet through my feeble efforts I have gained favor of others who will feed and shelter them. And we want to get an elder to come to Kennett some time after July 15 and hold some meetings for us. We have two openings here at Kennett for preaching and other places may be opened up after the elder gets here. So we want him to come prepared to stay until he has done all the good possible.

I also want to hear from elders in the St. Louis District if any of them are in correspondence with Mr. Joe Puckett of Shipley, Mo. Mr. Puckett is a man that I have talked to and furnished reading matter and since he moved to Shipley he tells me he has met a Mr. Smith who is a Latter Day Saint D. S. and they have the promise of two elders from St. Louis in August of course if these elders are of the Reorganized faction, all right but I don't want them to be caught by the Utah elders.

Your brother in the faith
G. H. Brush.

LANCASTER, Wis., June 7.

Dear Ensign—Just closed meetings here. Five precious souls were added to the church and the saints old and new are rejoicing in the great latter day work.

Have felt blessed in the work and am hopeful for the future. Expect to go from here to Soldiers' Grove, Wis., where district conference will be held June 14th and 15th.
Lester Wildermuth.

BENTON, Ill., June.

Editor Ensign—While reading the many interesting letters in the ENSIGN, I felt a desire to tell its readers of God's mercy and goodness to me in bringing me out of darkness into his marvelous light. Twelve years ago, being only a child, I joined the Free Baptist church. For a while I was satisfied, but upon hearing the testimony of my brothers and sisters as to the wonderful power God had given them, I became dissatisfied. I would ask myself, Why would God be so partial? Knowing I had sought as earnestly as one could, and could feel no change. Many times did I weep over my condition and ask the Father to give me light and understanding, and lead me in the right way, for I felt I was not right, although I supposed the church to be alright. I am glad to say that he did lead me, and gave me the light of the gospel. My prayer is that we may walk therein.

My husband is priest and is trying to do his duty. He talks of the gospel wherever he goes. Sometimes it does not receive a very hearty welcome, even among friends and relatives, yet we are instructed to warn our neighbors. We have three little girls entrusted to our care and we are trying to bring them up under the gentle influence of the gospel that they may in after years be workers for the Master.

Ever hopeful for the redemption of Zion.
Your sister in Christ,
Mrs. Anna Roberson.

HUGOTON, Kan., June 10.

Dear Ensign—Wife and I left Oakland, Calif., May 26th, stopped at Los Angeles one day and another day in Salt Lake City. Arrived here June 2d. Am visiting my mother, my two brothers, and two of my sisters from whom I have been separated eleven years. Am having a good hearing here. Had a pleasant trip from Australia to America. Bro. and Sr. Pitt joined us at Papete.

In bonds,
A. C. Barnore.

OTTUMWA, Iowa, June 3.

Editor Ensign—Would say to the saints of Iowa, if they know of any German settlement where we could get a place to hold a series of meetings let me know and I will gladly come. Address me, Box 225, Montrose, Iowa.

Have been holding a series of meetings at Bear Creek, about five miles southwest of Ottumwa, Iowa, with fair success. Some are almost persuaded and will join soon I think.

In gospel bonds,
C. C. Joehuk.

News From Omaha.—The sombre heaps of ruin that are silent testimonies of the Easter tornado, are slowly disappearing and new, and in some places more substantial buildings are being erected to take the place of the destroyed ones. There is still much of the destroyed districts that have not been touched. These deserted, aged-looking heaps, with the grass and weeds growing tall about them, are frightful reminders of the terror of that awful night.

The church was soon repaired so that the services were continued the next Sunday after the disaster. It is still a somewhat sorry looking object, all mud-spattered and patched, but we will soon realize what wonders a couple of coats of good white paint can work upon such a homely aspect.

The branch certainly appreciated the generous donation from the General Religio Association. The gift of two hundred dollars went a long way toward lightening a heavy burden. Some of the Saints who sustained heavy losses have been considerably relieved by such assistance. The city relief committee, Saints and others were quite liberal.

The work in the Omaha Branch is prospering. An ever-increasing interest is being manifested among the Saints. Our prayer services are always good and occasionally the Spirit has instructed us in prophecy.

Sometime ago one of our young men suggested that we have an early morning prayer service at six o'clock. The idea met with favor, and after considering it we decided to try it one Friday morning. There were eighteen present and the meeting was very good. It was decided to make the meeting a regular weekly service; so every Friday at six in the morning we meet and enjoy an hours prayer and testimony meeting. Some have to leave for their work before it is over, but that is understood and it does not disturb the meeting.

Another very good meeting which is held every once in a while, is a men's meeting, held at different homes Sunday afternoons. Many important topics are informally discussed; and prayer is made the first feature of the meeting, and all present usually offer prayer. These meetings have been especially spiritual and have been a great help to many.

Four of our men, big and strong physically and spiritually were recently called to the ministry. This was welcome news to the branch for there is great need of a larger working force here.

The Sunday of June 8th, was Children's Day, and four were baptized. Large audiences attended all the services of the day. In the evening a Cantata was given by the Saints' choir of Council Bluffs and our choir, making a chorus of forty voices. Excellent talent was displayed. We have been shown the great possibilities along musical lines and the value of the choir work is becoming more and more evident.

Our Zion's League is busy raising funds to help pay the debt of the branch. The Sunday School shows good growth, and especially in the primary department. The junior and intermediate classes are all organized and much interest results. There is a constant increase in attendance in the Sunday School. We have a Bible normal class before the Sunday School hour, and a Book of Mormon normal class before the Religio Sunday evening.

We expect to start the Summer School work July 7th. We have some excellent instructors this year, and are expecting very good results and a much larger school.

Bro. J. A. Gillen, our minister in charge, is with us this week and has delivered two splendid sermons for us. There have been good, large audiences both nights. He will speak again Thursday night.

Our District Missionaries, Elders C. W. Prettyman, President of the District and W. E. Shakespeare, are in town and will hold meetings in the new district tent which has just been purchased. There is a good field for work in Omaha, and we hope the tent work will be very successful. The church choir will help with the music, and we are assured that by our united prayers and earnest efforts, we shall be able to do much good here. We hope to have the prayers of all Saints for the interest of the work in Omaha. Correspondent.

San Bernardino, Calif. June 12th.

Editor Ensign—We left St. Joseph, Mo., May 21st, in company with Bro. V. M. Goodrich, for California, our field of ' ' for this year. Arriving in Denver the afternoon of the 23rd, and spent the night with Bro. and Sr. Fishburn. Left next day for Salt Lake City, Utah, where we arrived Saturday about noon. Our worthy and esteemed Bro. A. M. Chase, met us at the depot with the "Missionary Auto" and conveyed us over the city where that man who brought such a stigma upon the fair name of the church, once held full sway as any monarch on earth.

Here we found a loyal and faithful little band of Saints energetically engaged in the gospel work, and trying to purchase a suitable place to which to invite erring Israel to come and partake of the bounties of God's great love, and in which to disabuse the mind of the uninformed concerning the true import of the latter day message. We attended Sunday School, and Bro. Goodrich preached the morning discourse, and in the afternoon we attended the Tabernacle services, immediately after which we went out on the street and headed off the crowd, and Bro. Chase and the writer preached to them. There were many questions asked which were promptly answered by Bro. Chase. The opposition is great, but there are many honest in heart. The writer preached the evening sermon at the meeting place of the Saints. There was a good spirit in all our meetings and we enjoyed ourselves very much.

Monday 25th, we left for San Francisco, where Bishop C. A. Parkin met us at the wharf, and took us home with him. Here we found in Bro. and Sister Parkin a servant and handmaid of the Lord in very deed. Sister Parkin acted as pilot to the different points of interest. Had a short, but pleasant visit in Oakland with Bro. and Sister J. M. Terry. Left on the 29th for our final destination, Los Angeles. Arriving there the 30th at 2:45 p. m. and found Bro. R. T. Cooper, Fred Adam, and Shade at the depot with an automobile, and were taken. Bro. Goodrich to Bro. Adam's home, and myself to Bro. Cooper's home, where we received a hearty welcome. The Saints here are noble-hearted, and received us with open arms—and purses. We began preparation immediately for our year's work feeling much encouraged with the outlook.

Before leaving St. Joseph, the Saints of the first branch sprang a happy surprise on me by clubbing together and presenting me with a complete new outfit of clothing. I wish to take this opportunity to say to them that I certainly appreciate this kindness, and hope that the confidence you have in me may never be shaken by any act of mine. When I know I have the good will and support of the Saints at home as expressed in your gift, it gives one new heart and courage to go forth and meet the world. I feel encouraged, and hope I may be able to accomplish a good work for my master. I ask an interest in the prayers of all the Saints to this end.

Your brother in the conflict,
Roy F. Sley.

Address San Bernardino, Calif. Gen. del.

Elmo, Ark., June 10th.

Dear Ensign—I have a desire to let the Saints know that we are alive in the work of the Master. We have just closed a grand series of meetings. Elder R. H. Counts has been with us for ten days holding forth the banner of Christ to a large and attentive congregation. He has created a great interest and made many friends for the cause, and had the privilege of troubling the waters of White River Sunday. We think there will be many more baptized in the near future.

Bro. Counts is an able defender of the work, and heartily recommend him to the Saints of Arkansas. He waked up a little nest of Campbellites on the fifth night of his services, here, and was challenged to debate, to which he consented and signed propositions, but has never seen any more of them since.

All the best element in this community are becoming tolerant of this work, and say it is wonderful. Bro. Counts goes from here to Bald Knob, Ark., where he expects to do more missionary work. He desires all who are in need of his services in this field will write him. His home address is Lagonia, Mo.

Your brother in the one faith,

IS POST MORTEM REPENTANCE A BIBLE DOCTRINE?

Sermon preached by S. W. L. SCOTT in Saints' chapel, Coldwater, Mich., by special arrangement and request of non-members.

REPORTED BY MESSRS. RALPH JACKSON AND RALPH SITTER.

Christian Friends, Ladies and Gentlemen:—We are assembled tonight in the interest of infinite love,—God's justice and equity in the administration of his government: with reference to the whole race. I express my serene gratification occasioned by the presence of this splendid audience.

I direct your attention at once to two inspired utterances, as comprehending the central thought around which my deductions are intended to cluster. The first of which is Hebrews 2:9. "But we see Jesus who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." The second text I read from 1 Timothy 2:5,6. "For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Jesus Christ; who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time."

It will not be denied, that "to taste death," is to die. To "taste death for every man," is to die for every man. So in the fact of tasting death, he did so for the race—all of Adam's posterity. He died for each as absolutely as if there had been but one. All in Adam die, all in Christ are made alive. This is the plan of justice to save. To "taste death for every man," is to give "himself a ransom for all." The testimony of this ransom—the gospel—is to "be borne to all in due time." The fall, and its consequences in Adam, the federal head, has its complement in the new workmanship in Christ by the gospel,—the federal and anti-federal heads. Hence, we read the language of the Apostle Paul in 1 Corinthians 15:21-23, "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead: For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming."

CHRIST A RANSOM FOR ALL.

The term "ransom" means a corresponding price, and as Christ was given as a ransom for all, he paid the corresponding price for all, hence, he is the "Redeemer." He lifts the mortgage from the race which Satan imposed, and redeems. The Greek word for "ransom"—antituton,—means paid the penalty due from another. The resurrection of all the race from the dead, is as much of a divine appointment, as "It is appointed unto men once to die," and after that the judgment.

In common parlance we all understand what the term "redeem" signifies. You young people used to play a game in which you employed the language: "Heavy, heavy hangs over your head. Fine, or superfine? Superfine. What shall I do to redeem it?" The answer was, so and so, and in order to redeem, or get back the piece of property hanging over your heads—in order to lift the blanket, so to speak, you had to do just as was decided,—pay the corresponding price—"fine or superfine," even though it was to plant a kiss on the lips of the homeliest girl in the crowd. Now in the divine economy, Jesus pays the price, and redeems all from the power of death.

ALL TO HEAR THE GOSPEL.

Christ as the ransom must "be testified to all in due time," either in this life or beyond the "great divide" we call death, or both. In Acts of Apostles, chapter 4, verse 12, we read: "This is the stone which was set at naught by you builders, which has become the head of the corner. And in none other is there salvation, for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved."—Revised version.

The Apostle Paul affirms: Romans 1:16, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." The gospel, is the testimony of the "ransom" to "be borne to all"—preached to all—"in due time," and it is also "the power of God unto salvation." "But," say you, "We have no right to say it will be preached beyond this life." Why not? If it is "the power of God," as affirmed by St. Paul, who has the right to limit God's power—the gospel—to this life? Where is the authority for the theory that "three score years and ten" obliterate the Almighty at the edge of the grave? Inspiration has asserted by the Apostle Paul that "this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior who will have all men to come to the knowledge of the truth, and be saved," (1 Tim. 2:4), and will God vindicate this assertion? Will he withhold the opportunity of coming to the knowledge of the truth? Can he withhold the opportunity of salvation, and vindicate the expression of his own will?

FORGIVENESS AFTER DEATH.

"But," say you, "There can be no pardon for sin after death." Who informed you thus? Now Jesus Christ is the proper authority, and we gladly appeal to him for instruction:—"Wherefore I say unto you, all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him neither in this world, neither in the world to come." Matthew 12:31,32. By implication all other sins but this permanent one—"sinning against the Holy Ghost"—"shall be forgiven either in this world, or the world to come," of course on the ground of repentance.

If repentance "in the world to come" was forbidden the sons of men, who could locate the responsibility for the conditions under which the multiplied millions of heathens, who have joined the pale-sheeted nations of the dead without faith in God, Christ, and the gospel, are plunged, without charging the infinitely loving "Father of the spirits of all flesh" of forging the chains of death which hold them, by denying them the opportunity of hearing the "testimony of the ransom," and of repenting? They were swept from the stage of this world's action without opportunity of even hearing of God, Christ, and the gospel. Think ye, God will consign them to a vast lake of molten pignion throughout the ceaseless ages, because he just wouldn't give them an opportunity to go the other way.

According to Mr. Charles Russell's collation of statistics, "About one hundred and forty-three billions of human beings have lived in the flesh since the creation of Adam." A fair estimate would be that less than a billion were true gospel children. Now if the doctrine of probation beyond the death-line is erroneous, we have as a mathematical certainty, based upon the dogma of popular secularism' the appalling deduction, that over one hundred and forty-two billions of God's created children are toppled over the battlements of eternity into

"That pit of deep despair, where No God regards their bitter prayer."

Could you, my friends, complacently sit in your pews on Sunday morning, listening to the peculiar subject, as often advertized, really believing that even now, at the rate of one hundred a minute, your fellow-mortals are dying, and entering that awful state described by the good well-meaning, but terribly deluded man, John Watts, whose own heart was warmer and larger than that he ascribed to our heavenly Father, when he wrote that sweet (?) hymn whose rhythm and cadence beats less and less upon the shores of time:

Tempests of angry fire shall roll
To blast the rebel world,
And heat upon the naked soul
In one eternal storm.

Surely we call up the better angels. We can look through Watt's eyes, nor breathe through Calvin's lungs. Men and women believing this down deep in their hearts, would rush frantically to the heathens, and to all unbelievers in every nook, corner and cranny and compel them to join church, or turn them giddy with fear.

GOD'S LOVE DOES NOT CEASE AT THE GRAVE.

God's method of bringing this vast assemblage in the death state to repentance differs not from the method he employed in bringing you to a penitent condition, my friends, no change in the gospel. It was, is now, and ever will be the same. How was it with you? Did God get angry with you and scorch you, to force you to do right? No? Did he hinder or forestall your effort to turn from wrong? No? Well, he is not a free-holder here, and a slave-holder yonder. He will be just as solicitous for the well being of those in the death state as he was for you, exercising the same tender, loving disposition. Listen! "Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness, and forbearance, and longsuffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?" Romans 2:4.

God's "goodness" will be strong enough—his infinite love—to turn the wayward in the direction of high endeavor. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." John 12:32. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." The love of God is the eternal cord,—the all powerful cable,—running through the divine economy to draw men to Christ. The beloved Apostle John had his brain fired by inspiration to define God, and tingling to the tips of his fingers, he penned the brilliant sentence, "God is love," Jesus Christ being "God manifest in the flesh," let us note the work of the "ransom." First, What he came to this world to do.

"For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost." Matt. 18:11.

"For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." Luke 9:56.

"I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Luke 5:32.

"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." John 3:17.

"For I came not to judge the world, but to save the world." John 12:47.

Note, what did he come to do? Answer:—1st. "To save men's lives." 2nd. "To save that which was lost." 3d. "To save the world." 4th. "To call sinners to repentance." What did he not do to? Answer: 1st. "He came not to destroy men's lives." 2nd. He came "not to judge the world." 3d. He "came not to condemn the world." If he came to call sinners to repentance, permit us to ask, how many? Answer: "For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior who will have all men come to the knowledge of the truth and be saved." This constitutes the number the Father "willed" should be called to repentance. Again, "And he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." 1 John 2:2. Once more, "For therefore we both labor and suffer reproach because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, especially of those that believe. These things command and teach." 1 Timothy 4:10,11.

ALL HAVE OPPORTUNITY OF REPENTANCE.

"But," say you, "Did you say it was the Father's will for all to come to repentance?" Yes, Jesus says this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." John 6:39. Who, and what has the Father given to Christ? Answer: "I will declare the decree. . . . Ask me, [says God to Christ] and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Psalms 2:8. If this is not sufficiently strong, we add: "All things are delivered unto me of my Father." Matt. 11:27. Again, "Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God and went to God." John 13:3. As to the future relation, Jesus will own all. The Apostle Paul says: "Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things." Heb. 1:2.

"Why, I thought God would only save me and my wife, my son John, and his wife, us four, and no more," says one. Indeed! And Satan secure the destruction of all the balance? Comparatively. Just permit me to exalt Christ a little more. Were you aware that the Apostle Peter declared: "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Acts 2:36. Nay further, in the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians, Paul says the time is coming when Christ will put down all rule, and authority except his own, and God hath put all things under his feet, and all things will be subdued unto Jesus Christ.

CHRIST TO HAVE POWER OVER ALL.

This will be the glorious time referred to by Paul in the language: Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, [Christ] and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. Phil. 2:9-11. This gives the victory to Jesus Christ over death, hell, and the grave. This brevity Jesus as King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. This gives to Jesus the right to "spoil principalities and powers of sin, triumphing over them," and "delivering those, who through fear of death, were all their life time subject to bondage."

Now haven't you gone to divine service on a Sunday morn, and with throbbing heart drank in the cadence of the good old song Coronation, as the choir with radiant voice, assisted by the pipe organ in thundering tones, rendered it? Why, the music supplicated, and seemed to bloom out in benison, and steal out through the stained glass window glowing with apostle and saint, and where you should have heard as a fitting climax, and harmonious with the spirit, and sentiment of the grand old song, a sermon extolling the work of the Lion of the tribe of Judah—the victory of the Son of God as it will finally ring out over the acclaim and minstrelsy of earth and heaven, you have heard, instead of "Bring forth the royal diadem, and crown him Lord of all," that Satan, the chief enemy had secured the eternal bondage of nine-tenths of God's children, and the Lord of all had to be satisfied with one-tenth.

Now I note some of you nod assent. Let me ask you, do you understand that such is the way Paul taught that the death would be swallowed up of life. Or, would it be the opposite,—life—swallowed up of the monster seen on the pale horse! Under this education, how can we believe that Jesus could "enter into the strong man's house, and spoil his goods." Matthew 12:29. How can I accept as a part of my faith in Christ of the New Testament, the victory said to be coming to him, when the monster death will be robbed of his armor, and his own citadel be bound with an invincible chain?

IS THERE A HELL?

You will possibly say, "Elder, don't you believe in hell?" I answer, most assuredly I do, but do not believe in the character and duration of it as depicted by popular interpretation. For greater numbers are going there than we could wish. David exclaims in the 9th Psalm, 17th verse: The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God. Many of those who professed the ancient religion but had corrupted it in the days of Jesus, were given a hint that they could not escape the damnation of hell. None of us can escape death and the grave, or the equivalent of them, but we can escape the pit or prison, as hell is defined in the Bible, by turning to God, and breaking off our sins by righteousness.

Hell is held out as a threatened place of conscious distress, torment, where the rich man of Luke 16 was consigned. The redemption of all who go there except the class who sin against the Holy Ghost is the kernel of the investigation tonight. And I am going to say, as the righteous—the good—are rewarded according to their works, and receive different rewards in justice as a consequence, so the other class, the unrighteous—the wicked—are punished according to their works, and in justice as a consequence, receive different degrees of punishment until reformation is effected. And as there are three heavens, or departments, three glories—celestial, (sun) terrestrial, (moon) and teletial, (stars) so there are three departments in hell or the prison-house, and where these three departments of hell deliver up the dead to be judged, the inhabitants were found to be mankind, for says the word of God, "And they were judged, every man according to his works." Rev. 20th chapter.

DEGREES OF PUNISHMENT.

Now for the Bible proof of three departments in the great prison-house. All must admit three degrees of comparison in the adjectives high and low. God is in the highest heaven, for so the angels sang to the shepherds,—“We bring you glad tidings of great joy, [the testimony of the ransom] which [testimony—gospel] shall be to all people. Glory to God in the highest.” High, higher, and highest are the three degrees of comparison—ascending. Low, lower, and lowest,—descending. My first text is in Ezekiel 26:20, thus: “When I shall bring thee [Tyre] down with them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth in places desolate of old with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited, and I shall set glory in the land of the living.” Here is God's word that the ancient city of Tyre, of whom Jesus said it would be more tolerable in the day of judgment than for some others, would be bereft of its unrighteous inhabitants, and be uninhabited, its inhabitants be set in the low parts of the earth in the pit.

My next authority is Psalms 63:9. Thus: “My soul followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me. But those who seek my soul to destroy it shall go into the lower parts of the earth. Here we discover the second degree of comparison “lower parts.” Again, “I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and as a cloud, thy sins: return unto me; for I have redeemed thee. Sing, O ye heavens; for the Lord hath done it: shout ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing.” Isa. 44:22, 23. Why “break forth into singing” in the lower parts of the earth? The lower parts are below the “low parts, and above the “lowest” parts, and here in the “lower parts” is where Paul affirmed that Christ descended: “Wherefore he saith, when he ascended upon high, he led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men. Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth.” Eph. 4:9.

In descending into the “lower parts of the earth,” he is occupying in, between, the low, and lowest—the middle department. So Ezekiel in chapter 32: 21, says: “The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell”—middle,—“lower part—second department. Here is the locality in which Christ established his mission—in the midst of hell—when Peter declares “Christ was put to death in the flesh, quickened by the Spirit by which he went and preached to the Spirits in prison; which some time were disobedient when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah etc.” 1st Peter 3:18-21. By establishing the center of his mission in “the midst” of the prison,—the “lower,” or middle department—the occupants of the “low,” “lowest” departments would have a central point to which they could rally to hear the gospel preached by “the strong among the mighty, out of the midst of hell with those who help him.”

But is there the “lowest hell?” Yes, we read Deut. 32:22, thus: “For a fire is kindled in mine anger and shall burn unto the lowest hell.” And also: “I will praise thee, Oh Lord my God, with all my heart; and I will glorify thy name forevermore. For great is thy mercy toward me; and thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell.” Psa. 86: 12, 13. Hence, we have the three degrees of comparison, descending—“low, lower, lowest.” The idea that Jesus descended into “the lower” division that he might “speak out of the midst of the prison house,” is strengthened by his own declaration recorded in Matt. 12:40. “For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly: so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights, in the heart of the earth.” “The heart of the earth,” suggests a midway position. The idea is, “you Scribes and Pharisees demand a sign. A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh signs—supernatural proofs—just one will be given, you remember Jonas? His imprisonment in the whale will symbolize my visitation to the prison, you will be there you will see me there. ‘Twill be sign enough. You are “wicked,” and “the wicked shall be turned into hell.”

LOCATION OF HELL.

The Bible locates this great prison “in the nether parts of the earth.” Ezekiel informs us that “the daughters of the famous nation” of antiquity were to be cast “unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit.” Eze. 32:18. This is not the grave, for he continues in verse 23, “whose graves are set in the sides of the pit.” Again, “her company is round about her grave.” How could “her company be round about her grave,” save we accept the idea that their unregenerate spirits are in the prison, while their bodies lie in the grave, for the prophet declares that all of them are slain, fallen by the sword.

Webster gives as the third definition of “nether,” “belonging to the regions below,” so the Scriptures use the word “down” when locating the prison. The “rich man” of Luke 16, died and went to the prison. Death is the separation—divorcement—of the spirit and the body, and the custom of all civilized nations is to care for the bodies of the dead by burial, the spirit—the soul,—they cannot handle. Jesus says after they “kill the body, they can do no more.” The “Spirits of all men return to God,” at death, and the righteous are at rest in the association of Abraham in paradise, and the wicked are “turned into the prison house.” Remember, the King's translators of 1611, did not translate the word “hell.” They anglicized it. When translated, it is from the “saxon, hell, helle, to cover,—1st “the state or place of punishment for the wicked after death, 2d, the lower regions—the place of souls after death. And 4th, a dungeon, a prison.” See Webster, (transcript) p. 545. “Conceal,” is the saxon word corresponding, and primarily means to “make fast, to restrain, to withdraw from observation—to cover.” See Webster p. 240. Hence it was when Jonah was under charge of the “great fish,” he “cried unto the Lord out of the belly of hell, and thou heardest me.” He was in prison, “concealed,” “restrained,” “covered,” and he repented in that prison—“the fish,” and the Lord granted him repentance and delivered him.

IS THERE DELIVERANCE FROM HELL?

Now, that the unrepentant wicked nations go there, to the great prison “in the nether parts of the earth,” let us inquire if they come out at any time. In so doing, remember the Lord says: “Though they dig into hell, from thence shall my hand take them.” Amos. 9:2. Then pass along to the second resurrection, a thousand years after the first. “Blessed and holy is he that has a part in the first resurrection.” Who? “Blessed, and holy.” What about the rest? “The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished.” Rev. 20. Then what? “And I saw the dead, small and great stand before God.”

RESURRECTION AND JUDGMENT.

What is the meaning of it? Why this assembly of nations? Why, “the books are opened,” this is the setting up of the “Great white throne” of judgment. Again, “the sea gave up the dead which were in it,” there, we have old pharaoh and his host overthrown in the Red Sea, Come back to organic existence again. The prophet said that he and “all his multitude went down to hell,” and “the nations trembled at the sound of his fall.” Ezekiel 31:15, 18. Their spirits in the prison house, their bodies in the Red Sea, but now “the sea gives up its dead,” “yes,” say you, “but that means their bodies only.” All right, the verse continued reads: “And death,—including the grave,—and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their works.” Now what say you? Once in hell, always in hell?

THE GOSPEL PREACHED IN HELL.

Now then, Christ goes there and preaches to the spirits according to Peter. “Ahi we have you now elder, Luke 16 says upon the authority of Abraham, when the rich man wanted a drop of water to cool his parched tongue, that Lazarus could not come to him, for a great gulf exists between, and no transportation between the two places—paradise and hell.” I am going to make the concession, that at the time of said conversation the impassable gulf was there, but when Jesus was nailed to the cross “tasting death for every man,” when the Roman javelin pierced his side, and his heart's blood flowed on Calvary, ratifying the eternal compact of redemption the gulf was bridged, even to the dying thief who went that day to paradise.

Now for the proof. Of Christ who holds the keys of death and hell, the prophet declares, or God through him promises: “His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. So for thee [Christ] also by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water.” You note that the rich man in “hell,” desiring Lazarus to be sent to dip the tip of his finger in water to cool his, the rich man's tongue, proves that hell is the pit or prison “wherein is no water.”

PRISONERS OF HOPE.

But the Lord continues. Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope.” Ah, here is a proclamation to the prisoners after death to repent, to turn to Christ as the “stronghold.” They are “prisoners of hope.” Hope is one of the blossoms of faith, and “faith cometh by hearing the word of God,” says Paul. What say you now? Christ is “the strong among the mighty to speak to them out of the midst of hell,” remember, and of his opening up a missionary society in those “lower regions,” it is prophetically said: “Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors: and the King of glory shall come in.” The “prisoners of hope,” ask “who is this King of glory?” the answer comes, “The Lord, strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle.” Psalms 54:7, 10.

‘Tis no marvel that Jesus declares “the gates of hell shall not prevail against his work.” Matt. 16. ‘Tis no marvel longer that in apocalyptic vision the revelator should have heard “Every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever, and ever.” Rev. 5:13. God's judgments are just, and all these underground nations will be made very conscious of the fact by hearing the message of the “ransom,” and join in the ascension of praise with those in heaven, and upon the earth.

We haven't time to read or quote the prophetic declarations concerning Christ establishing his work among the prisoners. We cite you to Isa. 42: 5, 8. Isa. 49:8-10. Isa. 61:1, 2. Luke 4:16-19, 1st Peter 4:5, 6. John 5:25. These testify of the missionary society sent to the prisoners two thousand years ago. Isa. 25: informs us that another one will be sent to them at, or about the second coming of Christ in glory. The Almighty is concerned in the condition of the prisoners—those who are bound-restrained, and says "the truth shall make you free."

VISITED AFTER MANY DAYS.

We are told that the kings of the earth with the high ones of Isa. 24, are to be punished and gathered into the pit, shut up in the prison, but after many days they shall be visited. This event is described as taking place in the latter days. Now David says:—All the kings of earth shall praise thee, Oh Lord, when they hear the words of thy mouth. Yea, they shall sing in the ways of the Lord: for great is the glory of the Lord. Psa. 138: 4, 5. These kings of the earth, who are shut up in the prison, and after many days are visited, shall hear the word of God, and join in singing and praising, Ah, they were exhorted to break forth into singing, and shouting in the lower parts of the earth, you remember, in Isa. 44:23, and now it is declared they would do so, and the revelator heard it.

Our heavenly Father loves his children, although they be in durance vile. David says: For the Lord heareth the poor, and despiseth not his prisoners. Psalms 69:33. In Psalms 79, David is touched by the condition of these prisoners.—I suppose he could properly sympathize with them, for at one time he said, the pains of hell got hold of him,—and he offered prayer in their behalf, thus:—Let the sighing of the prisoners come before thee; according to the greatness of thy power preserve thou those that are appointed to die. Verse 11.

This prayer was answered, thanks be to his Holy Name, for it is recorded in the 146 Psalm, and 7th verse that God "executeth judgment for the oppressed: giveth food to the hungry. The Lord looseth the prisoners." And in Psalms 102:19, "For he hath looked down from the heights of his sanctuary; from heaven did the Lord behold the earth; to hear the groaning of the prisoners; to loose those that are appointed to death." When was this to occur? Ans, verse 22.—When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms to serve the Lord, or, in other words, when the kingdoms of this world, become the kingdom of our God and his Christ. David's prayer in Psalm 79 is answered. How beautiful his inspired ecstasy in contemplation:—Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Zion; and unto thee shall the vow be performed. Oh thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come. Psa. 65:1,2.

Blessed thought dear friends, still more blessed the fact, as our Lord says,—He that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out, [and "all that the Father giveth me shall come to me." Who has the Father given to Jesus?—"Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance," says God. "All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee Oh Lord, and shall glorify thy name." Psalms 86:9. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? For thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest. Rev. 15:4. What kind of a being must he be, to be worshipped by all nations, and this will include the nations in the prison house? Will it be a vindictive and cruel monster? Another Jove on Olympus, delighted to see his creature in eternal pain? Nay, but the gentle and tender Shepherd who seeks for the lost sheep until he finds it, and bears it to the fold,

But how can they come to him? "No man can come to me except my Father draw him." Jno. 6:44. And how will the Father draw him? "As it is written in the prophets, and they shall all be taught of God." Jno. 6:45. The gentle teacher will have become the desire of all nations, at that time; yea, under the power of love, and teaching,—all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him. Psalms 72:11. Remember, the gospel is the standard of judgment to all nations,—my words shall judge you at the last day, says the Lord Jno. 12:43. You examine the covenant God made with Abraham, and one of the provisions of it was,—in thee, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; and Paul says that seed is Christ, and by reference to Ezekiel 32:22-32, the powerful nations of Assyria, Elam, Meshech, Tubal, Edom, Egypt and the Zidonians, who caused their terror in the land of the living, have gone down to the prison house without realizing the blessing in Christ. When will this promise be realized by them?

CHRIST'S KINGDOM TO BE UNIVERSAL.

We are informed in Daniel 7:27, that God's Kingdom, and dominion is everlasting and its greatness will prevail under the whole heaven, while "all dominions shall serve and obey him. Surely this is more universal service than our past education will allow. We do not argue that all will receive the same glory after the judgment. The basic rule will be according to works. Those who obey the gospel in this life—those who believe in God, in Christ, and in the power, and revelations of the Holy Ghost, who have repented of their sins, have been baptized in the name of Jesus by the proper authority, received the ordinance of the laying on of hands for the gift of the Spirit, and taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, living righteously in the fear of God, I say, these have promise of the first resurrection to reign with Christ a thousand years in this "kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven." The second death has no power over these. They dwell on a cleansed, and purified earth.

Oh, 'tis not a purely ethereal, and mysical region of semi-existence presided over by clustering cloud banners of gold and purple. 'Tis not a realm of phantoms, fanes and hobgoblins, 'tis the redeemed earth,—a sanctified memorial to the Eternal victor over death, hell and the grave, on which the righteous dwell, and reign. Their kingdom comes by appointment, "And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me." Luke 22:28. Their's is celestial glory. All others except sinners against the Holy Ghost, will occupy the glory of the moon and stars.

THE DIFFERENT GLORIES.

Jesus says:—In my Father's house are many mansions,—in his Father's kingdom are many glories,—so one star differs from another star in glory so is the resurrection of the dead." 1 Cor. 15. It is he that buildeth his stories in the heaven, Amos 9:6. It is he that buildeth his chambers in the heaven, says the revised version. Associate this idea with the Savior's statement, and we have thus:—In my Father's house are many chambers. Celestial glory is where Christ occupies. Of the disciples anciently, Jesus says:—Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me. John 17:24. Here is the same glory for the saints as for Christ.

Is that all, just to look at this glory? Nay, Verse 22:—And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them. Again:—If any man serve me, let him follow me, and where I am, there [in that place] shall also my servant be. Jno. 12:26. The celestial glory is where God sits enthroned. Celestial is the highest,—the greatest glory. The Apostle Peter says, referring to Christ's transfiguration on the mount:—For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice from the EXCELLENT GLORY, this is my beloved Son, etc. Where God, and Christ dwell is the acme of blessing—All worth striving for, an infinite superabundance of power, immortality, and permanent joy.

The Psalmist declares:—Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore. Psa. 16:11. An infinite fulness of joy for those who pursue the path of life, dear friends, and "they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in the day when I make up my jewels." Mal. 3:17. Jewels are special treasures, such are not who have gone down to the pit unregenerated. Those who serve the Master are to enter into the fulness of joy, of their Lord, and be made ruler over many things. Matt. 25:21. The apostle says of this righteous company:—all things are yours; whether Paul or Apollus, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's, and Christ is Gods. 1 Cor. 3:22,23.

Now respected auditors, one thought additional, and I am done. Let it be borne in mind, at this juncture, that those who are banished from the presence of God, and the glory of his power, will simply eat of the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table. In an inferior glory—terrestrial, or telestial,—"to enjoy that which they are willing to receive, because they were not willing to enjoy that which they might have received." The celestialized bodies of the saints will enjoy a fulness of celestial glory upon the celestialized earth in eternity.

At the end of the thousand years reign and by the time the unjust are resurrected, there will be "no more sea;" and it is highly probable that at the great and last change this planet will be greatly enlarged and become self-luminous, reflecting light to some other system, reaching a state of positive perfection, not needing the light of the sun moon or stars, but like the holy city;—And the city had no need of the sun, nor of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved, shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day for there shall be no night there. Rev. 21:23, 25.

The glory that caused the face of Moses to shine, so that he had to veil it for Israel to look upon; the glory that made the face of Jesus to shine as the sun; and that made his raiment white as the light; the glory that appeared unto Saul of Tarsus, "at midday, above the brightness of the sun; the glory, that rested on the face of Stephen the proto-martyr, as he ascended to heaven amid a shower of stones—when this shall be given to the earth, will it not indeed become a sun—the fulness of the glory of God,—abiding the power by which it is quickened?"

To share this ripened power of immortality, may we all be influenced, and receive this divine seal when the books are opened, and the dead shall be judged out of the things written therein. Thank you kindly for your indulgence.

NEWS FROM SOCIETIES.

At Calumet, Oklahoma, a branch of the auxiliary was organized a year ago, with seventeen members which have increased to twenty-three. They have organized the young women's department as well as the Home and Child Welfare Department, are sewing for the children's home.

The ladies of Fairview Branch and of Bellview Settlement, Pensacola, Florida, have also joined our ranks with nineteen charter members. Their first efforts were in behalf of their finances. A social on the church lawn resulted in forty-five dollars for their treasury. Their workers are "willing" and they are trying to help complete their church building. The Independence Home and Child Welfare department have enlarged its membership quite perceptibly during the past year, and the young women are coming forward at last. The fathers met with us again recently. Four of them favored us with five minute talks on the following subjects:

Starting points in the Boy's character.

Training the Boy for Citizenship.

Are the Teachings of the Bible sufficient in the Training of Children?

The Punishment that Educates.

This month four of our mothers will debate the following question:

Resolved that the present day manner of dress is immoral in its effects upon humanity.

Let us hear from other societies.

ARE THE TEACHINGS OF THE BIBLE SUFFICIENT IN THE TRAINING OF CHILDREN?

The thought, we believe, has been well put when it is said that the principles of right living are found in the Scriptures. The code of morals as therein set forth, I believe, are as yet unsurpassed, and the modern philosophy and new thought, today, is but an attempt to interpret Bible truth in the language of today, and on the plane of today's environment. Though we have this scriptural code of right living, yet we search continually to find an amplification of those Bible truths in the ways and means of the "Thou shalt's" and "thou shalt not's."

The question today that those who have children are continually confronted with is "Why? Why?" and "How? How?"

Many, many times have our children come to us with the perplexing question of the why of things and have we taken the time to tell them the "why?" and the "how?" And furthermore, do we know how to tell them? And again does the Bible give us an explanation sufficient for our needs in the amplification of the principles it sets forth?

In one part of the Bible we find these words: "Spare the rod and spoil the child." Now, do we consider this statement to be a method of training our child, and is it sufficient?

As a church we are almost wholly dependent upon the literature of the men of the world for any desired information. The quarterlies of our Auxiliary societies would be an impossibility today were it not for the valuable historical data furnished by the men of the world to supplement the meager outline furnished by the Bible. Why do not the men and women of our church appreciate the importance of such an opportunity and offer to the world at least an attempt at the solution of this "problem of today." Must we say that in this we have signally failed, because we have feared to attempt?

The principles of right living as set forth in the Bible have stood the test. The difficult part of the problem is to develop, interpret, and draw out of these concise, concrete truths of the Bible a lesson for today, and developing proper ways and means of making a practical application of such a lesson to a life.

The matter of using the application of Bible truths as a solution of the problem of child training we divide into three parts:

First we have the Bible with its inspired teachings and its humanly devised narrative.

Second. We have the books which MEN have written, as a result of their experience, and their books come into our hands as a finished product from men who have spent a lifetime in producing them. Their lives have been devoted to this special work.

Third. The large school of observation.

Shall we depend entirely upon the Bible itself for the suggestive methods to make the application of its own truths?

Shall we depend entirely upon the experience of others who have written their opinions?

Shall we be governed entirely by our own experience and observations?

Every generation of young people has an environment of its own, and the application of the accepted moral code must be made upon the basis of present environment. Other people have devoted their lives to developing the best methods to train a child. Have we thought it of sufficient importance to do likewise?

If we hold our place in the forward movement of today we must give our time to it. Take the Bible truths as a code of good morals and develop them; take the books which others have written and bring home the lessons taught through your experience as the result of your observation in the school of every-day life.

J. A. Gardner.

The Saints of the District of Nova Scotia: Please take notice of change of agents in that district by reason of the ill health of Sr. Lois G. PASTORALS.

To the saints of the Utah District (comprising Utah and a part of Western Idaho) Greeting:

Having been reappointed to labor with and among you another conference year will state that I am now in my field, and will labor to the best of my ability God being my helper for to him you and I will be held responsible for our stewardship while here, hence ask for a liberal co-operation of all the local ministry and members. Write me of your needs. Shall be glad to hear from the local elders and priests. Tell me as to what extent you are ready and willing to labor, where, when, in or outside of branches, for it must be remembered that no one has the right to hold an office (in the church) great or small and lay down on it. We can all do something, little or much. Ministry or lay member.

The field is large, the laborers few—so let us go to with our might and gather in the ripe golden grain before the storm is on, and before the time of the fullness of the gentiles comes in. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest for success. My home address is, Tigris, Douglas County, Missouri. Field address, Malad City. Lock box 12. Write me at once.

Yours in gospel bonds,
J. C. Christensen, District president.

The saints of the Gallands Grove District will please take notice that I am one of the missionaries to your district and will be glad to respond to invitations to hold meetings, and this request applies with special force to places where little or no preaching has been done. Until further notice address me at Deloit, Iowa, in care of C. J. Hunt.

Your brother in gospel bonds;
Edward Rannie.

To the Saints of the Spring River District, Greeting: Having been transferred from the Independence Stake to this district our first effort was to comply with the desire of the minister in charge, and in order to suit his itinerary the date of our quarterly conference at Wier City, Kan., was changed to July 12th.

Bro. J. W. Rushton, minister in charge will be with us, we hope for a good representation, to do the business hear "Rushton the different"—we also desire that all reports may be in on time, send to Mollie Davis 115 W. Jefferson street, to T. W. Chatburn, Pittsburg, Kan.

Also take notice that our reunion will convene at Joplin in Cunningham's Park, August the 8-17th inclusive. We hope to make this reunion the best of the series. Car line has been extended to the park—and every convenience provided for caring for a large crowd, while we shall have some eminent speakers, we design for the young local force to have ample opportunities for development.

T. W. Chatburn, Pres.

To the Saints and friends of the Kewanee District, greeting:—Having been chosen assistant minister in charge of this field, I desire to get into touch with you. Anyone wanting preaching or knowing of any place where a new opening can be made, please notify me at once and we will get to you as soon as we can. The field is large and we have but three missionaries. We are desirous of doing all we can for the cause we all love so much, and you can help us to keep busy by making known your wants. Any of the branches wanting two day meetings, write me and we will arrange with you for the dates.

Your brother,
O. E. Sade.

As I have been chosen Assistant Minister in charge of the following states, viz.: Mississippi, Alabama, Florida and Virginia, I thought it would be wise to write a brief address to the Saints and friends who reside in that territory. I have as my co-workers in this large field Brethren I. M. Smith, Swen Swensen, C. L. Snow, H. W. Smith, A. G. Miller and A. E. Warr. Among this body of men I feel safe in saying that we have as good talent as there is in the church, and from the very fact that the quorum of twelve saw the necessity of augmenting but force this year is a strong evidence that this is a very important field and that the work is growing.

I am happy to state that last year was a prosperous year as I view it, and one reason why it was so, is because there are so many of the local workers who are willing to assist the missionary in his efforts to advance the cause. This will be the result in every field where both missionary and local forces labor together in the spirit of love, without jealousy or strife. I can truly say if the missionary force will act wisely and do their best to advance the cause by preaching the gospel, and then live the gospel, the Southern people will stand by them and cheerfully assist them in their work and sacrifice to build up the kingdom. So dear brethren let us each do all we can to be without blame in word and deed.

Remember we are on the Lord's errand and it is our business to be meek, sober, prayerful, and very studious. The Lord has instructed his servants as follows: "Therefore cease from all your light speeches, from all laughter, from all your lustful desires, from all your pride and light mindedness."—D. C. 85:37. Again he says in paragraph 19, "Cast away your idle thoughts and your excess of laughter far from you." Again we read in 59:4, "Much laughter for this is sin," while the Apostle Paul speaks against "foolish talking and jesting which are not convenient, but rather giving of thanks."—Eph. 5:4.

I hope and pray that every missionary will make an excellent showing both in personal deportment as well as an excellent report of work done. There is a bright future before each of us both of the ministry and members, if we all pull together in love and harmony with a strong desire to spread the work. I consider the church is standing higher and in better condition than it has ever been since it was organized in 1830, and that it is rapidly putting on those beautiful adornments which will prepare it for the coming of the Saviour, and with these thoughts in mind I feel to advise everyone to be faithful in the line of duty that God may be with you to help you. My address is McKenzie, Ala. I will be glad to correspond with anyone who may desire to write me in regard to the needs of the work.

Your co-worker in the Bonds of Love,
F. M. Slover.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

MONTANA DISTRICT.—Conference convened at Bozeman, May 31st at 10 a. m. Pres. A. J. Moore and G. W. Thorburn presiding. Statistical reports of following branches read; Warm Springs 37, Colbertson 18, Fairview 14, Deer Lodge 138, Bozeman, 71, Gallatin 95. Ministerial reports from Elders L. E. Hills, A. J. Moore, G. W. Thorburn, S. M. Anders, J. P. Weychoff, Thos. Reese, John E. Eliason, Friest, C. B. Freeman, Wm. J. Murray, Deacon John Eliason. Bishop's agent's and district treasurer's reports read and referred to auditing committee who reported them correct. A bill of 50 cents, secretary's expense was allowed. As all the branches in the district, but one, had failed to comply with Rule 9, and the district being in debt to the treasurer, a motion carried that a collection be taken up to defray expenses. Notice was given by Brn. L. E. Hills and Thos. Reese, of proposed changes in rules of the district at the next conference.

A printed form for notifying branches and scattered saints of conference was read, and by motion T. L. Reese, G. W. Thorburn, and L. E. Hills were appointed to prepare a form similar. By motion the secretary was instructed to give licenses to all elders and other officers ordained in the district not already having received them. The secretary was also instructed to take up the names of saints on disorganized branches, with the general secretary calling his attention to resolution No. 455.

The advisability of holding a reunion in the district was discussed and a committee of five were elected to select time and place as follows: A. J. Moore, Belgrade; J. E. Eliason, Race Track, John Johnson, Victor; Frank Christoffersson, Deer Lodge; Thomas Reese, Bozeman. Preaching by G. W. Thorburn, A. J. Moore, and L. E. Hills. Next conference at Deer Lodge.

EDITORIAL

IN THE WORLD BUT NOT OF THE WORLD.

In praying for his disciples Jesus asked not that they should be taken out of the world, but that they might be kept from the evil of the world, and he said of them that "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." In a late revelation to the church in speaking of the work preparatory to the establishment of Zion, the Lord says: "It is incumbent upon the Saints while reaping the benefits of these organizations [in business] to so conduct themselves in the carrying into operation the details of their organizations as to be in the world, but not of it, living and acting honestly and honorably before God and in the sight of all men, using the things of this world in the manner designed of God, that the places where they occupy may shine as Zion, the redeemed of the Lord."—Doctrine and Covenants 128:8.

The first quotation as found in the seventeenth chapter of John, defines the proper attitude of the ministers of Christ before the world, and the second shows that the same attitude is required of the membership of the body of Christ in their business intercourse with men. The children of God are gathered from every class into the kingdom of God, but of necessity must still mingle with men of the world in order to carry on the affairs of daily life and business, and in this way only can they be a light to the world as Christ required. Lives reclusive behind thick walls shed no light outside, and God designed that his ministry and his people should be in the world as a component part, though not of the world, manifesting the life of Christ before men and exercising a saving influence.

In calling the rich young man to this higher standard of life, Jesus said to him: "Come, take up thy cross and follow me." And again he says: "And now for a man to take up his cross is to deny himself all ungodliness, and every worldly lust, and keep my commandments." Matt. 16:26, Inspired Version. The children of God should remember that they have been called out of the world, not in the sense that they should separate themselves from other men and keep themselves in seclusion, but that they should be separate from the things that are of the world and such as are incompatible with the character which God would have every man develop, so that in their commingling with the world the world may see and know that they are the children of God.

If the Saints join with the world in all that it does, where will be the difference? The name of "Saints" under those conditions would mean nothing more than the name of a class division of one common society. The one thing that held the rich young man to the world was his love of the delightful pleasures which his wealth brought him, otherwise, he was an upright and honorable man strictly keeping the law of Moses, but while Jesus told him the necessity of taking up his cross, or in other words forsaking the world, he also said: "Follow me." Jesus mingled with publicans and sinners but not to partake of their sinful ways, but to show them a higher standard of life. He accepted the invitation of the rich to dine, not however to indulge in their haughty manners and supercilious conversation, but to teach them the way to true nobility.

As followers of Christ the Saints must needs mingle with the world, but in doing so it must not be for the purpose of following the world in its ways of sin, whether that sin be in the form of pride, vanity, extravagance, pleasure, or whether it be in the nature of crime. Business, education, civil affairs, and other matters require that the Saints come into association with others who may not hold the same faith, but in such association every act and word should be representative of the high standard of the gospel of Jesus Christ to which they have been called. To indulge in the world's pleasures, and follow its ways, is to lower the standard, and deprive the world of the light to which it is entitled through the children of the kingdom, in addition to neglecting to bear the cross of Christ, without which there is no discipleship, for Jesus says that "whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple."

The character of the relationship with the world will also be determined by the manner in which the Saints use the temporal possessions which they may gain. The revelation referred to, says they should "use the things of this world in the manner designed of God," and that manner is fully defined in the law. To use the temporal means for the non-essential things of selfish pleasure, while the innocent are suffering for the bare necessities of life, is to follow the world rather than Christ. The cross of Christ brings no vain delights nor satisfies any selfish desires, but to those who bear it truly, it brings a joy that surpasses all that the world can give. Under that cross there may be some sorrows and denials, but there will also be found a joy which is eternal and which can never be found elsewhere. The higher standard set by Christ is the one that all Saints should follow, and by so doing they will live in him, and though they are in the world they will not be of the world.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

No. 6.

Ordinances.

The Reorganized Church includes in its faith the ordinances of baptism, laying on of hands, and the "Lord's supper."

Baptism.

Baptism, we believe, was made a part of the "everlasting gospel" by the "Author and Finisher of our faith," Jesus Christ, and that its place in the saving plan was permanent, the ordinance applying to every man who is outside of the body of Christ. Its mode is by immersion in water, the candidate being "buried with Christ"; its purpose being for the remission of sins and a means of initiation into the visible body of Christ—the church. It may be administered only by one who has been called of God and ordained to this authority, while the ordinance can only be received properly by one who truly believes Christ and has repented of his sins, being willing to take upon himself the name of Christ and to keep his commandments.

Laying on of Hands.

This is an ordinance used for four different, though related purposes, all being for the bestowal of divine blessing. First, for confirmation in the church and conferring the right to receive the Holy Ghost. This may be administered only to those who have previously received the ordinance of baptism. Second, for ordination to the various offices in the church. Third, for the blessing of infants who are too young to have need of the ordinance of baptism, and others for special purposes. Fourth, for the blessing of the sick by healing or otherwise as God may determine.

Some of the statements of Scripture beside those found in the Bible touching upon these points are as follows:

"And whose having faith [having been baptized] you shall confirm in my church, by the laying on of the hands, and I will bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost upon them." Doctrine and Covenants 32:2.

"On as many as ye shall baptize with water, ye shall lay your hands, and they shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Ibid 39:6.

"Every member of the church having children is to bring them unto the elders before the church, who are to lay their hands upon them in the name of Jesus Christ, and bless them in his name." Ibid 17:19.

"And whosoever among you are sick * * * the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for and lay their hands upon them in my name, and if they die they shall die unto me, and if they live they shall live unto me. * * * He that has faith in me to be healed, and is not appointed unto death, shall be healed; he who has faith to see shall see; he who has faith to hear shall hear; the lame who has faith to leap shall leap." Ibid 42:12, 13.

The Lord's Supper.

This ordinance is reserved for members of the church, and by eating of the bread and drinking of the wine which have been set apart for this purpose by prayer, they keep in remembrance the Lord Jesus Christ, and manifest a willingness to bear his name and keep his commandments. "It is expedient that the church meet together often to partake of bread and wine in remembrance of the Lord Jesus, and the elder or priest shall administer it." Doctrine and Covenants 17:22. "And the members shall manifest before the church and also before the elders, by a godly walk and conversation, that they are worthy of it, that there may be works and faith agreeable to the Holy Scriptures." par. 18.

In all of these ordinances there is manifest an acknowledgment of God's sovereignty and goodness, as also man's weakness and dependence upon God. Man cannot control according to his own mind either the natural or spiritual forces which surround him, but by intelligently putting himself in harmony with the divine law as expressed through these ordinances and the commandments of Christ, he secures such a degree of divine protection and help as will save him from every real danger; to such God gives "power to become the sons of God."

Christian Science Teaching.

Christian Science has no ordinances so far as shown by its text book—Science and Health, which is a quite consistent position when it is remembered, as has been previously shown, that it has no personal God and no personal Christ.

Baptism.

As to baptism the book says: "Our baptism is a purification from all error." p. 340. "We * * * are baptized with his purity." p. 336. As to its definition it says: "Baptism, Purification by Spirit; submergence in Truth." p. 572.

Jesus taught the necessity of baptism in water, saying "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." John 3:5. He himself was baptized in the river of Jordan by John, Matt. 3, and commanded his apostles to teach it to all nations. The reader is fully competent to judge as to which of the two doctrines here set forth is in accordance with the teachings of Christ,—the baptism of water for the remission of sins, or a "submergence in Truth" which discards the outward form. It says further of Christ: "He established no form of worship." p. 325.

Laying on Hands.

Coming to the laying on of hands as taught in the New Testament and previously referred to as found in the other standard books of the Reorganized Church, no mention of it is made in Science and Health for any purpose whatsoever. There is an etherialized baptism, but no laying on of hands not even for the healing which is so abundantly taught in the book. Ordination is unknown in Christian Science, nor is there any Holy Ghost except "Divine Science; the developments of eternal Life, Truth, and Love." p. 579, which consists only of "an enlarged understanding of Divine Science," p. 351, 2; p. 348, and since healing is the result of the mental operation of the healer, all the purposes for which the laying on of hands was given are removed so that this ordinance finds no place here.

The Lord's Supper.

"Our eucharist is spiritual communion with one God. Our bread, 'which cometh down from Heaven,' is Truth. Our cup is the cross, our wine the inspiration of Love,—the draught our Master drank, and commended to his followers," p. 340.

The sacrament or eucharist is referred to as "A dead rite," and further: "If Christ, Truth, has come to us in demonstration, no commemoration is requisite, for he is Immanuel, or God with us; and if a friend be with us, why need we memorials of that friend?" p. 339.

It readily appears that Christian Science dispenses altogether with the Lord's supper as an outward ordinance, as with all others, though placing upon some of them an ethereal or spiritual interpretation.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Over four years Bro. Chas. Keown of Iowa decided to take up medicine as a study and was sent by Pres. Joseph Smith to Bro. Joseph Luff for advice as to what college to enter. The latter suggested Hering Homeopathic college of Chicago, its course being strictly in accord with the philosophy of Homeopathy. Acting upon this advice Bro. Keown matriculated shortly afterwards and last week dropped into Bro. Luff's office, with his diploma as an M. D. in his possession, and having also taken the State Board examinations of both Illinois and Missouri. On Sunday morning he left for Lamoni, Iowa, where he expected to meet his family and visit for a vacation period after which he will return and enter Bro. Luff's office and be his associate, taking care of all the outside practice, which Bro. Luff has been compelled for years to give up; also to give needed attention to office calls and pursue a regular medical career permanently in Independence. His family will locate here in a few days. Bro. Luff speaks very highly of Dr. Keown and says he will make a splendid record as a physician. Bro. Luff is uncommonly happy in the assurance of relief this association furnishes and for which he has so long waited. He may take a short vacation after Dr. Keown is installed and has had time to adjust himself to the routine of office programme, etc. Bro. Keown is quite well known to many of the saints in the region about Lamoni, where he lived for years, all of whom will join us in wishing him the success his personal and professional facilities entitle him to. We will be pleased also to welcome him and his family to our number and fellowship in the Independence Branch.

Bishop Kelley was the speaker on Sunday morning and at the same time Bro. G. E. Harrington addressed the children on the subject of baptism in the lower auditorium. The address was illustrated by a chart, and a number expressed themselves as being ready for baptism on children's day on the following Sunday.

Bro. George Jenkins and R. O. Self are still holding tent services in the east part of town, the tent having been removed however to East Short street near Main. Cottage meetings are being held this week in the southwest part of town by Bro. Ammon White and others.

On Sunday evening the Hon. O. H. Dean, president of the Kansas City School of Law, lectured at the church on "The Making of the Constitution." We regretted having to miss it.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

All services held at the South Side church Sunday, were well attended, Sunday school, 9, 30, with an attendance of 254, a little short of best attendance, collections, $4.79.

The morning hour was occupied by Bro. F. M. Sheehy, who spoke of the heaven hid in the three measures of meal, showing that while the heaven was not visible, yet its work was being accomplished, each individual having this heaven—the Spirit—would grow so that in time the whole lump—the church—would be leavened, and the people would not have to look so much to domes, spires, and brick and mortar, for all would be full of the Spirit.

At the afternoon prayer meeting no such manifestations of the Spirit has been enjoyed for some time, prophecies, tongues, interpretations. Meeting dismissed with the Spirit hovering over all.

The evening hour was occupied by Bro. J. Frank Curtis, and it is allowed to speak for the congregation, it was surely a feast of good things, which awakened a new interest in all. We were given to understand that we should make our calling and election sure, and not depend altogether on the Savior to do the work that is required at our hands.

Since March 10th, 1913, date of installing the baptismal font in the South Side church, 27 have been baptized, a good showing.

President Gould has invited all of the elders of the South Side Branch to meet him at his residence, 727 So. Cottage St. on Thursday evening.

W. S. L.

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

Saint Joseph saints have truly been enjoying a feast of reason and a flow of soul," during the past two weeks.

The conference which convened at the Third Branch the 7th and 8th, was a success both in point of numbers and harmonious spirit. Bro. John W. Rushton of the Twelve, John Davis and E. L. Henson of the missionary force being present, you may be assured we were sumptuously fed, spiritually, while T. T. Hinderks, B. J. Dice, and the "old reliable" C. P. Faul of the district, lent official dignity to the gathering. Right here let us also mention our own Bro. B. J. Scott, who has already won our deep admiration and affection by his wise, loving and yet firm administration thus far.

The conference was a representative gathering, a great many of the well known saints of the district being in attendance. We missed some well known and loved faces from the assembly, notably those of Bro. V. M. Goodrich and H. D. Ennis. Bro. Rushton was invited to preside. The 2:30 p. m. prayer service on Sunday found the little church packed to its utmost capacity, and an overflow meeting was held in a tent, which was pitched on an adjacent school play ground and was well filled with worshippers.

Services at all the churches both morning and evening on Sunday. Bro. B. J. Scott preaching in the morning at first branch and Bro. John Davis in the evening. The evening prayer meeting was fairly well attended and an excellent spirit prevailed.

Monday evening the 9th, Bro. John Rushton began a series of four lectures at the brick church which for erudition intellectual research, and scientific analysis, surpassed anything of like character it has ever been our pleasure to hear. Large audiences demonstrated, the deep interest taken in the subjects discussed. Bro. Rushton has promised to return in the autumn and give us another treat.

Sunday the 15th was Children's Day with us. During the Sunday school Supt. Harry Tilden gave us a neat little talk, touching interest in Sunday school work which we feel sure a responsive chord in most of our hearts at 11 o'clock. Elder B. J. Scott delivered a splendid address to the children, and if they enjoyed it as well as the frosty haired children did it was thoroughly appreciated we know. One was baptized.

At 8 o'clock the Children's Day program was given by members of the school in the auditorium which had been tastefully decorated for the occasion, flowers, vines and other greenery being lavishly used. The children acquitted themselves splendidly, the continuous program moving along, without a hitch. Perhaps we are extravagantly proud of our school and young folks of the Religio, but we believe it is a justifiable pride, and we are sure that these institutions are fostering some bright minds that will one day make their mark in the different fields of labor open to the workers of the church.

Bro. John Davis held a weeks meetings at Wyatt Park Mission preceding the conference.

Bro. W. P. Pickering has established the tent owned by the 3rd Branch at Elwood, a village directly across the river from us and will hold meetings nightly for awhile.

St. Goodrich and family will depart from our midst by the first of the month, to join Bro. V. M. in Los Angeles. We are sorry to lose them, but as he seems to feel that he needs them worse than we do, we are constrained to let them go.

Our choir is doing some good work, and we hope they will continue as there is a divinely uplifting power in music of this kind. Our organist Sr. Mary Kinnamau is slowly progressing toward complete recovery and we will be rejoiced to see her among us once more.

Reporter.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

The tent meetings in Stockton are quite successful in point of attendance but the baser sort are troublesome about the tent. Bro. Reiste had not arrived at last accounts but Bro. Stead and Davison are amply able for the work.

Sr. Mabel Leaver was baptized in the city font on the 15th by priest Emery Parks as his first attempt at such work. She was confirmed at the evening service by Bishop C. A. Parkin assisted by the writer; an encouraging Spirit inspired the confirmation.

Bro. C. W. Hawkins, the San Jose pastor, was the Sunday morning speaker in Oakland. He gave the improvement committee some useful instruction on our church house enlargement. Dr. W. P. Bush in his saucy of manner preached the evening sermon. Bro. Presley was in his place as our chief religio worker at 6:30 when was held an interesting session.

Bro and Sr. E. C. Aylor called on us recently from San Diego with an idea of locating here. We shall be pleased if they do as we think we see in them the element of help when opportunity offers. He is a brother of W. M. Aylor of the Twelve.

My missionary companion has gone to Oakdale for a few days needed rest and change. It was by the kindness of Bro. Bush who with family are enroute to Modoc Co. in his automobile. Did you ask if we missed her?

J. M. Terry.

1202 14th street Oakland, Cal., June 20.

SECOND ST. JOSEPH BRANCH.

Our branch is starting in with new energy there being two new ordinations at the 3rd Branch conference. Bro. F. R. Gist, branch priest to the office of elder and Bro. C. R. Smith to the office of priest both bright young men who owe their conversion to Elder J. S. Roth. Another incident worthy of notice was the blessing of a little boy adopted by Bro. and Sr. Vandervinter, both Elder Roth's converts, so eager are the saints of this branch to enlarge the membership that they are beginning to adopt children to swell the cradle roll. This baby was blessed under the name of Joseph Edwin, June 11th.

Bro. and Sr. Landis' baby was blessed May 18th by the name Ethel June.

We had our share of good preaching, conference Sunday, Pres. B. J. Scott of the 1st Branch occupied in the morning; subject: "If we walk in the light as he is in the light then we have fellowship one with another. This text seemed to be a very favored one as it was the reading text of Apostle John Rushton at the evening service, and Elder John Davis, also used for his reading 1st John, 1st chapter same evening at the 1st branch. Sunday 15th we had a large attendance at Sunday school at which time it was decided to have a picnic in Hyde Park, July 4th. The writer occupied the pulpit at the 11 o'clock hour, subject: "Necessity of living apostles and prophets." Baptism 5:30, Bro. Bear leading Sr. Knight into the waters after which she was confirmed by Bro. Bear and Gist at the prayer meeting which was largely attended. Elder Bear occupied at the evening service and the writer at the evening service 3rd Branch.

The Religio is moving right to the front with their studies, discussions and ice cream socials.

Sunday morning June 22d, Bro. Gist and Smith preached at eleven o'clock. The evening hour Bro. Elder H. B. Taddicken president of 3d Branch preached using for his text Jonah and the whale out of which he drew some splendid lessons for thought.

Our regular cottage meetings are being held every Thursday evening with good attendance of outsiders. Elder J. L. Bear being the speaker.

A. A. Richardson.

June 23.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Having been away from home every Sunday since May 4th and much other time too, also when at home both time and strength were taken by other work, therefore the Lamoni notes have not appeared.

However there have been interesting sermons preached by various brethren in town and country, on the Sabbath days, and Sunday schools and Religio affairs have gone on successfully. Children's day in Lamoni was on June 15th and the services were of a high order of merit. The floral decorations were abundant, and the program moved in harmony with the purpose of the managers and to the interest of the large gathering of saints and other peoples. Twenty-three children were baptized by Bro. J. F. Garver and John Midgordon. These were confirmed at the afternoon meeting. In the evening the junior choir gave a cantata which was greatly to their credit and much enjoyed by the congregation.

The annual reunion has been set for July 25th to August 3d and the grounds are being put in better condition than ever before, space for tents enlarged, and conveniences in general made better. As there are twenty-one acres of the field and grove there is plenty of room. The committee have letters from persons outside the stake asking for tents and place, and within the borders there is also an increased interest since the last two years of such excellent meetings day after day, with associations that are comforting to saints, especially to those who are scattered abroad without Sunday schools or church advantages.

Clyde M. Veldou, a small boy at the Children's Home, died June 11th after a long illness. For some years he was in the home of Bro. and Sr. Nunn at Independence but after Bro. Nunn's death he was placed in the home. There he was loved very greatly by Bro. and Sr. Robinson and all the inmates. Funeral service in charge of Bro. H. O. Smith and brief remarks by Bro. Amos Beave.

On yesterday the sermons were by Bro. G. R. Wells at 11 a. m. and Bro. E. E. Long at night, Bro. H. A. Stebbins and F. M. McDonald preached at Saint's Home and Liberty Home 7 p. m.

In the country the following brethren held appointments: R. J. Lambert and Joseph Roberts at Evergreen chapel, F. M. Weld at Bloomington chapel, Eli Hoyer at Andover; also at Oland meetings were held in a grave Saturday and Sunday, the sermons being by Bro. John Smith, J. F. Garver and Amos Beave.

At Evergreen in the afternoon service, six young people previously baptized by Bro. A. B. Young were confirmed under the hands of Bro. Joseph Roberts, R. J. Lambert, H. A. Stebbins and A. B. Young.

Bro. J. R. Lambert had the great misfortune of falling breaking the bones of one leg at or near the ankle. He was picking cherries and lost his balance. It is a serious mishap for one of his age and with his boldness weakness.

Bro. J. M. Stubbart left home, June 22d with Bro. and Sr. Stafford, after their marriage, on his way to his field of labor Southern Utah.

KANSAS CITY, MO., FOURTH BRANCH.

Since our last communication we have received words of instruction, exhortation and counsel from Brethren J. A. Gillen and James Kelley, of Independence. Bro. Selby of the Bennington Heights Branch, Bro. J. I. Young, of Colorado Springs, Bro. J. Fisher, C. L. Munro, and our pastor, L. A. Fowler.

Our meetings bring a good attendance usually. The Spirit of the Master being present in our prayer meetings, giving comfort and encouragement to the weary in mind and spirit.

Bro. J. C. Severin, Sr. Armstrong and several of the saints of Independence attended the dedicatory services of the new chapel in Atchison, Kansas. The saints there are to be congratulated on having obtained this beautiful building. Correspondent.

A characteristic story is told of a well-known New York lawyer. When he was a boy looking for something to do he saw the sign, "Boy wanted," hanging outside of a store in New York. He picked up the sign and entered the store. The proprietor met him. "What did you bring that sign in here for?" asked the storekeeper. "You won't need it any more," said the boy cheerfully. "I'm going to take the job."

THE ROUND TABLE.

Please explain: "Notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." Matt. 11:11.

It speaks of Christ who is at once both the least and the greatest in the kingdom of heaven—the least because he submitted himself to the whole law, not considering himself above the least requirement, and made himself the servant of all; the greatest because he was the Son of God and rose above all things. John the Baptist whom Jesus said was the greatest prophet who had arisen, had been sent to baptize, the ordinance being for the remission of sins and for entrance into the visible kingdom of God upon earth and Jesus did not consider himself above observing this ordinance which the gospel required of every man, coming in at the "door" which was opened to him by the "porter" or John the Baptist, as stated in John 10:2,3.

What were the beneficial results of the bondage in Egypt upon the Israelites?

They were brought into contact with the highest civilization and learning known to the world at that time, and were made familiar with national government, by which they were fitted for national existence. Moses especially was learned in all the arts of the Egyptians, and as the Israelites left they took with them a considerable portion of the learning which was beginning to decline among the Egyptians. It is also probable that the years of servitude developed a physical hardihood in the Israelites which they would not have gained had they remained in Palestine and followed the nomadic habits of their patriarchal fathers, and which fitted them for the heavier burden of maintaining a national existence. Further the wonderful manner of their deliverance established more firmly in their minds than anything else could have done that the God of their fathers was the one true God and that he was their God. Had they remained in Canaan it is probable that by the time of the exodus they would have completely turned to idolatry from which there would have been no deliverance.

Do all saints from over the world including those from Jerusalem gather to Zion in America?

Those who obey the gospel in various parts of the world will gather to America according to the promises made in the Scriptures, but the Jews will be gathered to Palestine mainly in their unbelief and be converted afterward. The Land of America was given to Joseph of Egypt and his posterity through Lehi, and the Book of Mormon also states that also "as many of the house of Israel as shall come," and as many of the gentiles as will repent and hearken unto the words of Christ "shall come in unto the covenant, and be numbered among this remnant of Jacob, unto whom I have given this land for their inheritance." 3 Nephi 10:1,2.

When Christ comes for the thousand years' reign and the faithful are gathered to him, will all the rest be destroyed or will they continue to live as now?

Many prophecies indicate a general destruction of the wicked at, and before, the coming of Christ, but of all these there will be a few left. Read Isa. 24. In verse six it speaks of a few men being left after the general destruction, and verse 13 compares it to the shaking of the olive tree, or the gleanings of the grapes after the vintage is done. In gathering the olives a few will be overlooked and the shaking of the tree reveals them, so when desolation comes upon the wicked a few will be left who will continue in mortality but at the age of 100 years will be changed, though the sinner at that age will be accursed. See Isa. 65:20; D. C. 45:7. The gospel work will continue among these that they may learn of Christ and salvation.

Should Latter Day Saints serve tea and coffee to guests when they do not use it themselves in their homes?

This is a matter for each one to determine for himself. It is neither necessary nor proper that fixed rules should be laid down by which saints should be governed in all the details of their daily lives, but that each one should judge for himself as to the propriety of such matters and act as may seem wisest under the circumstances.

CORRESPONDENCE

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 23.

Editor Ensign:—I leave for Maine next Friday evening the 27th and stop at Chicago over Sunday 29th and leave on Monday 30th, or Boston next from there on the evening of the 4th of July in Rockland, Me., will be at Vinal Haven for July 6th then to Machias.

I am feeling well and hopeful,

Yours truly

J. C. Foss.

LEXINGTON, Mo., June 2,

Lexington is about 35 miles east of Independence, Missouri. There are a few saints here, and we are nearly all miners. We have two Sunday schools here, one at Summit Camp, and one in town. The branch organization is also at Summit Camp, and a mission at Lexington. Our president, Elder G. W. Talley held a week's meetings at a place called McGrew camp near the river. Our presiding priest J. H. Howard went across the river to preach at the Alma Branch, Sunday, June 1st.

Bro. Chas. Gaither preached at the Union Mine Workers Hall Sunday, June 1st but he occupied only a part of the time and Bro. G. W. Talley occupied the rest of the time. Bro. Gaither has been lately ordained and has been doing well. We are having meeting here, the Lord has blessed us with the gifts that he has promised his children.

Editor Ensign:—I thought to send a few lines to let the interested know that we have arrived in our new field all right and are now quite well located at 816 East 12th St., Des Moines. Please note that this is not the address that was first published. The house that I first rented was not put in proper condition according to contract, so at the last moment we had to find another.

We had a very profitable conference at Decatur, Nebr. C. W. Prettyman was elected president of the district, and member of reunion committee. His address is Comstock, Nebr. Bro. H. A. Scott, 1534 Spruce St., Omaha, was elected district S. S. superintendent. The prospects for the week in that district look bright for the future. Arrangements was made to buy a tent for the Missionaries to use in gospel work. May the Father abundantly bless the work and the workers of that district who have been so kind to me all the years that I have been with them.

I was privileged to attend the conventions and conference of the Des Moines district, and found a lot of earnest workers here, so I hope our coming to this field will in no way hinder the progress of God's work, but that we all may be able to labor in love for the uplift of humanity. Brn. Parker and Williams will in a few days start the tent in Boone. There is a large demand for tent work in this district. I hope the Father will qualify these young men for the task. I find there will be enough in the city to occupy my time, so I will not need to be going into the ways of the world to find something to take my time.

Sister Baker's health is still poor, but some better than at last writing. She stood the strain and work of moving remarkably well, for which we feel thankful. If any have relatives or friends in the city whom they would like one to visit, send me their address.

As ever I remain,

J. H. Baker.

Ogden, Utah.

We have been silent in this part for sometime but not idle, although we have not been able to do what we would like to, and if we were to be judged by the number of sermons preached, it might be thought that our work was almost a failure since we are able to do but little public preaching here at the present time. However, we hope to be able to open the way for open air preaching soon and then we may be able to make up for lost time.

Our membership is small here and therefore our attendance at church is necessarily small, but we are doing what has never been done in this place before, and that is utilizing the press for preaching,—for two months or more we have had a synopsis of one of our Sunday sermons printed in the Examiner on Monday morning, and by that means we are preaching to a great many more through the press than we are through the pulpit.

While we were unable to do other work we decided to wield the paint brush for a while and give the little chapel here two coats of paint, which was much needed.

The difficult problem here is to get the ears of the people; the spirit of indifference towards religion, and a running wild over the pleasures of the world seems to be the greatest obstacles we have to contend with. On the 30th of May, all the dancing pavilions in the various parks were opened and they claim the most of the people evenings.

Our hope in the restored gospel was never stronger than it is now and we hope to enable those with whom we labor to see the beauty and grandure of a pure and unselfish life.

J. E. Vanderwood.

Lowell, Ark., June 12.

Dear Ensign:—I wish to speak through you to the Saints and friends in Arkansas and Louisiana, as I have again been appointed to labor among you for another year and have also been appointed as assistant minister in charge of the field. I wish to say to all let us labor to make this the most successful year that has ever been in this part of the field in the spreading and building up of the kingdom of God—let us all labor together with a greater interest than ever before.

I wish to say to the missionaries appointed to this field—let us push out into the field with courage. Knowing that if we do all we can the good Lord will be with us to help and our work will not be a failure.

We also want the help of the local ministry. We want you to feel that you have an interest in this work as well as the missionary, and that you can assist in the spread of the gospel.

There are many poor that have never heard the gospel and that the gospel may reach them it will be necessary that we pay our tithes and offerings.

I would be glad to hear from any and all that want preaching, and we will try to reach them in due time. My address is 109 W. Adams Street, Pittsburg, Kans.

With regards and best wishes to all, I am your brother in gospel bonds.

J. T. Riley.

Lamoni, Iowa, June 6th.

Dear Ensign:—Last night I left loved ones and home for my field of labor in the Lamoni Stake, finding a warm welcome at the house of Bro. John Smith. Attended prayer service last night where the impress of the Spirit witnessed that my offering of faith was acceptable.

The almost universal support rendered me in the Des Moines District for the past eleven years, fills my heart with gratitude. The last district conference was well attended and there was evidence on every hand of the advancement that the church had made during the time of my labors there, both in the city and district, for which I am thankful, for I feel that I have been permitted to share with my brethren and sisters there in that which has brought about that advancement.

My permanent address will still be 1205 Filmore St., Des Moines, but my mission address till otherwise notified will be Lamoni, Iowa. To either of these addresses I would be pleased to receive any information of places or persons that desire my presence as a minister for Christ. I expect to go to Conterville for a short time, to assist in the work there, in the vicinity of which place I expect to continue till the coming reunion at Lamoni, to begin July 25th.

I desire the prayers of the Saints in the mission, especially, that I may at least assist you in the work of building up the kingdom of God.

J. F. Mintun.

Harlan, Iowa, June 17.

Editor Ensign:—Our Galland's Grove conference at Mallard, Iowa, the 13th to 15th inst., is now a matter of history, and very pleasant memories will linger indefinitely in the minds of all the Saints and friends present at its sessions.

The S. S. and Z. R. L. S. conjoint convention program was well rendered and a literary as well as a spiritual treat, and we were made to realize that the Spirit of our Master was with us. Order, peace and the Spirit's presence characterized the nature of all the services of the conference.

At the morning prayer meeting, Apostle Gillen and Bishop Hunt, ordained Brethren Orman Salisbury, Des Moines, and A. R. Crippen, Primghar, Iowa, each to the office of "High Priest." Preaching Saturday evening by O. Salisbury, and Sunday morning, afternoon and night by Brn. J. Arthur Gillen, J. B. Wildermuth, and D. R. Chambers, respectively. We would not forget to make mention of the presence of Sister C. J. Hunt, our district secretary, and her work of the conference, performed faithfully and well, also, Bro. and Mrs. Mann, from Primghar, the latter was appreciated greatly by all for assistance rendered in the musical department. The local Saints were all appreciated who aided therein, for their part rendered on the musical department, especially Bro. Carmichael, in having charge, and Sister Carmichael, Jr., as organist.

At the close of the afternoon preaching services Sunday, the local branch president, Elder Robert Fish, "buried" Sr. Dorothy Smith, Emitsburg, Iowa, and Bro. Wm. Turner, in baptism, in the font. May God bless them.

At this writing the writer's heart goes back with kindly remembrances to the Saints of Eastern Iowa, with whom we have labored, going in and out among you for nine years, and while your conference was the same date as ours, we did not forget repeatedly to make mention of you in our prayers.

Thanking God for that which is past and trusting him for all that's to come. Your servant for the Christ's sake.

Zion's Ensign:—I have been looking for sometime for an article from Chicago, Ill. One naturally clings to home and birth place. Are the Saints there still up and doing? So busy with their building plans, that they don't jot down their progress?

We would be glad to welcome an elder to our home, and am quite sure I could secure school house for preaching. In this district they have what they call a "big meeting," each summer when the crops are laid by. Two years ago Methodist, and last year Baptist. How I wish they might hear a real gospel sermon. Most of them have never heard of our people.

Would be pleased to hear from any of the Saints living near here. We are in Roger Mills County, extreme western part of the state, bordering on Texas.

Since last writing the Ensign, we have been blessed with a "darling baby girl," Feb. 1, 1913. Hoping some of the brethren may pass this way. Praying for the redemption of Zion.

Your sister in the gospel,

Ida M. Brown.

Hazel, Ohio, June 13

Dear Ensign:—We are still striving for the uplift of Zion's cause. We started our S. S. as soon as school was out at the school house. We have had S. S. every Sunday with small crowds but good interest. If there are any elders in this district that could come here we would be glad to have them come.

There are some here that I think will come into the church and help keep the work here if we had an elder. I have prayed that the Lord would give me something to do that I might help the work along. Two years ago Bro. Ebeling was here and we started our S. S., and I was put in for Supt. I thank the Lord that I can do something to help. The people seem slow to understand. I ask the Saints to pray for me that the Lord may give me health and strength to do his will. I am in poor health. Ever praying for the salvation of Zion, I remain,

Your sister,

Mrs. Sarah M. Mosier.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

A REVIEW OF THE FIRST TWO CHAPTERS OF "MORMONISM, THE ISLAM OF AMERICA," BY BRUCE KINNEY, D. D.

By Leonard S. Rhodes.

Editorial Note:—"Mormonism, The Islam of America," is a recent book written by Bruce Kinney, D. D., and issued under the direction of the Council of Women for Home Missions, with a supplementary work entitled, "Text-Book Supplement, Mormonism, The Islam of America," prepared by the Publication Committee of the Council of Women for Home Missions. The council is interdenominational and the book with its supplement is designed as a text for study by the church societies throughout the land. Like all writers against "Mormonism," Dr. Kinney has failed to distinguish between the divine part and the human part of so-called Mormonism, and displays the evils of Utah and the mistakes of men, with numerous misrepresentations of fact and motive, and by these holds up for reproach the things of truth and righteousness upon which the original church under Joseph Smith, Jr., was based, and which have been perpetuated in the Reorganized Church. The church in Utah is held to be an apostate body, and notwithstanding the many evils which have crept into its faith and practice, portions of the truth remain which have given it its strength and power, but writers who seek to expose the evils, put the good under the same ban, and attribute all to Joseph Smith, Jr., thus bringing the Reorganized Church under the cloud of reproach to which we decidedly object. This church believes it is entitled to fair and just representation, and when that is granted it is willing to abide the result. We willingly extend the same right to all others. This paper was written for reading before the Home Missionary Society of Centralia, Washington.—Editor.

"And blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great shall be your reward in heaven; for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you."—Matt. 5:11, 12.

Ladies of the Home Missionary Society of Centralia, greeting:—The query has recently been made, Why do members of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints resent an attack on "Mormonism?" This is a misunderstanding. We do not resent such an attack when it is confined to "Mormonism" as it was and is represented in Utah, and in such cases we have nothing to say further than to urge justice and charity toward them as all others. But in the vast majority of cases the attack is also directed against Joseph Smith, Jr., and the church organized by him in 1830. According to our belief, and several court decisions, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the "True and Lawful continuation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830." (Extract from the Decision of the Court of Common Pleas held in Lake County, Ohio, in 1880.)

Consequently an attack upon the church organized in 1830 by Joseph Smith is a direct attack upon us of the Reorganized Church. The church in Utah of which Joseph F. Smith is president, is another church, distinct and separate from the one previously mentioned, and, as the court says:

Has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." (Ibid.) and was organized 1847:

"On this day (August 6, 1847,) the Twelve were rebaptized. * * * We soon repaired to the water, and President Young went down into the water and baptized all his brethren of the Twelve present. He then confirmed us, and sealed upon us our apostleship, and all the keys, powers and blessings belonging to that office. Brother Heber C. Kimball baptized and confirmed President Brigham Young. * * * Sunday, August 8, —, the whole camp of Israel renewed their covenants before the Lord by baptism. There was 284 baptized this morning, making 284 rebaptized during the last three days."—Historical Record, Vol. 9, p. 87, as quoted in Brighamism Exposed, page 25.

The Mormons of course will deny that this is organization, but taken in the light of the court decision, what else can be made of rebaptism, reconfirmation, and reordination, but organizing a church. Briefly then the church organized in 1830, and reorganized in 1860, is one and the same church; and the church organized in 1847, is another church, the Mormon church of Utah.

Before the last meeting of your local society when you took up the first lesson on Mormonism, we learned of it through your item in the Daily Chronicle. We called on Mrs. Robert Reid, who kindly loaned us her text to read. Finding the text seriously in error, and believing the Ladies' Home Missionary Society desire only truth, we are writing this criticism, hoping to either read it or have it read before your next class meeting. You are representing yourselves in your true light, that is, as students, therefore, we wish it distinctly understood that we are not criticising you by this writing; but that our criticism is confined to the text which you are using.

Permit us to ask a question. In any case where a man or institution is charged with crime or error, which do you prefer to learn, that the man or institution is guilty, or innocent? We repeat the question that you may distinctly understand it. Do you prefer to learn that a man is guilty of a crime with which he may be charged, or do you prefer to learn that he is innocent? Feeling positive that you will unhesitatingly agree that you prefer to find a man or set of men innocent, we shall now attempt to prove the charges in your text against Joseph Smith and his associates to be groundless and the author unreliable.

We shall first call your attention to a statement found on page 18:

"Smith soon received a revelation in which the Lord was reported as saying, 'I will consecrate the riches of the Gentiles unto My people' (D. C. 42). It is said that this was so liberally interpreted by his people that they were soon in disrepute among their neighbors, and in 1822, Smith and his associate, Rigdon, were tarred and feathered by a mob."

One objection to this paragraph is indefiniteness. Section 42 of Doctrine and Covenants covers more than eight pages, and required careful searching to find this pretended quotation. If it had been written "D. C. 42:11," it could then have been readily found, and the author would have shown less fear of detection. But the most serious charge we have to make is misrepresentation. We now quote the sentence as it stands in D. C. 42:11:

"I will consecrate of the riches of those who embrace my gospel, among the Gentiles, unto the poor of my people who are of the house of Israel."

From a sentence of twenty-eight words, seventeen are omitted to prove a people guilty of crimes they never committed. Can such a misquotation be accidental? (It is misquoted again on page 19). In view of such misquotation can the author be trusted to tell correctly as to whether or not "his people" "were soon in disrepute among their neighbors?"

To take up in detail all the objections, misrepresentations, and incorrect statements in this book, would make my paper too long to read without wearying you, therefore, we shall answer briefly a number of them and finally take up several more as serious as our first objection:

On page 18 the author says:

"Almost from the very first the infant church became involved in various troubles with its neighbors."

And in the very next sentence he contradicts himself by saying:

"It was a time of religious frenzy over 'Millerism' and other cults, and the preachers of this new religion floated into popularity on the tide of this enthusiasm."

This is the first time we ever heard of preachers floating into popularity by becoming involved in various troubles "with their neighbors."

The last sentence, page 17, reads:

"April 6, 1830, he organized at Fayette, N. Y., the church which now bears the official name of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

According to the court decision and other evidence produced in our introduction, along with the decision of another court in the U. S., (The Circuit Court of the U. S., Western District of Missouri,) and one in Canada, Joseph Smith, Jr., organized the church which now bears the official name of The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Will the author set himself up as superior in wisdom to three courts and contradict volumes of evidence, or was he ignorant of these facts? In either case is he a safe teacher for the intelligent body of people composing the Ladies' Home Missionary Society?

In support of his so-called History of Mormons from page 17 to 25, he gives only four quotations; and furthermore there is not a hint given as to the source of these quotations. Latter-Day-Saintism is not a dead issue; all people are not unanimously agreed that it is false; nearly half a million people of all grades of intelligence believe in it; and neither they nor others will accept one as authority who begins by confessing that his work is not original. He gives references for many of his assertions concerning Utah Mormonism. Why does he not give references for his statements relative to the original church under Joseph Smith, Jr.? Are they inventions of his own; or is he ashamed of their source? If this could be called proof, it would be like fighting an enemy in the dark to meet it. On page 21, he refers to the Star. Which does he mean, Evening and Morning Star, or Millennial Star? There are something like 20 volumes of those papers which of course would make it nearly impossible to learn if such a quotation existed.

On page 19, Mr. Kinney quotes, D. C. 97, as saying that "Zion could not be moved out of her place." How careless! This is what the revelation says, as it stands in Utah Edition, 97:18-20, and in the Lamoni Edition 94:5:

"And now, behold, if Zion do these things, she shall [future] prosper and spread herself and become very glorious, very great, and very terrible; and the nations of the earth shall honor her, and shall say, Zion is the city of our God; and surely Zion cannot fall, neither be moved out of her place, for God is there, and the hand of the Lord is there. * * * therefore verily thus saith the Lord, Let Zion rejoice, for this is Zion, THE PURE IN HEART."

You will notice this is what the nations would say of her in the future on the condition, "if Zion do these things" previously mentioned. If the author had correctly quoted this he would have had his point. Was this again accidental? "Volumes" he says (page 22), "of similar evidence could be cited." We agree with him.

A humorous thing about this book on Mormonism, is that he calls Mormonism the Islam of America. According to the Century Book of Facts, "Islam" means "Submission to God" or "Salvation." (p. 550). If he means the gospel as taught by Joseph Smith, we agree with him once more.

On pages 55 and 56, it is said that "Smith, a man of magnificent physique, was not to labor, but was to be supported" from the tithing. In the same sense we might say the Rev. Kinney is not to labor, but is to be supported, yes more than that, he is to be salaried; therefore, unless we call the ministry labor, Brother Kinney receives a salary without labor. We are not insinuating against the doctor as touching his diligence, but we wish you to clearly understand that what is meant is that Joseph Smith was not to labor in temporal affairs, because his manifold duties as president of the church were sufficient to keep him very busy. As a result of his being only supported and not salaried, he died a poor man.

On page 50, Mr. Harris is said to have been taken into partnership with Mr. Smith in hope of financial returns; and on page 53 it is said he willingly sacrificed his farm to be restored to favor. We wonder if Mr. Kinney knows what consistency means. But then it is garbled quotations, or anything to down the Latter Day Saints. We begin to suspect that he is a believer in the teachings of Brigham Young, that it is right to lie for the upbuilding of God's kingdom. (p. 118).

"Scores of his neighbors in every state in which he ever lived have made sworn testimony that immorality and criminality prevailed in his make-up."

Yes, many have put great confidence in the purported testimony of Joseph Smith's neighbors to prove him a bad man. Supposing they had testified derogatorily of his character, does it follow that it is true? Aside from His disciples, did many speak flatteringly of Christ's character? No indeed. He was called a "wine bibber," a "glutton," a "deceiver" and many other bad names. It was so with all the reformers. We admire John Wesley as a noble, honest and pious man, yet his neighbors did not say this of him; listen to what they did say:

"The strangest suspicions and calumnies were circulated; and men will believe any calumnies, however preposterously absurd, against those of whom they are disposed to think ill. He had hanged himself and been cut down just in time;—he had been fined for selling gin," etc.—Life of Wesley, by Southy, p. 272.

John Wesley was called a gin-peddler and would-be suicide by his neighbors, but that did not make it true. Neither does it follow that Joseph Smith was immoral, criminal, etc., because some one, neighbors said so. However all do not accuse him, for many of our ministers have in their possessions the testimonies of many neighbors that he was a good, honest, moral man, far above the standard of the vast majority of his accusers. A number of these testimonies are given in Joseph Smith Defended, commencing on page 67, and Braden-Kelley Debate, pp. 102-104, 391-396 and elsewhere.

It is said that Mr. Smith by his inflammatory speeches caused his own assassination; yet we find on pp. 7, 8 of the message of Governor Ford of Illinois, Dec. 23, 1844, that the inflammatory speeches were made by Smith's enemies and that the accusations made against him and his brethren were false. (Church History, Vol. 1, p. 739).

Now let us take up the Spaulding Manuscript story. Pages 52 to 56 are so confused and contradictory in detail that it is difficult to understand just what the author wishes his readers to believe. Briefly, his story seems to be this: That Smith and Harris began a translation which failed because Mrs. Harris stole it before it was finished. And that Solomon Spaulding wrote at least two stories. The first one was his Manuscript Found story, supposed to have been "found in a stone box in a cave," and which finally fell into the hands of W. H. Sabine, Spaulding's brother-in-law. The second Spaulding manuscript story "was afterwards written over with Scriptural terminology." "The first rough draft" of this second story, he claims "is now in Oberlin College." The revision is the one stolen by "Rigdon and which became the basis for the Book of Mormon."

Let us examine this home-spun yarn carefully. If Spaulding was a graduate from "the Dartmouth School of Theology," why was he such an ignorant blunderer as his "rough draft" Oberlin copy shows him to be? If the real Manuscript Found story is the one taken to W. H. Sabine how is it that the Oberlin copy also pretends to be "found in a stone box in a cave" just as he describes the former on page 54? Since Mrs. Harris had Smith's first translation, why didn't she expose the Spaulding translation by producing hers in contrast? If it be replied that it was made over to resemble the first story, how is it that John Spaulding could recognize "manufactured proper names, peculiar idioms, historical ideas and data which he remembered as having seen in his brother's story," and that too seventeen years after he had seen his brother's story? And by the way, it is here stated that a Mormon elder read extracts from the Book of Mormon at a meeting where "pious" John Spaulding made the above discovery; however, the oldest versions of this story say it was a Mormon woman preacher, but this was changed because our opponents discovered that Latter Day Saints have never had a woman preacher. Again we have read considerable of the Oberlin Manuscript Found story, and have reached the same conclusion that Mr. James H. Fairchild did when he wrote to the New York Observer, February 5, 1885:

"Mr. Rice, myself, and others compared it with the 'Book of Mormon,' and could detect no resemblance between the two, in general or in detail." [Notice Mr. Kinney (p. 46) omits two words, "or in," causing it to read "in general detail."] "There seems to be no name or incident common to the two. The solemn style of the 'Book of Mormon,' in imitation of the English Scriptures, does not appear in the manuscript. The only resemblance is in the fact that both profess to set forth the history of lost tribes."—Presidency and Priesthood, pp. 74, 376. Also Manuscript Found.

