In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription.

In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not get out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to

WHAT HAVE WE DONE TODAY?

We shall do so much in the years to come,

But what have we done today?

We shall give our gold in a princely sum.

But what did we give today?

We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,

We shall plant a hope in the place of fear.

We shall speak the words of love and cheer;

But what did we speak today?

We shall be so kind in the after-while,

But what have we been today?

We shall bring each lonely life a smile,

But what have we brought today?

We shall give to truth a grander birth,

And to steadfast faith a deeper worth,

We shall feed the hungering souls of earth,

But whom have we fed today?

We shall reap such joys in the by and by,

But what have we sown today?

We shall build us mansions in the sky,

But what have we built today?

'Tis sweet in idle dreams to bask,

But here and now do we our task?

Yes, this is the thing our souls must ask,

"What have we done today?"

—Nixon Waterman in American Motherhood.

WHERE DO WE STAND?

Time is the great tester of all things, and under its testing processes all things are dissolved that can be dissolved and only that which is eternal is left remaining. Even man, the most intricately formed of all God's creations, cannot endure under the erosive conditions of time, but he also is dissolved and passes away like the chaff from the threshing floor. Each day as it passes carries with it a record of every man, which record becomes abiding without change. Each moment and each day bring changed conditions, new opportunities, and new demands not the least of which is an accounting for the way in which previous opportunities and duties have been met. Some day there must be a final accounting when men must answer for all that has been done, and what will that day bring,—joy and gladness over a life well spent, or anguish and fear in consequence of a misuse of the time which life gave?

As surely as a river leads to the ocean, so surely does time lead on to the great expanse known as eternity, and the manner in which men occupy now, determines how and where they will stand then. How essential it is then, that the present should be used rightly and wisely, so that as the future unfolds into the present it will still find in men that which is enduring.

THE PURPOSE OF LIFE.

What is the purpose of life? Perhaps few have attempted to answer this question even for themselves, and many see no purpose in it. A young woman employed in a retail establishment remarked: "What does life amount to? We rush to the store to work, and home to our meals, and all we get out of life is what we eat and wear." Is it true? Should it be true? Thousands there are who seemingly get little else from life than what this woman received, but they are not getting all that is possible. Apparently the only purpose that many have in life is to meet the present needs and desires of the man of flesh which soon passes away, while the inner nature,—the eternal part of the man, is not considered.

There must have been a purpose in the mind of the Creator in creating man, and that purpose has been declared to be to bring him to immortality and eternal life in the presence of God. But in the attainment of this purpose man must fulfill his part, for he cannot have eternal life unless he is willing to abide the laws governing that condition. Those laws are to be found in and through the gospel, and apply to men in this life, so that man's purpose here should be to search out those laws and bring his life to conform to them, while all other things of a temporal nature should be accounted secondary, and be made to help in the fulfilling of that purpose. Christ's statement sustains this view: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

SOWING AND REAPING.

The statement of Scripture that "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," is a verity. The action of today returns in time to face us; the sowing of the present must be reaped in the future with its accumulated increase of thirty, sixty, or one hundred fold, and the harvest may come literally upon the morrow, or next month, or next year, or it may come in old age, though it may not come until the earthly tabernacle shall have been dissolved, but come it will. Then too the harvest is not often reaped in a day. A noble deed which requires but a moment to perform may bring an eternal flow of joy and thanksgiving from those who have been blessed thereby,—a continuous harvest of joy indeed to the benefactor. In like manner an act which violates justice, honor, or virtue, and causes the downfall of some soul, must place upon the perpetrator a life long reproach and eternity will continue the harvest of sorrow and regret which time was not able to complete, until God in his infinite mercy shall bring relief.

SECURITY OR INSECURITY.

A man builds his house upon a river valley. It seems secure, but after many years comes a flood which sweeps it away. A city is built at the foot of a volcano and stands for generations, but ultimately the internal forces of the earth burst forth and bury it with ashes and lava. Through centuries a nation grows in might and power until it becomes the greatest in the earth, but there comes a period of decline and ultimate fall when it passes away. A man stands secure under the protection of his wealth and power, but there comes the robber, or the revolution, and he is left destitute. These things show the insecurity of the places and things upon which men stand,—things which appear for a time to be safe and secure. They also warn men to examine closely their present standing places and determine their degree of endurance. Not only do the material things of this world fade away, but principles having their origin in human wisdom, and organic forms of like character. One builds his faith upon a certain creed only to discover sooner or later that the creed is changed. He rests secure in an organization that claims permanency but discovers that it has changed its form, or is broken up, and he finds the words of the Savior true: "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." Doctrines and creeds come and go. Organic forms, like the flowers, bloom but to fade, though they may long endure. That which is of the earth must fall under the testing processes of time. Where then shall men find that which is enduring, and in what way they put their trust without fear of disappointment? Where shall they stand in order that they shall not be moved?

A SAFE STANDING PLACE.

David said: "I have set the Lord always before me: because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved." Jesus said: "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man; which built his house upon a rock," where all the destructive elements are unable to move it. After declaring the things of the gospel, Peter said: "If ye do these things, ye shall never fall."

God is eternal; perfect, and hence he does not change. "The word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." He who puts himself in harmony with the word of the Lord as revealed in the gospel puts himself in harmony with God, and being in harmony with God he will be able to stand. He who takes his stand in the kingdom of God here and fulfills its requirements, will never lose his place for "His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom," "it shall stand forever."