Of course Mr. Kinney omitted all that after his "general detail," as well the "or in" which might have spoiled his story. Was all this omission accidental too? In a postscript to a letter written to Mr. Joseph Smith, March 28, 1885, Mr. L. L. Rice said:

"Upon reflection, since writing the foregoing, I am of the opinion that no one who reads this manuscript will give credit to the story that Solomon Spaulding was in any wise the author of the 'Book of Mormon.' * * * * Finally I am more than half convinced that this is his only writing of the sort, and that any pretense that Spaulding was in any sense the author of the other, is a sheer fabrication."—Manuscript Found, pp. 7, 8.

The above should forever settle the question in the minds of our hearers concerning the Spaulding romance "fabrication."

On page 57, is perhaps about the most shameful piece of garbling and misrepresentation in the whole book. After exposing it we are certain the Home Missionary Society will no longer approve this book as a reliable text, for no true Christian will knowingly uphold deception. On page 56, he begins by asserting that Mr. Smith claimed no one but himself could look on the plates and live. This is only an assertion made without a particle of proof whose correctness we challenge.

"But he afterwards declared that they 'teased' him so that he finally had a revelation (D. C. 8), in which the Lord said that he might show the plates to three of his servants."—pp. 56, 57.

This statement is certainly misleading. The revelation was not given for the purpose of granting permission to view the plates, but to say who might view them. Do you get the meaning? From that part of the Book of Mormon already translated they had learned that three men were to become special witnesses; and Martin Harris, David Whitmer and Oliver Cowdery were anxious to become those three special witnesses. The Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 11:133, 134, Authorized Edition, reads:

"Wherefore, * * * * the book shall be hid from the eyes of the world, that the eyes of none shall behold it, save it be that three witnesses shall behold it, by the power of God, besides him to whom the book shall be delivered; and they shall testify to the truth of the book and the things therein. And there is none other which shall view it, save it be a few, according to the will of God, to bear testimony of his word unto the children of men."

Surely there is no inconsistency on this point, for the translation had early determined that "three" and "a few" others were to view the plates, and it now remained for the revelation to determine who they were. Following his policy to misrepresent and garble, Mr. Kinney pretends to quote the revelation, but we give it correct as it is in D. C. 5:3:

Behold, * * * * this generation shall have my word through you; and in addition to your testimony, the testimony of three of my servants, whom I shall call and ordain, unto whom I will show these things; * * * * ye, they shall know of a surety that these things are true; for from heaven will I declare it unto them; * * * * and to none else will I grant this power to receive this same testimony, among this generation."

From the above we discover that three of God's servants are to be shown the plates by the Lord, a voice out of heaven will declare the plates to be true, and no others in this generation are to receive this same testimony, and thus become special witnesses. Not a hint is given that others shall not see the plates.

And now comes the climax of the author's utter unreliability. The testimony of the "Three witnesses" is deliberately put for the testimony of the "Eight" to blacken the character of men far above such principles. It cannot be said that it is the work of some author quoted by him, for in a foot note on page 61, he names the edition of the Book of Mormon he is using. The "Eight" witnesses never claimed to have been shown the plates "by the power of God," but that "we have seen and hefted," and know of a surety, that the said Smith has got the plates of which we have spoken." Remember, ladies of the Home Missionary Society that this damaging misrepresentation is on page 57 of Mr. Kinney's book. Do you care to continue the study of this work as a text-book, when its unreliability is so apparent?

In conclusion on this point let us say that none of the witnesses ever denied their testimony. This we can easily prove if proof is desired.

There are numerous other garblings, and misrepresentations in the two chapters we have reviewed which we are sorely tempted to examine, but we refrain from doing so, much less to take up the remainder of the book, lest we have already wearied you; but we feel sure the foregoing is amply sufficient to prove to any fair-minded person that the book is wholly unreliable.

SICKNESS AND THE WORD OF WISDOM.

BY SR. MINNIE WARNOCK.

Surely if the saints were keeping the "Word of Wisdom" and were walking in obedience to the commandments, they would not be sick. The "word" so states; who can deny?

Some may have become weary of the "Word of Wisdom; some may think they cannot understand it sufficiently to keep it with success, and have dismissed it from their minds. Yet it remains, just the same, the only plan for their temporal salvation.

The "Word of Wisdom" shows forth "the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all saints in the last days." Thus, it is of the greatest importance that we enter into its study with zeal and determination not only to say, but to do what is written therein,

"It is adapted to the capacity of the weak, and the weakest of all saints who are or can be called saints." Hence we are not called upon to solve any great and difficult problem, but to engage with simple and unreserved hearts and minds, in applying these principles of wisdom to our daily lives.

God forewarned his saints of the evils and designs of conspiring men and these "evils and designs" are in existence now in deadly reality. We should safeguard ourselves by giving diligent heed to this counsel of God.

TOBACCO AND STRONG DRINKS.

The church has made a noble fight against these evils, but it is not altogether victorious yet. The warfare must continue.

HOT DRINKS.

This habit seems to be a very difficult one to overcome. A visit to a conference dining hall surely gives one the impression that many saints are still wedded to this habit. Why will saints be so heedless as not to put themselves on the safe side of the question. If they are slaves to habit they are not free in the gospel.

FLESH OF BEASTS AND OF FOWLS.

The Jewish people are, and always have been very particular in the selection of their meat. There is no reason why latter day Israel should not be just as particular. The "word" says it is to be used sparingly and "only in times of winter, or cold or famine," and with thanksgiving.

"EVERY HERB IN THE SEASON THEREOF."

All wholesome herbs, God hath ordained for the constitution, nature and use of man, every herb in the season thereof." In other words every wholesome vegetable in the season thereof. This plainly bars the use of canned vegetables or herbs out of season. We must be content to enjoy the pleasant summer green things as they come, and depend upon the sturdy substantial ones to nourish us through the winter. Most any one can enumerate quite a list of good winter vegetables that require only a little care and wisdom in housing.

"Ordained for the constitution, nature and use of man;" seems to suggest that we study along this line as to their particular values as food, their adaptation to the various needs of the body also the study of the body as to its power and process of assimilating food, etc. This would seem to be a good place to dig for hidden "treasures of knowledge."

"EVERY FRUIT IN THE SEASON THEREOF."

The "weakest of all saints" as well as the strongest ought surely to be able to understand that. Taken simply without straining or twisting the meaning in the common acceptance of the words, it means, summer fruit for summer use—winter fruits for winter.

We all know how these luscious berries and fruits come one after another in perfect rotation, admirably adapted by their refreshing acidity to the constitution and nature of man for his summer use. Were it not for the extensive custom of dopping these fruits with sugar and whisking them into cans, there would no doubt be enough for every soul to have a goodly feast of each kind as it ripened in its season, fresh and uncooked, with its own pure sweet which nature has provided.

This canning habit has gotten a great hold upon us to be sure. Once I lived in a town where I could not buy any berries. They had all been engaged far ahead by the housewives for canning purposes.

Cooked fruits are usually, if not always too tart to be agreeable if not loaded with sugar. Sugar is a highly concentrated and dangerous intestinal irritant and should be used sparingly if at all. I once heard a good Latter Day Saint brother tell how it had been shown him of the Lord that the use of white sugar injuriously affected the kidneys. Those who are addicted to the sugar habit in alluring forms, can sympathize with those who are struggling to overcome grosser, though perhaps less injurious habits. There are those who will say "what will we have to eat in winter if we do not put up fruit, preserves, jellies, etc." Well yes, that would seem to be a trial until we became accustomed to the change. Then we would begin to appreciate as we never did before, those fruits ordained for winter use.

Of course the apple is the king of winter fruits. What a wonderful variety, sufficient to satisfy every taste. Think of the splendid Rhode Island Greening, the fragrant and delicious white winter Pearmain, the juicy Belleflower, and other rare kinds quite beyond description in fragrance beauty and flavor to say nothing of the commoner sorts such as the Winesap, Ben Davis, Jonathan, Arkansas Black, etc. etc. More attention would be paid to planting and cultivating winter apple orchards, were their importance fully appreciated. Then there are pears, and bananas coming in their thick skins and large nutrient laden center stems wonderfully arranged for long shipments. Bananas should not be eaten until fully ripe, as indicated by brown spots on the skins, and should be well masticated.

This fruit or vegetable, as some consider it, together with oranges, lemons, grape-fruit and other long keepers, might be considered as always in season. Then there are nut, milk and other dairy products, honey and many other good things that nourish our bodies and add to our gustatory delight.

Surely God is good. Section 59 Doctrine and Covenants shows forth his great kindness and generosity. The latter part of paragraph 4 says:—"Yea, and the herb, and the good things which cometh of the earth, whether for food or for raiment, or for houses or for barns, or for orchards, or for gardens, or for vineyards; yea all things which cometh of the earth in the season thereof, are made for the benefit and use of man, both to please the eye, and to gladden the heart; yea for food and for raiment, for taste and for smell, to strengthen the body, and to enliven the soul."

"ALL GRAIN IS GOOD FOR THE FOOD OF MAN."

Thus we have a fine variety. Some are suited for winter, others for summer use. We should learn their adaptation to the various needs of our bodies. They are "the staff of life," so we must lean upon them for support. We should see to it that our staff is not whittled away until only a small splinter remains, as is done with the wheat when it is converted into fine white flour. "Wheat is for man." With all its perfect elements for the building up of the body, it is dedicated to man's special use. Hence it should be treated with due reverence and respect.

"WHOSOEVER AMONG YOU ARE SICK."

In February 1831, the Lord gave instructions how to care for the sick. We should bear in mind that this was two years before the "Word of Wisdom" was given. Those who had not faith to be healed but believed, were, first of all, to be nourished with herbs and mild food. All rich and indigestible foods were to be eliminated from their diet. This treatment alone would often obviate the necessity of the next step—the sending for the elders. Wholesome, nourishing, seasonable vegetables cleanse and purify the system. Food experts and scientists are discovering their medicinal values. It is important that we know how to cook them so that all their valuable elements may be conserved.

February 27, 1833 the "Word of Wisdom" came, promising, on conditions of obedience, immunity from sickness, disease and premature death, in other words temporal salvation. It has been radiating this light and hope over the church for eighty years. Have the saints made good, or are they still sick and ailing and still sending for the elders, or the physicians or both?

It is plain to be seen that health conditions prevailing today cause a vast loss of time and energy and bring anxiety misery and discouragement like a dark pall over many of our bright hopes and joyful expectations, thus hindering the onward progress of the work.

"After much tribulation cometh the blessing." We should endeavor not to prolong the tribulation by our own unwisdom. It is also said that saints must have the bitter, else they cannot know the sweet.

If we become too reconciled to the bitter, we may cease to crave the sweet. It was once said of an old lady, that she was never so happy as when she was miserable.

Imagine looking over a vast concourse of saints, perhaps all the saints of these last days, and see them in the full flush of bodily health and vigor, eyes sparkling with intelligence, countenances beaming with hope and love and zeal—ready to conquer the world. "Clear as the moon, fair as the sun and terrible as an army with banners."

ATCHISON CHAPEL DEDICATION.

In realization of hopes fondly cherished for some years, and especially for the last year, the Lord has bountifully opened the way whereby it became possible for us of Atchison, to purchase the discarded Christian Science chapel, corner 9th and Santa Fe Streets, which we dedicated Sunday, May 25th, which day was the first of our occupancy since having purchased it.

Having been able to pay the cash for it we are especially thankful that we were able to be in harmony with the Lord's pleasure in that regard.

Bro. John W. Rushton preached the dedicatory sermon, the prayers by our veteran Bro. T. W. Chaburn. Favorable comments in regard to each are contained in a clipping from one of our newspapers which we are sending. Bro. Bullard of the Bishopric preached in the afternoon and Bro. Rushton again at night. In a prayer and social service preceding the evening preaching service, the power of the Lord was manifested. Bro. Bullard delivered a prophecy containing words of courage and consolation, also of warning against the designs of the adversary.

We take pleasure in extending a vote of thanks to those who so nobly assisted us in our dedicatory services, allied with which we wish to mention the names of Bro. and Sr. Brocaw, Bro. and Sr. Orville James and Sr. Brackebury, whose consecrated service in the musical feature we shall ever appreciate.

We wish also to take this means of thanking those who have sent contributions to assist us, and to express our appreciation of the presence of those who were in attendance from the different branches. We look with hope and faith toward the prospect of the future.

Greetings to our co-laborers throughout the world.

Pastor Atchison Branch.

PATRIOTIC ADVICE TO THE YOUNG.

As one thinks of the United States perhaps the first thing that impresses itself upon the mind is its great strength. The stretch of its prairies, the depth of its forests, the breadth of its fields, the size of its cities, the height of its "sky-scrapers," the miles of its steel railroads the roar of its factories and foundries and printing-presses, all these things mean strength.

With this glory of strength comes an accompanying peril. It may be called the peril of "self-will." Strength is a dangerous gift. If a boy or a citizen has it, without having with it good principles of honor and kindness, he is dangerous. So a great and strong nation needs to learn humility along with its glory of strength. We must recognize that the business of life is not to have our own way or seek our own glory, but to submit ourselves to the requirements of duty. Our greatness as a nation will depend ultimately not on how much we can get for ourselves, but on how much we can do for the rest of the world.

Another of our nation's glories is its freedom. It cost a great deal; it is a priceless treasure. Yet with this possession of freedom, freedom from the dominion of other powers, freedom of assembly, and speech, and of the press, has come another peril—the peril of lawlessness.

Young America needs to learn again the joys of obedience. It is not necessary to break rules and laws to have a good time. Organizations like the Boy Scouts and Camp-Fire Girls are demonstrating how much fun can be had in accordance with strict rules and regulations.

Another glory is our wealth; and its accompanying peril is our greed. It must be restrained and conquered. The rights of the toilers must be recognized. We must come to see and feel that wealth mined from the privations and travail of our fellows is accursed wealth.

We have many added glories; we have many other perils. But these will give us food for thought on Independence Day.—The Christian Herald.

THE PUNISHMENT THAT EDUCATES.

From my earliest recollection of punishment, I believe that I can say that it never did me any good to punish me in the usual way. The only punishment—if it could be called a punishment—that could ever reach me was to appeal directly to my feelings and judgment as an individual. Perhaps, however, that cannot be called punishment, but is more in the nature of a chastisement; for there is a fine distinction between the two terms.

Punishment is that which is the direct result of wrong committed. Chastisement is pain, or otherwise, as the case may be, that is inflicted for the purpose of teaching a lesson. I do not know that I could spend my time this afternoon to better advantage than to call attention to something I read a good many years ago, and that made a strong impression upon my mind at the time. And when your president called me on the 'phone, it at once came to my mind. It is the experience of a school-teacher, and I take it from one of Joseph Cook's lectures. He says:

"On the slope of Beacon Hill, a New England author, who ought always to be named side by side with Pestalozzi, once made it a rule, in a school full of subtle thought, that, if a pupil violated its regulations, the master should substitute his own voluntary sacrificial chastisement for the pupil's punishment. Bronson Alcott will allow me to say here and now, in his presence, that he has told me that this one regulation almost Christianized his school. The pupils were quite young, and for that reason the measure was effective among them. He was no dreamer. He would never have adopted this measure except with the sensitive. Nevertheless, the operation of these untutored, hardly unfolded, and therefore spontaneously natural, hearts, indicates what man is. "One day," says Bronson Alcott, "I called up before me a pupil eight or ten years of age, who had violated an important regulation of the school. All the pupils were looking on, and they knew what the rule of the school was. I put the ruler into the hand of that offending pupil; I extended my hand; I told him to strike. The instant the boy saw my extended hand, and heard my command to strike, I saw a struggle begin in his face. A new light sprang up in his countenance. A new set of shuttles seemed to be weaving a new nature within him. I kept my hand extended, and the school was in tears. The boy struck once, and he himself burst into tears; and I constantly watched his face, and he seemed in a bath of fire, which was giving him a new nature. He had a different mood toward the school and toward the violated law. The boy seemed transformed by the idea that I should take chastisement in place of his punishment. He went back to his seat, and ever after was one of the most docile of all the pupils in that school, although he had been at first one of the rudest."

I believe that this contains in a nut-shell what every one should consider in an endeavor to punish a child; and I believe that it contains in a nut-shell the idea that is contained in the topic assigned me today. The punishment that educates is the punishment that is entirely shorn of any idea of vengeance, and leaves only the impression behind that it is inflicted solely for the good of the wrong doer. In the method adopted by this school-teacher, any idea that might have lurked in the mind of the pupil that the teacher desired to inflict physical pain upon him was removed, and it was forced upon him that the only object that the teacher could possibly have was the pupil's own good, and the result was all that could be desired. The teacher was chastised, and the pupil was punished by seeing what he had brought upon another in the way of pain.

I can call to mind an incident in the life of two boys. The older one had been away from home a good deal. He came home from one of his extended trips, and the next time he went he took with him his younger brother. They did not get very far until they were taken into custody by an officer of the law and were brought before a police court for vagrancy. The older one realizing that he was solely to blame for the misdemeanor of the younger boy, asked the judge to inflict all the punishment upon him, and let the younger boy go, but the judge felt that by giving the younger boy the same penalty that he inflicted upon the older boy, he would make the punishment of the older boy more effectual, and so pronounced the same judgment upon each. Here was a case where the younger boy was chastised, not punished, for he had really done no wrong, for the good of the older boy. Both boys were benefitted. The younger boy was very strongly impressed with the generosity of his brother in offering to take all the punishment for both, and the older boy was impressed as he could never have been by suffering the punishment for both, by seeing his younger brother suffer for something that he had brought upon him.

True punishment is that which is suffered as a result of wrong doing, and must be commensurate with the wrong done. In inflicting this punishment we must be careful to discriminate as to the degree of punishment inflicted, or we may come under the just censure of inflicting a punishment that is out of proportion to the wrong done, and by so doing gain the enmity of the child or person punished. Can we always determine what the wrong deed demands as punishment? If we cannot, it would be better for us to substitute our own voluntary chastisement, as Bronson Alcott did in his school, for the punishment of the offender.

It is possible that some children cannot be reached that way, but I believe that the majority can be so reached, and much more effectually than by the punishment of the real wrong doer. It is upon this principle that Christ acted in suffering for the sins of the world, and it is through this principle that he has gained the love of the world, and which caused the great Napoleon to say of him, "Jesus Christ conquered by love and today millions would die for him."

H. O. Smith.

EDITORIAL

THE AARONIC PRIESTHOOD.

Recently the editor received a question which with its answer appeared in the Round Table department as follows: "What is the authority for priests in your church? The immediate authority is the same as for the existence of the church itself, viz.: the command of God," etc., Dr. Smith's Bible Dictionary was quoted to show "that the old classification of the high-priests, priests, and Levites, was reproduced in the bishops, priests and deacons of the Christian Church." This item seems to have prompted the following letter of inquiry which is offered to our readers, with further comment upon the subject.

Having read your paper with profit, I would like to have you answer the following questions in your next issue, giving Bible proofs and references:

1st. Why do you have priests of the Aaronic order in your church, and where do you get your authority for them, for I had understood your ministers to say that your church was exactly like the New Testament Church? The early writers of that church in different places in their writings tell of different officers but no Aaronic priests. Paul says, Heb. 7:11, 12, there is no perfection by the Levitical priesthood, as the priesthood was changed and the law also. Heb. 7:22, says, "Jesus was made a surety of a better testament," and in verse 24 he continueth ever, and hath an unchangeable priesthood. (Melchisedec). See also chapters 8, 9, 10. Nothing about Aaronic priests being in the church there.

2d. What office was held by Philip who is spoken of in Acts 8:5, and 8:26, and why did he not lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost? Is he the same Philip as in Acts 6:5? We read he baptized and did many miracles, but it seems that the apostles had to come down from Jerusalem to lay on hands for the Holy Ghost.

In order to answer properly the question relating to the Aaronic order and priests, it will be necessary to notice several points relative to priesthood in general.

Two Priesthoods.

The New Testament speaks of two priesthoods, one after the order of Melchisedec and one after the order of Aaron. See Hebrews 7:11. Each of these priesthoods being an order includes more than one office as may be seen by the number of offices named, both in the New and in the Old Testaments. The Melchisedec priesthood is superior to the other as will appear from a reading of the seventh chapter of Hebrews, Christ himself being the great High-priest. It is this priesthood which administers the gospel in its entirety, the law which maketh perfect. Melchisedec Priesthood Before Christ.

Paul says that Melchisedec, king of Salem, was a "priest of the most high God," and that he was "made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually." Heb. 7:1-3. He lived in the days of Abraham who was blessed by him. This priesthood of the Son of God being held by him, and he being such a great high-priest, it seems that it was named after him, though it undoubtedly was held by others before him, since the patriarchs from Adam down had officiated in the service of God and were acknowledged in such service the same as Melchisedec. Jacob also offered sacrifices and blessed others as Melchisedec had done, showing that he held the same authority and priesthood. Paul argues in Galatians 3:1-4 that Abraham was under the covenant of faith which was superior to the covenant given through Moses, showing again that Abraham also held the higher priesthood.

Jethro, a holy man, was priest of Midian and father in law of Moses, offered burnt offering and sacrifices to God, and Aaron with all the elders of Israel came to eat bread with him, an official procedure similar to the bread and wine of which Abraham partook at the hands of Melchisedec. Jethro also gave valuable counsel to Moses in the responsible work of judging Israel, all of which show his high calling in the priesthood.

That Moses held the Melchisedec priesthood is evident from his prophetic statement that "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me," which having reference to Christ shows that they would be alike, having similar work and similar power and holding the same priesthood. Christ would be like unto Moses. Duet. 18:15; Acts 3:22.

That Moses' priesthood was superior to that of the sons of Levi is shown when Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, with two hundred and fifty others whom God had "separated from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle of the Lord, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them," rebelled against Moses, charging that he had assumed authority superior to theirs and which they also demanded. See Numbers 16. Moses asked them "And seek ye the priesthood also?" or as the Inspired Version has it: "Seek ye the high priesthood also" which seems to be the true rendering as they were already priests. Other evidences might be given to show that the Melchisedec priesthood was operative among men in the Old Testament times, but these are sufficient for present purposes.

The Two Priesthoods Co-operative.

Moses had already by divine direction selected the tribe of Levi and had separated them for priests and they were acknowledged as such (Exodus 19:22, 24.) when Aaron and his sons received the call to the priesthood, or which must be understood as a higher office in the priesthood. Exodus 28:1. For nearly forty years after their setting apart to this new office Aaron and his sons officiated under the Aaronic priesthood, while Moses as a high priest of the Melchisedec order continued to officiate in his office, thus showing that the two priesthoods were in operation contemporaneously. These two priesthoods working together at that time shows the possibility and necessity of the two working together at other times.

The Aaronic Priesthood Perpetual.

That the priesthood which was held by Christ and Melchisedec was an everlasting priesthood, will perhaps be conceded by all, but it is generally held that the Aaronic priesthood had an ending at the coming of Christ to be dispensed with forever. That this opinion is erroneous is evident from the following:

And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments, and anoint him and sanctify him; that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. And thou shalt bring his sons, and clothe them with coats; and thou shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint thy father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office: for their anointing shall surely be an everlasting priesthood throughout their generation. Exodus 40:13-15.

Through the faithfulness of Phinehas the son of Eleazer, the son of Aaron, in maintaining the dignity of his office and the integrity of the nation, the Lord confirmed the above promise to him in the following:

Wherefore say, Behold I give unto him my covenant of peace; and he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood; because he was zealous for his God and made an atonement for the children of Israel. Numbers 25:12, 13.

What further evidence could be required to show that God designed the Aaronic priesthood to be everlasting, extending throughout all the generations of Aaron and his posterity?

Aaronic Priesthood in New Testament Times.

Paul says that "unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them, [the Israelites under Moses,] but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Hebrew 4:2. It was for this reason that the "law" was given which was inferior to the gospel which had been first offered, of which they proved themselves unworthy: "It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promises were made" * * * wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ." Galatians 3:19, 24.

The gospel law, or the perfect law, no longer being operative in Israel, the Melchisedec priesthood by which that law was administered was no longer needed, hence this priesthood ceased with Moses, no other Melchisedec high priest being appointed until Christ came; but the Aaronic priesthood continued and by it the imperfect law which was given in the place of the gospel, was administered.

John the Baptist, the son of Zacharias, who as an Aaronic priest officiated in the temple service, also officiated under the same priesthood of Aaron in preaching the gospel of the kingdom in preparation for the coming of Christ. That he held the inferior Aaronic priesthood, is shown by his statement:

I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance; but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire. Matthew 3:11.

John could baptize with water, but his priesthood did not permit him to officiate in the higher ordinance by which the Holy Ghost was given. But he preached that part of the gospel included in faith, repentance, and baptism, and administered the initiatory rite, which shows conclusively that under the gospel there is work for men holding the Aaronic priesthood.

From Moses to Christ the Aaronic priesthood was the administrative authority among men, administering the inferior law only, but when Christ came the Melchisedec priesthood which had been taken away with Moses, was restored, and with it was restored the higher law of the gospel, hence the statement of Paul: "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." This change of the law did not dispense with all that Moses gave, for every principle in that law which was essential to the salvation of men is incorporated in the higher law of the gospel; and so with the priesthood which was not dispensed with in the change, but was made secondary to the higher priesthood, co-operating with it as had been the case under Moses.

All Officers not Named in New Testament.

In first Corinthians 12:28, Paul gives a list of officers which Christ placed in the church, viz. apostles, prophets, teachers. But he did not here name them all, for in Ephesians 4:11, he gives another list in which are added evangelists and pastors. But even here he did not name them all, for in various other places there is incidental mention of bishops, deacons, elders, and possibly others. Since the New Testament does not attempt to give any complete list of the various officers in the church, and those that are named are mentioned only incidentally, it readily appears that its silence as to the existence of priests in the church is no evidence that they did not exist.

In Acts 6:1-6, is recorded the selection and ordination of seven men whose duty was to look after the gathering and distribution of the finances of the church, but the office which these men held is not named. From Numbers 3:48-51 and Hebrews 7:5, it is shown that this work of handling the finances belonged to the Aaronic priesthood, though the Melchisedec priests having the right to officiate in the lesser priesthood, could do this work whenever necessary, as did Melchisedec himself and the apostles. Since these seven men were chosen and set apart for this especial work, it is more than probable that their authority was under the Aaronic rather than the higher priesthood.

This thought is strengthened by the account in Acts 8:5-17, where Philip, one of the seven, went down to Samaria and preached Christ, and baptized a number, but did not lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, but waited until Peter and John came who performed that ordinance. This would seem to place Philip under the same priesthood as John the Baptist. Thus it is seen that there is some evidence, though not direct, which shows the existence of the Aaronic priesthood under the gospel law in New Testament times.

Aaronic Priesthood to be Acknowledged by Christ at His Second Coming.

If there remains any doubt in the mind of the reader that the Aaronic priesthood is to be perpetuated under the gospel, and that it was an everlasting priesthood, we have but to refer to Malachi 3:1-6.

where in describing the Lord's coming in glory he says:

And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness.

This includes the sons of Aaron, and accords with God's covenant with Aaron and his sons that their priesthood should extend throughout all their generations.

The Final Restoration.

In consequence of the great apostasy from the gospel after the days of the apostles, as outlined in Revelation 12, both the Melchisedec and Aaronic priesthoods were lost to men, but Peter speaks of the times to come when there would be a restitution of all things, Acts 3:21, and Paul refers to the same times when God will "gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth." Ephesians 1:10. This time of restitution will be the time when these priesthoods will be restored, for the work of the gospel cannot be done without them, and one of the things which is to be restored from heaven is the everlasting gospel. See Revelations 14:6.

That John the Baptist was to have part in that work of restoration, may be seen from Matthew 11:7-14; 17:10-13. Speaking of John, Christ said: "For this is he of whom it is written, Behold I send my messenger before thy face." "And if ye will receive it, this is the Elias which was for to come." (11:10, 14.) The Emphatic Diaglott gives this last verse: "And if you are disposed to receive it, he is that Elijah who is to come." John had already been beheaded, but here Jesus declares that he is the Elias who was yet to come. Coming down from the mount of transfiguration the disciples asked him regarding this Elias whom they had seen in the vision and he said: "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things. * * * Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist." Matt. 17:11, 13.

The prophecy of this coming in Malachi 3:1 and 4:5, shows that it will be in preparation for the coming of Christ in glory, rather than at his first coming, though the prophecy had a partial fulfillment at that time. John having held the Aaronic priesthood, would evidently restore it first of all in the time of restitution.

The gospel as held by the Reorganized Church was brought by angel hands, and simultaneously therewith the priesthood of Aaron was conferred upon two young men by an angel who announced himself as John the Baptist in these words: "Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion, for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness." Church History, Vol. 1, p. 35.

Later the priesthood of Melchisedec was restored, and the two have operated together in the gospel work until the present time, those of the Aaronic order laboring to prepare the way in preaching the preparatory principles of faith, repentance, and baptism, and officiating in the temporal interests of the work, while those of the Melchisedec order officiate so far as necessary in these same duties and also in ministering in the higher spiritual ordinances and work of the church; all this being in full accord with the Old and New Testaments record.

If there be any truth in the claim of this church to revelation—and this claim has stood every test for over eighty years—then the existence of the church itself and each office found therein are ordained of God, hence our former statement that the reason for having priests in our church was that it had been commanded of God. We believe the position taken is fully warranted by the Scriptures.

Historical references might be given showing the existence of Aaronic priests in the New Testament church, but we have restricted ourselves to the Bible as requested.

Bro. J. M. Baker writes from Des Moines, Ia., that he is now located at 813 East 12th St., instead of 816 as recently published. Bro. F. G. Pitt also writes that his address is 545 West Marion St., Joliet, Ill.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Sunday being Children's Day was devoted to the children. A total of 296 attended Sunday school, including 30 officers and 98 teachers, and the record showed 21 perfect classes and a collection of $16.80.

The primary department occupied the morning hour and one of the interesting features was the advancement of over fifty children from the cradle-roll department to the primary department. In the evening the junior and intermediate departments rendered an excellent program, in which the children's chorus in charge of Sr. Cora Tonnehill, and the orchestra under the leadership of Bro. Arthur Mills took leading parts. The children took keen delight in performing their parts and both programs were of a character to give assurance of Zion's growth and ultimate establishment. Bro. D. J. Krahl, the superintendent was in charge. The success of the day was due to the co-operation of many of the Sunday school workers.

In the afternoon 28 of the children and one young lady, were baptized by Bro. Krahl and were confirmed at a special service immediately after by Bro. Krahl, Garrett, A. Mills, and F. G. Christie. The usual prayer service was also held in the afternoon.

An appropriate tribute of appreciation of the helpful services of Bro. Arthur H. Mills along the musical lines for many years in the branch, was tendered him by Bro. George E. Harrington of the branch presidency, followed by a response by Bro. Mills who was to leave on Monday to take up his mission work at Denver, Col.

On Monday evening a concert was rendered at the church for the benefit of the Children's Home at Lamoni, Iowa. Those participating were Mrs. Pearl Crick, Miss. Grace Turnour, Bro. R. G. Smith, and Sr. Betton. The evening being stormy the attendance was not all that it might otherwise have been.

An unusually good meeting is reported at Market Square, Kansas City, on Sunday afternoon by Bro. Hatley and Guinand. These brethren with Bro. Lightfoot and Ketchum have been maintaining street work with good interest.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

The intense heat of Sunday, reduced the attendance, but the Sunday school had the best of any of the different gatherings, number present, 264, collections, $4.26.

The 11 o'clock a. m. hour was occupied by Bro. G. W. Eastwood. He spoke of the difficulties with which a deacon is confronted in attempting to discharge the duties of his office.

A vote was taken at the conclusion of the service to ascertain the feeling of the saints concerning the opening of the Sunday picture shows. A unanimous "no" was the response which made Bro. Goodf feel happy.

In the evening Bro. F. M. Gowell spoke along the lines of differences between the Reorganized Church, and the Utah church, showing that the latter was not willing to have their doctrines exposed to view, nor tried by the laws of the original church, the standard of evidence by which the two churches must be tried, are Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, and upon investigation of these works, one finds are all on one side against the Utah people, for when tried by this evidence they are so exposed to view of the world that it causes a stampede of their defenders.

Bro. Earl Cortell the stake superintendent was present at the Sunday school hour, and gave a good talk to the little ones, and about all his questions were promptly and correctly answered.

LOS ANGELES.

June 8th, children's day and instead of the regular preaching service the hour was given for the children's exercises. The church was very beautifully decorated with sweet peas. Four children were baptized. Two babes blessed, one confirmation. On the evening of June 12, a reception was given for Bro. Goodrich at the church. Bro. Goodrich has been chosen as president of the branch.

On Sunday the 22d, Bro. James Kelley was the speaker in the morning, Bro. Goodrich in the evening, Albert Knowlton at Long Beach.

Bro. Paul Hanson has gone to his missionary field and now Sr. Hanson is preparing to leave with her mother, Sr. Leeka. Needless to say, Sr. Sadie will be greatly missed, as she is an accomplished musician. Independence will be the gainer.

We are expecting Bro. Sheehy, and we hear that Bro. F. M. Smith and wife are coming. We sincerely hope that Sr. Smith may regain her health here.

Madge P. Knowlton, Cor.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

The morning of June 22d, the Sunday school was favored with a reading on "music," by Sr. H. C. Burgess and Sr. Anna DeJoong with her class of girls rendered a very pretty song.

Bro. T. J. Elliott our pastor delivered the morning discourse which was on the subject of "Religion." He also occupied in the evening.

Bro. John Davis occupied in Cheltenham the evening of the 29th, and the Cheltenham saints were favored with a solo the evening of the 22d, by Sr. H. C. Burgess. Bro. Elliott we believe spoke to them the same evening, he being a very busy man, having charge of both the Cheltenham and St. Louis work.

Bro. S. A. Burgess who is away most of the time, delivered two splendid discourses on June 29th. It being children's day his morning subject was appropriate to the occasion. His evening subject was, "Prophecy both false and true."

The children's program was nicely rendered. Four little ones were added to the fold after the Sunday school session, Bro. Reeves officiating, the confirmation taking place at the 6 o'clock prayer service.

The little babe of Bro. and Sr. Chas. Tanner was blessed by Bro. S. A. Burgess and T. J. Elliott and named Merno Florine; also the babe of Mr. and Mrs. Woodward by Bro. T. J. Elliott and S. A. Burgess, and named Celeste Louise.

The first Sunday of the month at our regular sacrament service, special fasting and prayer is requested in behalf of our Sr. Billinsky that she might be restored to health and strength once again.

The regular priesthood meeting will be held at 6 p. m., July 6th.

The Sunday school will hold its annual picnic July 4th. We welcome Sr. Tanner and daughter Elizabeth of Kansas City at our services of late.

Elizabeth Patterson.

HOLDEN, MO.

June 2d branch business meeting was held resulting in the election of Bro. I. W. Layton, president, F. M. McWithy, priest, Anton Anderson, teacher, and C. Hayer, deacon. All are new officers except the president, we are looking for him to have good assistance. Chorister, Kate Doty, organist, Maud Moler.

Sacrament service not so well attended but good nevertheless. Hot weather is having its effect on the meetings, and especially the midweek prayer meeting.

Bro. H. N. Hansen, wife, and little granddaughter Ruth spent Sunday the 8th with us, Bro. Hansen giving us two spiritual sermons.

A number attended the stake Religio convention at Perle Springs, and enjoyed the convention and outing.

Bishop R. Bullard in the interest of the financial arm of the church was with us on the 15th, preaching in the morning and several times through the week at Bro. F. Smith's home, at the edge of town. One young man was baptized by Bro. Bullard.

Bro. Paul Hanson enroute for his eastern mission, visited a few days with his parents, and spoke once for us.

Miss Lycam from Virginia was baptized in the font on the 15th by Bro. Henry Thompson, Miss Lycam is here on a visit, will return to Virginia some time in July, may the Father's blessing go with her.

Sunday the 22nd was children's day. The evening program was given before a large audience, and was much enjoyed.

R. O. Self spent Sunday at home, returning Monday to Independence where he is engaged in tent work with Bro. Geo. Jenkins.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Bishop C. A. Parkin baptized Bro. Chas. R. Likins and his son in the city on the 19th and they were confirmed the same evening Bro. J. A. Saxe and C. A. Parkin. Bro. Likins and wife—formerly Sr. Annie Raney—left after a visit here to their home in Leaderville Col. where he occupies as station agent.

Elder E. J. Clark baptized Bro. F. Wilson on Saturday in Oakland who was confirmed at the morning service Sunday by Bro. G. J. Waller and the writer.

The city Sunday school was visited Sunday by Sr. Hattie Burgess and Hazel, superintendent and secretary, of the San Jose Sunday school. Their visit was appreciated and did good. Bro. Emery Parks preached the morning sermon followed in the evening by Bro. J. A. Saxe.

After the series of meetings in the city Bro. J. A. Saxe received a post card addressed to "The Reorganized Church of Joseph Smith," in which the writer states "all Mormons go to that awful place and be tormented with fire and brimstone day and night forever." Bro. Saxe doesn't believe it.

The San Jose Saints are enjoying their new church very much. The attendance from without is increasing. The speakers last Sunday were Bro. L. Dagner and C. W. Hawkins the pastor. Sunday school and Religio are prosperous.

The Sisters of the Aid Society of Oakland gathered at the home of Grandma Peterson in memory of her 86th birthday. A happy time was spent. The Elder dropped in a little late but in time for some cake which had not been eaten. Near half this long life has been spent in the latter day faith.

Bro. G. J. Waller delivered a good spiritual sermon in Oakland Sunday morning to a good audience. The Sunday school and religio were up to the usual attendance. The evening sermon was by the pastor on "Who shall stand when He appeareth."

ST. JOSEPH, THIRD BRANCH.

At our late business meeting, the following officers were elected: President Bro. Taddiken, Priest Bro. Clay, Teacher, Bro. Vaughn, Deacon, Bro. Hale, the other priests, teachers and deacon, of the branch were sustained as assistants. Bro. Oman, chorister, Sr. Etta Mason, organist, and Bro. Trumbull librarian.

The business meeting of the conference of the 7th and 8th of June was about as usual with a good sermon the night of the 7th by Bro. Henson. The Sunday school was good with good attendance. A splendid sermon was delivered by Apostle J. W. Rushton which was highly appreciated. A quiet peaceful spirit prevailed at our prayer meeting at 2:30 p. m. with some splendid testimonies of the power, love and goodness of the Savior made manifest in behalf of the weak, erring creatures of his kingdom. At the tent the same quiet, peaceful spirit prevailed also. At the evening services another good sermon was enjoyed, the speaker being Bro. T. C. Kelley.

A few precious souls have been added to our number lately some being led to investigate, believe and obey by seeing this statement fulfilled where it says—"They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover," for one among them was healed of Bright's disease under the hands of Bro. Taddiken, and Bro. Scott [I think it was] after being given up by the doctors. Bro. W. P. Pickering and Bro. Pierce are doing tent work in Elwood, Kan., just across the river from us, the little place where this blessing of healing was so lately received.

The debt of the 3rd branch is slowly but surely decreasing with the assistance of our worthy priest, Bro. Clay, the ladies aid with Sr. Woodside at the helm, and the Y. L. C.'s with Sr. Knowles at the head pointing to the ways of truth, virtue and industry for the young ladies of our branch. The sleeping soldiers of the Religio missed a treat last Friday evening for instead of the programme, a treat of cake and ice cold lemonade was served after the lesson study. A vote of thanks was rendered Sr. Jones, president, Mrs. Liggett and Trumbull committee, for the dainty feast.

Mrs. Rosa Francis.

SEILING, Okla., June 27, 1913.

Editor Ensign—Please say to your readers, that there will be no cooperative boarding tent at the Woodward reunion, July 5th to 14th. The Calumet reunion will be from July 18th to 28th; there will be a co-operative boarding tent there and the pasture will be free. Saints have decided to donate vegetables, and fruit to make the board as cheap as possible.

We just closed a good meeting at Eagle City where we baptized nine fine people and organized a Sunday school. Bro. Aylor and Christensen were there, and took part, also Bro. Aylor and the writer went to the Indian camp and held a good meeting one day.

Your brother
Hubert Case.

PERVEAR, Tenn., June 14.

Dear Ensign—Our conference just closed was the best held in the district for some time. Peace and unity prevailed throughout the session which proves the benefits to be had when we will try to be of one mind. Had excellent preaching, Elders H. E. Moler, J. R. McClain, W. S. Shupe, J. A. Roberts, S. E. Dickson, and W. L. McClain were present.

Elder J. R. McClain leaves shortly for Southern Indiana. The saints here regret very much to lose such an efficient worker, but we commend him to the saints of his new field and pray that our heavenly Father will sustain and bless him as he has done in the past.

Elder J. A. Roberts will shortly go to the eastern section of the state to carry the words of life and salvation, to some Tennessee cities that have not heard it as yet. Brethren Moler, Dickson and Shupe will probably remain with us until after the reunion.

The prayer and testimony meetings were very spiritual indeed—many seemed to be alive and rejoicing in the great work of latter days. We will not soon forget the prayer meeting of Sunday morning when the Spirit was present in much power—not many cheeks were dry when our former district president arose to tell of the blessings of the gospel to him—the scene is deeply stamped on memory's pages.

The outlook is encouraging for a splendid year's work. There is plenty of work to do; but the question arises. Are we going to do it? The harvest depends upon the amount of sheaves we gather—it will be just that large—no larger.

We do not lack a place to labor, because there are broad spreading fields for usefulness on every hand—what we mostly have need of is courage and a faith that will not shrink.

Let us not shrink because others faint beneath the noon-tide sun. To the faithful in the army of the Lord there is coming a glorious day when we shall hear the life giving words "Well done!"

Hopefully,
Louise A. Wall.

June 12.

On the 10th inst. Bro. T. W. Chaburn visited the writer coming in well loaded with a lot of good things to eat with a boy following carrying a sack of flour all of which was turned over to Sr. Beck. While the writer was rejoicing Bro. Chaburn he told about gathering them up among the saints at Joplin. After he left, Sr. Beck said this looks like the work of real Latter Day Saints.

I am thankful to the friends and to God for the timely donation and pray God to bless the dispensers of the gift.

LONG—ROBERTS DEBATE.

Dear Editor—The heated and interesting discussion between Brother E. E. Long of the L. D. S. Church and W. G. Roberts of the "Church of Christ," closed Sunday afternoon, June 15th. This discussion was held in the city of Burlington, Iowa, in a building owned by the brethren and co-workers of W. G. Roberts. It began on the evening of June 3rd, with Brother Long affirming our church in the usual way. On this proposition, Roberts twisted, turned and cried: "Joseph Smith, miserable old sheep thief—Long, heal my finger, he can't cure a pin scratch—Strike me down, elder—Which time did you lie? I came here prepared to skin everything from a skunk to an elephant—I'd go home if I couldn't do any better than that—Don't you know anything about the Bible at all—He won't answer my argument—He didn't even give a hint or a squint at it—Why don't you grunt, shake your head or do something—The Inspired Translation is inspired of the devil, if inspired at all—Don't you know your a. b. c's—Now ain't you sorry you said anything—I'll follow my opponent whithersoever he goeth and spank him every jump—Joe was a devil, etc., etc."

Such silly statements as the above were washed and rehashed, over and over, again and again, night after night through the whole debate. It was real funny, especially to the Camp's likes for a few evenings, but soon got stale. Some of Roberts' beloved disciples quit coming and declared they would never again pay a cent to support such a man. Brother Long's arguments were convincing to the "ear" thinker. Near the close of the first proposition, Roberts read some extravagant statements from Bancroft's History of Utah, and gave Bancroft credit for it. As soon as he sat down, Brother Long took the history and showed the audience that Roberts had tried to play an underhanded game by giving Bancroft credit for the statement which he, (Bancroft), was quoting from our enemies. Then Brother Long turned to Roberts and with power and eloquence he said: "Mr. Roberts, why do you resort to such tricks? An Ingersoll or a Paine would not have stooped to such underhanded trickery in denouncing the Bible." A complete silence reigned and the expression on the face of Mr. Roberts spelled—s-h-a-m-e.

Roberts read from our Church History and tried to make it appear that Joseph Smith had sworn vengeance, to be executed by his posterity, on the Missourians, and then he, (Roberts), went off into a spasm, crying: "All who have dear friends or relatives in Missouri, warn them at once for the Mormons will destroy every one," and thus he tried to impress the audience with such lies. During his spasm I happened to be looking at two Campbellites who were seated near the front. Their mouths were open to catch every word and drink it down like pure water from a crystal fountain (!) They were nodding assent with all their might. They, evidently, believed every word that Roberts spoke.

In due time the second proposition was taken up and Roberts was supposed to be in the affirmative, but he did nothing but keep the road hot from Pentecost to Pentecost, and slander Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. When Brother Long saw that he was not going to give the origin of the "church which I, W. G. Roberts am a member," he gave it for him. I am sure they heard something they had never heard before and they were the sickest looking humans I have seen for sometime. They had predicted that our church would be so wrecked by Roberts that the Burlington Saints would need neither pastor or building, but ere this their faith in such wonderful accomplishments had vanished.

While they were looking the bluest over their historical record, Brother Long said with emphasis: "I know its a bitter dose, but you are going to get it every thirty minutes." Roberts called it "old musty history." Brother Long replied: "It is your history, if it is musty and dirty you had better get busy and clean it up!"

Then came the Book of Mormon proposition and Bro. Long was at his best. He brought forth an abundance of archaeological proof in an interesting manner. The message came with power that was felt by all, especially the first evening. Roberts began to fidget until some of his followers were heard to say: "We have 'hired' the wrong man." His criticism on the Book of Mormon was bombast and ridicule. At the close of the first session on the Book of Mormon, the chairman, who is an agnostic, in the presence of Mr. Roberts, said to Brother Long: "Elder, I'm enjoying your speeches, for they are educational." I may remark here that the chairman is one of the best surgeons in the city, a bright man and a scholar.

One evening Roberts read from Bancroft something, of course, that was not favorable to the Saints—then, Brother Long took the book and showed the audience that Roberts had read just what suited him—even stopping at a comma! He then commenced to read where Roberts quit and behold Bancroft had declared: "Notwithstanding some evil among the Mormons he was convinced that when taking them as a whole, they were a more industrious and better class than their neighbors."

Mr. Roberts then informed us that the marvelous work and a wonder, the eyes seeing out of obscurity and the deaf hearing the words of the book spoken of in Isa. 29— was fulfilled when Jesus returned the messengers sent to John the Baptist with the message—"Go tell John the deaf hear, the blind see, and the lame walk, etc."

The chairman was absent two evenings and then was the time Roberts spread himself. He declared we were all a set of infidels! And if Bishop Kelley said that Oliver Cowdery did not unite with the Methodist and deny the Book of Mormon—he lied.

Dr. Magee, the chairman, said that Roberts had broken a number of rules, and one he had broken twenty times or more. When he would turn to Brother Long and charge him with being ignorant, telling him he did not know a Greek letter from a bird-track in the ashes and telling him to "come on old boy" and answer my argument if you know your a. b. c's, etc, then is when the chairman was anxious to rule against him but the brethren thought it best to give him plenty of rope and let him hang himself, which he did, with intelligent people. The chairman said he felt satisfied when ridicule was taken from Roberts he would fall flat for that was about all he had.

One Mr. Golden (Hebrew and Greek scholar ???) moderated for Mr. Roberts and Brother Charles Willey for Brother Long.

Mr. Roberts made an attack on some of my efforts through the Burlington Daily Gazette last winter in which he threw out a challenge which resulted in this debate. Some of the Saints, here, had heard of Roberts' unfair methods and at first opposed the debate. However, one of the five who voted against it came to me and said she was sorry she had done so for the debate had done her much good, and I judge from the interest shown by others who opposed it, that they also feel differently about it, now.

The first week of the discussion was hindered by the State Sunday School Convention being held here and the second week by the Elk's Convention, therefore, we did not have a very good attendance outside of the two churches. The Campbellites dropped off and the Saints increased and became more interested as the debate drew to a close. We are all happy in a work that has and is standing the test and coming through the furnace, of criticism, as bright and pure as gold. Brother E. E. Long is an able debater. He advances with the Scriptures, history and argument. His shoulder blows quite frequently punctured Roberts' ego-sack, and let him fall flat. We need not fear to meet Babylon.

I am your brother and co-laborer,
1101 S. 10th, Burlington, Iowa. O. R. Miller.

Burlington, Iowa, June 16th.

We had not expected to report again quite so promptly, but thought it might be well to do so while our items were fresh.

One of our chief topics of conversation during the past twelve days has been the discussion just closed (Sunday, the 15th.) with W. G. Roberts, Bro. E. E. Long representing us. This will be reported in detail by our pastor, Bro. O. K. Miller, and we simply mention it in passing. The representation of our people was good throughout.

On Sunday, June 1st, we had the pleasure of a visit from Bro. G. K. Wells of Lamoni, who was in Burlington to attend the state convention of the International Sunday School A-ssociation, held June 3rd, 4th and 5th. June 1st had been set apart as Children's Day, and the morning service time was devoted to a program by the children, who did very creditably. At the close of the program, Bro. Wells gave us a short talk, after which the ordinance of baptism was observed, initiating into the kingdom three of our Sunday school workers, Rachel Englehorn from the intermediate, Landis Duke from the junior, and Harold Duke from the primary. In the evening two young men, Elmer Bierman and Henry Broman, also active auxiliary workers, were baptized. The branch as a whole rejoiced to welcome them as brothers.

Friday morning, June 6th, Bro. Wells, accompanied the Burlington representatives to the district convention at Ottumwa, where he helped at every session in putting the time to profitable use. The joint social service from 9:15 to 10:00 was good, and we think, enjoyed by all. The Sunday school and Religio conventions each voted an appropriation of five dollars to our tri-district reunion committee, to be accompanied by a request that if at all possible, a field worker be secured for the reunion commencing August 21st. A discussion on points of mutual interest to Sunday school and Religio workers was provided for. We are glad to find a new interest aroused in the library work, and hope it will result in good. The conventions and conference were good throughout. Especially appreciated was a large attendance from Hiteman, and the music rendered by their male chorus and orchestra.

Here at Burlington, Bro. C. E. Willey spoke both morning and evening, Sunday, the 15th. He has acted as moderator for Bro. Long in the discussion just closed.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Sr. MARY GRIFFITHS, East St. Louis, Ill., I have moved here in order to be close to the Lansdowne Church. I enjoy being with the saints. Being afflicted from the stroke I had eight or nine years ago I am not able to get around to do very much, and would ask the prayers of the saints that if it be the will of the Lord I may be healed. God is ever true to his word, and he has promised not to leave us alone if we keep his commandments.

RICHARD GRASSHOFF, Evansville, Wis., I am herewith sending you an Advent Christian paper which I thought might interest you. I would like to know more about the origin of the Advent Church. I like to read the ENSIGN and other church papers. I think if I had some ENSIGNS and tracts that they would do much good to spread the latter day gospel.

J. D. STEAD, San Jose, Cal.—I would like to write a long letter and give you a true report of big things we were doing out here, but I can't do it—I think the fullness of the Gentiles surely must be about in—the religious indifference is worse here than any place I have ever been—this people out here are going pleasure and money mad. Success to the ENSIGN and all of its force.

F. L. SAWLEY, INDEPENDENCE, Mo.—I am no longer in the Sanitarium, but am home and being cared for by my family, and am slowly improving. That I appreciate the kindness, sympathy, and prayers of the saints, as I am sure relief from suffering has come to me, and I hope the prayers may continue in my behalf so I may recover speedily and be in the active ministry very soon again where I long to be.

Bro. Frank Hackett, Devil's Lake, Wis.—I expect to do considerable missionary work during the summer, and if any of the saints are passing through here I would like to have them stop over a little while.

Miss T. O. Gore, Peru, Ind.—I received the tracts and Ensign I ordered. I am alone in Peru as there is not another Latter Day Saint here that I know of. I am trying to tell my relatives about this latter day work, for I believe it is the true work of God.

H. J. Davison, Stockton, Cal., June 3d.—Last Sunday was a fine day for Stockton Branch—biggest Sunday school for a long time, splendid sacrament meeting, a lot of business pleasantly done at S. S. Teachers' meeting. Arranged for normal class, a large blackboard and S. S. picnic. Elder Stead expects to pitch the district tent among us this week and Elder Reiste will come soon. California is all right.

V. M. Goodrich, Los Angeles, Cal.—I landed O. K. in company with Bro. R. F. Slye on the 30th ult. Both well. Was royally and loyally received by the Saints; last evening was elected president of the branch; a splendid feeling prevailed, and we enter upon our new charge with optimism. My address is 1714 New England Ave.

Sr. Alice Cole, St. Paul, Minn.—I am now in my 84th year and have belonged to the Latter Day Saints church 35 years, and have never lived where there were church services. I belonged to the Methodist church, but found that the Saints had the true gospel. I live with my son and wife. My health is poor and I ask the Saints to pray for me.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

A REASONABLE FAITH.

BY A. R. CORSON.

It is the idea of some religionists that religion faith lies entirely outside the realm of reason; that mankind must take everything taught as religion on trust; that man's little mind cannot comprehend God's law or his will; that we must not try to bring our reason to bear on any religious question, but just blindly accept what we are taught, believe, and be saved. And so we find religionists who can give no better answer to the question "What is your faith?" on certain lines of doctrine, than the young lady gave, who was asked some questions as to what she believed. She replied "I don't know what I believe. Just ask Bro. Noble, I believe just as he does." She could give no reason for the hope that was in her, other than, "Bro. Noble said so and so."

This accounts for the ease with which false teachers find so many ready to follow them. They teach a pleasant and smooth doctrine, and the pleased listener, without using any reason at all, swallows the sugared bait, and is lead away from the truth as it is in Jesus.

When we see the many different and conflicting doctrines, people are told to believe in order to be saved; to the thinker the question arises: "Believe what?"

I am glad to have found a system of religion that not only answers that query, but at the same time will bear the scrutiny of reason,—yes, even invites it.

The system of religious belief taught by the church known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, I found to be the same in points of doctrine, in blessing flowing from obedience, and in its hope for eternity, as the system of faith given to the world by our Lord, and afterwards preached by his first apostles; in fact the same faith restored to the world after being hidden under dogmas and traditions of men, through long centuries of false teaching, of blind leaders and blind followers. It is a faith that is reasonable, and for its very reasonableness, it first appealed to me.

That we have a right to reason on things of God, and things that pertain to our eternal welfare, is clearly taught in Scripture. "Come now, let us reason together," saith the Lord." Then the cleansing of our souls from sin even though like scarlet, is contingent on our own willing obedience, a reasonable condition surely. Is. 1:18.

Unless we can find a "reason for the hope that is in us," other than Bro. So and So, or Father So and So teaches it, our hope would rest on a weak foundation. A foundation of sand, ever shifting and changing.

Peter tells us to "be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you, a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear." 1 Peter, 3:15. And Paul tells us to walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time;" and adds "Let your speech be always with grace seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." Col. 4:5,6.

Redeem the time by preaching the Scriptures, as Christ taught us to do; thus storing our minds with truth, that by the promptings of the Spirit we may "bring forth from the treasury" of our memory "things new and old" as are needed.

The faith that comes as the result of reasoning is not soon overthrown. It was by reasoning out of the Scriptures that Apollus that eloquent man who was "mighty in the Scriptures" convinced the Jews that Jesus was the Christ." Acts 19:24,28. Paul's converts were won by his reasonings. Acts 17:2,3. 18:4. It was because the reason of Felix responded to Paul's reasoning concerning "righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," that he trembled, and had he listened to the voice of his reason, he would not have said "Go thy way for this time." Acts 24:25.

Opposition to the claims of the gospel always come from unreasonable men, from those who refuse to listen, to bring their reason to bear, while the gospel claims are being presented; who "answer the matter before they hear it," and Paul classes such with wicked men, and says we are to pray that we may be delivered from such. 2 Thess. 3:1,2.

When God endowed man with reason he meant him to use it, not only as regards things of the temporal life. Christ the great teacher by his parables appealed to man's reason, using object lessons to show the reasonableness of his teachings.

A religion that cannot be substantiated and defended by reason, is but superstition, a faith without foundation, but the foundation of the gospel of Christ, standeth sure, and can never be undermined by the false reasoning of false teachers. Every one of God's requirements of his children are reasonable, hence it is our reasonable service to "present our bodies a living sacrifice, to be made holy and acceptable unto God."

The doctrines held by this church that are not held by other churches, let us see if they cannot all be shown to be reasonable.

Some deny the doctrine of a priesthood. "Pastor Russell" says, "the ordination of ministers of man and by man, is injurious, in that it has perpetuated the misconception that the church is divided into two classes, the clergy and the laity"—that by this doctrine "the laity have been hindered from entering upon the very service which God intended should be their chief aim and object," and claims that all believers are appointed to preach, yet when we bring our reason to bear here, we see that Christ out of the many believers, chose twelve and ordained them, and afterward chose the seventy. It was to his ordained apostles he spoke the words "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel," etc. not to the laity. "Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you," says Christ to his apostles, "and ordained you," etc. John 15:16; and they,—thee chosen and ordained ones,—were to go forth and bring forth fruit.

Russell charges the bishops of the second century with making a mistake in teaching apostolic succession by ordination of those already in authority, which, he says "was given exclusively to the twelve apostles." "On the strength of this claim they appointed and ordained the inferior clergy."

Very well. Let us examine this by the light of reason shining on our guide book. Paul was not one of the twelve, yet he ordained what this man would call, "an inferior clergy." Paul was an apostle, by the will of God, and was taught the gospel by the revelation of Jesus Christ. Gal. 1:1,12. 1 Cor. 1:1. Rom. 1:1.

Now since he was taught by Christ himself, is it reasonable to suppose that he would go and ordain to a lesser ministry unless it was according to his instructions? He "preached the kingdom of God and taught those things which concern the Lord Jesus." Did it not concern the Lord Jesus that others should be endowed with the authority to represent him after the apostles who were then living, had left the stage of action? He said that "he kept back nothing that was profitable," and that he "had not shunned to declare all the counsel of God." Acts 20:27. Is it reasonable then to suppose that he added something that was not according to the counsel of God when he ordained elders in every church, and left Titus in Crete to do the same thing? Was he acting outside of the counsel of God when he laid hands on Timothy?

Every king has the right to appoint his own officers and ambassadors; and these ambassadors must speak the message the king sends them to deliver. If an ambassador brings any other message, or promises any other thing than he is commanded by the king, would the king be bound to fulfill the promise? No, he would only confirm the words of his true servants, and "a man truly sent of God will speak forth the things of God."

The doctrine of the kingdom and the way to become a citizen of the kingdom of God meet, with much criticism from certain classes. "Too much stress on water baptism," say some. "It makes no difference how we are baptized or who baptizes us" say others. And "all that is necessary is just faith and repentance," "and trusting to the blood," say still others. Now is it not reasonable that the Great King should have his own laws for those who wish to become citizens of his kingdom, or to use another figure, that he would have his own method of adopting into his household those who are to be his heirs, and joint heirs with his Son?

Is it reasonable to believe that man can just devise ways of their own for entrance into the kingdom? "He that climbeth up any other way, is a thief and a robber," says Christ. A usurper of the title, of son, who has not conformed to the law of adoption.

"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God," says our King himself. Now is it reasonable to believe that he can if he just believes hard enough? And is it not reasonable to lay stress on water baptism since our King himself says without it he cannot enter into the kingdom?"

Then the question of authority; Is it not unreasonable to think that ministers who preach opposite and conflicting doctrines can all have been sent of God? Does God ever authorize a man to misrepresent him?

Yet we find people who claim one minister is just as much authorized to preach as another, that all get their authority from the command "Go ye into all the world" etc, of Mark 16:15. But is it reasonable to suppose that God will recognize as his servants those who teach falsely concerning him and his will? Will it not be with such as it was with the friends of Job. For God said to Eliphaz concerning them, "My wrath is kindled against thee and against thy two friends, for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right as my servant Job hath." And although Job had merited rebuke on other lines, and God had rebuked him, yet because he spoke of the Lord "the things that were right!" God honored him, and had the other false teachers go to Job and be prayed for, "for" says God, "him will I accept."

He rejected the others there because they had not spoken of him "the things that were right," and would not own them as his representatives. Neither will God own today those men who although claiming to be sent of God speak falsely concerning him' his love, his mercy, or his justice.

Concerning the gifts of the Spirit in the church today. Is it not reasonable to suppose that the same cause will produce the same effect in all ages? "These signs shall follow them that believe," says Christ, for if truly believing they will be obedient. And the gift of the Holy Ghost was the promise to the obedient. Acts 2:38. Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today, and forever. Therefore his laws, his promises and his gifts are the same today as yesterday.

Orthodoxy says we do not need the signs now, they are all done away. If Christ is "no respecter of persons," and is the same "yesterday, today and forever," is it reasonable to believe that he will only keep his word to the believers of the first century?

As to the different officers in the church. If God set officers in the church because they were needed for the "perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ," is it reasonable to suppose he will remove them before the work is accomplished?

Especially as they were given for a certain time and reason, "until we all come to the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ,"—which we have not all done yet—"that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine." etc. Eph. 4:11 to 14 inclusive.

Since there are about 500 times as many "winds of doctrine" blowing now as when these officers were set in the church, and since they were given to keep the saints from being blown about, is it reasonable to suppose that God would take them out and leave his children to drift at the mercy of wind and wave?

Present day revelation comes in too, for criticism by our opposers. Christ promised his Spirit should guide into all truth. Is it unreasonable to believe that he kept his word, and that he heard and answered the prayer of the humble, untutored lad—Joseph Smith, when he asked to be shown the way? And is it not reasonable to believe as God is about to usher in the millenium, and perform the promised work of restoring Israel to his own land, that he will have a prophet through whom to proclaim the great message? "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Amos 3:7. Since God is doing wonderful things with the nations, it follows then that he must have prophets, since all his works with nations are performed by men whom he has chosen who are instruments in his hands, to do his will.

I might take up other points of the church that are objected to by the so-called orthodox churches, and find that all stand the test of reason, as well as the test of Scripture. "To the law and to the testimony." Bring your reason to bear and see if the church does not speak according to these. Use the same reason in comparing other systems of faith by the law and the testimony, by the measuring line of God's word.

When you find a faith that does not conform to this line, it is because there is no light in it, no light from God, but is only lighted by the fire and the sparks they have kindled for themselves. Isaiah 50:11.

So more and more I thank God for a system of religion that will bear the test of reason. One that will not fall under the storms of opposition, but which is founded on the rock of Truth, where it will stand the storms.

So let us study the Scriptures bring one reason to bear on every question, and to submit our reason to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. For God hath not given us the Spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind," that we may use our reason, and rightly divide the word of truth," and "ever be able to answer every man that asks us, a reason for the hope that is in us."

There are many ways, but only one way "Thus saith the Lord, stand in the ways," don't go on any father, stop, stand, consider, use your reason,—and see, and ask for the old paths where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. Jer. 6:16. Be not among those who will say "We will not walk therein." 902, 35th St. Richmond, Va., June 13th.

"DOES BAPTISM MEAN TO BE IMMERSSED ONCE, TWICE, THRICE?"

BY D. A. KEMP.

While there are some who hold the idea that we must be immersed three times in order to be baptized, we believe God's word reveals the fact that one immersion, is sufficient. Let us see what the word says on the subject.

Jesus says his word is truth, and his commandments are life everlasting. He himself was baptized to fulfill all righteousness, (Matt. 3:15.) When he was baptized he went up straightway out of the water, but it doesn't say he was baptized or immersed more than once.

Peter in speaking of baptism, as recorded in (Acts 2:38) on that notable day when an additional degree of the power and Spirit attended them, says: "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ." But he doesn't say they must be immersed three times.

Jesus says there are three that bear record in heaven, The Father, the Word (Son) and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one. (1 John 5:7) These three being one in purpose working for the salvation of all mankind, we believe we should be immersed once in the name of these three, who are termed one.

Baptism constitutes a birth, as declared by Jesus to Nicodemus in (John 3:3). Jesus says we must be born of water, and when we go down into the water, we are completely covered—buried from the world, therefore when we come up out of the water, we are born again, born into Christ's kingdom. There is nothing said about being born more than once.

Paul says: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism, into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead, by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life, for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." (Roman 6:3,5.)

This Scripture alone should settle the question, in the mind of every intelligent person, as no one would believe Jesus was buried more than once, as Jesus was buried in the water, and arise to walk in newness of life. After we have been planted in the watery grave, we should arise, not to be buried again but to walk in newness of life, and be in the likeness of his resurrection. The same statement is recorded in Col. 2:12. "Buried with him"—born of the water.

The Apostle Paul tells us in (Eph. 4:5) that there is one Lord, one faith and one baptism, which is the baptism in his death.

If we go to the Book of Mormon, which we hold to be the word of God also, we will see how beautifully it harmonizes with the Bible. Alma, one of God's chosen servants upon the American continent in teaching the people along these same lines says: "Now I say unto you if this be the desire of your hearts what have you against being baptized in the name of the Lord as a witness before him that you have entered into a covenant with him, that ye will serve him and keep his commandments, that he may pour out his Spirit more abundantly upon you? . . . And Alma took Helam, he being one of the first, and went and stood forth in the water . . . and he said, Helam I baptize thee, having authority from Almighty God, as a testimony that ye have entered into a covenant to serve him . . . and after Alma had said these words, both Alma and Helam were buried in the water, and they arose and came forth out of the water rejoicing . . . and again Alma took another and went forth a second time into the water and baptized him according to the first, only he did not bury himself again in the water (Mosiah 9:41-46.)

Nothing here said of three dippings, but being in harmony with the Bible they were buried and arose, came out of the water rejoicing. Alma also states in the same chapter and 54 verse, that there is one faith and one baptism.

If we go to the Doctrine and Covenant page 43, section 17, paragraph 21, we find how the Lord has told his people in our own day to perform this rite, "The person who is called of God and has authority from Jesus Christ, to baptize, shall go down into the water with the person who has presented him or herself for baptism, and shall say, calling him or her by name, "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost [for these three are one] amen. Then shall he immerse him or her in the water, and come forth out of the water."

This harmonizes with the Bible and Book of Mormon and makes God unchangeable, and by observing this ordinance in its spirit and form we continue in Christ's words, and are his disciples indeed. (John 8:31.) Conifer, Col.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

For years past the editor of The Citizen has favored national Prohibition. It has seemed clear to him that in the last analysis this was the logical solution of the great drink evil. It has been his contention that this and this alone would bring final and complete victory. It is true he has championed with his pen and on the stump local option and state-wide prohibition, and shall continue when occasion requires, to champion them, welcoming any legitimate plan to destroy or partially destroy the saloon.

At last we are entering the great struggle for National Prohibition. It will be the most stupendous moral battle in the history of the Republic, in some respects, in the annals of time. God grant that it may be bloodless. The passage of the Webb Bill was the opening gun. It is admitted by all close observers now that the general engagement is on.

It is believed that a full conservative consideration of the premises will convince any fair mind that in this conflict the temperance forces are bound to win. Let us go briefly and deeply into the matter. Of course the plan is to have Congress submit to the Legislatures of the States an amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. It would be necessary for thirty-six States to ratify the amendment.

The first task would be to place men in Congress who would vote to submit the amendment. As to the Lower House, of course the big cities would send representatives dominated by the brewers. But in voters, the big cities are vastly in the minority. A large majority of the Congressional districts lie in the country, and throughout the Union the country people, as a rule, are now against the brewery and the saloon. It will only be necessary for temperance voters in the country districts to stand by their colors and compel candidates for Congress to declare themselves in favor of the amendment, and so far as the Lower House is concerned, the battle will be won. New York, Pennsylvania and possibly two or three others are the only States in the Union where a majority of "wet" Congressmen could be obtained. Any one at all acquainted with the present sentiment in Missouri can easily see that the temperance forces could compel the election of twelve out of our sixteen Congressmen, probably thirteen. Throughout the entire South the "drys" would have practically a clean sweep. Beyond question, by proper unity of action on the part of the temperance forces the amendment would pass the House of Representatives.

As is usual, the great fight would come in the United States Senate. Here is where the millionaire brewers and whiskey barons would concentrate their forces. They would spend millions to elect men who would do their bidding. They would resort to every scheme known to trickery, perfidy and cunning. They would often support men for the Senate of "fine character"—"fair conservative men," being always careful that such men had always straddled the issue and had never fought them openly in local option or state-wide prohibition fights. It will be a time when the friends of temperance throughout the Union must unite on men already "tried in the fire." At such an hour, the men who have played the mute or the trimmer when a temperance fight was on, would be worthless in the United States Senate.

But the brewers can be whipped in the United States Senate. Each of the smaller States, like South Dakota or Oklahoma or Arkansas or West Virginia has as many votes in the Senate as New York or Pennsylvania. It will not be like a vote for president, where a large State have three or four times as many votes in the electoral college as a small one. Under the present state of temperance sentiment U. S. Senators favorable to the amendment could, by a proper union of temperance forces, be elected in such States as Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska, for all these are controlled by the rural vote. We believe that if temperance advocates will stand by their colors—and the evidence is everywhere accumulating that they intend to do so—the U. S. Senate can be as easily carried for a National Prohibition amendment as it was for the Webb Bill.

When once submitted, there will be no question as to the ratification of the amendment by at least forty out of the forty-eight states. Here again we get away largely from the money and bribery and ballot box stuffing of the big cities. Counties vote in the Legislatures as a unit and entirely separated from the big cities and in practically every Legislature in the union the rural vote controls. A Legislature can be elected in Missouri which will ratify a national amendment for Prohibition as easily as the last legislature passed the County Unit Bill, and there are few states in the union where the brewers have as much power as in Missouri.

It is cause for felicitation and rejoicing that the people are turning to National Prohibition while they still fight by the wayside for local option or state-wide Prohibition. It is many a day since the home had such occasion for gladness. National Prohibition is one of the brightest stars that has crossed our horizon in half a century.—William H. Wallace, in The Citizen.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 7.

SPIRITUAL GIFTS AND MANIFESTATIONS.

In regard to its belief and practice relative to the gifts and manifestations of the Spirit of God, the Reorganized Church differs from every other church in the world. It accepts literally the statement of Christ that "these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." It accepts fully the teaching of Paul that

The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles to another prophecy; to another discerning of Spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues." 1 Cor. 12:7-10.

These promises are reaffirmed in the Book of Mormon, Moroni 10:9-12, and again in the revelations to the church as found in the doctrine and Covenants 46:4-7, and 83:10-11. Under the operation of the Spirit which has been given, each and all of these gifts and blessings have been received. They are not given for vain display, nor are they placed in the absolute control of individual members to use as they see fit, but are divided to every man "severally as the Lord will."

As stated by Christ, they follow the believers and their purpose is not to convince unbelievers that the doctrine is true, nor to be put on exhibition to substantiate our claims, their real purpose being now as anciently to deliver the distressed from their distresses, to provide the necessary assistance in the obedient believer's spiritual development, and so confirm them in the faith that they will be fortified against the dangers of deception and temptation.

These gifts all have their place in the church and neither one is held as being superior to the others. All are equally essential to the accomplishment of the purposes designed in them, so that in their use one can not consistently be magnified and another minimized, but each one meets some need, and if any gift be discarded the need for which it was designed is not supplied and the believers suffer in consequence.

HEALING.

The question of supernatural healing has been a live one among Christian people for a number of years, and there are many churches which have come to believe in it and have proceeded in various ways to seek its realization. But the ways differ so that the question is raised, "Are there many ways in which God heals the sick, or does he have a declared policy which he follows in that work? If the latter what is God's way?"

The Reorganized Church holds that God's manner of healing has been outlined in the Scriptures and that the operations of his Spirit are always in harmony with that plan. The procedure may not be exactly the same, in every case because there are conditions which differ but such procedure follows certain prescribed rules.

One of the requisites is faith. "These signs shall follow them that believe." This faith is not merely to believe that God can or will heal them; but to have faith in God to the extent of believing his word, his doctrine. The usual procedure is by the laying on of hands of the ministers of Christ. "They shall lay hands on the sick." Jesus laid his hands on the sick, Mark 6:5; but the lepers whom the law did not permit to come in close contact with other men were healed without the laying on of hands.

As to the administrators of this ordinance of the laying on of hands upon the sick, and other provision for their healing, James says: "Is any sick among you let him call for the elders of the church: and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up." 5:14, 15. Here it is shown that this ministrations belongs to the elders, and is to be attended with prayer as well as faith, and also the anointing of oil.

Mention is made of these things as found in the Bible to show that the position of the church is not new or inconsistent, but these things are all affirmed in the later Scriptures which have been accepted in support of the Bible. The Doctrine and Covenants says of the sick, "And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name." 42:12. "Pray over the sick, anoint them with oil as commanded in the law, and leave them in my hands, that the Spirit may deal with them according to my wisdom."

The power to heal belongs to God rather than to man, and the elders are but the administrators of the law and when their part is performed the sick are subject to the operation of the Spirit of healing as may be proper in the wisdom of God: in the same manner that the elder is the administrator of the law in baptism for the remission of sins, he fulfills the law but God extends the forgiveness. In contagious diseases or other unusual conditions, necessity as well as the civil law, may require a different procedure, but such procedure can not be inconsistent with the foregoing, it must be according to faith.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VIEW.

Science and Health, the Christian Science text book presents prophecy as coming in the following way:

"When sufficiently advanced in Science to be in harmony with the Truth of Being, men become seers and prophets involuntarily, controlled not by demons, spirits, or demigods, but by the one Spirit." p 249.

This one Spirit is defined as "Divine substance; Mind; Principle; all that is good; God: that only which is perfect, everlasting; omnipotence." p 585.

Acquaintance with the Science of Being enables us to commune more largely with the one Mind, to foresee and foretell events which concern the universal welfare, to be divinely inspired. p 250.

It will be seen that prophecy in Christian Science differs very much from that in the Reorganized Church which is a gift of the Spirit which is not withheld until the believer becomes advanced in the doctrine, but is given to help him make that advancement.

HEALING.

As has been observed under the subject of Ordinances, Christian Science has no outward ordinances, and hence the laying on of hands, and the anointing of oil, are not used in the healing of the sick. Neither do we find that prayer is used but that it is a non-essential in Christian Science healing. Faith also is unnecessary. What then is this power of healing?

The efficient remedy is to destroy the patient's unfortunate belief, by both silently and audibly arguing the opposite facts in regard to harmonious Being,—representing man as healthful instead of diseased, and showing that it is impossible for matter to suffer, to feel pain or heat; to be thirsty or sick, p 375.

"By lifting the mind above error, or disease, and contending persistently against it, you destroy it. p 399

The greater or less ability of the Christian Scientist to discern thought depends on his genuine spirituality. This kind of mind-reading is not clairvoyance; but it is important to our success in healing, and is one of the special characteristics of that success.

Thus the method is seen to be the removal from the patient's mind of all belief in the existence of sickness and sin, and this is dependent upon the ability to discern thoughts—a form of mind-reading without which success cannot be attained. This form of mind-reading with its resultant healing is called "Scientific Mind-healing," p 288, and on page 264 the author says: "The divine demonstration of Mind-healing stands as a revealed and practical reality."

In contrast with the teachings of the Reorganized Church that the power of healing is resident in God though that power may operate through the instrumentality of men who officiate in accordance with the laws governing, Christian Science seems to place the power entirely in men independently of God as a personal Being. The following will make it clear:

One who understands Christian Science can heal the sick on its Principle. p 291.

The power of healing was not a supernatural gift to these learners, Christ's disciples, but the result of their cultivated spiritual understanding of the Divine Science which their Master displayed by healing the sick and sinful. p 167. I cured her in a few minutes. p 388.

As to faith in its relation to Christian Science healing the following quotation will show:

I have healed infidels whose only objection to this method was, that I as a Christian Scientist, believed in the Holy Spirit, while the patients did not. p 304.

While Christian Science emphasizes so much the principle of healing, making it one of the leading features of its work, it discards, as we have already seen, other of the gifts and blessings which are held by the Reorganized Church as coming from God through the immediate operation of the Holy Spirit in accordance with the gospel law. There is one other point of contrast, viz., that while the Reorganized Church holds these gifts as following the believers, and as being incidental to the gospel work, Christian Science puts the one principle of healing forward as a prominent feature, and seems to offer it as an inducement for new converts and as a means of convincing people of its system of faith.

CONTRABAND OF WAR.

At the Mohonk Conference on international arbitration, the following striking resolution was introduced by the Delegates of Business Organizations, and was adopted by the full meeting of the conference:

"Whereas, wars are now largely maintained by financial loans negotiated by belligerents in neutral countries, and by arms and ammunition purchased by belligerents in neutral countries, therefore be it

Resolved, That we call upon the United States Government to use its utmost endeavors to secure an international agreement prohibiting the making of loans or the furnishing of arms by the nationals of any country to a Government or party that is actually engaged in war or in making active preparations for an anticipated war, as being in violation of neutrality."

This is a suggestion of far-reaching consequence. It is not altogether altruistic, and the source from which it comes is significant. Between this time and the third Hague conference in 1915 the subject should be debated fully. There are difficulties in the way; but the powerful influence which finance can exercise in checking war, as in the relations between Austria and the Balkan states, and the more remote Agadir incident, where, to so sane an authority as Sir Edward Grey, war was at one time a matter of twenty-four hours, was so great that the possibility of organizing this influence in the interests of international arbitration and good will demands the earnest consideration of all thinking men.—Wall Street Journal.

LIFE IN ABRHAM'S OLD HOME.

Among these wild deserts Arab life is as primitive as in Abraham's time. Sheep are still slain to seal a vow. The salt or bread covenant is observed, and when a man dies his tent is torn down and destroyed. Old names like Joseph, Moses, Alexander, etc., are still in common use among Arabs, though pronounced "Yusuf," "Musa," and "Skandar." To divorce his wife a man may repeat the formula "Ent telek" three times; usually saying it once makes the woman behave, and its final repetition is not necessary. The "evil eye" superstition is common, and the first injunction given a visiting foreigner by experienced Arabian travelers is that he must not point at animals of persons in Arab settlements. Arabs say a man gifted with this malign power can look at a bird flying in the air and that it will drop dead; that if he chooses to cast his wicked spell on a camel, it may go lame, or a child so selected will be struck blind. None of the lower class can read or write, but the Arab is noted for his ready wit and his habit of speaking in allegory.—Christian Herald.

Listen! Dear daughters, to a mother in Israel.—I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course it has not been brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. Get up in the morning and get breakfast, and when your mother comes and begins to express her surprise, go right up and kiss her. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face. Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back, when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your lather-tainted breath and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows. She was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little dirty, chubby hands, whenever they were injured in those skirmishes with the rough old world. And the midnight kiss with which she routed so many bad dreams, as she leaned above your restless head upon the pillow, have all been on interest these long, long years. Of course, she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of work during the last ten years, the contrast would not be so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours; and yet, if you were sick, that face would appear more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort. Every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face. She will leave you one of these days. Those burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands that have done so many things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. Those neglected lips, that gave you your first baby kiss, will be closed, and those sad, tired eyes will be opened in eternity and then it will be too late to appreciate your mother's love.

Mary A. Atwell.

HOME AND MOTHER.

"Mother is the greatest title a woman can achieve, political honors notwithstanding. That is the positive, though old-fashioned idea of David L. Walsh, lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts.

Wife and mother—those are the titles and conditions of honor and dignity, declares Mr. Walsh. Not all attain them; situations arise that change the currents of life and the mode of living; but these remain the ideals.

The rearing of children, their teaching and training, are the noblest functions and the highest duties of the species.

I want to explain here—that I think the woman who believes devoutly and devotedly that her best and highest work lies in following the commands of her Maker, will find no difficulty in doing her legitimate share in the other work of the world. She must never lose her sense of proportion and try to dethrone her supreme duties and place upon a pedestal the things that may lure her from the highest calls of womanhood and motherhood.

A WOMAN'S LEGITIMATE INTERESTS.

If the home is made the center of reverence, peace and right living, the community in which she lives is sweeter. The safety and integrity of the state is assured, for the unit of the state is not the individual, but the home.

Women ought to take more interest than they do in things which concern them as a class. They ought to read the newspapers and find out how they are being governed.

Letters to statesmen and city councilmen and to newspapers would do much to improve many things which are not ideal in any sense of the word. Though I do not think that motherhood should be subordinated for any interest whatsoever.

There is a dangerous loosening in the bands that keep the home sweet and sacred in this age; an attempt to minimize the sanctity of the marriage rite. There is a constant seeking to place emphasis on the wrong phases of woman's activities; the belittling of the home and its influences. All of the old heroes that have poisoned the purposes of life are here again, posing as new truths. All these dangers must be met by woman.

In a word, after all has been said and done, the future of the Republic is in the hand of woman—the wife and mother. She has the chance to mold the Nation.

There is no royal road to perfection, no broad highway to human happiness; the world begins in the cradle and ends in the coffin, and woman's functions center in the home.—Sel.

The purification of society, the integrity and morality of the citizen is conceded to belong to the home life, and it is with this we need mostly to concern ourselves, for with the righting of the mistake that woman's highest work is in broader (?) fields, other mistakes incident thereto will likewise be corrected and the duty of guiding our young in proper ways will not then be left to aliens.

Mrs. H. B. Curtis.

SPECIAL WORK FOR EVERY ONE. Financial Work of the Church.

All who are anxiously waiting and praying for the progress and development of the work of Christ in the world are glad in heart when opportunity comes to them to enlist their powers in helping the same to success. This goodly desire too is in harmony with His divine instruction to the people wherein he says:

"Wherefore, seek not the things of this world; but seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added to you."

The work of the church has been hindered for a number of years by reason of the lack of ready means to carry on its business, and provide for and sustain its missionary and benevolent work, in home and foreign fields. To perform this work and secure and hold the necessary lands and buildings for its work in many places the Bishopric have been compelled to borrow means both from banks and individuals and occasionally to pay out heavy interest which could under proper conditions have been saved to the good of the body. But not to have moved in this way would have been many times more reactionary to the work of the body and in some instances the losses would have been to a degree irreparable.

During the time of the late General Conference the question was taken up and considered by the First Presidency, the Twelve and the Presiding Bishopric in joint council, and by other quorums, including the council of Bishops, with the result and general agreement that the Bishopric should take measures at the earliest time practicable to raise a special sum of money of at least Seventy-five thousand dollars to be used for the cancellation of this indebtedness and to place the church in circumstances to perform its work without being compelled to borrow means at high interest and loss. The work when accomplished will be to the general and great good of the body and every one should be interested in the same, and no one fail to perform his or her part, and all should, with the Lord's help, do this at once.

Under special and separate statement the administration of this work has been submitted to the bishops and bishop's agents throughout the church, in every stake and district, and due and just apportionment made of the amount each division should raise to fulfill its work under the call; and we ask for them the ready co-operation and help of every member and friend of the work of the Lord within the respective districts. This work must be in addition to the usual amount raised for carrying on the work in these stakes and districts, and the sending of the gospel into all the world; but if each one will perform his full duty and contribute of his tithes and offerings, his consecrations and surplus, as provided in the law, there will be "plenty and to spare," and all will be stronger and better for having fulfilled their parts in carrying out the special work.

The College Help.

The bishops and bishop's agents, in addition to the church indebtedness to be looked after, are also instructed to call attention to the help needed by the college, and to take special offerings in the interest of the college work, giving due credit for the same.

To perform all of this work will not require a sum to exceed one dollar and fifty cents if apportioned among all the members of the church. But many will help in this work who are not members, and many of the membership may and will help liberally in this great work, and we await the action of all trusting fully that the Lord in his work will by, and through his holy and divine spirit enrich all. The bishops and agents presenting this work in their respective fields have been instructed to make early returns of the same so that the benefits may accrue to the body the present year as well as the following, and due notice will be given as the returns are received.

Commending all to the blessed Lord who is ever ready to bless and strengthen his children "in every good work," we are hopefully in the truth, yours,

E. L. KELLEY,

E. A. BLAKESLEE,

Presiding Bishopric.

DEATH OF EDMUND C. BRIGGS.

Edmund C. Briggs, who for over fifty years was a leading figure in the Reorganized Church, passed away at the private sanitarium of Mrs. Jennie Tournour, Independence, Mo., at noon on July 4th, being in his seventy-ninth year. He came here some three months ago for care and treatment and two weeks before his death underwent an operation for cancer.

Brother Briggs had a long life full of great experiences, and as a young man was one of the leading figures in bringing about the reorganization of the church, and for many years thereafter was a pillar in the church.

He was born February 20th, 1835, at Wheeler, Steuben County, New York, and with his parents moved to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1838, shortly after removing to Jefferson County, Wisconsin. In 1842 the family first heard of the Latter Day Saints, and an elder brother, Jason, united with them and was ordained an elder, followed in time by the rest of the family. At the death of Joseph Smith, Jr., and his brother Hyrum, and the disruption of the church in 1844, and when various false leaders sprung up, the family scarcely knew whom to follow.

From the evidence of the Holy Spirit which they had received, they looked for "Young Joseph" to be the leader of the church and were surprised and disappointed when they found that others were leading the church astray. Having investigated and ultimately rejected the claims of each of the leaders, and being led by the manifestations of the Spirit they united their efforts with others in building up the gospel work upon the original principles, and under the direction of that Spirit, the work of reorganizing was carried on, and grew under the approval of God as shown by the outpouring of his Spirit, until in 1860 when, in fulfillment of prophecy Joseph Smith, son of Joseph Smith, Jr., came by command of God to the conference at Amboy, Ill., and was chosen and ordained president of the church.

At this same conference Brother Briggs was ordained a president of seventy, and at the October conference of the same year he was ordained an apostle, in which office he labored for forty-two years being released by ordination to the office of patriarch in accordance with the "vision" adopted in 1902, which office he held at the time of his death.

His mission work extended to all parts of the United States, and he with Alexander McCord were the first representatives of the Reorganized Church to visit Utah, to call that erring people back into the right way. They made the trip overland in 1863, and met with many thrilling experiences in that dangerous mission during the several years of work there.

The history of Brother Briggs is in large measure the history of the Reorganized Church, though of late years his services have not been so great or extended in consequence of physical infirmity due to old age. He held firm to the faith through all the trials of life, and stood firm to the last in his hope of eternal life through the gospel which he had espoused and for which he had given his life's services. Though not free from possible mistakes, he had respect and esteem of the church, and he leaves an honored record. Much of his work was done in association with President Joseph Smith, who though his senior, survives him.

His home has been for many years at Lamoni, where his widow still resides. He leaves also one daughter, Miss Mabel G. Briggs, and two sons, J. D. Briggs of Independence, and E. D. Briggs of Lamoni, Iowa. The remains were sent on Friday to Lamoni, where the funeral was held on Sunday, the sermon being preached by Pres. Elbert A. Smith.

MODERN EVANGELISM.

That the present methods of Protestant evangelism are unsatisfactory is the conclusion reached from the reading of a number of letters appearing in the Christian Herald, in which various evangelists answer the question: "Is Evangelism Dying Out?" While all these writers agree that evangelism is not dying out, yet a majority hold that there are features of the work that should be dispensed with.

Dr. Torrey says that much of our modern evangelism is open to just criticism, and that some of the evangelists have been snared by the love of applause. "But I think the greatest source of evil in modern evangelism is that we have allowed ourselves to be led astray from dependence upon God in prayer and upon the power of his word preached in the energy of the Holy Spirit, into putting our dependence upon men, machinery, self-exaltation and advertising. . . . What we need as individuals, is to repent and get down on our faces before God and make up our minds that whatever others may do we shall endeavor to please God and will not truckle to the spirit of the times, and will not be led away by the love of money, or the love of applause; that we will not try to see if we cannot excel all other evangelists and be 'the leading evangelist of the day.'"

It has long been apparent that many of the methods of modern evangelists have been quite out of harmony with the spirit of the true gospel work, and it is not strange that so few of the so-called converts endure the test of time. One evangelist was asked upon visiting a former field of action: "Where are the seven hundred converts of five years ago?" and he says "it was true that scarcely one could be found."

Our elders neither make nor lose converts by the hundreds but such as are made usually remain as faithful members of the church. The tendency of the times to sensationalism may be guarded against that it does not enter into our work.

Bro. S. S. Smith has kindly furnished us with a copy of a "Public Sale" poster used by the "Holy Rollers" in a revival at Orchardville, Ill. Among the numerous things offered for sale are one golden calf, 500 wolves in sheep's clothing, a generation of vipers, three houses built upon the sand, one lot of blind guides, 50 Pharisees, 400 hypocrites, and 36 D. D's. Special attractions are offered in the nature of a horse race by which to pay up some old church debts, and a charity ball for the benefit of the church. Reason for the sale is "our God having forsaken us, we are compelled to do these things or beg," and it is signed by "The Modern Church."

We never thought the "Modern Church" was as good as it ought to be but never supposed it had all the foregoing to get rid of. Will there be anything left of the church after the sale?

The editor expresses appreciation of the interest taken by the brethren and sisters in our recent call for short articles on various gospel themes and related topics. A number of replies have been received and we would be pleased to hear from other saints in the same way. Daniel Webster once apologized for making a long speech on the ground that he did not have time to prepare a short one, so if our writers do not have time to write us short articles we will cheerfully excuse them if they write us long ones, and make use of them just the same if practicable.

A scheme so gigantic, and so far reaching in its results if carried out, as to seem incredulous, has been proposed in a bill introduced in the United States House of Representatives by the Hon. William M. Calder of New York, which provides for the appointment of a commission to be known as the Labrador Current and Gulf Stream Commission, to investigate its feasibility. The project is to build a jetty from Newfoundland across the Grand Banks a distance of two or three hundred miles and thus stop the cold Labrador Current from meeting and largely disintegrating the Gulf Stream, leaving the latter to continue its course uninterrupted across the northern Atlantic to Greenland, Iceland, Spitzbergen, and Norway. It is said the effect of such a change would be to radically change the temperature of the polar sea sufficiently to clear it of ice in summer and moderate it in winter, and to give a warm climate to the northern lands. Is it possible that some such scheme as this will be the means of melting down the "icy mountains?" It is considered feasible by many leading engineers including Col. Geo. W. Goethals, the builder of the Panama Canal.

Bishop Kelley gives us information of the death on June 17th, of Bro. Thomas Bradshaw of London, England, who was for forty years a leading helper in the work. Also of the death of Bro. Charles Walton, president of the Birmingham Branch, about June 15th.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The summer vacation Bible school opened at the stone church on Monday morning under conditions which more than filled all expectations. Bro. W. E. LaRue being in general charge. 250 children were in attendance the first day and much enthusiasm was shown by both teachers and children. The work consists of giving entertaining instruction in embroidery and crocheting, basketry, netting, sewing, and all kinds of raffa work, associated with interesting talks or stories which teach some useful lessons. Embroidery is being taught by Mrs. W. B. Kelley, crocheting by Mrs. M. M. Short, basketry by Mrs. A. L. Yingling, hammock netting by G. E. Harrington, sewing by Mrs. E. L. Kelley. The general industrial department is in charge of Miss Emma Criley, kindergarten department Mrs. Tessie Smith, singing Mrs. Belle R. James, Miss Ruth McMullin is pianist, and Miss Fern Donaldson registrar. The work gives prospect of doing much good, besides saving the children from many idle hours during the summer vacation.

Sunday was the usual busy day with its early morning prayer service, Sunday school, preaching services and afternoon sacrament services, all of which added their quota of helpfulness to the saints who participated. Elder J. F. Curtis preached in the morning and Elder W. E. Peak at night, Elder Peak and family having recently removed to Independence.

The monthly business meeting was held on Monday evening and considerable routine business was done. A movement was started looking toward the installation of a steam heating plant for the church and auxiliary buildings, a committee being appointed to investigate and report to the August meeting.

Bro. Israel A. Smith, who with his family recently removed here from Lamoni, was on Tuesday the 8th admitted to the bar in Judge Stone's court at Independence, thus entitling him to practice law in Missouri. Bro. Smith had already been admitted to the bar in Iowa and served one term in the Iowa legislature.

On last Saturday James Hedrick the present head of the Church of Christ, Hedrickite, and trustee of the temple lot, appealed to the circuit court of Independence for an order to restrain the church over which he presides from deposing him from his office. Some time ago Elder Geo. P. Frisby was deposed from the presidency to be succeeded by Elder Hedrick, but contending factions brought another change, and since the court decided it had no control over the leadership of a church, Elder Frisby was again put in to supplant Elder Hedrick, the latter however retaining his trusteeship. Many troubles have seemingly followed these people of late.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Pres. H. W. Goold was the speaker at the 11 o'clock meeting, admonishing the saints to keep clear of the worldly things that are calculated to lead them from the church of Christ. He suggested dress reform, and advised the young not to follow after the fashions of the world.

At 8 p. m. Bro. J. W. Rushton occupied, and we were told that self, and self alone, is the salvation of the church, that is, the church will never save the individual! It is the individual who saves the church, claiming that he, not they, who undertake to say he is a representative of the true church, should by his life, and life work show to the world that indeed he is in Christ, and Christ in him. Also, that it does not depend so much on the whole, as it does on the individual, and if each represents the church correctly, then to aggregate the church will be represented correctly.

At the 2:30 p. m. prayer and sacrament meeting the basement of the church was well filled, and all present seemed to be blessed with the Spirit's presence, the Spirit of prophecy being present in power, and all were partakers of the same to a degree.

Sunday school convened at the regular hour, 9:30 a. m., with Bro. Dilley present and superintendent in charge, and a goodly number were there; attendance 234, collection $5.43.

LAMONI, IOWA.

On Sunday, June 29th, Children's Day exercises were held in three branches near Lamoni, namely, at Bloomington, Andover, and Oland. Their chapels were decorated with flowers and banners. It was specially notable at Andover. Bro. D. C. White, branch president, made an address to the Sunday school. The children sang and recited in a pleasing manner. Also four were baptized by Bro. Edward Harp and confirmed by Bro. White, H. N. Sively and W. P. Robinson. Bro. John Smith, branch president, had charge at Bloomington and spoke briefly at the opening.

In Lamoni pulpit the sermons were by Bro. H. C. Smith and R. M. Elvin. The evening service was in the grove by the church, the hillsides having been fitted up with a platform and seats, also electric lights. It makes a comfortable change from within walls on warm evenings.

At the Saints' Homes Bro. J. D. Schofield and Charles Chase occupied at 7 p. m. Bro. W. P. Robinson preached at Andover at 2:30 p. m., and Bro. H. N. Sively at 7:45. Bro. John Smith spoke at Bloomington, Bro. A. L. Keen at Evergreen, Bro. Amos Berve at Greenville and Bro. H. A. Stebbins at Thompson school house.

The death of Bro. E. C. Briggs was expected day after day, but when the news came that his pilgrimage on earth was over it caused sadness to many. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon, the service in charge of Bro. John Smith, prayer by Bro. H. C. Smith and sermon by Bro. E. A. Smith. A large congregation in attendance. The body was borne to its resting place in Rose Hill Cemetery by Bro. Elvin, Cochran, Sively, Stebbins, Spurling and Currie.

Although Bro. Briggs has not preached much in recent years yet he often cheered and enlightened the aged ones at the Saints' Home and elsewhere by his reminiscences of the early days of the Reorganized Church, and thus did good. The writer of this first knew him in Newark, Rock County, Wisconsin, sixty years ago, in 1853, and from 1866 and onward he knew him in church work. He saw some of the labors and sacrifices that Bro. and Sr. Briggs made in those years, therefore has felt much regard for him because of those good works in Christ's cause.

The yesterday morning and evening sermons were by Bro. J. F. Garver and W. P. Robinson. At the old peoples' homes, Bro. L. G. Holloway and H. A. Stebbins were the speakers. In nearby branches there were sacrament meetings, at 11 a. m., and the evening sermons were by Bro. H. C. Smith, Amos Berve, Edward Harp and I. A. Muuroe. Alfred.

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

A delightful cooling and refreshing rain, after a period of excessive heat and drought, has cheered and invigorated all nature, including suffering humanity, in this locality, and we are filled with thankfulness to God who sends the sunshine, the clouds, and the rain.

Since our last writing a number of interesting things have occurred, which we will try to notice briefly. Three more souls have been added to the kingdom by baptism as the further result of tent work at the little village of Elwood across the river, under the direction of Bro. Pickering and Pierce.

Bro. B. J. Scott has had the privilege of launching the barque of two couples upon the matrimonial sea, some of the parties residing in the city.

Bro. Samuel Simmons of Cameron visited our Sunday school recently and gave us an animated and interesting talk. "Sammy" is district superintendent of schools.

Our pulpit for the last three Sunday mornings has been occupied by Bro. B. J. Scott, R. Winton and W. S. Hodon, and in the evening by the first named and Bro. Roy V. Hopkins of Graceland College, who with his companion, have been spending a week with Bro. and Sr. Roy Fifer.

Bro. Roy Fifer and David Wilke occupied one Sunday at Wyat Park mission, morning and evening.

On account of Friday being "Independence day," the Religio held its regular meeting on Thursday evening, at which time the semi-annual election of officers took place resulting as follows; President, Roy R. Fifer, Vice President, Paul Pugsley; Secretary, James Graham; Treasurer, Belle Burlington; Librarian, Mark Brooks. Bro. Fifer now enters upon his fifth term as President, having completed two years of faithful service, during which time he has not been absent from his post of duty more than once or twice.

The Sunday school held its annual Fourth of July picnic in a grove at the east end of the city. The picnic was a success in all respects, and the managing committee deserves great credit for their untiring zeal and enthusiasm in working for the excellent results achieved.

Regarding devotion to study here is an example, that is worthy of mention and also of emulation. Recently our Superintendent, Bro. Harry Tilden had a vacation of ten days which he with his companion and little son decided to spend in Kansas, "on the farm." On the first Saturday evening of his play time he announced his intention of coming to St. Joseph to attend Sunday School, and withstanding all persuasion, he in company with his cousin, Roy Tilden, arose at four o'clock Sunday morning, drove three and a half miles through rain and mud, caught a train at six o'clock, and met us with a happy smile as we entered the Sunday school room at the usual hour. And we are glad to know that this was not alone from a sense of duty but was a real pleasure to our brother.

Bro. Roy Tilden our secretary, has resigned, because of removal from the city. We are sorry indeed to lose him as he was "par excellence" in his work.

Sunday the 6th, the usual monthly sacrament meeting took place. Quite a number were in attendance including some of the "shut-ins," who by the kind offices of some of the saints were enabled to be present. The good Spirit was present and we believe all enjoyed the meeting. It was followed by a fine sermon by our pastor, to a fairly good sized audience. Sister Goodrich and family departed last Friday evening to join Bro. V. M. in California, their home for a time at least. We shall miss them all very much.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

The reunion committee are busy preparing for the coming reunion at Irvington, August 15-24. Prospects are bright for a good attendance. What a happy gathering it each comes with the Spirit of the Master—the Spirit of peace.

A pair of the reliable wheelwheers in the work were the speakers in the city Sunday, Elder G. S. Lincoln and Bishop C. A. Parkin. The services were good as were also the Sunday school and Religio. The Oakland services were good and well attended, the pastor occupied morning and evening. The auxiliaries were interesting. The superintendent gave a blackboard lesson which proved interesting to the children and edifying.

We thought we had captured Bro. and Sr. E. C. Aylor but they passed on and located at Stockton, where they will find an inviting field for church work.

EAST SAINT LOUIS.

On June 14th and 15th the St. Louis District met in conference at our branch, known as Lausdowne in East St. Louis, Ill.

Saturday afternoon was given to the Sunday school and Religio Associations. Several interesting talks were given by some of our district workers, one by Apostle John W. Rushton, Missionary in charge. At 6:00 business session convened, Bro. R. Archibald being in the chair, associated with J. W. Rushton.

Sunday at 9:30 Sunday school convened in charge of Bro. H. W. Brunckorst. At 11:00 a very interesting discourse was rendered by Apostle John W. Rushton, assisted by A. Carmichael. Basket dinner was served by the Ladies at 12:30.

2:30 a social service was held, same being in charge of Henry Spurling, Louis L. Joerndt, J. A. Dowker, and James Wiles. A number of saints testified of God's goodness to them. At 5:09 the Priesthood convened, in charge of J. W. Rushton.

At 7:30 Bro. A. Carmichael spoke, assisted by Bro. T. J. Elliott. Several anthems were rendered by the choir in charge of E. C. Bell which was much appreciated by all.

Bro. Carmichael was here in the interests of the Herald Publishing House of which he is manager, having brought a good stock of books which was largely disposed of. Between 500 add 600 people were present, and the district is gradually increasing in number and in spirituality.

CORRESPONDENCE

INDEPENDENCE SANITARIUM.

1102 West Maple Ave.,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 1.

Editor Ensign:—There are some minor, though very important wants of our Sanitarium, which we, as one of its patients, wish to relate.

Having been a missionary for twenty years and feeling to know the disposition of our people and all good people, often have I thought if our good friends knew of the many little things needed here they would gladly and willingly help. So I take the privilege of telling of them.

First, always keep in mind that our Father in heaven, as we fondly believe, has spoken and brought this institution into existence, and furthermore that already many of our people have been and are the happy recipients of its benefits and God-given blessings, including some of our missionaries, your humble servant being one.

Stakes, districts, branches, aid and willing workers' societies, last but not least, any isolated saint can help, clubbing together, making up a box of articles to send by express, or Post Office package, prepaid, addressing all to the Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Jackson County, Mo.

All the balls need new rugs, and if enough money could be donated, rubber rugs could be bought, which though more costly, are better.

When we and others have fought the flies on the large porches, we have asked, "Why are not these porches screened in?" The answer has been, "Because of;" the lack of funds." Flies bring and carry disease, as well as being very annoying to the weak, convalescent patients. A good many dimes, quarters, fifty cent pieces, sent from as many good saints, all thrown in together could supply these; no one would be any the poorer, and many at the present and in the future would greatly appreciate it.

Again, bath towels, wash cloths, napkins, table linen, and bed linen, is at times much needed. Last but not least, clean old white sheets, pillow cases or cloths to use for packs and other purposes would be highly acceptable, especially to use in the operating room. Ever since coming here, six months ago, I have seen these things were needed.

In rendering such help you will be helping a worthy institution, though it may be in a small way in carrying out the purposes of God in caring for the afflicted. In James 1:27, we read: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and to keep himself unspotted from the world," or the ways of the world, or in other words it means that we are to not only talk, think or profess religion, but by acts of real sacrificing, loving service for and to others, show our religion.

We have also learned that common bath and hand towels would be very acceptable, and also sheets for single beds, those now in use becoming worn out.

Very respectfully in gospel bonds,

Elder F. L. Sawley.

LEOTI, Kan., June 23.

Dear Ensign:—The writer took departure from home for his field, Northwestern Kansas, on the 2nd of May last, since which time he has preached at McCracken, Bazino, Modoc and Leoti. This mission will add one new and elegant link to my chain of experiences and travel.

Western Kansas is noted for its winds and droughts. This year it is noted for its grasshoppers, which are playing havoc with the cultivated vegetation, literally wiping out the first appearance from some seedings. Some sow the second and third times. But some of the domestic fowls, turkeys for instance, do well on grasshoppers. So I tell them that if they could depend on grasshoppers every year it would be more profitable than anything else, because they could raise a small crop to keep the grasshoppers going and help to keep them around, and then raise lots of turkeys to fatten on the grasshoppers.

There is a perpetual scene of wind-wheels in every direction, which makes the wind pay for its meanness. Some have tried the pumping system for irrigation, but so far its success has been very local and anything but general. The possibilities of irrigation by some pumping system is now the problem of a large share of this country. All the land lacks is water. Give it its drink in regular and proper succession and it will do miracles and bread a nation.

The people are mostly poor, lacking the average dwellings that you will find in rolling Iowa, but all that are not buried are very much alive, and they must live some way. Their only success is in raising stock, hundreds of them, and let them ungrass and skin the plains; then raise simply enough to pull them through the winter. Good money can be made that way with few brains.

Land can be bought around here for from five to ten dollars per acre and furnish your own rain. They will guarantee you wind, grasshoppers and bugs. I have seen people who would be better here on a quarter section with a herd of stock than where they were. But don't believe the yarns of men if they have land to sell here. I don't care who they are, saints or sinners. I may make enemies of the avaricious once and a while, but I have a beautiful little folding typewriter and I will protect the Saints when I can.

This is a county town. I have been preaching in the court house, one of the three attorneys of the town and his wife who teaches the high school have been attending near all my meetings. Yesterday I baptized a teacher, an estimable young man, who is attending Normal here at present.

Out in the country seven miles lives Jay Hoffman who is well known around here, having been candidate for the state legislature. He formerly lived in Kansas City, Kansas and was president, I believe, of the Chelsea Branch. He has a lovely family, has done much good and is capable of remarkable results were he to give his time exclusively to the itineracy.

Modoc is fourteen miles, is a hamlet with three good stores and no bad preachers. It is on the railroad. It is one of the places in the world where the people will not fool away their money for clerical hirelings. Three of the merchants took care of me most of the time, there being but one family of saints, and they are several miles out, the son of ex-convict W. H. Kelley. I was treated princely and have them thinking and reading, whatever the result. This is about thirty miles from the west state-line.

Kansas is a suffrage state. They suffer the women to vote. I noticed the other day a notice by a suffragette that she would not be responsible for debts contracted by her husband!

Western Kansas is all-around dry—whiskeyless and rainless—of course they have a little whiskey and a little rain you know.

There is but one or two branches in the district, one of them at Alexander where the writer is invited to dedicate a new modern church presently. Several saints live at McCracken on the Missouri Pacific, nine miles across from Alexander which is on the Santa Fe. The fence posts for miles around in that part of the country are rock, taken from the quarry. They break them even so that they are the desired length and about eight or ten inches square.

Two daughters of one family of old settlers about seven miles in the country there, are saints. And how do you think it ever came about? One of them went to Atchison to teach, or study, or visit relatives, or something, and while there she fell in with our people. Her folks sent her sister down to stop the performance when they heard what was trump, and the result was that both the sisters were baptized. The rescuing sister caught the infection and they both fell victims in a few days to its joyful ravages. The children are a family of teachers, of talent, of a high standard of morality. I called on them in the absence of the two saints, one of whom was taking care of a school, or in its locality, while the other was taking care of a husband; and I was used good, but not yielded to in matters of religion.

My address is Independence. Sometime I may write again. I can not write for the ENSIGN if I dare not write books. Alvin is not all bad, is he?

Yours,
Alvin Knisley.

WEBB CITY, Mo., June 30.

Dear Ensign:—We sincerely desire the prayers of the saints everywhere in behalf of our sister, Mrs. S. C. Ripper of Mansfield, Mo., who is sorely afflicted with lung trouble; and ask as many as are willing to observe Sunday, July 13th, in fasting and prayer, that if it is the Lord's will she may be restored to health. She became a member of the church some two years ago. We truly hope the Lord will be pleased to answer our prayers.

Bro. and Sr. A. N. Deaver.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, June 11.

Dear Ensign:—A few lines to our much appreciated missionary paper, from this part of the Lord's vineyard may not be amiss. Can say that the Lord has been good in remembering us in this far away land. As it pleased the conference to restrain me in this field, I hope and pray that I may be in such condition before God that I can be of service for the Master, to bring the children of men to the knowledge of his truth.

We have met many discouraging features in our work since we came here this time, but am glad to say, that after the rainy and cloudy day, the Lord will let the sun shine. The Lord has been good in fulfilling his promise, and of late I have felt his Spirit in delivering his word, more than before, and have also seen some result from the work of the good Shepherd, in calling some honest souls out of darkness, into his light. I had the privilege to baptize two souls into the body of Christ, about four weeks ago, and last Saturday Bro. Johnson baptized a man that had attended our meetings over a year, but finally gave heed to the counsel to obey and the Lord was with us, in the confirmation, bearing witness of his acceptance with God. Another man has given his name to be baptized next Sunday, so we hope the good work may continue, and the honest in heart be gathered out everywhere.

Dear saints in America and elsewhere, and especially the Swedish saints, we come to you with an appeal for assistance in the work here. It has been for some time, that we have been compelled to use song books in our meetings; that we have felt ashamed to use, and by agreement with the missionary in charge, and the rest of the missionaries in this country, we have a new edition with the printer, which will be ready the first part of July, and we have used all legitimate means to collect money to pay for it, but lack quite a sum yet, and so we come to you, asking for help, not for our personal help, but for the work in general in this country. If you want to help us, you can send it to the bishop's agent, Hannah Lawrence, Bjornsborg, Vermland or the undersigned, and state for what purpose you want it used, we expect to sell the books, that we don't need in our meetings, and by that way get them to pay for themselves in time. The few saints that we have here willing to help all they can, although they are poor, but if there is a will there is a way.

Please remember us in your prayer, and remember that we are not in the land of plenty, and far from home and are dependent on the plan that God has provided for the promulgating of his gospel among the children of men, that we should all work together for the accomplishment of his purpose.

I will close for this time, wishing the ENSIGN Godspeed on its good mission, to win souls for Christ.

Oscar Okertind.

GREENVILLE, Mich., July 1.

Dear Ensign:—I call you so because you are a priceless treasure to me, it was through your precious columns my husband and myself found the blessed gospel, and our dear Savior also, not only my husband and myself, but our dear mothers also who have passed through the valley and shadow of death but feared no evil. Tongue can never describe the beauties of the glorious gospel to me. Tears fill my eyes as I write these lines, and I long to meet with the dear brothers and sisters oftener, but I am not alone for God is with me.

My heart is filled to overflowing at a beautiful lesson taught to me this morning by a flower—a sweet lily. One never looked so beautiful to me before. My husband was away from home for a few days, only two little girls with me and I seemingly felt all alone. I thought so much about the gospel and it seemed for a time as if all was darkness around me. Dear brothers and sisters you all know what it is to be left all to your selves and then how happy we feel when God lets the beautiful sunlight of his blessed Spirit shine upon us. I knelt down in prayer thanking God for the many rich blessings he had bestowed upon us and for the beautiful day just at hand. As I sat down to work, I saw that a beautiful lily had opened through the night. I saw God's unfulfilling promises shown forth in that little flower and how under certain conditions all things are made for God's pleasure and for us to enjoy. The beautiful sunlight, air and water caused the lily to come to perfection. And our blessed Savior has said Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these, and yet Jesus said we are of so much more value than the flowers or sparrows, and how much the Father cares for them, and how much more he will do for his children if they will only put their trust in him.

I feel so thankful for the blessed promises our dear Savior has given to us, one who loved us and gave his life for us, it inspires me with new courage to struggle on knowing that our heavenly Father will never forsake us if we only put our trust in him. How we ought to appreciate the many blessings and promises which God has in store for his children, but sometimes they seem obscure until brought into the beautiful sunlight of the Holy Spirit assuring us that they are not forgotten. God knows best and doeth all things well.

I see my letter is getting too long and hoping the dear saints will remember us in their prayers, we remain your brother and sister in Christ in the hope of eternal life,
Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Omans.

BIRDSEYE Ind., June 22.

ZION'S ENSIGN:—Am renewing my subscription to the silent preacher, but am persuaded a very successful one, for all who once read do not want to be without it, and that is good evidence of it's keeping all converts made. I am like all other saints, it is impossible to get along without the ENSIGN as with it. There are only a few of us back in the country, but we have our Sunday school, and it is such a pleasure to meet together and learn more of his will and feel his holy presence among us, as many times we do. Although we are few in number, we intend to fight the good fight of faith, and never allow anything to come among us to disturb our unity, for where there is unity there is strength.

Dear saints let us all live for that great blessing offered to the faithful, and we can only obtain it through obedience. We are threatened with a debate in the near future, and we are trusting that the Father will through his servants make all things plain. We are well pleased with our missionaries for this year, none of them have been here yet, but we hope to see much good done here when they do come. It is our great desire to do all the good we can to help build up Zion.

Helping and trusting that all may be faithful, we humbly ask an interest in your prayers.

Your sister in the gospel work,
Mattie Bradshaw.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 13.

Editor Ensign:—Thinking perhaps there might be some who are interested in the progress of God's work in this part of the Lord's vineyard, I venture to write as one of the many who was privileged to attend our last general conference, and enjoy the blessings of heaven there. I returned home to Kirtland for a short time to prepare for home-leaving. Elder F. J. Ebling and myself going as far as Niagara, N. Y., together, but, however, upon the eve of our departure we were very happily surprised by being called to the hotel to find about forty of the Saints gathered to bid us adieu and God-speed. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed, and ye missionaries made to feel that the Saints certainly had an interest in them. The Saints not only endeavored to make the evening a pleasant one, but contributed to make it possible for us to reach our fields of labor by supplying the substantial that helps to turn the wheels of Nahum's chariots. The presentation speech was by Branch president, L. Curry, replied to briefly by the writer, and at length by Elder Ebling with feeling. Truly our hearts were touched as we realized the great importance of the work before us as we sat there surrounded by loving friends, how soon the scene was to change.

At 8:40 the next morning we were winding our way to the field of operation for the year before us, its labors, its trials, its disappointments; its joys, its pleasures, all presented themselves to us in rotation having skaken the hands of home folks and friends, leaving them to the care of a loving father, we went on until we reached the city of wonders, where the mighty river of Niagara makes its leap of 190 feet over the great wall of rock into the depths below. Here on Saturday a. m. at 9:30 we met with the Religians in convention, where a good time was enjoyed. At 11 a. m. Sunday school convention went into session, where, also, was the good spirit enjoyed. There were and are signs of progress.

The conference business commencing at 2:30 p. m., was dispatched with promptness, and excellent spirit presented. No hardness of speech, every one seemingly desirous of learning the truth and esteem, his brother as himself, and careful of each others feelings.

On Monday we were privileged to view the mighty works of nature (or God), as we see it, beginning on the Canadian side, thence down the river to the awful whirlpool, thence down to Queenstown, ascended the heights overlooking the low and placid waters of the Niagara river as they wind their way to Lake Ontario. Climbed the 236 steps in Brock's monument, where from the height of 185 feet above the heights and perhaps 450 feet above Lewiston, we viewed the old battle ground where General Brock fell in battle during the war of 1812, while in command of the British forces.

From there along the river on the American side up the rapids beholding the mighty and turbulent waters as they thundered their way over the rocks.

For further service in educating others in the theme of the gospel, we wended our way to the little church on St. Lawrence Avenue, Niagara Falls, Ontario. Bro. Ebling discoursing to the Saints and friends in a pleasing and profitable manner. On Tuesday 9th, there came the handshake of the ministry after the preaching service held at Buffalo, in which Bro. Ebling again was the speaker. He took his departure for his field in the east making his first stop at Boston, Mass., thence on to Maine. Left to ourselves again we settled down to our work trusting that the pleasant and educational experience of the past few days will prove an index to the work of the entire conference year, that souls shall be saved, the work strengthened and light and the blessings of God crown our every effort.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
A. E. Stone.

Dalby Springs, Texas, June 6th.

Editor Ensign:—If you will allow me a little space in the ENSIGN, I will use this method of extending an invitation to the people and especially the ministry to attend the reunion to be held at Dalby Springs, beginning Aug. 8th, at 10 a. m., 1913. I have written to some of the elders but there are others that I don't know their address, some who are assigned to Texas and Eastern Oklahoma. Elders John Harp, J. M. Simmons, S. W. Simmons, J. M. Nunly. There will be conveyance out from Avery, Texas, for those who come on the train.

Your brother in Christ and in hope of a grand reunion,
J. N. Cox.

North Platte, Nebr., June 9.

Dear Ensign:—I feel I would like to say a few words to the dear Saints everywhere the Ensign is read, and to tell how the good work is going on here. I was baptized last June, and my father, brother and sister, also was baptized and confirmed at that time.

We have had several sermons here at our home and two or three times brought some outsiders to hear. My mother does not belong to the faith, but is very much interested and I have two brothers and two sisters which are not in the faith, of which just my youngest sister is the only one who believes. May they be remembered in your prayers. I was ill from last December till in March, when I was administered to by Bro. C. W. Prettyman and am now enjoying the blessing of health.

As we live several miles from any Saints' S. S., we have our S. S. at our home, and we often have outsiders visit us. May God bless you is my prayer, and I ask the prayers of all the Saints.

Your sister in the truth,
Miss Ethel Bellen.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

SYNOPSIS OF A SERMON BY ELDER O. R. MILLER, OF THE LATTER DAY SAINTS CHURCH.

Text, Matt. 7:15-16—"Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits."

We daily meet people who say that the doctrine we teach is logical and Biblical, but if we recognize Joseph Smith as an instrument in bringing it forth, in this age, then down with it all! Some are honest enough to listen to us in our own defense. Others only listen to our enemies. Some think we are, or have been, associated with Utahism, Brighamism; the doctrine of blood atonement; the Adam-god theory, and that heart-breaking, peace-destroying, devil-manufactured, Brigham-Young-revived-doctrine—Polygamy! They are mistaken. And I want to say further that Joseph Smith the Martyr never countenanced those abominations but denounced them as doctrines of devils. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

According to his writings and sayings—his fruits—he held the ethical standard high. The impure, when refusing to repent, were severed from the church. I proudly confess that I believe "the primitive gospel was restored to earth through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith, the boy-prophet." You shall know them by their fruits. Not by what Mother Grundy told John Gossip that Jim Tattler said. An evil rumor never loses anything in its travels.

I wish to state right here that Joseph Smith was arraigned before the courts of our land some thirty-eight times and against him were false witnesses and paid ignorance. He was accused of committing almost every crime that was catalogued, but was never found guilty—not once! Men may search the records for evidences of his guilt, but in vain. One Mr. Smucker wrote a book against the church and Mr. Smith and yet he quoted this much, at least, in his favor. He quotes Governor Thomas L. Ford of Illinois as saying: "The charges preferred against Joseph Smith at the time of, or prior to his death, were unfounded in fact, and there was no evidence by which they could be proven. . . . And it is said that when the rumor went out that the Smiths were to be liberated, the mob came together and exclaimed, 'If the laws of our country can not kill them, powder and shot can.'" (Smucker, pp. 176-206.) Oh, how much like the Christ's experience that sounds. Before the Sanhedrin, before Pilate, then Herod, then to Pilate again. The verdict was: "I find no fault in Him." But the mob was determined to have their way and they raised the cry of "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!" Not only Jesus and Paul were treated thus, but the apostles, prophets and saints of God drenched this sin-cursed earth with their blood. Then comes ringing into our ears the words of St. Paul—2 Tim. 3:2, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Would to God that I did not have to take time to remove this rubbish but instead would use it in declaring the gospel fruits as delivered from the courts of heaven to Mr. Smith. But I pause an evening or two in my series of sermons to meet a necessity. I have had it thrown in my face, recently, that Joseph Smith was a very bad man. I deny the charge. Those who will select rumors and writings of our enemies and point to it as history, I ask them to read the following: "Jesus was born of a poor woman, who subsisted by the labor of her own hands; condemned of adultery, cast off by her husband, wandering about in a shameful manner, and giving birth to Jesus in an obscure place, and he (the child) being in want, served in Egypt for a livelihood, becoming familiar with some Egyptian charmers, he returned and set himself up for a god; then taking to himself eleven vile publicans and sailors, he went about getting his living in a bad and shameful manner." (Lardner, Vol. 8, pp. 19-23.) Yes, dear friends, the pure and spotless Son of God was slandered thus. Earthly tribunals have condemned to death God's chosen people by the thousands. It causes us to cry from an agony-moved soul, When, oh when, will men cease their hasty judgments and learn to weigh evidences for and against. I have before me writings of many on the life of Joseph Smith, and they all differ. One says he was a polygamist; another declares he was not. One says he was honest, but deceived. Another says he was one of the most corrupt of the earth. Where is there a judge who would accept such garbled, contradictory twaddle as that? We say, "Let Mr. Smith by his writings and teachings, answer for himself." I do not fear results.—Burlington Ia. Gazette.

STEWARDSHIP.

"I have appointed unto you to be stewards over mine house, even stewards indeed." D. and C. Sec. 101:10. We are stewards indeed, most assuredly. I have often thought, we forget that we are stewards and that we shall answer to God for our faithfulness or unfaithfulness. It is just as important to continue right as to begin right.

You do not require to be told "ye must be born again." Well, it is a fact you have been appointed a steward over earthly blessings." What are you going to do about it? Are you going to ignore it? "It is wisdom in me; . . . that the Lord, make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures," D. and C. Sec. 101:2. That is just as important, just as true, just as much in force now as the one you yielded to, to come into the church.—"ye must be born again." Would you be in the church if you had not obeyed? Surely not. Can you abide in Christ if you fail to act wisely as a steward? "God will render to every man according to his deeds." Romans 2:6.

And again: "So then every one of us shall give an account of himself to God. (Ibid., 14:12) Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." Matt. 7:24. In our spiritual, as well as material life we need to build securely, safely. "If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?" Luke 16:11, Ver. 12, "And if you have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?"

Now listen to what the Lord says: Sec. 101:10. "And again, a commandment I give unto you concerning your stewardship which I have appointed unto you: [note this], behold, all these properties are mine." Therefore we are stewards, in charge of these "earthly blessings." We are to so use these blessings that God can approve of our actions as in harmony with his will.

We are to be so consecrated to his cause, that we will "love our neighbor as ourselves," loose our selfishness, and live to bless others. "The Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; certainly he is not going to compel you in the performance of your duties as steward any more than he did to be born into the kingdom) and the willing and obedient, shall eat of the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land." Why not? because they were unfaithful stewards and did not impart of their substance as becometh saints (faithful stewards over the manifold blessings of God.)

Were it not for the transgressions of my people, . . . they might have been redeemed even now, but behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil and do not impart of their substance (as stewards) as becometh saints to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom, and Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself, and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience if it must needs be by the things which they suffer." D. and C. 102:2.

This was the mind of God in 1834, and we are positively assured he does not change, so that is his mind now. When I was a boy at school I was told: "what ever you do, do with your might, for things done by halves are never done right." That is a good rule in our stewardship. If we do not do it right God will not accept of our services and we will be like the unjust steward in Luke 16, will be deposed from our stewardship. Do you want that? "Let every one be persuaded in his own mind."

A DAY WITH THE OTTOE TRIBE.

We are pleased to report another good meeting with the Indians here. Brn. W. M. Aylor and Earl D. Baily were with us at the meeting.

In enjoying the association and assistance of these men I am reminded that their help yesterday is the only assistance we have had from any of the brethren, in this Ottoe Indian mission since the work here was first opened except on two occasions. So we know how to appreciate this help. Two Indians were baptized, and three ordained; an elder, priest and teacher.

A word picture of the experiences of the day may interest some.

Our interest in Book of Mormon prophecy, and its fulfillment, makes the Lamanite activities a common cause with us all.

Behold a commodious country home, built in modern design, neatly finished and painted. It is the home of Indian Watson, and his wife, their daughter and her husband, Mr. Badger Whitehorn. They are not members of the church yet, but for the old folks this is to be the day of their baptism. Some twenty or more Lamanite saints arrive for the services. Also, others of the tribe drive in until the company numbers near a hundred,—perhaps more.

They come in carriages—some young men in saddles. People, outfittings and general equipage give an air of comfort and plenty for the ordinary need of common folk.

Brilliant color is a prominent feature of most of their attire, and a feather—be it large or small—in a man's hat-band seems to add as much self-satisfaction to the wearer as the wearing of a plume does to the minds of white women.

Indian women do not wear feathers. Contrary to the traits of the white race, the Indian men take more pains to decorate the person than do the women.

It may be that white women contrasting their own natural beauty with that of the men, feel that they need more "tinkling ornaments, and cauls and round tires like the moon, and chains and bracelets and muffers, head bands, tablets, rings, ear rings, mantles, wimples and crisspin pins" than the men, in order to compare favorably with them at all.

If such is the case the woman with three rings on one finger, and a bracelet on each wrist may have some claim on mercy after all; especially so if she has not indulged in the use of the "nose jewels" which Isaiah includes in the list—see chapter 3.

The Indian man feels that he needs the nose ring also sometimes, in order to equalize appearances between himself and his lady; but knowing as we do, that his extra embellishments are superfluous, there may be some consolation to our overly-decorated women, in the thought that perhaps Satan will get enough of such Indians to nearly make up his number, without having to claim many of those poor women whose urgent need prompted them to go so far in the matter of personal ornamentation.

But lest we forget the picture in mind let us return to view the house described above. Around it are the various neatly kept farm buildings, then the surrounding valley trimmed in Woodland green when at its best. Now let us step into this Indian home. Nice rugs and mats are on the floors, and everything throughout, is neat clean and tidy. Pictures of the crucifixion and of the Lord's last supper adorn the walls. In the largest room the meeting is in progress. The people are sitting upon the carpeted floor, a few having chairs, and some on the sofa. The missionary stands speaking, with the Indian interpreter by his side. One or two condensed sentences are spoken and then interpreted, and so on through the discourse.

A fast from the morning meal had been announced, and is observed quite readily by the Lamanite saints; and in consequence the Spirit moves upon the receptive intelligences present, like a rushing mighty wind in its unmistakableness, yet as soft as a shaft of sunlight in all its splendor of illuminating power. Heart chords of a people descended from savages are touched in the symphony of contrition, and men weep.

After the meeting a spread is served in the same room. After the dinner an assembly for baptism where the water holds its mirrors to the trees and kisses the soil which sustains them. Where waters are, there is life, without them a desert.

How beautifully significant to be born of water, the liquid life of so vast a creation, as a preparation for the Spirit birth which is to enliven and feed the most choice garden of the soul.

After the baptism, a confirmation service was called at the house. Ordinations of some who had been called, follow.

Counselings, charges, exhortations, and warings, against every trick of the wily evil one are given. The people disperse in the happy fellowship of the gospel of our Lord, the welcome evening shades appear, and the day is done.

The word of truth spoken—the real deeds of goodness wrought in this day, as in all others can never be lost.

Sweet then sleep abandon, come welcome Morpheus.

THE POWER OF WORDS.

BY MRS. H. C. PITTSBERGER.

The Scriptures teach us that by the word of God the heavens were of old and the earth. Christ was called the Word, and without Him there was not anything made.

Paul says, "Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." (1 Cor. 1:24.)

And Solomon says of wisdom, "the Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills I was brought forth:

While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the fields, nor the highest part of the dust of the world. When he prepared the heavens, I was there: when he set a compass upon the face of the depth: when he established the clouds above: when he strengthened the fountain of the deep; when he gave to the sea his decree, that the waters should not pass his commandment; when he appointed the foundations of the earth; then I was by him, as one brought up with him and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him." (Prov. 8:22-31.)

Christ is in the sun, moon, and stars, and is the light of them and the power by which they were made; also the earth and the power by which it was made. It is through that light of Christ that now shines forth from the presence of God and fills all space, that the eye is enlightened.

And yet the Psalmist David said "in thy light shall we see light." In thy light we shall see more light; and a little farther on he says "the entrance of thy words giveth light."

And when Christ came in the likeness of sinful flesh he said to his disciples "the words that I speak unto you they are Spirit and they are life."

And by the power of his word water was converted into wine; the dead were brought back to life; the sick were healed; evil spirits were cast out; the lame walked; the deaf heard; the blind saw; the hungry were fed; the net filled with fishes; the waves of the sea calmed; and the fig-tree withered.

He was the life and light of men," and discovereth deep things out of darkness and brought out to light the shadow of death."

SOUND WORDS.

Paul writing to Timothy said "now is made manifest by the appearing of our Savior, Jesus Christ who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." And he further commands him to hold fast, "the form of sound words," which he had heard of him.

This "form of sound words" is the gospel, and Paul says it is the power of God unto salvation. Peter rehearsed unto Cornelius and his household, "words" whereby they might be saved. Aquila and Priscilla expounded the way of God—more perfectly unto Apollos an eloquent Jew. Do we show out of a good conversation that which becometh the gospel of Christ? Is our conversation in heaven?

IDLE WORDS.

There's another form of words that are not "sound" words, but "idle" words; and the Lord has said for these we shall give an account. He has said, "Cease from your light speeches—your idle thoughts and your excess of laughter—for this is sin."

Only a careless speech,
The power away it took
From the truth we would teach.

REFORM MOVEMENTS IN HARMONY WITH THE REORGANIZED CHURCH.

With the good changes being effected in morals and religion, and the policies pursued for the accomplishment of the same, there is much that looks like the outgrowth of the church established by God through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith and his compeers.

In Kansas, women not only have the right of franchise, but of holding office as well, and in the city of Topeka there are two policewomen. These two women neither carry clubs of guns, nor are they uniformed, but simply wear a star to show their authority. Of the work of these two women, for less than two months since they were given police authority, the Kansas City Star of July 6, says: "More than a hundred cases have come under the women's department of the Topeka police since Miss Eva Corning and Miss Elizabeth N. Barr have been appointed. Not more than two or three cases ever reached the court. * * * There is no carting of prisoners to jail in their methods. They are simply acting as friends to both sides, and are finding that it isn't difficult to settle disputes after the anger of the persons involved has cooled."

How much like the work of a good teacher in our church is the work of these women. A good teacher should be a friend to both sides, and strive to have the trouble amicably settled. They should strive to have both sides give and take a little.

The Star further says: "Miss Barr has reclaimed the scarlet woman of Topeka. This woman had been a trouble to the town for twenty years. * * * She was taken ill recently and she was helpless. Miss Barr stayed with her nights for two weeks, talked to her and encouraged her. When the woman was well Miss Barr got her work and a room with a respectable family. Now the woman is living a decent life and says she has reformed forever. That's the sort of work the women police are trying to do."

Again we notice the similarity of a good teacher in the church to that of these women—the adjusting of troubles and the reformation of the erring. Once I had occasion to visit Judge Slover to be excused from jury service, and in our conversation I explained to him the duties of the various local officers of the church, and especially those pertaining to priest and teacher. He remarked that it was the finest thing he ever heard of and that he wished all churches had some such a system, that it would save lots of trouble and work for lawyers and courts. He said difficulties settled that way were both effective and satisfactory; but when difficulties were settled in court they were not always amicably settled or satisfactory to both sides.

There is a growing disposition in courts towards kindness, and in penitentiaries towards reforming criminals by kind methods instead of severe punishment. I have often heard of the kind demeanor of Judge Porterfield of the criminal court in Kansas City, but I never met the judge until recently, when I was summoned as a juror in the criminal court before him. Two hours had not elapsed before my admiration was aroused towards that man of kind words and gentle demeanor. With the words kindly spoken and most respectful deference shown to all there was a simple dignity that commands admiration. A disposition to show pomp or lordly action is entirely absent—he is a man among men exercising in an admirable way the functions of his office. May we have more such judges and more people occupying in the role of the police-women of Topeka, Kansas.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 8.

Prayer.

Prayer is one of the steps by which men approach God. It is the definite expression of inmost desire manifested either in thought known only by the suppliant and God, or in vocal words in order that others may unite their desires in the expressed petition as it ascends to God. Any mental or vocal utterance which does not express the real desires of the soul is not true prayer and does not appeal to God who discerns the "thoughts and intents of the heart."

The Bible holds prayer to God as a necessary part of man's life work, but in setting forth the position of the Reorganized Church, the Book of Mormon and the book of Doctrine and Covenants are used, which fully support the teachings of the Bible upon this subject. Men are commanded to pray, and when that command is obeyed in proper manner, God will take cognizance of the effort and answer in his own time and way. Should he do otherwise, he would be untrue to his promise made through Christ: "Ask and ye shall receive." We briefly refer to the following statements:

Ye must watch and pray always, lest ye enter into temptation. B. M. 3 Nephi 8:60.

Therefore ye must always pray unto the Father in my name. Verse 51.

Pray always that you may not faint. Doctrine and Covenants 85:38.

Pray always lest that wicked one have power in you. D. C. 90:8.

Pray always and I will pour out my Spirit upon you. D. C. 18:5.

Pray over the sick. D. C. 125:15.

Do all things with prayer. D. C. 46:3.

Thou shalt pray vocally as well as in thy heart, ye before the world as well as in secret; in public as well as in private. D. C. 18:4.

If ye would hearken unto the Spirit which teacheth a man to pray, ye would know that ye must pray; for the evil spirit teacheth not a man to pray, but teacheth him that he must not pray. But behold I say unto you that ye must pray always and not faint. B. M. 2 Nephi 14:11, 12.

These brief quotations from the many found in the standard books of the church convey a fair idea of the belief and practice of the Latter Day Saints. Vocal prayer is urged and practiced in the homes and is observed in all the public services of the church. A part of the teaching of the officers is that members should seek God in secret prayer, pouring out their souls in thanksgiving and praise as also in supplication. The evidence of the effectiveness of the prayers of the Saints abound.

One of the strongest texts showing the attitude of the Reorganized Church toward prayer is the one last quoted above, which sets forth the thought that "the Spirit of God teaches man to pray, while the spirit of the adversary teaches them to the contrary. The true Spirit leads men toward God, and since prayer is one of the steps by which men approach God, that Spirit will lead them to pray, so that any spirit that does not lead men to pray or that teaches men not to pray, is not of God.

It may be noted as a historical fact that the latter day work began with prayer when the young man in obedience to the Biblical command: "If any of you lack wisdom let him ask of God who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him," sought the Lord in earnest prayer, and God hearing that prayer revealed himself and proceeded to re-establish his work and his gospel in its primitive purity and power. From that first beginning it has been the practice of the church and its officers to call upon God in prayer previous to every official act or important work.

Christian Science on Prayer.

A careful reading of Science and Health leaves one to infer that the author commenced and completed the work without prayer, at least of the kind usually recognized as such by Christian people and especially by Latter Day Saints. Not holding a belief in a personal God, it is but natural that there should be no effort made toward personal communication, but it is held that God is "Principle." "Goodness," etc., and that "He" is all around men, so readily within reach that men have but to reach out and take hold of his power and nature and thus appropriate God to themselves.

Christian Science emphasizes the necessity of striving for higher things, but disdains the use of prayer in such effort. The following statements are noted from Science and Health:

Audible prayer cannot change the unalterable Truth, or give us an understanding of it; but a fervent habitual desire to know and do the will of God will bring us into all Truth. Such a desire has little need of any expression from the lips. Its very best expression is in thought and life. p. 317.

Who would stand before a blackboard, and pray the principle of mathematics to work out the problem? The rule is already established, and it is our task to work out the solution. Shall we ask the divine Principle of all goodness to do his own work? That work was finished long ago; and we have only to avail ourselves of God's rule, in order to receive the blessing." p. 309.

God is not influenced by man. The "divine ear" is not an auditorial nerve. It is the all-hearing and all-knowing Mind, to whom each want of man is always known, and by whom it will be supplied. p. 313.

We admit theoretically that God is good, omnipotent, and omniscient; and then we try to give information to this infinite Mind. p. 309.

To suppose that God forgives or punishes sin, accordingly as his mercy is sought or unsought, is to misunderstand Love, and make prayer the safety-valve for wrongdoing. p. 312.

Audible prayer is impressive, it gives momentary solemnity and elevation to thought but does it produce any lasting benefit? p. 318.

The danger from audible prayer is that it may lead us into temptation. p. 313.

Petitions only bring mortals the results of their own beliefs. p. 317.

These passages express the general sentiment of the chapter on prayer, and clearly show that any direct appeal to the personal God is to the mind of the author ineffectual and unnecessary.

It has been seen that the Reorganized Church teaches the necessity of praying for the sick in connection with the ordinance of laying on of hands and the anointing with oil, and that through the prayer of faith the Lord will extend mercy and help. As to prayer for the sick Science and Health says:

"The prayer of faith shall save the sick," says the Scripture. What is this healing prayer? A mere request that God will heal the sick has no power to gain more of the divine presence than is always at hand. The only beneficial effect of such prayer for the sick is on the human mind, making it act more powerfully on the body, through a blind faith in God. p. 317.

Prayer to a corporeal [personal] God affects the sick like a drug, having no efficacy of its own, but borrowing its power from human faith and belief. p. 317.

This common custom of praying for the recovery of the sick finds help in blind belief; whereas help should come from the enlightened understanding. p. 318.

But prayer is taught in Christian Science the nature of which appears in the following:

In order to pray aright, we must enter into the closet and shut the door. We must close the lips and silence the material senses. In the quiet sanctuary of earnest longings, we must deny sin and plead God's allness. p. 320. (The closet typifies the sanctuary of Spirit, whose doors shuts out sinful sense * * * * To enter into the heart of prayer, the door of the erring senses must be closed. Lips must be mute and materialism silent, that man may have audience with Spirit, the divine Principle which destroys all error. p. 320.)

This kind of prayer requires a denial of all sin, sickness, and material existence, in harmony with the further teachings that all is Spirit. Audible prayer is not only unnecessary, but dangerous in that it "may lead us into temptation." There is no claim that communication has been had with God or with Christ, nor is it claimed that any specified revelation has been given by the Holy Spirit, but all that has been developed in Christian Science has been by human effort and research, it has been gained through discovery of "Principle" and not through prayer to a personal God, and by revelation having its source in him. Here is a vital point of difference between the Reorganized Church and the Christian Science movement.

THE CHARACTER AND PURPOSE OF PATRIARCHAL BLESSINGS.

BY CHARLES DERRY.

Read before the Order of Evangelists, at Lamoni, Iowa, April, 1913.

A patriarchal blessing must be divine in its character or it is a fable. A truly Patriarchal blessing must be the gift of God, his Holy Spirit must inspire the Patriarch; the recipient or seeker for such blessing should be taught to look beyond the creature to the Creator, and here comes the duty of Patriarch to so live that he may be a worthy medium of such divine blessing.

A patriarchal blessing may partake of the nature or character of a warning against evils or obstacles in the path of the recipient, of which he may not be aware, or of the magnitude of which he may be ignorant.

It may partake of the nature of a reproof for evils indulged in. It may be an approving message for virtues practiced and duties performed.

It may be a word of encouragement to continue in the path of rectitude, and an assurance of the Father's acceptance or efforts to do good, and that help will be given in every hour of trial, when such divine aid is sought; or it may declare punishment for unfaithfulness, if continued in.

"A Patriarchal blessing may partake of a prophetic nature, opening up the future life of the recipient to such an extent as divine wisdom deems proper, and declaring blessings to be received, on conditions of faithfulness; or it may declare punishment for unfaithfulness.

If the recipient is of the House of Israel, it may point out the tribe to which he belongs.

The purpose of patriarchal blessings is to be a source, or rather, a means of comfort and strength and encouragement to the faithful children of God, and in a sense a guide, being in harmony with every word of God.

In fine, the grand purpose of God in ordaining patriarchal blessings as a means of grace, is to strengthen the weak, encourage the down-cast, comfort the mourner, and cause the strong to rejoice in the God of their salvation.

Patriarchal blessings are not to gratify unholly ambition, satisfy morbid curiosity, or to lull the recipient into a state of carnal security, that the blessings are his to enjoy irrespective of the life he shall lead, whether of righteousness or unholiness. The blessings of God are all on condition of our faithfulness to God and his Christ.

MAKE INDEPENDENCE MORE BEAUTIFUL.

The Civic Club was very much pleased with the results of clean up day. On every side we hear such remarks as "Independence is so much cleaner." This is due to individual effort of our citizens. We feel certain of the hearty cooperation in our next effort. We now expect to wage unceasing war upon all weeds, flies, and mosquitoes. The Civic Club wishes to interest every housewife in the city in the work of keeping the city clean. Will you do this in your block and the one adjoining you? Your city is you.

Remember that keeping the city clean rests primarily, not upon the mayor, nor upon the police, but upon the individual property owners, and that your example is powerful in your block. A demand that the property owner be compelled to cut the weeds about his premises, and that his parkway be kept as well as his neighbor's must come from every part of the city. Report nuisances of all kinds to the police.

It is the weeds and parkways that we are after now. Just a willingness to help and a little effort on your part, Mr. Man, with the lawnmower will do wonders.

Kansas City is so much bigger than we are but not nearly so pretty. She has responded to the call for a weed clean up. She is proud to say that she has greatly improved over last year in cutting the weeds. How did she do it? Complaints were registered against property owners, and the Board of Health department gave them notice that conditions must be remedied. In every case the warning was enough, and the weeds were cut. Our board of health and the Street Commissioner are ready to help us. We append the ordinance relating to such matters and ask you to report conditions in your neighborhood and insist that the ordinance be enforced, regardless of where the chips may fall.

Art. 2, Sec. 521. "Duties of the Street Commissioner; to see that the streets, avenues, highways, alleys of this city are kept clean and free from filth, obstructions and nuisances. He shall see that all sidewalks in the city are kept in good condition and repair. He shall see that all ordinances of the city relating to sidewalks, street crossings, and streets are kept free from weeds, over hanging limbs or bushes so as to prevent the same from interfering with travel."

ROUND TABLE.

What is the attitude of the church in regard to life insurance, sickness and accident benefit associations, etc?

We are not aware that the church has ever taken any position whatever relative to insurance, etc. The gospel plan is designed to meet every need of man, but so long as men fail in putting into operation the divine law, they will have substitutes which will in some degree meet those needs. That substitutes are ever necessary indicates a general lack of faith and obedience upon the part of the people of God as a whole. As man's whole service to God is voluntary, the church does not attempt to arbitrarily enforce its precepts, but after teaching the law leaves each man free to act for himself, and no reproof is given the man who seeks protection through insurance.

How often should our inventories be filed with the bishop? Once, upon coming into the church, or once every year, tithing being paid every month or at other stated intervals?

We understand that inventories should be filed as soon as practicable after coming into the church, and a revised statement annually or at the end of other periods as may be arranged. Tithing may be paid at any stated periods, weekly, monthly, or annually.

Harmonize the revelation of Dec. 16, 1832, where it says: "And behold there is none other place appointed than that which I have appointed, neither shall there be any other place appointed than that which I have appointed for the work of the gathering of my Saints, until the day cometh when there is found no more room for them; and then I have other places which I will appoint unto them, and they shall be called stakes, for the curtains, or the strength of Zion," with the appointing of stakes at Lamoni and Independence in 1901.

The first statement refers to the appointment of places "for the work of the gathering of my Saints," the last reference simply provides for two stake organizations, with nothing said about gathering. The "stake" organization is the proper form for the division of church work next larger than branches, "districts" having been organized merely as a matter of expediency in consequence of the membership in the various localities being so scant as to forbid the proper organization of stakes, such district organization having the divine approval. (See D. C. Sec. 120:1.) Stake organization may be extended anywhere where the increase of membership will justify, and as the Lord may indicate, but the fact of such organizations being provided does not imply that their territorial precincts are thereby appointed as places of gathering. In providing for the organization of stakes at Lamoni and Independence, the Lord did not thereby appoint these places as places of gathering. There is no conflict in the two passages.

Do the feet of iron and clay of Daniel 2:41-43 represent papal Rome,—the iron continuing to represent civil governments, and the miry clay making them appear like stone, representing ecclesiasticism as it is now mixed with the civic governments of Europe which represent the ten toes as some claim?

It is usually understood that the iron and the clay represent the civil and ecclesiastical elements in the governments of Europe, some of which are the remnants of the ten kingdoms, but whether the clay specifically represents papal Rome, we do not know.

What is meant by "hot drinks" in the Word of Wisdom? D. C. 86:1.

Various interpretations have been given but the most natural and consistent one is that hot drinks refers to that class of drinks that are usually drunk hot or warm, such as tea, coffee, and many others. In giving the reason for the instruction the Lord says: It is "in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days. It is so often said, "If the Lord meant tea and coffee why did he not say tea and coffee? There is no argument in this one way or other, but the term "hot drinks" is used to cover a class of injurious drinks, some of which were in use at the time the instruction was given, and some of which would come into use at a later time in consequence of the evils and designs of conspiring men. Had the Lord said "tea and coffee" it would have left the Saints unwarned of numerous other manufactured products perhaps still more injurious, which have since been put upon the market. Refusing tea and coffee while drinking various other concoctions of uncertain ingredients is not keeping the word of wisdom.

Please explain: "And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them." D. C. 86:3.

The promise is to "all Saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, [the Word of Wisdom,] walking in obedience to the commandments." It must be observed that by keeping the commandments of God, man receives spiritual blessing and protection as stated by David: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." (Ps. 34:7), and when in addition the laws of health as outlined in the word of wisdom are observed, the individual is doubly fortified against sickness and disease, and in case of plague is entitled to the special protection and deliverance of the Lord. The destroying angel at such times will pass them by.

WHAT DOES THIS GENERATION OWE TO THE NEXT?

MRS. S. R. BURGESS.

Read before the Woman's Auxiliary, Lamoni, Iowa, April 10, 1913.

Before answering this question, I ask permission of the chairman to relate a little incident.

An emigrant ship landed in New York harbor, having on board a number of Greeks, who could not meet the government requirements and were not permitted to land. They were to be sent back to their own country. In their extremity they appealed to a prosperous New York business man who was from their country, a Greek. He told my husband about them.

"These people work and save and almost starve themselves for years to get together enough money to send out member of a family to America, where they can earn so much more and send home for others to come here. Oh, Mr. Burgess!" he said, extending his hands in that impulsive manner of the far East. "You have no idea of the degradation of poverty these people come from! You can't know what it means to them to be sent back. I must help them."

Now, we do not know why our heavenly Father sends spirits, or permits spirits to come, to this world of ours, for a longer or shorter period of probation. We do not know why, in the myriad plans of his creation, he has ordained only one way by which they may enter our world.

We do know that He instituted the most happy and beautiful sacrament of marriage, in order that homes may be preserved where they may develop and grow after they arrive here.

No doubt you will all agree with me when I say, "We owe to the next generation sound bodies, free from the taint of tobacco and alcohol; we owe them clean minds, free from the blight or sin." Probably all here will also agree that we owe them, by our own righteous lives, an abiding faith in a loving and all-wise God. But tonight I want to plead before this large audience, and would that I could plead before the world, in behalf of the thousands who every year are being sent back, that this generation owes to the next—the right to live.

WHAT WOULD WOMAN LOSE BY THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE?

BY SR. R. S. SALYARDS.

Read at the Woman's Auxiliary Meeting, Lamoni, Iowa, April 10, 1913.

Sometimes when I have had a large problem in such large figures that I couldn't think it, I have made a little one just like it, and substituted small numbers that I could think, and so when I began to think about this large question, which is so very large, whether woman should vote or not, I made a little one just like it in this way:

Instead of thinking of the whole great world, I thought of our little church world and I thought of what the Lord has given as the law to the church under which we act in the church. In the church women are permitted to vote upon all questions; we vote equally with the men, but there is one thing the Lord has not given us to do. He has not given to women to be of the ministry in his church; he has not given it to us to leave our homes and travel and preach; he has not called upon us to be of the standing ministry here; he has not called upon us to go out and visit in the homes and take our time; he doesn't call upon us in his law to do that, but he gave to us all the right to think upon the questions of the church in our branches. We are sent as delegates to general conference and we may cast our vote equally with the men who are delegates, but we are not called upon to take our time away from our homes and give it to the work of the ministry; this is the work of the men.

I have read a little bit, not very much, about this subject because I have not had much time, but I have observed that some of the leading people on both sides, both those who advocate the subject and those who would deny it, say that it is not a question of equality but a question of function, and I think this is just what I have illustrated and what I have pointed out; that it is recognized by the Lord that there is a certain work—woman's work, in the home, and there is a certain work that is man's work, which takes in the outside of the home. There may be exceptions to this, but it is designed that woman's work is principally in the home with children, in the Sunday school with the children, in the Religio, perhaps, with the young people, where we may do those things and not be taking our time from our legitimate duties, but as to traveling, being called out of homes, we are not called upon to do that.

I think women might vote upon public questions, but as to acting upon the jury, as to acting as a state senator or representative, a governor or president, I think it entirely out of the question. Women should vote, women are equal with men; it is not a question of equality but a question of function, and the question "What will women lose," I may say that women will lose by leaving their homes. Women will lose if they do the wrong thing; they need not lose, but they will lose if they attempt to hold public offices in high places.

We quote the following from the Literary Digest:

"Elizabeth Barrett Browning's passionate attack on child-labor has become a part of the literature of social progress. But the evil against which it was directed still flourishes, and still inspires poets to angry protest. The brief and vivid stanzas which are printed below appeared in the New York Independent."

THE SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.

BY ROSE TRUMBULL.

"O mother see the mill light in the darkness glow!"

"I see but candles for my dead
At foot and head."

"Nay, see how wrought by childish hands, world-fabrica grow!"

"I see my babes, decrepit, bowed—
They weave a shroud."

"Yet see their golden wage: the purse of wealth is deep."

"The tide of barter at its flood Gives bread for blood!"

"O mother, with thy visions dark, dost thou not weep?"

"For slaughtered babes upon such biers
There are no tears."

Rushton of the Twelve. Those coming by rail will stop at Xenia, or Rinard, Illinois. Please notify the secretary of committee dates of coming so that arrangements can be made to meet you at the train; also those desiring tents please notify W. E. Pressnell the number and size tents wanted. Let all who can, come. Those who cannot, pray that God's blessings may attend. Meals served at reasonable rates. R. H. Henson, Chairman. W. E. Pressnell, Sec. Com.

NORTHEAST MISSOURI.—Reunion will be held at Oak Ridge school house, eight miles southeast of Macon, August 9-17. It is hoped that all will attend who can and help to make this a pleasant and profitable gathering. Those who desire tents should notify Wm. B. Richards, Bevier, Mo., by July 15th. Those coming by rail come to Macon, and notify Bro. Albert H. Binder, Macon, Mo., when you expect to arrive. Bro. J. A. Tanner is expected to be with us and help to make our meetings a success, also our district missionaries with a good representation of the local ministry. Wm. C. Chapman, Sec.

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT.—Reunion is a fixed fact,—will convene at Joplin, Mo., close to the saint's chapel, in Cunningham Park, and bids fair to be the best of the series. Ample preparations are made to accommodate all in the district or out, who may choose to attend. For tents set up on the ground please address Shelby Carrow, Joplin, Mo., Station No. 1, or for houses near by—which may be rented cheap. Tents will be from $2.00 to $2.50, according to size, please send in your order now—which will greatly facilitate business for the secretary. Bro. Curtis has kindly consented to give us two or three days. The Curtis-Carlin debate is still green in the minds of Joplinites, and if we can succeed in getting Rev. Carlin, twenty five more may be baptized. Come to the reunion, spend the ten days in spiritual service, many notable speakers and a patriarch will be on the grounds. We desire all our local men to be with us. Opportunities will be given for their development. T. W. Chatburn, for the Com.

NEW BOOKS.

THE CHALLENGE OF SOCIAL SERVICE.—Edited by James E. McCulloch and published by the Southern Sociological Congress, Nashville, Tenn. Price 25 cents.

A strong book dealing with sociological problems, being a series of six addresses before the recent Sociological Congress at Atlanta, Georgia, by different men who stand high in their several professions, and is published for the purpose of promoting the cause of social health and righteousness. It appeals to fathers, mothers, social workers, law-makers, civil officers, citizens and the church, to help in the betterment of the conditions of all who need protection and uplift. Much valuable information and statistics are contained in the book, all in interesting form for reading. It will help one to keep up with the times.

VOICES FROM THE OPEN DOOR.—A book of 400 pages including a series of twelve booklets of about 36 pages each, each purporting to be a personal narration of actual experiences by one who has passed the veil into the future life. Published by the "Open Door Publishing Co.," Cleveland, Ohio. Price cloth $1.25 postpaid.

This is a strange book carrying a thin veil of mystery all through, yet not materially different from several others of recent years. It is said these narrations were dictated word by word to the inner ear of the person recording them, (who is not named), and are of an exalted, religious and moral tone. We cannot agree with the general claim of the book, nor with many of its particular teachings following as they do the claims of Emanuel Swedenborg, tending to show that at death men pass into the spirit world and that by successive stages reach "heaven;" that there is no resurrection of the body, that the resurrection takes place at death when the spirit is raised to the higher life. In speaking of God it represents Jesus Christ as God "and there is no other divine Being." The peculiar claims of the book make it of interest though there is a sameness through the twelve narrations which are supposed to have been given by that number of different persons.

REPENTANCE.

Repente ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.—Matt. 3:2.

Repentance as one of the principles of the doctrine of Christ applies to every man in some of its applications. Error, false principles, and sinful practices and customs have invaded the world, many of which have been advocated by men as being true and right until the world has come to accept them as such.

The highest standard of life and conduct is that revealed by God through the gospel, and hence when the kingdom of God is established with its divine principles, it is a call to men to turn from the inferior and erroneous standards formerly held and from every sinful practice and come up to the true and high standard required of God. This was evidently the thought in the mind of John when he gave as his reason for calling upon the people to repent that "the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The higher standard had come, and the people could well afford to leave the inferior doctrines of the Mosaic law, and the still more inferior teachings of the Scribes and Pharisees embodied in the traditions of the elders, with other erroneous views of the day, in order to accept the pure and perfect law of the gospel.

Repentance does not consist solely in ceasing sinful actions though that is a very necessary part of it where one is addicted to such, but the holding of principles which are erroneous, and affiliating with, and upholding institutions which are inconsistent with, or subversive of, the kingdom of God, and following a course of life and conduct which, though perhaps not marked by specific acts of sin, yet because of its aimlessness fails to lead to God, or to improve to the proper extent the world; all are things of which men need to repent when the gospel offers the better way.

Jesus coupled repentance with belief in the gospel in his command, "Repent ye, and believe the gospel," and the Holy Ghost on Pentecost led Peter to say: "Repent and be baptized every one of you," showing that repentance under the gospel of Christ is a step to belief and obedience.

Repentance to be effectual must lead to something higher; it implies a change of life's purpose, a change of belief, a change of practice, a change of association, a forsaking of the world with all of its falsities and an acceptance of God and Christ with all that is true, a separation from the imperfect institutions of men and uniting with the perfect body of Christ.

Anything short of this does not constitute New Testament repentance. People too frequently come to believe from the pulpit teaching that repentance is sorrow for sin committed. The criminal sorrows over his crime when incarcerated but it is seldom repentant sorrow for the sorrow is for self through fear of the penalties awaiting.

The sorrow of true repentance will be for the one injured rather than for the transgressor, and such a sorrow will lead one to make reparation so far as possible. Where God is the offended one, (and every sin is an offense against him,) the sorrow of repentance must be toward God rather than for self. Paul defines the difference between the worldly sorrow and godly sorrow in the following:

Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance; for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing. For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death." 2 Cor. 7:9, 10.

The worldly sorrow helps not at all, it worketh death, it is not repentance; but godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation, and does not need to be done over again. True repentance is dependent upon a knowledge of the right, for there can be no turning to God unless his way is made plain to the mind, hence the necessity of preaching and teaching, and through the preaching of the divine message the call is to all men.

Humility is one of the attendant conditions of repentance. So long as a man is lifted up in his own estimation, thinking he is right in all his ways, and that all his accepted principles are truth, he will see no necessity for change in anything pertaining to himself; he cannot repent. The call of God, the call of the gospel, cannot reach such as he. Jesus said: "I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." The self-righteous cannot be moved by anything that does not flatter their vanity, except it be the hand of judgment sent to drop them from their exaltation.

"As a little child" is one of the required conditions for entrance into the kingdom of heaven, and that carries the thought of dependence, and need of help and instruction, the incapacity of present ideals to make perfect and the need of change toward the higher ideals, the ability of God to meet every need as the effort is made to approach him. All this is humility without which there can be no repentance. Without it God can only bring men to repentance by destroying their false standards and bringing them down into humiliation.

God wants all men to come to the perfect standard. He has provided the means by which it may be taught to them, and he has shown them the way by sending his Son whom they may follow. His kingdom is now at hand, and its plea is for men to leave the ways of the world, of darkness and sin, and come to the light of truth and righteousness, to "repent, and believe the gospel," and "be baptized." This will be the repentance described by Paul as "repentance from dead works and of faith toward God."

Bro. O. R. Miller, pastor at Burlington, Iowa, has succeeded in getting some of his sermons published in the sermon supplement of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, where they will continue to appear weekly. His sermons also appear in the Burlington Daily Gazette, and he receives favorable mention in the Burlington Hawkeye.

Many of our elders find an open door in the daily papers, through which the public may be reached, though in many cases it is not used. As a whole the press is quite friendly to our people and favors are readily granted when properly asked for.

The pamphlet tract "Twelve Reasons Why I Believe the Book of Mormon," has been revised by the editor and republished at this office. It contains twenty two pages and is adapted for both members and non-members. It will be found appropriate to give to inquirers prior to their reading the Book of Mormon, as well as to strengthen the faith of those who have read it. For further information see advertisement in this issue.

It does not make so much difference about the weight of the burden we have to bear as it does the way we go about it. If our shoulders are rounded out with well developed muscles of resolution, and good cheer, the heaviest burdens become light. Angels help bear them. But if we approach our tasks with craven souls, half-hearted and cowardly, mere shadows become mountains that bear us down.

D. R. Baldwin.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 9.

MIND AND MATTER.

As stated in number one of this series the Reorganized Church accepts the Bible first as the basis of its faith, but since Christian Scientists also accept that book but with a different interpretation it is seen to be impracticable to determine the correctness of the respective doctrines by the Bible alone. In addition the church has accepted the Book of Mormon, and the book of Doctrine and Covenants, the first as a divinely inspired record, and the second as a revelation of God's will, holding that both agree with and support the Bible; while Christian Scientists have accepted Science and Health as the basis of their faith, holding that it interprets and supports the Bible. For this reason in making our examination of the respective doctrines we have used almost entirely the books distinctively belonging to the two bodies. In Christian Science Mind and Spirit are used synonymously and rather than attempt to preserve fine distinctions we so recognize them here.

The Reorganized Church holds that man was created a spiritual being and had an existence before coming into the world. Thus in this life he is a dual being—spirit and body, the spirit or mind and the body or matter being closely related and united in the one being. It holds that the death which was passed upon all men in consequence of transgression was a spiritual death—separation from God, and a physical death—separation of spirit and body, but that God's purpose was for man to have eternal life and though he permitted death he provided a means through the gospel by obedience to which life might be restored both physical and spiritual, the physical restoration coming through the resurrection of the body. During the intermin between the physical death and resurrection the spirit would have a separate conscious existence, and after the resurrection, spirit and body together becoming immortal—not again subject to death.

Matter is eternal notwithstanding its form may change. It always exists in some form. The uniting of spirit and matter in the creation of man was not designed for his suffering or punishment but that he might be given greater joy and glory, and this will be his ultimate realization through obedience to the laws of life given by his Creator. The following is noted purporting to be the words of Christ:

I was in the beginning with the Father, and am the Firstborn; and all those who are begotten through me are partakers of the glory of the same, and are the church of the Firstborn. Ye also were in the beginning with the Father. . . Man was also in the beginning with God. . . The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receiveth a fullness of joy; and when separated man cannot receive a fullness of joy. The elements are the tabernacle of God; yea, man is the tabernacle of God, even temple; and whatsoever temple is defiled, God shall destroy that temple. Doctrine and Covenants 90:4, 5.

Through the redemption which is made for you is brought to pass the resurrection from the dead. And the spirit and the body is the soul of man, and the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul; and the redemption of the soul is through him who quickeneth all things, in whose bosom it is decreed, that the poor and the meek of the earth shall inherit it. Therefore it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory; for after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the Father; that bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it for ever and ever; for, for this intent was it made and created; and for this intent are they sanctified. . . and the righteous shall inherit it; for notwithstanding they die, they also shall rise again a spiritual body. Ibid 85:4, 6.

There is a God in heaven who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God, the framer of heaven and earth and all things which are in them, and he created man male and female after his own image and in his own likeness created he them. Ibid 17:4.

The bodies with which men are entrusted in this world are to be properly used and their health and life safeguarded by a proper observance of the laws governing. For this reason the books of the church teach that "inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or stong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father. . . and again tobacco is not for the body, and is not good for man." Laws are given relative to the kinds of food and times of eating, and as to cleanliness, and sleep, etc., all for the proper preservation of physical vitality so that the spirit within might freely perform its proper work.

According to this view man is the creature of God, spirit and body, spirit being the intelligent part of man. When the body is clothed with life however, intelligence dwells within it. It may die but this death is but a temporary condition, and the spirit and body will again be united eternally to receive a fullness of joy if worthy. The earth too though awaiting transformation is eternal and when sanctified is to become the habitation of the righteous. Space forbids multiplying Scriptural references or enlarging upon these points, so we pass to the Christian Science position.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE VIEWPOINT.

In contrast with the foregoing Science and Health denies man's dual nature as is seen from the following:

The conventional firm, called matter and Mind God never formed. p. 170.

Life is not in matter so that it cannot be said to pass out of it. p. 185.

The theory that soul, or spirit, dwells in matter is taught by theologians and physicians. This theory is pantheistic. p. 196.

The second erroneous postulate is that man is both mental and material. p. 257.

Mistaking his origin and nature, man believes himself to be combined matter and Spirit. p. 64.

Matter is not eternal, and there is no resurrection of the body.

Every object in the material universe will be destroyed, but the spiritual idea whose substance is in Mind lives on. p. 163.

Matter . . . is not eternal. p. 171.

The belief that material bodies return to dust, hereafter to rise up as spiritual bodies, with material sensations and desires, is incorrect. p. 239.

If spiritual life has been won by the departed, they cannot return to material existence. p. 248.

As to the spiritual or spirit man the teaching seems indefinite or even confusing, in some cases indicating that he is a separate entity, and in others showing him to be put a part of the omnipresent Spirit, or God.

God and man, Principle and idea, are inseparable, harmonious and eternal. The science of divine Principle and its idea furnishes the rule of perfect Being, and brings immortality to light. God and man are not one; but in the order of divine science, as divine Principle and idea, God and man are inseparable. God is the parent Mind, and man is his offspring. p. 232.

God is personal, in its Scientific sense, but not in any anthropomorphic sense. As reflecting him to man therefore cannot lose his individuality; but as material sensation, as a dream of soul in the body, man does lose his individuality. p. 232.

"Man is a supposed mixture of the first and second powers, of intelligence and non-intelligence, of spirit and matter. Such theories are evidently erroneous . . . when will the ages understand the Ego, and see only one God, one Mind, or intelligence? . . . In Science it can never be said of a mortal, that he has a mind of his own, distinct from God." p. 100.

"The universe of spirit is peopled with spiritual beings, and its government is divine Science." p. 161.

"This scientific sense of being, forsaking matter for Spirit, by no means suggests man's absorption into Deity, and the loss of his identity, but confers upon him enlarged individuality." p. 161.

"The belief that man has existence or mind separate from God, is a dying error." p. 347.

"Spiritualism calls one person, living in the world, matter, but another who has died, but inhabits the earth it calls spirit; when the fact remains that neither the one nor the other corporeality is spiritual, for Spirit is one, and is God." p. 238-9.

"God controls all, as manifesting Mind, not matter. He is the only Spirit." p. 239.

These statements are given for the perusal of the reader. Just what man's nature is here, or what it is expected to be hereafter according to this theory is not plain or definite to the writer though it may be so to others. Physical laws are ignored and violated without regard to results. "We cannot suffer in reality from breaking any law, except it be a moral or spiritual law." (p. 380).

Bro. J. C. Page writes that seven were baptized at the Fargo, N. D. reunion, and two ordained, the preaching of a high order and the prayer-meetings good. The reunion was well attended, and favorable mention was given of it in the daily papers.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Teat meetings are still holding the interest of enough people to maintain a good attendance. The saints assist by their presence and there has been a goodly number of non-members. Bro. Jenkins and Self are in charge and Bro. J. F. Curtis and others have of late assisted with one or more sermons. The tent is now located at Liberty and Walnut.

Bro. Ammon White, patriarch, instructed to saints along the lines of duty in harmony with his office work on Sunday morning, and Charles Fry spoke in the evening drawing lessons for present day application from the historical events connected with the church. The afternoon prayer service was quite good, two who had been baptized being confirmed.

The summer vacation school is so far filling the highest hopes of its promoters, the average attendance last week being 394. While the work is new to nearly all of the teachers it is moving along orderly and satisfactorily. The attendance for Monday was 310. The daily papers inform us that the largest attendance at any one school in Kansas City is about 100.

Bro. C. Edward Miller and his family arrived from Kirtland, Ohio, last Saturday and expect to make their home here again. After settling his family Bro. Miller expects to go on his mission to Australia with Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths.

Zion's Printing and Publishing Co., publishers for the Southern, States Mission of the Utah Church has moved its offices into the building across the street from the Eastway office formerly occupied by the Independence Laundry. The building has been fitted up for their occupancy and they expect to install a Miehle press with other equipment with which to more rapidly put out their work.

Bro. A. B. Purfurst has been an Independence visitor for several days being on his way to his former home in California. Four years ago he went on a mission to Germany and Switzerland where he labored two and a half years, then going by appointment to Palestine where he remained six months, and on his return spent three months preaching in Southern Spain. The last six months he has been laboring in Texas seeking to reach with the gospel the Mexicans at Galveston and San Antonio. Bro. Purfurst has the advantage of a familiarity with several languages.

The secretary of the Sunday school reports an average attendance of 844 during the last quarter. The attendance last Sunday dropped below this, being 829, with a collection of $15.19. The total enrollment of the school including the home class members and cradle roll department is 1590, requiring 115 classes.

The Religio held its semi-annual election last Friday evening making some change in its corps of officers. The list now stands: W. E. LaRue president, J. F. Rudd vice president, John Lloyd 2d vice president, J. G. Jenkinson treasurer, Vivian Brackenbury secretary, Mrs. J. A. Gardner superintendent junior department, Mrs. A. V. Closson superintendent home department, Mrs. W. H. Deam superintendent normal department, Charles B. Eaton chorister, Marcine Smith pianist, J. A. Gardner member library board. The Religio has been doing some good work and with its present staff of officers it is certain to continue to do so.

Bro. Daniel W. Shirk died at his home in this city on Tuesday morning at the age of 62 years. He was born in Pennsylvania, April 20, 1851. After coming into the church he spent many years in the ministry and was a faithful worker. He had been in ill health several months suffering from a complication of difficulties including heart weakness and dropsy. He leaves his widow and eleven children.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Sunday school attendance on 13th inst. was 236, collection $4.53. Preaching at 11 a. m. by Elder J. F. Curtis, subject, "There is a rest for the children of God;" and the "children of God" was strongly emphasized, for his intention was to show that not all should enter into this rest spoken of, but the children of God only. The evening hour was occupied by Elder R. Etzenhouser who gave an illustrated talk on the Book of Mormon. Many instructive lessons were illustrated to the interest and edification of the saints.

The Religio met on Friday evening and elected for president, J. I. Dickenson; vice president, Clarence Martin; secretary, Lillian Barnett; treasurer, John Douglas; librarian, George Tousey; chorister, Jessie Willis; organist, Robert Miller; home class superintendent, Lettie Hughes.

We should have reported a very enjoyable time by the South Side Branch on the Fourth of July on the Order of Enoch ground. The day was spent in the reading of the Declaration of Independence with a short talk on its benefits, followed by addresses by Bishop Bullard, Bro. Krahl and Bro. Dillie. The children enjoyed the swings, ice cream, etc.

QUINDARO BRANCH, KANSAS CITY, KAS.

July 11th a very severe storm of wind, rain and hail was had here doing much damage both in city and country, almost totally destroying fields of grain and all kinds of crops and fruit.

Our Sunday school did not have its Fourth of July picnic this year, though the young people's class with their teacher, Roy Barron, celebrated at Lake Wilborn.

The following officers for the next six months will be in charge of the Sunday school: John Tucker superintendent, Bro. Palmer assistant, Sr. R. E. Lewis secretary, Viola Goodfellow treasurer, Sr. Eason librarian, Roy Barron chorister, Maria Tucker organist.

On account of the Fourth of July being on Friday the Religio election of officers was postponed until the week following at which time the semi-annual election took place which resulted as follows: Roy Barron president, Maria Goodfellow vice president, Viola Goodfellow secretary, Leo Lewis treasurer, Kate Kaplinger chorister, Maria Tucker organist, Sr. Roy Barron librarian.

Branch business meeting on the 7th elected D. E. Hough president, John Tucker priest, Bro. Johnson teacher, C. S. Barron deacon, and treasurer, Leo Lewis librarian.

Elder Kaplinger occupied the morning hour with good liberty. He took for his subject, "Judging not."

Bro. Hoffman from Western Kansas worshipped with us a short time ago, after being to Arkansas where he had been in the interest of another location. We enjoyed his instructions from the stand. Bro. F. C. Cochrane from the Argentine Branch gave us a good talk July 6th. He took for his text Proverbs 14: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man," and applied it to the saints. At six o'clock the sacrament and social service was very well attended. The evening speaker was Bro. C. S. Barron. Our pastor, Bro. Hough has been giving us some very good instructions on some rules to adopt to improve our daily life. Bro. John Tucker talked last Sunday night.

Carrie Barron.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Bro. G. J. Waller visited San Jose on Sunday last and spoke twice for them; Bro. C. A. Parkin preached for them on Monday night.

Reports from the various branches of the district indicate the work is moving on steadily—but very little disturbance exists—the greatest enemy being the dragon indifference—who knows how to destroy it?

The Woman's Auxiliary held their regular monthly gathering yesterday at the home of Sr. Stella Neal who gave them a native chicken dinner. Articles were read and many feeling references were made to the long and efficient services of Sr. Walker, whose resourceful brain and willing hands have won a needed and merited rest.

The sacramental services in both branches were usually good; the sermons at night were by the writer in the city and Elder J. A. Saxe in Oakland.

Bro. Joseph W. Presley was ordained a priest at the morning service Sunday by Elder F. M. Sheehy and the writer, and on Wednesday night was elected priest of the branch.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy arrived this week whom we are pleased to meet once more; he will be with us for a time at least.

Preparations are being perfected for the coming reunion. Arrangements have been made with the Northwestern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, and Western Pacific for fare and a third on certificate plan. Be sure and get certificate for return fare.

THE ROUND TABLE

When a member of the church repudiates the doctrine and requests to have his name taken from the church books, what should be done?

He should be labored with by the officers of the church for the purpose of showing him his error as the Scriptures require, and if he still persists in his course, complaint of apostasy may be made against him and a court of inquiry appointed. If the court sustains the complaint the branch may then drop him from membership. It has been a rule of the church to drop no name except on the report of a court of elders, thereby safeguarding the interests of all the members, otherwise many might be dropped unjustly.

Should Latter Day Saints approve the use of tobacco in their homes by others than members of the family when none of the family use it?

Since the Lord does not approve of the use of tobacco, saying "it is not good for man," saints cannot afford to approve of its use. People who hold themselves in proper respect will not unnecessarily impose the unpleasant fumes of tobacco smoke upon households where they may be staying, but should they do so, the attitude and action of the family should be wisely determined according to circumstances and conditions. It would be an extreme measure to cast one out from our home for this reason.

The word of wisdom says: "Every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof." What does this mean? When are fruits in season?

As a general rule vegetables and fruits are in season so long as they can be kept in their natural state, and not preserved by artificial means. The healthfulness of eating summer fruits in winter is questionable, and likewise using in summer the heavier heat and fat producing foods which are especially adapted for winter. Since the reason for giving the Word of Wisdom was "in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days," the advice to eat things only in their season may be a warning against the common practice of depending upon canned goods for food, many of which are put up by large concerns which have little regard for the health of the consumers. Government investigations have revealed that many poisonous preservatives have been used in the canning of foods. The question is one that raises many points which cannot be considered here.

Is it necessary to partake of the Lord's supper in order to receive eternal salvation?

This ordinance was placed in the church by Christ and designed for the whole membership, and we would hardly suppose that he would require something that was unnecessary. When the conditions are complied with the partaking of the sacrament brings spiritual blessing that cannot be obtained otherwise and without which a man would not be able to overcome the world. The sacrament is a sign of, and also a means of, union with Christ. Read Matt. 26:26; John 6:53-56; 1 Cor. 11:24-32.

Why not teach the washing of feet as well as the sacrament as both were instituted at the same time?

The washing of feet is an ordinance that seems to apply to the ministry only, and when properly observed is an evidence of humility and worthiness in office. It may be observed only under advanced conditions in church work, and which have seeminglyn't yet been obtained. Read Doctrine and Covenants 85:45, 46.

In the Doctrine and Covenants 26:2; and 42:5 it is stated that the fullness of the gospel is contained in the Book of Mormon. Is baptism for the dead an integral part of the gospel? If so, why then is not baptism for the dead taught in the Book of Mormon?

The doctrine of baptism for the dead is not an integral part of the gospel, but merely an extension of one part of the gospel work to another field of activity. Doctrine and Covenants 32:2, 3, says: "Repent, repent and prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand, yea, repent and be baptized every one of you, for the remission of your sins; yea, be baptized even by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost. Behold, verily, I say unto you, This is my gospel, and remember that they shall have faith in me or they can in no wise be saved; and upon this rock I will build my church; yea, upon this rock ye are built." These are the essential principles upon which the whole gospel work is based, and upon which every man must build. Without faith in these and obedience there can be no salvation, and all other things are secondary. These principles include the whole gospel, and the ministering of the gospel to those who are dead as mentioned by Christ in John 5:24, 25, and by Peter in his first epistle 3:18-20, and the baptism which has been provided for them, constitute the putting into operation of these principles as pertaining to this class of people. No new principle of salvation is established by the doctrine of "baptism for the dead," but rather the adapting of the gospel principles to millions which would otherwise be excluded from gospel privileges.

CORRESPONDENCE

LOCUST GROVE, OKLA., June 26.

Dear Ensign:—Our conference of the Eastern Oklahoma District has passed into history and it was a very interesting conference, and the Religio work of the district was taken up again putting at the head a couple of very energetic sisters whom we trust will not permit the work to die again.

In my short experience in this field I find the greatest cause of the work being in such a sleepy condition—not only the Religio work but the church work as well—is that most of the officers and many of the members are addicted to the use of tobacco. So with some little effort the conference passed resolutions that none should officiate in any office, church, or Sunday school, or Religio who was addicted to the use of tobacco, and that none such should be ordained to any office. We trust that those who are affected by this resolution will see the better way and strive to overcome and give the Master an opportunity to bless them.

I entered my field about the 10th of May, held meeting at Wilburton, Fanshaw and Haileyville. Met with Bro. John Harp at Haileyville. He is the same good old Harp. He was chosen as our district president. We left Wilburton the 24th going to Wagoner where I left Bro. Harp and came here. This is a new place just over the line in the Spring River District. Bro. W. J. Reser is living here and we are domiciled at his pleasant home. We opened meeting here last night, the 25th, had about fifty out to hear the new man and new doctrine. I look for a large crowd tonight. The weather is very dry and hot causing much sickness in some localities, especially at Wilburton.

We met with a little disappointment at Wagoner, expecting to find the work in a prosperous condition there, but a student in modern socialism had set forth the principles of the all things common from a socialistic point of view and sought to build up a little zion but there were a few like Judas among them that wanted to carry the bag and a part of this new little zion fad, but it did not go to heaven and they were all socialists and the prime mover of this zion was a socialist and an elder, and three houses were built, and two of the brethren had to foot all the bills, and came near losing all they had. Several lots purchased, one for a church to be built upon about a mile from town and now those two brothers have to carry the debt and pay for those lots or lose all that has been put in them. The result is a new branch is gone by the way ready for reorganization. This is sad.

A reading of Doctrine and Covenants 42:8-11; 51:2; 57: 83:1-6; 72; 77; 101; 126; and 128:1-3; and teaching them to the saints and leaving out this other which darkens council would have been building on the rock and not on the teachings of men and would have saved much labor which is somewhat unappreciated to perform, and takes time from the field where there is so much to be done.

Bro. Harp is now attending to that work. Bro. E. A. F. is still with rever leaving but two of us here in the field, and but little assistance rendered by the local force.

I am not finding fault but there is need of workers. The work is here to do but the picture shows are so attractive that some of our members are taken in by them and some of them hardly ever find their way to the church—house. We trust that the kingdom of God and this beautiful gospel will outline the foolishness of this world to all of the members of this church, and those who are seeking light and truth, and that the thousands of dollars expended for worldly pleasure that brings no good returns, might be put into the coffers of the church for the spread of the gospel and caring for the needy and homeless children. See [Sec. 130:7; 128:7-7] I forgot to state that the preaching at the conference was done by Brethren E. A. Erwin, Bishop Short, and John Harp. Hopefully and sincerely,

W. P. Bootman.

SALEM, Mo., July 13.

Dear Ensign:—I am pleased to say I am still improving in health since leaving the sanitarium and still trust in the Lord's promises unto me. Many thanks to the saints of Independence for their kindness to myself and wife while she lived, also at her funeral. While I was not able to be present at the funeral I realized its pangs and sorrows as if I had been present. I again take this means of thanking you all, also my daughter, Mrs. Cox, joins with me in thanking you all.

It does not seem like home to me since my return. While I was greeted with many a hearty hand shake and words of sympathy, all of that does not fill the vacant place. I wish to change my location. I run a popcorn and peanut roaster. I like to be where there is a branch of the church. If any saints living in a good live town where one could make a living, they would do me a favor by corresponding with me. I do not want to go north on account of my health.

Your brother in Christ,

D. Bowen.

FISKEVILLE, R. I., June 21:

Editor Ensign:—No doubt you will be surprised to get a letter from this part of God's moral vineyard, but so bold are we getting (because of our success as a real branch) that we dare assail your worthy columns, chiefly however because we wish all of our brothers and sisters to know, those who read your paper at least, that we are in the fight and fighting hard. Our little branch was organized twenty-five or thirty years ago with a very small fighting force, chiefly among whom were Bro. Cyril Brown, Charles Brown, Ira Brown, William Fenner and Albert Waterman; and the dearest of all my memories are those centered around the old high house where we held our meetings. How many times my memory has carried me to this old house, and each time to thank God still deeper in my heart for the blessed influence of his Holy Spirit that seemed to pervade and prevail there, under its teachings and beautiful influence the writer learned to know something of the great Master's will.

At this time I do not wish to forget to pay a tribute of great respect to Bro. Ransom Searles who after years of faithful service was called home. I can see him now as memory carries me back, his face shining with resplendent glory, as he told the stranger what God had done for him, and like the poet I feel like saying:

"Backward, oh backward, turn time in thy flight,
And make me a boy again just for tonight."

We have our ups and downs however. The older ones have passed away, most of them at least, but we are not left without consolation, for by the effort of Bro. A. B. Phillips and Ralph W. Farrell who labored in our locality some few years ago we have a number of faithful workers, chiefly among them are Bro. and Sr. Carroll and their lovely daughter Clara, and niece Gwendolyn. Too much can not be said of their devotion to this work. To them, and especially Sr. Clara is due the success of our Children's Day exercises. So well were we pleased with the results that we intend to try again next year with God's help.

Under the guidance of Bro. E. A. Fox, that very congenial assistant district superintendent, we are flourishing as a Sunday school. It seems that all we needed was a little encouragement, and our dear Bro. Fox seemed to supply that from the beginning; and when I watch him teach that class of boys I cannot help but think that he at least has found that which he most desires, for while he acts as our superintendent he also acts as the teacher of the boys' class. Children's Day dawned bright and fair (June 15th) and to listen to the children as they spake, one could not wonder at Christ saying "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The singing by Sr. Gwendolyn was beautiful. The writer endeavored to speak to the little ones, and judging by the attention which he received was well rewarded; a number of strangers were present and we feel that much good was done.

Your brother and co-laborer,

J. Herbert Fenner.

GRANDFIELD, OKLA.

Editor Ensign:—While reading the good letters and testimonies I felt so full of the love of the saints and our glorious gospel that I must write a few lines. I know I am weak both physically and mentally, yet I feel the love of God to that extent that words cannot express it. I know the Lord has not forsaken me, he has blessed me many times when I didn't realize it until later. He has answered my prayers. Dear isolated saints don't grow cold and be led away by the things of the world. I know it is hard for us to keep in the narrow way, with no preaching, no Sunday school, and yet if we will look to our God, read our Bible and church literature, and compare with what we see and hear at other churches we can grow stronger even though isolated. Will close by asking the brothers and sisters to pray for me. I have been unable to sit up all day for eleven weeks and feel that I need the blessing of our God for my affliction is not of a nature that man can aid.

Your sister in the great cause,
Virginia Boyd.

OLWEIN, IOWA, July 5.

Editor Ensign:—We have not seen any letters from this place for some time, so I thought I would write this epistle. We are indeed a small flock now but we believe with the poet—"All ports are good havens with God overhead."

There has been a regular exodus of the saints to Independence from here the last two years, and we miss them in our work here. Sr. Bessie whose home was ever open for church, prayer-meeting, or Sunday school, Elder Robert Smith who labored faithfully among us, his good wife, Sr. Nettie, who was his able helper, Sr. Hannah Loveland and lively daughters, our young priest, Lueben Loveland, and his wife, Sr. Laura, they are all sorely missed; but lately we have lost by the hand of death our faithful and devoted young priest, John S. McQueen. He had been ill for months but his faith never wavered and as long as he could stand on his feet we had prayer and sacrament meeting and Sunday school at his home. We feel that his memory will keep us with our heavenly Father's guidance in the straight and narrow way.

Your sister in gospel bonds,
Katherine Shippy.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, June 20.

Dear Ensign:—I thought you might be interested in a few lines from Kirtland. Last Sunday was Children's Day at the temple. The exercises were very interesting. The temple was decorated beautifully with roses, peonies, ferns and many other variety of flowers. The pulpit seats were one solid bank of flowers. The speaker of the evening delivered an interesting sermon.

Our beloved Brethren Stone and Ebeling have departed for their respective missions. There have been quite a few visitors from all regions of the earth, even from far away Japan, to go through the temple. One man heard about the temple and could not be contented until he saw it.

We have a very interesting Religio. Young and old take a very active interest in it. Sr. Brewster and her family have arrived in Kirtland from her former home in Wheeling, West Virginia.

Yours in gospel bonds,
Mary A. Brewster.

PERU, Ind., July 2.

Dear Ensign:—I want to write a few lines to the saints. I am a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ. I was baptized by Bro. John Harris, August 18, 1912. There is no branch of the church here so I get very lonesome for those who believe thefulness of the restored gospel. I have two aunts here in Peru—my mother's sisters. It is hard for me when my aunts and cousins call me a Mormon; if they called us Mormons because we believe in the words of Mormon it would be a compliment but they refer to the church of Utah and there is no greater insult than to class us with them. I am trying to get them to read the tracts I have bought for that purpose.

I ask the prayers of the saints that I may be faithful and successful in bringing my friends and relatives to the knowledge of the truth. I want to ask a favor of some one of the saints. Will you let me know whether there is a branch of the L. D. S. in Ft. Worth, or Dallas, Texas? I will close with love to all sisters and brothers in the faith, especially those in the South Central Branch of Chicago and those at West Pullman. I remain your sister,

Thelma Gore.

THAYER, Mo., June 27.

Dear Ensign:—There are a few saints living here in town and the most of us are trying to let our light shine before the world, but our branch is out in the country about 4 miles where there are a few faithful saints. The saints are taking on more courage here of late, and we are having prayer-meeting at my home one night every week, and when there are six saints out there are six prayers and six testimonies, and when there are eight there are eight prayers and testimonies, you see we are trying to do our duty. The young in the work are very active and are building up the inward man.

Our conference will convene about August 22nd, with the Ava Branch. Now saints of the South Missouri District, let us make a sacrifice and try to meet at the appointed place that we may draw ourselves closer to God and his ways.

Yours in Christ,
G. A. Davis.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Mrs. Alice Martin, Waynesboro, Va.—I am trying to live a good life which will be a worthy example as much as possible, though as Paul said in his writings, "The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak," and "when I would do good evil is present with me." I have much opposition and persecution, and hope to have the prayers of the saints.

John Eulitt, Milroy, Ind.—It does my heart good to read the good sermons, articles, and letters from the brothers and sisters. Whenever I get any tracts I give them to someone to read, and though I am isolated I try to do something for the work. So many say if they only lived where there was a branch they could live so much better, but all can do something for Christ wherever they are.

Sr. Nora McClain, Winthrop, Ark.—This is the first time I have written to the Ensign. Bro. T. J. Riley baptized me last December and I love this work. I am only thirteen years old and I want to live this gospel. I hope Bro. Riley and Smith can come and hold a meeting for us in July or August.

Sr. Gerrie Madden, Hardy, Ark.—I feel that I could not miss the inspiring sermons and letters that come to our home every week. I know this latter day work is of God and I thank my heavenly Father that he has showed me the right way. I would be glad for an elder to come here and preach for us, and if we cannot get the church we can use our house for preaching. I thank God for the many good and precious blessings that he has bestowed upon us.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

GOD IS LOVE.

By Elder Myron H. Bond.

"And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us * * * God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."—1 John 4:6.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."—Heb. 11:6.

We, as human beings and mortals derive our chief joys and incentives to live, from our association with those we know or have reasons for believing that they love us and would do us good and prevent harm coming to us to the extent of their ability.

They rejoice with us when we are glad and mourn with us when misfortune, or trouble assails us. But were these loves strong enough, or unmixed with selfishness when self interests of an apparent, or real nature present themselves,—which so often they are not—their power of expression is so meager, or their helplessness so often made apparent for the reason that at any given point of our necessity, or extremity they are unable (no matter how willing) to prevent life's most fatal disasters, or to estop afflictions that make the life itself, often a burden instead of a blessing, or thing to be desired.

It ought to be remembered also, that even the gifts with which so often our friends embellish or delight our lives are not first handed, but of a secondary nature and only in a partial sense did they originate in our human associations. God is our Creator and back to him must all questions revert for a final, or perfect solution. "What is man that thou art mindful of him and the son of man that thou visitest him," says the Psalmist, "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels. Thou hast crowned him with glory and honor." Psalms 8:4-6. "I will speak of the glorious honor of thy majesty, and of thy wondrous works." Psalms 145:5.

Of all the works of God as Creator the most wonderful accomplishment was man, in his design, or plan, or purpose. Nothing can be conceived of as greater than God himself, and that which was created in his own image and likeness must of necessity be a reflection of his best thought and his most powerful accomplishment, so far as relates to the end designed to be accomplished.

All creatures were to be subordinated into him. He was to be "crowned with glory and honor,"—to have "dominion over" the works of God, "all things" were to be "put under his feet." Ps. 8:6.

The purpose of the "fall"—and we use the word "purpose," designedly, and as stated in latter time revelation, was—"that man might be." "Men are that they might have joy." What is the history of man as we have it up to date? Has the promise been fulfilled? Is man the creature of "joy"? Yes; certainly he has a capacity and a nature for joy. And has God given the means or opportunity for joy or enjoyment? Has he created him a creature of manifold sense by which he becomes this wondrous thing, or complication of forces, and enlivened soul, answering to the touch of a thousand delights as an inhabitant of a sphere where the "joy of living," a soul bathing and living in a sea of delights that make the thought or contemplation of cessation or obliteration a horror and a thing to shrink from—evade, repel?

Inanimate things are incapable of joy as we are now speaking of it. I know the Psalmist says "let all the fields clap their hands and let the hills shout for joy," but the possibility of a measure of conscious or sense life for them, we are not now to discuss.

The animal may and does feel the sense of comfort when the sense of hunger is supplied or cold relieved, but in man we have the aggregation and summit of possibilities of joy. For the sense of sight or vision with which God has endowed him, nature has provided a wonderful panorama of continuous, yet changing, new and varied delights.

A thousand different ministers await to please, in field, and flower; in woodland and in placid lake, glorified with setting sun, or glittering with beautiful silver sheen in the moonlight; birds of glorious plumage, with enchanting song, the form and faces and voices of loved ones; for the organ of smell, and of taste; quick answer has the Creator given us for these needs, or soul embellishments when we came to look, to listen, and to adore.

When we allow ourselves to be submerged in contemplation of man and his privileges and possibilities of enjoyment, we are impelled to say with the Psalmist; "the Lord is good to all and his tender mercies are over all his works." And yet for all of this, or these, man in the aggregate, is largely an uncomfortable being, and his history is in a large measure a recital of grief, sorrow, wretchedness, or despair. Some, many there are to whom the "joy of living" is a "forgotten memory," and Solomon with all his manifold gifts said, "that all was vanity and vexation of spirit" and that "the day of one's death is better than the day of one's birth," and we are not troubled to find thousands in agreement with him. And to the agnostic, God's provision for man's happiness seems abortive and so many times very much of a failure. Plato wanted to believe and so reasoned that "this world was the work of reason and creation was the copy of an idea." Pope wrote, "hope lingers in the human breast, man never is but always to be blessed, but hope deferred too long maketh the heart faint," and breeds fear and skepticism.

David the Psalmist says, Psalms 94:9 "He that planted the ear shall he not hear? he that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know? and in Isaiah 29:16 "for shall the work say of him that made it. He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?"

What shall be our answer to the complainers? How shall we reconcile God's permission for all of the earth's wretchedness; its failure to attain to permanent and a satisfactory estate? Why these terrible offsets to the "joy of living?" When will hatred and wars cease? sickness be banished, life, comfortable and happy life, be prolonged at the creature's will?

Pestilence, famine, earthquakes, known no more? Life; mystery of mysteries, as we commonly know it; its solution is where? Does it lie alone with God?

"If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery would find a key."

"Have faith in God" said Jesus.

"For we walk by faith and not by sight."—Paul.

You cannot control the tides of the ocean, no more can you control the tides that govern the general great order of human events as they chronicle themselves in history; but as products or parts of the great first mind and cause, the agency of man is forced to contemplate the necessity of what we may call the primeval, or primary evil which we may and must denominate by the name of contrast.

If "the glory of God is intelligence," his ultimate design can never find accomplishment unless the processes by which "intelligence" is acquired or discovered, are acknowledged, and applied. If that which history and experience have demonstrated and classified as "good" has become the moral and safe guide as a text-book for the nations to follow, who or what was the primeval teacher or instructor? Will you dare name him lest you upset "theology" or current explanations as to the character, design, or workings of God? If optimistic view and hope for the afflicted race, because of the present status of human affairs is desirable, or a necessity, if for any reasons we may have concluded that there is a God, who not only does, but has control of the destinies of the creature made in His image and likeness and as the Psalmist says, has "formed him for His glory," it follows, that a great measure of "intelligence" is not only desirable, but is necessary in order to form a basis for permanent and defensible faith in God.

It therefore follows that only as our "faith" is grounded in intelligent conception of God's justice, mercy and love, will we become satisfied amid present trials that God is with us and that our hope of the future is, to use an expression, "all right," instead of, as agnosticism would proclaim largely, if not mostly, "all wrong."

Let us educate ourselves to believe in a reasonable assumption that with God, as yet, the "returns are not all in," and that as past and present history proves man to have been unable to "walk by sight" or within sight, by use of his natural powers, of a land of promise for which all are yearning; so must the wise philosopher accept all reasonable assurances through a process of a practical faith that may, can, or will wait for the final disclosure and culmination of the plan of the great architect of the universe, the Father and responsible author of the race of man.

As a convert to the best system he has ever known for a remedy for our human fears or dissatisfactions, we are committed to the belief and proclamation of the gospel of him whom God sent into the world with his word and counsel upon all these soul interesting and absorbing questions, and that this "Word was made flesh" and dwelt among men, who yet largely rejected him and his words, the words that were Spirit and life. However, to those who did receive him, He was willing to disclose himself only upon his own terms, and they were enabled by being borne upon the wings of a practical and glorious faith, wafted out and upward into a region of perspective and prospective, upon which the natural-eyed vision of men have never, and never will be permitted to look.

With inexpressible gratitude in my heart to God who has in his infinite mercy and compassion disclosed himself to me through the work of angel messengers to our earth with the original and only plan by which God is willing to reveal and vindicate through the gospel "from faith to faith," the righteousness of his decrees; am I assured of the truth of David's statement that the Lord we are called to worship "is righteous in all his ways and holy in all his works."

In closing this paper, I am suddenly impressed, and for reasons which do not clearly appear, to give the Ensign readers a copy of a poem which has more than once stirred my emotional nature; given to, and for me by Brother Joseph Luff at Plano, Ill., April 12, 1881, and recorded in our autograph album. This poem came to me, I may say, as a result of a confidential interview in which my inherent skepticism was asserting itself in a degree; and this beautiful verse has, more than once, in the long years following, given comfort and ointment refreshing to a troubled soul.

The manger, cross, and sepulchre
Suggest a wondrous history,
Of humble birth and tragic death—
A deep, unfathomed mystery.

"God manifest" declares this truth,
(As part of his sweet story)—
That righteous toil and sacrifice
Will ultimate in glory.

Thou cheered, fear not, tho' tempests rage
On life's uneven ocean,
And 'gainst thy bark the billows dash,
In fierce and wild commotion.

The power to still its threatening voice
Is still in Jesus vested,
And toward mankind its boundless love
Was by his blood attested.

Perish the hand, and powerless be
The arm that shall endeavor
Thy peace to mar, or in thy God
Thy confidence to sever.

Onward, upward, heavenward, still,
May thy course be tending,
Till 'mid raptures—full—complete—
You share the bliss unending.

OUR MISSION TO THE LAMANITES.

BY ELDER RICHARD BULLARD.

While meditating upon the peculiar conditions confronting us as a people this morning I took up the Book of Mormon which was at hand and opened it at the 10th chapter of the Book of Nephi and read it through, then turned back to the 9th chapter and carefully read the whole of it and was blessed, with light while thus reading, and noted what Jesus Christ was impressing upon the minds of the Nephites at that time. You may notice my language, "impressing," for they were certainly impressed, for he commended them for the remarkable and implicit faith they exercised toward him and his teaching.

Christ had been with them the day before this memorable occasion and had taught them concerning the beautiful truths of the gospel which included the attitude they should assume toward each other, as he had taught those of his "sheep" in Jerusalem, and they had fed upon the bread of life and were ready to hear more of what he had to say.

Chapter 9, verse 1: "And now it came to pass that when Jesus had ascended into heaven the multitude did disperse, and every man did take his wife and children and did return to his own home. And it was noised abroad among the people immediately before it was yet dark that the multitude had seen Jesus and that he had ministered unto them, and that he would show himself on the morrow unto the multitude. Yea and even all the night it was noised abroad concerning Jesus; and inasmuch did they send forth unto the people that there were many, yea, an exceeding great number did labor exceedingly all night, that they might be on the morrow in the place where Jesus should shew himself unto the multitude."

Here was the result of the impression left upon the hearts of these Nephites through hearing the word of God through his Son Jesus Christ. So Jesus again descended among them and viewing the multitude he gave orders through the twelve he had selected that the multitude should be arranged in twelve bodies so that each of the disciples could have his portion to minister to.

Then followed the beautiful ordinance of baptism, the twelve setting the example, till all had entered the door of the sheepfold as taught by their Shepherd.

Then followed the display of the power of God through the Holy Ghost and the wonderful prayer of Jesus Christ and the miracles he wrought among them inasmuch that he confessed to them he could not thus display his power to those at Jerusalem because they did not exercise the faith so much in evidence among those Nephites.

He prepares the sacrament and furnishes bread and wine; for none had been provided, and leaves the sacred ordinance to be perpetuated among them. He then takes up the important prophecy given through Isaiah relative to the gathering together of the scattered tribes of Israel, and places before them a sign in which they might know when the remnant of their seed should be and had in remembrance before the Lord.

When this power now displayed among them and a return to the children of men of the everlasting gospel, then will the Lord reveal himself in power to the confounding of the enemies of his truth, and the establishing of the gospel to the remnant of their seed and to the house of Israel. From among the Gentiles shall this go forth to your seed—for the seed of Jacob shall mingle with the Gentiles—but through them will I perform my wonderful, my marvelous work, "and they shall be among the Gentiles, ye, in the midst of them, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep, who if he goeth through both treadeth down and teareth in pieces and none can deliver. Their hand shall be lifted up upon their adversaries and all their enemies shall be cut off," etc. And through the marvelous work there shall be an end to witchcraft and soothsayers, [mediums, fortune tellers, palmist, etc.], priestcraft, lyings, deceivings, strifes, whoredoms, [polygamy, white slavery, etc.], and then follows the gathering together of the people of God; separation from the wicked, and then the great work will be put into operation as outlined in chapter ten.

Part of this marvelous work is to be the conversion of the Lamanites to the gospel. Verse 1: "And if they will repent and hearken unto my words and harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them, and they shall come in unto the covenant and be numbered among the seed of Jacob, unto whom I have given this land for their inheritance, and they [the Lamanites] shall assist my people, the remnant of Jacob; and also as many of the house of Israel as shall come, that they may build a city which shall be called the New Jerusalem. And then shall they assist my people that they may be gathered in, who are scattered upon all the face of the land in unto the New Jerusalem."

The prophecy given through Jesus Christ must be fulfilled, and we have now before us the evidences that the work spoken of in the Book of Mormon is in progress. The Lamanites are hearing the message given to their fathers, some are hearkening thereto, and the outlook is hopeful and promising. The very best qualified men the church can produce should be sent to this people—such as are truly posted relative to the history of this people, and men who have patience and tact and sufficient humility to be willing to go among them, so that they can reach their hearts as well as their ears; men who have business qualifications to help them defend themselves against the dishonest grafters who will rob them of their possessions as soon as the United States government withdraws the hand of restraint and protection from them; for I understand in a year or two their lands will be free so that they can sell or barter away that which the government has granted to them.

Many of them are yet children in experience as to the ways of the world and need fathers (honest men) to protect them against the graft and greed of the wicked and unscrupulous age. They need some good men to go among them and help them co-operate and carry on their business affairs as brothers and not after the prevailing methods of cut-throat competition which is the curse of the age. Teach them to do business as brothers and not as enemies to each other. Many of them have teachable dispositions, and as God works with his servants sent among them, and the light of this blessed gospel truth enters their souls, they will naturally turn to these men to help them in all ways possible. Hence the need of wise, practical men of good discernment and spiritual power.

Our mission to them is an all-important one, it is the burning question of the hour. Let us arise as a church and demonstrate to this remnant of the seed of Laman that we are the custodians of the oracles of their forefathers, and to us has been committed a mission to them full of the promises of the eternal Father, without which much of the significance of the latter day movement is made void. The day is not far distant when they will fly as doves to our windows for protection and helpfulness. Are we making the necessary preparations for their reception?

They are to help build up our Zion and the strong traits of character and disposition, so much in evidence among this people, can be turned to splendid account if wisely taught and instructed by men adapted to this work. May God give special direction to those who have the appointing of men to this important mission, returning those who have wrought well among them and have acquired valuable information as to their habits, traditions, needs, etc., and reinforcing their number with others who will work with them, who will build up and not tear down.

If they need food let us feed them, if destitute and naked let us clothe them—as far as lieth in our power. If they need educating send educators to them—for we have them. Let the Spirit of Christ who went among their forefathers be manifest by his church toward them. This will tell and have a wonderful influence with them. The treatment they have received from the Gentiles has made them wary and on the alert. Let us demonstrate to them that we are their friends, and win their abiding confidence, and the fruitage of this will be as it was when the Savior went among them demonstrating his love for them in acts of kindness. Now is the time, let us avail ourselves of the golden opportunity. Let the good work of Brethren Case, Yates and Christensen be sustained.

AN AMERICAN MYSTERY.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

After the Panama canal is opened we may begin to learn the true history of Ancient America.

Many readers may be unaware that this new world, as we call it, contains one of the oldest of all historical mysteries, and in fact the very oldest if as some maintain, it forms a direct connection with the story of the lost continent of Atlantis.

Buried in the tropical jungles of Central America there are the ruins of the once splendid cities, whose remains of a gigantic architecture are covered with hieroglyphics more puzzling than those of ancient Egypt, for no man has yet succeeded in discovering a complete key to their meaning. They guard their secret more jealously than the Sphinx.

Their origin is ascribed to a practically vanished race called the Mayas, related to the Aztecs of Montezuma's empire, but far excelling the ancient Mexicans in everything except warlike power. The ruins of their temples at Palenque, Copan, Peten and elsewhere excite the wonder of the traveller and contain some of the most beautiful and elaborate carving that can elsewhere be found.

A POSTAL SYSTEM.

They had not only an exquisite picture language, but also a written language, of which undecipherable manuscripts still exist. They built about forty towns, connected by stone-paved roads. They had a postal system, conducted by means of swift-footed carriers who ran from town to town over the paved roadways. Sometimes they were at war with one another, and their armies marched to battle on the same roads.

They were skillful agriculturists, and cultivated broad fields, which are now overgrown with mossy trees and tangled vines and shrubs: They raised cotton and wove it into garments. They made beautiful ornaments of gold and semi-precious stones, and were more skillful even more than the Aztecs in feather work. The designs carved in their buildings and ornamental or symbolic structures are of great beauty and astonishing perfection in detail. They covered the walls or rooms with brilliant paintings on stucco.

Strange to say, the people believed to be descended from these Mayas are unable to throw any light upon the history of their supposed ancestors. All their civilization has vanished; and with it, apparently, all memory of the ancient splendors of the race.

Some of the figures carved by the Mayas bear such striking resemblance to similar things found in the ancient ruins of the Old World that the suggestion has been made that a connection formerly existed across the Atlantic ocean, and this is the origin of the theory that the ancestors of the Mayas dwelt on the fabled continent of Atlantis, which Plato heard had been sunk in the western ocean ages before his time.

One of the strangest facts about the ancient land of the Mayas has recently been called to attention by Dr. Ellsworth Huntington. It is this: At present the whole district possesses a climate so warm, moist and debilitating that it is almost the worst place on the globe for human habitation. The ruins of the ancient cities, instead of lying amid deserts, and under a burning sun, as happens with most of the abandoned capitals of the East, are so overgrown with tangled vegetation and enveloped with fever-stricken swamps that some of them are nearly unapproachable.

CLIMATIC CHANGE.

The conclusion is that within the past two thousand years a vast change of climate has occurred in that part of America, and that in the days of Mayan civilization the earth's climatic zones were shifted in such a manner that the land occupied by this remarkable people enjoyed very different atmospheric conditions from those that prevail there now. Peten, one of the most important cities, which has not yet been well explored on account of the difficulties of approach, lies in the midst of a region which is, at present, very sparsely peopled, and where it would be impossible to cultivate the land as it was cultivated in the days of the Mayas.

Only by such a supposition, it is thought, can a rational explanation be found for the fact that the highest native civilization that this continent had developed before the white man came was centered about a location which is now a deadened and almost uninhabitable wilderness.

When the Panama canal has become a great highway and the attention of the world has been turned upon its surroundings, fresh light is likely to be thrown upon this fascinating mystery. Then the Mayan hieroglyphic may be read in full, and a hidden chapter of American history thrown open. —Springfield Daily Leader.

EDISON'S KINETOPHONE.

Thomas A. Edison is indeed a wizard. In an interview with the New York representative of the Denver News, Mr. Edison said he believes the end of the present legitimate stage is at hand as a result of his newest invention, a talking motion picture machine, called the Kinetophone, which proved successful in a demonstration a few days ago. The News interview follows: The inventor explained why he thinks the present $2 show must give way to the cheaper form of amusement, which, he declared, will give almost as much as the other for one-twentieth of the price. There will be no more barnstormers, either, because no one will be willing to pay for second-class acting when the foremost stars are performing for the "talkies" and can be seen and heard for a dime. "Is the machine perfected?" Edison was asked. "Nothing is perfect," replied Mr. Edison, "but it works. It will be put into operation in Brooklyn inside of thirty days." "What does your new invention do?" "It delivers at the exact instant of occurrence on the film any sound made at the moment such action took place. Every word uttered by the actors is recorded and delivered in time with the action; the creaking of a gate, a whistle, the noise of hoofbeats, even the click of cocking a revolver, comes apparently from the scene and in unison with the motion." "How is it done?" "The phonograph, which is placed behind the scene, is wired to the picture machine, which may be a hundred yards away. The speed of the talking parts acts as a brake on the film, so that neither can get ahead of the other. There are special records which run as long as the film lasts. Other records can be made to come into place successfully and the performance may be carried out through a whole play. Whole operas will be rendered and the films can even be colored by hand if the display of color is needed. Small towns whose yearly taxes would not pay for three performances of the Metropolitan Opera company, can see and hear the greatest star in the world for 10 cents and will pay because of the volume of business. We want democracy in our amusements. It is safe to say that only one out of every fifty persons in the United States has any right to spend the price asked for a theater ticket." "How long did it take to work out the plan for talking motion pictures?" was asked. "Thirty-seven years," replied Edison, slowly. "It is all that time since I made a motion picture show inside a box by dropping the succession of drawings rapidly and attaching a record to two other tubes." "And was that successful?" "Not the kind of success I wanted. What I want must affect the whole people. Actors will have to leave the legitimate stage to work for the movies in order to get any money. This is all the better for them. They can live in one place all the year round and barnstorming will cease automatically when no one wants to pay several times the amount of the movies' show for some inferior production of a stale play." "Will there be a great fortune in it?" "Money?" asked Edison. "Why, all the money I make on an invention goes into furthering my experiments. I do not seek money. Besides, there will be any number of others begin along the line, and I have found that an inventor is always sacrificed for the public good, which is satisfactory so long as the great masses are benefited. Often the courts do not uphold me, but somehow, I get the credit whatever that is good for," he added with a laugh. "Will it not be hard on the actors?" was suggested. "On the contrary," replied Edison, earnestly, "they are going to be benefited. They will be able to lead a normal home life. I can use nothing in the future but big studios centralized, perhaps in New York, employing all the actors all the year round and at a better figure than they now get."

AN ILLUSTRATION OF THE ATONEMENT.

Professor Olcott, whose name is familiar in this country, was a teacher of boys, and had the boys in his school make rules for the conduct of the school and attach the penalties for violation of the rules, so that when a boy was punished, he was brought before the school and the rule was read and the penalty inflicted by the boys themselves.

One little fellow had been guilty of two violations of the rules of the school, and the rule was that the second offence of that kind should be punished by a public flogging, which was rarely resorted to in Professor Olcott's school. So the young lad was called up, and the rule was read to him, and the penalty which the boys themselves affixed to the rule. "Now," said he, "my dear little fellow, it becomes necessary for me to chastise you before the boys for the violation of this rule; but my heart goes out to you, and I cannot really bear to inflict this punishment upon you. I am going to have you punish me instead." To the astonishment of the boys, and especially of the offender, he took the rod and put it into the hands of the culprit, and said: "Now lay that rod upon my back." Well, the boy, of course, touched him very lightly. "No," he said, "that won't do. You must punish me just as hard as you think you ought to be punished." And he persisted until that boy laid a sufficient number of stripes upon him, and with sufficient force to vindicate the law of the school and punish the offence. Meanwhile, the boy was in a paroxysm of grief, crying, sobbing, and almost fainting, under the thought that he was punishing an innocent teacher for his offence. Professor Olcott said that from that time to the end of his school life that boy was never known to violate another rule of the school. I think that is the most effective illustration I have ever heard of Christ taking upon himself our penalties and submitting his back to the scourge, that by His stripes we might be healed; and that nothing so melts the soul of the sinner and gives him such a conception of his own sin and of the grace of God, as when he comes to realize the fact that Jesus Christ "bore his sins in His own body on the tree."—Dr. Pierson, in the Presbyterian.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF TEMPTATION.

GEORGE H. MORRISON.

We may escape bereavement, violent pain, bodily accident, but no man ever yet escaped temptation. How subtle it is, how patient, how obsequious! How it bides its time to suit our mood and temper! We thought we had said farewell to it at five-and-twenty; but at forty, with a changed face, it is still whispering. It reaches us in the dearest relationships of home; it follows us through the crowded streets into the office; it goes with us into the silence and glory of God's world; and where the peace of heaven seems to be brooding, it is there—until at last, deeper than all divisions, we come to apprehend our shadowed brotherhood, for we are all tempted men and women.

What, then, is the meaning of that fact? Are we merely the sport of powers that seek to ruin us? If that were so, I should cease to believe in the omnipotence and care of God Almighty. But I think of temptation as a noble penalty; as the price I am bound to pay for my free will; as the inevitable struggle of a being who is great, just because he has been gifted with the power to choose; and though the struggle be not less keen when I think that, and though never a week may pass without some failure, still to be tempted now is not to be degraded; it is part of the cross which is my crown. Never say when you are tempted: "This is degradation." Say that when you fall, not when you are tempted. Never say when you are tempted, "This is bestial!" I do not think that beasts are ever tempted. Say rather; "God help me, this is my opportunity; I suffer this strain just because I am free." So slowly, with every sin forgiven in the blood, and every effort seconded by heaven, may a man draw nearer to true strength of character.—Sel.

THESE OLD MEN MADE GOOD.

John Wesley, the preacher, lived to be 88 years old. Arnauld, theologian and sage, translated Josephus in his 80th year. Dryden, in his 68th year, commenced the translation of the Iliad. Dr. Cary, the founder of missions, acquired many of the dialects of India after he was quite advanced in life. Michael Angelo was still painting his giant canvases at eighty-nine years of age; Titian, at ninety, painted with the vigor of youth, and kept on painting until he was ninety-nine. Franklin did not commence his philosophical pursuits until he was fifty. Newton, at eighty-three, worked as hard as he did in middle life. Verily, it would seem that there is now no age at which a man—or woman—may retire! An old lady was running over the catalogue of her ailments to her physician, and he replied, "What would you have, madam? I cannot make you young again." "I know that, doctor," she replied, "what I want you to do is to help me grow old a little longer."—The Christian Herald.

CURTIS-ELLMORE DEBATE.

LUCERNE, KANSAS, JUNE 9TH-20TH.

The Reorganized Church was up for expiation the first six nights and Bro. Curtis set up our church in his first speech and told Elder Ellmore "there it is, now go after it." Elder Ellmore had a hard task. He would take one position until Bro. Curtis would show by the Bible he was wrong, then he would take another. He said the King James translation of the Bible was out of date now, it had been all right in its day, but was now out of date, that the Revised version (or American) was for us today, and said the day was coming when it would be out of date too. (What next?)

Mr. Ellmore said, "I never preached an inspired sermon in my life, we don't claim inspiration." He said he prayed the Lord not to give him any revelation. Bro. Curtis told him he need not worry as the Lord wouldn't give him any revelation if he didn't want it, that he would have to have a change of heart first, for such as that was for the body of Christ.

Elder Ellmore said any one had a right to preach and baptize, he said the most vile rogue could preach and baptize and his work would be accepted of the Lord, but Bro. Curtis showed that a man must be called of God as was Aaron and have authority from God before his service was accepted of the Lord.

Elder Ellmore said he could prove that Joseph Smith was a false prophet. Bro. Curtis told him to bring on his proof, that was what he was there for; but he utterly failed.

Elder Ellmore said to Bro. Curtis: "If you can perform a miracle, just strike me blind." Bro. Curtis said "You are as blind now as a bat, what I want to do is to get the scales off of your eyes so that you can see." Elder Ellmore said, "Perform a miracle and I will believe." Bro. Curtis told him: "If you want a square meal come to the inside and don't stand at the back door and ask for a handout, as miracles are, for those who believe."

He said there were no more prophets as they were just to get the work established, so their work was done. Bro. Curtis read him Revelation 11 which speaks of two prophets that were to come after that time, and this book wasn't written until 95 A. D. Mr. Ellmore said "I believe it, there will be prophets before the coming of Christ; I believe it, but none now—nothing doing."

When Mr. Ellmore would get in a tight place and could not answer Bro. Curtis at all, he would say: "I could give you Scripture against this man's position but I haven't time now. Oh well! things will clear up as we go along." Elder Ellmore tried to affirm that there was no apostasy, but Bro. Curtis showed him he was against the Bible, also his own books, as they taught an apostasy.

At different times he said he believed in the Holy Spirit, and as many times he denied it and said, "I don't believe in it." He said the gifts of the gospel were just to get the work established, they were done away now, no more use for them. He said, "If I had lived in the time of the apostles I would have said, stand over Peter and I will stand with you and make thirteen." Bro. Curtis said, "If you had they would not have received you if you don't believe as they did."

Mr. Ellmore said he could prove that Joseph Smith taught polygamy but "I hate to do it, yes," he said "I hate to do it, and won't unless some one requests it." Bro. Curtis said, "I request it. I demand the proof. Bring it out we wait it." He used some Utah evidence which had failed in the courts of the land, and tried to pass it off on the people here thinking they would not know any better. Bro. Curtis showed his evidence failed in the courts and that his witnesses contradicted themselves. Mr. Ellmore dropped it, and said, "Now I have redeemed my promise," and was glad to let it alone.

Mr. Ellmore said he wasn't responsible for Mr. Campbell and wouldn't defend him. Again he said Mr. Campbell was their great leader. Bro. Curtis has to set up Mr. Ellmore's church for him he was afraid to have it brought out into the light. Bro. Curtis showed its weakness.

The people were with us from the beginning. We have no members in this neighborhood. One of their hardest doses for them to take was their church discipline, but very few of their members know they have a discipline.

The Church of Christ wanted the debate and challenged us. The reason was I had held a meeting here last winter, preached forty-two sermons and aroused quite an interest as I had lived out here nearly two years and underwent a severe spell of sickness which brought me into the L. D. S. church. I preached at the Lucerne school house Sunday morning after the debate and at the Bow Creek school where the debate was held at night; had large crowds.

Bro. J. Arthur Davis of Pittsburg, Kansas, acted as moderator for Bro. Curtis and made many friends. Come again Bro. Davis.

I am holding a meeting at Studley this week, ten miles south of where the debate was held.

OPPORTUNITY.

"DO YOU?—MANY OF US CREATE OUR OWN LACK OF OPPORTUNITY."

Life consists of opportunities for us all. It is a blessing all of us have before us continuously—despite the hosts who mourn because there is no chance in life for them. And whose fault is it? By moping in discontent ourselves, we deny another, or others, the result of our best service which means opportunity to him; for we are here, that our good deeds and efforts—even though they fail of accomplishing all we desire for ourselves or another—may bring to us and those about us, the best of life.

The best of life! The happiness of a true home; and from it comes forth the impetus to strive in our small corner to learn more of God and his ways, and his will, and from this desire comes the answering guidance of his Spirit in loving, steady assurance. "The way is opened" before us; our trials are lightened because he has given us the promised strength.

Our eyes, "the windows of the soul" speak forth content; therefore they are quick to observe,—through his Spirit within, that opportunity is ever before us.

We cannot expect in this age of the world, when iniquity abounds, that we are to be carefree. The responsibility of the realization that the lives of others are made or marred by influence, to a great extent, is a heavy one; still let us rejoice; for responsibility always produces opportunity.

Again,—others of us know that directly, we cannot assist where we long to, or in any great way, or to even find satisfaction in our own unseen corner, unless we live our lives day by day, or even moment by moment, "doing the thing at hand"— always with the end in view, that in answer to our prayers, the Lord will lead the way according to his will.

Just here is where we make our opportunities. The Lord has not allowed our existence to be clouded by circumstances and environments under which we must fall, or cannot rise. Among our most successful men and women of the world many have come up through poverty, even through ignorance, made their opportunities by use of the free agency and will power with which God had endowed them. Those who do not refuse to put forth an effort when they do have a chance to perform a service and to try again, and so on, will find the best in life. We must be ready to plan and make the service, for this means opportunity developed.

Selfishness and opportunity will not jibe, for in this warfare our aims are to be for the benefit of mankind, and as soon as we lose sight of this fact, opportunities that lead us on to satisfaction in this world and eternal happiness in the next, take flight. We are left alone.

We who have the opportunity to "work up," do not realize how blessed we may be. A student of several universities and heir to millions—only twenty-six years of age—recently has been discovered, after an absence of three years, working as a division engineer in a camp of the Iron Mountain Railroad. He said he grew tired of the "study to help kill time," and that whenever he felt that his fortune would be of some good to him and that he had convinced himself that he has made good in this world, that he would return home, but said he, "Never again will I resume my former station in society. At present I would not exchange my humble position for any fortune in the world. I never knew what life was before."

This man, I am convinced is merely one from out the hordes of rich, who are universally dissatisfied. Their station in life brings blindness as to their duty in life; riches do not bring the kind of happiness that lasts; that kind that comes from giving the cup of cold water to the thirsty one.

Riches bring idleness, love of pleasure, i. e.—selfishness. They also present untold opportunities, but selfishness and opportunity are not akin! A skillful, industrious use of every moment of one's time affords a sure development of the best there is in us.

Let us not mourn because of our humble stations in life, for the meek and lowly are the heirs of salvation; and to us comes the joy of seeing life unfold and develop as we make use of our opportunity to live and let live.

To have to depend upon ourselves is no misfortune. Much as we think we might do were we rich to bring joy and peace to so many, might fail of fulfillment. Better be content to do ones best under existing circumstances.

A mother wrote me, after the loss of a brilliantly talented, grown daughter, by accidental death, "Under the circumstances, how can I be reconciled? however, I have found nothing better to do than 'the thing at hand.'" And there is nothing better for any of us to do, at any time, under any circumstances, than "the thing at hand."

It means our salvation; it means the Golden Rule exemplified in our lives; it means that we honor the Lord for the trust he has imposed in us, making it possible for us to rise to "heights above," by the opportunities afforded us through a daily, hourly service; making us worthy recipients of increased opportunity as we struggle forth to meet the Maker "face to face."

MERELY A "JOB BY THE WAY SIDE."

We wish to remedy the blunder made by not giving date of our coming reunion at Joplin, Mo., which convenes August 8-17, 1913. Board $3.50 for 21 meals; children from 5 to 10 half price. Apply for tents to S. G. Conrow, Joplin, Mo., Sta. No. 1. Bro. Curtis will be with us during the early part and Bro. J. W. Rushton the latter part. Brn. Quick, Silvers, Edwards and Martin of the missionary force will also be with us. Patriarch Wm. Lewis will be here to answer calls in his line. So altogether we believe we are fully equipped for the best reunion of the district, all of which will be in harmony with another fact—the conference just closed at Wier City, Kansas, was the best, most harmonious one of any the writer has attended in the district—not the faintest cloud of darkness or opposition in any particular was discernable or felt. Bro. J. W. Rushton was with us and his address was pleasing and instructive, and acceptable indeed to the throngs who listened. Conference adjourned to meet at Vera, Okla., October 11, 1913.

Rushton and Aylor, the president of the Order of Evangelists, and Bro. White.

PASTORALS.

To the Missionaries of Mission No. 2, embracing Missouri, Kansas and part of Illinois:—

The following brethren laboring under appointment have not yet sent in their report for the four months ending June 30th and I will be pleased to have this matter attended to at once. B. J. Scott, F. C. Keck, H. V. Braun, J. F. Cunningham, J. A. Dowker, A. C. Martin, L. C. Moore, F. O. Pritchett, W. P. Pickering, W. E. Reynolds, W. R. Dexter. We again urge that all will please be prompt in reporting as each one delaying causes the whole report to be delayed and entails unnecessary correspondence.

J. W. Rushton.

Independence, Mo., July 9, 1913.

To the saints of Southern Indiana District:—

It is with pleasure that I return to my home district and the scenes of my early ministerial labors after eleven years in a foreign country. It has now been twenty years since I left my home in the vicinity of Birdseye and began my travels and efforts as a missionary. Altogether about three years of that time were spent in the Southern Indiana District. I am therefore, gratified with the prospect of spending at least one more year in your midst. My travels have been great and my labors widely scattered. I am sorry I have not been with you more. In returning, however, I rejoice in the fact that I am coming back in sound health and firm in the true faith.

I did not leave Australia until April 1911 which was the general conference closed. Since arriving in America I have spent several weeks visiting my relatives in Kansas. For these reasons I have been slow in reaching you. However, I expect to be at the Derby reunion, July 26th to August 3d, where I hope to meet some of you and hear from others. There, too, I shall have the opportunity of conversing with my fellow missionaries.

Sr. Barmore will attend me in my travels and will assist in music and otherwise. Since there will be two us and therefore increased expenses in traveling we deem it wise to concentrate our labors in a few places. In visiting many points money is often squandered and, besides, the work done is weakened by being scattered too much. However, I would be pleased to hear from the saints regarding the needs of the work in their several localities. If I am not able to use the information it will be turned over to Bro. H. E. Moler for his use or that of some of the other missionaries. While I would like, for the sake of "Auld Lang Syne," to visit every point in the district yet it will not be practicable for me to do so. Nor will a letter from any particular part involve me in a pledge to visit that region unless agreeable to Bro. Moler and in harmony with the best interests of the work in general.

Anyone who wishes to write will please address me at Derby, Indiana, care of David H. Gasperry.

In gospel bonds,

A. C. Barmore.

Hugoton, Kansas, July 3, 1913.

EDITORIAL

A NEW MANUSCRIPT OF THE GOSPELS.

The world is ever on the lookout for manuscript and relics relating to early Christianity, but when Charles L. Freer, an art collector of Detroit, Michigan, bought, six years ago, 187 sheets of vellum, goat and sheep skin, from an Arab, he little thought that he was purchasing one of the early manuscripts of the New Testament gospels. Upon later investigation their true character was discovered, and they are now published.

The coming to light of this manuscript renews discussion upon the genuineness of the last few verses in the book of Mark which have been considered by many divines to have been an unwarranted addition. The Christian Herald publishes these verses as found on this manuscript as translated by Professor Charles Fremont Sitterly, from which we quote. These verses follow after verse fourteen as found in the common version.

He showed himself in another form to two of them as they were walking into the country. And these also went and told the good news to the rest, but not even did they believe them. Later he showed himself to the eleven as they reclined at table, and he upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart because they had not believed those who had seen him alive.

And they excused themselves, saying that this age is one of lawlessness and unbelief under Satan. An age being under the wicked influence of spirits (or influence of the wicked spirit) it does not recognize the true power of God, on which account they already rendered conspicuous your righteousness, answered these to the Christ. And the Christ replied back to these same, that the mountain of the years has completed the authority and role of Satan, and it draws near that day of doom, for on behalf of sinners I was given up unto death so that they should turn back unto the truth and no longer be sinners. So that they should inherit the spiritual kingdom in the heavens and the unending glory of righteousness. But going into all the world proclaim the good news to all creation. He who believes and is baptized shall be saved, but he who disbelieves shall be condemned. Moreover signs shall accompany those who believe such as these . . . in my name.

The manuscript is said to date from the fourth or fifth century, so that what is found in the above was evidently held at that time to have been the teaching of Christ. The fact that the language is somewhat different in these verses to that found in some other manuscript still leaves room for doubt as to whether that which is called the "Great Commission," and the promise of the signs following the believers, as found in the last verses of Mark, were ever given by the Lord.

Later day revelation has settled that point so far as Latter Day Saints are concerned for the Doctrine and Covenants states:

Therefore, go ye into all the world. . . . And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you; for you are mine apostles, even God's high priests. . . . that every soul who believeth on your words, and is baptized by water for the remission of sins, shall receive the Holy Ghost; and these signs shall follow them that believe, etc.

The genuineness of the text and the truthfulness of the promise are attested by the experiences of thousands who have accepted the message.

INFLUENCE.

The extent to which the influence of companions effects some persons is seldom estimated or considered when passing judgment upon their statements and actions. Recently a young architect who was of quiet and rather timid disposition, and who had been taunted by his companions for lack of courage, was driven by their taunts to a challenge of their courage. He jumped from the Washington Bridge in New York City into the Harlem River two hundred feet below in order to show them that he was not lacking in courage. He yet lives. His rash act was directly due to the pressure of the influence of his supposed friends.

This kind of influence is exerted to a considerable extent in religious matters. People are often restrained in their thoughts and actions by the expressions of light scorn or ridicule of the thing offered for consideration, or by fear of the unfavorable opinion of friends or the withdrawal of their friendship.

Several months ago Dr. Iliff lecturing at one of the churches in Kansas City on the subject of "Mormonism," took occasion to denounce the practice of "obeying council" as followed by the members of the Utah Church, but further along warned his hearers against receiving the missionaries of that church into their homes, accepting of their literature, or listening to their doctrine. A number of brethren of the Reorganized Church attending the lecture offered tracts at the close, setting forth the differences between this church and the one in Utah, but in almost every instance the tracts were rejected, in many cases with scorn and contempt. A brother remarked that the people of Utah are not the only ones who "obey council."

This but shows the effect of influence. People often stay away from the public meetings of the church because of a fear of what their friends will say, and for the same reason they will not have in their homes literature of this church, or should they have it it is kept out of sight. When will men learn to free themselves from the restraints of others' opinions and take their own stand in accordance with the right as it may be learned by every legitimate effort?

THE HOME CLASS.

The Ensign goes to the homes of many saints who are denied the association of those of like faith, and the privileges of attending the services of the church because of living in localities where no organization exists. The Sunday school and Religio societies—auxiliaries to the church are conducting a department of work adapted to this class of members, and known as "The Home Department." By the help which this department offers the homes of these scattered members may become places of study and spiritual uplift, bringing blessings and light upon them, and putting these members in position to extend the knowledge of the gospel to others about them. By this means families have become interested and the little home class has in some cases developed into a full-fledged Sunday school and has been the means of bringing some into the church. Great opportunities are open to scattered members in this line both in regard to their own advancement, and the bringing of others to obedience in the gospel. Read the letter of the home class superintendent in this issue.

Bro. J. Charles May in writing from the Society Islands for printed copies of the Lamanite picture recently published in the ENSIGN, for use in the mission paper says: "The natives are greatly interested in the Indian brethren, and will greatly appreciate these pictures which will be put in our monthly mission paper."

ONE WAY TO FILL CHURCH PEWS.

One hundred wayfarers from the streets of Chicago have united with the well-known Immanuel Baptist Church of that city as a result of a unique and practical campaign that church has made for them.

On some cold mornings last winter as many as a thousand hungry men have entered this church to get warm and be fed. The pastor, Rev. Johnston Myers, arrives at the church at six a. m., often opening the doors to a hundred men even at this early hour. Hundreds of men owe their present jobs, both inside and outside of Chicago, to the free employment agency to which this pastor has devoted two whole days of each week for more than two years.—The Christian Herald.

NO. 10.

RESURRECTION AND JUDGMENT.

The life given of God to man was designed to be permanent, but through transgression man lost that wonderful gift. The wisdom and power of God are manifested however in that while the decree of death both spiritual and physical are carried out, the means for man's restoration to life were provided through the gospel. Jesus Christ as the central figure in that work of restoration and redemption, came to this world and passed through the sufferings of death both spiritual and physical that by going "beneath all things," he might "rise above all things," and by his victory over death he might extend life to all men.

Since spiritual death came through disobedience, spiritual life can come only through obedience to the principles which govern life, and this is what the gospel requires of all men—an acceptance of, and obedience to those principles which Jesus came to teach to the world. This brings eternal life. But the restoration to physical life through the resurrection is a gift of God to all men through Christ, it being the design of God that all men should have immortality in the flesh. The Book of Mormon says:

For behold, if the flesh should rise no more, our spirits become subject to that angel who fell from before the presence of the eternal God, and became the devil, to rise no more. And our spirits must have become like unto him, and we become devils, angels to a devil, and to be shut out from the presence of our God. . . . Wherefore death and hell must deliver up their dead, . . . and the grave must deliver up its captive bodies, and the bodies and the spirits of men will be restored, one to the other; and it is by the power of the resurrection of the Holy One of Israel.—2 Nephi 10:6, 20, 28-30.

The Scriptures teach that there will be an order in the resurrection, the obedient children of God being the first to come forth at the coming of Christ, prepared to meet him at his appearing, followed by those who have died without a knowledge of God in this world, otherwise known as the heathen. This will constitute the "first resurrection" and they will live upon the partially cleansed earth with Christ for one thousand years. After this period will come the second, or last resurrection in which all men who have not previously been raised, will come forth to meet the judgment and receive the reward of the works done in this life.

The day cometh that all shall rise from the dead and stand before God, and be judged according to their works.—Alma 8:9.

Even this mortal shall put on immortality, and this corruption shall put on incorruption, and shall be brought to stand before the bar of God, to be judged of him according to their works, whether they be good or whether they be evil.—Moses 1:8, 33.

The judgment will determine the standing of each person, as to their obedience to the law of Christ. If worthy they will remain upon the redeemed earth, but if unworthy will find other places adapted to their several conditions.

And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul; and the redemption of the soul is through him who quickeneth all things, in whose bosom it is decreed, that the poor and meek of the earth shall inherit it. Therefore it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness that it may be prepared for the celestial glory; for after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory even with the presence of God the Father; that bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it forever and ever. . . . And they who are not sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom.—Doctrine and Covenants 85:4, 5.

These quotations describe a definite future for man, and they but represent many others which might be given, a future full of real life, with associates who are real tangible beings, inhabiting a material world even as Christ said: "The meek shall inherit the earth." Being immortal and incorruptible there can be neither sickness nor death, thus doing away with pain and sorrow, anxiety and fear. There will be no loss, no failure of accomplishing one's purposes. Christ will be there. God will be there, and it will be "heaven."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE TEACHING.

The basic principles of Christian Science belief as noted in previous numbers relative to God being

"Principle" rather than a personality, and there being no personal devil, and that the material part of man, the body, is an encumbrance and that all of man that endures is Mind, make necessary a different position relative to the resurrection and judgment than that set forth in the above as the doctrine of the Reorganized Church.

According to Christian Science the higher life is attainable only by ignoring and discarding all sense of materiality, for Every object in the material universe will be destroyed, but the spiritual idea, whose substance is in Mind, lives on. p 163.

The belief that material bodies return to dust, hereafter to rise up as spiritual bodies, with material sensations and desires is incorrect. p 239.

No resurrection from the grave awaits Mind, for the grave has no power over Mind. p 187.

Braiology teaches that mortals are created to suffer and die. It further teaches that when man is dead, the immortal Principle, or Soul, is resurrected from death and mortality. Thus error theorizes that spirit is born of matter and returns to matter, and has a resurrection from the dust; whereas Science unfolds the eternal verity, that man and angels are spiritual reflections of God. pp 191, 192.

With the permanent elimination of the physical part of man, we look still further into Christian Science to discover its teaching as to what man is and what his future will be.

Man is the offspring of Spirit. p 273. (Spirit is God.—p 85).

Man is spiritual. He is not God, Spirit. If man were Spirit then men would be spirits, gods. p 259.

Jesus taught but one God, one Spirit. Spirit makes man in the image and likeness of Himself,—of Spirit, not of matter. p 259.

From these statements it appears that man is neither matter nor spirit, but spiritual. Being neither one it would seem that he could not have any personal identity, or existence separate from God. The statement that "Man therefore cannot lose his individuality" (p 232) seems to lose its meaning under the light of the further statement that he "has no separate mind from God," (p 471), and the following:

In Divine Science, God and the real man are inseparable, as Principle and its idea. p 472.

Separated from man, who expresses it, Spirit would be a nonentity. Man divorced, from Spirit (God) would be equally a nonentity; but there is, there can be, no such division, for man is coexistent with God. p 473.

God and man, Principle and idea, are inseparable, harmonious and eternal. p 232.

Just what the nature of man will be and his condition are not given in Science and Health further than the above. His identity is indefinite. No place is described as his future abode. He is now "spiritual and perfect" (p 471), hence there can be no further development. What he may lose in this world in laying down the material body will not be regained for the reason that it will not be needed. It seems that his condition will be similar to the Buddhist's Nirvana—absorption into the one great Spirit.

In regard to the judgment according to the position already set forth there would neither be necessity nor opportunity for such a judgment as Latter Day Saints look forward to, and it is but consistent that Science and Health should present no teaching relative to it except the following:

No final judgment awaits mortals; for the judgment day of Wisdom comes hourly and continually, even the judgment by which mortal man is divested of all material error. As for spiritual error, there is none. p 187.

We have previously seen that there are no personal angels or devils, so that the reported appearances of heavenly personages found in the Bible were nothing more than "God's thoughts passing to man," (p 572). These seem not to be accepted as furnishing any evidence of immortality, even the physical appearances of Jesus after his resurrection, but it is held that "Life, Love, and Truth are the only evidences of immortality." (p 247). It is readily seen that there is a great contrast between the two systems of faith. The reader may judge them as to their truthfulness.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Independence in common with the regions around is enjoying a period of cooler weather after a wave of extreme heat. The services on Sunday were good, giving a general uplift to the saints. Bro. A. Barnore, recently returned from Australia was expected to speak in the morning, but on account of unavoidable delay while upon the journey from Kansas, did not reach here in time for the service. Bro. Joseph Luff occupied the hour in his characteristic style. In the evening Bro. C. Ed. Miller, who is on his way to Australia as a missionary was the speaker, the sermon being highly spoken of.

Bro. William Newton, who has spent many years in England and other lands in the missionary work, started last week for another mission to that country. Bro. Newton is advancing in years, but his life is in the service of God. We wish him a safe journey and abundant success.

The editor left on Tuesday to attend a two weeks' summer session of the University of Missouri provided for ministers. Some of the subjects of research are Rural Sociology, Economics, Sunday School methods. Lectures will be given by men of national reputation, and visits will be made to the College of Agriculture. The course is non-denominational and will no doubt be of value to all who attend.

Bro. Charles F. Clark of London England, one of the leading performers with Ringling Brothers visited Independence on Sunday, appreciating the services which he does not often have the privilege of attending.

Bro. A. C. Barnore, lately from Australia, lectured at the Stone church Tuesday night, giving his experiences during his stay of a number of years in Australia. He told of the customs and habits of the natives of that far off land, some of which were somewhat ludicrous and amusing. The lecture was accompanied with stereopticon views and was highly entertaining. Thursday night Bro. Barnore will preach at the tent on South Liberty Street.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.; attendance 243, collection $5.34. Bro. A. K. Dilce, superintendent, is making a great effort to make the school a success, and it will not be his fault if he does not succeed.

At 11 a. m. Bro. F. C. Keck was the speaker, and from the beginning to the close of his talk all were eager listeners, the closest attention being given, and enough new thought was presented to inform all who were there for good. One thought was, "When you fast wash thy face and anoint thine head, that you may not appear unto men to fast," his argument being that it was just as much of a commandment to wash the face and anoint the head as it is to be baptized, while the object attained in baptism, is a forgiveness of sins, the other, that you may not appear unto men as fasting. If the object in the one case is forgiveness of sins, the other is that men may not know anything about it, claiming that the command of the Master is not heeded as it should be, and as a result the sick are not healed many times when they should be.

Afternoon prayermeeting was enjoyed by those present, the writer was one of the absentees, yet he was informed that a good time was had.

At 8 p. m. the hour was occupied by Bro. G. E. Harrington. His effort was to call the attention of the saints to the fact the spirits going abroad in the earth are always ready to assist the wary, if not on the alert, watchful as well as prayerful. The law was quoted showing that no person except an officer of the church has any right to speak and say, "Thus saith the Spirit unto you my people in all the world," for in such a case the one who tries it, is deceived; yet he did not deny any person the right to speak, and say "Thus saith the Spirit," etc., when they were addressing those present. His object was to warn the saints against allowing themselves to be deceived, and not only this, but to warn the speakers against permitting themselves to be led by a false spirit, for so much trouble has arisen on account of false spirits.

On Monday evening, 21st, the first business meeting of the South Side Sunday school was held in the basement of the church, with a good attendance, and business of importance was transacted. Bro. Dilce superintendent, presiding. W. S. L.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

The opening prayer of the Sunday school, July 6th, was offered by our faithful brother, Grandpa McFarland, and Bro. Dowker delivered a talk on the necessity of preparation.

Our sacrament meeting having been set apart for fasting and prayer in behalf of our long afflicted Sr. Billinsky, we fully believe was profitable to her. The prayers both vocal and silent were from sincere hearts, and Sr. Josie expressed herself as having received strength and encouragement therefrom. Bro. Elliott, Archibald, Dowker, and Burgess, presided. Remarks were made by our pastor, and he requested the entire congregation to kneel and engage in a moment of silent prayer, after which he led vocally and others followed and a veritable prayer service was enjoyed. Bro. Archibald was the evening speaker, reading from John 14th chapter and 1 Cor. 15th chapter.

Bro. Arthur Smith delivered an entertaining talk to the Sunday school, July 13th, his subject being "Are we what we seem to be or are we shamming?" Another feature of the Sunday school was a duet by two sweet little girls, cousins of Sr. Frank Mowry.

The morning sermon by Bro. Dowker was very much enjoyed.

Bro. Reeves was the evening speaker, but we did not have the privilege of hearing him. Bro. G. S. Trowbridge and E. C. Bell were the speakers July 20th, and Bro. H. C. Burgess gave a talk to the Sunday school. The attendance was small at the services owing to many of the saints having gone to Maryland heights where the tent has been pitched. Bro. Dowker and others are endeavoring to establish the work there.

We are promised a treat next Saturday and Sunday, July 26th and 27th. Bro. Alma Barnore will speak to us and we are anticipating a treat indeed.

E. M. Patterson.

2739 Greer Ave.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

On July 1st the priesthood was requested to meet at the residence of Bro. John L. Bear, 326 Ohio Ave., with their wives. The sixth Anniversary of the Branch was celebrated. A paper was read by Bro. Bear, showing the growth of the branch, which was organized with twenty-nine members and now has 150.

July 2 was election of officers in the branch, and the following officers were elected: President, John L. Bear; Presiding Priest, Fred Rapp; Secretary, Robert Beadnall; Deacon, Robert Beadnall; Teacher, Joseph Moore; Corro-pondent, C. R. Smith. They are all live wires and good workers.

G. R. Smith.

LAMONI, IOWA.

The sermons of Sunday, July 13th, were by Bro. Albert Carmichael and Amos Berve. The Sunday evening services in the grove by the church have been well attended and congregations increasing. The evening sermons at the homes for the aged were by Bro. C. I. Carpenter and John Spalding. At the Bloomington chapel H. C. Smith preached at eleven o'clock and at night; at Audover Bro. D. C. White, August Johnson and Edward Harp occupied the two services; Bro. Eli Hayer spoke at Evergreen and Bro. Joseph Roberts at Greenville.

At noon in Lamoni two who live near the Thompson school house were baptized. Bro. H. A. Stebbins officiating. In that neighborhood preaching has been had for a good while, and over two years ago an excellent and worthy man received convincing manifestation by the Holy Spirit as to the divine truth of the latter day work. Though certain influences have prevented his obedience so far, yet it is believed this will not continue and that truth will triumph to the happiness of all concerned, whose hearts are honest. Those baptized were Minnie J. and Mary E. Bohu, daughters of Mr. and Sr. D. C. Bohn. They were confirmed by Bro. Stebbins and R. J. Lambert at the afternoon sacrament meeting.

Mr. W. W. Johnson was electrocuted July 9th while working at the Herald Office extension. He touched a live wire and was instantly killed. His age was 48 years. His father was Bro. George J. Johnson who died near Lamoni in March, 1832. Funeral services in charge of Bro. John Smith, sermon by Bro. G. R. Wells.

Near Lamoni, on July 14th, occurred the death of a baby boy of Bro. and Sr. Edward Bootman after a life of two days and a few hours. It was their first loss, and a sad trial. Services at the residence by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. During his forced prostration with a broken ankle, Bro. J. R. Lambert suffers much with pain and weakness and the heat.

On Sunday, July 20th, the morning sermon was by Bro. D. C. White and the one in the evening in the church park by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. Bro. R. M. Elvin filled the 7 p. m. appointment at Saints' Home and Bro. F. M. Weld the one at Liberty Home. The speaking at Audover church was by Bro. Frank Kestner and J. D. Schofield. At Bloomington chapel Bro. W. P. Robinson spoke both morning and evening, and Bro. Amos Berve at Greenville at night.

Bro. F. A. Smith, J. A. Gunsolley and R. S. Salyards have been away from Lamoni for some weeks, doing ministry work at Fargo, N. D., and in Canada. The first two returned home July 15th, and Bro. Salyards is expected this week.

Bro. J. F. Garver was at Hiteinan, Iowa, a week ago yesterday in the interests of that branch.

The Lannoni Stake reunion begins here Friday, this week, to hold until August 3d.

At a mass meeting held here July 11th there was a large enthusiasm for the putting in of a sewer system along the principal streets.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy having duly arrived preached the morning sermon in Oakland and in the evening at the city. His sermons were highly commended. The morning sermon in the city was by Bishop Parkin who occupied in Oakland at night, for good to all.

Bro. W. N. Robinson and family arrived in Oakland on Sunday on their tour through California and other states in their auto. They attended the morning service in Oakland where Sr. Robinson enlivened the service by her "gift of song." They started on Tuesday for Portland, Seattle and Spokane.

Bro. G. J. Waller spent Sunday last with the San Jose Branch, speaking morning and evening. The attendance was good. Bro. Waller is ever on the alert for the advancement of the cause.

We spent Sunday at Windsor and Santa Rosa, speaking in both places to the faithful few. On Monday we went to Napa where we held a very spiritual meeting at the home of Bro. Lewis Graff on Monday night. We were kindly cared for by their hearty German hospitality. On Tuesday we came as far as Napa Junction, where we took dinner with Sr. Lea and son-in-law, Mr. Wells, a good hearted, liberal agnostic. They had their little Marjorie Lulah blessed white we were there. While there we had a pleasant ride over their ranch of 1258 acres with Mr. Wells, which we enjoyed very much.

Bro. J. D. Stead and S. M. Reiste are still at Stockton in tent work, with but fair attendance and some interested. The saints are being built up.

We are sorry to learn of the protracted illness of Bro. C. W. Earle at Sacramento, his home. We hope for his speedy recovery to health and activity in the mission work.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., FIRST BRANCH.

Our mid week prayer services are showing a marked improvement in attendance and interest of late, which is very encouraging to all.

Good attendance at Sunday school July 13th. Verna Cochran was elected secretary, to succeed R. L. Tilden, who, because of removal from city, resigned. The Sunday school has a full working corps of officers and teachers whose attendance record for past six months was read and made a fine showing.

Class No. 10, Miss Elma Dodson teacher, will give an ice cream social Tuesday evening, the 22nd, for benefit of piano fund.

The morning sermon on the 13th was by Bro. B. J. Scott, the subject was, "The canon of Scripture is not full." He also delivered the evening discourse on "Translations of Bible compared—King James, Revised and Inspired." Both abounded in excellent teaching.

At 4 p. m. the Woman's Auxiliary met in regular session. The president of this society is earnestly desirous of a better support in this work, and it seems that where there is so much being accomplished in other places in this work, more should be done here.

At five o'clock Bro. Coventry Archibald led three more into the waters of baptism—one a young man, a convert from the tent work at Elwood, and a young sister and brother from the city.

The Religio shows a vigorous existence, and we look forward to some splendid work in the next six months.

The little babe of Bro. and Sr. Curtis of the Wyatt Park Mission passed away on Friday evening and was laid to its sweet rest on Sunday. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Sunday, the 20th, morning sermon by Bro. Coventry Archibald. Said to be fine by those in attendance. Evening sermon by Bro. Frank Pierce. In the afternoon one more entered the fold through the door of baptism, which makes ten so far who have heard the Shepherd's call through the tent work.

A few of our people attended the semi-annual Sunday school and Religio convention at Cameron, Saturday and Sunday and report a highly satisfactory and instructive session. Sr. Etzenhouser gave instruction along lines of auxiliary work, by which we hope to profit.

CORRESPONDENCE

CLAYTON, New Mexico, July 10.

Dear Ensign:—Bro. W. A. Brooner and I came to this part on the 5th and are well cared for at the home of Bro. A. L. Ratcliff. This little city is a beautiful and thriving town of about 2000 inhabitants, located on the almost level plains of northeast Mexico. We are holding forth at a school house near by every other night; the people are very busy with their crops at this season of the year and we find it hard to get a hearing except on Sunday.

We go from here the last of this week to hold forth near the home of Bro. F. L. English lately from Joplin, Mo., who has arranged for us to hold a week's meeting. I find Bro. Brooner a very pleasant companion and congenial to all whom he meets by his way.

I am sorry to say that we cannot report anything very encouraging for the work in New Mexico so far this year. The people are all comparatively new settlers and are not very well prepared to keep the preachers nor attend meetings. The few saints however, though widely scattered, make us welcome and in most cases do all they can to help get the gospel before their neighbors. This is a beautiful country and while farming alone is not profitable, yet with stock which do well almost the year around on the grass, many of the new settlers are doing well.

If any of our people or friends to our church work see this we would be glad to hear from them, and visit them during the year when we can reach them without too much expense. Railroad fare is high in New Mexico, four to five cents per mile, and the preacher has a hard time to get over the country.

My home address is Castleberry, Quay Co., New Mexico.
Yours in gospel work,
T. J. Sheppard.

MAMMOTH MINE, Calif., July 7.

Editor Ensign:—Probably a letter in the ENSIGN from me telling a little experience I have had in the way of blessings and punishments may be a help or warning to many, and by being faithful will no doubt receive a blessing.

It is our duty to follow the admonition of the Spirit at all times if we expect to receive a blessing and not suffer loss. I had not been to meeting for a long time and I got so I just hungured to hear the truth preached again. So last January I was in Sacramento and soon found out where the church was located, and a missionary happened to be holding services all that week, so I felt rather lucky in being there, and the good brother must have known I was coming for it seemed to me that his sermons fitted my case exactly. When I went away I felt much better by being at the meetings.

In about two weeks after, one night I had a dream or vision wherein I went into a small room that was neatly fitted up with bed, chair and a few ornaments around on the wall. All of a sudden my life went out this body and entered a spiritual body that suddenly appeared in the room and looked to be the same size and with features the same as my natural body. But what a difference. The spiritual body which I occupied was glorious. I was thankful to the Lord that he still left me in charge of the old body which was lifeless and got stiff and rigid and like chalk. I stood the old body in one corner of the room, was going to keep it as a souvenir. I began to examine the head but when I touched it began to crumble and go back to mother earth again. Then I did not care for it any more. But my new body was glorious, and I was happy. Some of my relations entered the room through another door and I was showing them what a beautiful spiritual body I had, and was sorry they were still in their natural bodies and did not have a spiritual body like mine. Then I was awake and the vision ended for which I was sorry to find I was still in my natural body.

I thought perhaps it was a warning that soon the time of my departure would come so I felt as if I would like to get my business affairs settled and went to another mining camp to settle up some business. Had not been there only a few weeks working in a mine and some way felt impressed to leave and visit the church again, but put it off from time to time. I finally returned upon returning one night and asked the Lord if it was his will for me to go I might wake early in the morning. I was working night shift and did not get to bed until about 4 a. m., but was awakened again at 6 p. m., but instead of getting up thought I would work two or three days longer. And the following night met with an accident and had my arm thrown out of place at the shoulder while going down the shaft on the cage. So for the last three months have not been able to do very much hard work. That is the way I was punished for not being obedient. My arm is now so I can work again, and hereafter when I feel impressed to do anything which I know is of the Lord I will do it.

Yours in the truth,
A. L. Hartley.

NIANGA, Mo., June 22.

Dear Ensign:—We few saints are striving in our own weak way to do all we can to spread the gospel down here in Southern Missouri. Bro. DuBoise of Independence came to Nianga, June 3d, held two weeks' meeting at the home of Bro. and Sr. Bradley. The attendance was not so large as we expected, but most of those who did come were very much interested. Bro. DuBoise is so blessed by the power of the Holy Spirit that he can make the Scriptures so plain that both old and young cannot fail to see and understand that the saints teach the gospel of Christ. Of course there are some who cannot endure the truth, and we have a few of them here. The meetings closed Sunday the 15th. As a result two were baptized and many more are about ready to go into the waters of baptism, and if they do it will give joy and courage to our little band of saints here. We have been hoping and praying that the Lord would so bless and work with us that we may soon have saints enough here to organize a branch. Bro. McFadden came down and helped us out in the latter part and close of the meetings. We wish that these brethren could be with us more often.

May God bless the saints everywhere, and all those who are seeking after truth.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
Chas. W. Schofield.

ELWOOD, Donopban Co., Kans.

Dear Ensign:—I am glad that I have accepted this beautiful latter day work. You know I had been a member of the Christian Church for some twenty years but at the same time I always thought that their ministers should have preached the whole gospel of Christ and not pass over so many passages without ever even so much as mentioning them. I will now tell you what has made me a Latter Day Saint.

In the first place, about eight years ago my wife was taken with a kind of melancholy and could not do her work, she knew that she had work to do but did not know how to do it, and the doctors could not do her any good, so I called Bro. Taddicken and Archibald and they administered to her and she was well in three days from that time.

But that did not turn me towards the gospel in its fullest sense, until two or three weeks ago when my mother-in-law, Mrs. J. C. Culp, took down with Bright's disease and the doctors gave her up. Then I had Bro. Archibald and Taddicken to come and administer to her, and today she is a well woman and also a Latter Day Saint. And she is not the only one that has joined the church since her healing. Her son, Bro. Culp and wife, myself, W.O. Webb and wife, Bro. H. Bean and Bro. Everet Fattic. When we saw this wonderful power of healing after the doctors had given her up, why that was enough, for then we knew that if God in his goodness and mercy through the prayers of his people could heal a case of this kind, why then the Latter Day Saints must surely be the true church of Christ. And so we were all ready to accept it and went in a body and were baptized into the faith of the church and are now willing to live out of every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. All the saints pray for us that we will be able to win souls for God.

W. O. Webb.

OGDEN, Utah, July 15.

Editor Ensign:—On the 3d inst. accompanied by wife and children I went to Malad, Idaho, to celebrate Independence Day with home folks, my own mother, and brothers and sisters in the flesh. While there, had the pleasure of baptizing two promising young ladies, my youngest sister being one of them. Also had the pleasure of speaking a number of times to saints and friends.

While there was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of little Wm. Williams, the five year old son of Bro. Morgan and Sr. Alice Williams, who met death by falling from a load of hay and being run over by the loaded wagon.

The funeral was very largely attended, showing the esteem in which the family is held.

Dear Ensign:—All this beautiful morning I have been thinking about the dear gospel work, and it seems as though I should write a few lines to the good paper and let others know of a great blessing I received on the morning of the thirteenth of this month.

I had been suffering from some trouble in my limbs for six days and nights. I could not rest one minute and could scarcely lie down, and that morning it seemed that I would die. I bowed down in fervent prayer to God, then lay down again and fell asleep very quietly. I slept a few minutes and when I awoke the pain was gone and I never felt better in my life. It seemed as though everything that God had made thrilled me with joy and I could feel the Spirit within me. I shall never forget the great testimony, and I know God lives and will comfort his children in their trials in this life. I have felt like a new woman since then and I am trying to follow in the way that is pleasing in the sight of God.

I ask the prayers of all who are concerned in those who would live upright in the sight of the Lord.

Your sister in the faith of the saints,
Rosa Wadkins.

ATCHISON, Kans., July 16.

Dear Ensign:—May I be permitted a few lines in your valuable paper to carry a personal message to Latter Day Saints or any others interested, who could not be reached otherwise?

As general superintendent of the home department for the Sunday school I am anxious to put every isolated Latter Day Saint in our broad land in touch with the church. This can be done through the home department of the Sunday school. 5000 people are studying the Sunday school lessons through this medium. All members of the great family of God should be in touch with each other and our ambition is to ferret out an additional 5000 to rejoice in this great work with their brothers and sisters. If you are living apart from branch or Sunday school send me your name and address and permit me to tell you all about it: home department privileges, opportunities and comforts. If you live in an organized district and not acquainted with the district home department superintendent, write me stating the name of your district and I will promptly put that superintendent in touch with you. Try this, you lonely ones, or indifferent, and give us a chance to test the claims of this department of church work.

The following letter is but one of many in our possession. The name and address of this family was sent to us by a sister living hundreds of miles apart from them. Note the good accomplished.

"Dear Sister McNichols: I cannot imagine how you learned we lived away out here so far away from anyone of our faith except one family about fourteen miles from us. But God bless the home department, for it has been the means of reclaiming my entire family. I got so interested in the Quarterlies you sent that I invited my married sons and families to join us in study, one Sunday afternoon. The Holy Spirit rested on our efforts and my heart's desire has been granted unto me, inasmuch as everyone of them have become interested and want to continue to study.

Oh, how my heart rejoices after our long isolation to think somehow we have been found and that my children may be reclaimed. We are only humble, poor people, in this world's goods, and at times I have been so discouraged, because of many things, that I have cried unto my God to 'save me, though it be by death.' But now I rejoice that I am enjoying the riches or his blessings and peace has come to my soul.

We are going to subscribe for the church papers, as the ones you sent us gave such comfort that we feel that we must have them. Again I say, God bless the home department.

I am sending you the name and address of my sister. Will you please write to her, and I will too. I am certain she will gladly join the home department. Gratefully, your sister."

Ah, how many others may there be waiting for the light to break in upon their souls. Just a little effort on your part may accomplish everlasting good, to some discouraged heart. A dreaded disease preying upon the human family to-day is deadly loneliness. Even though in the midst of thousands, we long for the sympathy of those of the household of faith. Come, join our ranks.

We are looking for hundreds of responses to this appeal. We know it will cost us hours and hours of toiling through the hot summer days, but of what consequence is that compared to the results we are hoping and praying for. The great Leonardo says, "The Creator and Ruler of this life selleth us good things at the price of labor. It costs, not a little to be ordinarily well educated; it costs infinitely more to become an accomplished humanist; it costs in effort and in renunciations to be a specialist, but strange fatality, it also costs heavily to forego advantages and opportunities."

This is your opportunity and the opportunity for the home department. Let us work together for the general good.

Mrs. Florence McNichols.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Bert Carr, Trent, Oregon.—We are in a neighborhood that is opposed to our doctrine but wife and I talk it to every opportunity until there are some who are willing to read our paper. I think I can get the church after awhile for one of our elders to speak in. We think there is a chance to get the gospel preached and we are working and praying for the time when once more we can hear the gospel preached as it is written.

M. R. Koonce, Illinois, Mo.—We enjoy reading the ENSIGN very much, and would like to have some of the Latter Day Saint preachers come to Illinois. I think this is a good place. We do not belong to the church but would do all we could to get them a place in which to preach, and take care of them while here. My mother was a Latter Day Saint.

Mrs. S. R. Riblet, Tacoma, Wash.—Greetings to all the dear saints far and near wherever the silent preacher may find a resting place; there may thy word bring light and peace to all. I am strong in the faith believing Christ is my dear Redeemer and Helper in time of need, which is all the time. O how much we need divine help to guide us through this perilous journey in earth life! I am a stranger in this beautiful land of flowers, and can look out and see the marvelous works and the wonders of the divine hand.

Sr. Maggie McHalfey, Center, Ark.—We are still in the faith and doing all we can to tell the good story though it looks at times as if it did little good. I have heard it said that the constant dropping of water will wear a hole in a rock, so I feel to keep working and perhaps the little efforts of each day will accomplish something sometime.

Dorothy Smith, Emmetsburg, Iowa. Dear Editor:—If you remember I wrote you last winter with reference to the church and its work. I am now a saint having been baptized at the Galland's Grove conference by Elder Robert Fish and confirmed by Apostle Gillen. The conference was very good with some very fine sermons. There were two baptized, two ordained and two administered to. I enjoy the ENSIGN and look forward to its coming every week.

AN EXAMINATION OF THE MILLENIAL DAWN MOVEMENT.

BY EDGAR H. SMITH.

For the last few years the movement under the leadership of Chas. T. Russell, and known as the Millennial Dawn theory, has made quite a stir in the religious world and grown very fast, numerically. Does this movement represent the truth and is it recognized of God as his special work? We do not think so, and offer the following in evidence of its erroneousness as pertaining to fundamental principles.

It is an established rule of reason that error is not of God, nor sanctioned by him. Those who therefore claim to represent him, can and must be measured by this infallible rule, that those who are sent and commissioned by the Lord of heaven will teach nothing but the unvarnished truth, eschewing all that is false and untrue, and for this good reason, that loving the truth, they are entitled to, and shall receive the "Spirit of truth" that "will guide them into all truth." If we can show beyond a reasonable doubt that the movement under the leadership of Chas. T. Russell is teaching and promulgating one false cardinal doctrine pertaining to life and salvation, we shall have proven him out of harmony with the Bible and consequently unrecognized of Heaven. We can do more than this. We can prove that this institution is teaching several false doctrines. Yea, even more, we can show that the institution itself is in no case authorized of the Father above.

Its founder claims no direct or special revelation of God's will directing him to organize this church and constituting him earthly leader. He acts without credentials. No man can be an especial agent representing the throne above without credentials unquestionable as to their validity. No man that we have any record of in the Bible, since the dawn of time till John upon Patmos ever has, and there never will be, nor can there be without direct revelation from God, and Chas. T. Russell claims none. In fact, he repudiates present revelation, and therefore proclaims to the world that he assumes a position without a call from the great Creator.

But he made a great "discovery." We question this new discovery. But be that as it may, does this discovery give him the right to remold, to reorganize, to reconstruct? If it does then God has changed. He no longer acts like himself. It is written, "I am God. I change not." The ancient rule was, "no man taketh thine honor unto himself but he that is called of God as was Aaron," Heb. 5:4,5. "And how shall they preach except they be sent." Rom. 10:15. "As my father hath sent me, even so send I you." John 20:21. "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you." John 15:16. "But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk, and so ordain I in all churches." 1 Cor. 7:17.

These Scriptures indicate the way the unchangeable God acted anciently. Will he not so act today? If so, then the institution led by Chas. T. Russell is in no way authorized by the Father.

ITS ADVENT UNSCRIPTURAL.

Again, its advent is unscriptural. The advent of God's work in these last days must be harmonious with the way God inaugurated his work in every age hitherto, and also in line with prophecy.

First, the advent of the latter day work must be commenced by a prophet, because this is the way the unchangeable God has commenced every special dispensation. Adam, Noah, Moses and John the Baptist were all prophets and all opening up a special dispensation. In fact God hasso proclaimed his method for all time as is recorded in Amos 3:7. "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he shall reveal his secret unto his servants, the prophets."

Secondly, Angels must have a part in its establishment, as angels revealed the will of God to man in every age, and must do so in this age to be in accord with the divine order and to fulfill the specific prophecy recorded in revelations 14:6,7. "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred and tongue and people, saying in a loud voice, fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come." In the 8th verse we read the announcement that Babylon is fallen. Babylon is that religious confusion into which Christianity has resolved itself, and which must soon come to an end. C. T. Russell is out of adjustment with these requirements, and so his work being weighed in the balance is found wanting.

ITS DOCTRINE.

But we will now proceed to an examination of the Millennial Dawn theory or three essential points of doctrine: namely; order of church government, the Holy Ghost and its office work in the church, and consciousness after death.

First, order of church government. Not only is Chas. T. Russell out of alignment with the Scriptures as to the necessity of a divinely called and appointed ministry in his church and in the establishment of it by a special, well defined, and super-human manifestation of God's will through revelation, angel ministrations and prophetic force, but he is also out of alignment as to its official formation. He should have apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers in his church. But he does not believe in modern apostles and prophets—not in live ones but in dead ones. He professes to believe in the apostles of Bible times but clearly exhibits his lack of faith and knowledge in them when he deliberately institutes a church or religious movement without divine sanction or authority and one that does not contain the requisite order as expressed in the Scriptures.

The church of Christ today must be like the pattern he gave nineteen hundred years ago when he organized a church and placed in it apostles, prophets, etc. No Bible scholar will dispute, I am sure, the presence of apostles in Christ's church in apostolic days. Provision for the continuation or succession of this high office in the church was made since Matthias was chosen to fill the place made vacant by the traitor, Judas' transgression, and the call of Paul and Barnabas (Acts 13:2; 14:14) and others after Christ's ascension to glory. This was an office in the church. Paul said, "I magnify mine office." Rom. 11:13. Prophets were in the church after Pentecost. Acts 11:27,28. "And in those days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch." Agabus, one of them stood up and foretold a coming event in the world—a drouth. Judas and Silas were prophets. See Acts 15:32. John upon Patmos was a mighty prophet. In fact Paul tells us in 1 Cor. 12:28, "and God hath set some in the church; first, apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers." In the 18th verse of this same 12th chapter we read, "But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body (the church) as it hath pleased him." God set them there. Where does it read in the Bible or is revealed to man that they should no longer be in his church? Nowhere. But he has told us that they should remain in his church, for a specific purpose, to-wit: to direct the ministry of the word, to perfect the saints, to edify (build up) the body (church) of Christ. That necessity still exists; that purpose is still unfulfilled, and as a consequence we are compelled to believe that the office placed in the church should continue to hold its occupants who may accomplish this work till the results are attained.

We can find this information in Ephesians 4th Chap. 11-14 verses: "And he gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and some teachers, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the body of Christ till we all come in unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine."

It is true that the church of the apostolic times through gradual transgression and innovation lost the power of these high offices, and losing the power, discarded them without God given direction, believing them unless without the direct operation of the Holy Ghost, (and so they are.) There was no warrant from Jehovah for this action. When men tamper with the work and order of God they are the losers. Prophets and apostles being stricken out of the church by ruthless men, the people of God by their transgression were left a prey to all the forces that destroy true spirituality, and opened the door to every whim of the uninspired human mind, until a thousand winds of false doctrine carried them about, and a thousand waves of tradition tossed them upon a harborless sea of speculation and despair.

If Chas. T. Russell the modern reformer was really sent of God to correct this sad condition, he would have been directed to place in his church, apostles and prophets, through whom salutary results can only be obtained, and the church of Christ identified as the ancient and unchangeable one restored to earth again. But this could only be done by immediate revelation. In fact divine revelation is the only detector of spurious doctrine, and the only source of the genuine doctrine in lieu thereof. God alone can speak ex-cathedra. He alone can silence every man's opinion and fully establish his own.

This key to the situation was and is unobtainable by Chas. T. Russell and his co-workers. He denies its application to the needs of this age of the world. How then can he speak without authority? Let him then be silent, his lips sealed, for his only guide is a human one. He moves in his own strength and at his own option. We might write for hours and add link after link to the chain of evidence along this line, which would show how this man is bound to the juggernaut of error, but we forbear and hasten on to his erroneous position in regard to the Holy Spirit and its office work.

We find by an examination of the Bible that the church that Jesus established was the possessor of life, inspiration, and power beyond that possessed by the natural man who had not come into connection with this dynamo of heaven. This power, or force was the Holy Ghost. It was enjoyed by the people of God in the golden age of Christianity. We glean these nuggets from the word of God; "And we are his witnesses of these things; and so also is the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to all them that obey him." Acts 5:32. Christ promised this great comforter and teacher to the church, as recorded in John 14:16,17, "and I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive." This is tantamount to saying the church was to receive it.

In the 26th verse of this same 14th chapter of John this comforter is clearly designated to be the Holy Ghost. "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost." This great power was to "testify of me." John 15:26. "Lead into all truth" and "show you things to come." He was "to speak." John 16:13. To speak was communication from God; to show things to come was the prophetic fire. You may understand its grand operation by reading 1 Cor. 12:9-14. It was promised by Peter at Pentecost as presented in Acts 2:37-39. We are told that this promised gift was to be obtained by "all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." It was poured out upon the gentle, Cornelius, and his household, Acts 10:44. "The Holy Ghost fell upon all them which heard the word." It was received by those whom Philip had baptized at Antioch, Acts 8:7, "and they received the Holy Ghost." It came upon those whom Paul baptized at Ephesus, Acts 19:6. "The Holy Ghost came upon them."

We find the inspired preacher Paul praying for and exhorting the saints in his ministry among these Ephesians that they might have the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him (God) that they might know "the exceeding greatness of his power," that they might believe, "according to the working of his mighty power," and the working of his power is always and ever will be miraculous. In Eph. 1:17-19, we find him praying that the saints at Colossia might be filled with the knowledge of his (God's) will "increasing in the knowledge of God." Col. 1:9,10; He told the saints of Phillip that if they were all to agree upon every principle "to walk by the same rule" and if they differed in opinion "God shall reveal even this unto you." You may readily perceive that the Church of Christ has the greatest power on earth, a revealing power, a miraculous power. If you will examine its action as recorded in Acts 19:6 you will read that it caused those upon whom it came to speak in tongues and prophecy.

They spake in tongues at Pentecost. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost and the place was shaken and great grace was upon them all, as recorded in Acts 4:30-33. Paul tells us of the beautiful gifts and manifestations of this wonderful power, which were to be as rifts in the clouded sky of human experience through which the blessed rays of divine favor shine until that perfect day come when the clouds shall roll away and the unobstructed glory and brightness of that great day shall burst upon a redeemed world. These little foretastes of the royal banquet spread in all its bounty will be superceded by the feast, and the sun of knowledge, power and life will shine out in one burst of ineff-able effulgence to take the place of these little intermittent sun beams called gifts.

But thousands who profess to be followers of Christ, including Chas. T. Russell, would even deny the miraculous manifestation of God's Spirit in this day, that mighty force which belongs by the decree of the Ruler of the universe to his children in every age of the world when he had a people with sufficient faith and confidence in him to receive its presence and obtain its benefits. Read 1. Cor: 12:7-11, also Mark 16:15-20. "These signs shall follow them that be justified."

Are we believed in restricting their presence to that glorious age, and restraining their presence now? Are there any who believe now? If there are it would be an impartial God to withhold these blessings. Are they not needful now? Yes. Has there ever been a period of time when the true work and doctrine of Christ needed more a confirmation than in this infidelic and bewildered one? No. Then shall an impartial and infinitely kind Father withhold these blessings from those who seek divine guidance? No. They belong to the true church of God, those who believe in and teach a living God and who deny not his mighty power, as C. T. Russell and others deny it, "who have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof." 2 Tim. 3:5. The church of Christ restored in this age must and does have this power.

Not only does the Millennial Dawn movement stand in error as to the presence of and office work of the Holy Spirit in the church now, but its supporters fail to practice the ordinance through which it was obtained in the apostolic age, and by which it must be obtained now, for God cannot give a different rule of action in this age and be impartial. Then again this great ordinance was a factor in that perfect law given to save men. To remove it would indicate that it was as non-essential. God deals only in essentials. To remove it would leave a flaw in the perfect law of life. We must agree that it was essential then and binding upon the church as to its absolute observance, as any other ordinance. Such for example, as baptism by immersion, and being a part of that perfect Christ given plan for redemption, must in like manner be in force as essential today, even as immersion in water is in force today. Of what doctrine do we allude? To that of the "imposition of hands."

We find its practice alluded to in acts. 8:14-17, when hands were laid upon the converts of Philip after their baptism for the reception of the Holy Ghost, and in Acts 19:5-6 where 22 years after Paul baptized and laid hands on certain disciples for the reception of the Spirit. The imposition of hands was also used to ordain, Acts 13:3, 1 Tim. 4:14; to heal the sick, Mark 16:18, Acts 28:8; to bless little children, Mark 10:16. Why not these important articles in the faith of Christ today? Has the doctrine changed? They are practiced in the true church on earth now, but uninspired movements of men have forgotten, neglected or denied the use of this important item of practice. All that so treat the laying on of hands may safely be said to be unrecognized of God, for his great blessings flow inwardly to man through its observance.

Having weighed the Millennial Dawn theory upon two of the very fundamental doctrines of Christ and found it wanting, we now proceed to the third, the consciousness of a soul after death. Do the teachings of C. T. Russell harmonize with the Bible? He teaches that the soul is unconscious between death and the resurrection and so his followers believe. Now the belief in this theory comes from an infidelic condition of mind-doubt of the power of the omnipotent one to preserve entity independent of the brain in the human cranium. They forget that the Bible teaches the existence of beings independent of corporeal body composed of the elements of the earth. The demons or evil spirits that possessed the bodies of men in Christ's day and which he cast out (not destroyed). For we read that their desire was so intense for a body of flesh that they preferred to enter into swine than to remain unembodied. No doubt these were theimps of the infernal region that Elder Russell denies are in existence.

Because we do not sense with our human organism-see with our eyes, hear with our ears, handle with our hands these spiritual beings, is in no case an evidence of their non-existence. The body of Jesus arose from the dead and at times was discernable or not discernable as the risen Master desired. But Elder Russell would have us believe that the body crucified on Calvary was consumed in his sepulcher.

Now the Bible certainly teaches that mankind never loses consciousness after the change called death. That he pre-existed before he obtained this body and that he will continue to exist when he has lain it aside even unto that eventful day when he will occupy it once more in its transformed and glorified state. He pre-existed. "There was an an sent from God." John 1:6. He must have been with God before being sent here to earth life. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God, who gave it." Eccl. 12:7. To return to God is equivalent to say that it was once with God before earth life. The flesh and the spirit go to separate and distinct places. "For as much then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same." Heb. 2:14. The children of earth partook. They must have been in conscious existence independent of the body to be intelligently able to partake of flesh and blood. We know Christ pre-existed before he tabernacled in the body of the babe of Bethlehem. So in like manner, man.

At death the Psalmist David says we "fly away." "The days of our years are three score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be foreshore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fly away." Psa. 90:10. We fly away-take our departure. Who are "we"? The endless entity within; that spirit that returns to God; that inner man which is separated from its earthly dwelling place, free and unfettered, it departs to continue in new realms living and intelligent. Notwithstanding Elder Russell's denial. Jesus said, "verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man keep my saying, he shall never see death." He shall never experience it. The dissolution of the body is the mildest expression of death. The death of the soul-is separation from God and the environment of heavenly things is the real death. Paul says, "awake thou that sleepest, arise from the dead and I will give you life." Did he mean those dead in body? No! Those dead in trespasses and sin. "But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth."

Christ came that "men might have life." They were dead, not physically dead but spiritually dead; Rom. 8:6. Jesus said, I am the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. These men had passed centuries before this utterance to the beyond and had not yet been resurrected, yet they were living, not unconscious, annihilated. "And fear not them that can kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul." Mat. 10:28. But some say the soul is not killed when the body dies, because the soul shall live again in an age to come. If this argument be true, upon the same hypotheses no one can kill the body for it shall live again in the age to come as I shall prove, "and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, Job 19:26. The 25th verse locates the time he should see God, "wicked he shall stand in the latter day upon the earth." "With my dead body they arise," Isa. 26:19; "When I shall open your graves, O, my people and brought you up out of your graves," Ezek. 37:13; "I will ransom them from the power of the grave," Hos. 13:14; "the redemption of our body," Rom. 8:23; "shall also quicken your mortal bodies," Rom. 8:11; "who shall change our vile body" at his coming, Philippians 3:20, 21. See 2 Thess. 4:16, 17, Paul had a desire to depart and be with Christ, Phil. 1:21-25, 2 Cor. 5:1-10; Christ preached to the spirits in prison, 1 Peter 3:18-20. The dead had the gospel preached unto them, the living and the dead (not unconscious) 1 Peter 4:5, 6. The spirits are keenly conscious awaiting the resurrection, Rev. 6:9-11. But why continue upon such an extensive research. Books could be written and every utterance proclaim the error of this doctrine of mortal soulists. Not one Scripture statement supports the claim of Elder Russell, every verse, every sentence is against him.

THE TRANSCENDENT AND COMPLETE LIFE.

BY ELDER J. E. VANDERWOOD.

"When a man passes from the dark stage of temptation to the more enlightened stage of transmutation, he has become a saint, namely, one who perceives the need of self-purification, and who has entered that way and is engaged in perfecting himself."—James Allen.

Life, as all else, has its limitations, and is to a greater or lesser extent governed by environment and circumstances. But that life is susceptible of development and ultimate perfection goes without question. And our main object in calling attention to this important fact is to more clearly bring out the real vital essentials of life, and it may be well at this juncture to make plain if possible our conception of life.

Life in the mind of the writer means more than a mere existence, more than the mere gratifying of the fleshly appetites, a nd more than the acquiring of intellectual powers,—not that intellectuality is not a part of life, for it is; but we wish the reader to get our idea that it is not the whole thing, and that one might be an intellectual giant and yet be a pigmy so far as the essential features of life are concerned.

Life then, the complete or transcendent life, means a properly poised being—a life complete in good deeds, virtuous, gentle, kind, considerate of others, without guile, easily entreated, not self-centered, but altruistic in temperament, and—if we might add more—approaching as nearly as possible to the life of the divine Master.

It is somewhere written that "man is that he might have joy" and it is evident that joy is inseparably connected with life, that is no one can have life in its fuller degree without having joy, and no one can have true enjoyment without first laying hold on life, real life. But the question necessarily arises as to what constitutes enjoyment, and to that end we wish to examine and if possible ascertain the real meaning of the term. Webster defines it thus: "State of enjoying; pleasure; satisfaction; fruition." And we therefore argue that that which gives the greatest satisfaction and as a result develops the greatest fruition is that which is most conducive to life.

Christ gave to the world the best and most complete receipt for life that has ever come to the notice of man and it here becomes us to take notice of it and if possible apply it to our lives, or better yet adapt our lives to its requirements. He clearly and most forcefully taught that to enjoy life one must become like unto him—a master of life; and his great apostle taught: "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, to prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

The great lesson to be learned then is that life does not consist in having and getting, but in giving, giving the best possible in this life for the good of the race, for the blessing of our fellowmen. The precept of the divine Master was: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And again he said: "I am among you as him that serveth." His entire life was one of service and hence the most complete life that ever graced the footstool, and if mankind ever attains unto or becomes possessor of the transcendent life it will be by virtue of the fact that they have transformed and renewed their minds, and have learned to think as the Master of life, and out of that thought force by a persistent and reasonable effort developed a character that is properly poised, serene and pure.

To attain unto this one must overcome and crucify self and selfish interests, and learn that one is never so supremely happy as when his life is completely absorbed in the service of those less fortunate than himself. A selfish person never is happy and never can be because such a one is always in fear of losing something that he never possessed, and he is tormented continually by that fear, for it is written: "Fear hath torment, but perfect love casteth out all fear." It should be remembered that perfect love is never a selfish love, for one can never be in possession of perfect love while he is clinging to self, but in the altruistic service of the divine Master one can and does enjoy that profound and abiding peace that is the legitimate fruitage of a perfect and serene love.

For one to become a possessor of real life and enjoy its most precious benefits he must become willing to die to self, and being dead to self and sin rise with Christ in the service of humanity and without reservation lay his all on the altar of service and thus enter upon a new and more abundant life, one that will bring a greater joy and a more lasting and profound peace.

The writer is not in sympathy with the idea that this world will be blessed by and by, and rest secure in the thought that a baptismal certificate, or any other church ordinance, will land us safe on that blissful shore if we do not here and now improve our opportunity in making the world better by the purifying of our own heart and mind, holding it as a truism that he who purifies his own life is the world's greatest benefactor, and we therefore argue that the eternal now is the only time we have in which to bless the world or to acquire the necessary and essential requisites of a complete and transcendent life.

The opportunities of yesterday are no longer mine, and those of tomorrow may never come, for we know not what a day may bring forth, but there is one thing we have and are certain of and that is the now, and the way I live now at this very moment is to be the determining factor in my life, for if I can and do live now without sin or the thoughts of sin, the chances are good, that if I be spared until the morrow I will also live in that same manner, but if I procrastinate and say I will do this today and tomorrow I will mend my ways and my doings the chances are first that I will never see the morrow, and second if I do see it I will follow the habit of today; so if I expect to enter upon and enjoy life in the hereafter I must begin it here and now. I must learn to love humanity, and thus love life, not looking at what I am going to get out of life for the gratifying of my selfish or carnal desires, but what am I able to give that the world might be made the better thereby, how may I best serve the interests of my fellowmen, and in what way may I best teach others the lesson of supreme life.

The only way then to enter into and enjoy the complete and transcendent life is to live the life that Christ lived, by doing the things he did, and by permitting the real vital forces of his teaching to become a very part of our life thus transmuted the baser elements of our nature into the unalloyed gold of true and abiding love for mankind.

The transcendent life is not ruled by the baser passions, it is not comprehended by the selfish mind, but it is ruled by a tender and compassionate love, a profound and divine peace, a tranquil and serene spirit, and he who enters into it is thrice blessed in that he forgets the errors of yesterday, in that he parts company with them, leaves them behind, he enjoys the life that now is by rendering a loving and reasonable service unto mankind, and with it all prepares himself for the life that is yet future. The attributes of the Divine are his and his life is one of peace—even divine peace, he knows no fear for he is the possessor of a profound, divine, and perfect love.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION.

We have long believed license of the liquor traffic unconstitutional under the present Constitution of the United States. We began declaring this belief early in our temperance platform work, nearly forty years ago. We have never ceased asserting it. We have no doubt that a fair judicial decision of our national Supreme Court would establish this belief.

Twenty years ago the vision came to us as clearly that all taxation of the liquor traffic is unconstitutional; and this belief, also, we have taught in print, on the platform and in the class-room with unwavering persistence, asserting it first in "Wealth and Waste."

Yet, while believing that our present national Constitution affords ample basis for outlawing the liquor traffic absolutely, we have long and patiently urged the wisdom of a national prohibition amendment. Over and over again upon Southern soil we have said that as the North once forced on the South prohibition of slavery by constitutional amendment, so the South might one day be compelled to force upon the North prohibition of the liquor traffic for the good of the nation, also by constitutional amendment. Only in this way, perhaps, could our Empire State, with its great metropolis, be brought under the sway of clean life and pure government, and other States might rank in the same class.

But we have always recognized that constitutional provisions do not enforce themselves. We have never believed that a prohibition amendment would be automatic and finally become a fact in government without governmental administration.

We know that such an amendment will not be secured easily or soon. It may take years to win the necessary two-thirds of the States in majority approval of it. Years previous may be consumed in getting it before the States by act of Congress that they may consider it. Only as the people mass themselves and their sentiment in some solid phalanx, and move upon Washington by their approving representatives, can there be slightest hope of presenting the amendment to them for popular endorsement and possible passage.

We welcome every proof that such an amendment is demanded in the people's behalf. The louder the demand and the mightier the phalanx making it, the sooner it may be met. The more cohesive the effort behind it the larger the possibility of success. Through cohesion only can power be applied. The kind of cohesion must be determined by the thing to be done and the kind of power imperative to do it.—The National Advocate.

MALES OUTNUMBER FEMALES.—That there are in the United States now about 3,000,000 more male citizens than female is the rather surprising feature of a statement made by Census Director Durand on the results of the last federal census.

Exclusive of Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, the total of males in the United States was 47,332,277 and of females 44,639,989. This means 106 males to every 100 females as compared with the ratio of 104.4 males to 100 females in 1906.—The Citizen.

THE ROUND TABLE

Will the heathen come forth in the first resurrection? If so, in what will be the difference between them and the saints who "come up through great tribulation" in order to reign with Christ a thousand years, the heathen coming into the same privileges with the saints?

It seems that the first resurrection will be in two parts according to Doctrine and Covenants 45:6-10. At the appearing of Christ the saints who are dead will be raised, and those who are living will be changed and will be "caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air," (1Thess. 4:16,17.) Paul also says the dead in Christ shall rise first. The Doctrine and Covenants says: "But before the arm of the Lord shall fall, an angel shall sound his trumpet, and the saints that have slept, shall come forth to meet me in the cloud." After speaking of the judgment which will fall upon the wicked at his appearing, and his appearance to the Jews, it says: "And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection; and it shall be tolerable for them." D. C. 76:5-7 leave us to infer that those of the terrestrial glory, which include the heathen, will come forth in the first resurrection, but specifies that they will have a lesser glory. Those who have wrought out their salvation under trial in this life are those who will be Christ's "jewels" when he comes, the "joint heirs with Jesus Christ," and will reign with him. Though the heathen "have part" in the first resurrection the expression "it shall be tolerable for them" shows a lesser glory, agreeing with the other statement that they will be included with those of the terrestrial glory. They will not inherit all that the saints inherit, though just what their reward will be is not clear.

Why was the gospel restored to just a few men? Why couldn't God have restored it to different ones in all parts of the world?

We cannot tell why God follows certain policies, and should we name some reasons that appear to us they might be far from being the leading ones. We can say however that in restoring the gospel to the few, God followed the policy which he had in all other ages. Why was Jesus sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel instead of to all nations at once? Why did God choose Abraham and his posterity as his chosen people? Why did he call Noah only to preach the gospel in his day? "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth," and we safely conclude that the same wisdom governs him in all his works.

Explain the statement of Jesus to his disciples as recorded in Luke 9:49,50.

The effort of the man who was not a follower of Christ to cast out devils in his name, was not designed to be in opposition to Christ. The text does not say whether he was successful or not, nor does the statement of Christ necessarily indicate approval of his acts, but the force of the statement is to this effect: That the man was doing a work, mistaken though he might have been, which did not directly oppose or interfere with the work which Jesus and his disciples were doing, and the disciples had no right to interfere with him in such work and forbid him doing it. The gospel work being positive those who engage in it have no need to interfere with, or attack others, who may be doing their work even though it may be wrong, and it was for this that Christ reproved his disciples.

Did the church as a visible organization cease to exist among the children of Israel when Moses and the higher priesthood were taken out of their midst? (D.C. 83:4.) Could the church have existed as a visible organization under the Aronic priesthood until Christ came?

The church could have existed in its partial organization under the Aronic priesthood, "which priesthood holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel, which gospel, is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins, and the law of carnal commandments." This priesthood was retained till John though frequently lapsing into wickedness, and the organization perverted. John came preaching the preparatory gospel which was new and strange to the Jews of his day, but which would have been familiar to them had the law been observed, the priesthood honored, and the organization retained in its original form. The organization could not have been as complete as under the Melchisedec priesthood, for the leading quorums would be lacking. The law provides that a branch in cases of need may be presided over by a priest, teacher or deacon, showing that the Aronic priesthood has some right of presiding. (D.C. 120:2.)

What is sectarianism?

Sectarianism is a term loosely used in reference to the doctrines of the various churches or religious factions taken as a whole, usually restricted to those bodies called "Protestant." Sectarian and non-sectarian are terms applied to religious movements or educational institutions which are or are not belonging to, or under the control of a sect or denomination.

CARRIERS OF DISEASE.

"Baby Bye
Here's a fly;
Let us catch him, you and I.
There he goes—
Oh his toes—
Tickling baby's nose.
He can eat
Bread and meat,
There's a mouth between his feet.
Does the baby understand?
Then the fly shall kiss her hand.
Put a crumb
On her thumb;
Maybe he will come.
Now you see his wings of silk
Dabble in the baby's milk!
Catch him! No!
Let him go;
Never hurt an insect so."

"FLIES, A DANGER SIGNAL."

It is well to teach the children not to be cruel to the tiniest living thing; but do teach them to use the fly swatter well.

Since looking up on our lesson for this month, we have found many items of interest. As a result of facts obtained we have been frequently possessed of spells of creeps and shivers. We pass them on. Items? Creeps?—Just as you choose!

Truly, this generation is blessed in that so much of vital consequence to health and happiness has been, and is being discovered from time to time, and given the public for their observance and benefit.

"The fly is the most active carrier of disease, not of typhoid fever only, but of a summer diarrhoea of infants, tuberculosis, and many other infectious diseases. There is probably no other living creature that is responsible for one half as many deaths as this once thought innocent nuisance."

To be sure there is something wrong some where when he—the fly—puts in an appearance. On investigation, we may find some decayed vegetables—even one rotten potato, onion, or cabbage, in your cellar; a bit of some acidy dressing or fruit left forgotten in a corner in the pantry. The tiny maggots are buzzing every where in our faces, when their secret is fettered out. In this case do not be so surprised to find an occasional fly around in mid-winter. Then what of the summer!

If the contents of a corner in your home is not the breeder, see to the holes in your screens; but first be sure you have screens. Right here in Independence there are people who look after their various other luxuries—and summer in and summer out—no screens!

"FLIES BREED ALWAYS IN FILTH."

So we know where to look for that which may be the cause of the pest,—the open, unclean garbage can, vaults and cess pools, and manure piles, etc. Chloride of lime used regularly, is universally recommended as a successful treatment to rid us of this plague.

Investigators (of our time) along lines of medical science, have acquired great knowledge of the manner of transmission of disease germs.

"Examples of brilliant success by their methods are furnished by the elimination of malaria and yellow fever from the Panama Canal zone, through destruction of the breeding places of mosquitos; the prevention of plague by destroying rats which harbor fleas that are the transmitters of the disease; the exclusion of cholera from various parts by the practice of rigid quarantine."

WEEDS.

Remember—mosquitos and fleas love a weed patch for their cosy retreat!

CONCERNING GERMS.

Doubtless the most important revelation of modern times—measured in terms of human life and human happiness—is the discovery that the major part of the ills to which flesh is heir, owe their existence solely to the presence of noxious germs."

It is only in recent years that recognition has been given this fact (first discovered by M. Pasteur a number of years ago) and that people realize just how easily germs can be carried or spread among us.

"Some of the disease germs float in the air, to be disseminated by every chance breeze. Others must be carried from person to person as definitely as grain is carried to the field by the farmer. The carrier may be infected human beings, animals or insects or such inanimate vehicles as milk or water."

These insects are generally known to be mosquitos, as a carrier of malaria, various ticks, fleas, the fly and the bed bug.

THE BED BUG.

We find the latter by scientists, is considered as a common carrier of acute epidemic disease,—measles, small pox, scarlet fever, and infantile paralysis, and diphtheria.

Nor must we overlook the extent to which the insect may effect involuntary migrations from one social stratum to another. Unwelcome as the thought may be; it is true that there is a constant distribution, and that the insect may gain access to the best regulated household in spite of every reasonable precaution, as a recent Bulletin of the U. S. Entomological Bureau has declared. Says Dr. Manning: "The physician returns from the alm house and the lawyer from the court where the bedbugs swarm, the maid takes her half day in a tenement home, the daily paper is distributed by a tenement dweller, the hand laundry often returns from a tenement district, the vacation is spent in unfumigated summer camps, and the traveller bag or trunk is a usual hiding place for cimex; men, women and children of all social classes come in close contact in railroad stations, transit lines, theatres, schools, moving picture entertainments, summer amusements, and public inns. Hence the possible invasion of every home by the retreating but ubiquitous bed bug."

All of which makes very unpleasant reading, but is preeminently important because it brings to mind a vivid picture of dangers to which every one is more or less subject, but which until very recently no one has suspected.

BOOKS AS DISEASE CARRIERS.

In the American Journal of Pharmacy a lecture by Wm. R. Reimick, delivered at the University of Pennsylvania, is published. He specifies the various insects that ruin the books of libraries; almost always large libraries, however. In our climate, we escape such experiences, usually.

But he dwells more especially on the fact that in handling books which are public property on which have been loaned to the sick, we should be very careful. The habit of dampening the fingers with saliva in turning pages, is vulgar, to say the least, and is an easy course for the transmission of disease; tuberculosis, skin diseases, especially, besides many other diseases.

He urges cleanliness with books by all librarians and readers, and frequent cleansing of hands by all. This will also avoid grease spots on the pages, which are breeding and feeding places for germs and insects.

He makes very important suggestion concerning the pest of the house fly, which often makes its way to books. At the Agricultural Experimental Station at Starks, Connecticut, in 1908, it was shown that the number of bacteria on a single fly may range from 50 to 6,600,000; an average of one and one-fourth million bacteria on each fly. Spores were found in more than 50 per cent of the fly specks. By this means typhoid and other diseases are too easily transmitted.

Moral: "Prevention is better than cure."

ANNOUNCEMENT FROM BUREAU OF PUBLICITY.

The Bureau of Publicity desires to announce that the pamphlet entitled, "A Plea for the Golden Rule," being a review of certain portions of the book written by Reverend Bruce Kinney, called, "Mormonism, the Islam of America," will soon be ready for distribution. This is a revised reprint of three editorials appearing in the Saints' Herald. These editorials have been revised and cut down to bring them within the space limitations of a forty-page pamphlet. While some paragraphs have been sacrificed in the interests of brevity, two items not considered in the editorials have been taken up in the pamphlet, one of these being Mr. Kinney's statement that the ancient inhabitants of America were ignorant of the use of iron and similar metals which are mentioned in the Book of Mormon.

Readers of the pamphlet are cited to the statement of Mr. A. J. Conant A. M., member of the Saint Louis Academy of Science, and of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, who in his book, "Foot-prints of Vanished Races in the Mississippi Valley," declares, "To the question whether they possessed knowledge of working iron, the wise man will hesitate a long time before he answers in the negative."

Readers are also referred to the writings of Mr. Cyrus Thomas, for twenty-nine years connected with the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian Institution, who in his book, "American Archaeology," reports finding iron implements of undisputed antiquity in both United States and Mexico, also articles of gold, and completely spoils Mr. Kinney's theory by declaring that it must be admitted that these ancient people "had discovered the art of casting metals in molds."

The Bureau of Publicity desires to recommend that the Saints interest themselves in this pamphlet and so far as possible aid in its distribution among those who have been studying Mr. Kinney's work. Single copies may be secured for five cents, dozen lots, fifty cents. All orders should be addressed to the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa.

BUREAU OF PUBLICITY ORGANIZED.—Recognizing a need that has existed for some time in the church, the First Presidency has taken steps to organize a Bureau of Publicity. This bureau will be managed during the conference year by John F. Garver and Elbert A. Smith. Its object will be to promote a more thorough and effectual distribution of church literature and to assist the elders when possible in securing publicity through newspapers and other periodicals. District and branch presidents will probably hear from this bureau in the near future regarding plans for special work along this line. It is not likely that the bureau can meet all the demands that may be made upon it during the coming year, or extend its work as widely as might be done with unlimited time and capital at their disposal; but it is hoped that this work will grow into something quite useful and important in the economy of the church.

To them were born four sons and one daughter, Andrew, Francis, George, Matilda, and Joseph. They for a time lived in the West, then located at Muckhicknock in Mahaska Co., Iowa, where her husband and sons, Henry, Andrew, Francis and daughter Matilda preceded her in death.

St. Chambers was baptized into the Reorganization in 1893 by Elder Wm. Waterman by whom also she was confirmed, and to which covenant she remained faithful until death. She died at the home of her son, Joseph, near Given, Iowa, June 19, 1913, aged 74 years, one month and fifteen days. INSPIRATION.

I show men things they do not see,
So oft they pass them by;
And some have found new things to love,
New splendors in the sky.

I pull the veil from Mystery,
And show her cynic's smile;
Men look a foolish look, and feel
They knew her all the while.

I give a youth the power to tell
Old lore that is like new;
The wise men wag their heads and frown,
And know his words are true.

A beggar played his violin
Where wind folk sob and sing;
I whispered to his heart, and now
He plays before the king.

The crowd saw but the parts of steel
Piled high before their eyes,
'Long to the builder's heart I came—
He saw his tower rise.

I am a guest that comes and goes,
Not lured by throne or mart;
I give to Man the loaf of Life—
Or else I break his heart.

BY EVERY WORD.

Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.—Matt. 4:4.

This was the answer made by the Son of God to a great personage who had suggested to him a substitute by which he might have life. The wisdom and might of Satan and all his hosts were arrayed against him, and no weak or half expressed truth would meet the issue and defeat the adversary. In one utterance Christ covered the whole extent of human life, expressing the broad truth that life—true life—can only be attained, and retained, through obedience to every principle revealed by God.

What a reproof for one who, through disobedience against light and knowledge, had lost forever eternal life! It stated a truth so apparent and important that Satan dared not question it, nor could he answer it.

Strange as it may seem, what Satan dared not dispute in the presence of Christ, men have presumed to question since his personal departure from this world, and some of the words which Jesus so clearly says had been given him of the Father—proceedeth from the "mouth of God"—have been relegated to the list of non-essentials in modern Christianity? Certainly God does not put into operation the forces of communication between heaven and earth and communicate non-essentials! Surely he would not call men, and send his Son, that they by suffering and sacrifice might bring forth his word, only to have it fall to the ground as non-essential! Listen to what the word of God says upon this point:

For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater. So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it.—Isaiah 55:10, 11.

My word shall not pass away.—Jesus.

There is life for man in the word of God—every word, and that life can never be made complete so long as any part of that word is ignored or rejected. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life. But there are some of you that believe not," is true today as when first uttered by Christ. God forever stands back of his words, and whatsoever soul makes them the rule of his action will come in contact with God, with life, and by continuance in that word, life will ultimately be made perfect.

One of the essential principles stated by Christ is "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me," but this has been discounted by men. Denying oneself the things of the world is generally believed to be proper in theory but impracticable in practice even by professed followers of Christ. To take up the cross and follow Christ, determines the integrity and loyalty of men to Christ. Leaving one part of the world that may easily be left while holding to another that claims attachment, is not bearing the cross nor following Christ. How many sing

"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee," while yet holding to the world, enjoying its pleasures, or perhaps indulging in its sins! In this are not men failing to live by every word?

Again Jesus said: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." This is, partly, or wholly rejected by nearly all professed Christians. None need to be sticklers for technicalities, but this rather than being a technicality, is the utterance of a fundamental truth, eternally true, and which "shall not return unto me void." Man's transfer from one kingdom to another, from alienation to sonship must be marked by some definite change, a change that is not wholly the result of man's sole effort, but of God's participation. There must be a birth of water which is brought about by the act of the candidate and the administrator, which when done according to God's word, receives his indorsement. There must also a birth of the Spirit administered directly from heaven, lifting the recipient into a new sphere, a new life. These two constitute what Jesus expressed as being "born again," and his subsequent statement shows that this birth was the only entrance into the kingdom of God. Why then leave out or discard any part of this? Why say that baptism is one of the non-essentials?

In the gospel there are no non-essentials. Every word of God is designed to meet some need, and so long as that need exists, so long will that word be operative. Life comes by heeding every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 11.

LAW.

Latter Day Saints believe that the gospel embodies a system of law which is referred to by the apostle Paul as "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus." (Rom. 8:2.) It covers all the principles without obedience to which full salvation cannot be attained. The "Christian" world has in a large measure lost sight of many of these principles and in consequence have failed to live up to them, and hence in latter day revelation the Lord has seen fit to restate many of the things previously given in the Bible, while other principles that receive but incidental mention in the book, have been amplified and defined more in detail, being adapted to the peculiar conditions of the times.

The fundamental principles of faith, repentance, and baptism, have been considered previously in this series, and many principles relating to daily conduct are so familiar to all that they need not be mentioned here. The extreme tendency toward materialism of this present time was provided against by the divine statement given to the men who were early called into the gospel work incident to the organization of the church in 1830: "Seek not for riches, but for wisdom, and behold the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto you, and then shall you be rich; behold he that hath eternal life is rich." Doctrine and Covenants 10:3. As to the manner of dispensing the gospel and its blessings it is commanded: "Freely ye have received, freely give."

The law given to the church defines the manner of baptism, of ordinations, the duties and prerogatives of the various officers, the manner or administering the sacrament, and of blessing children. It states how erring members shall be dealt with, and under what conditions they may be forgiven or shall suffer the penalty of expulsion. It provides for a just and equitable system of finances not only for the carrying on of the regular work of the church in spreading the gospel, caring for the poor, the sick, and the aged,—all who may need help, but a system of just equalization in the temporal things so that there shall be no poor, and no hoarding of riches beyond what is necessary for legitimate purposes, all wealth being devoted to such uses as augment the public good, and not spent for extraxagant luxuries.

In setting forth the law of love, humility, meekness, and other attributes, warning is given against the dangers of pride, vanity, idleness, uncleanness, selfishness, and other evils. The law covers every condition and phase of life. It is indeed as defined by Blackstone "a rule of action defining what is right and prohibiting what is wrong."

The purposes for which the "law of life" was given through latter day revelation are given as, 1st, A transformation of individual life by removing all sin and developing righteousness; 2d, A reconstruction of society upon the basis of justice and equity, giving equal opportunity to all education, social and industrial life, and all that is required to make true life; 3d, Developing individual and collective service in the kingdom of God on earth by which the opportunity of becoming subject to the law and receiving its benefits might be extended to all men; 4th The preparation of a people in holiness for the appearing of Jesus Christ at his coming in glory, to whom he will come. These are stated in our own words; but they cover in a broad way the purposes of the law. There are others.

The benefits of an obedience to the law of life are partly given in the above. They come in the greater joy of a purer life, a nobler purpose, a greater service, and in the assurance of everlasting life in the kingdom of God.

This law is so extensively distributed through the Scriptures that we cannot here go further with its details.

LAW UNDER CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Science and Health says:

The true Logos is demonstrably Christian Science, the natural law of harmony which overcomes discord,—not because it is supernatural or preferential, or because it is an infraction of divine law, but because it is the immutable law of God. p. 28.

It is here held that the "immutable law of God" is found in Christian Science. This Christian Science law sets forth that there is no reality to material things, that all is mind, spirit, and the supposed material laws, or laws involving material things, are but false beliefs to be cast out of mind rather than to be observed. It is for this reason that baptism and the sacrament are rejected except in a spiritualized nature, because they involve material things.

Spirit is supreme and governs all, having full control over everything. The false belief of material things can have no power over mind, and life is in no wise dependent upon, or affected by the elements.

If man is absolutely governed by God, or Spirit, then man is not subject to matter "neither indeed can be, and therefore man cannot suffer, neither can he infringe his Maker's spiritual law." p. 371.

Expose the error which would impose penalties for transgressions of the physical laws of health. . . having only human approval for their sanction. p. 380.

When infringing some supposed law, you say there is danger. . . we cannot suffer in reality from breaking any law except it be a moral or spiritual law. p. 380.

We should relieve our minds from the depressing thought that we have transgressed a material law, and must of necessity pay the penalty. p. 382.

Decrepitude is not a law or necessity of nature, but an illusion which may be avoided.

Under this teaching men are to ignore and set aside the physical part of their natures as all other material things for "spirit and its formations are the only realities of Being." (p. 160.) There is no law dealing with matter, and life is only in Spirit—Mind. To us the law of Mind in Christian Science is not clearly defined as it presents no complete "rule of action" for either the individual or society, but seems to give each mind its own supremacy over itself and all things.

No rule or law is given dealing with society collectively, such as would generally, change the present customs and practices, along industrial and economical lines.

The contrast previously seen or other points in the two systems of doctrine is found here also. Organization deals partly with the material side of the divine work and in the next number on that topic it will appear that the contrast continues. There is much that might be said on this subject of law, but space forbids.

NOW.

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

Now is this only time we have in which I live and do,
Tomorrow's possibilities may never come to you,
'Tis now that opportunity presents itself complete,
Of gently following the prints of Jesus' bleeding feet.
It is the now, eternal now, in which we make our life,
In which to overcome the cause of mortal sin and strife;
'Tis now and only now we live—we have no time to squander,
Since now is only now to us—it may not be tomorrow.

To live today is life indeed, the now is our possessing,
Today we may be true to self—to others be a blessing,
Today we think and act and do, it is our time for giving
The very best we have in life, to make it worth the living.
The air is pregnant now with hope, oh what a blessed token,
'Tis now that love may soothe and heal, a tender heart that's broken.

Serenity and peace are now—and we may now enjoy them,
Arise and live today complete, your joys will all increase then.

'Tis now that we should be sincere, our life to live for others,
Proclaim the Fatherhood of God, and hold all men as brothers.

'Tis now that we should bless the earth, defer not till tomorrow,
We may bring peace to men—dispelling sin and sorrow.

The golden moments of our life, are now—why sleep or slumber?
'Tis now we may distribute cheer, and blessings without number.

'Tis now we may uplift and bless, encourage great and small,
'Tis now the blessed now that we should make life best of all.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Sunday was a fine day and a good sized congregation assembled to hear Bro. C. Edward Miller preach at the morning service. His theme was Service and Justice, using for a basis of his remarks 1 Sam. 30:24—"But as his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff; they shall part alike." In comparing the service of God's creatures he used the simile of man and the toad, one of the highest creations and the other one of the humblest, each doing service in their sphere. Each is necessary. The toad is one of the most harmless creatures and it is also a great friend to the farmer, the horticulturist, the gardener. [We say, protect the toad. He lives on bugs and flies, and does no harm.] Incidentally Bro. Miller threw some well-earned bouquets to the choir because of the service it is rendering to the church.

The afternoon prayer meeting was characterized by instructive testimonies and talks along the line of the Saints keeping themselves unspotted from worldly pleasures, that perilous times are at hand.

In the evening Elder J. R. Lentell was the speaker. His subject was "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." His effort was to show what kind of a life we must live in order to be in the same mind as was Jesus. He also portrayed the duties of members of the church to seek to build up the kingdom of God, which he explained was the church. Bro. John, now a missionary, is an Independence boy. His effort was fine.

There was an attendance of 843 at the Sunday School. The collection of the second Sunday in August is to be given to the orchestra to assist in getting new music, etc. The Senior and Teacher-training departments are to have a picnic on Saturday afternoon and evening, August 16, at Budd Park, Kansas City.

At 11 o'clock forenoon Sunday the Religio held an institute at Walnut Park, at which talks on the various lines of work were given by Bro. Bushnell, Gardner and Vernon Lee, also Sr. Nellie Brocaw, and a vocal solo by Sr. Bernice Griffiths.

Bro. Garrett was at Quindaro all day Sunday, conducting services there. On Monday Bro. Bond was called to Holden, Mo., to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. McWethy, father of F. A. McWethy, who died last week. Bro. Bond had a long acquaintance with the family of three or four generations, from his boyhood days.

In a visit to the daily vacation Bible school we met with a happy surprise. An hour, from 9:30 to 10:30, was taken up with exercises composed of short interesting talks to the children and singing beautiful songs, which Bro. LaRue their leader, and others had learned the children. The children showed enthusiasm and earnestness, with exceptionally good order. At 10:30 all marched to their various stations in different parts of the building and some in the large outdoors, where they earnestly went to work at hammock weaving, basket making and other lines of work, which was kept up for one hour. Rev. Floyd, pastor of the First Baptist church, was present and gave an interesting talk during the exercises. He praised the work being done and wished all the other churches would fall in line. He expressed a desire that a "branch" of the children would come over to his church and show what they could do. Bro. LaRue promised that his desire would be gratified.

By word from the editor from Columbia, Mo., he expressed himself as being pleased with the ministers' meeting there. He is having many inquiries in regard to our work. He thinks the meetings will be beneficial to himself, and we have no doubt but that he will be the means of enlightening some and of doing good for the work. These meetings are to last two weeks.

The second annual chautauqua is in progress in Independence this week. This year there seems to be more vaudeville than at the last one, and not so much of the higher class of entertainment from speeches of celebrated men and women.

Senator Frank J. Cannon, of Utah will talk at the Kansas City Chautauqua Sunday evening, August 3rd, on the subject of "Poligamous Duplicity." Mr. Cannon has expressed a wish that all Latter Day Saints in this vicinity come and hear his message, and no doubt many will be interested to know how he distinguishes the Reorganized Church from the Utah Church, as well as other matters connected with Mormonism in general. The Chautauqua will be held between the northeast high school and Budd Park. Those going from Independence will transfer on Hardesty and Jackson car and then on northeast going west.

A sister Knudson in the Sanitarium during the very hot weather excited the sympathy of Sr. Anna Flower, one of our good sisters who is ever on the alert in the interest of others, who solicited from some thirty friends enough money to buy an electric fan for the afflicted sister. A very delicate operation had been performed on Sr. Knudson. A piece of her backbone was removed and a part of a bone from one of her legs was grafted in where the diseased bone was taken out, and then she was put in a plaster cast. It is reported that she is getting along nicely. The science of surgery is advancing to such an extent that some wonderful things are being accomplished in the interest of humanity.

The Reorganized church is steadily on the increase in Independence. In the two branches there are now not far from 3000 Saints, enough to wield a great influence for good when united, morally, spiritually, or politically. When the temperance question is involved in politics the influence of the Saints is felt to a marked degree.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Second Branch of Independence, Mo., church located at the corner of West 30th Ave. and Delaware Street. Sunday school 9:30 a. m. with an attendance of many bright and happy faces. Preaching at 11 a'clock a. m. by Bro. Bishop Bullard. His principal theme was faith. I am unable to say more than that his effort was good, and appreciated by all who heard him, having been called away by previous arrangements. I am not able to make full report.

Prayer meeting at 2:30 p. m. and a glorious time was had so it is reported; the gifts were manifested, tongues and interpretations. All went home greatly strengthened.

Preaching at 8 o'clock p. m. by Bro. E. T. Arwell, and a very strong effort was made to establish the fact that the angel, John the Baptist, visited Joseph Smith, and restored the keys of the Kingdom, the authority to preach and administer the ordinances, and that his coming was predicted back in Malachi, and in the Acts, and in fact in many places, which he read in support of his arguments. He held the closest attention of his hearers throughout his effort, and I think all were edified, and well repaid for the sacrifice made in sitting in the heat, without a complaint.

Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock p. m. will be the regular prayer meeting. Thursday evening the regular ice cream social will be held at the corner Hayward and Cottage Aves., to raise funds for a heating plant for the South Side church house.

The teachers and priests are after the slothful, which is no more than should be expected, though none are very far in the rear so far, being well cared for.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Elder Oscar Ensley has located at Brown's Valley, California, fifteen miles from Marysville, and is trying to effect an opening for gospel work. He has done some preaching with varied interest. One of our missionaries will go to his help ere long. Also we just learned of Bro. George F. Albertson locating at Gridley, from Michigan, and he too is making an effort for an opening for gospel work. There is a colony of over 600 members of the Utah church at that point. Gridley is twenty-six miles from Chico where lives Elder Hommes who may keep Bro. Albertson until a missionary can come.

Bro. J. D. Stead and S. M. Reiste are located at Lodi with the district tent. Lodi is twelve miles from Stockton and a new field. The tent work in Stockton was quite satisfactory, so writes Bro. Stead.

Bro. Cornelius, who recently came from Australia with his family, located in Stockton where he invested in a quarter interest in a laundry, and recently the plant burned with its contents, resulting in a sad loss to Bro. Cornelius, having no insurance. Stockton is beset by incendiaryism.

Bishop C. A. Parkin spent Sunday at Monterey in gospel work.

The city pulpit was ably filled Sunday by Bro. George S. Lincoln in the morning and Bro. J. A. Saxe, the pastor, at night. The young people held a spiritual prayer service at eight o'clock in the morning. Elder G. J. Waller preached the morning sermon in Oakland to a good house, and in the evening the pastor occupied, the attendance still being good. The Religio is in a very prosperous condition. The Sunday school also is moving along. The city auxiliaries are also forging ahead—the Religio under the guiding hand of Sr. Nellie DeSalvers, recently elected president.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy is in Sacramento and Stockton looking after the work. He contemplates attending the Southern California reunion and returning for ours at Irvington, Aug. 15th to 24th. Will you be there also?—Send orders.—Don't forget certificates.

CHICAGO, FIRST BRANCH.

The extreme hot weather brought the children out in goodly numbers Sunday, but many of the older ones were elsewhere. Elder David Dowker gave a splendid talk in the morning, while one of small stature occupied the evening hour. Bro. Dreyer of Milwaukee, Bro. DeTray and Bro. Shaw of Independence, Sr. Brown and Ustick, formerly of Kansas City, were among the welcome visitors.

Bro. Frank F. Whipper spent the day at Des Moines assisting Elders F. G. Pitt and J. A. Bronson. Frank is a staunch Book of Mormon man and with his stereoscopic slides, 300 in all, produces the effect that causes reasonable men to think. Our branch priesthood were all busy Friday evening visiting the flock.

If all the branches in the Southern Wisconsin and Northern Illinois Districts do as well as First Chicago we will have quite a gathering at Bolvidere, August 22nd to 31st. We have booked eleven orders for tents.

The first born of our branch priest, Bro. C. B. Hartshorn, was baptized at the morning service. I am rejoicing in the opportunities that I enjoy in the Lord's work.

THE ROUND TABLE

Rev. 22:1 says, "the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." When is this to be, as I thought there were to be no sickness or pain after death?

The statement refers to the redeemed earth and the healing is probably from infirmities of spirit, not applying to the redeemed who walk in the city, but provided for "the nations," whoever they may be. These may be of a lesser glory who are to receive the ministrations of the celestial kingdom. See D. C. 76:7.

Will little children who die be resurrected as children to grow up in the millenium, or as full grown persons?

We know of no Scripture which answers this question, and any attempt upon our part to do so would be merely speculative, we do not know.

Will there be marriages during the millenium, and will children be born during that time?

Christ plainly states that "in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven," Matt. 22:30, and this rule applies to all resurrected beings. But Isa. 65:23; 11:6-9; D. C. 45:10, show that children will be born in the millenium. The righteous dead will be raised, and the living saints who are worthy will be changed, both becoming immortal, but the children of the righteous, it seems, will continue on in mortality not meeting the change until after maturity. These will probably marry and multiply, all growing up "without sin unto salvation," and by the time they become old they will be changed. This seems to be true of some remnants who are left of the nations after the final destruction of the wicked. Scattered individuals will be left like the remaining olives on the tree after it is shaken, (Isa. 24:1-15.) and these will multiply and form the nations whom Satan will go out to deceive at the end of the thousand years, and during the little season.

Does the authority of the apostleship to ordain and set in order all the other officers of the church include the authority to make choice of those who are to be ordained?

Not necessarily. The right of selection of patriarchs (D. C. 104:17) is placed in the apostleship, and that of ordaining men where no organization exists, and possibly in some other cases; but most of the officers in local or general organizations are chosen by the body subject to divine call. The right of selecting men to the office of seventy is placed in the seven presidents of seventy.

CORRESPONDENCE

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., July 23.

Editor Ensign:—Inclosed you will find a copy of The Evening Sun, announcing the Latter Day Saints winners of the first prize in a contest of churches, lodges and individuals, in this city for a $650 Nelson Player Piano or a $750 Baby Grand Piano. The branch is elated over the victory. The writer being very pessimistic in the start, must confess that the honors belong to others—Charlie Carl 11 years, and Olive Carl 9 years old nominated the Latter Day Saints. Charlie worked about a month with little or no help. Then Frances Carl, his mother, Willis Carl his father, and Elsie M. Barracough took up the work. These four took in over 350,000 votes by getting paid up subscriptions to the Evening Sun. There were a few other saints who offered some highly appreciated assistance; Sr. Richard Avery, Sr. Sarah Dickens, Anna Coyby, Flora Smith, Ruby Graham and Alice Dickens. I have often said every child has its influence, and every act or effort its effect. But little did I think that there was a possibility of getting any one of the five pianos with a branch of 170 saints in a city of 80,000, and then to carry off first prize with a lead of over 120,000 votes. We marvel at the results of the children's faith. We feel that it is also a tribute to the standing of the saints of the city. Among those who contributed to our list through Sr. Barraclough's solicitation were the Mayor, the Recorder and a number of the principal business men of the city. Bro. and Sr. W. F. Carl also solicited the best business men of the city, men with whom we are acquainted and doing business.

Now to the condition of our branch. Things are moving along very nice generally. We have a live and wide awake set of officers; Louis L. Joerdn, James Scott, H. W. Brunkhorst and Chas. E. Smith, respectively. The little boy of Mr. and Sr. Coonce, Aaron Bernard, of Tunnell Hill, Ill., was blessed Sunday, July 13th, by the writer and W. C. Carl.

Since writing last we have been highly favored by the visits of Elders J. W. Rushton, Carmichael, Dowker, Sparling and Hale W. Smith. The latter stayed over a week during which time we enjoyed the privilege of his services. A dream of his childhood, was literally fulfilled in our presence. When sixteen years of age, sixteen years ago, he dreamed that Geo. W. Vandel (then a boy at school) introduced him to an audience as the speaker of the hour. Bro. Vandel now an elder, was in charge when Bro. Hale came, and introduced him to the saints, fulfilling the dream. Another testimony he bore, before going on a mission to the west, after prayer his father (our esteemed Prophet) warned him of danger ahead and admonished him to heed the impressions of the Spirit. Before reaching his destination he was impressed to get off the train, which he did. The train was wrecked, and a number killed in the car which he occupied.

We enjoy the visits of our passing brethren.

WICHITA Kans., June 26.

Editor Ensign—As it has been over a year since anything has been written from these parts to your valuable paper, and believing that some would like to hear how the work is going on here will say; the undersigned last June 1912, took a chart and with the help of Bro. and Sr. J. N. Madden now in Pittsburg, and a few other faithful saints, went out upon the streets and started to sound the good news. And surely it must have been good news, for after we were there a night or two we could see many of the same faces there drinking in the word of God and desiring more. We had an attendance of from 50 to 150 people every night.

You could hear the people say, "Now that is what I like to hear." "That man preaches the Bible," but a few others said, "Not so, they are Mormons," and other remarks. (The old, old story, you know,—does any good thing come out of Nazareth?) We had several arguments and we feel that we came out safe as ninety per cent of the people were with us.

We were on the street a week when Bro. J. Arthur Davis, and R. F. Slye came and helped us for a week. Then they left and the writer continued for two weeks longer. Then after a week's rest Bro. Slye returned and we took up the work for three more weeks. The result was Bro. Slye baptized a sister now in Iowa and later I baptized Bro. Samuel Moss, who heard Bro. Pender (now deceased) preach seventeen years ago up in the northern part of the state. Since then I was called to Iuka and baptized two faithful people now living in Okla., Bro. and Sr. Chance, and three others shortly after, here in the city.

While last Sunday we had the pleasure of baptizing the oldest son of Bro. and Sr. McDivitt, our worthy deacon, and Bro. Charles and Sr. Minnie Truman, all of which the branch can feel proud of. The last two belonged to the Baptist church. Bro. Truman was blessed when a baby, his father being a member of the church and died when he (Charles) was nine years old. They lived near Lannon, Iowa.

Last December the writer preached seventeen sermons at the shops where he and Bro. Truman labor together, and it was the first sermon by a Latter Day Saint minister the brother had heard since a boy. This shows how much more all Latter Day Saints should have their children blessed, and not put it off.

Monday the 23rd, we put up the district tent in the north part of town and the people are coming and most all are blessed with our message. But if we do not get help we will not be able to keep the interest going. But we will do all we can and trust the Lord to bring in the harvest.

Will close for fear I will take up too much space, and become wearysome.

In gospel bonds,

E. L. Barraclough.

SHOALS, Ind., July 18.

Dear Ensign—It will be two weeks tomorrow since the writer returned to his field of labor, having been absent for three months on account of sickness. Am glad to be able to say that I am well and enjoying my work again. The last six weeks of his sickness the writer spent at the Independence Sanitarium, and truly was made to feel that God is with his people there, and is blessing them. In their prayer-meetings at the Sanitarium they often enjoy the gift of prophecy and the Lord speaks words of comfort and cheer to the sick and afflicted, and many receive the blessing of being healed. The writer feels grateful to the kind Father for the few weeks spent at the Sanitarium, as he was not only relieved of the affliction while there, but was greatly blessed spiritually, and the Lord was very near unto him during the sickness, feels that he was there for a purpose, for a schooling, and hopes to profit thereby. My desire is to make use of every lesson I learn and profit by every experience I pass through.

My next stop in the field was Littles, Indiana, where the writer has preached several times in the last two years, and baptized some last summer, but on account of sickness and being a busy time, did not have much of an interest this time, so only preached a few nights. Also preached one night at Oatsville. Was then called to Bickwell to administer to a Sister Lemen, and left her much improved. I then came to this place and started meetings on last Sunday, and have been having a good interest. Am holding the meetings in Solomon Shoaf's yard, which we have sealed, and we have quite a large crowd out most every night. This Bro. Shoaf has just moved here lately from Petersburg. He heard me and also others preach at Littles, Indiana, in the last two years and so had sent for me to come and baptize him, which was attended to on last Sunday. Bro. Shoaf is a very promising young man; he no bad habits.

The Christian people are greatly stirred up and their pastor, Mr. G. Halleck Rowe, is looking for a "Rowe" and may get it. He had a long article in the News on "Mormonism" the next Sunday night. He said, "I will give an expose on the rottenness of Mormonism." We will be there Elder Rowe.

We do not to stir up contention, but do want to defend the "Truth." Wishing all the blessings of our kind Father in heaven upon all.

As ever in bonds,

Jacob G. Halb.

PLATTSMOUTH, Nebr., July 24.

Editor Ensign—There are many reasons why we should be grateful to God for his goodness and mercy, for there is so much good comes from his bounteous hand. True the summer has been hot and dry here in the Southern Nebraska District, yet the farmers are blessed with an abundant crop of first class wheat which they are able to put on the market in the very best condition. Corn is suffering some because of the extended drought, and if rain does not come soon some fields of corn will yield but little, though there are some fields of corn that appear to be in first class condition notwithstanding the dry weather. I never saw corn at this season of the year look better than it did in Iowa when I was at home the first of the present month. They had a good rain there since any fell in these parts.

Since coming into this district I have labored at Nebraska City, South Auburn, Lincoln, Wilber and Plattsmouth, and have found the saints very kind indeed. They have kindly supplied my needs and have shown every kindness that a traveling minister could reasonably expect, and the writer appreciates their goodness and thanks them for their kindness.

The saints at Lincoln are at a great disadvantage owing to the fact that they have no church in which to hold their services, and are under the necessity of hiring a hall, which can only be occupied at stated times, which makes it next to impossible to hold a series of meetings; and if it were possible to hold a series of services the expense would be too great for the few saints residing there. However, they are making a commendable effort to keep the truth before the people. While at Lincoln, June the 8th, Elder J. G. Munsell baptized seven into the church, and the writer had charge of the services and assisted in the confirmation services.

The late district conference that was held at Lincoln from the 18th to the 20th including the Sunday school and Religio conventions were quite good, all things being considered. During these meetings the saints served dinners and suppers in a room at the back or rear of the hall, which made it very convenient and pleasant for conference visitors, and the social features of these meetings, or rather the social times had by the saints during the intermissions were indeed very pleasant and profitable to all.

The few saints at South Auburn did well in their efforts to attend services, and care for the minister, and their kindness is remembered and appreciated.

I was treated more loyally since being in the mission field than I was while at Nebraska City and Wilber, and the saints were very attentive to the preached word at both places. "It is good to be a saint in latter days."

Of course I was a stranger when I came into the district the 12th of last May, but that soon wears off when one labors among the saints, for we all have on the same uniform, robes of righteousness. At least we all accept the same Christ, believe the same gospel, and are all members of the body of Christ, and we are one in faith and practice to a large degree, though we may not all see eye to eye on every point as yet. However, we are laboring to attain that development, and feel that we must succeed in the Lord's time, if we heed his counsels.

I called at Elmwood the 21st, and found a few saints, and was royally entertained, though it was thought that conditions at present were not favorable for holding services, and the writer's sojourn was of necessity short, though we are thinking of going back later in the season.

I called to this place the 22nd, and am holding cottage services at the home of Bro. Jesse Baldwin, and am enjoying the hospitality of his excellent family.

In bonds,

Charles E. Butterworth.

TRAYER, Mo., July 21.

Dear Ensign—I have been engaged in the gospel field since the first of May. In my laboring among the saints of Southern Missouri I find many who are willing to do all they can to assist the work, and to help me from one place to another. I think my labor among them has helped to build them up in the work. I have been an instrument in the hands of the Lord in bringing some into the kingdom. I have made some new openings in this field where some have been waiting to hear the old Jerusalem gospel for more than two years. I have made some good friends. Have made three new openings this month, and have more new calls. I preached last Sunday at a new place and had just dismissed the meeting and gotten outside of the church when I was asked to preach them another sermon. I rested about fifteen minutes and then preached in a grove for about one hour and a half, having the best of attention. So the good work goes on. I have left quite a few near the kingdom.

I would like to hear from all of the missionaries in the Southern Missouri District, also branch presidents.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

Elder J. F. Cunningham.

MACHIAS, Maine, July 18.

Dear Ensign—I left my home in Independence, Mo., June 24th, stopping in Chicago over Sunday, the 29th; spoke for them three times and conferred two that Elder Henry Kier had baptized. The good Spirit was present with us all day. I stayed in Boston a couple of days and by boat I went to Rockland, Maine, visiting saints two days, and then to Vinal Haven and preached three times on Sunday, July 6th, ministered the sacrament and listened to some faithful testimonies. Leaving there I went to Bar Harbor, the great summer resort. I spoke three times there with excellent liberty, found the few saints there alive in the work. I arrived here the 11th, and on Sunday, the 13th, we met with the dear saints. The house was very well filled with interested listeners. I am billed for tonight, making three sermons this week. I will be here over Sunday, and expect to visit Jonesport, the Beals, and Head Harbor Islands. Several told me they would obey the gospel. I am feeling well and hopeful.

Elder J. C. Foss.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Walter W. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., July 23.—Gospel work moves along nicely. Two vacation schools, Saints' Church average 331 last week. Beacon Light Chapel average 199. Good interest. Baptized ten last week and more near the water. Had fine visit from Bro. U. W. Greene, Sunday. Best wishes for the ENSIGN.

Alma J. Shell, Pensacola, Fla., in a business letter says he has located there and expresses a desire that if there are any Saints living near there that they will call and see him. He orders epistles and says that he finds that by having one of these little leaflets in his pocket it is much easier to defend the faith.

J. H. Poe, writing from Seligman, Mo., says he would be pleased if some elder would come down there on the "Roaring River" and preach for them, that the ENSIGN contains all the preaching he hears, and that the Reorganized Church is not known there. He lives on R. F. D. 4.

E. B. Hull, Brooklyn, N. Y., July 26.—We are trying to reach the honest in heart in this section through the children. Last month we instituted a service for children, in which objects are used to illustrate moral and religious truths. Many of the grown-ups are interested and attend the children's service. We have hope for future developments.

Nannie Myers, Claudell, N. M.—I ask the prayers of the saints that I may be faithful to the end, and that God may give me more of his Spirit to guide me in the way of right that I may have a better understanding and have strength to bear all the persecutions. I am the only saint here and there is much opposition. What I would do without the church papers I do not know. O how I have prayed to God that my husband might see the light.

Mrs. Emma Basquin, Masonville, Iowa.—The church papers are all the preaching I have and they are of great comfort to me. I am still trying to live the best I can, and thank God for the many blessings I have received. I know this gospel is true. I am letting my neighbors read the church papers and I pray God that some may see the light.

"LET GO."

"Hold fast," that splendid motto, has many battles won, When linked with noble purpose to earn the world's "well done";

But one of equal import for all shrewd men to know Is when to quit and have the grit to then and there "Let Go!"

Have you lost your coigne of vantage, have you slipped into a rut,

Its no disgrace to change your base before the wires are cut; It bespeaks the wily general to outwit a stubborn foe— Don't stand your ground when you have found 'twill pay you to let go.

Are all your business dealings based upon the Golden Rule, Or do you hold its precepts up to keepest ridicule?

You'll surely never prosper with a life built on that plan; Let go what can not help you and cling to that which can.

Have you formed some hurtful habit? is it wrecking your good health?

Do you feel its coils are tightening as it robs you of life's wealth?

Its demands will grow much stronger, till at last it will unman.

Let go what can not help you and cling to that which can.

Do suave and boom companions encompass you about Who sneer and jeer each time they hear a word that is devout?

Then heed this timely warning, and, in spite of clique or clan,

Let go what can not help you and cling to that which can.

From coarse and vulgar language do you zealously refrain, Or do you give an evil tongue a loose, unbridled reign?

Reverse the boon of human speech—God's special gift to man—

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

BY ELDER W. R. SMITH.

In Matthew 24:3, we have three questions asked the Master by his disciples: "Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"

It is evident to my mind that the Master had been teaching them in regard to these things or they would never have asked those questions.

We notice that he had not only taught them of his second coming and the end of the world, but also of the destruction of the temple, city, and the chosen people of God. And if his statements concerning the destruction of the temple, city, and people were literally fulfilled we may expect his statements concerning his second coming and the end of the world to be literally fulfilled also.

When the Master looked down upon that wonderful city and saw what they must evidently suffer for their wickedness, he said:

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold your house is left unto you desolate."—Matt. 23:37,38.

Again he says:

"And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."—Luke 21:24.

"There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down."—Matt. 24:2.

The above prophecies were directed to the downfall of Israel and the destruction of the city and temple, which the Jews thought would be a matter of impossibility. Nevertheless it came true just the same. Jesus said, "And now I have told you before it came to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe."—John 14:29. Jesus told us what would come to pass, and now history comes along and tells us that the very things which he said would come, did come to pass. That Titus the Roman general led his army against Jerusalem and after battering down the walls marched his army into the city where many had fallen by famine, and destroyed many with the sword, and many were taken captive and scattered among the different nations of the earth becoming a hiss and a by word throughout the world.

When Titus had done all this, which seems would have satisfied anyone, yet he vengeance was not satisfied, so he ordered the temple to be literally demolished.

Now it is easy for the religious world to believe the above, but when we talk of Christ's second coming and the end of the world, they scoff at the idea, fulfilling the statement of the Apostle Peter when he said:

"Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."—2 Peter 3:3,4.

Thus in their blind zeal to condemn this work, they go right ahead fulfilling the prophecies recorded against them. Blinded by the priestcrafts of men, not able to see the signs that surround them on every hand.

Let us notice some of the signs which Jesus said would take place before his second coming and the end of the world. He said: "Take heed that no man deceive you."—Matt. 24:4. Take heed—look around you from every view point, see the condition of the religious world. "For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many."—Matt. 24:5. What! deceive the people when they come in his name? How could it be possible?

The Master came from the courts of glory to do the will of his Father, and he said:

"My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself."—John 7:16,17.

The same thought is expressed in John 12:49,50, also John 14:1. When Jesus came he held a commission, a commandment from his Father to teach to the people, and he said, "And I know that his commandment is life everlasting."—John 12:50. He sent his disciples out to teach the same doctrine, with the same commission, the same commandment to the people, that through obedience to this doctrine they might have life everlasting, declaring that,

"If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love."—John 15:10.

Again he said:

"He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me."—John 13:20.

Christ did abide in the love of his Father by keeping his commandments. We may abide in his love by keeping his commandments, and if we fail to keep his commandments we will be like the Pharisees and lawyers who rejected the counsel of God against themselves (Luke 7:30); we shall stand condemned. Christ did not reject the counsel of God but obeyed it. (Matt. 3:13-17). Then when he sent his disciples out to teach the people he said:

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved and he that believeth not shall be damned, and these signs shall follow them that believe."—Mark 16:15-18.

Peter said on the day of Pentecost, to those enquiring souls:

"Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2:38.

Teaching the same doctrine which Christ taught. No deception then,—but abiding in the doctrine of Christ. Paul said to the Hebrew saints, that the principles of the doctrine are, faith, repentance, baptisms, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment.—Heb. 6:1,2.

Now the same writer said to the Galatian saints:

"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man, for I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ."—Gal. 1:8,11,12.

So, for anyone to come and teach contrary to the doctrine taught by Christ and the apostles, and get people to believe that it would save them in the kingdom of God, would be deceiving the people, and Christ said such would be the case. That many would come in his name and deceive the people before the end of time. He said:

"Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. And he said unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition."—Mark 7:9.

The same thought is expressed by the Savior in Matthew 15:7-9. In this way they deceive the people, come, claiming that Christ has called them to preach the gospel, then instead of preaching the gospel, they lay aside the commandments of God and teach their own traditions, the commandments of men.

The teaching of the Master harmonizes so nicely with the teaching of Paul to Timothy when in speaking of the last days he said:

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away."—2 Timothy 3:1-5.

Let us notice a few points in the above to show that we are living in the very time as spoken of by Paul.

"Perilous times shall come." Are we living in perilous times? Look around you, take up your daily papers and read of the calamities on every hand. Surely no one should be so blind but what they can see the condition of, not only the religious world, but the social and political as well. The conditions are terrible; no one knows what to do to better them.

Are there any who seem to care for no one but themselves? "Lovers of themselves?" Are there any boasters and proud? Look around you and see. If there are it is evident that we are living in the last days, just before the end of time.

"Disobedient to parents." Is not that true? Sometimes when preaching upon this subject I ask the people, "Are the children of today as obedient as they were forty years ago?" And invariably the old people of the congregation will begin to shake their heads. That is evidence that they know the conditions have attained that Paul spoke of.

"Without natural affection." Oh! the condition of the world today and especially the United States! Professor Charles Ellwood in a lecture on the divorce evil to the students of sociology of the University of Missouri as reported in the Kansas City Star, April 25th, said that the number of divorces granted in the United States in 1905 were, sixty-eight thousand, an average of one divorce for every twelve marriages. In France the rate is one divorce in every thirty marriages. In Germany one divorce in every forty-four marriages. In Switzerland, one divorce to every twenty-two marriages.

In England, one divorce to every four hundred marriages.

The state of Washington has the highest rate in the United States, one divorce to each five marriages; Oregon and Montana, one to every five and a half marriages; Texas, Arkansas, Kansas, and Missouri, one to every eight marriages; Kansas City, one divorce to each four marriages; San Francisco, one divorce to each three marriages.

Surely Paul was looking at our day when he said, "Without natural affection."

"Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." We find that that condition exists today. We go into a community, get out an appointment for preaching and probably a half dozen or a dozen will greet us; but let a little slight of hand show come along and advertise for a show and the house will be filled till there will not be standing room. Seeking for the pleasures of the world.

"Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." That applies directly to those deceivers whom Christ said would come, teach the people that God has sent them to preach his gospel and then deny the gifts and blessings which Christ said should follow them that believe, and which Paul said was given to every man.

So we cannot fail to see who the deceivers are, something about one thousand different denominations and no two preaching the same. It might be possible that all are wrong, but it is impossible for all to be right.

"Wars and rumors of wars." Christ said this would be one of the signs of his second coming and the end of the world. Was there ever a time in the annals of history in which there were more wars and rumors of wars than there are at the present time? Surely these are no uncertain sounds.

"Famines, pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places." These are to be more prevalent as we draw nearer the end of time. I can remember when a failure in crops was scarcely known. When men planted their corn in the spring, they could figure pretty closely what they would gather in in the fall. And when they sowed their wheat in the fall they could figure closely the amount they would gather into the granary. But not so today, there are failures on every hand. Let us notice a few statistics about famines.

"In 1867 and 1878 England and France suffered terribly from famine; Germany, Eastern Prussia, Algiers and Russia were in a similar condition, at one time fully 100,000 Arabs perished, Persia has been nearly annihilated by famine and pestilence, 400 Indians perished from hunger in Quebec, November, 1893. India was visited by famine in 1865 which took away fully 1,000,000, and in 1868 1,500,000 starved. It was visited again 1876, . . . and in 1877 500,000 more perished; not less than 2,000,000 died from famine in 1878."—Voice of Warning.

In November, 1911, 8,000,000 in Russia were suffering from famine. Christ said there would be famine before the end of time; and surely there has been since the ushering in of the gospel in this dispensation.

Now about earthquakes.

"Since 1860 earthquakes have been more frequent, widespread and terrible; thundering more common and frightful; lightnings more fearful, terrific and disastrous; and tempests, tornadoes, cyclones and whirlwinds have been more prevalent and destructive than ever known before in the same length of time. These facts are beyond successful contradiction."—Ibid.

"In October, 1864, in India the waves of the sea were driven inland by a cyclone, and many thousand lives lost and many million dollars worth of property was destroyed."—Ibid.

"On October 31, 1876, in the same region [India] a cyclone drove the waters of the sea over some of the most populous districts, destroying two hundred and fifteen thousand human lives, with an immense amount of property. In 1867 at the Island of St. Thomas, the waves rose sixty or seventy feet higher than common, and heaved themselves beyond their bounds, carrying upon their crest a United States war steamer, and leaving it high and dry on land. In 1868 at the Sandwich Islands, the waves rose fifty or sixty feet higher than was their wont, and heaved themselves beyond their bounds, washing away a number of little coast towns, destroying life and property. In August of the same year, occurred the great tidal wave, which beat along the Pacific Coast from the bay of San Francisco on the north, to Cape Horn on the south. At the bay of Valparaiso, and other contiguous seaports, the waves rose fifty to seventy feet higher than usual, tearing the shipping loose from its anchorage in many places, and bearing the larger vessels in upon dry land, destroying a great many lives and millions of dollars worth of property, and up to the present time, tidal waves, with the sea heaving, its waters beyond their bounds, are frequent and appalling."—Ibid.

"We mention in particular the tidal waves at St. Thomas and the neighboring islands, which were full fifty feet in height. . . . Those who witnessed these waves say that the Ocean's roar was exceedingly frightful."—New York Tribune, Nov. 12, 1868.

The above quotations are in fulfillment of the statement of the Lord in Luke 21:25, where he says,

"The sea and the waves roaring." Also in Doctrine and Covenants 1:4, where he says:

"Wherefore I the Lord knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world.

"And after your testimony, cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground, and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunders, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea, leaving themselves beyond their bounds."—D. C. 85:25.

Surely what Christ said would come to pass, history says has come to pass. Who can doubt it?

Surely we are living in the latter days, just before his second coming and the end of the world.

Jesus says, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."—Matt. 24:14. What gospel? The one that he and the apostles were then preaching; and we believe that after the great apostasy as pointed out in the Scriptures of divine truth, that that same old Jerusalem gospel was brought back to earth by the hand of an angel as spoken of in Revelation 14:6,7. The Savior says, "Therefore be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."—Matt. 24:44.

Now we will not set the day nor the hour, no, not even the year; for we understand that no man is to know that time, not even the angels in heaven. But while we will not know the exact time, we will understand the signs of the time if we will only study and improve the opportunity given to us.

May God help each one to see that the time is short; the end is nigh at hand when Christ will be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels. And when he comes in his glory, and sits upon the throne of his glory, may we have so wrought and overcome that we may sit with him in his throne and reign with him during the thousand years' reign here upon this earth, and then enter in through the gate into the city and ever be with him.

ON THE TRAINING OF CHILDREN.

MINNIE WARNOCK.

There has been so much written on this subject, such varying ideas and methods set forth, that the seekers after the better way are ofttime confused.

Whether to follow the teachings of modern specialists, or whether to be guided by ones own wit, wisdom or family traditions, or again whether to seek the divine instruction that has come down from old, is the great question which confronts the parents of today. Latter Day Saints are zealous seekers after the old paths. Where gospel principles are concerned, they will not tolerate the human hand print.

"It is written," is the slogan of their warfare. Now in this great and important work of child training, why should they not exercise the same care in searching for divine wisdom and guidance?

SUBMISSION AND OBEDIENCE.

There runs like a golden thread through all the Scriptural references concerning children, the one thought, the great desideratum, that they should be kept in a state of complete submission and obedience, and this condition to be established in their earliest childhood by the help of the rod. There is no other way indicated.

THE ROD OF CORRECTION.

The rod is defined as meaning a sprout, a shoot, a twig or several of them bound together; something that would smart or sting, but not injure the body.

Some people (God only knows how many) have interpreted it as meaning anything that was loose and near at hand when their blood was up, and thus by their cruelty have brought into disrepute the effective yet harmless, the Scriptural and God-ordained, instrument of correction, the rod.

PARENTS AND CHILDREN OF THE LAST DAYS.

The Scriptures show plainly that parents would be remiss in their duties, they would let their children grow up in stubbornness. From Isaiah we quote these sayings:

"And babes shall rule over them."

"The child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient."

"And as for my people, children are their oppressors."

Paulspeaks of them as "disobedient to parents" and "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God."

Now the inevitable question arises:—How do Latter Day Saints' children measure up?

In 1831, the Lord said, "And their children are also growing up in wickedness." Two years later he rebuked four of the leading men of the church because they had not taught their children "light and truth" and had not set their houses in order. We quote as follows; "And see that they are more diligent and concerned at home, and pray always or they shall be removed out of their place." "What I say unto one I say unto all." In sec. 28, par. 13, speaking of the condition of children as to sin, the Lord says, "For it is given unto them even as I will according to mine own pleasure, that great things may be required at the hands of their fathers."

This shows that the Lord requires the moral and spiritual training of the child to be done by the fathers, and presumably the mothers at home. The very earliest preparation is necessary to keep him in a humble and receptive state of mind, that the later planting of gospel truths may be effectual. He should be guarded against the insidious growth of stubbornness. It takes so little to check it at the start. Many children are spoiled during the first two or three years of their lives. As babes they are fondled and petted and used as playthings, thus developing their egotism and exaggerating their self-importance. Many parents with emotional, excitable natures, allow their affectionate-doting to run riot to the detriment of their offspring. Babies are patted and bounced and trotted and tossed. Their tender nerves and ears are assailed by what is to them a noisy gibberish. Their little faces and lips too often kissed by those far too unclean and unwholesome for such pure contact. Doubtless many a helpless innocent has been "loved to death."

The pitiful wail of a nervous baby should pierce the heart of its parents or caretakers with a message like this; "I am so tender and helpless. Handle me carefully and only when necessary. Give me pure air, cleanliness, proper nourishment, room, quiet, and a chance to develop normally. Do not talk to me until I invite conversation." Most parents need to cultivate self-restraint. Parental love should be like deep, pure, flowing water, free from all foam or frothiness.

When parents awake from their day-dreams and find their faultless babe has grown into a spoiled wilful child, they feel helpless before the situation.

They discover that it is no small matter to run counter to his will. It is a very disagreeable and disturbing affair, ofttimes to the neighbors as well as themselves, so they decide not to cross him very much, but to be very patient and wait for him to outgrow his willfulness. "He is too young now; when he gets older and can understand better he will be all right." Under this delusion they settle down to a long and hopeless wait.

They look to the Sunday school for help, and are willing for it to take up the work of their child's moral and spiritual training. Thus another burden is laid on the Sunday school and church, to teach the untaught, to rule the unruly, to control the rebellious, to entertain the restless and discontented, and all with very limited time and opportunity. This expenditure of vital energy on the part of the church's self-sacrificing workers is made necessary, almost wholly so, by the weakness, carelessness, ignorance, or neglect of parents in not teaching their children meekness and obedience. They would have found in the following sayings

HELPFUL INSTRUCTION.

"He that spareth his rod hateth his son, but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes." Prov. 13:24.

"Chasten thy son while there is hope and let not thy soul spare for his crying." Prov. 19:18.

"Withhold not correction from thy child; for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die." Prov. 23:13.

"Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell." Prov. 23:14.

"The rod of reproof giveth wisdom, but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame." Prov. 14:15.

"Correct thy son and he shall give thee rest; yea he shall give delight to thy soul." Prov. 29:17.

"He that loveth his son causeth him oft to feel the rod, that he may have joy of him in the end." Ecclesiastes (Apocrypha) 30:1.

"He that chasteneth his son shall have joy of him among his acquaintance." Ecc. 30:2.

"He that maketh too much of his son shall bind up his wounds; and his bowels shall be troubled at every cry." Ecc. 30:17.

"An horse not broken becometh headstrong, and a child left to himself will be willful." Ecc. 30:8.

"Cocker thy child and he shall make thee afraid; play with him and he will bring thee to heaviness." Ecc. 30:9.

"Laugh not with him, lest thou have sorrow with him, and lest thou gnash thy teeth in the end." Ecc. 30:10.

"Give him no liberties in his youth and wink not at his follies." Ecc. 30:11.

"Bow down his neck while he is young, and beat him on the sides while he is a child lest he wax stubborn, and be disobedient unto thee and so bring sorrow unto thine heart." Ecc. 30:12.

"Chastise thy son and hold him to labor, lest his lewd behavior be an offence unto thee." Ecc. 30:13.

ANCIENT ISRAEL'S WAY.

The Israelites were not permitted to cover up the sins of their stubborn and rebellious children, and let them run at large corrupting the moral and manners of other children. If after they had chastened them and they were still rebellious and would not hearken, they were brought before the elders of their city. And the elders proceeded to do that which made all Israel take notice and fear. Of course such drastic measures could not be enforced in this age, nevertheless modern Israel should be just as anxious and concerned in putting away evil from their midst.

Parents should enlist the interest, sympathy, and influence of God-ordained priests and teachers in their serious difficulties with the older children, not stopping till every avenue of the church which offered assistance had been traversed. If all this should prove ineffectual, then the juvenile court holds out the helping hand. In this way parents of evilly disposed children do all in their power to reclaim them and at the same time safeguard their neighbor's children against possible contamination from such source. A new version of the great commandment might be given as follows: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor's children as thine own."

Some parents seem never to miss an opportunity to scold, threaten, or browbeat their children. A perfect harangue of abuse often accompanies the chastisement. This either arouses the combativeness of the child or breaks down his self-respect. A calm statement, or a few words of explanation would be a better prelude to the chastening, leaving the lecture, if one is necessary, to a later and more favorable time. Too much talk is confusing. Action speaks louder than words to the child mind.

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT.

When the army of children are gathered together at Sunday school, on children's day and other special occasions, one is greatly impressed with the beautiful sight. One also marvels at the generalship of the superintendent and his associate workers in holding them in good order. It takes tactful, watchful, resourceful, experienced and energetic workers to accomplish this feat. Veteran Sunday school workers can show the scars of many a battle.

THE IDEAL SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Sabbath is the rallying day for the young and old at the house of the Lord. Could all the blessed throng of children come as lambs, lambs of the fold in every deed; meek, obedient, easily entreated, rejoicing in light and truth, filled with the Spirit, what a place of joy and peace the Sunday school would be; to what heights of glory it would soon attain. And then at the children's prayer meetings, what an out-pouring of blessings there would be.

The presiding officers would not have to plead in vain for them to arise and praise God.

Surely this is not too high an ideal for saints of the Most High!

This condition must obtain sooner or later, Why not sooner?

Church and Sunday school workers though able and willing to lead the army on to victory, cannot move faster than the parents make it possible for them to move.

So let us gird on our armor a little tighter, forget our past failures and sorrows, and with renewed courage and zeal, work for the redemption of our children, our children's children and our neighbor's children.

"Thus saith the Lord, stand ye in the ways and see and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest to your souls.—Jeremiah 16:16.

THE WORK OF THE BISHOP'S OFFICE.

BY ELDER M. H. SIEGFRIED, COUNSELOR TO BISHOP BULLARD OF THE INDEPENDENCE STAKE.

This statement is addressed more particularly to those who are not acquainted with the workings of the office than to those who are accustomed to being in the bishop's office and knowing what is done and the lines of work attempted.

According to the provisions of the law as contained in the book of Doctrine and Covenants, the bishopric, to be complete, should consist of a bishop, and two counselors chosen from among the elders or high priests.

TEACH THE LAW.

One of the first duties of the Bishopric is to see that the people are left without excuse as to an understanding of their duties as touching the law pertaining to temporalities. That is, they should teach the law of tithing, consecration, surplus, free-will offerings, etc. This must be done before much else can be done; for what the bishopric may do thereafter, depends very largely on the freedom with which the people comply with the law.

It may be well to say that the opportunity for teaching the law does not alone depend upon the privileges of the pulpit. In fact, the private conversation, both in the office and in the homes of the individuals, is a very successful way to educate the people. Many people daily neglect to do what they have been taught, not willfully, but neglectfully. They should educate and train their own consciences to be wide awake to the duties imposed by the law. In other words, people must learn to reverence God's holy law.

ACCOUNTING-REPORTING.

It is fair to say that the people who contribute funds for the church work as outlined in the standard books of the church, have a just right to know that the money thus contributed is spent in the proper way and not diverted into foreign channels or an unjust distribution made of it. In order that they may be given this knowledge, a just and true account must be kept and should be open for examination at all times.

It is required of us here (Independence Stake) to report fully to the first stake conference held following January 1, when our annual report is made to the presiding bishop from whom it goes to the Herald for publication. In this report all items of receipt and expenditure are given. To make a report requires that a set of books be kept, especially adapted to this work.

MISSIONARIES FAMILIES.

Of necessity and of right, the families of those who are in the missionary field, should be cared for by the church. These missionaries, after stating to the Quorum of Twelve, about what they think they will need for the support of their families, monthly, during the year, have a just right to expect that it shall be forthcoming and somewhere near monthly as agreed upon. Of course, if the people who should support the treasury do not sense the necessity of complying with the law, it may be that these families will not be supplied as they should. But here is the work of the bishopric which has the supplying of these families. They should see that the funds given into their hands for this and other lawful purposes, are conserved for those purposes and it should not be lost sight of in the press of other matters.

A list of these families is furnished the local Bishops by the presiding bishop shortly after each general conference, and it then becomes the duty of these local bishops, to do their full duty in seeing that these families do not go in want for that for which they have been engaged by the church.

THE POOR

Aside from supplying the needs of the missionaries' families, there are many who come to the office for assistance or aid. It very often becomes the duty of the bishopric to decide who are and who are not worthy poor, for there are some unworthy poor as well as some unworthy rich. It is a solemn fact that the interests of the church as well as the well-being of the individuals must be looked after. And it is not only folly to promiscuously dispense charity, but it is absolutely an injustice to give to the unworthy from the tithes and offerings often paid by those sacrificing the comforts of life. While it is no pleasant task, it becomes necessary to stand between righteousness and unrighteousness and decide which is which. The bishopric must, therefore, be judges, standing between the church, as a church, and the individuals who come claiming aid. However, it is the object of the church through this department, to feed the poor, clothe the widows, and house the orphans.

This is a fundamental object for which the church is laboring.

COURTS.

Aside from deciding matters pertaining to worthiness as to receiving from the coffers of the church the Bishopric forms a court to try cases coming before them in their territory, arising from the misconduct of members of the church. These cases are brought before them with the view of getting at the right and wrong of the matter, justly; and of protecting the church from the stigma of evil doing by members of the church, and of also protecting the individual against any danger of hasty prosecution by members or officers of the church. This is no pleasant task and it is much worse when life-long friends and members of the church come to disagree over some petty affair and call for a court of the church to settle that which they should have been willing and anxious to have settled themselves.

ADVICE-WRITING

Many saints are writing and coming here, since this is one of the gathering places for Zion. The advice given to the saints from time to time, as well as the instruction to "have all things prepared before hand," gives rise to the necessity for some one to attend to giving advice and counseling with them ere they come. All do not ask counsel before they come. This the stake bishopric endeavor to do, assisting men in finding employment, telling them of the conditions and opportunities for work along their particular line so far as they are acquainted,—helping them to rent houses, if they want to rent' purchase if they desire to purchase, secure a loan if they have to have one. In fact, our object is to give advice concerning the general conditions which surround saints who "come to Zion," so they may know what to expect when they get here. This department might be made a wonderfully fruitful department of our work, and we trust it may be by a thorough, systematic organization, conducted in the interests of those who need help in finding employment. (This is not intended to make any one feel dependent upon this department; not to lead, but to assist.)

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS-INVENTORIES.

In connection with the judgeship of the bishopric the filing of the inventory cannot be overlooked. Each member of the church resident in the stake is expected to file an inventory ("lay all things before the bishop") with the bishopric; and then the party filing and the bishop shall decide as to the amount of tithing or consecration which may be paid to the church, and in case of a disagreement the matter shall be laid before the high council. A true inventory will contain a record of all assets and liabilities at the time it is filed, for without this it will be impossible to ascertain the amount of tithing, etc, due the church. The taking and keeping of these inventories requires considerable work, limited only by the number who diligently comply with the law. After the inventory has been filed, to properly keep the matter before the office, an annual statement should be made, which adds to the work of the office, about which this paper is written.

STUDY.

It should not be forgotten that men to do their work any where near up to the standard, should not be burdened with office details all the time; but they should have time to study that they may become more useful to the office and more efficient servants of the people and the church. They must study. They must not only be acquainted with the laws and ordinances of the church, but they must be diligent in the study of ways and means for the carrying out of the law. This is an important part of their work, too often neglected. No one can be a successful servant in this line of work who does not study, and who is not diligent. The office (the building in which the work is done) should be a place of work and service, and not a place for persons to visit and occupy the time of those who are there, simply because they are too polite to invite the visitor who stays too long to leave. They are there to do the work of the office, and if their time is taken with visiting, how can the work be done, and how can they devise ways of doing more work, and better? This is a day when men are needed who will work and labor, as well as pray and sacrifice.

"THE DIGNITY OF HOME."

One night I awoke and this is what was being said to me: "Preside over your plain simple home, gracefully and well. Make no excuses, or slighting remarks. Those who do not like it, let them keep their distance."

What a revelation indeed this was to me! I had never looked at my home in that light before, but had often said we had no home, it couldn't be called a home, just a place to stay, and invariably made excuses to visitors or callers feeling keenly the lack of those things I thought were required to constitute a home, and have even made slighting remarks about our condition; this more to our immediate family, though. When the Lord in such a kind, gentle, and delicate way, showed me my mistakes, and called this "Place to stay" "your plain simple home."

Oh! how I realize as never before that the grace and dignity, that should surround and prevail over each home, be it ever so humble, is far superior and far more adorning than all the fine furniture and clothing one could possess. Both are nice, desirable, and good, if possessed in wisdom, and not in haughty, arrogant pride, which is not the definition of grace or dignity. Grace and dignity, in our homes, I think, means the proper respect and reverence for this divine institution, each other, and the Lord. If one must be lacking let it be the luxuries rather than the grace and dignity that should surround each home.

RESOLVED THAT THE PRESENT DAY MANNER OF DRESS IS IMMORAL IN ITS EFFECTS UPON HUMANITY.

Synopsis of a debate before the Independence Home and Child Welfare department.

THE AFFIRMATIVE.

"It seems that this is a form of degeneracy that woman has entered into; that she must seek to impress her individuality upon the world through her clothes. Time was, when the feminine charms of woman were her intellect, her manners, her refinement. Now, it seems that it has turned into a bold display of physical charms,—that which is not meant for the eyes of men.

"The resolution is a large one because it involves the motives of women, and who shall be the judge? Who shall say the motives of women are to attract attention to her physical charms? None of us would like to do that, but we know that no women of true refinement is ever seen in the present extreme styles of dress. Therefore when we see women that are naturally the morals are called into question, and oftentimes undoubtedly, they are called into question because of the improper dress of innocent women.

"Our morals influence our dress, and the higher our standard, the more particular will we be as to our manner of dress.

"We are living in an age of sensuality. If we knew of a man who had a tendency to strong drink, we would not parade him up and down before a saloon to reform him, neither should we put temptation in his face by our manner of dress, where he must come in contact with women every day, hundreds and thousands of them, as he passes up and down the street; constantly that temptation is before him. Is it proper for women to do that? Do we have the thought in mind that we are our brother's keeper? Will we become tempters?

"Women hold largely the moral standard of the nation in their own hands, and as far as being members of the church, we should make an effort that our dress, our manner, should conform to that which we believe will be pleasing to our Master. Speaking of dress, one Book of Mormon writer says, "They were neat and comely," and it seems that that covers the ground and with all the graciousness of woman's nature, that should be the attractiveness of woman, that we should not look to the carnal and study so much of the physical being as we should that of mind and manner."

These extremes of dress are the outgrowth of immoral thought. They are fashioned in Paris for women of "the underworld." Many innocent women and girls copy these styles, but they also must be subject to the consequences—unfavorable comment in private or in public, even to insults; (And our mothers have always taught us that a lady would seldom, at least, be made the subject of insult) When girls dress and not modestly and seek their associates accordingly,—they will not attract discourtesies.

"There is a great tendency on the part of young girls today, to follow unthinkingly, just what they see. Again, there isn't any young girl who does not feel somewhat left out at times, because she sees other people attracting attention. All of us have been girls and we know well enough that we have passed through that period. There is a tendency to be like them, in order that we may share favors as they do. Of course if a girl is very carefully brought up, her mother may tell her from the beginning, just what this means, but if not, that girl is very likely to copy just what she sees; she wants the favors and there is where the danger lies. And there is where our girls innocently, so often go down. Not our girls as a church, but girls of today. We ought to seriously consider this and we ought to teach our children that the people who attract the most attention are not always the kind of people to copy.

"It is true that some men seem to find it a great struggle to keep themselves straight under certain conditions. We have not much sympathy for them, but since it seems to be the truth, and as long as these things exist, then we ought to be very careful about what we do."

"The morality of our country is largely in the hands of women; what effects women effects man, and the higher her standard of morals, the higher is the standard of morals of men, while woman is called the weaker vessel, yet she does influence morality to a great extent."

THE NEGATIVE.

Because of the diseased minds of men and their false education—passions have been aroused; lust has grown rampant. Statistics prove that there is more morality among the heathen than among us, a civilized people. They are true to their companions and have not their eyes always full of lust,—this thing that is condemned in both the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. And until we get at the root of the thing, we will never in the world wipe it out.

"We must bear in mind that our ideas of right and wrong, of morality and immorality and of proper and improper are largely influenced by that which we can see as customary. Years ago in the days of our grandmothers, the styles were just as tight as they are now, close fitting, the necks as low, the sleeves as short, but immorality was not as prevalent as it is today. When the styles came in those days, they came to stay awhile,—a year or two, or possibly three or with no limit; but today what is in style this spring is out of style this fall, or nearly so; so that we have something new for us all the time to attract our attention and to arouse our curiosity, always something new."

Surely the "lax home conditions" are responsible for these things. "Modesty is not taught in the homes of today like it used to be." "Our girls today do things innocently and unconsciously that girls years ago would not think of doing."

"Today our children are sent away from home for almost every bit of instruction. True, we have places outside of our homes where instruction possibly can be given better than we can do it in our homes; still that does not relieve the mothers of their duty. A mother should be as near her child as possible, so that there would be that feeling—"Mother knows what is proper, mother knows what is right; ask mother and she can tell you; she knows how to do that and the other thing, instead of taking some one else's word for every thing.

"Today, girls to a large extent never think of asking their mothers how their clothes should be made, because possibly mother is a little old style to their notion. Now if girls were trained so that their mothers never became old styles to their ideas, perhaps the mothers would have a little more influence in the selection of clothes than they do have.

"These tight fitting skirts have only been worn about two or three years possibly, and if we could read statistics we would not find that immorality has grown in larger proportions within the last three years, say, than it has in the last number of years. So we must come to the conclusion that dress is more an outgrowth of immoral thought than that immoral thought is the outgrowth of dress. If the women of today would select styles that are becoming to their figures, much of this criticism would be alleviated. Just because some one else wears them, others think they can, when it may be altogether out of question.

"The women of today can select certain good features from the styles of today—not the extreme styles—and be well dressed, probably better dressed than they would have been a few years ago. The skirts do not have to have yards and yards of material in them, they do not need to be skin tight; merely hung loosely without being full.

Then we have the loose arm holes now that are certainly very comfortable, and in glancing through the fashion sheets, these exceedingly low necks are not displayed there; you see just the comfortable round necks that are not to be criticized in anyone."

But remember this, that in dressing your children—you place on them little dresses, very low in the neck, very short in the skirt, and almost no sleeves, containing the same styles as they grow up and up; and then when older they want to continue using these cool, comfortable easy made dresses,—they cause all this trouble.

When men's minds become normal, the lust in their eyes will decrease, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The exchange of immoral, vulgar stories between parents, or men, or women, will not help the situation, but may be considered one serious cause of the difficulty. The extreme dress of today is but the outgrowth of immoral thought; the human form is not immoral.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT OF THE EASTERN MAINE DISTRICT.

The Saints and friends of the Eastern Maine District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:

Please take notice that upon the removal of Bro. J. A. Koehler from the district and action of the district conference of the Eastern Maine District recommending for bishop's agent Mr. Newman M. Wilson of Jonesport, Maine, that Bro. Wilson has been duly appointed bishop's agent in and for said district.

We take pleasure in presenting the name of Bro. Wilson for the work of agent in the Eastern Maine District and hope that the Saints and friends throughout the district may earnestly assist him in his work. Also special thanks of the Bishopric is tendered to Bro. Cushman who has been acting as the agent since the departure from the district of Bro. J. A. Koehler, and the Bishopric is also pleased to be able to tender its thanks to Bro. Koehler for his good work while in the district. For the help received from each of these parties we trust the Lord may bless and help each one so they may be better able to overcome.

Trusting that from the earnest efforts of each member and friend of the district to help along Bro. Wilson in his financial work, great good may accrue to the Lord's work in spreading the truth among the people of the district, I am in behalf of the Bishopric,

Very truly and respectfully,

E. L. Kelley,
Presiding Bishop.

Independence, Mo., July 25, 1913.

NOTICE TO SAINTS OF SPRING RIVER, CENTRAL AND EASTERN OKLAHOMA DISTRICTS.

To the Saints of the Spring River, Central and Eastern Oklahoma Districts:—

I desire to call attention to the very important matter,— "The Call" of the Presiding Bishopric as set forth in the Herald and Ensign of July 9th, relating to the securing of funds for the purpose of meeting the urgent demands of the indebtedness of the church now upon us, also to solicit your hasty and hearty co-operation, thus giving the greatly needed relief to this arm of our work and service.

This is a small matter if we will lay hold of it with commendable faith, zeal, and courage, and are long moneys that have gone out to interest account, will be going to the families of our missionaries, who often have been compelled to patiently wait and the father and husband in the field to wonder and hesitate.

Let us move forward, though for the present moment it may seem a sacrifice, but are we not living in a day of sacrifice?

The amounts to be raised by the above named districts are as follows:—Spring River, $2400.00; Central Oklahoma, $850.00; Eastern Oklahoma, $800.00, and the amount should not seem burdensome, although there are children and doubtless some others who will not be able to assist, therefore let your donations be liberal so that the amount apportioned may be reached early.

All who can and will assist should pay in your donations to your branch agent, who will receipts you as special donation; however, when not convenient, remittance can be made direct to me, stating "Special donation." All agents in remitting be careful to give full name of donor and purpose for which donation is made. Should any desire to assist and cannot do so until September or October let me have your name and amount, but trust that all who can possibly do so, will send in their money at once.

Your Brother and co-laborer.

Ellis Short,

Bishop of above named districts.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

There will be a two days' meeting at California, Mich., August 9th and 10th, and at Sparta, Mich., August 23d and 24th. Bro. G. A. Smith and C. F. Ellis expect to be in attendance. A good representation of saints is desired. Come for a spiritual feast.

W. P. Buckley, Dist. Sec.

NOTICE TO HIGH PRIESTS.

To the High Priests, Greeting:—This is to give official notice that in the near future we expect to mail to each member of the quorum a copy of our 1913 High Priest Annual to the last known address; should it fail to reach you within a reasonable time after this notice shall appear, please write for a copy, furnishing your present address, and another copy will be mailed to you.

Your fellow servant,

Rob't M. Elvin, Sec.

Lamoni, Iowa, July 28, 1913.

NOTICE TO SAINTS OF SPOKANE DISTRICT.

To the Saints of the Spokane District, Greeting:—Without the burden of quoting Scripture to convert Saints to the need of the Lord's work, we will state frankly that we are in need of money to supply the elders' families who are laboring under conference appointment. The burden of the missionaries is sufficient without having to worry about their family's support; the hungry must be fed, they can't wait, so we ask you to send in the Lord's portion so the needy can be supplied. Never mind the close times; this is a day of doing things and the Lord can turn and overturn our good. Let us remember a tenth is the Lord's and he has waited most too long on some of us for a more convenient time. The Lord has recently said, the time will come when his servants of the bishopric, local and general, will not need to beg the members to fulfill their duty, but their time will be occupied in caring for that which shall be willingly and readily brought into the treasury of his house. Saints let us hasten this time by works before it is too late on our part.

Your co-laborer,

W. W. Fordham.

S. 238 Haven St., Spokane, Wash., July 26, 1913.

EDITORIAL

THE GOOD GROUND.

The central thought of the parable of the sower deals with the character of the soil upon which the seed falls. In the interpretation of this parable as given by Christ in Matthew 13:18-23 the seed is made to represent the "word of the kingdom," and the several kinds of ground represent the several conditions of character of men to whose ears the words come. The inanimate earth may not be itself responsible for its condition whether stony or otherwise, but what of the human heart? Is its possessor responsible for its condition, and if so, to what extent?

On one occasion the Lord upbraided the apostles for their unbelief and hardness of heart; they had not believed others of the saints who had testified that the Lord had risen. The offering of evidence which safely establishes a truth obligates the hearer to believe, and should he refuse to do so, he is sinning against himself, against light and truth, and against God; in other words he is hardening his heart, for a rejection of the truth once, renders the hearer less susceptible to its reception on a later occasion.

On another occasion when Christ was instructing his disciples, they utterly failed to understand the import of his words. He warned them against the leaven of the Pharisees, and they thought he was reproving them for not having brought bread to eat. But Jesus said: "why reason ye, because ye have no bread? perceive ye not yet neither understand? have ye your heart yet hardened? having eyes see ye not? and having ears hear ye not? . . . How is it that ye do not understand?"

A lack of faith, or possibly a lack of full obedience, hindered their perception; they could not understand; the word did not accomplish its purpose because the ground of their hearts was not in perfect condition.

From these instances it is apparent that man is not only able, but is required by the Lord to determine the attitude and nature of his heart, and to keep it in that condition that it will be prepared to receive any truth that may come to it, and so appropriate it for a still greater development.

It is a principle of agronomy that if the soil is to produce matured and full yield harvest it must have within it the essential elements by which the vegetation grows. Poor soil may not even sprout the seeds, or should it do so, would not be able to feed them to maturity. There must be rich elements upon which the seeds and plants may feed. The growth and final harvest is dependent upon the richness of the soil.

So the nurturing and developing of the seeds of divine truth in men's lives is dependent upon the richness of their lives. Loyalty to right and truth enriches them. Rejecting these principles and walking in in evil's ways impoverishes the soil in which God seeks to plant his truth. The ground is too hard for the seed to penetrate.

The Lord through Zechariah told Israel how they might prepare their hearts to receive and nourish his truth: "Execute true judgment, and show mercy and compassions every man to his brother. And oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor, and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart." But by refusing to do these things they "stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the Lord of hosts hath sent in his Spirit." (Zech. 7.)

Cornelius, whose life was full of good deeds, alms and prayers, was a recipient of divine truth, and it was evidently on account of the worthiness of his life that God chose him to be the first-fruits of the Gentiles. A life of righteousness brings one into closer harmony with the divine nature regardless of what his profession may be, and quickens his power of perceiving truth and right.

The gospel scarcely found lodgement within the Jewish national life. The record of the Jews had been one of perversity; they observed traditional forms while working iniquity; they appeared to be good while within they were full of corruption, and they were in no condition to receive the truth. Not many individuals did the Lord find who were "without guile."

As the sowing of seed upon the ground tests or proves the character of the soil, so the sowing of the gospel seed tests and proves the character of men. So also as a wise handling of the soil in the growing of crops will enrich it, so the growth of divine truth in one's life will bring enrichment of character. Israel's character was impoverished and little opportunity was offered for the development of the kingdom which Christ planted in their midst and hence a more fruitful soil was sought for among the Gentiles.

The sowing of the gospel seed today tests the character of men's hearts. People who have disregarded the plea of the distressed, and have maintained injustice, or have wrought evil designs against their fellow men, and conspired to their undoing, have rendered their hearts and minds less susceptible to the principles of mercy, justice, and brotherly love, and it is not strange that the divine message fails to reach such.

The doing of righteousness and justice opens the gates of the soul to the light and truth of God. "He that receiveth light, to him shall be given more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day," is the promise of the Lord, and it is also said that "he that receiveth not the light, from him shall be taken even the light which he has received." This is a natural law. The eye that is never opened to the sunlight will not develop the power to see, or the eye that has seen, should it for long time be removed from the light, may lose that power.

A fruitful soil for the plantings of the divine hand is only established and maintained by receiving and doing the things of truth and right. The extent of the harvest is unlimited.

SHALL HE FIND FAITH ON THE EARTH?

According to Professor Preserved Smith who writes in Hibbert Journal, liberal scholars generally recognize that considerable portions of the gospels, (Matthew, Mark, Luke and John) are unhistoric. One author holds that the fourth gospel is a purely speculative work. Since Strauss it has been the fashion to disregard the miracles. Very many scholars also reject the stories of the infancy of Christ. In like manner the professor argues that the account of the incarnation, death, and resurrection of Jesus is a myth brought into the Christian teachings by the Apostle Paul, and states that this is a growing opinion among scholars.

The trend of the times seems to be more and more away from Christ and the simple vital facts of his life and death. While the historical books of the New Testament are not written with the same care that an experienced historian of modern times would write, yet we find in them a simple, straightforward relation of what may safely be accepted as facts, given by simple-minded men. To reject these simple facts is to reject the testimony of the whole Bible, for the entire Old Testament with its sacrifices, symbolic ceremonies, and prophecies, point to the coming of the Son of God in the flesh, his death and resurrection by which is to be brought about the resurrection of all men.

Latter Day Saints are doubly confirmed in their belief of these things through an acceptance of the historical record of the Book of Mormon which so directly confirms the New Testament account of Christ's death and resurrection. While they have historical support in that book, the history of both is further confirmed by the statements of revelation which have come to the church of Jesus Christ in modern times.

The latter books, we know, are not accepted by the world generally, especially by that class of learned men who do not accept the teachings of the New Testament, but since there is perfect agreement between them and the Bible upon every vital point, and both tend to maintain the integrity and truthfulness of the Bible, there is at least one good reason for accepting them.

The professor urges that the several writers of the New Testament were influenced by the teachings of Paul, who, coming into the church later, brought in those peculiar claims of Christ's crucifixion and resurrection, and he makes considerable argument to show his position plausible. But no such criticism can be brought against the Book of Mormon writers who wrote upon the western continent, giving historical evidence of Christ's crucifixion and resurrection. Free from every form of old world influence they wrote their own story in their own way, as simply perhaps as the Palestinian writers but none the less direct and positive. "The Lord hath not left himself without witness."

HIGHEST POINT.

Three French balloonists recently attained a height of nearly 33,000 feet, or over six miles. Extreme cold was found and the air was so rarified that only by the use of an oxygen breathing apparatus was life sustained. The highest point previously reached was 28,200 feet in 1878 when three men went up in a balloon, two of whom died from suffocation due to lack of oxygen before reaching earth again three hours later. The third was resuscitated. How many are sacrificing and striving for the highest point in character? No danger of suffocating up there.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 12.
ORGANIZATION.

The Reorganized Church has an extensive organization based upon the revelations given to the church in conjunction with the Bible. More than an outline statement cannot be given here, but it will be sufficient to show the general form and nature of the organization.

The church was organized April 6, 1830, but it must be understood that this organization was not complete, consisting as it did of only six members. But prior to this date the revelation directing the organization had made provision for apostles and other officers which could not have been had at the original organization, but must be added from time to time as the growth of numbers, and the qualifications of men, with other circumstances, might render practicable and necessary.

It is true that some of the officers were not provided for until subsequently to the organization, but in each instance provision was made by revelation before the need for such officer became pressing, and before the wisdom of man would have thought of them.

As to personnel the organization consists of (1) A first presidency composed of three men, one of whom having been designated of God, and elected by the church, presides over it, and is also sustained as a prophet; the two others also designated by revelation and approved by the church, acting as his personal supporters or counselors, the three forming the presiding quorum of the church. The important affairs are dealt with by this presidency as a quorum, each member having equal power as to voice and vote.

(2) The twelve apostles are appointed by revelation and approved by the church, and form a quorum having specific duties, the quorum as a whole having equal authority and power as the

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Sunday forenoon Bishop Richard Bullard was the speaker. His remarks were embodied in an appeal to the Saints in behalf of the financial affairs of the church. It was not in the nature of a "whipping," but was kindly spoken, and was embraced in sound and logical reasoning and no doubt will be fruitful of good results. He read from the last revelation that part regarding financial affairs wherein the Saints are admonished to avoid unnecessary expenditures for houses of worship or places of entertainment, and both in public and private carry out the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants, the principal object being that the church indebtedness might be liquidated, or that part of it that is most necessary. The speaker stated that the proportion due from the Independence Branch on the general church debt necessary to raise now is approximately $2600, or an average of a little over one dollar apiece. There are many who can pay little or nothing, so each one should pay according to their ability. At the close of Bro. Bullard's talk Bishop Kelley made a few appropriate remarks and explanations.

At the morning service the choir rendered an exceptionally fine anthem. Every one seemed to feel the same inspiration in the composition and its rendition. Pres. Harrington was very visibly affected. Such an anthem will bear a frequent repetition.

In the evening Elder E. L. Henson of the missionary force was the speaker. He reviewed the fall of man and the restoration brought about by the shedding of Christ's blood through the merits of the gospel, or the obedience of the principles or ordinances thereof.

The sacrament meeting in the afternoon in two divisions was an exceptionally good one. Testimonies followed in such close succession that there was no time for singing, and only one verse was sung during the time taken for testimonies, and that was by request of presiding officer. There were no riding of hobbies, no criticisms and no sermonizing or long experiences told.

At the branch business meeting Monday night one was removed by letter and thirteen received on letters and baptismal certificates. Some matters involving the expenditure of hundreds of dollars were considered—some three hundred and twenty dollars for insurance and two or three hundred dollars for toilet rooms. The committee on steam heating plant had done some work, but were not able to give any definite report.

The Walnut Park Mission is progressing nicely under the leadership of Bro. Welton Wood. There was an attendance of 57 at Sunday school. That is good. Bro. John Lentell preached in the forenoon and Bro. Harry Smith at night. The sacrament meeting was a very spiritual one and there were over 50 in attendance. Good work is being accomplished at this little mission.

There was a sad occurrence Sunday evening at the home of Sr. John E. Lewis. While Sr. Lewis was at church one of the boys, aged about 14, accidentally shot himself with a small rifle. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the residence on S. Spring Street.

Last Friday Miss Chappell, superintendent of the daily vocation Bible school in Kansas City, and Miss Bright of Swojet settlement, visited the vacation school at the Stone church and were greatly pleased with the advancement and the way the school was being conducted. The attendance on that day was 309, the enrollment being 370.

Bro. John Zahnd was put in charge of the Englewood Mission about three months ago. He reports that the attendance at both church services and Sunday school has been doubled in that time. Also two services each week have been added. Now there is preaching in the forenoon as well as evening and prayer-meeting on Wed-^{nes}day evenings. Social meeting is held Sunday evening preceding the preaching service. All meetings are well attended.

The tent meetings continue on South Liberty Street. The interest there is such that it is thought best to continue. Bro. Harrington requested the Saints to not attend on Sunday evening, or at least not many, because the tent would be filled with outsiders.

Dr. (Bro.) Charles Keown, lately of Chicago, has located here and has offices with Dr. Luff, and is living at 1401 W. Short St., in Bro. G. E. Harrington's house. Bro. Harrington is building on the Electric line between Short and Walnut streets, just east of Bro. Bierline's residence.

Elder A. V. Closson left last Thursday evening for his missionary field in the Pittsburgh, Pa., District.

In his lecture at the Kansas City chautauqua Sunday night Senator Frank J. Cannon said some pretty hard things about the "Mormons." According to newspaper reports he said that it was his belief that there is more polygamy in the Mormon church today than ever in the history of that institution. He was asked if there was any difference between the U ah church and the Reorganized church. He said the Reorganized church was law-abiding and did not believe in polygamy, but he said he could not agree with it in theology, because he did not believe in putting any man between himself and Christ. He certainly ought to know that the Reorganized church places no one between its members and Christ as a mediator.

Judge James H. Slover died at his home on N. Spring St., Sunday evening, and his funeral services were held at the First Presbyterian Church, Tuesday forenoon, all the courts and county offices being closed for the day in respect for the dead judge. Among other compliments expressed by Judge Latsch concerning Judge Slover he said: "Every man, woman and child about Independence knew him and he knew them. It was difficult to hold a cohesive conversation with him while walking on the public square of his home town, because he was continually smiling and nodding to his many friends." The Independence Examiner said of him: "The sweetness of his temperament, the purity of his character as an individual and as a judge, and the kindness and courtesy which invariably marked his life have endeared him to the community to the extent enjoyed by few if by any other man." In a recent article we made mention of a visit to him in which we explained the work of the Priests and Teachers in our church, when he expressed great commendation for such work. Judge Slover was a man whom it was a pleasure to meet. He had a smile and a kind word for all, for the rich and poor, man, woman or child.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Sunday School convened at 9:30 a. m. with Bro. Dilles superintendent in charge. There was an attendance of 280, and collections of $5.60. Preaching at 11 o'clock a. m. by branch president, Bro. H. W. Gould. The thoughts presented were gleaned from the statements made by Christ to his disciples concerning his coming, and the end of the world. With a feeling of inspiration the speaker gave a very interesting talk and all present felt that they were among those who should be on the lookout that they may not be found asleep, when the call of the Master is made. The saints were admonished to be more in harmony with the teaching of the books, for in so doing, they would observe the word of wisdom, and be blessed of the Savior.

The prayer-meeting at 2:30 p. m. was well attended, it being sacrament day. The basement was well filled, and all seemed to be partakers of the Spirit of God, which was present. At 8 o'clock p. m. preaching by Apostle J. F. Curtis, to a very good audience. The closest attention was given the speaker. His humorous manner of delivery kept the congregation awake, and he held their attention to the finish, until finally, he said if the clock did not stop he would, and he did.

Monday evening was regular business meeting, and the business of the branch was attended to with dispatch, and all went home feeling better, after agreeing to settle the debts of the branch, and also the apportionment of the general church debts. A general good time is expected by reason of the zeal manifested by those enlisting in the effort.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., FIRST BRANCH.

The social given by the young ladies of class No. 10 of the Sunday school was a success socially and financially. The young ladies carried out their arrangements splendidly, and cleared a nice little sum for the piano fund. The willing spirit of helpfulness manifested by these lassies, none of them over fifteen years of age, is truly commendable.

On Wednesday afternoon, the 23rd, two more were added by baptism to the colony of Saints at Elwood.

For the past two Sundays we have had to hold all services in the basement of the church. This has caused some little discomfort and inconvenience but we have submitted to it cheerfully and uncomplainingly. The Ladies Aid Society recognizing the pressing need of a new carpet or a new floor in the auditorium decided to assume the responsibility of laying the floor and providing runners for all the isles. Everybody who could do so was invited to come to the church on a set day for a general housecleaning bout. There was a generous response to this invitation and the result is a clean auditorium. Two of the most industrious scrubbers were Bro. B. J. and W. W. Scott, who were a whole host in themselves. We believe by next Sunday the rejuvenated room will be ready for use.

Saturday and Sunday, 26th and 27th, Bro. Arch McCord and C. P. Faul of Stewartville conducted a two days' meeting here. Bro. McCord spoke Saturday evening to a good sized and attentive audience.

Sunday morning Bro. J. A. Gunsolley gave a characteristic talk to the Sunday school and also delivered an interesting sermon at eleven o'clock, to which the closest attention was given. Bro. Gunsolley's wide experience in various lines of church work makes him an able exponent of his subjects. In the evening bishop's agent, Chas. F. Paul addressed those assembled on temporalities. We hope everybody experienced a waking up along these lines, and we know some did.

The Religion is still actively pushing ahead. The Social Committee has arranged a picnic for Tuesday evening, the 5th, at the park. These little gatherings are pleasant and certainly promote sociality.

Sunday, August 3, was Cradle Roll promotion day in the Sunday school. Sixteen little tots were promoted to the Beginner's grade, with appropriate exercises. As we looked upon the little darlings in their innocence and purity we offered up a silent prayer that God would preserve them from the contaminating influence of the world. The eleven o'clock sermon was by Elder R. Etzenhouser and was a fine comprehensive talk.

At six o'clock the regular monthly observance of sacrament service took place. This occasion is one of deep solemnity, and is one in which every one of the members of the branch, able to do so, should participate. Spiritual life depends upon it.

Bro. B. J. Scott was the evening speaker and truly edified us by his earnest, well chosen words. Bro. B. J. also at seven o'clock performed the sacred rite that united in marriage our esteemed young Bro. Evan Price Hopkins to Miss Edith Burnham, an estimable young lady whom we hope will feel so at home with us that she will soon be one with us.

Bro. Chas. Morton, of the Wyatt Park Mission, has removed with his family to Kingston. The family will be greatly missed by the mission.

One more embryo preacher has arrived at the home of Bro. Coventry Archibald. Five boys—what a power for good in the world they can become.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

Our Sunday school is growing under the supervision of the new officers. In the last six months the school has grown from 55 to 115. The interest is spreading, the children are taking a hold, and a goodly number of outside children are attending. The children in two weeks collected $25.00 in nickles and dimes to apply on the church debt. The officers are as follows: I. L. Bear, superintendent; P. K. Gist, assistant superintendent; Lucile Erler, secretary; C. R. Smith, treasurer; Fredio Erler, chorister; Ethel Hutchens, organist.

Bro. Pickering and Pierce have moved the big tent from Elwood to South St. Joseph, and every indication is that there will be a great good accomplished here. We are giving them our support. Our prayers are very active. This is a rare opportunity for the young members to occupy.

Our branch is in a prosperous condition. We are having good meetings and large attendance. On Sunday evening, July 20th, Bro. W. W. Scott of the First Branch spoke to a good sized audience, Bro. Bear, our president, being at Cameron, Mo. In the morning Bro. I. M. Gore was the speaker.

C. R. Smith.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

The city pulpit was occupied Sunday by Elder G. J. Waller and Bishop Parkin respectively, with an extra attendance and interest. The Sunday school and Religion were up to the standard. Bro. C. A. Parkin spent Sunday at Monterey in church work. He found Bro. Trotter in very poor health from a paralytic stroke. Bro. R. L. Holt lives there.

Preparations are completed for a good reunion from first class preachers and cooks over to the stake driver. No efforts have been spared to have all things prepared beforehand. Don't forget the time and place—August 15-24, at Irvington—get certificates.

News from the tent work at Lodi are to the effect that they are having a good hearing which is encouraging. Bro. Stead and Reiste are doing well their part.

Bro. James H. Mills, son of D. S. Mills of blessed memory, with his wife, formerly Sr. Henrietta Waller, are up from their southern home, Los Alamos, for a visit with her home folks, Bro. G. J. Waller and family.

Bro. C. W. Deuel and Chas. Cady are doing gospel work in Pacific Grove where lives a scattered few of our people.

The Oakland pulpit was occupied Sunday night by Bro. Waller, the morning by the pastor. The interest in the auxiliaries is quite lively and resulting in much good.

HOLDEN BRANCH

First Sunday in July, we were permitted to hear Bro. A. H. Parsons who, with his wife, was here visiting father and mother.

At the Religion July 3 the annual election of officers was held, and now the care of the Religion is in the hands of Sr. J. W. Layton, president, Thos. Barton, vice president, Alma Burroughs secretary and treasurer.

The infant son of Bro. and Sr. Dave Allen was blessed by Bro. Scarcliff and B. Thompson and named Ivan M.

July 13 the Stake Sunday School and Religion held an institute, and many good thoughts were presented.

We feel to rejoice that our deacon, Bro. Charles Hayer, is improving. He has been very sick and the doctor gave little hopes for his recovery. Only to God be the praise.

On the 26th Mr. P. J. McWhitney, was called home. Funeral on the 28th. M. H. Bond, an old friend and school mate preached the funeral sermon to a large crowd of Saints and outsiders.

As Saints we have been wandering around, not knowing what to do, for three weeks. The church doors were barred against us, as repairs were being made. Now the interior looks very much improved. Sunday, Aug. 3rd, Saints were made glad to again worship in the church, the morning hour being occupied by Bro. C. E. Hand and evening by Bro. J. Moler, the afternoon hour was devoted to praise and prayer and the administration of the sacrament.

We are experiencing a very severe drought, making it very hard on man and beast, and there has also been three fires during the last week.

THE ROUND TABLE.

To what extent may a minister of the church entertain views contrary to the commonly accepted principles of the church, and still retain his commission?

It is difficult to say. Each individual case, should any arise, would of necessity be determined on its merits, either by the courts of the church or the appointing councils. If a man held the fundamental principles in harmony with the church, and so taught them, but held conflicting views on some other points which he did not press upon his hearers, he might safely aid in the work of the ministry. Should his views and teachings be very much out of harmony with the doctrine of the church, he ought not to desire to represent the church before the world.

What is the meaning of the statement: "For the husband is the head of the wife?"—Eph. 5:23.

Paul says in this connection "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God. Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the church; and he is the Savior of the body." The teachings of the apostle here show that the submission he urges is mutual, while recognizing the husband as the head of the family, which is proper. So far as this teaching goes the wife's submission is required only in that which is right, "as unto the Lord," and no husband should assume the attitude of an arbitrary dictator over his wife or children. If he exercises his authority over his family as Christ does over the church, he will do it in love and righteousness, and with self-sacrifice, seeking its highest good.

What is the difference between the office of highpriest under law of Moses and the office of highpriest as held under the gospel? We are told in Doctrine and Covenants 83:4, that Moses and the high priesthood of Melchisedec were taken out of the midst of the children of Israel, yet the office of highpriest is spoken of as being among them long after that. If that office as held under the law belonged to the Aaronic Priesthood why was it not restored as a part of that priesthood in this dispensation?

The highpriesthood of the Aaronic order was confined upon Aaron and his sons to "be an everlasting priesthood throughout their generation," (Exod. 40:12-15; Num. 25:13.) This priesthood had the right of presidency over the Aaronic order as appears from the long history of Israel from Moses to Christ during which time, the Aaronic highpriests were the highest authority in religious matters. The Doctrine and Covenants in complete harmony with this "everlasting covenant" says, speaking of the office of bishop: "There remaineth hereafter in the due time of the Lord, other bishops to be set apart into the church to minister even according to the first; whereof they shall be high priests [of the Melchisedec Order] who are worthy, and they shall be appointed by the first presidency of the Melchisedec priesthood, except they be literal descendants of Aaron, and if they be literal descendants of Aaron, they have a legal right to the bishopric, if they are the firstborn among the sons of Aaron; for the firstborn holds the right of presidency over this priesthood and the keys or authority of the same. No man has a legal right to this office to hold the keys of this priesthood except he be a literal descendant and the firstborn of Aaron; but as a high priest of the Melchisedec priesthood has authority to officiate in all the lesser offices, he may officiate in the office of bishop when no literal descendant of Aaron can be found." 68:2. It is further stated in 104:8 that "the bishopric is the presidency of this priesthood and holds the keys and authority of the same," that is of the Aaronic priesthood. From these quotations it is apparent that the bishop of the Aaronic priesthood is of the same office as the high priest of that order under the law. The authority is in the church being restored when the priesthood was restored, but under the covenant only literal descendant may hold that office. So far in the Reorganized Church bishops have officiated by virtue of the Melchisedec priesthood which they hold, though whenever the Lord shall designate a literal descendant he will no doubt officiate as an Aaronic high priest.

CORRESPONDENCE

HEARNE, TEXAS, July 14, 1913.

Editor Ensign:—It has been said that "Silence is golden." Perhaps my silence and absence from your columns for months has furnished your readers with some of the "finest of the wheat."

I should have written sooner and reported my inability to respond to mission appointment by reason of financial conditions. But by private correspondents many, if not all, were informed. For four months I have been laboring at my trade, laying brick. Will very likely continue during the year. Any regrets or good wishes I might express would not change the financial conditions, either with myself or the church. It is a sad condition to report the church $75000 in debt. That does not, in my opinion, reflect good credit on the membership nor on the ministry. I include myself with others, and confess being careless in teaching the financial law. Humanity is a strange freak on the face of nature's production. We follow groves, traditions and fables; we float as if we are on the crest of the wave, and advance by the force of the breezes that blow.

There is a strong sentiment prevailing among most christian people that we are "Saved by grace, not by works, lest any man should boast." And because of this many church members are rejoicing in the delusion that no good works of theirs will count for their salvation, for "Jesus paid it all"—tithes and every thing else; "he made the sacrifice for me." The people whisper to themselves, and they bask in sweet repose, dreaming of the day when the angels will come with divine chariots and transport them to a never ending home around the great white throne. We should not be severe in blaming the mass of Christian folk because of this dream. They have been taught it for years and generations; and the preachers of Christianity are still at it. I have a special love for preachers—who will tell the gospel truth.

Public sentiment is a powerful factor in the government of human affairs. And it does not depend upon the right or wrong of the sentiment, just so it is public. Those we call Saints, are simply human, like others, and are subject to this force of human experience. But the saving gospel of Jesus Christ provides that we "be not conformed to this world." Fashion, pride and style, worldly pleasures, shows, etc, with numerous habits of evil is sapping the spiritual life from many church people, until the day-dreams of vanity and delusion like a speeding train are carrying us on to our desecry.

Like the debt of the College, the Lord speaks now and says the church debt of $75,000 should be paid. But who is going to pay it? Can we depend upon the membership of the church to pay this debt and at the same time keep up the running expenses of the church? There is no other visible resource. The membership must be depended upon, they cannot avoid it. The fulfillment of the Prophets of old was: "Will a man rob a man—yet ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings."

The church could not go into debt, the Bishop was morally obligated to the families of the ministry. Letters pouring into his chest, beseeching for financial help to sustain the wives and children of the men who labor to preach the gospel. What could the Bishop do but borrow the money until the church debt now confronts us?

Why? Simply because the Saints did not pay their tithing as they should. Some have been faithful and nobly aided in carrying the burden. While many others have failed. It is time now to awaken, to rally to the aid of the Bishop and be as God said you should be—co-workers together with him.

Last winter when I made my annual report and statement asking for an appointment for this year, and answering the question: "How much per month will you require for your family so you can spend your time in the mission field?" My answer was: "To live and get out of debt." That answer was the best I could suggest.

My experience has been like many of my brethren and like the church itself. I could not avoid going in debt. The high cost of living, payin; rent, etc., simply demanded an outlay of money over the amount received from the church. It is truthfully said that: "misery loves company." So you will please pardon me for the spark of enjoyment received when reading of the like experience of others, and of the church as a whole.

One struggling brother tried to correct conditions by explaining the difference between "cold facts and warm truth;" also by referring to a notable battle wherein some were "smitten before Ai." Then the appeals from the Bishop and his agents, together with the word of the Lord, all combined has not been sufficient seemingly, to arouse the Saints to faithful obedience to the financial law. As stated above, some have been faithful, and no doubt responded to the full demands of the law, while others have been careless and selfish with their increase, thus robbing God of His portion.

Scripture may at times have a two fold meaning or may be applied in various ways. For instance: "What measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." "Not every one who saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven;" "Blessed are they that do his commandments;" "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap;" "Faith without works is dead." "Will a man rob God?" The answer is clear and strong—"yes, he will rob God in tithes and offerings."

The ministry is also confronted with Scripture which may apply especially to him; "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." "And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred-fold, and shall inherit everlasting life." But,—while "all things are possible with God," all things are not possible with the ministry. The ministry are advised of the Lord to "take no thought for the morrow;" "Provide neither gold nor silver, nor brass in your purses, nor script for your journey. . . for the workman is worthy of his meat." Paul uses the following and applies it to the ministry. "For the Scriptures saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, the laborer is worthy of his reward." Also this: "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel."

I think it is good philosophy to say that one condition is dependent upon another. We have a sample of this in Rom. 10:13,14,15. "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then can they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how can they preach except they be sent?" Why of course! To be sure the Lord calls the preacher for "The harvest is great and the laborers are few." The church appoints him and the General Conference or Saints say, go! Then they write him letters to "come,"—"oh do come and hold a week's meeting, two weeks or a month, we will gladly furnish you a home while here, wash your clothes, pay your car fare, get you a new hat, new shoes and a fine suit of clothes; and over and above that we will love you for ever, just for the works sake; our neighbors and ourselves are hungering for the restored gospel." These appeals are touching; they are real live and every day experiences with the ministry. They come with good grace, with human kindness and divine necessities. It is almost impossible for the true servant of Christ to ignore or fail to respond. My heart yearns to respond; for having learned the way of life and the methods of receiving divine grace I know of the responsibility that rests upon the preacher who is called of God.

But I am not alone in this—this experience is not mine only; it is common no doubt to the faithful ones who have responded to the Lord's call and who has answered, "Here am I, and me."

Shall we plead the doctrine that the ministry should not marry—should not have a family? If not, shall we plead with modesty, grace and doctrine for the support of our loved ones while we leave them dependent upon the church? If the Bishop and his agents receive not the tithes, offerings and consecrations of the scattered Saints as well as those in the boarders of Zion, how can there be supplies to sustain the church and provide for the wife and children of the ministers. What else can we expect than to depend upon the church to sustain our family while we spend our time in the mission field? The gospel law provides for this. It requires tithing—one-tenth of the increase from all Saints—whether living in Zion, near her boarders, or in the remote corners of the earth. None are exempt from the law. It requires a sacrifice on the part of the Saints to pay their tithing—of course it is a sacrifice. What is sacrifice? It is self-denial. Jesus said: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." Self-denial and selfishness does not guide in the same direction. They are opposite in principle, opposite in power and effect. For Saints to continue in worldly ways, satisfying their lust for pleasure, worldly pride, abnormal appetites, for intoxicating liquors, tobacco, snuff and cigarettes; using the Lord's tenth for their own indulgence in amusements, park excursions, shows, etc., can not be reasoned as self-denial, but selfishness; and no one should be ignorant or unmindful of final results. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

These things I have referred to, the Lord of Heaven has mentioned in His word, and said to avoid them. Repentance is a part of the gospel law, so is self-denial. The financial question comes very near to each one of us. It is a great and living necessity. The ministry and membership alike have daily needs for finances. The gospel law provides that the ministry spending their time in the mission field shall be supported by the membership of the church—from tithing, free-will offerings and consecrations. The Scriptures so teach.

In the absence of tithing being received the Bishop can not supply the needs: The minister is bothered, for he is morally and divinely obligated by all law, human and divine, to be better than "an infidel."

Where is the people who would respect the preacher and receive his message as divine love, who had knowingly and willingly left his wife and children destitute, absolutely in need, with no visible resource for support? "Oh," we are told, "the Lord will provide." "We are saved by faith." "We walk by faith and not by sight." Furthermore the ministry are expected to maintain a high standard of faith, sacrifice, etc. Yes, that is true, and the membership are not excused from the high standard themselves, not one. I very joyfully accept the riches of faith—the gift of God; and with equal grace do I accept the riches or needs to pay the grocery bills, etc., at home—the gifts of the Saints of God. In harmony with the Apostle James I suggest the vanity of saying; "Go thy way, be thou warmed and filled," yet give nothing for the needy.

In conclusion I very respectfully state: That my apology is written. I was not able to respond to the appointment from the last General Conference to the Texas Central district, nor any other district, for reasons herein given. I count myself fortunate in having a trade that demands good wages. Many of the Saints, and no doubt several of the ministry have excused me and will compliment me for the present move in working at my trade, especially in consideration of the embarrassment of the general church and my own indebtedness. Well, I gently reply that it seemed absolutely necessary—unavoidable.

But, so far as the amount of my wages is concerned, and the amount of family allowance received during these past years of gospel labor I have known all the time, what I could make by bricklaying, that it would amount to two and three times as much as the allowance from the church. And from a human standpoint I would rather lay brick than to preach any kind of gospel. But I have not judged nor been influenced by human standpoints. My readings have not been from the archives of worldly pleasures and selfishness. If twenty years thus given to the ministry of this gospel, with struggling financial necessities at home, depriving myself, my wife and children of many necessities of life, (which I am sure they could have enjoyed had I worked at my trade), incurring an indebtedness of several hundred dollars—if I have not already practiced self-denial and sacrifice, then I will not need to return again to pliable childhood to learn the meaning of those words. I am therefore bold to vindicate myself for working at my trade, rather than to leave my family unsupported and labor in the church work. I have great regard and respect for the Bishop—do not blame him in the least for not supplying our "wants and needs." It was impossible for him to do so.

I would also have it understood that I have love, regard and respect for the Saints everywhere. But am not blind to their short comings, their failure to respond to the financial law of the gospel of Jesus Christ. The failure of others does not discourage me, it does effect me in a way. I am very determined to "go forward and not backward," to do every thing that I understand the law and the Lord requires; to make whatever sacrifice and self-denial is demanded by the law of right.

I rejoice, having good health glad to be able to work, am thankful that Providence has fixed it so that the man I work for cheerfully pays me seven dollars per day for my labor of eight hours. The present demand for bricklayers in Texas seems to be far more than the supply. It is a ripe harvest for men of my trade. The opportunity is favorable the church treasury is empty, ye more, seventy-five thousand dollars in debt! Those who think I am not justified in joining the knights of the trowel, please let me hear from you, I am anxious to know your name, "Silence gives consent." May peace, love and obedience prompt all to repentance which bringeth salvation to Israel.

Yours for progress,
R. M. Maloney.

Dear Ensign:—I was once a member of the Soul Sleeper Church but on seeing that it was not in harmony with the teachings of the Holy Scriptures I commenced investigation for the true way, and God in a miraculous way showed me this latter day work was his gospel, and I am so thankful to him for his revealing it to me for it is a glorious gospel. We are removed from the association of any of the saints and from church privileges, no saints here but myself and son. I would be so glad to have some gospel work done here but there are no chances for it now. We have never had but one sermon here by the true Latter Day Saints, but some by the Utah elders, and prejudice runs high.

Mrs Nancy Thorp.

OKETO, KANS., July 28.

Dear Ensign:—I thought perhaps you would appreciate a line from the dry state of Kansas. But yesterday the dry spell was broken in this part of the country, where they have had no rain to speak of, since the month of May. We had a heavy storm yesterday. Notwithstanding it was a busy day with me, I drove about fourteen miles, preached three sermons, baptized two, confirmed two, blessed three children, administered once and had charge of four services. I return to Blue Rapids, Tuesday, which is my objective point, where we are busy making arrangements for our reunion August 29th to Sept. 7th.

With kindest regards,
Joseph Arber.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

TRUE RELIGION

Sermon delivered at General Conference, Lamoni, Iowa, Sunday, April 20th, 1913, by Elder Paul M. Hanson.
REPORTED BY BELLE ROBINSON JAMES.

I wish to select a text from the first Epistle of John, the 5th chapter, 1st verse:

"Whoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God; and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him."

It makes a difference what one believes. The mission work of Christ to the world was to enable mankind to form a correct attitude toward the truth, toward God, toward their fellow-men and toward themselves. In the affairs of men responsibility is recognized everywhere. If a man robs, he is held accountable; if he is negligent, he may be held for crime from what ensues, for what he should have done or should not have done. The engineer in his cab is held responsible for the way he moves his train from station to station. Responsibility rests on the banker, the physician, the attorney-at-law; and for every one in society, responsibility exists and is recognized. Thoughts precede acts. Now as in the affairs of men responsibility is to be found, so also in the affairs of God responsibility rests upon men for the way that they move on in this world as respects their conduct in religious matters.

Now, as in the affairs of the world, one must think right to obtain desired results, to avoid the consequences of his acts, that is so far as paying a penalty therefor, and in order to avoid the dangers of violation of law, whether respects unsanitary conditions, carousal at night, the violating of the laws—any of them—governing health, so it is as respects the law given by Christ to the world. Christianity is not an arbitrary collection of laws; there is a logical reason for every word that Jesus spoke to the world, for every promise that he uttered, for every commandment that he promulgated, for every rite and ordinance that He gave or made obligatory upon the world.

One cannot feel the force of such utterances until one grasps something concerning the character of Christ, concerning his personality. Who was Christ? The only begotten son of God. There never was one before Him like Him; there has never been anyone like him subsequent to the time that He appeared on earth. One striking evidence of His divinity, one unanswerable argument to the fact that he was whom he was claimed to be! Now, if Jesus be the One whom he claimed to be, there is no ground for the belief that his teachings are now obsolete, all of them or any part of them. There is the great stumbling block of today—the claim that we have outgrown some of the teachings of the Savior of the world.

Christ appeared among men: we may depend upon the graphic and accurate reports of the New Testament concerning him. We are acquainted with the gracious words that fell from his lips—we are not lost to the great works that He accomplished, to the compassion that he manifested toward all, to the diseased and the poverty stricken ones, his message to the rich and to the poor, to the high and to the low, thus showing in every way divine functions. He lived on earth—we believe that, but he was a grander character than to have come and only lived from the time of his advent as a babe to his crucifixion upon the cross. There must be a greater and grander conception of Jesus than that.

Let me call your attention to the words that are found in the 1st Epistle of Peter, 3rd chapter and 19th verse; it is recorded that Christ was put to "death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit; by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah." To three words from that quotation I wish to direct your attention: he, referred to a personality, a personal being; went always used in reference to the action of a person; and preached, a term peculiarly identified in the Bible with the proclamation of the truth of the Gospel. "He went and preached." This is offered to indicate that Jesus, so far as the continuity of his life is concerned, lived on beyond the tomb and his work continued with him. We thus have become acquainted with the existence of Jesus on earth and after the dissolution of his body and spirit on the cross, and we find him active, the same unchangeable Christ, preaching to those that needed help.

Let me direct your attention to the Old Testament, to the book of Daniel, the 3rd chapter and 25th verse. After the three Hebrew children had been cast into the fiery furnace, Nebuchadnezzar, the King, who had had to do therewith, cried out, "Lo, I see four men loose walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God." There is an unambiguous reference in the Book of books, the Bible, to the existence in ancient times of the Son of God. There are more references to show that Jesus lived and took part in the affairs of humanity before he appeared in Bethlehem as a babe.

In the 1st Epistle to the Corinthians, the tenth chapter, beginning with the second verse, is an announcement concerning the Israelites: "And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ." Here is Christ in the time of the Israelites, they "drank of that spiritual rock"—that is the language—and "that rock was Christ."

This will give you an insight, I hope, into the universal character of Christ and his purposes, and if we can but understand the character of Christ, we will then form possibly, an attitude toward Christianity that we never before entertained. The viewpoint that Jesus does not possess divinity, that he was only an ordinary man, but an advanced thinker, paves the way for the forming of the idea that Christianity is sort of a religion of evolution, that is, from error to an advanced system, from ignorance to a belief in the Supreme Being.

I can see how if one entertains the idea that Christianity is not the law of life, is not a divine system of religion, I can see how that person may have an attitude toward the Almighty that will be in accordance with his religious belief. And according to one's belief in God, so will be his conduct religiously. I said that it makes a difference as to what one believes. So there is much to be lost or gained as the attitude is correctly formed concerning what Christianity really is.

Turn to the ages of the past. Go to the time when Abel under an impulse or by divine direction made an offering unto God. An acceptable offering. See the results that have been acted out in the world as result of the story of that part of Christianity; the faithfulness of Abel in his devotion to Christ toward whom his sacrifice pointed. It made a difference what Abel believed. He offered to God a sacrifice and it was acceptable. Cain did not make an offering that was acceptable; he did not have the kind of a belief that would lead him to do it. It made a difference between these two as to what they believed.

It has been a problem in the minds of some as to how the golden rule ever found a place among the Chinese, among the Persians, and also in what manner certain ordinances being a similarity to the ordinances of the Christian religion ever found a place among heathen peoples. Among them was the principle of sacrifice, but perverted, until it was practiced to the point of offering up human beings. I say it has been a problem in the minds of some earnest, honest-hearted religionists how the Golden Rule and certain ordinances had any existence among the heathen peoples before the coming of Jesus Christ to the world in person. And so when they have found that rule, when they have found the ordinances in a perverted form, and in the code of Hammurabi laws similar to the laws given later through Moses, they have concluded that these things developed gradually until Christ came and gathered what he had from all the conglomeration of theories before him, simply evolved advanced ideas from what he had gotten from his predecessors.

This must be corrected. In the beginning God revealed his will to men. Jesus came as an exponent of God, to give correct interpretation of God. Christianity is not a system of religion in the sense of springing from error and mysticism and ignorance and superstition up to the high point that it now occupies in the minds of many Christian people. It was divine from the start. It is divine now, and Christianity is today what it is nineteen hundred years ago and will ever be what it is today, and so I hold before you the thought of a living Christ, and that whoever believes in Jesus Christ is born of God is the announcement of the Apostle John.

So the thought, then, of a living Christ, opens up this question to gigantic proportions. You remember after his death, not only did he go and preach to the spirits in prison, after having been put to death in the flesh and quickened by the Spirit, but you remember he was seen by Paul, by Cephas, by the Twelve, and five hundred brethren at another time. There is the confirmed proof of the living character of Jesus Christ. He is your Savior of today, by the same means that he carried from God to the world in the "meridian of time" and was the Savior of the people then, and will be for evermore the kind of a Savior that he is today.

It is not only something that ought to be corrected as being a minor error, but it is a misrepresentation of Christianity, of Christ and God the Father, to advance the idea that some part of the Christian religion has become obsolete. Listen to the words that Jesus gave to the church in the final book of the New Testament. You will find this in the opening chapter of the book, the 18th verse. Listen! "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." This is an announcement given by Jesus Christ in another form from what it was given by one of the inspired writers, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever." "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore." There is no comparable God; there is no comparable Christ; there is no comparable Church. We cannot think of another God that we would put beside the Infinite God and make a comparison. We cannot think of someone that we could compare to Christ, thinking that in some way he would almost equal Him. That is true Christianity. It is true of the church.

This view, then, brings to us the thought, it being a divine system, answering the vital needs of the soul, having a direct relation to the soul of man that as man gets in touch with some part of that work whether it is but a fragmentary part or more, that person is bound to be blessed; that is what makes so many people happy who have a belief in Christ, though they accept but a fragmentary part of his doctrine, but a portion of the organic form of the church, reject a great many of his promises, still because of the power of Christianity, because of its divinity, because of it being entirely divine, when a person gets in contact with that, though he but touches it, he is bound to be blessed. That is what gives to people the joy they have in their religious life.

But think of Christianity! If accepted as a unit, undivided, as Christ gave it to the world! Then every fiber of man's being will be blessed. He will be born again. Mark these words, he that "believes that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." Now I do not understand that the mere giving of a mental assent to the fact of the divine Son-ship of Jesus Christ means a belief in him. It does in a sense but not in the full sense. I do not understand that one who will render but a partial obedience to the requirements of divine law is thereby showing a belief in Jesus Christ, only partially. The thought is not enjoined that whoever has a partial belief in Jesus Christ is born again, but whoever believes that Jesus is the Christ is born of God. Light attracts the plants; that is the same of the light of the Gospel of Christ. If men will, by the using of their agencies allow themselves to be drawn to the light, they will be blessed. They will be blessed if they stand within the fringes of the line of Christianity, because of its power and its radiating light; but Oh, if they will cross the line, come within the limit of divine law and keep moving on toward the center, then the fulgence comes to them that was intended of God in the giving of his perfect law; and so I urge the thought that Christianity is not a development from Paganism; Paganism is rather a development of Christianity—what I mean is, that it is a perverted form, if you please, of Christianity.

I wish to bring before you the thought that the term Jesus Christ includes a summary of the whole truth of God given for the salvation of men, because Christ stood as a representative of it. You cannot separate the personality of a man from his work; you cannot separate the personality of Jesus Christ from what he stood as a representative of. What distinguishes Napoleon Bonaparte in history? His military genius. What makes Abraham Lincoln to the American people what he is? His principles leading to the emancipation of the colored race. Why is Washington distinguished from others of our republic? Because of the part that he took and the manner in which he proceeded.

Separate Napoleon Bonaparte from his military achievements and he exists no more to you and me than any other man in his time. Separate Abraham Lincoln from the emancipation of the dark race and Lincoln is no different to us than any other man. Take from Washington the work that he performed in the interest of his country and Washington then is on the same common level with his fellows. Now take from Jesus Christ what he stood as a representative of, his representations concerning God, the church he organized, the doctrine he announced, the promises he made, and Jesus Christ stands to you and the world no different from any other person of his time. What makes him Jesus the Christ is what he stood as a representative of; so this text, "He that believeth in Jesus Christ" involves a belief in the summary of what Christ introduced to the world. He that so believes truly is born of God—he is changed. The divine law is working upon him and through him. A new creature now seeks communion with God. The appetite is changed; there are no more carousals at night. Depression, due to anxiety and anger and hatred is removed, and many ailments of the body due to violation of law are prevented through the law of life being observed; or if there has been a violation of law, by the keeping of the law of God and by its restorative power many are made whole, or there may be a manifestation of miraculous power. Christianity comes to us and tells us whom to worship, and how to worship—so it makes a great difference what we believe.

The law of influence begins its work when a correct belief leads us to a true worship of God: then we are influenced by our ideals, by the ordinances of the Gospel, by the promises of God, by his doctrine and by the glorious announcements made respecting a life of futurity.

There is an argument that comes to my mind that I wish to lay before you. In the field of science, we have not reached a point beyond which we believe there can be no further development; as grand as have been the achievements of wireless telegraphy, the wireless telephone, and all the great wonders of the scientific world in our time, there is not one here tonight that believes that the last word has been said as respects these developments of science. There is no one who believes there can be no higher development, but we all feel because the almost impossible has transpired, that which we once thought could hardly be done, that the future is filled with many possibilities. We are led almost to the point where we can believe that anything can be done, that is, anything which is not self-contradictory. In the scientific world then, the highest development of science is not acknowledged. Yet in the religious world some deny that we should have as high a development of Christianity as was possessed 1900 years ago! So many claims are made not only that we should not have the New Testament order of things in all of their original beauty and strength and splendor, but that we have outgrown them and do not need them today. A powerful religious organization will proclaim its belief that Jesus did not possess divine son-ship; another will announce the apostolic office does not belong to the church today; another that baptism has no virtue, or if it is to be observed, it matters not what form is practiced. Another religious body will assert that the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick, ordaining men to the ministry, blessing of children, and confirming of members into the church, has no necessary place in the church today. Another promulgates the idea that there is no such thing as present revelation from God. Thus, you see, there is a departure from the reasoning concerning scientific matters; if there was to be no higher development than these things, and as Christianity is capable of, not of improvement but of unfolding, it being a product of the Divine mind, in accordance with the position taken on science we should have at least as respects religion the high point of development that was reached by the New Testament Church. Do you get the point in mind that I have endeavored to make before you? I say that if Christianity in all of its parts is not to be maintained today as a divine system, including, of course, the church, because that is part of Christianity. I say if it is to be maintained today as a divine system of religion at least to the highest point of development that was reached by the New Testament church, then what stage of advancement should we stand for? If there was to be a decision made if there was to be no further development of science, we would say, Let us have the highest point that was ever reached in the scientific world;—let us talk about it so it will not be lost to posterity, the wonderful principles by which through their operation men have been able to connect their minds with those of distant points.

But somehow a different view-point is taken when we come to Christianity, but if there was to be further development or improvement of the Christian religion as given by Christ, let us understand that we should maintain then the highest development that it ever reached in any age.

Coming on the train from Los Angeles, I conversed with a lady of culture and refinement. She informed me she was a member of a noted church and said she took great pleasure in leading the choir and oftentimes to church feeling that she was going to receive that which would be exalting in its character, went buoyant in spirit, and returned home with a heavy heart. Somehow, she said, she did not get what she thought she would receive. She said that ofttimes she had done this. She did not know she was speaking to a minister of the Gospel but opened her heart when talking along general lines of religious work. Now there is a great principle involved in this matter. Look to the monarchical form of government—look to Russia, look to Turkey, to any monarchy of the past or of today. Such a government may be maintained for a time by intrigue and force and artifice, but soon there will be rumblings of discontent, then revolution, and the noise of musketry. Why? Because there is pent up in the people under the monarchical form of government something they know is not having expression, there is no medium through which it can find expression; and so they will not be bound down forever, and soon the discontent begins and then there is the trouble.

The same thing applies religiously, where Christianity is not held as a unit, is not maintained in its entire strength and fullness—where the government of God does not exist. While those who have subscribed to a fragmentary part of Christianity may get a great deal of satisfaction in a way, soon there will be empty churches; soon there will be rumblings of discontent, soon agnosticism will go through the land and the churches will become empty, because there are powers wrapped up in the people of a spiritual character that they cannot find a medium of expression for through the places they attend as church.

We can see through this, I believe, what is involved in this matter of the highest form of religion, which is Christianity, being maintained as we would maintain the highest form of human government; and as the human government advances in character upward, the less is the trouble and the greater the satisfaction of those who love their country. That is true in reference to Christianity.

This lady with whom I was conversing, asked me what I thought about churches federating. She said they had in her little town down in Oklahoma five churches, and but a very few members in each and each one maintaining a pastor. "Now how much better it would be," she said, "if we would all unite and secure a man of ability whom we could pay well. Let some of the minor points be set aside and all agree on fundamental principles." I said, "I believe I can see a way how you can unite down there, you all join the Baptists who believe in immersion and you will have unity; they will accept all of you." She smiled, "Oh, never," she answered, "but if they will come to my church, we can have unity." Federation will never fill the void in the spiritual life, the church relation, of that woman.

We cannot dispose of Christianity, point by point, nor as the infidel would dispose of it by a wave of the hand. We know what the infidel's position is, but is Christianity properly represented today by a denial of the principles that formerly constituted Christianity? Is it correctly represented by one saying that Jesus Christ has no divine sonship—one of the claims advanced in Christendom in regard to Christianity; by another, no revelation; another, no apostolic office; another, no prophetic office; others, no elders, deacons, or bishops; no baptisms; no laying on of hands; no personal God; no healing of the sick; no operation of the Holy Spirit, etc? Draw a sum total; what have you? Christianity disposed of in a violent manner. It is done gradually. When an infidel takes the Bible and declares he does not accept it as obligatory upon himself he an easy manner, as he thinks, disposes of the entire subject. What is the difference between that method and rejecting Christianity point by point, gradually, when the sum total of action amounts to the same conclusion reached by the infidel? I say, what difference is there in the result of the procedure? By the Latter Day Saints, from the beginning of the rise of their church, the proclamation has been made that Christianity in its entirety is for mankind today; they have through much sacrifice offered it just as it was offered nineteen hundred years ago by the delegates then sent forth of God to send the soul-reviving news to the world.

We see that logic leads to the conclusion that we must have all of it or else let it all go; for where is the hope of having anything if there is not that which exists as is pointed out by the Bible in Christianity? And so in conclusion I emphasize the words of our text, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God," which means a belief in what Christ stood as a representative of, as respects his church, its organic structure, its doctrinal teachings, its promises. It makes a difference what you believe. It is your belief that moves you on and your belief reflects and determines the character of your acts. Acts are thoughts put in motion.

If in Jesus Christ is to be found an exposition of God and interpretation of God, how we may become like him, it is of vast importance that we believe in him as he has represented himself to us. To so believe and represent Christ is the mission of the Church, of its ministry, of the Latter Day Saints.

IS THERE A DEVIL?

In the Weekly Globe Democrat of July 20th, an article appears over the signature of Samuel L. Stiver, in which he endeavors to prove both from the Scriptures, and from reason, that there is no such thing as a real devil. Seeing that this article has gone before the public for our examination and as many there be who read the Globe Democrat who hold opposite views to that of Mr. Stiver, doubtless a reply to the same would be in order. The article is written, so the author says, with a view to placing the responsibility for the evils in the universe where it belongs. I write with a view of permitting the responsibility of these evils to remain where they are.

Mr. S. says that his "Satanic Majesty" is the result of "racial nightmare." Now I with many others, do not think so, but believe that there is a personal devil as is taught by the word of God. It is stated in the Bible, and by Mr. S. that God cannot be tempted. Very true, God, The Father cannot, but his Son being born of a woman, and partaking of the nature of his mother as all children do, was tempted of the devil. Mr. S. says, "The child partakes of the nature of the parent." To this I agree, our Savior not being an exception to the rule, partook both of the nature of his mother Mary, in that he was tempted, and also of God, the Father, in that he did not yield to temptation. But it is said that it is not reasonable to believe, taking all the Scriptures together, that the Holy Ghost, or Holy Spirit would lead our Savior to be tempted of the devil. In this conclusion Mr. S. is wholly correct, for it never was and never will be the work of the Holy Spirit to lead into temptation; that is pre-eminently the work of the devil himself. The idea, as presented in the King James Bible, that the Holy Spirit led our Savior to be tempted, is a mis-translation of Scripture. Mr. S. well says, "Touch the subject on any side we choose and we find contradiction." Here the gentleman admits that there are at least two sides to the question, and that there are contradictions on either. True, there are some contradictions in the King James, and revised versions of the Bible, as not only Mr. S. admits, but the translators themselves, as follows:

"Blemishes and imperfections there are in the noble translations we have been called upon to revise," referring to the King James version; "blemishes and imperfections will be found in our own revision," referring to the revised version. Let us then be honest and acknowledge when in one place in the Bible it says that Jesus was led by the Holy Spirit, to be tempted of the devil and in other places teaches differently, that there is an erroneous rendition of Scripture, for God does not contradict himself. The fact that when man is tempted he is led away of his own lusts, as mentioned in the Bible, does not disprove the fact that there is a personal devil. Eve, of her own will partook of the forbidden fruit in the Garden of Eden also, but the devil caused her to be willing to partake. So in many other instances the devil influences men and women to do wrong. So we see the devil leads men and men follow him, thus the evil in the universe rests on the devil and those who follow him, or mankind, and not on God in heaven, nor on man alone.

The fact is as stated in another translation, that Jesus was led of the Holy Spirit to be with God and commune with him during his forty days' fast and he was not so led to be tempted of the devil, as many suppose. However, after his fast, the devil came to him and tempted him, but our Savior refused to concede to Satan's proposals. It is further argued that, "The negation of God is nothing," hence there can be no devil. In reply, I say that everything has its opposite. The opposite of good is bad, of right, is left, of high is low, of hot is cold, of wet is dry, and so on; and the opposite of God is the devil. No difference what the wise of earth say if they do not harmonize in their statements with a proper translation and interpretation of the Holy Scriptures, then their wisdom should be set aside as being of no value.

C. J. Spurlock,

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

presidency on all important matters coming before them in accordance with the law.

(3) The seventy who are selected by the seven presidents of seventy by the "Spirit of wisdom and revelation," also approved by the church. The number when complete is seven times seventy or 490 men who form a quorum equal in power to the apostolic quorum, or that of the presidency, but for convenience this body is divided into seven equal parts also called quorums, each being presided over by one of the seven presidents, one of whom presides over the whole.

(4) High priests who are unlimited in number designated by various leading authorities of the church presumably by the same Spirit of wisdom and revelation as the seventy, and approved by the church; or a high council of the church.

(5) Elders, unlimited in number but formed into quorums of 96 each.

(6) Priests, unlimited, but having quorums of 48 each.

(7) Teachers, organized into quorums of 24 each.

(8) Deacons in quorums of 12 each.

The apostles and seventies constitute the missionary arm of the church, being assisted by such high priests, elders and priests as can travel. The apostles also have in conjunction with the presidency a general supervising care of the organized churches. The high priests and elders are the pastors of the church, assisted by the priests, teachers and deacons.

In addition to the above there are other officers, viz., (9) bishops with a presiding bishop at the head, whose duty it is to teach the law of Christ pertaining to temporal things, to gather and distribute finances, hold and care for church property, care for the poor and needy, the families of the ministry, and assist the membership in organizing and conducting the temporal affairs of life. The bishops are also constituted judges in the church.

(10) Evangelists or patriarchs: These are a class who are made free from missionary or pastoral cares, doing evangelistic work in the church, strengthening the spiritual life of the members.

Thus every department of work has its proper class of officers to care for it.

Territorially there is the local organization or church, usually called a "branch," which when fully organized may have either a high priest, or elder to preside, a priest, a teacher, and a deacon having specific and distinct duties. The next division is the stake presided over by three high priests, being associated in some of their work by a high council composed of twelve high priests. Where conditions are not proper, or the personnel for stake organization is not available, the district organization is substituted, being presided over by a high priest or elder. Next to the stake is the general organization which has already been mentioned.

Judicially, the first or local form of court is the elders' court, specially appointed in each case from among the elders. Next in the large branch, district, or stake is the bishop's court, composed of a bishop and his two counselors. This court has both original and appellate jurisdiction. The stake high council presided over by the three presidents of the stake constitute a superior court of appeal. A still higher court is the high council of the church presided over by the presidency of the church, or in case one of the presidency should be a party in the case it is presided over by the presiding bishop and his two counselors. This is the supreme court of the church. Thus justice and right are assured every member.

Explanation of the term Reorganized in the legal name of the church seems necessary here.

Subsequent to 1844 when the head of the church was removed by death, various leaders arose dividing the body into as many factions, the largest of which followed Brigham Young to Utah. Decline rapidly followed others' until they became extinct, but the scattered remnants of the original church assembled their forces and began to reorganize on the original principles from which all the other leaders had departed. The reorganization of what is now the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was a reorganization only of the personnel, the original form and doctrine of the church being retained, but the reorganization under Brigham Young was one of doctrine and form, as well as personnel, thus developing an entirely new church. The civil courts have more than once decreed that the "Reorganized" Church is the true succession of the one founded in 1830. The faction in Utah having carried the original name, the true church found it necessary to incorporate into its name the term "Reorganized" in order to distinguish itself from the illegal title of the body in Utah.

ORGANIZATION IN CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

No provision is found for organization in the Christian Science text book—Science and Health, and taking up this feature of the Christian Science movement we of necessity turn to Mrs. Eddy's historian, Sibyl Wilbur, in "The Life of Mary Baker Eddy," published by the Concord Publishing Co., New York.

Mrs. Eddy commenced her work with pupils whom she taught personally, and with the growth of numbers established a school, and later what was termed a "college." She had conducted the college some time before any effort was made toward organization of her followers, and it was not until the number had increased considerably did she see that "it must be organized." (p. 259). "What then were the tasks of the hour? An effective church organization was the crying need." —p. 260.

Subsequent to this Mrs. Eddy introduced her work into Boston, giving a number of lectures. "Those Boston audiences revealed to her that the foundation of her church was to be laid in the city of liberal culture." (p. 261). We let the historian speak.

Organization was her word for the hour. It has become in her mind an imperative duty to organize the Christian Science Church. A tentative organization had been made. In 1874 it will be remembered, the little band of eight students had pledged themselves to raise money for church services, but their ranks had been broken by rebellion and that organization had been disbanded. On July 4, 1876, the Christian Scientist Association was formed to hold the students together for work and occasional meetings. This proved effectual for its purpose for a number of years. Mrs. Eddy now urged the incorporation of a church society. This was accomplished in August, 1879, and a charter, issued August 23, was received from the state. The articles of incorporation stated that the Church of Christ, Scientist, was to be established in Boston, thus fulfilling Mrs. Eddy's prophetic vision.

The members of the new church were twenty-six in number and the organization was made at the home of Mrs. Margaret Dunshie in Charleston. The first officers and directors were: Mrs. Eddy, president; Margaret Dunshie, treasurer; Edward A. Orne, Miss Dorcas Rawson, Arthur True Bushwell; James Ackland, Margaret J. Foley, Mary Ruddock, Oren Carr, directors. They elected and ordained Mrs. Eddy pastor after the Congregational method of New England. This is not the basis of the present Christian Science Church, but the organization continued in existence for about thirteen years when the church was reorganized. —pp. 266, 7.

"To meet the broader wants of humanity, and provide folds for the sheep that were without shepherds, I suggested to my students, in 1886, the propriety of forming a National Christian Scientist Association. This was immediately done, and delegations from the Christian Scientists Association of the Massachusetts Metaphysical College, and from branch associations in other states, met in general convention at New York City, February 11, 1886." —pp. 302, 3.

The national association held four subsequent meetings in New York, when Mrs. Eddy requested its members to adjourn for an indefinite period. She had then other plans for the church which unfolded successfully and harmoniously. —p. 303.

Mrs. Eddy worked for some time on a new plan of organization before it was ready to be put into effect. We read:—

Now the first step toward the masterly solution of this great problem of organization which confronted her was a loosening of all the bonds which apparently held her students together. With absolute reliance upon the underlying, irrevocable compact of Spirit which constitutes the "church invisible," Mrs. Eddy first closed the Metaphysical College and then a few months later dissolved the organization of the Boston church. —p. 327.

Mrs. Eddy's reason for this dissolution is stated by her in a notice in the Christian Science Journal for February, 1890:

The dissolution of the visible organization of the church is the sequence and complement of that of the college corporation and association. The college disappeared that the Spirit of Christ might have freer course among its students and all who come into the understanding of Divine Science. The bonds of the church were thrown away so that its members might assemble themselves together to "provoke one another to good works," in the bonds only of love.

Thus was dissolved both local and general organization, the association never again being called together. She then encouraged her students all over the country to organize local churches.

Mrs. Eddy now counseled a reorganization of the Boston Church as a Mother church, which should draw its membership, from Christian Science churches throughout the world. —p. 341.

Mrs. Eddy "ordained" Science and Health and the Bible, pastors over the church. There are no pastors in the usual sense, but "readers" are appointed, one to read from the text book and one from the Bible. The organization undoubtedly has secretaries, recorders, treasurers, et al.

From these extracts it appears that the Christian Science following has had at least five distinct and different organizations, the first in 1875, followed by the Christian Scientist association in 1876. In 1879 the movement took the title of "church," for in that year the "Church of Christ, Scientist" was incorporated, but as Mrs. Eddy says, "This was not the basis of the present Christian Science Church." After thirteen years of experiment, the "National Christian Scientists Association," was formed in 1886. After five general conventions this organization was dissolved as impracticable, and finally the Boston church was reorganized as a "Mother church" to include members in every place. There is this contrast to be noted in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ and the Church of Christ, Scientist, as to organization. The former has made no change in its theoretical form, or doctrine from the time of its beginning, and though there was a "reorganization" it was but a change of personnel and not of form. The latter has repeatedly changed its form though retaining in most cases the same personnel. The reader can draw his own conclusions.

HELPING THE INDIANS.

Not all the whites nor all the Indians of the country will agree with Secretary Lane of the interior department, that "The greatest service we can do for the Indian is to set him free."

Those acquainted with the Indians of the West understand full well, if these wards of the nation were given all their possessions, many would squander their substance quickly. That idea has been oft expressed by leading educated Indians. With centuries of shiftless living behind them it is no easy task for the agents of the government to teach the Indian how to work, how to save and how to lay by in fair weather that which is needed during storms. With all of the teaching and example it must be conceded that many of them are still Indians in habit and thought.

One great service the government can give the Indian is so to regulate surroundings that tricky traders and camp followers may not be permitted to swindle him. The white swindler has been a great menace to the Indian. Take him away, put educated men in charge, who will teach modern agriculture to the men, and domestic science to the women, require all Indians owning land to settle on it, or lose their government aid. This would be helping the Indians and preparing them for freedom. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WAR AND OTHER WICKEDNESS.

At a recent Hague anniversary meeting, held under the auspices of the Washington Peace Society, Secretary of State, William Jennings Bryan said some true things about war.

"War is in the interest of a few people, not of all," Mr. Bryan declared. "The profits are garnered by a few, while the masses pay the taxes. A few men gain glory while the mothers of the nations furnish the sons who make food for battlefields. War rests upon feeling, not upon necessity. Back of much of the furor for war is the interests of the manufacturers of battleships. And there are men so unpatriotic that they try to stir up trouble in another country against their own so as to make possible profit therefrom. Is there any baser use for money?"

Truth of precisely the same kind might be declared—indeed often has been declared—about the liquor business. Its "profits are garnered by a few," and the cost of it is borne by the many. There is no glory in it, but the gains of it give power to the brewers and the distillers, while "the mothers of the nation furnish sons who make food for" the trafficker's voracious maw.

Back of much clamor for the liquor traffic's right to live and grow is the selfish interest of brewers and distillers. If the avarice of the maker and the seller of drink could be eliminated the appetite of the drinker would be easily overcome. —The National Advocate.

HOW MR. BRYAN "DEFEATED" ADMIRAL TOGO.

Mr. Bryan, who has been actively engaged in trying to avoid complication with Japan over the California Land Bill, has spent some time in Japan. A good story of his experience there is told in the "Methodist Times." He was invited by Admiral Togo to drink to his health in champagne. To do so would have been to break his temperance pledge; and to refuse, unless with the utmost tactfulness, might have caused much offense. Raising his glass of water to his lips, he very neatly combined a mild rebuke and a graceful compliment in the same sentence. "Admiral," he responded, "all your victories have been won on water. When you win on champagne I will drink to them in champagne." —The National Advocate.

WIRELESS AND AURORA.

The aurora borealis, or northern lights, apparently affects the wireless telegraph waves that pass between Hammerfest, Norway, and the northernmost station in the world at Green Harbor, Spitsbergen. Often the polar light so weakens the wireless waves that the operator in the receiving-station at Spitsbergen can hardly hear them, and at times communication is wholly interrupted. On the other hand, the appearance of the northern lights seem to strengthen the waves that are sent southward. Once, when the aurora was so bright in Spitsbergen that it was mentioned in a dispatch to Norway, the receiving operator at Hammerfest, where the polar light was not even visible, noticed an extraordinary increase in the volume and distinctness of the signals. —Sel.

AN EASY JOB.

The man who's bunting easy jobs
Is the man who works the harder,
Work brings from him covulsive sob
Which makes his task the harder.
The grief of service brings groans and grunts
And makes light tasks the hardest, of aunts,
The fact that he serves sorely confronts
And makes his work all the harder.
The man who has an easy job
Is found in love with his service;
With joy divine his soul doth throbb
With the chance he has for service.
His work is blended with cheer and song,
Love hides from his soul all that is wrong,
The days never grow tedious and long
Because he's in love with service. —

All persons sending money to the Woman's Auxiliary for any purpose, including subscriptions to Home and Child Welfare leaflets, or Children's Home donations, please forward same to the treasurer of the Auxiliary, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, 707 S. Fuller Ave., Independence, Mo.

The following appeal to the Woman's Auxiliary was presented to the Advisory Board, and while we feel that it is not the province of the Board to take any decisive steps in a matter of such general importance, we do desire to urge our sisters everywhere, to set up for themselves a high standard of morality in such matters, and to use their influence wherever they can against such immodest forms of dress, as we so often see around us.

The Home and Child Welfare Department of the Auxiliary has recently published a timely and excellent reading on Dress and Morals, and several hundreds of the leaflets have been sent to different parts of the country. This may be followed by articles of a similar character. Our sisters in different parts of the country, who are not able to do so, might write for their local papers, articles on this subject, appealing to the women of their own communities, to take a stand against such shocking extremes in dress.

We do not wish to make a sweeping denouncement of the present styles of dress; for in many respects they are commendable, being healthful, cleanly, economical, both in time and money, and in many cases where the extremes are not followed, pretty, but, oh! save us from the extremes.

Advisory Board of W. A.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 1, 1913.

Dear sisters of the church, but especially those of the Woman's Auxiliary: to you we appeal from the local in Seattle, Wash.

Is there not some way by which an appeal might be made to the women of our country, to obtain their help if possible in taking a firm stand against the prevailing style in women's dress, which has become so obnoxious to clean minded people, and such a detriment to the morals of youths and maidens of our land?

Conditions are growing worse at a rapid pace, and to stand aside and allow such things to pass unheeded, seems equivalent to taking part in the nefarious practice.

Could not the "Woman's Auxiliary" make an appeal to other societies of women throughout the land for help in this matter?

We may be presuming too much, but from the things we see, and the results that seem but a sure outcome, we draw these conclusions.

That the modesty of our girls is in imminent danger, the manliness of our boys about to be wrecked, and last, but by no means least, the respect for our mothers is vanishing, and as a nation's women we are looked upon as ready imitators of whatever is held up to our view; whether it be a pattern of elevation or degradation.

Where is our individuality? Did we not ever have any in dress? If not, why not? Have we not enough good women in our beloved country to take a stand for right, quell this fast growing evil and bring modesty back to the foreground where she has become almost a stranger? May we not undertake this in the proper way, and ask the Prayer Union to give their voices in supplication for divine help?

We would like to take part in such an attempt. We appeal, sisters of the Woman's Auxiliary (general) to you, and any help you feel that we can give, we are here, at your service.

Yours for purity,

Mrs. Addie I. Scott.

A certain brother, well known throughout the church, was lately talking to the mayor of a city of about ten or twelve thousand population, concerning the removal of a certain rooming flat, when the mayor stated, "The sex question gives us more trouble than the saloons, and the root of the whole matter is woman's dress."

Please take notice that at the district conference of the Sheffield District held at Claycross, recommendation was made for the appointment of Bro. Joseph Holmes of Claycross in and for the district of Sheffield in place of Bro. John Austin, former agent of said district, and who does not continue the work on account of increasing age and inability to travel as heretofore over the district.

Bro. Joseph Holmes enters upon his work also with special recommendation of Bishop R. May, who is at the present time in charge of the financial work in the British Isles Mission.

We take pleasure in commending Bro. Joseph Holmes to the Saints and friends of the Sheffield District and bespeak for him the hearty co-operation of each one who is interested in the work of the Lord, in that field. Also the Bishopric respectfully tender its special thanks to Bro. John Austin for his faithful service as agent in the Sheffield District in the past number of years and trust that he will be good help in his part of the district to the new agent still, and that the Lord may bless and direct him in the work that he may be called upon to perform.

It is sincerely hoped that every member of the household of faith in the Sheffield District may soon get in communication either personally or by letter with Bro. Joseph Holmes of Claycross and that they may take pleasure and interest in helping the financial work along, of which he has charge. To this end may the Lord bless each of the helpers in their efforts. In behalf of the Bishopric, I am

Very respectfully,

E. L. Kelley,
Presiding Bishop.

FIRST APOSTLES SECONDARILY PROPHETS.

A question which has frequently arisen in the minds of many members of the church and non-members, was recently sent us by a friend for answer in the Round Table department. In consequence of limited space in the department we take it up here. It is as follows:

Paul says that God set in the church first apostles, secondarily prophets; why then does the Reorganized Church have first a prophet at the head, and second apostles?

A proper understanding of the statements of Paul, and of the attitude of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ upon the relation between apostles and prophets in the church, will leave no room for disagreement. What is an apostle? What is a prophet? We shall let competent authority say.

APOSTLE DEFINED.

Apostle, literally, one sent forth. a messenger.—Webster's New International Dictionary.

Any messenger commissioned by, or as by divine authority.—Standard Dictionary.

One sent forth on a mission, an envoy. A technical term used in the New Testament and in Christian literature generally for a special envoy of Jesus Christ. . . . We find "apostle" used in several senses, once it emerges as a technical term.—Encyc. Britannica.

It is the opinion of Sincer that the appellation "apostle" is, in the New Testament employed as a general name for Christian ministers as "sent by God," in a qualified use of that phrase, to preach the word.—McClintock and Strong's Bible Cyclopedia.

The proper meaning is an ambassador who not only carries a message, but also represents the sender.—Scribner's Dictionary of the Bible.

Thus an apostle of Jesus Christ is a messenger sent forth by Christ, having a commission as a special envoy to preach the word given by the Lord and to represent the Lord. The name carries with it the principle of authority—one who is authorized by Christ to be his representative and officiate in his stead. The Encyclopædia Britannica says further "We gather that the original Palestinian type of apostleship meant simply personal mission from the risen Lord." This emphasizes the directness of the call and is according to the New Testament history, for the original eleven were called by the Lord in person, and the Scriptures imply that Matthias was chosen according to the direction of the Lord. Paul and Barnabas were called by the Lord through the Holy Ghost which came from the Lord in heaven. (Acts 13:1-3; John 16:14,15). Of the other apostles no record is made of their call but it may safely be assumed that it was similar to Paul's.

PROPHET DEFINED.

Prophet. One who speaks for another. Specifically, one inspired or instructed by God to speak in his name.—Webster's.

One who speaks as the inspired representative of a divine being; one who delivers divine messages, or interprets the divine will.—Standard Dictionary.

A person who acts as the organ of divine communication with men, especially with regard to the future.—McClintock and Strong.

The ordinary Hebrew word for prophet means to "bubble forth," like a fountain. If this etymology is correct, the substantive would signify either a person who, as it were, involuntarily bursts forth with spiritual utterances under the divine influence. But it is more in accordance with the etymology and usage of the word to regard it as signifying (actively) one who announces or bears forth the declarations of God. . . . In classical Greek the word signifies one who speaks for another. Specifically, one who speaks for a god and so interprets his will to man, hence its essential meaning is "an interpreter."—Smith's Bible Dict.

From these statements it appears that a prophet is one through whom God chooses to speak to men. The "Spirit of prophecy" may or may not be associated in the same man with the apostolic power which carries the right of official representation. The prophetic function does not of necessity include sending forth on a mission as an envoy or ambassador, but indicates that the man is the mouthpiece of God, speaking forth the word of God by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

This meaning of the word is shown in Exodus 7:1, where the Lord, in consequence of Moses' hesitancy in speaking to Pharaoh, said to him: "Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet," meaning that Aaron should speak the things before Pharaoh which Moses should tell him. In this case Aaron did not become Moses' representative to take his place, but to be his spokesman.

When the distinction between a prophet and an apostle, or between the prophetic power and the apostolic office, is clearly recognized the seeming difficulty in the above question will fade away.

While the two powers are distinct, they may be combined in one individual as was the case with Moses who held the prophetic power (Deut. 18:15), and was also sent by the Lord in person as a special envoy to represent him before Pharaoh and the court of Egypt, a mission which was in the strictest sense apostolic. Jesus also, whom Moses said would be like unto him, was both prophet and apostle. (Acts 3:22; 7:38; Heb. 3:1). Others there were in the New Testament church who were prophets speaking by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit.—Acts 13:1-4.

APOSTLES AND PROPHETS IN THE REORGANIZED CHURCH.

Under the literal definition of apostle previously noticed, it appears that the term is properly applied to anyone who is directly called and commissioned as the representative of Jesus Christ, and that that power may be associated with another, viz., the prophetic. But there are some whom God calls to the special work of an envoy, upon whom the responsibility is placed of going into all the world, and that is their main, or, we might say, their sole responsibility. They are Christ's representatives, and are specifically apostles. "He chose twelve, whom also he named apostles," (Luke 6:13). The number seems to have been restricted to twelve at any one time.

In the church today are found certain officers and among them are twelve apostles who constitute the missionary quorum of the church, but they do not stand at the head, or "first" as the question puts it. But who are they who stand at the head? We let the law of the church say.

"The rise of the church of Christ in these last days, being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh, it being regularly organized and established agreeably to the laws of our country, by the will and commandments of God in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April, which commandments were given to Joseph Smith, Jr., who was called of God and ordained an apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the first elder of this church; and to Oliver Cowdery, who was also called of God an apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the second elder of this church, and ordained under his hand; and this according to the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to whom be all glory both now and forever."—Doctrine and Covenants 17:1.

On the day the church was organized a revelation was given in which it was said:

Behold there shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou [Joseph Smith, head of the church] shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church through the will of God the Father, and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.—D. C. 19:1.

Joseph Smith, Jr., held the two functions of speaking the words of God by the Spirit, which is the true prophetic power, and that of being sent to the world by a divine call and ordination which constitutes the true apostolic office. His position as head of the church did not come to him by virtue of his prophetic power, but by virtue of his divine call and ordination as an apostle of Jesus Christ. He held his prophetic power before the church was organized, but his apostleship came in conjunction with his being made the first elder, or president, of the church.

It is thus apparent that the office of president of the church is an apostolic office, and its occupancy an apostle in harmony with Paul's statement that "God hath set some in the church, first apostles." The men who occupy under the specific title of apostles share a portion of the responsibility placed upon the president and his two counselors, as may be seen from Doctrine and Covenants 80-1, which says:—"Unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belongeth always unto the presidency of the high priesthood," or of the church; considered in the light of 105:7 where it speaks of Thomas B. Marsh "whom I have chosen to hold the keys of my kingdom (as pertaining to the twelve) abroad among all nations, that thou mayest be my servant to unlock the door of the kingdom in all places where my servant Joseph, and my servant Sidney, and my servant Hyrum, [the first presidency] cannot come; for on them have I laid the burden of all the churches for a little season," etc.

The first presidency of the church, with those who occupy in the quorum of the twelve are all apostles. When Paul said that God set in the church first apostles, he evidently used the word in its literal meaning, referring to men who were called and sent directly by Christ. If he had meant otherwise he would certainly have put it "God hath set some in the church, first, twelve apostles," but no, he used the word in its general meaning. So also in Ephesians 4: "He gave some apostles; and some prophets," etc.

One thing which the church has insisted upon, and rigidly followed, is that its leading men shall be called of God, having a definite divine call through proper channels before being placed in the leading offices. Nor do the men of this church seek and work directly or indirectly for these responsible positions. In this way the Lord constitutes the real head directing in all his work.

PROPHETS IN THE CHURCH.

It is a question whether the position of prophet in the church is a specific office or a function only of men who occupy in various offices, but Biblical history and present procedure seem to incline to the latter. It may be seen by the definitions of "prophet," that he is one who represents God only in the sense of being his spokesman—one who speaks the things of God by the inspiration of his Spirit. This power may be received in varying degree by those who are called of God to the work of the ministry in any capacity, and those who do receive it in sufficient degree as to enable them to speak by the Spirit are literal prophets whatever other office they may hold.

It is but proper and necessary that the earthly head of the church should so speak, and be a prophet—the Lord's spokesman—to the whole church. He is a prophet to the church and consequently the prophet of the church, but his prophetic office, as applying to the whole church, (if office it may be called) is dependent upon his apostolic office. Take away the latter and he could no longer exercise the former. What is said of the president is also true of his two counselors.

As the presidency holds both the apostolic and prophetic power, so may also the twelve who are called apostles. As they may speak by inspiration being thereby the spokesman of God they become prophets in the church, and so with others of the ministry, but these do not become prophets of the whole church but each operating in his own jurisdiction.

Much confusion has been caused in people's minds by a popular and mistaken view of what prophecy is, being associated only with prediction. "Prophecy comprehends three things; prediction; singing by the dictate of the Spirit; and understanding and explaining the mysterious, hidden sense of Scripture, by an immediate illumination and motion of the Spirit," (Smith's Bible Dict.), but in medieval times this meaning of the word was gradually lost and it was used only in reference to prediction.

The most important function of a prophet is that of "understanding and explaining the mysterious hidden sense of Scripture, by an immediate illumination and motion of the Spirit," the others are secondary or incidental. Preaching then properly comes within the prophet's work and the man who ministers the word in the way specified is indeed a prophet.

Discussion might be carried much further but sufficient has been shown to establish the fact that in the Reorganized Church apostles stand first, including the first presidency and the twelve. The prophetic power is secondary.

Bro. U. W. Greene writes to Bishop Kelley of his arrival at Fishguard England, being on his way to his mission in Palestine. He was accompanied as far as England by Bro. Newton. Bro. H. A. Koehler expected to accompany Bro. Greene to labor in the land of the ancient Hebrews but could not get passage on the Mauritania from New York; so embarked from Boston. They will probably meet in England and continue the journey together. We wish them abundant success.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Last Thursday afternoon occurred the most disastrous fire that has ever visited Independence for many years, causing a loss of over $400,000. If the wind had been in the northwest instead of the southwest, in all probability it would have swept the public square, destroying most of the business houses. The two Independence fire companies were unable to cope with the flames and Kansas City was appealed to. The Kansas City Flying Squadron (Auto) was sent, making the run in eighteen minutes. With the additional hose by the Kansas City company, who were experts in handling it, the fire was soon under control. The biggest losers were the Scale Works, Robert Turner, the Air Line R. R. and others, ranging all the way from $400 to $15,000. Besides the Scale Works, barn, coal sheds, there were four or five houses burned and damaged, also the Episcopal church was damaged some.

Bro. R. C. Kelley who has spent two years in educational work in the Philippine Islands informs his father, Bishop E. L. Kelley, by cable of his contemplated return home via Naples and New York.

Thursday evening, August 7th, Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths left Independence for his long missionary journey to Australia. He would stop at Los Angeles, going from there to San Francisco where he will be met by Bro. C. Ed. Miller, and both will sail together, stopping enroute at Tahiti in the South Sea Islands for one month. They will also visit New Zealand for a short time, and from there will complete the journey to the island continent. They will not be gone less than two years. May success attend their mission.

The Wednesday evening prayer meeting last week after a number of prayers had been offered was given over to Bro Griffiths which he used in relating some of his experiences in the church, giving a short history of his life. He has had an eventful life, full of rich experiences and his address was not only interesting, but strengthening to the spiritual life of the saints.

The attendance at the Sunday services was lighter than usual probably on account of the extreme heat which has continued over this section of the country for many days. Bishop Ellis Short was the morning speaker, and gave many good thoughts based upon the Abrahamic covenant. Bro. J. W. Dubease was the evening speaker.

A drought with intense heat has prevailed over this central region for several weeks, until the corn crop has been considerably damaged, many of the fields being partly dried up. The immediate vicinity of Independence has suffered less than many other parts having had later rains than in many other places. Slight showers during the last two days give promise of an early change. All the early crops have been full and abundant for which we are thankful.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Services as usual on Sunday, 272 attended Sunday school, collections $5.69. A good interest manifested throughout. At the 11 o'clock hour, Bro. A. K. Dillee was the speaker, and his remarks were gathered from, "My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me." Bro. Dillee made a strong effort to show that a wrong interpretation of the Scriptures is had by not placing the emphasis on the word most needed. All were edified.

At 8 o'clock p. m. preaching by Bro. Harry Smith, and one would think him an old war horse, he did so well, and we were glad to be there, as in the morning hour. Bro. Harry's effort was along the line, "Nothing new under the sun, and what is, had already been." So many new thoughts were brought to the front, that I am at a loss to say which were the most edifying, but one thought in particular was, the system of tithing, which he thought was neglected very much to the detriment of the church, for because of the lack of funds the church is suffering.

Monday evening a meeting of the priesthood was held. These priesthood meetings are very profitable, for one is selected to make a doctrinal talk, then run the gauntlet of the questions fired at him—in a friendly way of course, making it interesting for all who take a part. Bro. J. T. Curtis was the speaker at this meeting, and stood his ground manfully.

CENTRAL CHURCH, KANSAS CITY, MO.

Our total branch membership according to the branch clerk's report to the last business meeting held the first Monday evening of this month is 385, a gain of eight since the last report to the Stake conference. We doubt however, whether there has been an increase of eight in attendance of members of the branch in that time. There has been an increase doubtless in average attendance, but it is made up of outsiders.

Beginning with the first Sunday in September the regular sacrament meeting will be held at 11:00 a. m. instead of at 6:00 p. m. and there will be no preaching in the morning nor prayer service at 6 o'clock on sacrament Sunday. It is to be hoped this arrangement will meet the convenience of more people, and have a tendency to increase the attendance and interest as well. Also the mid-week prayer services will be resumed the first Wednesday in September. The financial board was instructed to proceed with the repairing and decorating of the church as means were available, and to do the outside repairing first. The parlors, kitchen and Sunday school rooms have already been papered and painted, and present a very pleasing appearance.

At a recent election of the Religio the following were elected officers for the ensuing six months: president, Seth S. Sandy; vice president, Chas. J. Cox, secretary, Miss Ethel Conlin; and Mrs. George Hood, treasurer. We regret that we are to lose Bro. Parsons as our Sunday school superintendent, as he announces his resignation to take effect September 1st.

Pastor J. A. Tanner is taking a vacation attending reunions in northeast and northwest Missouri. He will be back the 31st.

A move is on foot in Kansas City to effect a men's organization composed of the men of the different branches here. The first meeting will be held at Central, August 31st, at 3:00 p. m., when a temporary organization at least will be effected, object of the organization, and time and place of meeting decided upon.

The entertainment and amusement committee, working under the auspices of the Religio has provided the young folks with two tennis courts, located just east of the church near the Paseo.

The extreme hot weather of the past two weeks has had a depressing effect upon the attendance at all services; however, the average is some better than last year at this time. Sr. D. H. Blair who has been quite ill for a number of weeks, we are pleased to report is better. We trust after a few weeks' rest she will be able to return to her post of duty where she is greatly needed.

Bro. W. P. Stoff and wife of Omaha, Nebr., worshipped with us yesterday; also a number of others from out of the city, whose names we did not secure.

The pastor has announced the last week of September as a week of denial and sacrifice; closing with a rally day October 1st. The matter of the fall meetings postponed from last March is also under consideration, and due announcement will be made later.

August 11.

QUINDARO BRANCH.

July 20th our pastor, Elder D. E. Hough occupied the morning hour with good liberty. Sr. Anna Shelton sang a very appropriate solo entitled "Close to Thee." The evening speaker was Bro. Woodson from Chelsea Park Branch.

The 27th Bro. Garrett of the Stake presidency was with us both morning and evening and also took charge of the six o'clock social service. Both sermons were very instructive.

The 3rd of this month Bro. M. H. Bond was with us. In the morning he took for his subject "Faith." He related a very remarkable instance how his wife and those who were with him were saved by the presence of an angel while out on Lake Michigan in a boat, proving that visitation of angels had not ceased.

At six o'clock the regular monthly sacrament service was observed. The emblems were carried to some who were unable to attend. A goodly number were present and took part in the meeting and a good time was had.

The interest in the Religio is on the increase. Last Friday night it was said by one who counted them that over seventy were present; they are making a special effort to have extra good programs.

The Aid Society is making an extra effort to help in raising our share of the general church fund, which is eighty dollars.

Last Sunday morning Bro. Thomas Newton was the speaker. His subject was: "Do we know God?" In the evening Bro. F. C. Warnky and his wife were here and Bro. Warnky was in charge of the social service and also occupied the eight o'clock hour.

Sr. R. E. Lewis has been appointed book agent for this branch and we are expecting to send in more subscriptions for the church papers. Roy Barron was chosen clerk.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Bro. and Sr. Ivor Cook were gladdened by the advent of a daughter on Saturday, July 19th.

The Friday evening meeting of the 25th was out of the ordinary. After the usual prayer-meeting, Religio consisted of a short lesson period and a shorter musical program, followed by ice cream on the lawn.

Bro. Barnore, the Australian missionary, was a welcome arrival of Friday evening, and stayed with us over Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday evening he gave a lecture on Australia, very entertaining and educational, with stereopticon views. The next day he enlightened the Sunday school with an interesting talk, giving as the secret of success the spirit of the little boy who said he went to Sunday school because he was "part of the concern." The young men's class gave a rousing rendition of that thrilling song, "Are your windows open toward Jerusalem?"

The morning sermon was a study of the last days, forcibly presented. The special sign that Christ gave his disciples of his coming and of the end of the world was that this gospel should be preached in all the world. Though these are the last days, the end is not yet. There is a great work to be done by this church before that time. "Men shall be lovers of their own selves." The conflict between capital and labor is caused by the love of the capitalists for themselves—also by the love of the laboring classes for themselves. In the church, those who are in comfortable circumstances are not anxious for Zion, but those unfortunate ones who think they would profit by going to Zion, are anxious for it. So in the church and in the world selfishness is prevalent. "In the finality there will be no unworthy poor in Zion, only those who are doing the very best they can." "We believe in the literal and positive return of Jesus to the earth—"This same Jesus whom we see ascend." Some men make the mistake of thinking they can redeem the world and bring men back to God solely by their own intellect. "It can never be done. We still rely on that inspiration which instituted this church."

There was an afternoon sermon at the suburb of Cheltenham by the same speaker, which was reported as being splendid.

In the evening the Saint Louis saints witnessed more stereopticon pictures, some on the life of Jesus and some on other subjects, connected in a fluent talk. The comment on the picture, "By their fruits ye shall know them," was striking—"We do not judge a tree by the windfalls, but by the fruit that clings to the tree. So a church should not be judged by those who fall away, but by those that cling. "We should cling to the church, and realize in ourselves the full development that the church has to give."

Arrived of Friday, August 1st, at Religio, was a visit from Bro. Rushton, and an instructive talk on social conditions and marriage.

On the following Sunday our Sunday school superintendent being out of the city, his assistant, Bro. Rob Lloyd, took charge in a very refreshing manner. The usual talk was in the form of a thoughtful paper by Bro. Barrett, and the special song was sung by the Primary department.

Sacrament meeting, not very well attended, was of a helpful nature to those who did attend. At night Bro. T. J. Elliott gave a comprehensive talk on the attributes of Deity, August 4.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

The city sacrament service was very good and was followed by a good sermon by Bro. J. A. Anthony in the evening. Bro. Anthony has been in poor health for some time but is now improved—we hope permanently.

Bro. C. A. Parkin was called to Santa Rosa to administer to Bro. Sides of Potter Valley, on Sunday last and while here preached with unprecedented liberty to the joy of all. The few saints at Windsor have purchased a building and fitted it up for church services. Now we can hold a protracted effort there as soon as practicable. This is a part of the Santa Rosa Branch.

By the time this is read wife and I hope to be "tenting on the old camp ground" at Irvington preparatory to the reunion commencing on the 15th. The prospect is for a good reunion.

Bro. G. J. Waller preached the evening sermon in Oakland following a well attended sacramental service in the morning. The prayer service Wednesday night was very spiritual though not so well attended.

CORRESPONDENCE

ROCKFORD, ILL., July 30.

Editor Ensign:—The mission work of this district is moving along real well in the main. As to the writer, I never saw a busier year so far. We are also glad to state that all of the brethren assigned to the district are active, excepting some where age and sickness have hindered. Having again been elected district president I have been busy mostly with the duties thus imposed. The local brethren in the main are good workers, and it makes district work much more pleasant I assure you.

I put in almost eight weeks before the Northern Wisconsin reunion convened, June 27th to July 7th. This district while one which in times past has had a hard struggle is indeed prospering in many ways. They now have permanent reunion grounds and buildings. An auditorium 40x70 feet, dining hall 2x40 feet (I believe it is). The grounds are located on the west side of Lake Chetek, well covered with oaks and pines. Bro. Leroy Colbart and his father donated the grounds the buildings are on, and by the time the reunion was over there was not much over $100.00 unpaid. We hope other districts and especially the Southern Wisconsin and Northeastern Illinois will take notice, and as they now meet in joint reunion, do likewise; selecting some city or location near the line between the two districts. I am sure our reunion would be a much greater success if this sacrifice should be made by these two districts, and I assure you that some of us who have worked for twelve or fourteen years on reunion committee work would appreciate the great difference in the work it would make. We are hopeful of the future.

Just closed our eight days' effort at Beloit where the new branch is doing good work. Here in Rockford we only have a few members. We expect to hold forth here this week and over Sunday.

As one of the reunion committee of the joint reunion of Southern Wisconsin and Northeastern Illinois let me say: The reunion begins August 22nd and closes the 31st. The committee is doing all it can. Are you? Please send all orders for tents and cots to J. O. Dutton, Evansville, Wis., not later than August 12th. Come every one who can! Come to do good and get good!

Your brother and servant,
Jasper O. Dutton.

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT.

Dear Ensign:—For two weeks past Bro. Rushton, minister in charge, has been looking over the field in these parts. He has preached in Wier City, Scammon, Pittsburg, Joplin, Webb City and Parcell branches to appreciative audiences. He has been given the sobriquet of "Rushton the different," and I assure you its a happy appellation. Our brother's fame has gone out, that he was a rank Socialist of the Girard stamp. One sermon along these lines is sufficient to dispel every allusion and forever set at rest such charges. Our brother is an ardent advocate of Zion's co-operation as laid down in the books, with God and his righteousness, the inspiring, guiding and directing force, instead of political greed, graft and selfishness. We are pleased with our brother's efforts.

Jots Man.

"CAMP GROUP," JOPLIN, MO.

The camp is "a" number 1—About 30 tents all well filled with campers, representing only those who live at a distance.

Friday and Saturday evenings over 1000 were on the ground. Weather is dry—healthy good and all are enjoying camp life. Preaching is of a high order, and the good Spirit permeates all, not a discordant element, or an opposition spirit is manifest, all rejoice and God is glorified.

T. W. Chatburn.

ENTERTAINING UNAWARES.

It is said we may entertain angels unawares, and likewise we may be entertained unexpectedly, yet agreeably, as was the case here in Chelsea on Sunday eve not long since. Brother Hoffman dropped in upon us unawares and gave us a delightful talk, both edifying and appreciated by us all.

It is a source of great consolation to have our fellow-workers in the cause of the church of Jesus Christ to give us a passing call, revive, encourage, exhort and inspire us to a more vigilant action and a revival of spiritual strength. Such as most invariably proves to be the case on like occasions, when we get such a lift—a kind of free for all—without money or price. We have had frequent help along this line from our Independence brethren, which we acknowledge, with thanks and due appreciation to one and all.

We had a most pleasing entertainment on Children's Day notwithstanding the short time and opportunity for preparation, the condition was such as to surprise all present, even those who had it in charge and who were heartily congratulated on the result. It is fortunate that in most organizations are to be found a few who are willing and do make sacrifices for the enjoyment of the many, as in this case. And we should ever be ready to reward them with every evidence of appreciation of their labors and manifest interest, in behalf of all interest concerned. This will not only prove encouraging but be giving credit to whom credit is due.

And while they may not be working for earthly renown it is gratifying to know their efforts are accepted in the spirit it is given—for the general good. And we have it in our hearts to say, God bless those who are ever so ready to give the cause such efforts as are necessary to keep the work moving forward and upward. It should ever be our aim in this life to seek elevation to a higher plane of religious life and greater abounding Christian graces. As saints our business, social, moral, and christian lives, yes, and political as well, should all be as exemplary and commendable as we can possibly make them, devoting a sincerity and earnestness of purpose calculated to incline and draw others toward us.

It is this, we think, we will better be able to live down the prejudice, so long existing and yet prevailing in the minds of so many who so unjustly charge us more through ignorance than otherwise, we believe, not even giving us the benefit of an investigation. If people would more earnestly, diligently and conscientiously seek facts, knowledge and truth as they in reality exist, then more wise and just conclusions would be the result, and more universal justice prevail.

It is only the comparative few, who take the pains to investigate our rule of faith and practice wherein they might learn the truth, and be governed accordingly, rather than jump at, and accept hasty conclusions, is more detrimental to their own salvation and safety than otherwise.

The few however who do wisely investigate are not long in losing sight of all former ignorance and superstition through the light of the true gospel of the church of Jesus Christ, and seeing it they learn to believe and obey the truth. As saints we should diligently strive to let our spiritual life shine, and beam forth in one unclouded day and effulgent glory throughout our every Christian life and continuous religious warfare, seeking that degree of happiness, spirituality, and efficiency that arises only as we approach nearer and nearer toward a state of perfection.

There is no near road, or short cut, to either happiness or eminence, and they who succeed must work, wait, watch and pray, in order to be most certain of an impartial reward, to be received at the end of the race.

As we who are older note the interest, manifested in the training of their young minds, in the Sunday school, and the culture of these tender hearts, and looking into the bright faces, beaming with promise, we can at a glance and in a moment realize wherein rests the future of the church, oh, what a grand and glorious work is that of the Latter Day worker, in whatever capacity he may be working. Methinks in that great day when the Father comes to gather in his golden sheaves and garner them for eternity, when he comes to make up his precious jewels, these are they who will be among those to hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done good and faithful servants." What an incentive to action and encouragement to keep striving onward and upward. The Religion is serving an intermediate help in connection therewith.

The prayer meetings are not so largely attended as we wish and as they ought to be, but the Spirit is always manifested in our midst, and we feel benefited and glad to be there.

When we clasp the hands of each other upon our frequent meetings and greetings, we feel and know they are the hands of earnest, honest toil, each and every one alike, no high, low, stiff necks, or knees, but neck, humble, earnest, content and prayerful worshippers in the church of Jesus Christ, everyday toilers, laboring for God, home and native land. Such as the wide world over are the acknowledged salt of the earth and the leaven of society upon which depends the progress, prosperity, stability, purity and the perpetuity of our great American Republic.

No aristocratic idle rich with elaborate brocade and rustling silks; brush the dust of slothfulness, idleness, vain glorioussness, and vanities from off our long pine benches. But spirituality, with cleanliness, and neat, plain, and comely attire, alike, adorn them, and a general spirit of equality and loving kindness is in evidence upon our every coming together.

The few of us know each other, every one so well, almost, as every mother knows her child, and hence love each other accordingly, because we know how they move and live. We are at perfect peace with all the world. And how ever unjustly criticized, misrepresented or ignorantly libelously attacked, we heed them not, but keep on in the straight and narrow path, in that selfsame, even tenor of our way, knowing in whom we are trusting and over willing to abide the time when the true gospel truth will reveal to all the world who is who, and what is what.

An old subject of whom the new light made a young saint.

STUDLEY, Kans., July 21.

Dear Ensign:—As you have been a constant weekly visitor at our house for over twenty years I feel impressed to write a few lines, hoping it may interest some dear brother or sister. We still remain members of the Allendale Branch but are isolated and feel that we cannot do without the "Silent Preacher." It is hard for a Latter Day Saint to live among the people of the world today, as they do not seem to care for anything but worldly pleasures, and to get gain by defrauding one another. They seem to say, "I will do you if you will do me." The time has surely come "when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears."—2 Timothy 4:3.

We had not heard a Latter Day Saint sermon preached for seven or eight years until Brn. J. F. Curtis and J. Arthur Davis came here on their way to the Curtis-Ellimore debate. They came Saturday morning and stopped over until Sunday. Bro. Davis gave us a good sermon in the little church here at Studley which he was quite willingly given permission to occupy. You don't know how quite much good that blessed sermon did our poor hungry souls. Soon after the debate Bro. Showers came to Studley and we secured the church again and he preached nine rousing sermons with fair and attentive audiences, although there was some prejudice manifested among the people, yet the good seed was sown and we will trust to the Lord to water it. Our prayer to God is that it may bring forth much fruit. Bro. Showers is an earnest worker for the Master and seems to be the right man in the right place. He seems to be blessed with a goodly degree of the Spirit of God. While here he administered to the writer, and I received much benefit, and we feel to give God the praise. While here Bro. Showers blessed my son's two little children. He received several calls for preaching while here; so the good work goes on.

It makes me feel sad to know that we cannot send more elders into the field on account of shortage of finances. Beloved Saints, let us make this a year of sacrifice and pay our tithes and offerings more freely, that there may be sufficient means in the treasury to send out many laborers into the field the next conference year, so we can each one feel that we have done our duty.

My heart is in this work. I know it is of God and I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may ever be faithful and live worthy of the name I have taken upon me. I am weak and often feel my unworthiness before God, but I know he is a God of love and mercy, and will bless those who have faith and put their trust in him. I know he does hear and answer prayer. I have prayed many times that he might send some of his servants to bring the angel's message to this place and on Friday before Brn. Curtis and Davis came I felt impelled to ask God to send some of the elders this way and Saturday morning, before I was out of bed, my son came in from his room and said to me, "Mamma, there are two elders in the other room." You don't know how my heart bounded with joy and I felt to praise God, he had answered my prayer at last. When I was praying I did not know of an elder within many miles of here, had not even heard one preach for a number of years, as stated before, and now within the last month there have been four of God's servants at my house, and thank God the work has been opened up in this place and I do hope great good may be accomplished here.

Your sister in gospel bonds,
Helen Oakley.

MONTROSE, Iowa, July 28.

Editor Ensign:—It may be possible some of the readers of the ENSIGN would be interested in what is going on down here in the corner of this grand old state, opposite the old historic town of Nauvoo.

The writer was ordained a priest last October, and as there had been no priest in our branch for several years I was at once put in charge of the work here.

I am thankful for the gospel and for the little ray of light which I enjoy. There are but few active workers here, but I have been trying to do all I can to keep the saints together, and to arouse an interest in those who seem to have become careless and unconcerned.

There is a thought along the line of "Social Purity" which I have often expressed to our people, and it may be a help to some who may chance to read these lines.

If every one of our young men and young ladies would band themselves together in the bonds of Christian fellowship, and always do that which is right, always be found in their places at church whenever services of any kind are being conducted, take some active part whenever opportunity affords, instead of being seen at the Sunday base ball game, the moving picture show, the public dance, and various other questionable places of amusement, then they would enjoy the sweet influence of the Holy Spirit and they would be so happy in the service of the Master, that they would have no desire to partake of the pleasures of the world, seeing there is no comparison between the two. This would work such an influence over those with whom they come in contact that it would be hard to estimate the good that might be done.

We are looking forward to the reunion to be held here by the tri-districts, viz., Nauvoo, Eastern Iowa and Kewanee which begins August 22nd and continues ten days. It is expected a number of strong men of the ministry will be present.

It is doubtful if any other place possesses as much historical advantages and scenic beauty. From the Iowa shore of the great "Father of Waters" we have a panoramic view of the old historic town of Nauvoo which all Latter Day Saints love to visit. The lake, created by the erection of the great dam at Keokuk, extends to Montrose and gives many advantages for boating, bathing, sight-seeing, etc. The formal celebration of this great water power dam, one of the largest in the world, will take place during the reunion. These opportunities together with the benefits derived from the church services and association of saints, should be an inducement for many to come at this time and enjoy an outing for ten days. Remember some of the opportunities will never occur again. Cancel other dates and come to Montrose, August 22nd.

I love this latter day work and am striving to let my light shine as we are commanded in Matthew 5:16. I want to ask the saints, especially those who know me best, to pray for me that I may be more enlightened and receive wisdom and knowledge in this great latter day work.

In gospel bonds,
Joseph H. Reed.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 4.

Dear Ensign:—The people outside of Chicago are of the opinion that the southside Chicago saints are sleeping. They no doubt have good reason for entertaining such thoughts; but it is not true. They are as wide awake as ever, and owing to the never-ceasing efforts of our worthy president to build up the work here, we are making good headway. Our prayer services especially are growing, more than doubling our number in the past few months.

The confirmation of Helen Cochran and Katherine Stone who were baptized a few weeks ago, were said by many to have been the grandest they ever heard. Mrs. A. L. Crippen was also baptized.

We had a good attendance at our sacrament meeting Sunday morning, and the meeting was apparently enjoyed by all. Bro. Dowker was the speaker in the evening.

C. L. Wainwright.

MALAD CITY, Idaho, Aug. 2.

Dear Ensign:—I left my field of labor the latter part of 'tareh, attended general conference, (one of the best in the history of the church), visited relatives in Independence and Joplin, Mo., thence home to Tigris, Mo., May 9th, where I remained till the 17th, then off to my field again. Stopped off at Springfield, was headed off there by a letter from Bro. Marion Hollandsworth of Eldridge, Mo., requesting me to be there on the 19th. I went, preached four sermons, baptized Annie Hollandsworth, a daughter of Marion, and Hattie and Stella, daughters of Allen Hollandsworth; blessed five children on the 23rd—(the authorities of the Southern Missouri District will please pardon me for complying with the request); then away, stopping off at Independence and St. Joseph, where I preached a few sermons to a noble band of saints, presided over by Elder J. L. Bear, a wise laborer, in whom they have full confidence. (They kindly remembered the needs of the missionary.) June 2nd on board of cars for Idaho, arrived in Malad City on the 6th, since which time I have labored here and in Bannock Valley and baptized four; others are seemingly near the kingdom.

J. C. Christensen.

JONESPORT, Maine, July 29.

Editor Ensign:—I am busy as a bee. Since leaving my home in Independence, Mo., June 27th, I have held 27 meetings, which indeed left a good feeling among the people. That is what every servant of God should do. I hear the names of Elders John Steehy, Gus Koehler and G. W. Bobley highly spoken of, for the faithful labor done by them. That's right, always leave a clean record behind you, then the noble cause of Christ will suffer no loss.

I preached last Sunday afternoon on Beals Isle and at this place in the evening to good interested congregations. I had fine liberty. On Tuesday night I spoke here to our saints and friends and all seemed to be well pleased. At the social meeting Wednesday evening 33 took a lively part in the meeting. My heart was made glad to hear the children, young men and women of the fathers and mothers, whom forty years ago I brought into the church, bearing a faithful testimony of what the gospel had done for them. Bro. Enos Rogers, who presides over the branch, is acting well his part, and makes a very good presiding officer, and other officers who are serving under him are willing workers, and are learning how to take their trick at the wheel.

Last Sunday afternoon about forty of the saints, including the sweet singers of Israel, headed by their leader, Herbert Rogers, came on the island and sang. I told them that any elder ought to preach a good sermon after listening to such singing as that, and the good Spirit was present and we had a profitable meeting. I found Bro. Cushman quite poorly. He is thinking of going west, to a milder climate. Bro. Ralph Bryant and cousin, W. N. Leighton, brought me here last Friday from Kennebec in their naphtha boat. We were two hours and a half coming down. I will now visit Head Harbor Island, the place where I preached some forty years ago, and baptized about thirty precious souls.

I am your brother,

DEBBY, Ind., Aug. 7.

Dear Ensign:—The Southern Indiana Reunion closed Sunday Aug. 3rd. It was a decided success. Sr. Barmore and I arrived on the grounds July 29th. The general meetings were good, so also were the Sunday school and Religion sessions. Eleven were baptized. Bro. Moler and Metcalf have gone to Kentucky. Brn. Hall and Nolan to Southwestern Indiana, and Bro. McClain to Southeastern Indiana. I shall work along the Southern Kentucky.

In bonds,

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

JOSEPH SMITH AS A PROPHET.

BY ARTHUR B. PHILLIPS.

At the time when the Latter Day Saints were organized as a church the idea of a modern prophet was a strange one to the world, and we do not wonder that many were skeptical when, after the lapse of ages, one youthful and obscure arose for whom was claimed the powers of a prophet sent with a message from the Almighty. Evidence being the means by which we ascertain the truth, doubt should in every age, give way before rational evidence; therefore the question may be asked: does the evidence reasonably indicate that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God?

The Bible being our standard of evidence, very largely, we learn from its pages that prophets were sent to turn the people to the commandments of the Lord and to reveal the will of the Lord concerning matters that might be obscure; to speak in the name of the Lord with authority, and to obtain revelation of things future that God might see fit to make known; to be a medium of light from God, a leader of people in the right way.

Probably every prophet that Jehovah ever sent to mankind was objected to by at least some of the people, and history shows that the majority rejected them in many instances; hence Stephen said: "Which of the prophets have not your father's persecuted?" Reasonable doubt does not lead one to persecution or infidelity. Those who claim to believe in all the prophets of Scripture times should accept proper evidence concerning any who may be sent from God in our own day, lest they be found guilty of unjust judgment; for God will hold everyone responsible for rejecting his word or the servants whom he sends.

It has been claimed by some that Joseph Smith was a false prophet. In reply we say that no evidence has been produced that shows a basis for such claim, and no one has shown the failure of even one of the numerous prophecies that he has given in the name of the Lord. On the other hand, all of his known public and private teachings, as maintained by Latter Day Saints from that time to the present, are clearly in harmony with the Scriptures; being so well known that they need not be severally mentioned here. The claim made against him in this regard is therefore far-fetched and vapid, not to say ridiculous.

THINGS THE PROPHET DID.

In those days there was, it is admitted, great confusion in the religious world and many opposing doctrines were being taught by the various ministers of the time. Conceding the honesty of the conflicting teachers, we must admit their inability to agree as to what the Lord required of them. Inasmuch as they were earnestly seeking to know which of their conflicting teachings might be right, it is reasonable to believe that God would care enough for their salvation to send them one through whom his will should be made known; and as his method of revealing his will has always been through prophets it is reasonable that he would send a prophet to lead people in the right way, to teach the things of his kingdom. With authority from God, Joseph Smith called upon all to obey the doctrine of the New Testament in its entirety. Each ordinance instituted in the Savior's time was taught and practiced anew. The church was organized according to the New Testament pattern, with officers or ministry named therein called by revelation from God, as they were of old and as required by the Scripture (Heb. 5:4); thus forming by divine commandment the Church of Jesus Christ as it existed before apostasy had brought about its disorganization. A reformer could not do this, for God had predicted a restoration and not a reformation. Joseph Smith came as a restorer. All the reformers of previous centuries had never restored the church as it was in the days of Jesus. They did not know how to do it, and they were further unfitted for the work because they did not believe that it was necessary, neither did they believe it needful to practice and teach everything as the New Testament shows the ancient church to have done; besides this, they did not believe that all of the offices named in the New Testament were required to be in the church, and they would not have known what their duties were even if they had believed them to be necessary, for the Scriptures contain very little information on that point. Only by revelation from God could these theological mists be cleared away. All of these obscure matters were made clear by the voice of the Lord speaking by the mouth of the great prophet—restorer, Joseph Smith.

THE PROPHET'S AUTHORITY

Moses was sent from God with a message, but very few saw God give him the message, and the people were rebellious much of the time. The Lord gave Elijah a message for the people, but only his servant was present to witness the fact, and the people were angry and sought the prophet's life. The Bible says: "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established." The angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph Smith and sent him as a prophet with a message to the people. A few witnesses saw the angel and heard his voice, enough witnesses to establish his word, and they bore record to the fact. Men were called of God and ordained to various offices of the priesthood, and their duties made known. The church being re-organized according to the pattern of the New Testament, the divine modus operandi of both the general Church and its various parts as originally instituted by Jesus was made known by revelation, and matters of doctrine that had become obscured by traditions, mis-translations and fallacious arguments, were made clear by the word of the Lord.

It has been claimed that if the prophet Joseph Smith had authority from God that the people would have received him. This objection is not well founded. Jesus and other great prophets were rejected by a majority of the people in their time, though many claimed to believe after the prophets were dead. So also, many of the religious bodies that vehemently opposed Joseph's teachings have since then changed their creeds, and now teach some of the very things they had formerly objected to; and though their scornful lips refuse to acknowledge the source of their learning, and their haughty heads are still unbowed to the authority of the Lord which was conferred upon the prophet, they are admitting that he was right and they were wrong, by virtue of the fact that they are now changing their teachings to conform to his. Degrees of glory for the righteous and of punishment for the wicked, the possibility of progression after this life, the establishing of equality as a purpose of the church, the coming of Christ in this age and the establishing of the millennium on this earth, unconditional salvation of little children through the atonement of Jesus, a belief in the scriptural gifts of the Holy Ghost and of inspiration from God by revelation in this age, and many other prominent teachings were opposed when the Prophet first taught them to the world, but are now largely believed in by leading religious bodies or by some of their prominent ministers.

PRESCIENCE

The prophetic spirit by which the future is revealed is usually considered to be the principal sign of a prophet. We do not believe it to be the most important part of a prophet's work, but concede that it is prominent. In considering the prophecies of Joseph Smith no Christian should resort to the arguments of infidels. In any work done by human agency there may be imperfections. Inspiration is not necessarily verbal. The Bible prophets used their own forms of expression, some of which could be improved upon perhaps; objections which are specious, to say the least.

The prophetic career of Joseph Smith was indicated early in his youth. He was born in December, 1805, and as soon as 1823 he claimed that the angel which had appeared to him gave him promise of his future calling and predicted that his name should be both well and evilly spoken of among all nations. The boy was at that time unknown to the world, without learning or prestige, and of a family in very humble circumstances though honest and of religious tendencies; yet today the name of Joseph Smith is known throughout the world, being spoken against by the peddler of unreliable rumors and idle tales, but honored by those who realize the value of the great work he accomplished for the blessing of those who seek the Lord. With all our modern facilities for publicity, which were not then in use, even men of wealth and prestige would scarcely dare predict for themselves such world-wide recognition with any probability that their prediction would be fulfilled. It is a remarkable prophecy, and marvelously fulfilled.

This young boy in whom was the "spirit of the gods," fearlessly proclaimed that the Almighty had chosen him as the instrument through whom the gospel should soon be restored with its ancient outpouring of the Holy Ghost, and the church be organized as it was in the days of Christ. Notwithstanding the attempts of the most learned Reformers to restore the church was impossible without revelation from the great head; yet this boy lived to accomplish what had never been done since the days of the ancient Apostles, God sealing the work with His approval by the gifts of the Holy Ghost in such marvellous power as has no record since the Savior's time. Even the Scriptural name of the church was restored, which none of the reformers had done, and apparently had never thought of doing. Thus, what all the theological wisdom of the centuries had failed to bring about was accomplished by this young prophet whose draughts of wisdom came from the heavenly fountain, for God was with him and directed him in bringing forth His church as the angel had told him, years before, should be done. We cannot call this the result of chance. It was far beyond man's wisdom, to say nothing of the understanding of an obscure boy. It is not humanly probable that a boy would conceive, plan and execute a work of one-half its perfection and magnitude years after he had foretold it. Divinity is written clearly and ineffaceably on the pages of its history.

At the beginning of the movement this heaven-appointed servant prophesied in the name of the Lord that the blessed gifts of the Holy Ghost should be given to those who would obey the restored gospel, and if faithful the Lord would cause the "heavens to shake for their good" (D. and C. 34:3, 6).

The testimony of thousands among the assemblies of the saints, and in periodicals and pamphlets issued by the church, witness the fulfillment of the first part of this prophecy, and needs no lengthy comment; but probably no one expected to see the startling manner in which the latter part of it would shortly be fulfilled. It was November 1833. The saints had been driven from their homes, two hundred and three of which had been burned and their property destroyed by mobs of fanatics urged on by falsehood and most diabolical misrepresentations; and more than twelve hundred defenseless men, women, children and tender infants were forced out upon the bleak prairies with only the bare heavens to shelter them from storms and cold, and nothing to shelter them the more pitiless fiends in human form who had threatened to exterminate them all, though they were condemned by no law for their offense consisted in promulgating the teachings of the Lowly Nazarene in the face of the priesthood of the time. But the Omnipotent eye was watching over the little band of persecuted pilgrims. His omnipotent hand reached forth and shook the very heavens in His wrath. The stars trembled and were hurled from their courses in every direction until it seemed as if the heavens would be emptied and dissolved. The malicious mobs were filled with awful terror of an angry God whose vengeance hung over them in this fearful scene, a scene so terrible that nearly one half of the whole continent prayed for mercy, in their dreadful suspense, fearing each moment to see or feel their final doom. Professor Olmstead, of Yale College, afterwards said of this great event that it was probably "the greatest display of celestial fireworks the world has ever seen." The would-be murderers in their fright dispersed, and the saints were filled with thanksgiving to the God of heaven who had caused the heavens to shake for their good, according to his promise, and had once for all warned the whole world that those who fight against His saints will be found arrayed against the God of saints. It is said that many people in various places in their consternation became insane from the experience of those seven hours of awful horror. Is it not one of the signs of the Last Days?

In 1832 this Latter Day prophet foretold that the waves of the sea would be as a testimony, "heaving themselves beyond their bounds." At various times since then the prophecy has had its fulfillment, when great tidal waves have heaved themselves beyond their bounds destroying several thousand lives and many millions of dollars worth of property. One of these, in 1868, extended from San Francisco to Cape Horn, rising from fifty to seventy feet in height and rushing inland, destroyed many lives and an enormous amount of property. Hadyn's Dictionary of dates and other works give many of these facts more in detail. Other prophecies given by Joseph concerning wars, pestilence, plague, famines, earthquakes, unrest of nations, etc., have been or are being fulfilled in a manner that admits of no reasonable doubt; but to consider them all in detail would require a considerable sized volume.

Internal war was predicted by the prophet as early as 1831 (D. and C. 45:11), and in December of the following year he prophesied of the war of the Rebellion, that it would commence with the rebellion, of South Carolina and terminate in the death and misery of many souls; that the southern states would be divided against the northern states and call on other nations; that during this war slaves would be "marshaled and disciplined for war" (see prophecy in end of D. and C.). The details of this prophecy are so remarkable that it has been suggested that it was manufactured since the war, but such supposition is disproven by the fact that it was published in more than one work years before the war began. The Pearl of Great Price, published at Liverpool, England, in 1851, contains it; and in Hyde's Mormonism, published in 1857, it is referred to in the attempt to prove Joseph Smith a false prophet; but within four years from the time his book was published the prophecy was being fulfilled in a manner that the whole world will never forget. The southern states sent Messrs Mason and Slidell to England and France to secure their sympathies in the coming conflict, which began with the rebellion of South Carolina and terminated in the death and misery of many souls. Other details of the prophecy have also come to pass in as remarkable a manner, proving the divinity of the inspiration that made the prediction, and as clearly establishing the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith as is established the prophecies of the Bible.

THE PROPHET'S GREAT PURPOSE.

The very essence of Christ's teaching, supreme love to God and equality of man, is the aim and ideal of attainment for the Church as restored by this modern Prophet, forming the genius of the movement to establish a Zion where such equality might be in force. What object could be higher or diviner than that? In all these things Joseph Smith was the heaven-inspired leader who spoke with a "Thus saith the Lord!" The book of Doctrine and Covenants containing the revelations given to the church through him is unlike any other book in existence except the word of God, and the impress of its divinity is there to inspire every soul who seeks the word of the Lord. It conveys light to the mind. The intelligence revealed in some of its pages is equal to any inspired writing in existence today. On this point we commend sections seventy-six, eighty-five, ninety, one hundred and eight, and other parts of the work as evidencing the inspiring stimulus which it contains. We assert, without fear of the possibility of adverse proof, that from the view point of high purpose combined with inspired leadership Joseph Smith was far in advance of any religious teacher of modern times, leaving behind him a work that shall endure to bless mankind and lead them in the way of truth.

THE SHEEP AND GOATS, WERE THEY BAPTIZED?

BY ELDER A. H. CHRESTENSEN

Beginning at the 14th verse of the 2nd chapter of James we read these words "What doth it profit my brethren though a man may say he hath faith and have not works? can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked and destitute of daily food and one of you say unto them, depart in peace; be ye warmed and filled, notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, what doth it profit? Even so faith if it hath not works is dead being alone. Yea a man may say thou hast faith and I have works, show me thy faith without thy works and I will show you my faith by my works. Thou believest there is one God; thou doest well, the Devils believe' also and tremble." But wilt thou know O vain man that faith without works is dead?"

How many times has this text been made to do service against the unbeliever, to induce obedience to the first principles, that is the initiatory ordinances unto the church, when the salutation is "my brethren," nevertheless we will try and apply this reading to the lesson that shall be attempted at this time.

I now call your attention to a parable stated by our Lord, recorded in the 25th chapter of Matthew. This parable has also been used to do duty in proving the different rewards in glory, to which use I am inclined to believe was never intended by the author of that parable. I refer to the parable of the sheep and goats. Now I wish to say that I do not want to fall into the error of searching the Scriptures to find a passage that may be used to bolster up my preconceived idea on any point though my idea on that point may be correct, but after that I by the help of that Spirit may be able to discover the application the author of such passage had in mind and shape my opinion to fit that. We have been asked to draw on our imagination to such an extent that we could see a third party which is not specifically mentioned at all, and only by a very obscure influence is the third party suggested.

Well says one, unless you have the third party it will not fit our position on the glories in heaven. Perhaps not. Perhaps it will not be necessary to apply the parable there at all, but we may discover that it was meant to illustrate another point entirely.

As briefly as possible may we examine some of the salient points of this parable, perhaps we may discover that the sheep were not the honorable men of the earth but were baptized believers.

The very first words are "When the Son of man shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him." May I inquire when you expect this event to occur? Is it not to occur at his second coming or the next time he shall appear. His first coming was as a babe in the manger, and are we not justified in believing that the next time shall be in great glory and the mount of Olives will be cleft in twain at the touch of his foot etc. Surely. "Then shall he sit on the throne of his glory and before him shall be gathered all nations." What for? Judgment of course. When? When he shall come in his glory, the reading informs us. Now don't place too strict a classification on the words "all nations" you might not be willing to follow where that leads.

Please keep in mind also that we have not yet decided who the sheep and goats are. They might all have been baptized.

Don't put it off till the last resurrection because you think the goats are the ones that should be raised and judged then you remember the text says "when" he shall come in glory. When means at the same time. There is nothing said about a thousand years elapse right after the "when."

"And he shall set his sheep on his right hand" Oh! Now we are beginning to see who the sheep are.

Who are to sit on the Father's right hand? Mark 16:19, here we are told "Jesus was received up unto heaven and sat on the right hand of God." Who else? Why the saints. Does not the Lord say "that where I am there ye may be also, referring to the saints. Who else? The sheep, this parable tells us. Now I am not going to say that the right hand of God means a literal place with upholstered seats where those worthy might rest forever but rather indicates a classification and we see the classification of the sheep and saints are identical and he now says: "come ye blessed of my father." Here the master addresses the sheep as "the blessed of my father," of course they were. Do we not read in John that he is the shepherd and they that have entered by the door are the sheep and they know his voice and a stranger they will not follow, and that they follow him.

See his sheep follow him "Come ye blessed of my father inherit the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world." Oh! indeed. A chorus of voices are exclaiming, "now you are done, your ship has run aground, you can go no further." Well, let us have a mariners' hope, perhaps the tide will come in or the wind change and carry us back to sea.

You are thinking of the passage which says, "I go to prepare a place for you," and the sheep were to inherit the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world, therefore the sheep could not have been the brethren.

I have even heard some say, supplementing the wish with a prayer that they didn't want the place prepared from the foundation of the world. I prefer to be a little more conservative.

Nephi can you help us off the shoals, sixth chapter and forty second verse. Listen! "But behold, the righteous, the saints of the Holy one of Israel, they who have believed in the Holy one of Israel, they who have endured the crosses of the world and despised the shame of it. They shall inherit the kingdom of God which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world; and their joy shall be full forever."

Brother mine, if you don't want the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world you don't belong to the class described here by Nephi, hence you must be a goat.

That ought to be an eye opener, 37th verse And then shall the righteous (the sheep of the 33rd verse) answer him, etc. And in the 46th verse the righteous, the sheep, enter into eternal life which we understand is the greatest gift of God to man. And the goats go the other way.

What became of the brethren? I suppose they are still standing there waiting. What becomes of the statement that "except ye are born of water and the Spirit ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven, Evidently the sheep did enter which forces the conclusion that they had been thus born. This fact which was implied in the beginning of these remarks has been proven, for they went right in to the place prepared for the saints as Nephi has told us—Sit on the right hand of God—were called blessed, the righteous, and gained eternal life. What more?

I may add that to prepare doesn't necessarily mean the beginning of the preparation of a place or thing but might refer to the concluding work of preparation.

Now let us consider another application of this parable bearing in mind the text read in the beginning.

Let us also read the parable of the talents that immediately precedes this one of the sheep and goats.

We think the two parables may have been intended to illustrate the same point viz. service. We note that the Lord gave his servants talents, some magnified their talents, brought forth works, the one did not, merely entered the door and there stood until the Lord came never performing any of the acts of true religion, visited the fatherless nor widows, nor kept himself unspotted from the world, nor bridled his tongue nor ever paid a dime unto the treasury of the church so that those appointed might look after the fatherless or widow, etc. He only looked in the perfect law of liberty and became a forgetful hearer. Now notice: The 30th verse calls him an unprofitable servant and says that he is cast into outer darkness where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, evidently the same place the goats were to be cast. If there is any truth in the adage that "Birds of a feathers flock together" then he must have been a goat.

He was a sheep but being unprofitable became a goat. And that is just where you will land my fellow traveler unless you brace up and do something. Baptism alone will never save you.

How can the sheep do unto the least of their brethren and by so doing do unto Christ. Give him meat (Jno. 4:32) drink (Jno. 4:14) stranger (Eph. 2:12) clothed (Rev. 3: 15-17) sick (Matt. 9:12), these references will give a suggestion as to how we may do good to our Master by serving each other.

There is nothing in the parable to indicate that Jesus did not address some of the sheep and pointing to the other sheep admonish them to serve one another, and again if the goats had not been in the church, they could not be eligible to the second death which the last verse of the chapter seemed to indicate was their reward for neglect, the thing with which they were charged is not punishable by so great a punishment unless they have had the light and turned therefrom.

I have already told you I want to be conservative so will say that I am not sure the application I have given is the one the Master had in mind but hope and trust that all have felt the emphasis placed upon the necessity of service to one another.

I close with the two great commandments of our Lord. Matt. 22:37-39, "Jesus said unto him 'thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy mind' this is the first and great commandment and the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

When the Lord comes in his glory may we be numbered with the sheep and not among the goats is my prayer.

ARE OUR INDIANS SIBERIANS?

Evidence that the original home of the so-called American Indian was in Siberia, whence the ancestors of the present tribes emigrated to this continent after the close of the glacial period, is presented in The Scientific American Supplement (New York, May 17) by Carl Hawes Butman. According to Mr. Butman, the probable ancestors of our Indians has been unearthed in Siberia by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of the National Museum, in a course of a recent trip to northern Asia for this purpose. Dr. Hrdlicka believes that many modern Siberian tribes are closely related to our Indians and show that relationship, not only in their customs and traditions, but in their physical characteristics and facial traits. Anthropologists have long believed, Mr. Butman says, that some relationship of this kind exists. He writes in substance:

"If their views concerning the Indian's origin are correct, there must be archeological remains and even a residue of his descendants in some out-of-the-way corners of eastern and northeastern Siberia, where his ancestral stock lived in very early times. With this point in view, the students of anthropology ry have been searching long and diligently in eastern Asia for these supposed forbears of our Indians, but while their researches have not been without interesting results, no absolute proof has been brought forth. Up to last year no anthropological investigation had been carried on to any great extent in eastern Asia, and consequently many points remain to be examined and reported on before the home of the physical stock from which the original American was derived could be permanently established.

"While affairs were in this state, Dr. Hrdlicka was given an opportunity to visit a few of the most important parts of eastern Asia, and to ascertain what evidence could be found there relative to this subject.

"Among the interesting sites explored by Dr. Hrdlicka are the burial mounds, or 'kourgans,' as they are called, located on the banks of the Yenisei and Selenga rivers and their tributaries, and along the streams of northern Mongolia, especially on the banks of the Kerulen. These 'kourgans,' which number thousands are of inestimable value to the students in this work, on account of the fact that their date extends from modern times back to the stone age of these regions. They are but little excavated and practically untouched.

"Oddly enough, the date of the mounds is established quite as readily as if the date of construction were carved on a stone, for the different objects uncovered, be they of gold, copper, iron, bronze, or stone, identify the origin of the particular mound from which they came as falling within definite time limits. The skulls of the skeletons taken from more recent mounds are short and somewhat spherical, but the 'kourgans' of earlier dates, containing no mental objects, yield skulls resembling the dolichocephalic type, long and narrow, and much like American Indian skulls of this type. It is difficult to assert to just what race the older skeletons and skulls belong, and yet, on the banks of the lower Yenisei River, and in several other localities, living dolichocephalic types are not unusual, and such natives frequently bear a strong physical resemblance to our native Indians."

The most important part of the exploration, however, had to do with the living descendants of the old races. Among these the investigator came into contact with representatives of many tribes and was present at a great religious ceremony where seven thousand Mongolians from all parts of the country were in attendance. We read on:

"Among all these tribes and clans there were individuals who apparently represent the older population, pre-Mongolian and pre-Chinese, who belong partly to the brachycephalic type, though in a smaller extent to the dolichocephalic type. These men and women are practically identical with the American Indians of similar head form. The particular individuals are brown in color, with straight black hair, dark brown eyes, and facial and bodily features which are strikingly like those of the native American. The men are practically beardless. Some of these people, if dressed in the costumes and regalia of an Indian, and placed among them, could not be distinguished from them. At least Dr. Hrdlicka states that there are no means at the disposal of the anthropologist by which to make such a distinction. It is not only in outward appearances that these natives of Siberia resemble the Indians, but mentally as well, and in numerous habits and customs which differ from the environment and time seem not to have effaced."

On his return trip, Dr. Hrdlicka stopped at Geneva and made a brief report to the International Congress of Prehistoric Anthropology, then in session. In this report he said:

"The writer feels justified in advancing the opinion that there exist to-day over large parts of eastern Siberia, and in Mongolia, Tibet, and other regions in that part of the world, numerous remains, which now form constituent parts of more modern tribes or nations, of a more ancient population (related in origin perhaps with the latest paleolithic European), which was physically identical with, and in all probability gave rise to, the American Indian.

"The writer is able to merely touch on the subject thus approached. The task of learning the exact truth remains for the future. In relation to opportunities for further investigation, he has satisfied himself that the field for anthropological and archeological research in eastern Asia is vast, rich, to a large extent still virgin, and probably not excessively complicated. It is surely a field which calls for close attention not only on the part of European students of the Far East, but especially on the part of the American investigator who deals with the problems of the origin and immigration of the American Indians."—The Literary Digest.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Did not all the apostles of whom we have mention in the New Testament, see Christ in person? and was not a personal acquaintance with Christ one of the necessary qualifications for apostleship?

The common claim that an apostle must have been one who had been with Christ is based upon Acts 1:21, 22 which says relative to the choosing of Matthias: "Wherefore of these men which have accompanied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto the same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection."

In selecting an apostle at that time when Jesus had just been taken from them in death and of whose resurrection they were witnesses, it would be highly proper, and of urgent necessity under the circumstances, that one be chosen who also had human knowledge of the things of which the rest of the apostles were witnesses, but we see nothing in the above quotation which lays down a rule or law, which was to govern every future selection. It was a statement of fact based upon the conditions, for the 120 disciples which were gathered on that occasion represented the faithful following of Christ who had stood true under the recent persecutions, and there were no others from whom choice could be made. Paul was called to the apostleship and he had not been with Christ nor was he a witness of his resurrection only as he obtained a knowledge of it by revelation. His call came by the Holy Ghost so that it cannot be said that any mistake was made. Others were also called and there is no evidence that any of those apostles selected subsequently to Paul had followed with Christ or had seen him.

Personal association with Christ is not an essential qualification for a call to the apostleship, but Jesus indicates the way by which qualification may be given when he said: "But ye shall receive power, after the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and all Judea, and in all Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Acts 1:8. It is true those to whom Jesus spoke were already apostles and their previous association with him had brought them a wide knowledge of things, but he nevertheless commanded them to tarry until they were endowed with power from on high. It was the Holy Ghost which gave them the abiding power to be witnesses for Christ.

Jesus makes the Holy Ghost equal to himself in its work among men. He calls him "another Comforter," which was to say: "I have been your teacher but now I am going away. I will send him unto you. I have not had time to teach you all things. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth," he will be your teacher." (See John 12:7-15.) This Comforter, the Holy Ghost, taking Christ's place in the lives of his servants is capable of giving them the same instruction, power and courage as he gave, so that the man who receives this divine gift may just as fully be qualified for the apostleship as one who had been with Christ.

The real question back of the one under consideration is: "Did not the apostolic office in the church cease with the original twelve?" Since no statement is given by Christ or the apostles themselves, indicating that it would, and since other apostles were chosen from time to time making a precedent for perpetuation, we may safely answer, "No." Evidence upon this point has been often given in this paper, so we leave it here.

(1) What is the difference between "remission" and "forgiveness?" (2) Does revoke imply repentance? (3) Define iniquity, purging out. (4) Is an elder justified in withholding his services because of his affliction?

(1) Remission and forgiveness as relating to pardon for sin are synonyms having meanings so nearly alike that the difference can scarcely be defined. They mean virtually the same. (2) Revoke in its common use means "to annul by recalling or taking back; to repeal; to rescind; to cancel," etc. Revoking a commandment or promise by the Lord does not necessarily imply repentance. The special commandments and promises of God are given according to conditions existing, and when not fulfilled until conditions change which render them unnecessary or inopportune the Lord may revoke them without being chaged with having changed his mind. When man promptly and faithfully fulfills what God requires of him there can be no revocation, but when man fails to do so until the opportunity is lost it necessitates a revoking of the commandment as well as the promise. (3) Iniquity is gross sin usually involving injustice, want of rectitude, or immorality, though it often refers to all manner of sin. Purging out, as the words may apply to iniquity, is the removal of all sinful conditions from ones life and the avoidance of sinful acts. (4) It depends upon circumstances. The elder's affliction might be such as to render him unable to answer the call, or it might be such as to make it unwise for him to visit those who are sick. If baptism be called for and the elder could only go into the water through great suffering and other elders being at hand who could conveniently do it, he might be justified in withholding his services. In all such cases the elder should be left as the sole judge of his own condition and of his ability to render official service. No true elder will refuse to do what he is able to do, and consistently may do.

WHY FEAR THE SECOND SUMMER?

"Oh, don't you feed him anything at all?"

I was keeping my infant son on a milk diet, and was making a strenuous fight to prevent him from involuntarily tasting the viands on the grown-ups' bill of fare! The speaker was a young and childless Mrs. who continued by spiritedly remarking that one of the first things she would feel safe in feeding a baby of hers would be mashed potatoes and gravy! A great many mothers think so, too.

What if two teeth would soon be here and eighteen more on the way! What if the potatoes and gravy do not need chewing! (Which they do need and which act a baby cannot properly attend to, until it has all its teeth, and then it takes time—years of it.) Consider the properties of potatoes and ingredients of gravies, which combined with the effect of cooking renders them extremely hard for a child to digest.

The diet for teething children should be pure sweet milk, or some liquid food which agrees with it perfectly. If kept on this diet there need be no such fear of the traditional "second summer," because his digestion will be in a normal condition.

It is true that this period of life is an important one, during which time the child needs very special watch care.

But only in that it's stomach be kept in good order, and that it's bowels are always warm enough; and covered so that drafts will not chill, thus avoiding colds which result in disastrous bowel trouble.

Of course the cutting of double teeth and of most teeth with some babies, is usually attended by swollen gums and fever, especially in hot weather. This is due doubtless to imperfect prenatal life and lack of proper care afterwards, for teething is a natural process and not intended to be painful.

But—heat is harder on any one's digestion, than is cooler weather. For this reason mothers should be careful all during the teething period to keep solid foods from the child winter and summer. Then when the test comes, there will be no anxiety. If it does not care to eat, do not try to make it do so.

If the gums are irritated keep them cooled with water. My boy loved to chew on a cool, clean cloth, which I redampened frequently. Do not rub the gums. That makes them so sore and irritated.

Feed the baby regularly. Regularity and nothing but good, cool water between meals will keep the child fat and well. I know from experience that this will create the very healthful habit of not piecing between meals, when the child grows older.

So often candy is the resort of mothers to keep the baby quiet. My boy was past two years before he ever tasted it, and even then sparingly. I rather believe that is one reason why he has never formed the habit of calling for candy as a treat; likewise the various forms of pastry; meats, hot breads, etc. The ingredients of which are distressing combinations, to be used sparingly by even the adult. But he is always ready for three square meals a day, now.

Just because some one's child has lived through and "always eaten every thing you have," is no reason yours will. Besides, later on this some one's child will inevitably reap the after effects, a shortened life—from one or many ailments; or a lingering one with rheumatism, indigestion or any number of complications that work havoc with peace of mind and body.

A child's system requires the elements of sugar in it's development; give it a pure lump occasionally, but do not sweeten its foods more than is necessary. Sweets are especially hard on the teeth in most cases.

It is not the condition of the teeth that causes the stomach trouble, but the child's sickness (and death, if it comes to that,) is caused by improper feeding at teething time. Keep the child quiet and cool and comfortable. It is often necessary to change a babies clothes several times a day to keep it from getting too warm and too cool, etc., and bringing on colds. Give the baby a nice cooling bath before it sleeps, and it always rests better.

The "second summer" should be no different than any summer, if fed correctly. In the days of our grandparents and their forefathers, when there was more of a mush and milk diet used, and none of the modern delicacies and mixtures, people lived long and enjoyed health.

THE CARE OF THE MOUTH AND TEETH,

BY DR. F. B. WILSON.

(Note. Dr. Wilson, of our church and resident in Independence, has consented to provide us with several articles on this subject. The first one follows. We feel this is a matter neglected as a rule by mothers, chiefly because they do not understand its importance.)

Very few mothers know or realize, the importance of the care of the mouth and teeth. When a babe is born, it should have proper care given its eyes and mouth by well trained nurses. The babe's health depends a great deal upon the care it gets while nursing.

If the mother or nurse does not use care and wash the little fellow's mouth twice or three times each day, the milk taken into the mouth while nursing, will collect under the fold of mucus membrane and sour and decompose. And the next time the babe nurses it will naturally take into its stomach this sour and decomposed product, which is a direct cause for colic.

By using a small sponge or clean linen cloth dipped in either of these remedies: borolytol, glycothymolin, lysterine, a solution of soda water or any mild antiseptic and wash the mouth well,—the babe is free of colic and its stomach performs its function. Thus the blood is filled with the necessary elements that go to build up the bones, soft tissue and the teeth.

When the child at six months begins to cut its first lower incisors, you will notice it begins to drule, cry and fret. You should take that dabe to the best dentist your city affords and lance those teeth through. The dentist should know just about when this should be done and tell you when to come back if they were not ready at that time.

This will save your child from suffering in the process of eruption. Keep its stomach in order, thereby keeping the blood and system in better shape to build up those permanent teeth that are lying just beneath the baby teeth.

My personal experience, with my own children has been that it does not give the babe pain to lance its gums. It will cry from having its mouth forcibly opened, but the lancing gives no pain. Nature has provided that, in as much as the gum tissue has very few nerve endings.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT IN AND FOR THE DISTRICT OF SASKATCHEWAN, CANADA.

To the Saints and friends of the Saskatchewan District:— Please take notice that upon the recommendation of the conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints of the district of Saskatchewan, Canada, Bro. J. Dobson of Disley, Sask., has been duly appointed bishop's agent for the Presiding Bishopric of said church in place of Bro. J. A. Beckman, deceased.

We hope and trust that the saints and friends of Saskatchewan may be earnest in their help of Bro. Dobson in his work and that the Lord may bless each of the helpers in said district in order that his work may move forward and the poor be helped and the gospel preached to all who desire to hear.

The Bishopric regret to have to announce the decease of former agent, Bro. Beckman, who was faithful in word and an excellent helper in the same. Bro. Beckman was faithful unto the end and will have his reward. Our loss in the help of Bro. Beckman was a severe one but the gain to Bro. Beckman is such so that each one may feel that the brother has gone to his reward. The Bishopric also desire to thank Sr. Etta Beckman for the faithful work she has given to the office from the departure of Bro. Beckman until August 1st. Her work has been appreciated. We trust the Lord will bless and help her to overcome in all her undertakings.

Desiring that peace and good-will may attend each of the helping saints and friends in the Saskatchewan District in order that His will may be performed and His law kept, I am in behalf of the Bishopric,

Very respectfully,

E. L. Kelley,

EDITORIAL

AIN'T IT FINE TODAY?

Sure this world is full of trouble—
I ain't said it ain't.

Mel I've had enough an' double
Reason for complaint.

Rain an' storm have come to fret me,
Skies were often gray;

Thorns and brambles have beset me
On the road—but say,
Ain't it fine today!

What's the use of always weepin',
Makin' trouble last?

What's the use of always keepin'
Thinkin' of the past?

Each must have his tribulation,
Water with his wine,

Life, it ain't no celebration,
Trouble? I've had mine—
But today is fine!

It's today that I am livin',
Not a month ago;

Havin', lovin' takin', givin',
As time wills it so.

Yesterday a cloud of sorrow
Fell across the way;

It may rain again tomorrow,
It may rain—but say,
Ain't it fine today!—Sel.

ALL MAY HELP.

The letter department contains two letters touching upon the payment of the church debt which we commend to our readers for a careful reading, as they offer suggestions which may help some others to "go and do likewise."

We seldom sense the full value of the blessings which God bestows upon us, even in material things, nor are we always aware of the extent of his blessings. Undoubtedly the hand of God preserves his children many times from accidents which in the absence of his watchcare would entail great suffering and financial loss. How many times his protection and blessing ward off sickness we never know, though at times when sickness or affliction comes upon us and we feel his healing power we are made conscious of his beneficence. While in such cases our hearts are thankful we seldom think to express our thankfulness in any material way such as helping in a larger measure to lighten the burdens of the church, and of making provision for the needy and distressed.

The providence of God is manifested through the natural elements, such as the rains in their season, the frosts and snows of winter, and the heat of summer, all of which aid in the production of the abundant harvests which supply the temporal needs of man. But if the rain be withheld for a time the fields begin to languish, and men begin to mourn the loss of full harvests. They are quick to discern material loss and may feel to reprove the Lord for his failure to send the rain just at the time it is needed, but perhaps the drouth is the essential thing to awaken men to a realization of what the Lord had done for them and what they ought to do for the Lord.

For years the drouth has prevailed in the Lord's field, caused by men withholding the means which are so essential to a full harvest, and yet the Lord has not complained. The divine blessings have flowed copiously, but those which flow from man to man have been measured with meager measure, until men have almost forgotten the wise counsel given anciently: "Freely ye have received, freely give." If the Lord withholds for a time some of the temporal blessings it may be a reminder to us that we have been withholding from our fellowmen and from the Lord the blessings which he requires us to impart to them. Very recently the Lord said to the church:

"In order that the temporal affairs of the church may be successfully carried on and the accumulated debt of the church in its respective departments where debts have accumulated may be properly met and in due time discharged, the church is instructed, both as members and as a body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment or otherwise expending the tithes and offerings of the church in that which may not be essential unto the continued onward progress of the general work; and both in private and in public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be needful to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body. And the Spirit counseleth the church in this regard."

Let the hand of man be as bounteous toward his fellowman as the hand of God has been and there will be no drouth in the harvest field of the Lord. The several institutions in the church will then be in a position to do their best work, and the church treasury will be so replenished that the work of extending the gospel will be maintained and the church accomplish its divine purpose.

The University of Missouri generously provided a summer short course for ministers, including studies in Sociology, Economics, Agriculture, Horticulture, and Rural church work. The editor was recently privileged to attend this session at Columbia, Mo., and was greatly pleased with the character of the work offered, and fully enjoyed the association of the ministers of various denominations who were in attendance. It was to be regretted that more men of the various churches including our own, either could not, or did not avail themselves of the opportunity of taking this course, and of receiving the valuable information and social uplift which were received by those who did attend. We found an excellent class of men whose lives are truly devoted to the bettering of the people in their various fields of labor. The instructors, without exception, were aimable and cheerfully anxious to do even more than the precise duties of their position required in order to meet every desire of the students. This was the second year of the course and it was the unanimous opinion of the class that it should be continued each summer.

On June 21st a resolution was introduced in the United States Senate by the Hon. John D. Works, of California, proposing an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the sale, manufacture, and importation of distilled liquor containing alcohol, except for mechanical, scientific, and medicinal purposes. The resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MAKING A CLEAN CITY.

A boxing match recently billed for Independence was headed off by an ordinance introduced by Bro. D. J. Krahl and passed by the city council, making it a misdemeanor for any person to publicly engage in sparring or boxing, or to aid, abet or assist in any such exhibition, or to furnish any room or place for such exhibition, punishable by fine of not less than five, nor more than one hundred dollars.

The Chetek Alert (Wis.) contains a front page writeup of the saints reunion recently held at that place, and says it was one of the most successful gatherings in its history. The sermons are well spoken of as also the auxiliary work conducted by Prof. J. A. Gunsolley.

Your mirror will give you a fair likeness of the person against whom you have most reason to guard yourself.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 13.

AGENCY OR FREE-WILL.

One of the doctrines clearly set forth in the standard books in the Reorganized Church is that of "Agency," commonly known as "Freewill." Simply stated it is that in creating man and giving him life, God gave him the power and the liberty to exercise his own will to choose and to do either good or evil. God permitted evil to have place in this world, and man was made with the capability of doing right according to the law of his being which God had given, and of doing wrong in opposition to that law should he choose to do so.

This right of agency being God-given is inalienable, and the history of the world shows no instance in which God has taken away that right or restricted it in any way, though Satan has done so many times, and man also has often restricted that right in his fellowman. The law of life was given in Eden, and man was left free to obey or disobey though he was warned by his Creator that obedience would bring life, and disobedience would bring death, and he must meet the consequences of his action. The nature of God's law remains the same to this day, righteousness bringing the reward of life, and unrighteousness the reward of death, and men are left free to make their own choice.

Of Satan it is said that he was once an angel of authority in the presence of God, but that in the exercise of his freewill he rebelled against God and sought to take the kingdom, and God's power, but was cast out with one third of the hosts of heaven whom he had turned away "because of their agency." (Doctrine and Covenants 28: 10; 76: 3.) It is also said that "he maketh war with the saints of God," and it must needs be that the devil should tempt the children of men or they could not be agents unto themselves, for if they never should have bitter, they could never know the sweet." To shut out from man all knowledge of evil, and place such restrictions about him that he could not sin, would be to deny him every degree of liberty and independence and to deprive him of the power of enjoyment, which are contrary to the will and purpose of God. The Lord has said: "I gave unto them their knowledge in the day I created them; and in the garden of Eden gave I unto man his agency; D. C. 36: 7.

Through the light of Christ intelligence is given to all men by which they are able to discern between truth and error, right and wrong in such degree as they may need in the exercise of their agency. This is in harmony with the statement of John that Christ "was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John 1:9. But of Satan it is said "that wicked one cometh and taketh away light and truth through disobedience from the children of men." (D. C. 90:6.) He takes away the means by which man's agency is made effective and thus destroys the agency itself, bringing men into various forms of bondage.

Every person is to be held accountable for his sins only, and cannot be held guilty of the sin placed upon him by his parents, as may be seen by the following:

And the Lord said unto Adam, behold I have forgiven thee thy transgression in the garden of Eden. Hence came the saying abroad among the people, that the Son of God hath atoned for original guilt, wherein the sins of the parents cannot be answered upon the heads of the children, for they are whole from the foundation of the world. And the Lord spake unto Adam, saying, Inasmuch as thy children are conceived in sin, even so, when they begin to grow up sin cometh in their hearts, and they taste the bitter that they may know to prize the good. And it is given unto them to know good from evil; wherefore they are agents unto themselves."—Gen. 6:55-58. The Holy Scriptures as translated and corrected by the Spirit of Revelation by Joseph Smith Jr.

Thus children are not held accountable for having sinful natures, or the capability to sin, all such original sin have been forgiven through Christ. The exercise of agency or freewill is dependent upon intelligence, and until the child is of sufficient age to understand between right and wrong he cannot choose either one or the other. Hence he cannot sin in his infancy and early childhood, and is innocent before God. For this reason the church holds that baptism, which the Scriptures say is for the remission of sins, is not applicable to little children. Upon this point the Book of Mormon is plain:

Listen to the words of Christ, your Redeemer, your Lord and your God. Behold, I came into the world not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance; the whole need no physician, but they that are sick; wherefore little children are whole, for they are not capable of committing sin; wherefore the curse of Adam is taken from them in me, that it hath no power over them; and the law of circumcision is done away in me." Moroni 8:8, 9.

And Moroni continues:

Behold I say unto you, that this thing shall ye teach, repentance and baptism unto those who are accountable and capable of committing sin; yea, teach parents that they must repent and be baptized, and humble themselves as their little children, and they shall all be saved with their little children; and their little children need no repentance, neither baptism. Behold baptism in unto repentance to the fulfilling the commandments unto the remission of sins. But little children are alive in Christ, even from the foundation of the world." Verses 11-13.

The common practice of baptizing infants thereby placing upon them obligations which they are required to fulfill after coming to accountability is subversive of this right of agency, the child being bound to the church without the opportunity of choice.

It is apparent from the foregoing that there are two opposing forces operating upon men, one having its origin in God and tending to good, the other having its origin in Satan and tending to evil. The existence of the latter does not deny the supremacy of the former, but God permits the latter to operate until man through the exercise of his agency learns by experience to do the right. Ultimately, as the Scriptures declare, this power of evil will be entirely subdued, and "righteousness shall cover the earth."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ON AGENCY.

Christian Science teaching upon this point seems to be in contrast with that of the Latter Day Saints. It holds that man is created perfect, being the reflection of God, and is incapable of sin. As seen in former articles it holds that there is no real devil, and no power of evil to tempt men, and that so-called evil is but the absence of good. Man being made in the likeness of God is "co-existent with God." Science and Health p 473, and is the "infinite expression of infinite Mind." (p231). "God and man, Principle and Idea, are inseparable, harmonious and eternal." (p232). "The great spiritual fact must be brought out that man is, not shall be, perfect and immortal." (p426). "Man is spiritual and perfect; . . . the generic term for all that reflects God's image and likeness . . . that which has not a single quality undervived from Deity." (p471).

These references are given as tending to show that man is not susceptible to the influence of evil as usually recognized in the world and that there is neither need nor opportunity for him to exercise his own free will. But there is more touching upon this point.

Man is incapable of sin, sickness and death, inasmuch as he derives his essence from God, and possesses not a single original, or undervived power. Hence the real man cannot depart from holiness. Nor can God, by whom man was evolved, engender the capacity or freedom to sin. p. 471.

If God is admitted to be the only Mind and Life, there ceases to be any opportunity for sin and death. p. 172.

God, or Good, could never make men capable of sin. p. 476.

Christian Science admits sin only in the sense of its being "an illusion," "a false belief." It speaks of the "nothingness of evil," (p189), and teaches that men "must deny sin." (p320). Man being incapable of sin has no choice but to remain in harmony with the law of his being; he can have no freewill or agency.

In Science we learn it is material sense, not Soul, which sins; and it will be found that it is the sense of sin which is lost, and not a sinful soul. p. 476.

Soul cannot sin or be lost. p. 206.

Christian Scientists having no ordinances do not baptize infants as many religious bodies do, hence in this particular there is no interference with what the Latter Day Saints regard as the right of agency, but the denial of the existence of evil, and its author—Satan, the denial of man's capability to sin, the denial of any judgment to come and the administration of penalties, are from the Saints' viewpoint subversive of man's freewill—denying him the power and opportunity of doing either good or evil and of meeting the consequences.

This position is consistent however with other teachings of Christian Science which declare the unreality of matter and that man is spirit only, that there are no laws applying to the physical man, while the soul or spirit cannot sin. As stated in a previous number, what the ultimate of life will be under Christian Science is not made clear.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The close of the six weeks' session of the Daily Vacation Bible School, at the stone church, Thursday night, was an occasion of much interest to pupils and teachers, parents and other friends.

The products of many busy little hands during the past six weeks were put on display and were greatly admired by a throng of visitors. The display was in the building at the rear of the church. It was so crowded that it was difficult to enter.

In the main auditorium, which was also crowned a program was rendered, a feature of which was a talk to the pupils by George S. Bryant, principal of the Independence High School.

W. E. LaRue was principal of the school, and he had an able corps of assistants in the various departments.

This is the first school of its kind ever held in this city. It was considered quite a success. The total enrollment was 370, and, although the weather has been exceedingly warm all the session, the daily attendance was considerably more than 300.—Independence Examiner.

The Independence Sanitarium has for some time been filled to its normal capacity, more patients having been received up to the present time this year than were received during 1912, and the business of the institution during the seven and one-half months of this year being twenty per cent greater than that of last year. Special opportunities are offered in the nurses training course for a number of our young women to become graduate nurses, and Dr. Messenger informs us that there are yet several vacancies to be filled. The Sanitarium offers a course with the practical training had by the actual experience of caring for the sick—a course equal to that found in other institutions, and superior in its religious influence. The help furnished by the Sanitarium to the sick and distressed is fulfilling in a high degree the original purposes of the institution.

President Joseph Smith, notwithstanding eighty-one years nearly have passed over him, still holds his own in retaining his mental faculties; and though having lost his sight and partially his hearing he still holds a deep interest in public affairs. His appetite is fairly good, but the almost daily walks up town which he enjoyed so long in the way of physical exercise have been abandoned of late on account of the severe heat. We hope that as soon as cooler weather returns he may again be seen upon our streets.

The missionary tent has again been removed from Main Street to a point near the Alton Depot, where Bro. Jenkins and Self are holding forth, with frequent assistance from visiting missionaries.

On Friday evening occurred the death of Bro. Henry C. Ballenger at the age of 35 years. He had been sick for some time with dropsy, and leaves a widow and two children.

The Sunday services were excellent, Elder W. H. Garrett of the stake presidency preaching the morning sermon giving timely counsel on the watchcare which parents should have over their children, especially in regard to their being away from home, upon the streets, etc. Sometimes parents are so indifferent to the whereabouts of their children that they know little of where they go or what they do, and are slow to believe their boy would do some things which are sometimes reported to them. Elder M. H. Bond also of the presidency spoke in the evening. Being of the number who occupied in surrounding branches and missions the editor did not get to attend these services.

Bro. W. H. Dean, business manager of the Ensign Publishing House attended the closing period of the Joplin reunion in the interests of this office. He reports an excellent reunion.

INDEPENDENCE, SECOND BRANCH.

Sunday, August 17th, Sunday school had a good attendance of 238, with a collection of $5.57. Bro. Gould gave a very interesting talk to the children about a boy whom he did not name. Soon the children could hardly be restrained in their eagerness to tell who he was, and when permission was given, a dozen voices answered "Daniel."

At 11 o'clock a. m. Bro. George Jenkins gave us a very interesting talk on the subject of the talents. He spoke of the justice of God, and in the ruling of his people, of his great love and all of his attributes, and showed that all were rewarded for their faithfulness, and no unnecessary exactions made. God was pictured as one who can always be relied upon for justice, equity, mercy, truth; and all that has been promised will be given.

At the 2:30 prayer service a goodly number was present and a portion of God's Spirit was enjoyed.

At 8 p. m. Bro. George Harrington spoke of the mercy of God to his people from the text, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as in heaven."

W. S. L.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Everybody is or has been on his vacation, even our correspondent. Luckily some come back as others go and we manage to keep the meetings going.

On Friday, August 8th, at Religio, one of our very young members, Miss Myrtle Trowbridge, made her first appearance alone on the program, giving an animated little sketch of one of Louisa M. Alcott's stories, "A Hole in the Wall." The program that evening was a father and daughter affair, the four numbers being rendered respectively by two of our men members and a daughter of each.

On the following Sunday Bro. Granville Trowbridge addressed the Sunday school on the importance of Normal work.

The morning sermon, by Bro. George Reeves, dwelt, with his usual intensity, upon the theme of the gospel bringing satisfaction, while all else is vanity.

The evening instruction, by Bro. J. E. Davis, was along a similar line of thought, ending with some original poetry showing the necessity of a restoration in the last days.

An event of Friday the 15th at Religio was our society paper, "The Indefinite," by Sr. Maude Parish. It was unusually good, one young brother having been heard to remark that it was the best we had ever heard. One of the musical numbers was an exceptionally clever song by Miss Etta Swift, who played her own accompaniment.

Very fluent and helpful was the talk on the kingdom of God, which Sr. Gall gave the Sunday school on the 17th. She urged the boys to be brave heroes and the girls to be pearls, basing much on the poem in "Stepping Stones" which she read to them. The two stories which she told, one from real life, were about girls who were brave soldiers for Christ—the one proving it on one occasion in a crowded assembly, and the other in the way she undertook to meet one of the recurring vexations of daily life.

The morning sermon, by Bro. Noah Cooke, whom we have not heard for a long time, was an earnest effort on the gifts and blessings of the gospel, and the discerning of spirits.

In the evening Bro. G. S. Trowbridge gave a direct and beneficial talk on "The Service of Prayer." Besides night and morning prayer, during the turmoil of the day we can offer a silent prayer to God. In difficulty and affliction, we sometimes feel like the heavens are shut, but if we have become acquainted with him by a life of service, that is the time to pray. All through the Scriptures we find these invitations from him to seek his guidance and his strength. In showing how we should enter into this service, the speaker quoted St. Paul, "I will pray with the spirit and with the understanding." So there is a spirit of prayer. Of the well known Pharisee he said, "The Pharisee may have had all of those good works to his credit, but the spirit in which he came stood in the way." Also, we should come with that chief principle—Faith. He quoted Jesus at the tomb of Lazarus:—"Father, I am glad Thou hast heard me. And yet I know that thou always hearest me." We should consider for what we should pray—earnest wisdom. We should pray for those who despisefully use us. We should pray for one another. The ending was especially effective, urging us to live such lives and have such faith that we can echo those words, "I know that Thou always hearest me."

CHICAGO, CENTRAL BRANCH.

On Wednesday evening prayer-meeting conducted by Bro. Wm. Wainwright and J. Harris was attended by twenty-six, who, evidently were seeking a balm for their weary hearts. Whether they received it or not is another matter. All I can say is, that there was plenty of it there, and if they did not receive it and wish to in the future, they will have to change their way of seeking it. I don't think it is necessary for me to say this, for all were apparently satisfied.

The number at our Sunday morning young people's prayer-meeting was small but we are thankful that God is not partial and sends his Spirit to a few as well as many. The meeting was conducted by Bro. J. J. Oliver and Daniel Macgregor. The speakers of the day Bro. D. Macgregor and A. Sherman.

Our Religio services are well attended and our worthy president hopes, with the aid of the members, to make this a grand success. God speed him on his way.

Clarence L. Wainwright.

THE CHURCH DEBT.

We have sent to all the Branch Presidents of the Stake the apportionment of their part of the indebtedness to be met; and we are hopeful to hear from every branch as early as possible, as we are anxious to get this burden off the Presiding Bishop's mind and shoulders; and feel sure there will be a hearty and willing response to the appeal.

One of our most recent organized branches, Mount Washington, has come to the front and paid in full their amount of the indebtedness, and we commend them for their faithful service, and willingness to make sacrifice for the blessed Master's cause, and feel sure the abundance of the manifestation of the Spirit will be ministered unto them, as to all the faithful branches who are anxious to do the will of God. The Grandview Branch of Kansas City, Kans., has also sent in its full quota in payment of the indebtedness.

We say to one and all, "go thou and do likewise." We are receiving a hearty response from our own branch, but the good work must not be delayed. Go too with all your might as children of God, and do all possible as we need your hearty co-operation; remember this is not your thing; but a special consecration to the Master, and every soul should welcome the opportunity to do what he requires of us.

R. Bullard.

Superintendent Friedman of the Carlisle Indian School is authority for the following:—

A full-blood Creek Indian residing in Oklahoma was recently paid $6,250 in the Muskogee County Court for his interest in his dead wife's surplus land. Within two weeks he was in the county jail at Muskogee as a pauper, charged with vagrancy. His money had been obtained by sharpers. Wherever the bootlegger has held sway, and his nefarious traffic has gone on without interruption and unpunished, the Indians have been demoralized and debauched, their property has slipped out of their fingers, and they have degenerated physically.—The Indian's Friend.

"The finest basket makers in the world are said to be the Papago Indians of Arizona. Some of their baskets will hold water. The oldest of the basket weavers is 105 years of age."—Sel.

CORRESPONDENCE

MILL SPRING, MO., AUG. 13.

Editor Ensign—I note a letter in last week's Ensign by Elder R. M. Maloney which is of timely interest to all Latter Day Saints. He makes it plain that if we are to do God's work as God has willed it, something must be done in a financial way.

The church cannot well afford to dispense with the labors of such men as Bro. Maloney and yet he cannot give his time and talents to the church if he has to go into debt to do so. Neither can the church maintain the position it should hold among the religious orders of the world, and in the sight of God encumbered with the enormous debt of $75,000.

I have seen several suggestions within the past year as to how this debt could be liquidated, but none of them so far, has been of much material benefit, and they will never be, unless put into practice. Now, I am not going to make any suggestions, but I make this resolve—

That, on the first day of September, 1913, I will send one dollar to the bishop of the church to be applied on payment of church debt; and I further resolve,

That, on the first day of each succeeding month thereafter for a period of five months, I will remit a like amount for a like purpose.

Who'll be next?

Let us see what we can do.

There are something near 65,000 members now in the church, and, for convenience we will say there are 65,000 and of this number we might safely claim that one-fourth are able bodied adult members, who can easily afford to comply with such a resolution, as I have herewith made; but again, for convenience we will say there are 15,000 members who will send in $1.00 per month for six consecutive months. Result $90,000,—cost to each of the 15,000 members $6.00, with six months time in which to save this amount.

This would pay off the present church debt, with accrued interest, and would enable the bishop to use the moneys collected by the church in providing for more elders, and in keeping those in the field we now have.

We all like to hear the gospel preaching by gospel men. Let us realize that while they must make great sacrifices in order that we may have the benefits, we, as lay members are no less obligated to bear our part of the burden. So let us get busy. Remember, the first day of September.

Let's send in $15,000 or more on that day.

A lay member,
Wesley Gibbs.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., AUG. 12.

Editor Ensign—Last week while reading the church papers and seeing the earnest appeals for financial assistance in liquidating the general church debt, I wondered how it could be done, knowing that the majority of members like myself, had all they could do to make both ends meet, when the thought came to me, that we as a people take things too much for granted. For instance, when we have sickness in the family we send for the elders and when the blessing needed is received we of course are thankful, but that is all the further thought it receives. Had we called in a physician and he had restored us, we would not only feel thankful but would hand over two dollars for every one of his visits. And we know that we must pay promptly, whether we can spare the money or not, if we would have the doctor give us prompt attention, what we shall need him again.

Then on last Sunday evening, while sitting in prayer meeting listening to the grand testimonies of some of the brothers and sisters, of how wonderfully God had healed their children, my mind went back to last winter when my dear little girl was healed of rheumatism by the power of God, and I thought, no money would have been too much in either of these cases, if they had only had the arm of flesh to depend upon. Then the thought came forcibly, if every member of the church would only send in one-half of what they would have had to pay to a doctor if would not take long to make up the church deficit; so I determined right then and there, that I would send in a little more than our allotment, even if I have to do without something I need, and show the Lord that we do really appreciate that which we have received.

And then I remembered too that the doctor would not have failed to send in his bill whether we needed the money or not. In relating these thoughts to a dear, good sister on the way home from church, she said, "Why Sister T., I had never thought of that before, and I hope you will write those thoughts up for the Ensign and Herald for I am sure there are many like I was." I told her I would try, but as I had never written much for publication before I was almost afraid to make the attempt. But she said, "You just go ahead and I am sure the Lord will help you." So here it is. Hoping it may be of benefit to some and of profit to the whole, I am your sister in gospel bonds,

ANNA, KANS., JULY 19.

Dear Ensign—As I am one of the missionaries in the Spring River District I thought I would let the Saints know that I am at work. Bro. A. C. Silvers and myself have just started meeting in Anna, Kansas, so trusting that the Spirit of the work may be with us in our weak efforts to declare the gospel message.

As this is my first years experience in the mission field, I can truthfully say the Lord has blessed me in his service. I love the latter day work and have given my entire time and service to his cause. I surely have enjoyed myself in this district as the saints have all been very kind to me; also assisting in the advancement of the work.

I am glad to see so many of the young saints taking hold of the work and I know they certainly have helped me out. I am also numbered with the young of the church and my soul goes out to God in prayer that both old and young who have embraced this gospel will continue faithful, for the promise is to those who endure to the end. I would advise all the young saints to read the church papers for in them is contained spiritual food for both old and young.

May we all prove faithful in his cause and lay aside the worldly things for they shall soon fade away, never to bring happiness in the hereafter. Pray for your young brother in the field of labor and I will do what I can for the Lord's work.

Yours in gospel bonds,
A. C. Martin.

612 W. Shephard St.
DENISON, TEXAS, JULY 17.

Dear Ensign—I thought as we had moved from Wagoner, Okla., to Denison, Texas, I would write and find out, if I could through the Ensign, if there are any saints living in or near Denison. If so, please let me know by calling or mailing me a card to the above address. It looks as though we should have a band of saints in such a large place as this. There are many other denominations here, but have not heard of any of our people; I hope some day there will be a branch of our people here.

It almost makes me shudder to look around and see the vice and wickedness that there is in a town like this every day. I went to church one night since we came, under a big tent and it was just as full as could be and about fifty or seventy-five on the outside. The preacher read his text and then instead of telling the people what they should do to be saved, he went ahead telling them of some person that had put off being saved until one night he died or was killed soon after and was lost forever.

He told one instance where he was holding a meeting in Cado, Okla., and there was a man there who had back slid and wanted to come back into the church one night, and because his wife wouldn't join with him he put it off, and in three weeks the man was killed and he was called to preach his funeral, and it was the hardest thing he ever did, to preach his funeral when he knew he was bound for hell, forever and ever. Oh, how I wish that one of our elders could have been here and preached to a crowd that large about two or three weeks.

I must close. I ask an interest in the saints' prayers that my husband may find steady employment here, as he has been out of employment so long. Also that we may grow in the grace and knowledge of the Lord and always be found faithful.

Your sister in gospel bonds,
Mrs. E. L. Shores.

WHEATLAND, OKLA., AUG. 3.

Dear Ensign—I will write a few lines to the paper which has brought us so many good sermons and so many cheering letters. Husband and I joined the Latter Day Saint Church over three years ago, were baptized by Bro. Hubert Case, but for the last two years we have not heard a sermon only through the Ensign. How we wish some of the elders would come out here and hold some meetings. We are like lost sheep without a shepherd. We might be able to get a school house, but if not our house is large, and our yard a fine place for evening meetings this warm weather. We live west of Wheatland near Frisco R. R., 15 miles southwest of Oklahoma City.

How different other churches seem after one learns of the Latter Day Saint Church. They are more like societies than churches. We are striving to live as we should but we realize we are very weak. My greatest prayer is for God to help us to live right and teach those little children right that he has entrusted to our care. I often wonder how many mothers realize what a charge they are given when their little ones come to be cared for. What impressions our words and deeds leave upon the little mind. I read a verse in our boy's school book last winter that left a great impression on my mind. It did not give the author's name, but whoever penned it must have great love for children and right living. Here is the verse:

"It requires the patience of Job,
The wisdom of Solomon
And the love of God
To lead a little child aright."

I for one know I am not qualified, but, dear saints, pray for me that I may do what each flesh can toward leading them right. We receive many blessings and I often wonder

"Am I worthy of the blessings sent to me,
Am I worthy of the blessings sent to me,
Am I worthy of the blessings,
The glorious, tender blessings,
Am I worthy of the blessings sent to me?"

ITEMS OF INTEREST ABOUT THE INDIANS.

For the first time in the history of the United States a full-blooded Indian is to hold a position of responsibility at the seat of Government. President Wilson this afternoon withdrew the name of Adam C. Patterson of Oklahoma, recently nominated for Register of the Treasury, and substituted that of Gabe E. Parker, a Choctaw, also of Oklahoma. Owen of Oklahoma, himself one-sixteenth Cherokee, says Parker is of native Choctaw blood, pure and undefiled, and a lineal descendant of the chiefs of the Choctaw tribe, which when America was discovered were monarchs of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi. As Register of the treasury Parker will receive $5,000 a year and his name will appear on all the United States notes put into circulation after he takes office. There seems no doubt of Parker's prompt confirmation. He was a member of the first Legislature of Oklahoma, and is superintendent of the Armstrong Academy, Okla.—St. Louis Republic.

The Forty-third Annual report of Indian Commissioners, Washington, 1911-1912 directs attention to conditions among the "Five Civilized Tribes" of Oklahoma. Many will doubtless be surprised to learn that "living in the midst of this advanced Indian community, one may still find 20,000 or more 'restricted' Indians who are not, in the opinion of the government, capable of managing their individual affairs, and some 15,000 of whom are full blood Indians, childlike, incompetent, living in a most primitive fashion, and totally unable to cope with their white neighbors, many of whom are land hungry and of a low and undesirable class.—The Indian's Friend.

AMERICA BEFRIEND.

O Lord our God, Thy mighty hand
Hath made our country free;
From all her broad and happy land
May worship rise to Thee.
Fulfill the promise of her youth,
Her liberty defend;
By law and order, love and truth,
America, America befriend!

The strength of ev'ry state increase
In Union's golden chain;
Her thousand cities fill with peace,
Her million fields with grain.
The virtues of her mingled blood
In one new people blend;
By unity and brotherhood,
America, America befriend!

O suffer not her feet to stray;
But guide her untaught might,
That she may walk in peaceful day,
And lead the world in light.
Bring down the proud, lift up the poor,
Unequal ways amend

By justice, nation-wide and sure;
America, America befriend!

Thro' all the waiting land proclaim
Thy gospel of good will;
And may the joy of Jesus' name
In ev'ry bosom thrill.
O'er hill and vale, from sea to sea,
Thy holy reign extend;
By faith and hope and charity
America, America befriend!

THE LAW OF RESULTS.

ARTHUR E. MCKIM.

Law is the first fact of the universe. By law all things came into existence, and by law all things continue to be. Everything that is exists for a purpose, and chance can have no part in destiny. The material creation being perfect, the laws operant in and through it are likewise perfect. Every effect is the product of a cause; every action is freighted with its sure result.

It is only when we realize that what we are, is what we make ourselves, that we advance. So long as we debase ourselves in the thought that we are creatures of environment: that all that men enjoy is the smile of Providence, and all that men suffer is the whim of Fate, just so long will we be whirled about in the vortex of events, suffering and causing to suffer, bewildered, baffled, and sustained only by hope. And that a foolish hope; wishing against the inevitable, longing for success and bitter at failure, yet blind to the path of attainment, and ignorant of the source of pain. It is not so. God is just. If a man would reap, he must sow; and on the nature of the sowing the harvest depends.

Nature cannot err, nor does she change; all is harmony; discord obtains only when her ways are perverted. Would one attain any object, one must search out the law and pay the price; without this, neither chance nor fate can give success. Inversely, once follow out the indicated course and all the elements combined cannot prevent receiving of the wage. Thus man is builder of his way; and whether he has wrought in ignorance or by design, he gets what he has earned. No more, no less.

Good and evil do exist and are present forces in the world; but neither take possession of the soul. The soul is a development, not a gift. Man is master of his destiny. The law exists, unseen but veritably; and as it is wrought so will the pattern be. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

"Truth as found recorded in the sacred books of the church usually requires more credulity to reject it, than it does true faith to receive it. The great trouble with many people is they believe what they feel inclined to believe, and refuse to believe what they do not feel inclined to believe, but with little regard for evidence for or against."—Elder J. R. Lambert.

THE DIVINITY OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.

Lecture Delivered at South Boardman, Mich.

Feb. 9th, 1913.

BY ALVIN R. ELLIS.

I desire to call your attention to a statement of Christ in St. John 10:16, "And others sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." I wish to associate with this Scripture, verses 17-22 of 2nd chapter of St. John, "Then answered the Jews and said unto him, What sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things? Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up. Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days? But he spake of the temple of his body. When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jesus had said."

We see by these words that the Jews demanded a sign of Jesus and it was granted; yet, but few of them believed on him; for there was that suspicion aroused at the time of his birth, and followed him to the cross, and he was looked upon by the people in general, of his time, as an imposter. They had, in their possession, the prophecy of Isaiah, pointing out the manner of his birth, over seven hundred years before it came to pass. "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." (Isaiah 7:14.) But they refused to believe he was the one to come, even after looking so long for his coming.

It seems that the people of every dispensation of time have been disposed to reject the work that God has set his hand to do among them, regardless of signs and prophecies; but in later generations the people have built monuments to show their professed esteem for God and his persecuted servants. The present generation is no exception to the rule; for the God of heaven, has, in this, "the dispensation of the fulness of times," set his hand to accomplish his work; but on every hand, it has met ridicule, and scorn, at the hands of those, who have been rearing houses of worship; whose spires are pointing toward the heavens, as monuments of praise, to the very one, whose work they are now trampling under their feet.

Over twenty-five hundred years before the Book of Morning came forth, it was foretold by the same prophet that predicted the manner of the birth of Christ. Isaiah predicted that a sealed book would come forth; just before Lebanon (Palestine) would become a fruitful field; and it was to be a record (from the ground) of them that slept.—Isaiah, 29.

Like the persecutors of Christ, the opposers of the Book of Mormon have sought to put it down, by working upon the prejudices of the people, until the majority of people have been made to think that it is an awful book, and that it teaches polygamy, etc. I will say right here, that there is no other book in the world (the Bible included), that denounces polygamy in stronger terms than the Book of Mormon. I will read just one short passage, for a sample of its teaching on the marriage question: "Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, page 172, authorized edition, page 116, small edition.

One night, last Summer, after preaching a sermon, a gentleman said to me, "O, I've read the Book of Mormon and I know all about the Mormons!" When I began to enquire what he found its contents to be, I found that he had never seen a Book of Mormon; but had read some book about the polygamous people in Utah, and he was so confident he knew what the Book of Mormon was, that he would not investigate any further, for he was sure that the book was the foundation for polygamy.

For the nature of the contents of the Book of Mormon, I will read from an official work not produced by the Latter Day Saints. "The Book of Mormon is accepted as a history of the ancient inhabitants of America, and the revelation given them by God, beginning at a period 2,000 years before Christ and continuing until 400 years after Christ."—Bulletin of Church Statistics, U. S. Census of 1890.

There were three colonies that came from Asia to America. The first one came from Babel about 2,000 years B. C., when the Lord confounded the languages and scattered the people over all the earth. (Gen. 11:8,9.) They landed in Yucatan. The second colony came from Jerusalem, about 600 B. C., or in the first year of the reign of King Zedekiah, and landed on the western coast of South America, or Chile. The third colony followed a few years later, and landed on the Western coast of Central America. The two latter finally amalgated, became a great nation, and prospered; but through diversion and wars their national existence was destroyed about 400 A. D., leaving the remnant as warring tribes throughout the land. These were the ancestors of the American Indians.

William Pidgeon says: "It cannot be any longer doubted that there has been a day when this continent swarmed with millions of inhabitants; when arts and sciences flourished, when men lived, and labored, and reigned, and fought, and were, in turn conquerors, and conquered, subjects, and kings."—Antiquarian Researches. Pub. 1858.

To prove that there were two periods of ancient civilization in America, I will read to you a few excerpts from some of the books on American Archaeology, written since the Book of Mormon was published. "We are led to the conclusion that at least two distinct races of men have occupied this territory at different eras, and that both became nationally extinct anterior to the occupation of the present Indian race." (Traditions of De-Coo-Dah, page 175, Pub. 1858.) Desire Charnay says: "Traces of masonry out of character with the general structure, show the place to have been occupied at two different epochs."—(Ancient Cities of the New World, page 333, Pub. 1860 and 1884.) Short, speaking of the ruins of the ancient cities, says: "They were preceded by a race possessed of no inferior civilization, who were not their ancestors, but a distinct people." (North Americans of Antiquity, page 27, Pub. 1880.) Baldwin says: "It is still easy to distinguish the differences in construction between the two periods. 'The standing walls rest upon ruins of greater antiquity; and while the primitive masonry is about six feet thick, that of the later period is only from a foot to a foot and a half thick.'—Ancient America, page 80, Pub. 1872..

The question of the origin of the American Indian is an unsettled one by the scientific world. The proper name according to the Book of Mormon is "Lamanite," as they are descendants of Laman, who was one of the family of four sons of Lehi, who came from Jerusalem about 600 B. C. They were cursed with the dark skin because of their rebellion and disobedience against God. Finally, in the wars that ensued between the Lamanites and the Whites, the white people were overcome about 400 A. D. The people that were overcome were called after Nephi, the youngest son of Lehi; thus they were called "Nephites." The Book of Mormon is the only authentic record of that people. It has no competitor in the whole world.

Some people will ask: "What do we want of the Book of Mormon, though it is a history of Ancient America?" It always seems strange to me to hear people ask that question in this age of schooling; when they are continually studying the past history of other nations. Why study the history of England, or the history of any of the countries of the old world? Should we not be just as much interested in the past history of our own country, as that of others, where we never have lived? O well, says the objector: "I would not object to having a history of ancient America, but but I cannot accept the Book of Mormon." Why can you not accept it? I tell you that it is the same reason that the Jews rejected Christ. He came into the world as the Scriptures said he would; then, the same spirit (Satan), that has opposed God's work from the beginning, stirred up the people against him, and thus, he was met with the opposition that made him unpopular. Just so with the Book of Mormon; it came as the Scriptures said it would; but the enemy of God's work, has opposed it, and made it unpopular among the people, regardless of the evidences that surround it, and prove its divinity.

There has been a longing for just such a book as the Book of Mormon; but the learned have rejected it because God used the unlearned to bring it forth. I wish to read a statement, of Rev. Chas. P. McIlvain, D. D., published in the preface of De-la-faire's work, ten years after the Book of Mormon had been given to the world. "Suppose that in searching the TRUML that are scattered so widely over this country; the silent, aged, mysterious remembrance of some popular race, once carrying on all the business of life, where now are only the wild forests of many centuries, a race of whom we ask so often, who they were, whence they came, whither they went; suppose that under one of those huge structure of earth which remain of their works, a book was discovered, an alphabetic history of that race for a thousand years, containing their written language, and examples of their poetry and other literature, and all undeniably composed many hundreds of years before any of the nations now possessing this continent were here! What a wonder this would be! What intense interest would attach to such a relic! What price would not the learned be willing to give for it!"

Now, my friends, I want to call your attention to the prophecy relative to the coming forth of this very book. You will find it in the 29th chapter of Isaiah. I will begin at the first of the chapter: "Woe to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices. Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel. And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee. And thou shalt be brought down, and shall speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust."—Verses 1-4.

Ariel is Jerusalem—considered so by the historians. I do not know why the prophet employed the word here, in this case, it being the only place in the Bible, where it is used to refer to Jerusalem. He may have used it to denote two branches of Israel. It is used in Ezra 8:16, as the name of one of several chief men. It is used again 2nd Samuel 23:20, where it is rendered "two lion like men." However, the people that came to this continent from Jerusalem, were a branch, or a portion of Israel, and were inhabitants of Jerusalem. Four times in the fourth verse of Isaiah 29, it says that they shall speak from the ground, or from the dust. The objector may say: "There is nothing said there about a book!" Well, if the people referred to here were to speak from the ground, would it not seem reasonable that there would be a record come forth that would speak for them, as they were to be brought down? Surely, the ruins upon this continent show beyond a doubt, that a people have been here and gone down! How would they speak from the ground any other way? Let us read some more in this same chapter.

The prophet says there is a book to come forth: in verses 11 and 12: "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed: And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned." Joseph Smith received the record of those people by the direction of an angel of God, after it had been deposited in the earth for several centuries. This was on the 22nd day of September 1827. After receiving the plates, upon which the record was written, he transcribed some of the hieroglyphics for them, and they were taken by a man named Martin Harris, to Professor Anthon, of New York City, who pronounced them genuine. He asked for the book and was told that part of it was sealed, when he remarked that he could not read a sealed book. Now, notice: the book itself is delivered to the unlearned man, and he was to say "I am not learned." Let us read further, in verses 13, 14: "Wherefore the Lord said, forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men: Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

The objector comes forward again and says: "O, that sealed book is the book of Revelations, that was to come in the future!" Now, my friends, with all candor, can you say that the book of Revelation ever fulfilled that prophecy? Furthermore, in Revelations 22:10, John was told: "Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand." What time was at hand? why, the things that John had just seen in the vision were about to come to pass. He saw the Church of Christ overcome by the great Roman power, (Rev. chapters 12, 13, 17.) The vision did, surely come to pass. The saints were slain and this great power was seen to rule over all nations, (Rev. 18:23, 24.) The prophets of God were slain, as seen by John in Revelations 17:6. Isaiah is foretelling that which is to come at a later time, after the prophets of God were slain.

Go with me again to Isaiah 29 and we will see if this is not true: In verses 9 and 10 we read: "Stay yourselves, and wonder, cry ye out, and cry; they are drunken, but not wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink. For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath clothed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered." You see that this is after the time spoken of by John; for the prophets and seers have been covered; there were none during the "Dark Ages." Now, Isaiah says, comes forth the sealed book by the gift and power of God.—Verse 14.

To me this is very clear, and I believe plainer than the prophecy referring to Christ, as it points out the very time when the book was to come forth: "Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as the forest?" (Verse 17.) Lebanon, here, means Jerusalem and her surrounding country; in support of this I will submit a short quotation from history: "Lebanon—A famous mountain in the South of Syria, about 300 miles in circumference. . . Jerusalem, and the temple thereof, are called Lebanon because built of the cedars of Lebanon; and the houses of Jerusalem were so many and high as to resemble the forest of Lebanon; Hab. 2:17; Zech. 11:1; Ezek. 17:3; Jer. 22:23."—The Popular and Critical Bible Encyclopedia, p. 1054.

Because the Jews rejected their Savior, their home was desolated, (Luke 13:34,35), and Jesus said: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations, and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the gentiles until the times of the gentiles be fulfilled." (Luke 21:24.) About the year 70 A.D., the Roman armies besieged Jerusalem, destroyed the temple; about 1,364,000 fell by the sword, 600,000 perished by famine, and about 97,000 Jews were taken away captive, and were scattered among all nations.

I want to read some history to prove that Palestine was desolated; then produce some evidence to show that it has been restored, and the time that it took place. Please keep in mind that the book was to come forth just a short time before the restoration of that land.

"Eighteen centuries of war, ruin and neglect, have passed over it. Its terraced walls have been allowed to crumble, and its soil has washed down its ravines, leaving the hillsides rocky and sterile. Its trees have been cut down and never replaced. Its fields have been desolate; its structures pillaged and all its improvements ruthlessly destroyed. A land of ruins without man or beast. Everywhere, on plain or mountain, in rock, desert, or in beetling cliff, the spoiler's hand has rested."—McClintock and Strong's Encyclopedia, Article, "Palestine."

Professor J. Leslie Porter, M. A., who visited Palestine several years ago, has this to say of his travels: "As we rode on we had over head the bright sky and blazing sun; and beneath, the flinty soil, reflecting burning rays that scorched the weeds and stunted camel-thorn, and made them crackle like charred sticks under our horse's feet. . . We looked and longed for shelter from that pitiless storm, and for water to slake our burning thirst; but there was none. It seemed to us as if the prophetic curse pronounced by the Almighty on a sinful and apostate nation was being fulfilled." (Giant Cities of Bashan, page 210.) I could produce many more quotation in support of this, but I believe this is sufficient.

The rains began to fall, again, upon that land in the years 1852, and 1853; and the land is fertile again. In support of this, I will give some evidence, as this is a very important point. "I arrived in Indiana a few days since, from the Eastern Continent; I stopped at Joppa nearly the whole winter. For my part I was well pleased with the country. It is certainly a land of most wonderful fruitfulness with a delightful climate, producing everything if properly cultivated, and from two to three crops a year. They have grain, fruit and vegetables all the year around. . . It is a fact that the rain and dew are restored; recently (in 1853), the former and latter rain was restored, to the astonishment of the natives."—Louis Van Buren, sr., Nov. 14 1867.

"I know not whether you are aware of the fact, but it is one that is fully authenticated, that the latter rain returned last year to Mount Zion—a rain, that had been withheld, so far as our information goes, ever since the dispersion of the people; and he who has brought back the latter rain in its season, will also give the former rain in its season."—Rev.

Hugh Stowel, in Scottish Presbyterian Magazine, 1853.

"Constantinople, August 1, 1906.—The influx of Jews into Palestine during the last few months has been remarkable. Some weeks ago about 5,000 Jewish immigrants from Russia and the Balkan States landed at Jaffa. They are settling in the plain of Sharon, around the town of Ramleh and Lydda and in other Jewish colonies along the seacoast. . . It is a noteworthy fact that some of the most fertile districts of Palestine are possessed by Jewish colonies. The Jews are repossessing the land by degrees, and should this quick rate of possession continue, the whole country will, in a few years belong to them."—Post-Dispatch, Saint Louis, Mo.

"In the land of Judah—9 colonies occupy 9,254 acres; In Samaria—8 colonies occupy 16,129 acres; Upper Galilee—8 colonies occupy 19,047 acres; Trans Jordan, Damascus—different societies own and control 16,507 acres."—Jewish Encyclopedia, Vol. 1, page 246, Pub. 1904.

"In Jerusalem there are now electric lights, telephones, phonographs, sanitary plumbing, modern stores, houses built, and in short, most of the comforts of civilized life."—New York Evening Post, May 22, 1901.

There is plenty of evidence that "Lebanon" has been restored. It is too late to look for the book of Isaiah 29 to come forth now. The time was told in the prophecy. The Book of Mormon came forth about 22 years before Lebanon began to be a fruitful field. If we reject this book that has come to us as the word of God in fulfillment of such a plain prophecy, we should never accuse the Jews of blindness again.

Now, if you please, we will return to the text in John 10:16. The other sheep referred to here by the Savior, were the people on this continent, and the lost tribes of Israel in the North Country. But the objector says that "Christ was referring to the Gentiles!" Let us go to Matthew 15:24 and Jesus says: "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." And in the 10th chapter of Matthew, he says to the first twelve; "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any of the cities of the Samaritans enter ye not: But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Verses 5,6.) Christ did not visit the Gentiles personally, but came to Israel; and then the gospel was to be carried by them to the Gentiles, as will be seen by his last commission to the twelve, (Matt. 28:18,20 and Mark 16:15,16); where he told them before he left them, to go and "teach all nations." After he had completed his work in Jerusalem, he came to this continent and visited people here, as they were a portion of the house of Israel.

I will now call your attention to the record in the Book of Mormon. These are the words of our Savior to the Nephites: "And behold, this is the land of your inheritance; and the father hath given it to you. And not at any time hath the father given me commandment that I should tell it unto your brethren at Jerusalem; neither at any time hath the father given me commandment, that I should tell unto them concerning the other tribes of the house of Israel, whom the father hath led out of the land. This much did the father command me, that I should tell unto them, that other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; they also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." (Book of Mormon, page 644, A. E; page 451, S. E.)

That Christ did come to this continent and establish his church, and taught the gospel to the people here, is strongly indicated by traditions that some of the tribes of Indians possess until this day. I will present a few of them. "Nodoc Tribe: They believed in one God, before the white man came. Apache Tribe: Believed in one Messiah to come. Sioux Tribe: Look for the coming of an Indian Messiah who will cause the dead Indians to come to life, repeople the country, and restore the Indians' enjoyment. Piute Tribe: Believe in laying on hands, asking the good spirit to make the sick one well." Mescaleros, of the Apache Tribe: "They believe their ideas of religion, of future punishment, of the formation of the world and creation of man, of baptism, are the ancient Ideas." Pottawattamie Tribe: "Believe in one great Creator, and of a future state of rewards and punishments." "Eleventh census report of 1890 by the Government."—Saints' Herald, April 17, 1907, Article by A. M. Fryando.)

While the Indians have degenerated, and have lost the knowledge of their ancestors, those traditions show that their ancestors had a knowledge of the same gospel that was taught by Christ to the Jews; and taught by the apostles after he left the work with them upon the Eastern Continent, as recorded in the Bible.

We, will now, go back and examine some Old Testament prophecies, and we will be able to trace those ancient people across the sea to this land; and we can see that this is the land that was given to the posterity of ancient Joseph, who was sold into Egypt, and who was one of the twelve sons of Jacob (Israel.) I wish to call your attention, first, to the blessing by Jacob upon the two sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh; found in the 48th chapter of Genesis and verses 13 to 20. In the blessing are these words: "Let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth." (verse 16.) His younger brother (Ephraim) shall be greater than he (Manasseh), and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." On page 335 of the Book of Mormon, authorized edition and 231 in the small edition, it says that the family of Lehi were descendants of Manasseh. Thus his seed did become a multitude of people, as prophesied by Jacob. And still further, what better place can be found for the fulfillment of the promise of Ephraim, than to see here upon this continent, at the present time, a multitude of nations, (Gen. 48:19.) Is there another country in the world where there are so many nations of people represented, as in the land of America? And why is it? Perhaps we may be able to understand why, as we extend our examination of the prophecies.

In Genesis chapter 49, we find the blessing pronounced by Jacob, upon his twelve sons, and in verses 22 to 26 is recorded the blessing of Joseph: "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall: . . . Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee, and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb: The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills; they shall be on the head of Joseph and the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren."

It says that Joseph's branches, or posterity, would run over the wall, or sea. I remember the first time that I ever looked upon a large body of water; the thought came to me: "Why, that looks just like a wall!" and, no doubt, that is just what is meant in this blessing.

The land that had been promised to the progenitors of Jacob was Palestine; a land less than 200 miles long, and less than 50 miles wide. Joseph's blessing was to prevail above them, or be greater; and was to be "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills;" meaning far off. Before we get through, we will find that they crossed over the sea.

Next, we will examine the blessing that was pronounced upon Joseph, and his posterity by Moses. We will turn and read it, in the 33rd chapter of Deuteronomy. "And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and the fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of him that was separated from his brethren."—Verses 13-16

You can plainly see that particular mention is made of the rich land that was to be inhabited by the posterity of Joseph. That land is America. To give some idea of the wealth there has been and is in this land, I will read to you some figures; "Washington, D. C., Jan. 29, 1912.—Semil official advices from Ottawa received by the administration bureaus shows that the Canadian Dominion possess the most extensive fisheries in the world, that the waters in and about Canada contain the principal fish food in greater abundance than the waters of any other part of the world. The total market value of all kinds of fish in both her sea and inland fisheries during 1911 foots up the vast sum of $29,965,433; The best is salmon, which brought in $7,200,000; cod, $6,000,000; lobster, $3,700,000; herring, $3,000,000." (Grand Rapids News, Jan. 29, 1912.) Coal: "Ever since 1886 the United States and Great Britain have been rivals in the production of coal. . . In 1910 the output of the British mines was only 264,433,000 tons, to the United States 447,837,000 tons! Not only has the United States far outstripped Great Britain; but the other coal producing countries as well. . . There is apparently an inexhaustible supply in the United States." (Grand Rapids News, Feb. 14, 1912.) "The total output of copper in the United States for 1911 was 1,097,232,749 pounds, of which Michigan produced 219,

ROUND TABLE.

Do priests of the Aaronic order have power to work miracles as did Philip? I supposed from what your ministers have said that priests in your church did not have this power, but that it belonged to the higher priesthood.

Miracles, such as are divine, come by the will of God and it is his province to choose the instruments which he shall use in their performance. While the powers of the priest are limited, especially as to laying on of hands for the healing of the sick or the giving the Holy Ghost, it is nowhere said that he may not be used by the Lord in performing miracles. The Aaronic priesthood having the administration of the law of Moses from Moses to Christ, brought forth many miraculous events, and it may further be noted that not all of the miracles recorded in the Old Testament were done by those who held the priesthood, but others than the priests and Levites wrought great things. The promise of Jesus was that "these signs shall follow them that believe," and while certain powers are restricted to certain persons, yet there is a general distribution among the "believers" of certain other powers which belong to them. Miracles are named by Paul as one of the manifestations of the Spirit which are "given to every man," and we would consistently expect that this power would at times be given even to the members and Aaronic priests as well as to those holding the higher priesthood. In all cases the working of miracles is governed by necessity, being performed according to the will of God and in harmony with his law.

What historical proof outside the New Testament is there that there were priests of the Aaronic order in the apostolic or primitive church?

Both the New Testament and ancient history are deficient in the accounts given of the apostolic church, and where offices and officers are mentioned, in many cases the duties attaching to them, or their relationship to other offices are not defined. McClintock and

The function of the Aaronic priesthood under the Mosaic order was largely in performing the ceremonies of the temple and the altar. When the offering of sacrifices was done away through Christ this function of the priests ceased, but it by no means dispensed with their services, for as was stated recently in our editorial, John the Baptist ministered the gospel, or at least a portion of it as an Aaronic priest and since his line of work was changed from that of his father who offered sacrifices at the altar, it becomes apparent that there is work for the Aaronic priest under the gospel. Dr. Smith says: "There is no trace of an order in the new Christian society, bearing the name, and exercising functions like those of the priests of the older covenant." but with the change of function it matters little by what name they were called. Such works as we have access to are deficient in their accounts of the offices of the early church, and the duties belonging to each so that it is difficult to determine whether such offices were under the Melchisedec or the Aaronic priesthood. McClintock and Strong's Encyclopedia says of Philip: "Whether the office to which he was thus appointed gave him the position and title of deacon of the church, or was special and extraordinary in its character must remain uncertain." "The after history of Philip warrants the belief in any case, that his office was not simply that of the later deaconate." After the apostasy we find priests in the Roman church, and it is safe to assume that there must have been some grounds for their existence though perhaps the functions of their office had been perverted.

What is the book mentioned in Rev. 5:1? What are the seven seals that holds the book closed to mankind? (3) If Jesus, the "Lion of the Tribe of Judah, the Root of David" is the only one in heaven, earth or hell, who can remove the seals, will he depute any man to do it? (4) At what period of the world's history will the seals be removed and the contents of the book made manifest?

While some of the "mysteries of the Apocalypse" are so plainly applicable to things with which we are familiar that an interpretation might be safely offered, there are others whose application at the present time cannot be seen, perhaps for the reason that they deal with events yet future, and with conditions vastly different from those of the present, so that any interpretation which might be offered could not be otherwise than speculative. The points covered in the above questions seem to be of the latter class. In Doctrine and Covenants 90:1, it is said that "the fullness of John's record is hereafter to be revealed," and Oliver Cowdery writing of the angel's visit to Joseph Smith reports the angel as saying: "The sealed part [of the Book of Mormon plates] contains the same revelation which was given to John upon the Isle of Patmos, and when the people of the Lord are prepared, and found worthy, then it will be unfolded unto them." Letters of Oliver Cowdery, p. 15. It seems that the Lord designs to make clear every mystery of his word, but not while the world abides in unrighteousness.

Did not the Negro descend from Cain? If so how did he escape the flood? Was it not a curse that caused him to be black?

It is generally supposed that the Negro is descended from Ham the son of Noah, who was placed under a curse because of his wickedness, and not from Cain who lived prior to the flood. We know of no evidence that the curse of a dark skin was brought through the ark, and it is quite certain that this judgment came upon some of the posterity of Noah after they began to spread abroad in the earth. In the case of Cain, and in the later case of the people of Cainan, both prior to the flood, the black skin came as the result of a curse due to transgression. The Inspired version says the curse of Noah fell upon Cainan a son of Ham and that "A veil of darkness shall cover him," probably referring to the dark skin. But this leaves it that only a branch of the family of Ham was thus cursed, while others of his children may have remained as they were. Dr. Smith, in his Bible Dictionary, holds that the descendants of Ham settled in Babylonia and Egypt and other places as the progenitors of some of the white nations.

POINTS ON CHURCH BEHAVIOR.

In our zeal to interpret have we left demonstration in the rear? If so let us make a halt! Lip service alone is an abomination. Jesus said so. Towhom much is given much is required. We may have been given the key to the Scriptures in these last days, but God did not expect us to abuse it! I am convinced that we have been intrusted with the fullness of the gospel. Shall we be prepared to make a full report? What lack I yet? If we need development on one thing more than another it is, to my mind church behavior—reverence.

In this brief article, this nail and this alone I propose to hit! We visit other churches and all agree that something is sadly lacking in the sermons. What is it? The message and the power! Was there anything about that service that you admired. Be fair, men! If they are pre-eminent in anything, acknowledge it! In a little church (maybe more than one) the following instructions hang and they are complied with enough that it is very noticeable:—

ON YOUR WAY TO CHURCH:—Be thoughtful and talk little. Speak not of others faults, you have your own, for which you are about to ask forgiveness. Arriving at church, go in; do not hang about the outside, the place is holy.

IN CHURCH:—Engage the mind in humble prayer. Fasten yourself firmly on the service and join in all the responses heartily. God hates vain and idle thoughts.

AFTER CHURCH:—Leave reverently, not lingering to giggle and gossip and visit in the aisles. It is God's house, even after the benediction is pronounced and the service over.

ON YOUR WAY HOME:—Remember where you have been and what you have been doing—and try to be a better man.

Hopefully,
O. R. Miller.

DIOGENES FINDS AN HONEST GIRL.

"A wealthy man who died in Brussels recently left much of his large fortune to a girl who was unacquainted with him. He was very eccentric, and like Diogenes, he set out to find an honest man. His tub was an omnibus and his lantern a small coin. In the omnibus he took his seat near the conductor and always showed himself very obliging, passing up the money of passengers and returning the change, but to the latter he always managed to add a franc or half franc. Then he would watch those to whom it came. They would count it carefully, notice the extra coin, and invariably slip it into their pockets. But at last a young woman passed, hers back, with 'Conductor, you have given me half a franc too much.' The man followed her to her home, learned what he could about her, and made his will in her favor, though he never told her that the half franc returned would bring her a million.—The Christian Herald."

According to recent government reports the drinking and smoking of the American people brought the government in internal revenues, the sum of $39,478,000 during the last fiscal year, being $16,500,000 greater than in 1912, and the highest amount on record.

840,000 pounds." (Report of copper industry by H. E. Hore.) The supply of iron is enormous, and according to the report of C. K. Leith, from Mineral Resources for 1911, the reserves of Michigan alone are estimated at 169,581,101 tons. And the world's honors as regards its corn crop go to the United States, according to figures recently issued by the department of agriculture, the total number of bushels for the season of 1912 is given as 3,169,137,000.

"The dairy products for the year 1909 in the United States was $872,403." Bulletin of the Bureau of Census for 1909, issued by Director Durand.) According to the figures issued by the department of Commerce, in 1912, this country exported to British India, 35,000,000 pounds of cotton, valued at $3,750,000; and to China, 14,000,000 pounds, valued at $1,250,000. Our total exports to India in 1912 amounted to $14,000,000; Our own trade figures show exports of cotton in the year 1912 to be 209,000,000 pounds. The total exports from the United States to Japan in 1912 were $58,000,000 in value; and to the Philippine Islands, the total exports for the year 1912 valued $25,000,000; I might give many more figures, but I cannot occupy too much time on this part of the subject. I will read one more item of interest upon this part of the subject and then hasten on. "The wealth of United States equals the combined wealth of Italy, Spain, India, Portugal, South America, Turkey, Egypt, Sweden, Norway, Canada, Denmark, and Australia."—Facts for the Times, page 110.

I told you a while ago that we would trace those ancient people of Israel across the sea, so we will examine a statement in Isaiah 16th chapter and 8th verse, which says: "For the fields of Heshbon language, and the vine of Sibnah; the lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof, they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea."

They left that land because of oppression, and the wicked environment with which they were surrounded. The people were becoming wicked, and worshipping idols, etc. The Lord permitted the heathen king to come upon them and they were taken captive, as the prophets of God had previously predicted. The Principal plants, or branches, were Ephraim and Manassah (Gen. 48:19) and those tribes were taken captive with the rest; but the Lord directed some of them to leave the land, as we will show later. Isaiah says: "They wandered through the wilderness" and that "her branches are gone over the sea."

When they left that country, they, of course, took with them, the Scriptures that had been given up to that time; and from then on they kept a history of their travels. I take up the history of their travels in the Book of Mormon, and I read: "And we did sojourn for the space of many years, yea, even eight years in the wilderness. . . . And we beheld the sea, which we called Irreantum, which being interpreted, is, many waters. . . . And it came to pass that the Lord spake unto me, saying, Thou shalt construct a ship, after the manner which I shall show thee, that I may carry thy people across these waters."—Book of Mormon, pp. 52,53, A. E.; p. 36, S. E.

BENEFICENCE OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

Over by far its greater part, South America has virtually ceased to be the land of revolutions. It presents itself to us rather as a colossal continent, magnificently watered, inhabitable by Caucasians, its soil of inexhaustible fertility, its mineral riches barely scratched, much of it still unexplored, all of it almost ludicrously underpopulated. Although the most seductive field for colonization that exists, there is never likely to be the same kind of scramble for it among the Powers of Europe that Africa has suffered from. The Monroe Doctrine has rendered this inestimable service to the world's peace—it has interposed the power of the United States between South America and an orgy of spoliation; it has permitted each independent Republic to develop along its own lines; it has opened South America to European immigration, and closed it to European flags. No nation would now think it worth while to fight the United States in order to obtain a foothold on South American soil.—The London Nation.

There are not good things enough in life to indemnify us for the neglect of a single duty.—Mme. Swetchine.

THE BRIGHT BEYOND.

JANE ADAMS PARKER.

"A certain practical dealer in wares has said, 'when I wish to make a good sale I do not elaborate on the beauty or utility of my articles, but on the bright minds of the mistress' children.'"

I may not agree on his method of procuring purchasers, but nevertheless he certainly had found out a secret of the mother heart. Nine-tenths of the modern women, if asked what they would have their children possess above all else will unhesitatingly say, bright minds. The mother will overlook a little defect in features, or color of hair and eyes, but the one essential is the intellect.

She likes to think her child a little above his grade, that he is quick at his figuring and his spelling easily learned; until often the idea has been carried too far and his little brain been crammed until it finally gave way.

On the other hand there are mothers grieving over a little one with an imperfect mind. It is the one case that appeals most strongly to me. What divine patience must be given a mother, who labors on from day to day caring for a little child, who to all appearances remains perfectly unconscious of her loving kindness.

To that one I would like to present a thought—some day your little one will know and thoroughly appreciate all. It is the soul encased in the little body that the Father has given into your keeping. All your deeds of love are making that soul develop as the Master only can appreciate. It's like the gentle butterfly slumbering in the cocoon, that one day will burst its prison walls and exhibit its rare beauty in the glorious light of a perfect day.

It is known to be a custom in the far east where highwaymen attack the lone traveler, to hide their riches in most unattractive covering so the thieves will pass it by as little worth—but the owner knows its value.

So whatever the outward appearances seem to indicate, the slumbering soul is as precious, as sweet to the Maker as that of the most promising child of your acquaintance.

There is a little story in which a woman was presented with a great, uncut gem and bidden care for it. She did so simply because the giver was a dear friend far away. Little dreaming of its worth she was greatly surprised and overjoyed, when the friend had it polished and again presented it to her as a most costly diamond. Then and not until then did she realize what had been intrusted to her care.

What a gem is the soul of a little child! If it be slumbering in a little unfortunate body of your babe, awaiting the Master's polishing hand, think of what the future holds for you there. And the polishing will surely come when the reward will repay your patient labors an hundred fold.

"With the day so shalt thy strength be" come the comforting words of promise. If then the days seem long and the years an eternity, strength will be supplied for He has said who never fails His word.

A great teacher has said, that whatever we desire most in Heaven will be granted us. However it may be, there is one thing certain, that the mother who has faithfully taken care of her unfortunate little one here, will dwell for eternity with him made perfect above.

It is not by chance that the baby is so and who can say but it may be that the reward will be the greater? The jewel is given for us to love and cherish, but the polishing is for other hands than ours. If a mother must wait then until the Master deems it meet that she shall behold her jewels polished fit for His kingdom, who would begrudge a more cautious gem hereafter?

The child for whom we grieve because we cannot teach it earthly wisdom will learn at the Great Teacher's feet more divine wisdom than we have ever known.

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick." How we all know the bitter truth, but listen, "when it comes it is like the tree of life."

When your heart is nigh to bursting, have you ever visited a home where grief was very great and noticed how your load was diminished? Strange as it may seem today there are many mothers right here in the streets of Chicago who would rather have their child a certain burden at home than an uncertain burden, where they have gone out in the great cold world, women whose daughters have fallen in spite of their intellect, or mothers of the poor straying youth.

"When the days are gloomy sing some little song.
Meet the world's repining with a courage strong."
"For be careful for you," individually and personally.
There was once an old negro minister who, after getting at the mourners weeping on the bench would conclude the meeting by clasping his hands over his head and shouting, "There's a bright face a'comin'!" And not a sad face ever left the folding.

So I too would leave a fair impression by pointing to the bright beyond.—American Motherhood.

MISCELLANEOUS

PASTORALS.

To the Saints of the Kentucky and Tennessee District
Greeting:—

As you know I have been appointed to labor in the Southern Indiana District this conference year, and at the June conference of the Kentucky and Tennessee District it was the expression of the body that I should continue to act as bishop's agent for the district, and after consulting the bishop it was thought best under existing circumstances that I should do so.

Since I shall not be able to see the saints personally I take this means of communicating with you. I have appointed Elder W. L. McClain of Paris, Tenn., to act as suo agent for me in the Foundry Hill Branch who will receipt for tithing or donations, etc. Also Elder S. E. Dickson of Paris, Tenn., who will labor in the district will receipt for tithes, consecrations, etc. Those who desire may send tithes, etc., to my home address, Fulton, Ky., and I will send receipts.

Dear saints I hope you will not be negligent of your duties along this line. Remember we are asked to provide for only two families this year, which will be a small task if all will co-operate. If we do as well this year as in the last three years, we will be more than self-sustaining. And remember too we have been asked to liquidate the church debt of which our apportionment is $500 dollars; a less than $1.00 for each member. Now we can pay that and hardly miss it.

Let us go to work now and pay this debt: are you willing to make the sacrifice? Remember the Lord has said, "I will have a sacrificing people," and only those who make covenant by sacrifice will be gathered.—Psalms 50:5.

Now don't put it off till next fall, it is needed right now, so send it along at your earliest convenience and get your receipt. May God bless you all in the prayer of your brother in Christ,

J. R. McClain, Bishop's Agent.

OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO CHRISTIAN YOUNG PEOPLE

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago is broadening its work this fall along two important lines, the preparation of Sunday school experts, and women workers for women and children. To meet the needs of the first class is establishing chairs of pedagogy, psychology and Sunday school history, management and methods; by means of which young men and women may be qualified for any department of service from that of teacher in a local school to a state or county organizer.

With reference to women workers for women and children, the purpose is to equip them for all modern demands which churches make upon them, such as domestic science, home making, home nursing, sewing, club management and industrial work for boys and girls.

The Institute has also introduced a department of English and a department of Italian, and offers all its advantages without cost to Christians of all denominations who are able satisfactorily to fill out its application blanks.

ADDRESSES.

W. P. Bootman, Field address: Box 384, Wilburton, Okla. Home address: 421 Eubank Ave., Independence, Mo.

Laura Jernigan, Dixonville, Ala., July 19.—The quarterly conference of the Florida District closed last Sunday evening. It was a profitable conference and the good Spirit prevailed throughout. After conference Elders Sloner and Warr held a series of meetings at the Alafloa church and one was baptized. The Spirit of the Lord is with us to a goodly degree in our meetings, and we have a time of rejoicing. We are thankful for all the departments of the work that help educate us in the Master's cause.

HALL.—Winifred Clara Newlen was born at Des Moines, Iowa, May 22, 1880. She was married to Bro. Earl Hall, Nov. 27, 1902, who remains to mourn her apparently untimely death. Three children were born to this union, two of whom have died, one remaining. She died at Des Moines, Iowa, July 24, 1913. Her mother, four sisters and two brothers are living. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, June 28, 1903, and ever continued as a consistent and faithful member. Those who knew her best spoke most highly of her. The funeral was held at Lamoni, Iowa, July 29th, the sermon being preached by Elder Albert A. Smith. An unusually large concourse of sympathetic people attended this funeral service.

"Tradition and sentiment have saved a giant oak tree known as the Creek Council Tree which stands in the center of South Cheyenne Street in Tulsa, Oklahoma. An ordinance to pave the street was adopted recently and some of the citizens wanted the tree destroyed, but a decision to spare it was reached after discussion.

It is said that beneath the tree are buried the sacred ashes of the Cherokees brought from the old council grounds in Georgia when they came to the Indian Territory more than seventy-five years ago. Where the tree stands the first important meeting of the tribe was held."—Sel.

"Dear Sir," wrote a Cardiff father to a school teacher, "please do not let my son John learn Welsh today. His throat is so bad he can hardly speak English."—Tit-Bits.

The greatest known depth of the sea has lately been reached by the German exploring ship Natant. It was found ten miles east of one of the Philippines, and is placed at 32,667 feet.

READ BELOW HOW AN OLD GENTLEMAN WHO HID HIS MONEY OVER THE CLOCK NEARLY LOST $2000

After an intelligent old gentleman at the age of seventy-six dropped dead in his home, his son found over TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS in PAPER MONEY over the old clock which stood on the wooden mantle, surrounding an open crackling fire. Not even HIS OWN WIFE knew that much money was there! The old gentleman was simply CARELESS. His son had married the town banker's daughter, and the bank was trusted. Both the old gentleman's MONEY and LIFE were in danger; for BURGLARS have a way of LEARNING where money is hidden, and FIRE at any time might have burned the house. Are YOU careless?

IT COULDN'T BE DONE.

BY EDGAR A. GUST.

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,

But he with a chuckle replied,
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.

So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it;

He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it!

Somebody scoffed: "Oh, you'll never do that—

At least, no one ever has done it;"

"But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing he knew, he begun it.

With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit,

He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it!

There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done;

There are thousands to prophesy failure;

There are thousands to point out to you one by one
The dangers that wait to assail you.

But just a buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;

Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
"That cannot be done"—and you'll do it.

NO VIRTUE IN POLYGAMY.

After all that has been said against polygamy in America and Europe, now comes an English writer, Miss Alice Ellison, advocating polygamy as a means of meeting in some measure the social problem in England. According to press reports Miss Ellison has recently returned from a protracted visit to Turkey where, she says, she saw no reason to pity the women of the harems, since they are well supported and cared for. Speaking of the struggle which so many English women have in supporting themselves she says: "It is far better to have four women supported and protected than to have one well cared for and three sent out to struggle and starve under present conditions."

The existence of one evil never justifies another, and if conditions are such in any nation that women and girls are forced into a struggle for existence—a struggle so great that many through physical collapse become public dependents or go down in untimely death, or which is worse, fall under the scourge which destroys virtue, then such nation should arouse itself to a recognition of its sin and find an effectual remedy for the changing of such conditions. To meet sin with sin brings no relief to the body politic, though as usual some individuals may find temporary profit thereby.

There is no instance in history where polygamy has elevated the morals or ideals of a people, but on the other hand has been debasing in its final results. No other sin has caused nations who have adopted it with its kindred evils, to retrograde more rapidly and more surely. Sins of that class have brought the severer judgments of God, until in some cases cities or tribes have been wiped out of existence because of them. The taking of "wives of all which they chose" is the one sin mentioned as prevailing before the deluge, on account of which the Lord said: "My Spirit shall not always strive with man."

God never authorized it. He has never indorsed it. Some hold that because he acknowledged and used such men as Jacob and others who were polygamists that such acknowledgement was an indorsement of their conduct, but such reasoning would make God indorse the taking of human life for he acknowledged Moses who slew the Egyptian. In every instance when God has spoken relative to polygamy it has been in condemnation of it.

In the Book of Mormon the Lord says: "David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me." And again: "I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem, by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore, I the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old . . . there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none." Here it is clearly declared that a righteous people could not be built up upon the practice of polygamy, and those to whom this instruction was given were warned that to follow in that sin would bring upon them a sore curse, and even destruction.

That the economic and social conditions render life to many women and girls a struggle is apparent to all, but the same is true also of many men. Remove the causes which have made life a struggle to the masses and men who are now living single lives will be in position to provide homes, and women who now struggle alone will find protection and support in happy homes according to the design of the Creator. Polygamy offers no solution whatever to any of the great problems of the day. What the world needs most urgently are virtue, equity, honor and justice, with the love of righteousness. Without these there can be no satisfactory conditions.

THE DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXAMINED AND COMPARED.

NO. 16.

FINAL SUMMARY.

The examination of the doctrines of the two churches thus far has shown almost a complete contrast. There is so little of faith which the two hold in common that little similarity can be found between them. In concluding this series we present in contrast some of the points of difference including a summary of the points already presented. Under the letters R. C. will be found the claims of the Reorganized Church, and under C. S. will be found those of the Christian Science Church.

ORIGIN.

R. C. God through revelation took the initiative in each step leading to the establishment of the doctrine and the organization of the church, directing and authorizing every important act.

C. S. Mrs. Eddy through many years' research and study developed, or "discovered," the principles of Christian Science, and the church was the outgrowth of the discovery.

R. C. The standard books of the church other than the Bible (which is also accepted as divine) were given of God; the Book of Mormon being revealed by an angel from heaven, Joseph Smith being specially endowed with a divine gift with which to translate it; the book of Doctrine and Covenants being given by direct revelation, God speaking directly through man as his instrument.

C. S. The standard book, Science and Health, (in addition to the Bible) was the product of Mrs. Eddy's labors requiring years of effort; and which was several times revised until it reached its permanent form. Mrs. Eddy claims full credit for the work.

R. C. Authority was received from God through the ministrations of angels by which men were empowered to officiate in the ordinances of the gospel and establish and build up the church under divine direction.

C. S. All initiative and authority relating to the writing of the text book and the founding of the church originated and was vested in Mrs. Eddy.

DOCTRINE.

R. C. God is held to be a divine person having perfect attributes of Omnipotence, omniscience, love, truthfulness, unchangeability, etc., the Creator of the universe, being willing to speak to, and reason with man, as one man reasons with another, always mindful of his creatures and working for their redemption to bring them to dwell in his presence.

C. S. God is Principle, Mind, Spirit, Good, the "only Intelligence of the universe including man." "God never created matter." He is not a person in the sense of having form or location, but as Principle extending everywhere may be sought and found by anyone, though he cannot and does not directly reveal himself to any.

R. C. Jesus Christ is truly the Son of God according to the literal reading of the Bible, having died and rose again from the dead, and lives in the heavens to come again in due time to reign on the earth after having raised his righteous children who will dwell with him. He is the Author of life and salvation, the Head of his church, and the the Redeemer of the world.

C. S. While not directly denied, the actual Sonship of Jesus Christ is nowhere affirmed in Science, and Health. It is indirectly denied. He had a higher conception of truth than other men which entitled him to the title "Son of God," or Son of God, the terms God and Good being used synonymously. It was the truth which made him divine, and it was Mary's conception of truth that enabled her to bring forth her son. While Jesus was a high type of man—other men may attain to the same intelligence and power independently of him, and perform the same miracles, etc., Jesus ceased to exist after his disappearance at the time of his ascension, but Christ or Truth "continued to exist in the eternal order of Divine Science."

R. C. The Holy Ghost is an intelligent power sent from God, to give light to the world, persuade men to do good, and lead them to God. It bears witness to the truth, and reveals God and Christ to such as are worthy and capable of receiving its manifestations. It enlightens all men, but to those who obey the law of Christ it comes as an abiding Comforter, giving aid in the struggle against the opposition of the world through special gifts called "the gifts of the Spirit."

C. S. Christian Science defines the Holy Ghost as "Divine Science the developments of eternal Life, Truth and Love." It is an "enlarged understanding of Divine Science." "The Holy Ghost . . . is expressed in Divine Science, which is the Comforter."

R. C. The atonement by which man may be brought to a unity with God was altogether wrought out by Jesus Christ and him alone. There can be no redemption or salvation only through him.

C. S. "Jesus aided in reconciling man to God, only by giving man a truer sense of Love." "Final deliverance from error . . . is neither reached through paths of flowers, nor plucking one's faith to another's vicarious effort." What Jesus Christ did is but an example to other men and every man's atonement is in his own hands. "Atonement is the exemplification of man's unity with God, whereby he reflects divine Truth, Life, and Love."

R. C. Angels exist as personal entities, and are sent to minister to men.

C. S. Angels are pure thoughts from God, they are "not messengers or persons."

R. C. There is a personal devil with other associates, who ever work in opposition to God for the downfall and eternal death of men.

C. S. There is neither devil nor devils. "There are evil beliefs, often called evil spirits, but these evils are not spirit." "Since God is All, there is no room for his opposite." "The supposition that there are good and evil spirits is a mistake."

R. C. There is to be a literal resurrection of all men to life in the flesh, the righteous to come forth at the return of Christ when he comes to reign on the earth a thousand years, the just to come forth after that period to meet the judgment which awaits all men.

C. S. Man's highest attainments can only be reached by losing all sense of material things, and discarding the material body. "Every object in the material universe will be destroyed." "The belief that material bodies return to dust, hereafter to rise up as spiritual bodies, with material sensations and desires is incorrect." "No final judgment awaits mortals."

ORDINANCES AND PRACTICES.

R. C. Baptism by immersion is held as an initiatory ordinance by which men are granted a remission of their sins, and admitted into the church—the body of Christ. (It is evidence of the acceptance of God's covenant by man by which he separates from the world and takes upon him the name of Christ, resolving to keep the whole law of God.)

C. S. There are no ordinances whatever connected with Christian Science, though in a play upon the word "baptism" it is said: "Our baptism is a purification from all error." It is "submergence in Truth."

R. C. The laying on of hands is an ordinance performed for several purposes, all however for the impartation of divine blessing.

C. S. Having no ordinances the laying on of hands is not practiced for any purpose whatsoever.

R. C. The Lord's Supper is observed by partaking at intervals of bread and wine which have been blessed by prayer, being administered by those who have been duly authorized to represent Christ and officiate in his name, and partaken of by those only who are worthy before God. It involves a willingness upon the part of the partaker to bear the name of Christ and keep his commandments and presume worthiness, and brings spiritual life.

C. S. The Lord's Supper, or Eucharist, is "a dead rite." "No commemoration is requisite, for he is Immanuel, or God with us; and if a friend be with us, why need we memorials of that friend?"

R. C. Prayer, both silent and vocal, is a necessity in order to approach and keep near to God, to avoid temptation and overcome evil, to fulfill life's highest purpose and gain eternal life. It is held that the Spirit of God teaches and inspires men to pray, but the spirit of the evil one teaches men not to pray and discourages them in the effort.

C. S. There is no true prayer but desire which "has little need of any expression from the lips." "Audible prayer cannot change the unalterable Truth." God is not influenced by man." "To suppose that God forgives or punishes him, according as his mercy is sought or unsought, is to misunderstand Love, and make prayer the safety valve for wrong doing." "Petitions only bring mortals the results of their own beliefs."

SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

R. C. Such gifts as wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discerning of spirits, tongues and interpretation of tongues, are believed in, and received in the church through the working of the Holy Spirit, "dividing to every man" as the Lord determines his fitness and need. These gifts are to be exercised in harmony with the law of Christ, otherwise they may become perverted being the work of the adversary rather than the Holy Spirit.

C. S. There being no Holy Ghost in Christian Science other than the science itself as it is manifested in the understanding of men, the powers and blessings mentioned in the preceding paragraph are not indorsed as being directly bestowed by the divine hand, and no claim is made of their having been received, except as to healing.

HEALING.

R. C. Healing as one of the gifts is received in the church, the usual procedure being through faith and prayer with the laying on of the hands of the elders and anointing with oil, though the procedure is varied according to circumstances and necessity. In all cases the healing is considered the result of God's immediate interposition and blessing.

C. S. Healing is altogether within the power of the human operator who obtains his power through an understanding of the "Principle" governing life and health. The procedure is "to destroy the patient's unfortunate belief" that there is such a thing as sickness, "representing man as healthful instead of diseased, and showing that it is impossible for matter to suffer." "The power of healing was not a supernatural gift." "One who understands Christian Science can heal the sick on its Principle."

R. C. In the administration of any of the gifts the ministers and members are but the instruments through whom God operates by his Spirit, and such gifts cannot be used as a means to financial gain. The law: "Freely ye have received, freely give," is followed in all cases.

C. S. Healing is taken up as a profession by such as are qualified, who practice under the title "C. S. D.," and regular fees are charged for their services the same as by medical practitioners. The law: "The laborer is worthy of his hire," is followed in all cases.

The contrast might be followed almost indefinitely, but these points cover the leading issues, and will give the reader a fair idea of the distinctive points of doctrine of each church. As announced at the beginning of this series the Bible has purposely been left out of our investigation, not because it is not accepted by the two churches for both accept it. But each church places upon it a different interpretation, and the interpretation of each is best determined by the other standard books: the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants in the Reorganized Church; and Science and Health in the Christian Science Church.

Our effort has been to represent both sides correctly and should any error have been made, correction will be cheerfully made upon the same being called to our attention.

CONCLUDED.

In order to maintain peaceful relations with other nations Germany has passed a law providing for an increase in her army of from 600,000 to 865,000. Fearing that peace might not be maintained, or perhaps, to help maintain it, France also has arranged to increase her army from 420,000 to 680,000. When a man sharpens his scythe he probably expects to mow something.

The United States have a new rapid gun which is the most deadly of any yet used. It weighs only thirty pounds and can be carried by one man, and will shoot as many bullets as 250 men with rifles of the old style. It will fire nearly six hundred shells per minute. Every year makes it more dangerous to go to war.

CORRESPONDENTS PLEASE NOTE.

Occasionally some of our correspondents who send in news items fail to give their identity by signing their names. Usually such communications find their way to the waste basket though in the case of branch correspondents we have relaxed the rule and have published their reports. Every communication for publication should be signed by the name of the author, and the editor is under no obligation to even read unsigned communications. While we believe it preferable as a rule to publish the names of the writers, yet they may be withheld if desired and a nom de plume used. Names and addresses should be given.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The reunion season is drawing to a close and some of the Independence saints who have gone out to the several reunions in surrounding districts have returned. The Independence Stake has no reunion of its own.

The drought continues in this region, but the heat has moderated somewhat giving relief to man and beast, and saving the fruit and green vegetation from being completely withered. Peaches, though slightly inferior in quality, are plentiful, selling at one dollar per bushel. It was not expected early in the season that the apple crop would be full, but there will be some apples.

The auxiliaries continue their work furnishing something for many minds and hands to do, the Religio meeting on Friday evenings, in charge of Bro. Will Bushnell who was elected some time ago to succeed Bro. William E. LaRue, resigned; and the Sunday school at the usual hour Sunday mornings in charge of the superintendent, Bro. D. J. Krahl, and his assistants. Both societies are prosperous. The Woman's Auxiliary meets bi-monthly on Sunday afternoons after the prayer service, as also the Men's League on the intervening Sunday afternoons. With the priesthood-meetings, choir practice, orchestra practice, teachers' meetings, and various special meetings, in addition to the branch services, there is much to demand the attention and effort of the saints, giving every one opportunity to exercise his individual talents.

Bro. Joseph Luff was the speaker Sunday morning, and his effort was a continuation of the subject used on a former occasion dealing with spiritual gifts and their relation to spiritual life. The effort was well spoken of. In the evening Bro. M. H. Bond preached an excellent sermon specially adapted to the young people.

The Liahona, the Elder's Journal, the publication of the Utah Latter Day Saints, has recently installed a printing plant in the Lewis building across the street from the Examiner Office. The plant is one of the most complete for the purposes intended in the State. A large sized four roller, two color, press has been installed with an automatic feeder. A cutter large enough to cut one side of a big sheet is a part of the equipment and the whole is operated by the latest make of individual motors. The plant is to be used for the purpose of putting out the publication of the Central States Mission which is located at Independence under the charge of S. O. Bennion.—Independence Examiner.

At 2:30 p. m., prayermeeting was well attended and a very enjoyable time was had, some of the gifts were manifested. At 8 p. m. preaching by Bro. J. T. Curtis, and he did well, speaking along the line of obedience.

Religio meets every Thursday evening. Average attendance 140 so far.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

Since our last writing there has been one addition to the branch through the waters of baptism—Jesse Bootman, son of Elder T. W. Bootman of West Plains, Mo.

On the evening of August 3rd we had the pleasure of listening to a very interesting talk by Elder R. Etzenhouser. The saints returning from the reunion at Stewartsville pronounce it a grand success, the preaching profound and instructive, the prayer services spiritual and uplifting.

In closing we would like to mention the departure of Bro. Roy Bootman, a young priest in our branch, for Howell County, Mo. Having been admonished in a dream, he firmly believes the Lord has a work for him to do in that vicinity. Our prayers go with the young brother. May he be able to do God's will and give him glory in Jesus' name. Correspondent.

BENNINGTON HEIGHTS' BRANCH.

The saints of Bennington Heights are doing verily nicely in a temporal way considering our long drought and the money mad craze that has the commercial world in its grasp. I also believe the Lord is well pleased with our endeavors here to serve him.

Feeling that I am the weakest of them all, still I think I can see wherein I have made some advancement in divine light as it is in Christ Jesus our blessed Redeemer.

There has been some sickness in our branch but no serious illness at present, for which we are thankful to our heavenly Father.

Bro. D. F. Wain, our branch president, has just returned from the reunion near Macon, Mo.

Bro. Robinson of Independence preached for us Sunday morning and Bro. John Zahnd at night. By the way, some very lively remarks at the night session.

Last Sunday Bro. F. C. Warkny preached at Fairview and the Sunday previous at Quindaro.

Our young Religians last Friday night voted to not have their picnic at Budd Park as planned but to spend that money for the benefit of the church—a wise decision.

There is undoubtedly too much money spent for the frivolities and pleasure of this life when it should be spent more for the benefit of poor, suffering humanity and the cause of Christ.

May the Lord especially endow those in authority with a spirit of equity and justice in order that peace and harmony may prevail. We should sense fully the old adage, "United we stand, divided we fall."

YOUNG PEOPLE OBEYING THE LAST REVELATION.

A fine example of the interest our young people are taking in present day questions affecting the church has recently been made manifest by the Religians of Independence, Kansas City and vicinity.

Sometime ago it was thought by a number of the members of the various social committees that by having an "Outdoor Day" at one of the parks in Kansas City at which all the nearby local Religios could participate sociability between the different locals would be increased and a general good time had by all.

But it was hard for the joint meeting of the social committees to agree upon a day when all could take part, some wanting it on Labor Day and some at other times. There developed such a strong difference of opinion in regard to the matter that the committee on arrangements decided to refer the question back to the locals for final settlement, but with the committee's request for a vote on the question of date there also went a suggestion as to whether, in the light of the last revelation on financial matters and the necessity for economy individually and as a church which it enjoins upon us, it would not be well to consider these instructions from the Lord in connection with this proposed picnic? That inasmuch as the Religio is an auxiliary, a help to the church, would it not be well to demonstrate at this critical time that its members can help in financial ways as well as along educational lines? Why not postpone the picnic for the present, figure up what it would cost each to go and donate that amount to the liquidation of the general church debt?

The result was surprising as well as gratifying. Eight out of ten locals reporting voted to adopt the suggestion and create a "Picnic Sacrifice Fund" to be sent to the Bishop to apply on the church debt.

When we consider how well young people like to have a picnic and enjoy the society of each other, especially under the ideal conditions offered by the magnificent parks of Kansas City, we can realize to some extent how the spirit of sacrifice, the spirit of Christ, is taking hold of their lives. We may justly feel proud of our young people. We ought to associate with them more than we do and encourage them in their good works. Possibly some of the older ones might profit by their example occasionally.

THE ROUND TABLE.

We read of different degrees of glory which await the righteous; are there different degrees of punishment for the wicked, or is there a difference in the length of time for which men suffer?

Since every man is to be judged according to his works it is consistent to believe that there will be different degrees of punishment for the wicked just the same as degrees of glory for the righteous. In no other way could a reward of works be given. Ezek. 26:20; Psalms 63:9, Isa. 44:22,23, Eph. 4:9, Ezek. 32:21; Deut. 32:22, Psa. 86:12,13, referring to the departed souls, speak of the low, lower, and lowest places and conditions, indicating degrees of punishment. The preaching of the gospel to the spirits in prison by Christ, (1 Pet. 3:19-21) opened up the way of escape to such as were ready to accept, while those who were not ready must needs await a later date, and some will not be brought out until after the thousand years of Christ's reign on the earth. Rev. 20:5-13. Hence we see that suffering will be measured both by its degree and the length of time.

Is it lawful for Latter Day Saints to eat swine's flesh, drink tea and coffee, and use drugs?

The lawfulness of the act depends upon whether or not there has been any enactment of law covering such act. There is no law under the gospel forbidding the use of swine's flesh for food, but the Lord has said: "Yea, flesh also, of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I the Lord hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter, or of cold, or famine." (D. C. 86). The choice and use of foods are left to the judgment of man, and experience and wisdom should determine what is proper and safe for food. The use of fresh swine's flesh is held by many to be unsafe to health. The counsel against "hot drinks," which must include tea and coffee, while not put in the form of law, expresses the mind of the Lord, and must have been based upon his knowledge of their injurious effects. The penalty of ignoring the counsel is in the effects which are often attended by physical weakness or suffering, and spiritual loss. Physicians generally are coming more and more to the conclusion that the use of drugs fails to bring beneficial results and even causes injury to body and mind. Whatever wrong there may be in these things is determined by their effects upon the body and mind, and if they prove injurious, of which we have little doubt, the penalty will come in physical weakness or pain and consequent loss of power and opportunity to fulfill the highest purposes of life, and consequently a lessened reward in the life to come.

"A liberal mind which is quick to perceive is a good thing; a brilliant or classical education is an efficient means in the accomplishment of good; but there is absolutely no substitute for the love of God and the Spirit of truth. Whoever ignores these rich provisions of the Father's love, will in a greater or lesser degree wander into the mazes of darkness and sin."—Elder J. R. Lambert.

CORRESPONDENCE

FENNELLS, Okla., July, 1913.

Dear Ensign:—I want you to accept my sincere thanks for your very interesting articles on Christian Science and Latter Day Saint doctrines compared. It has been quite a help to me as I was very much interested and did not know the exact position the church took along those lines. I have read Science and Health but cannot understand how Mrs. Eddy got her conclusion about many things—about the creation for one, but I realize the fact that truth has to overcome error, but the way it is to do that while people reject the counsel of God in not being baptized and taking a bold stand against the doctrines taught by Jesus and the apostles is more than I can understand.

Yours for truth,
Mrs. M. M. Aarons.

PALMERSVILLE, Tenn., July 23.

Dear Ensign:—It has been quite a while since I have written to the Ensign but it has not been because I have not enjoyed the precious letters of others, they are almost like sermons. Our reunion has just come to a close and it was a sad parting to part with pleasant faces. It was a fine reunion and the people seemed to have brought the Holy Spirit with them. Thirteen were plunged beneath the liquid wave as Christ had commanded. There was a great crowd of saints on the ground and were well cared for. May the protecting hand of Jehovah ever be over them for their kindness toward us. I ask an interest in the prayers of the saints.

Your sister in Christ,
Hortense Sanders.

SEATTLE, Wash.

Dear Ensign:—I have just returned home from prayer service at which the Spirit of our Savior was enjoyed; and I humbly ask the secret prayers of all the saints in my behalf that I may at the reunion at Vancouver, through administration for my eyes, receive a blessing from God and be healed so I may be instrumental in his hands.

Now, dear saints, let us appeal to our reason and intelligence for just one moment. Now suppose twelve had a load to lift which weight is 1200 pounds and each man could only lift 100 pounds. We see the need of united effort. Now I am one of the twelve, I must lift, and earnestly I ask all the saints to lift with me, calling upon God in their secret places. I also request a special effort of the saints who read this, who are personally acquainted with me and my afflictions to be earnest in prayer with me. I was formerly of Weir, Kansas. I am as ever, your brother in gospel bonds,

R. L. Hays.

CONWAY, Mo., July 24.

Dear Ensign:—We are awful lonely here at Conway. My husband and I are the only saints there are here. We have been members over four years and are not tired yet. We have not heard the L. D. S. gospel preached for three years; we would like to hear the true gospel once more. We live one and a half miles south of Conway, Mo. We have been striving to be faithful to our Master. We ask the prayers of all of the followers of Christ.

Your sister in the faith,
Ethel M. Ammann.

Editor Ensign:—The reunion and conference of the Western Oklahoma District convened July 18th at Sander's Grove, seven miles southwest of Calumet, Okla. A larger attendance than last year was present. About one hundred and fifty saints camped on the grounds. A truly enjoyable and profitable meeting of ten days was held. Many new saints were present and we think they were edified and strengthened. Bro. Aylor, Ammon White, Hubert Case, J. E. Yates and A. H. Christensen were their isonaries present and did the preaching. Seventeen baptisms.

The co operative boarding tent and the refreshment stand were factors involving finances. Meals averaged eleven cents each, (including the star boarders). The treasurer's report showed a profit on the whole of about $50.00. Come again next year.

A. H. Christensen.

DAGONIA, Mo., July 28.

Dear Ensign:—We have a branch here with a goodly number of saints, and a Sunday school, and prayermeeting every Wednesday night. There have been some able speakers here. Bro. J. F. Cunningham was here not long since and preached some fine sermons and baptized three noble ones, and there are some more almost ready for the water. I hope to live to see all of my family in the church. Our two oldest girls with my husband and myself are members,

I can sympathize with all who have had to give up their loved ones. We had to give up our beloved baby boy three years ago and still miss him, and always will. I can only say God's will be done not ours. Let us all pray for one another.

Mrs. J. D. Keathley.

GLEN, Minn., July 30.

Editor Ensign:—I will renew my subscription as I can't get along without the paper. I am isolated from the church and I am getting along in years, and the paper is a great comfort to me. I have been a member of the Latter Day Saint Church twenty-eight years and never regretted the step I made when I united with it. I am now a widow and the most comfort to me is what I find in the church papers and my Bible. I have had many sorrows and still the Lord has been faithful of me in time of trouble, when two of my family died within the last four years. But I am hopeful of them as they both were members of the church.

I want to pay some tithing but don't know where to send it. The last I paid to Birch Whiting but don't know who the agent is now. Hope he will see this and write to me.
Catherine J. Marcum.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Aug. 7.

Dear Ensign:—As I am studying my renewal for Ensign will just say a few words. Your worthy columns come each week and bring the news from far and near and is inspiring to note the interest taken by different ones in the work. Oh, that we all might be more interested in doing our full duty that the work might move on to its final triumph.

There is a brother visiting at this place who desires an interest in the prayers of the Prayer Union, that he might be renewed spiritually, and his course directed, and be given strength to accomplish with patience the work the Lord has assigned him to do.

Dear saints let us be faithful in a good cause, ever being ready to do all the good we can to help each other and further on the work and overcome our failings. May we all be strengthened spiritually and more able to do what is before us to do is the prayer of your sister. We were greatly strengthened lately by a few good sermons from one of the traveling ministry.

Hopefully,
Mrs. Florence Bloom.

RANDLETT, Okla., Aug. 5.

Editor Ensign:—I was looking through some old clippings and found a snake bite remedy, and thinking it might help some one, I send it hoping you will publish it in the Ensign.

Mrs. E. E. Edwards.

The remedy is as follows:—
An Indian sure cure for any kind of a snake bite: take a tablespoon full of common salt, then a common onion the size of a hen egg, then about three ounces of any kind of strong tobacco, cut tobacco up fine also the onion; the sap in the onion will make a poultice of the tobacco and salt, don't use any water with the three ingredients as the onion will furnish sap enough to make the poultice. Put this poultice on the wound as soon as possible; if this does not stop all suffering in a very few minutes, say one hour, then put on a new poultice. Nine out of ten cases of snake bite the one poultice will be a perfect cure, for this is a no fail remedy.

SPRING RIVER, Kan., Aug. 21.

Editor Ensign:—Old Sol hides not his burning face and laughs to scorn the falling leaf and withered flower; even the stunted sunflower refuses to longer turn its head to the burning orb, but it hides its drooping face the best it may from the withering winds that come sweeping up from the burning sands.

The drought in these parts is a serious proposition. Corn and fruits are badly damaged and hay is almost an entire failure; yet, notwithstanding all, the saints rejoice and acknowledge the hand of the Lord, and sacrifice the more for the gospel's sake, as evidenced by the best reunion ever held in the district, which closed last Sunday night, mid almost a blaze of glory, with 1200 people spell-bound under the eloquence and logic of our John W. Kushton, "the different," the inspiring song service directed by Sr. Flo. McNichols, with her three sisters as assistants, together with a chorus choir of fifty voices drilled to almost perfection, closing up the ten days sweet communion with "Christ has Risen and man shall not die," "God be with you till we meet again," and "We'll never say good-by in heaven," was no mean ending of the best reunion of the series. Bro. Curtis of champion fame and greatly admired by his many gospel children; Bro. Quick the humble and meek; Bro. Martin the boy preacher with a record if faithful; Bro. Silvers the intir-ting, together with all the local ministry, did well. Not a jar or discordant note was heard, not an excuse was offered or needed, but all were harmonious and pleasant as we "tentied on the old camp ground."

Bro. Wm. Lewis, the patriarch gave excellent satisfaction. His daughter Ruth also made many fast friends. Bro. W. H. Deam, the Ensign man, was with us looking after the Ensign interests; Sr. Bird and daughter, our congenial cooks, gave excellent satisfaction in the culinary department.

The auxiliaries directed by Bro. Virgen, Bro. Carrow and Sr. McNichols were excellent in instruction and inspiring in effects—almost every afternoon was taken up and more time could have been profitably employed. The several quorums met and discussed questions pertaining to their work, and in a joint discussion it was agreed that the tobacco user and those addicted to strong drink must discontinue such habits. Higher and higher is the watchword of the live saint in the Spring River District. The slothful and indifferent must give way to the "Onward and upward" in every department of church work. All were sorry when the end came. The reunion of 1913 will long be remembered.
T. W. Chatburn—"Jots Man."

CAMP GROUND, IRVINGTON, Cal., Aug. 23.

Dear Ensign:—We are in the midst of a glorious reunion. Bro. Griffiths and Miller were with us two days, each delivering an edifying sermon. They sailed on the 20th. Bro. Sheehy, Davison, Stead, Deuk, Reiste and Cady of the missionary force are present. Bishop Parkin is in evidence also, and the writer is here in full enjoyment. The camp is much larger than last year and the health better. Better water and less watermelons. We look for a high day on Sunday as our camp is increasing. Sermons are excellent. Bro. James E. Kelley arrived and is with us and preached a rousing sermon last night. All goes well.

Yours in bonds,
J. M. Terry.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Mrs. L. M. Berry, Necedah, Wis.—If any elder or saints come to Necedah, the latch string is on the outside of the door for them to come in.

M. A. Sargent, Fisher, Ark.—Will you allow a weak saint to occupy a small space on your fair pages? I was baptized last October by Elder J. T. Riley and am trying by the help of God to live pleasing in his sight. I ask the prayers of the saints to help me in this great warfare.

Mrs. A. D. Harpster, Audubon, Minn.—I am so glad and thankful that I am a Latter Day Saint. Have been one for nearly two months. I am so thankful the Lord showed me the light for I know this gospel work is true, and I desire to do all I can in it, and hope that you will all pray for me that I may do what is right and be faithful to the end.

Miss Dora A. Harpster, Audubon, Minn.—We have a small branch of Latter Day Saints here; I hope in time there will be a large branch. This last year there has been one baptized. I have been in this true latter day work for seven years and I know this gospel work is true. I hope you will all pray for me so that I can do what the Lord wants me to do.

DALBY SPRINGS, Tex. Aug. 19.

Editor Ensign:—We just closed a successful reunion here. About 150 saints camped. At night our crowd would swell to 400 or more. Saints are very much scattered in this part, and some who attended had not heard preaching for years. They seemed to enjoy it so much.

One man who was baptized fourteen years ago in Tennessee, found out at this meeting that he was in the wrong church. He had gotten into the Utah Mormon Church and did not know of any other. He said he was so glad he found out his mistake and now was ready to come into the true church.

Nine were baptized. A good many new resolutions made altogether. Great good was done.

I leave for San Antonio in the morning.
Sincerely yours,
W. M. Aylor.

GRACELAND'S INDUSTRIAL SHOP.

Since the gift of a manual training equipment for the College by the General Sunday School Association in 1907, the idea of developing a constructive industry in which the training gained by the students should be put to a practical and immediate use and through which many needy students should find remunerative employment, has been cherished by those in charge of this work at the College. Each year an effort has been made in this direction and from one to three or four young men have been employed. In 1900, friends in Michigan and Illinois responded to a call and three much needed large machines were added to the equipment, greatly increasing the possibilities of our output. At the present time we realize the need of a few modern machines which would decrease the necessity for hand labor and largely increase the range of our product. While we could use a cash donation to most excellent advantage for this purpose, we plan, rather, to let the shop earn its own way if we can find sale for our product.

We are in a position to make to order any article of furniture in the mission line; such as chairs, tables, book-cases, wardrobes, taboretts, typewriter desk, paper racks, folding-screens, foot-stools, hat-racks, umbrella-racks, settees, and the like. We can not compete with the cheap mail-order houses, for our product is not of that grade. But we can give a good, substantial, artistic, product at a reasonable price; an article that will please a careful buyer and yet be within the price asked by local dealers. Just send in a description or a picture of the article like the one desired and we will promptly quote price and state fully the particulars of the construction.

We wish, also, to get in touch with those of our church people who are in a mercantile business that will admit of our placing our product on sale in their place of business. Let us know what will sell in a particular community and we will make up a sample article and send on to convince you that our product has merit. As our output increases we shall issue a larger folder fully illustrating articles of our manufacture. When we find a staple line of saleable articles within our possibilities, we can assist many more young men in their earnest endeavor to secure an education and to qualify for the greatest usefulness in life.

We welcome suggestions from those in a position to judge wisely in these matters. If Zion is to be built upon a co-operative basis, let us begin to co-operate. We give you a desired product at a bare margin above cost of production in our shop. The margin reverts to the maintenance and development of the shop. The wage of the student employed—the one thing for which the shop is maintained—assists a needy student in a noble and worthy effort to be independent and to become an efficient producer among the Lord's people. Is our appeal not consistent when we ask the church people to consider our product, even when the price is a few cents or dollars above the advertised price of a "cheap" article made in the shop of the world?

Our folder and further particulars upon application. Address all communication to the sales manager, C. B. Woodstock, Lamoni, Ia.

THE CHURCH DEBT.

The debt of the church should now be paid—
A matter already long delayed;
That the hands of God's servants may soon be free—
There is plenty to do, for you and for me.

A membership of seventy thousand saints
Could raise the amount and make no complaints.
Let each one his part most willingly do,
And we'll say to the debt "Adieu! Adieu!"

That the Lord hath spoken none will deny;
His blessings will rest upon all who will try
To replenish the treasury of God's kingdom on earth,
And give to his Zion a glorious birth.

So member and priest both great and small,
Let us pay the church debt and pay it all!
And then will the Lord his people bless,
And his kingdom move forward to great success.

—Charles J. Spurlock.

Patriarchal Blessings.

Should it be understood that all personal promises found in a patriarchal blessing are based on conditions? If so, should the conditions be expressed?

By Patriarch William Lewis.

(This paper was read before the High Priests' Quorum, during the general conference, April, 1913, at Lamoni, Iowa.)

In answer to the first question: Yes, as a rule, for in the dealings of God with man in all ages, so far as we have a history of the blessings promised either spiritual, physical, or temporal, they are conditional, but there may be exceptions. The promises made to man in the Garden of Eden were conditional; we understand that man's days are numbered, but he can shorten them by transgressing or breaking the laws of nature, which are God's laws. Man may be promised to live to a good old age, but it stands to reason that it is with the understanding that he be wise and not overtax his strength or unnecessarily expose himself. He has his agency and he can commit suicide if he chooses; hence shorten his days one-third or one-half of the allotted time.

I know of a case: Some years ago a brother was promised in his patriarchal blessing that he should live to see the temple built; nothing was said about the conditions. This brother was taken seriously ill, later; his affliction was brought upon him by unnecessary exposure and when he was unable to work, he exposed himself by going out of doors on cold winter days; often he was seen on the streets, when in justice to himself he should have been indoors by the side of a warm stove. He was a young married man, anxious to make life pleasant for his wife, and he often insisted that they go visiting friends that had invited them, when he really should have been at home. In company with Bro. G. W. Best, I assisted in administering to him. While Bro. Best anointed, I saw in a vision a beautiful cluster of flowers, several varieties, and all were in bloom and full of life; they were moved into other quarters that were not suitable to them, the atmosphere was to cold, and I saw them fade, wither, and decay. I was given to understand that as it was with the flowers, so it was with the sick brother; had he used wisdom, not exposed himself, he could have had claim upon the promise to live to see the temple built.

"But," says one, "If the promise was made by the Spirit of the Lord, did not the Lord know that the brother would act unwisely and shorten his days and not live to see the promise fulfilled?" Yes, "Why then say he should live to see the temple built?" Upon the condition that he (the brother) do his part to preserve his health, so that he might live his allotted time. The Lord might say, "Thou shalt not perish by water nor fire." Still if man willfully and knowingly jumps into the water or fire, he cannot consistently have claim on the promise, and if he perishes, the fault is his own. Jesus said, "These signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them." The promises of the Lord can be relied upon, but the conditions must be complied with. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."

All of the above promises are conditional. In the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy, which is quite lengthy (has sixty-eight verses), we have the two pictures presented to Israel; the blessing and the curses, which promises are all conditional. By obedience and faithful service, the blessings promised are to be obtained; upon the other hand, disobedience would deprive Israel, or others, from receiving. Notice Jonah's message to Ninevah: "Yet forty days and Ninevah shall be overthrown." Still it was not. Why? "Because the people repented in sack cloth and ashes. Did not the Lord know they would repent?" Yes. "Why then was Jonah commanded to say, 'In forty days the city shall fall?'" With the understanding if they did not repent it would fall. The fact that forty days warning was given was evidence that if within that period they repented, the city would not fall. I presume if many that are living now had lived in the days of Jonah, when he delivered the message to the people of Ninevah, seeing that the city did not fall, they would cry, "False prophet." Even Jonah was disappointed and offended, because the city did not fall. He preferred that the people perish and the city fall than that his prediction fail, whereas, if he had been clothed with charity, as was Abraham when told of the calamity that would befall Sodom, he would have rejoiced in the salvation of the people, and the city.

SECOND QUESTION:

SHOULD THE CONDITIONS BE EXPRESSED?

It would be wise and a safe guard to do so, but whether they are or are not, all to whom the promises are made ought to understand that unless they do their duty, the Lord is under no obligation to comply with the promises, and it is not consistent or just to expect it. The Lord has spoken to us in this age, saying, "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." Not only in the patriarchal channel, but in baptisms, confirmations, ordinations, and administering to the sick are the promises of God given on conditions, and also in the partaking of the sacrament.—John 6:54-56,—"Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day. For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him." I do not understand that all that partake of the bread and wine shall receive the above promise; while conditions are not mentioned, just the same there are conditions and only those who comply with the same can have claim upon the promises.

In section 92, paragraph 1, Doctrine and Covenants, we have the following: "But, behold verily I say unto you, There are many who have been ordained among you, whom I have called, but few of them are chosen. They who are not chosen, have sinned a very grievous sin, in that they are walking in darkness at noonday," etc. In some ordinations, remarkable promises have been made, which were not only encouraging to the ones ordained but of cheer and strength to the flock. But, some of those called and ordained, to whom the encouraging promises were made, became careless and unfaithful, consequently did not receive that which was promised and were not chosen. Judas was called and ordained, but not chosen. We read of precious promises made to the members of the first quorum of apostles in the years 1835 to 1844, that did not materialize, which caused Joseph much grief and sorrow, for he, like Jonah, knew that the Lord had spoken, and not until he (Joseph) saw in a vision the members of the quorum in a very unclean condition, not worthy to receive, did he understand why the promises were not fulfilled. In Doctrine and Covenants section 105, paragraph 5, the Twelve are rebuked through their president, Thomas B. Marsh, because of their sins.

I refer to the above in support of the statement that "many are called, but few are chosen."

Blessings promised, as a rule, are conditional, not only spiritual, but temporal blessings. A brother living on a farm, was notified that the place was sold and that he would have to give possession the first of March. Four months had passed and the time to vacate had come; he was asked if he had rented another farm he said, "Not yet." "Is it not getting late? The best farms about all disposed of?" He answered, "I am not worrying; the Lord has always provided." This brother devoted much of his time in the fall and winter preaching in various parts of the district and had good opportunity of knowing where the best farms were and could have secured one, but was waiting, as he expressed himself, for the way to open, when in fact it had been opened for several months and was now closing up. The best were gone and he had to take one of the poorest in the district. Still he believed that the Lord would bless the labors of his hands and that even the worn out, thin soil, would bring forth a hundred fold. The harvest came but it was not even thirty fold. It is a true saying that the Lord will help those who try to help themselves and will always fulfill his promises when man complies with the conditions in good faith. 7th & Harris Streets, Cameron, Mo.

Note.—After the above article had been read and spoken to before the High Priests' Quorum last April, it was resolved "That the paper be published by the consent of Bro. Lewis and the Presiding Patriarch. The one who was presiding over the Order of Evangelists, at that time, believes the paper to be a good one, as a whole, and fully indorses the leading position and argument, made by the writer, all the way through. But he also believes that if the words "as a rule" and "but there may be exceptions" were stricken from paragraph 1, the article would be sater and better. He believes the rule is an invariable one, and hence there can be no exceptions. In his way of thinking, it should be so understood by the saints. Bro. Lewis is not willing to have these statements stricken out, hence it is published as written by him, and commended to the saints for a careful reading. J. R. Lambert.

THE DIVINITY OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.

Lecture Delivered at South Boardman, Mich.

Feb. 9th 1913, by Alvin R. Ellis.

The next prophet that I want to call your attention to is Jeremiah. I said that the Lord directed them to leave the land of Jerusalem: Let us see, "Flee, get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the Lord; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken council against you. Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation, that dwelleth without care, saith the Lord, which have neither gates nor bars, which dwell alone. And their camels shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil." (Jer. 49:30-32.) I want to review these words and call especial attention to some of them. Notice, "Dwell deep" (Go unobserved.) "Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation." (That agrees with the blessings upon Joseph's posterity.) "That dwelleth without care, which have neither gates nor bars." (No government to prevent them from taking possession.) "And their camels shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil." Let us follow them in the record: "After we had sailed for the space of many days, we did arrive to the promised land, . . . we did begin to till the earth, and we began to plant seeds; . . . And it came to pass that we did find upon the land of promise, as we did journey in the wilderness, that there were beasts in the forests of every kind, both the cow, and the ox, and the ass, and the horse, and the goat, and the wild goat, and all manner of wild animals, which were for the use of man."—Book of Mormon, page 63, A. E.; page 43, S. E.

Years ago, the opposers to the Book of Mormon made a great deal of sport of this, and at Joseph's expense, by saying that the poor ignorant fellow knew no better than to tell about there being animals upon the American Continent years before they were brought here by the Europeans. But to the proof that has come since the Book of Mormon was published. Desire Charnay says: "Found in the ruins of Tula the bones of swine, sheep, oxen, and horses in fossil state, indicating an immense antiquity." (Atlantis, page 369, Pub. 1884.) "Fossil remains of the Camel are found in India, Africa, South America, and in Kansas." (Atlantis, page 54.) "Seventeen species of fossil horses had been discovered in America, that the buffaloes were cattle, that the mountain sheep lived in the Rocky Mountains, and that peccaries or wild pigs roamed yet in large numbers in the forests of Central America."—Le Plongeon, in 1889.

While we are dwelling on this point, I will read from the book of Ether, a portion of the Book of Mormon, which gives the history of the colony that came from Babel: "And in the space of sixty and two years, they had become exceeding strong, inasmuch that they became exceeding rich, having all manner of fruit, and of grain, and of silks, and of fine linen, and of gold, and of silver, and of precious things, and also all manner of cattle, of oxen, and cows, and of sheep, and of swine, and of goats, and also many other kinds of animals which were useful for the food of man, and they also had horses, and asses, and there were elephants, and cureloms, and cumoms, all of which were useful unto man, and more especially the elephants, and cureloms and cumoms."—Book of Mormon, page 737, A. E.; page 517, S. E.

Much sport has been made about the animal theory in the Book of Mormon; more especially, that elephants were here and used by the people. And poor Joseph has had to catch it for this awful blunder; but let me produce some proof on this point: "We find in America numerous representations of the elephant." (Atlantis, pages 8, 95.) "Most remarkable of the minor finds made at Paraddon is that of the remains of elephants. . . . The remains of the elephants show plainly that the inhabitants of the buried cities made elephants work for them. Elephants were as much in evidence in the streets of the cities as horses."—Milwaukee Free Press, Sept. 5th. 1903.

Some of the opponents of the Book of Mormon have had a great deal of fun over the names "cureloms" and "cumoms;" but all I have to say about that is this: "Let the opposers prove that the large animal called the "mastodon," that has been found in fossil state, could not have been these very animals spoken of in the Book of Mormon. It is evident that they are the same, as the cureloms and cumoms are spoken of with the elephants, as being of the larger class of animals. It says that all the animals were useful, "more especially the elephants, and the cureloms and customs." And furthermore, the mastodon is described as resembling the elephant, by those who have seen them. It seems that that is enough on that, so we pass on.

Let us go back again to the account of the arrival of the Nephites, and we read: "And we did find all manner of ore, both of gold, and of silver, and of copper." (Book of Mormon, page 63, A. E.; page 43, S. E.) Again we read: "And they did work in all manner of ore, and they did make gold, and silver, and iron, and brass, and all manner of metals; and they did dig it out of the earth; wherefore they did cast up mighty heaps of earth to get ore, of gold, and of silver, and of iron, and of copper. . . . And they did all manner of work of exceeding curious workmanship." (Book of Mormon, 732, A. E.; page 520, S. E.) It is true that those ancient people did engage in the mining industry, and work in ore as the book says that they did? I take up the later works of the ruins and I read: "Relics of art have been dug from some of the mounds, consisting of a considerable variety of ornaments and implements, made of copper, silver, obsidian, porphyry, and greenstone, finely wrought. There are axes, single and double; adzes, chisels, drills or gravers, lance heads, knives, bracelets, pendants, beads, and the like made of copper." (Baldwin's Ancient America, page 40.) "Modern mining on Lake Superior began effectively in 1845. The whole copper region has not been explored. Works of the ancient miners are found at all the mines of any importance; and they show remarkable skill in discovering and tracing actual veins of the metal." (Ancient America, page 46.) "In one mine, which had been choked up in the course of years with earth and vegetable refuse, and the remains of several generations of trees; were found, at about eighteen feet from the surface, a block of metal measuring two feet long by three wide and two thick, and weighing nearly six tons. The mass had been placed on rollers from six to eight inches in diameter, the edges of which still bare the marks of a sharp instrument." (Pre-historic America, page 178.) "In Liberty Township, Washington County, Ohio, are yet to be seen twenty or thirty rude furnaces, built of stone, with hearths of clay, containing pieces of stone-coal and cinders, perhaps used in smelting ore. Large trees are still growing on them, and attest their age." They stand in the midst of a rich body of iron ore."—American Antiquities, page 55, Pub. 1839.

I have in my possession, a half-tone of a pure mass of copper described thus: "A mass of pure copper weighing about 6,000 pounds, found upon the property of the Minong Mining Company, at McCargo Cove, on Isle Royal, Lake Superior. It was taken from an ancient mine pit, sixteen and one-half feet deep, and is just as discovered; showing ancient stone hammer marks." (Official Year Book for 1909, page 184.) I have here a clipping, that I wish to read and then we will leave this part of the subject.

"New York, Jan. 27.—Dr. Marshall H. Saville, professor of archaeology at Columbia University, has just returned from the wild regions of Ecuador, after many exciting experiences while heading an expedition among the ruins of ancient civilization. He and his assistants have brought back the most complete collection in the world of the relics of Ecuador's lost tribes. . . . In digging an irrigation trench the laborers hit upon an ancient tomb containing many gold and silver ornaments. . . . Before the excitement subsided at least 3,000 tombs had been opened and several hundred thousand dollars in gold, silver and precious stones had been marketed. . . . The data secured by the party shows that the district explored was densely populated by a highly civilized people at some time prior to the beginning of the fifteenth century."—Bay City Times, Jan. 28, 1910.

On the map of ancient America scores of cities are dotted through what is now Mexico, Central America, Chile, and some in the United States. The description given of America in the Book of Mormon tallies with our modern map, as to outlines. North America is referred to as "The land Northward;" South America as "The land Southward," and the Isthmus of Panama is called "The narrow neck of land."

Joseph Smith was called an ignominious by many of his enemies; but those that have condemned him, have, at the same time, given reasons for us to believe, were it not that he was inspired, that he was the smartest man in the world. If the Book of Mormon was intended, by Joseph, to be a successful imposition on the people of this generation, he would have had to have built all the cities that have been and are being discovered. What a job he would have had on his hands to have excavated and buried all those cities under the surface of the earth, as they have been found.

The Book of Mormon told of the ancient people building those cities, describing many things in detail that were unknown to the learned when it was published and given to the world. It says that they "built many cities." I will read one passage on this point. "And it came to pass that there were many cities built anew, and there were many old cities repaired, and there were many highways cast up, and many roads made, which led from city to city, and from land to land, and from place to place." (Book of Mormon, page 671, A. E.; page 433, S. E.) These roads have been found, just as the record says, leading from place to place. Now listen! "Nothing in ancient Peru was more remarkable than the public roads. No ancient people have left traces of works more astonishing than these, so vast was their extent, and so great the skill and labor required to construct them. One of these roads ran along the mountains through the whole length of the empire, from Quito to Chile. Another starting from Cuzco, went down to the coast and extended northward to the equator. These roads were built on beds, or 'deep under structures' of masonry. The width of the roadways varied from twenty to twenty-five feet, and they were made level and smooth by paving, and in some places by a sort of macadamizing with pulverized stone mixed with lime and bituminous cement. . . . Now only broken remains of them exist to show their former character."—Baldwin's Ancient America, pages 243-246.

Donnelly says: "The American nations built public works as great or greater than any in Europe. The Peruvians had public roads, one thousand five hundred to two thousand miles long, made so thoroughly as to elicit the astonishment of the Spaniards. At every few miles taverns or hotels were established for the accommodation of travelers."—Atlantis, page 141. Pub. 1884.

The condition of the buried cities, and how they came to be buried as they are found, is an important part of this subject. They are there, it is sure; but the scientific world is at a loss to know the cause. "Dr. Nicholas, archaeologist and ethnologist of the Mexican Museum of Mexico. . . made several important investigations of the recent finds of cities and animals. . . . The excavations made so far show that a large city was buried not far from the present town of Paradon by an immense amount of earth. . . . According to the estimates of the scientists under whose direction the excavations are being made, the city in question had a population of at least fifty thousand. . . . All the inhabitants of the cities were killed, as well as all the animals. Skeletons of the human inhabitants and of the animals are strewn all through the debris, from a depth of three feet, showing that all the debris was deposited almost at once. Measurements show that the debris is on an average of sixty feet deep where the largest of the cities stood."—Milwaukee Free Press, Sept. 5th 1903.

Now I will show you from the Book of Mormon how those cities were buried, and it ought to stop all speculation on the matter. It was at the time of Christ's crucifixion on the Eastern Continent. "And it came to pass in the thirty and fourth year, in the first month, in the fourth day of the month, there arose a great storm, such an one as never had been known in all the land. And there was also great and terrible tempest; and there was terrible thunder, snomuch that it did shake the whole earth as if it was about to divide it asunder; and there were exceeding sharp lightnings, such as never had been known in all the land. And the City of Zarahelma did take fire, and the city of Moroni did sink into the depths of the sea, and the inhabitants thereof were drowned. And the earth was carried upon the city Moronihah, that in the place thereof, there became a great mountain; and there was a great and terrible destruction in the land sothward. But behold, there was a more great and terrible destruction in the land northward: for behold, the whole face of the land was changed, because of the tempests, and the whirlwinds, and the thunderidgs, and the lightnings, and the exceeding great quaking of the whole earth; and the highways were broken up, and the lever roads were spoiled, and many smooth places became rough, and many great and notable cities were sunk, and many were burned, and many were shook till the buildings thereof had fallen to the earth, and the inhabitants thereof were slain, and the places were left desolate." (Book of Mormon, page 624, A. E.; pages 437 and 438, S. E.)

Following what I have read, it says that "all these great and terrible thing were done in about the space of three hours." The ruins found, indicate that it was done almost at once; and here, it is plainly told. My friends, you that have never read the book should do so; and you will get a better understanding than from just the few quotations that I have given you.

I am going to read an excerpt from a clipping recently published, and I want you to notice how the matter contained in the article can be settled with the Book of Mormon; but the writer of the article is puzzled. "The discovery of the bones of a human giant at Ellensburg (Oregon) is one of the most interesting anthropological finds made in the northwest, according to L. L. Sharp, chief of the general land office. 'I just returned from Ellensburg,' said he, 'where I had opportunity to view the bones unearthed. The skull, jawbone, thigh and other parts of the skeleton indicated a man to my mind of at least eight feet high. A man of his stature and massive frame would weigh fully 300 pounds at least. . . . I am convinced that this is of a prehistoric man who was one of a remarkable race of people who inhabited this part of America some time previous to the Indian control. The bones were uncovered fully twenty feet below the surface. There is the usual gravel formation on top, then the conglomerate, a stratum of shale, and in a bed of concrete gravel beneath the shale were the bones of the giant and of a smaller person. The shale would indicate tremendous age, perhaps more than 1,000,000 years, for the deposit in which the skeleton was found. But this I deem impossible, and presume that the bones were put beneath the shale by means of a tunnel, or some other system in interment. I cannot think it possible that a human being of an advanced stage indicated by this skull could have existed at the period when the shale was formed.'—Portland (Oregon) telegram." (Livingston (Mich.) Democrat, Nov. 11, 1912.) The Book of Mormon gives the only reasonable solution of the case; and it is certain that those skeletons were placed there in the same manner that the skeletons were in the cities referred to—by the earthquake at the time of the crucifixion of the Savior.

When I was a boy attending school, I was greatly interested in history, especially the history of our own country. I remember of studying about the mounds, and the relics and ruins of the ancient cliff palaces; but never was satisfied about their origin until I read this wonderful book. I will read from some recent writers before referring to the Book of Mormon on this point: "One can look at the wonderful towers of the Cliff Palace in Southwest Colorado. . . . In this canyon scarred land are the three most wonderful cliff villages in the world, the Cliff Palace with one hundred and forty-five rooms, the Spruce Tree House, with ninety, and Balcony House with thirty. They are all within a days ride of Mancos, Colorado; and the greatest distance between them is four miles."—Saint Louis Post-Dispatch, Sun. Magazine, Dec. 31, 1905.

Any one who was at the World's Fair (1893) could well appreciate the account, having seen the exhibit of the Cliff Dwellers. The "Independent Patriot" of September 14, 1893, contains the following: "In this exhibit may be seen what is intended to represent the mountain homes of the Cliff Dwellers; the methods by which they obtained ingress and egress; the rugs, mats, implements of war and peace which they had; some of the corn which they raised, with cob, grain and husk well preserved. . . . Don McGuire, Chief Dept. Mines and Archaeology, of Utah, contributing to Salt Lake City "Tribune," in its issue for October 29, 1893, says: . . . Writes of Colorado relics: "These relics and discoveries consist of fifteen very well preserved mummies of the ancient Cliff Dwellers, and a great variety of their pottery, stone weapons, and wooden implements, cotton cloth, feather cloth, cordage, tanned leather, bone and shell work, haircloth, hair cordage, and husk matting and carpets, corn, cotton seed, squash, and pumpkin, and gourd seed."—Palmyra to Independence, pages 11-14.

The question presents itself to me thus: "Was it probable that those Cliff Dwellers raised all that vegetation and other goods upon those mountains?" and if not, "what object would they have for carrying and depositing all that junk way up in the top of the mountains?" The Book of Mormon comes to our aid again; "And it came to pass that in the eightieth year of the reign of the Judges over the people of Nephi, there were a certain number of the dissenters from the people of Nephi, who had some years before gone over unto the Lamanites and took upon themselves the name Lamanites; and also a certain number who were real descendants of the Lamanites, being stirred up to anger by them, or by those dissenters, therefore they commenced a war with their brethren. And they did commit murder and plunder; and then they would retreat back into the mountains, and into the wilderness and secret places, hiding themselves, and they could not be discovered, receiving daily an addition to their numbers, inasmuch as there were dissenters that went forth unto them; and thus in time, yea, even in the space of not many years, they became an exceeding great band of robbers."—Book of Mormon, page 582, A. E.; page 408, S. E.

And it came to pass that the ninety and third year did also pass away in peace, save it were for the Gadlanton robbers, who dwell upon the mountains, who did infest the land; for so strong were their holds and their secret places that the people could not overpower them; therefore they did commit many murders, and did do much slaughter among the people.—Book of Mormon, page 603, A. E.; page 423, S. E.

There are many more archaeological evidences that I would like to produce, which, would require several evenings to get them all before you; but I must present one more before I leave this part of the subject, and hastily pass on to some other thoughts. Referring to the colonizing of Ancient America, J. D. Baldwin says: "According to Montefinos, . . . It was originated, he says, by a people led by four brothers, who settled in the valley of Cuzco, and developed civilization there in a very human way. The youngest of these brothers assumed supreme authority, and became the first of a long line of sovereigns." (Ancient America, page 264; Pub. 1872). "Its first inhabitants flowed in abundantly toward the valley of Cuzco, conducted by four brothers, . . . The youngest brothers, who, according to tradition, was at the same time the most skilled and hardy."—Peruvian Antiquities, page 52; Pub. 1853.

We take up the Book of Mormon again and we read from the introduction of the first chapter in the book: "An account of Lehi and his wife Sariah, and his four sons, being called (beginning at the eldest) Laman, Lemuel, Sam and Nephi." Again: "Wherefore Laman and Lemuel did speak many hard words unto us, your younger brothers, and they did even smite us with a rod. And it came to pass as they smote us with a rod, behold an angel of the Lord came and stood before them, and he spake unto them, saying, why do ye smite your younger brother with a rod? Know ye not that the Lord hath chosen him to be a ruler over you, and this because of your iniquities?" (Book of Mormon, page 9, A. E.; page 7, S. E.) There, you can see how it was that some of the tribes of Indians had the traditions that they did.

There are a great many prophecies in the Book of Mormon that are being fulfilled which stand out as strong evidences of its divinity. We will examine one of them: "And I beheld the wrath of God that it was upon the seed of my brethren [American Indians], and they were scattered before the Gentiles [Present American people]; and were smitten. . . . Wherefore, my beloved brethren, thus saith our God: I will afflict thy seed [Indians] by the hand of the Gentiles. Nevertheless, I will soften the hearts of the Gentiles, that they shall be like unto a father to them."—Pages 34, 114, A. E.; pages 24, 76, S. E.

It is true that the Indians were smitten upon this continent by the Gentiles; but when the Book of Mormon was published, there was no prospect of the latter statement ever having a fulfillment, looking from the human viewpoint, as the Indians were rapidly disappearing. "There are now 300,000 Indians in the United States—40,000 more than there were twenty years ago. There are 30,000 children in the various Indian schools of the country, being taught to earn their living. There are 20,000 Indians who are citizens of the United States and from 1,000 to 1,200 acquire citizenship every year. The Government spends $3,000,000 a year, or $100 per capita, educating the 30,000 boys and girls who are learning to become self-sustaining."—Kansas City Journal, January 20, 1910. (Saints' Herald, Feb. 9, 1910). And there are over 100,000 Indians in Canada.—Saints' Herald, Dec. 13, 1911.

The present generation of Indians are surely becoming enlightened, and they are to receive the gospel, and yet assist in establishing the Lord's "Zion" upon this continent. "And after the book of which I have spoken shall forth, and be written unto the Gentiles, and sealed up again unto the Lord, there shall be many which shall believe the words which are written; and they shall carry them forth unto the remnant of our seed [Lamanites or Indians]. And then shall the remnant of our seed know concerning us, how that we came out from Jerusalem, and that they are descendants of the Jews. And the gospel of Jesus Christ shall be declared unto them; wherefore, they shall be restored unto the knowledge of their fathers, and also to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, which was had among their fathers. And then shall they rejoice; for they shall know that it is a blessing unto them from the hand of God; and their scales of darkness shall begin to fall from their eyes; and many generations shall not pass away among them, save they shall be a white and delightful people."—Book of Mormon, pages 158, 159, A. E.; pages 106, 107, S. E.

My dear friends, this prophecy is surely having its fulfillment, as the gospel is being preached among them, and many of them are accepting it. I will read an excerpt from a letter written by Elder Hubert Case, a missionary of the Reorganized Church, which was published in Zion's ENSIGN for January 9, 1913. "Kingfisher, Okla., Jan. 2, 1913. . . . Our work is seemingly taking firm hold on these people [Lamanites], as we now have enough of them in the church for three branches which we hope to soon organize. Also hundreds of them talking of coming into the church. We baptized two at this meeting, and a goodly number of them gave their names for baptism as soon as the water gets warm. We blessed eight children, ordained one Indian chief and three medicine men to be ministers for the Lord among this peculiar people. . . . Bro. Yates has done a good work among the Otoe's and some preaching among the Sac and Foxes, also the Pawnees. But this awakening we have started here among the Cheyennes, Arapahos, Caddos, Kiowas, and Comanches is the most far reaching of any yet in the history of the church; their traditions about the sacred book once among them long since lost; the story of the Christ visiting this continent, going away and promising to return, and many others which are made more intensely interesting to them as they read the Book of Mormon and find the true church which gives them the very vivid realization of their heart's desire in obedience to the complete gospel brought to the earth by the angel."

Every publication that I have read and quoted from tonight (except the Bible and Book of Mormon), has been produced since the Book of Mormon was given to the world. Many of the the best talented minds of the world have tried to put it down; but it stands, and will stand until every prophecy in it has been fulfilled; and until God's great work of the latter days is completed. As a servant of Christ, I plead with you to investigate the claims of the Latter Day Saints. Can you, consistently ask for a greater sign that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and this God's work, than the coming forth of the sealed book? The Lord said he would give it; but, will you reject it, as the Jews did Christ?

Even witnesses, besides Joseph Smith, testified that they saw the plates from which the book was translated; and three besides Joseph testified that they saw the angel of God; that he came down from heaven and laid the plates before them, and that they saw them with their own eyes. Those testimonies have never been impeached. While it is true that opposers have tried to make it appear that the first three witnesses, namely, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer and Martin Harris later denied their testimony, I am here to say that the claim is false; for they all remained firm to that testimony until their dying day. Can you produce as many witnesses to the resurrection of Christ as that? "Yes," says one: "Paul said that he was seen of about five hundred brethren at one time." I know Paul said that, and I believe it too; but where are the testimonies of the five hundred brethren? You have not got them!

Now, we believe that Christ arose from dead! And we have greater reason for believing it than all other people; for all the evidence that we have produced tonight (and much more that we might produce) proves it. The Book of Mormon is "as one that hath a familiar spirit, (Isaiah 29:4) because it teaches the same everlasting gospel and resurrected Christ that the Bible does. How true the statement: "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established." The Bible and Book of Mormon testify alike and each proves the divinity of the other. Again in Isaiah 29: "And again in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness." (Verse 18). "Therefore thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob (Israel), Jacob shall not be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale. But when he seeth his children, the work of mine hands, in the midst of him they shall sanctify my name, and sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel. They also that have erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine." (Verses 22-24). All Israel is to be gathered in this dispensation. "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth."—Isaiah 11:1,12.

"Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord that it shall no more be said, the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt; but, the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he hath driven them: and I will bring them back again into their land [Palestine and America] that I gave unto their fathers." (Jer. 16:14,15). "Behold I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth."—Jer. 31:8.

Jesus told the Nephites, while he was upon this continent, that he was going to visit the people in the north country. (Book of Mormon, page 645, A. E.; page 452, S. E.) Then when they come from that country they will have another record, which will be their history, and an account of God's dealing with them. "And it shall come to pass that the Jews shall have the words of the Nephites, and the Nephites shall have the words of the Jews; and the Nephites and the Jews shall have the words of the lost tribes of Israel; and the lost tribes of Israel shall have the words of the Nephites and the Jews. And it shall come to pass that my people which are of the house of Israel shall be gathered home unto the lands of their possessions; and my word also shall be gathered in one. And I will show unto them that fight against my word and against my people, who are of the house of Israel, that I am God."—Book of Mormon, page 158, A. E.; page 106, S. E.

We should be careful that we are not fighting God's work; for the prophets of old have pointed out the very work that we are carrying to the nations of the earth. Jeremiah says that "The Gentiles shall come unto the Lord from the ends of the earth, and shall say, surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit." (Chapter 16:19). "Therefore, behold, I will this once cause them to know, I will cause them to know mine hand and my might; and they shall know that my name is the Lord."—Verse 21.

The restoration of Israel will be greater than the miracle at the Red Sea; not only in the gathering of those who are living, but the resurrection of the whole house of Israel will take place. (Ezek. 37:1-14). And "He [the Lord] shall command the great deep and it shall be driven back into the north countries, and the islands shall become one land, and the land of Jerusalem and the land of Zion shall be turned back into their own place, and the earth shall be like as it was in the day before it was divided. And the Lord even the Savior shall stand in the midst of his people, and shall reign over all flesh." (Doctrine and Covenants 108:5). Then my friends, the world will see and know that what the Latter Day Saints have been presenting is the message of God, and surely, at that time will we be made to realize the full meaning of the text: "And there shall be one fold and one Shepherd." May God bless you all with a desire to understand the angel's message of these latter days is my prayer. I thank you for the good attention that you have given me.

TENTING ON THE DEAR CAMP GROUND.

We're tenting tonight on the dear camp ground,
In worship, Lord, to Thee;
Our hearts attuned in praise and prayer;
Humbly we bow the knees.

Chorus.

Many are the hearts that are happy tonight,
Happy in the bonds of peace,
Many are the hands that are working for the right,
That sin and wrong should cease.
Tenting tonight, tenting tonight,
Tenting on the dear camp ground.

We're tenting tonight on the dear camp ground,
In the shelter of the oaks and pines,
On the banks of the lake whose waters clear
Inspire with truth our minds.

We're tenting tonight on the dear camp ground,
Protected, Lord, each hour,
In gifts and blessings we have seen
Witnesses of Thy power.

We're tenting tonight on the dear camp ground,
Dear friends from far and near,
Keep us, O our Lord, a faithful band,
We're coming back next year.

(Note.—The column for this week is ably filled by Sr. C. A. Smith, who is a graduate of the Froebel Kindergarten Training School of Kansas City and whose experience covers a number of years. The article is introductory to several which will appear from time to time, on the work of the kindergarten.)

THE KINDERGARTEN AND WHAT IT REPRESENTS.

The kindergarten started an educational movement. It was the first thing of its kind ever started, but its mission was to have its principles, methods and motives permeate education everywhere.

Now the question is, are we willing to accept the kindergarten as a part of our public education? Let us not think of the kindergarten as something new. It is not new; it is over eighty years old. It has been tested by many, criticised and studied from every standpoint. The need of it is recognized more and more, each year, so why hesitate to try it.

Froebel was the originator of the kindergarten. Some of the principles are here briefly summarized.

1. Education should assist natural development. As the child's development begins with its first breath, so must its education.

2. As the beginning gives a bias to the whole after-development, so the early beginning of education are of the most important.

3. The spiritual and physical development of the child are closely bound up with each other.

4. Early education must deal directly with the physical development and influence the spiritual development through the exercises of the senses.

5. The early education of the child must be guided by the utterances of the child's instincts.

6. Physical impressions at the beginning of life are the only possible medium for the awakening the child's soul.

Therefore these impressions should be regulated and should not be left to chance.

Through what medium does the child express himself? Is it not through play? Have we any other medium through which we can come in as close relation to the child's inner nature, as through play?

Some people object to kindergarten because they think it is simply a play ground for children, therefore unnecessary. The name kindergarten means child-garden, and it was intended by Froebel to be a place equipped to suit the needs of the child, so that it could grow and develop in a garden that is properly cared for.

Let us put aside all prejudices if we have any and examine the kindergarten to find out what it does stand for.

Without taking one side or the other, we can say that the kindergarten stands for an education adjusted to the capacity, the interest and the aptitude of the pupil; the teacher is not an operative, simply grinding out a written course of study, but she is a friend, interpreter and guide. She does not regard children as a lump of raw material or as deformed pieces of humanity, either to be fashioned or re-fashioned into an adult being, but she regards children as living beings, that are to grow and assimilate those elements, from the natural, the social and the spiritual world, that will help in the unfolding and enlarging of his natural personality.

To carry out these ideals the kindergarten strives to establish a close relation with the homes, one of the most essential things in a child's whole school career. It affords excellent social training, by recognizing him as one among many, some time to lead, some times to be led, and always a sharer. It recognizes the demands of his physical being and affords him activities which help to make his body more responsive. It recognizes the close relation between the body and mind, emotion and will, and was under play as the natural and childish means of calling out that spontaneous action which we find in the work of interested and enthusiastic adults. It recognizes the child's relation to the natural world and helps him to hold the proper attitude toward his fellow creatures; and to the industrial life about him upon which he is so dependent; by making him familiar with the methods and products of the fundamental industries.

These results are obtained through the use of talks, stories, songs, games, rhythms and handwork.

These kindergarten principles are widely accepted outside of kindergarten. Some who think kindergarten games and plays unimportant, are firm advocates of school athletics and public play grounds. Others who think the occupation used in kindergarten to develop manual skill and constructive imagination unnecessary, are urgent in their desire for manual training and domestic science in the schools throughout. Others who don't the efficacy of the kindergarten gifts and observation lessons are enthusiastic over nature study. And still others who think story telling, motion songs and dramatic exercises, indispensable as educational agencies, all no good, to be derived by those same methods used in kindergarten.

All of these movements for physical training, manual art and domestic science, for nature study, for story telling, motion songs, dramatization. For social and moral education and for industrial education, are independent of the kindergarten and largely of each other; but they are all based upon that underlying principle of the kindergarten, of development by self-activity, and all are found in simple form in the kindergarten.

Why then, when that all are working to the same end, has not the kindergarten been more generally accepted? Is it not a fact that education as a whole has been developing backward?

The method of the university has been pushed back upon the college, the high school is required to do the work of the college. The grammar school has been expected to do the work of the high school, and the primary has had grammar school work, as much as each could possibly do.

The truth is we have been beginning our children's education by teaching them to read, instead of helping them to acquaint themselves with the things around them, symbolized by work.

We have been making the child an imperfect man instead of having the man become the perfected child. To a certain extent educators are beginning to comprehend what the Savior said, when he said; "Except ye repent and become as little children, ye cannot enter into the kingdom."

Possibly one reason why we find kindergartens as scarce as they are in our educational system is because of its prevailing feminine ideals. Thus making it a particularly difficult institution for the masculine supervisor to gauge.

The expression "feminine ideals" is entirely a respectful one, it is indeed a reverential one. Infant education is peculiarly a feminine work. Feminine intuitions, sympathy, charm and inspiration are essential to it. It becomes the masculine mind to stand humbly and reverently by to protect and support.

The kindergarten has no definite results to show to the world as its achievements. Its results are intangible. We see them but they are so numerous and so far-reaching we cannot define them. The nearest we can come to defining them is to say we recognize the changed habit and attitude and outlook of the child and home. It introduces the child to school life and his parents to cooperation with the school. It trains him in power of attention, habits of industry, of self reliance, of joint effort with others, of neatness, of observation, and thoughtfulness. And it helps him to have the right attitude toward work, toward fellow pupil and toward his teacher.

In order that these results may be obtained, the selection of the kindergarten teacher should be given very careful and thoughtful consideration. Also the school must be run according to regular school principles; such as having regular times for enrolling new pupils; and that the pupil should remain in the school until mature enough to begin grade work.

Let us welcome the kindergarten and give it our hearty support so that the education of our children can begin from infancy and advance forward, instead of from maturity and go backward.

Let us as mothers, acquaint ourselves with its method and its work, so that we can be better able to understand the child from his own standpoint. So we can give to our little children under kindergarten age the benefit of this training, which is rightfully theirs.

It is the kindergartners who determine what a child shall gain from the other factors. She stands to the child as an embodiment of an ideal and also provides means by which he can strive toward it.

Lamoni, Iowa, August 19th.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.—Conference met with the newly organized branch at Mathersville, Ill. June 7, 8, 1913. Elders O. E. Sade and Chas. L. Holmes presided. Statistical reports from eight of the ten branches showed that Kewanee numbered 134; Millersburg 94, loss 31; Buffalo Prairie 70, gain 1; Dahinda 68, gain 5; Joy 93, loss 2; Twin City 104, gain 10; Peoria 51, gain 4; Mathersville 42, organized by F. A. Smith and O. E. Sade Sep. 29, 1912. The report from the bishop's agent showed a decided improvement along financial lines: the total receipts for eight months, Sep. 20-12 to May 31-13 were $1767.29; total expenditures, same time were $1339.95. Balance, $427.34. The Twin City Branch requested that Alfred C. Neudum be ordained to the office of elder. Conference so ordered and instructed the district president to ordain. Dahinda Branch sent a similar request that James Dawson be ordained to the office of an elder. The matter was referred to the district presidency. The annual election of district officers resulted in re-electing O. E. Sade for president giving him privilege of choosing associate: M. E. Gillen for secretary; Chas. L. Holmes for treasurer; Mira Cady was elected librarian. Chas. E. Holmes was unanimously sustained as Bishop's agent and M. E. Gillen as local historian. O. E. Sade named Chas. L. Holmes as his associate in presiding and conference ratified the choice. Two business sessions, two prayer meetings, and four preaching services were held. A spirit of unity and peace prevailed for the most part throughout the sessions. The business was transacted with but little difference of opinion shown, and that little did not seem to cause any serious contention. The Sunday morning prayer meeting was blessed to a marked degree by the Spirit's presence, and when Bro. Sade arose and voiced the message from on high, hearts were thrilled and eyes moistened by the tender emotions that were stirred. The Father accepted our offerings. He was well pleased with our meeting and devotions before him, and promised, if that feeling that was then in the hearts of those present, was continued, greater spiritual blessings would be enjoyed in the time before our next conference. We were admonished to secret prayer; were told that there were those even now, seeking in secret chambers to plan to overthrow this work, but if we studied the books and were diligent in prayer we would be able to meet their attack, help would be given in the hour when needed. Two individuals were counselled in matters of a personal nature. The Saints rejoiced and were strengthened by the message and by the meeting. No evidence of pride nor worldliness was witnessed, but instead a feeling of brotherly kindness and unity of purpose prevailed. The attendance was larger than for some time previous. Official strength was 1, seventy, 9 teachers, 3 priests, 4 teachers, 3 deacons. Among these were Bro. Sade and Bro. Grice of the missionary force. Bro. Willey the remaining missionary was not able to be present. Adjourned to meet at Kewanee the first Saturday and Sunday in November next.