At this the beginning of a new year the record of the past is brought to mind, but it is essential that men consider where they stand at the present, and whether their standing place is of a character to endure the tests of time. "Every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is."

OUR CITY WORKERS.

A few of the active workers in the towns and cities have a systematic method of distributing church literature. One good literature committee takes a lot of one hundred ENSIGNS paid for by one of the branches of Kansas City, and distributes them systematically at the hospitals, jails, and other places. The convalescent patient at a hospital has a favorable opportunity for reading and thought upon the gospel, which he does not have at home. Many reclaimable characters find lodgment in jail and have need of the gospel, and reports say that they are usually glad to read the printed matter brought in. In distributing literature in such places opportunities are frequently offered for talks upon gospel themes.

The value of such work, like all other gospel work, is not to be measured by the present results, but the seed is sown which brings its own harvest in its own time, which may be in the distant future or even in eternity. Is there not a field in all our large towns and cities which gives opportunity for helpful service to those who are willing to contribute to church literature, and those who are willing to work for its distribution? Branches and religions could legitimately take up this work and accomplish good thereby. Why not try?

TRIBUTE TO WOMANHOOD.

James Oliver Curwood, author of "The Flower of the North," tells the following story about the men to be found in the country about Hudson bay, where the scene of this story is laid:

"I was at Prince Albert," he says, "sitting on the veranda of the little old Windsor hotel, facing the Saskatchewan. During the few days previous a number of factors, trappers and half-breed canoe-men had come down from the north. One of these men had not been down to the edge of civilization for seven years. Three of the others had not been down in two, and this was the annual trip of the other eight—for there were just eighteen of us sitting there together.

"We were talking together when a young woman turned up the narrow walk leading to the veranda. Immediately every voice was hushed, and as the woman came up the steps those twelve roughly clad men of the wilderness rose to their feet to a man, each holding his cap in his hand. Thus they stood, silent and with bowed heads, until the young woman passed into the hotel. It was the most beautiful tribute to womanhood I have ever seen. And I, the man from civilization, was the only one who remained sitting, with my hat on my head!"

The new constitution of the Chinese republic makes the presidential term six years, with the provision that the president shall not be eligible to re-election. He is elected by the National Assembly and must receive not less than two-thirds of all the vote cast by not less than three-fourths of the whole number of members of the Assembly. Upon the expiration of his term of office the president becomes a life member of the upper house of the National Assembly.

INDEPENDENCE NEWS.

A conference of the executive officers of Zion's Religious Literary Society was held here beginning Saturday December 28th, and lasting over three days. The editors, and superintendents of departments were also present by invitation and participated in the conference with the exception of Pres. E. A. Smith, editor of the "Arena." Those present were J. E. Gumsley of Lamoni Iowa, F. J. Ellet of St. Louis, S. A. Burgess of St. Louis, Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Mr. J. A. Gardner, and Mrs. W. H. Deam, of Independence, R. W. Farrell of Somerville, Mass., Mrs. D. H. Blair, and Harvey Sandy, of Kansas City. Some of the special features of the conference were the discussions on the translation of the Book of Mormon into various languages, improvement of district conventions, the work of general field workers, religio work at Graceland College, and the matter of special days. A program was arranged for the next general convention, and the policy outlined for improving the work of the departments. The work of the religio is reaching such proportions that those having the work in charge must needs work out advanced methods for its accomplishment.

The Sunday afternoon service was given to the missionaries a number of whom were present. Bro. T. W. Chaburn and J. F. Curtis were in charge, and others who gave experiences were Bro. Newton, Kulesky, Dubose, Tucker, Rannice, Wm, and J. A. Dowker, Aylor, and Jesse Roberts. Many interesting incidents were related showing the various phases of missionary life both pleasant and unpleasant. A number of other missionaries were present including Bro. James McKiernan, Arthur Allen, W. R. Smith, and others.

The remarkably mild weather has been a delight to all, the sky being clear nearly all the time for the last two months, giving all an opportunity to get out. President Joseph Smith is occasionally seen on the streets in company with his secretary, Bro. W. R. Dexter, or some other safe guide, and though his sight has failed he still manifests a keen interest in all that transpires of importance, both in the church and in the world.

On Tuesday evening, December 31st, a meeting was held at Curtis' Hall in which the Independence Co-operative Society was organized with a membership of forty-two. M. H. Seigfried was chosen president, R. B. Trowbridge secretary, and R. Bullard treasurer. Seven directors were elected, leaving five more, also vice president, and business manager to be elected when the organization shall be perfected. A board of twelve directors will have the general charge of the business and will choose the business manager. Its object is to co-operate in securing the commodities of life and reduce the high cost of living.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Dec. 20.

Bro. H. J. Davison spent a few days in the bay cities preaching Sunday morning—8th in the city. Bishop Parkin preached the evening sermon, while the Oakland Saints—the church goes—were edified by Bro. C. Parkin in the morning and Elder W. H. Kelley at night. Good reports from all.

We filled the regular monthly Windsor appointment on the 8th having an unusual attendance at 11 and 3 o'clock. We found the Saints happy in the gospel faith. A Free Methodist minister opened our 3 o'clock meeting with a very nice and feeling prayer and listened attentively to a sermon on "True Christianity." We were too late for the Santa Rosa train, but we got there all the same for the night service a distance of ten miles. If you wish to know how, ask Bro. W. E. Case of Santa Rosa. We enjoyed as usual the association of the Saints and hospitality on the two nights of Bro. and Sr. Luther Bell of Windsor and Bro. and Sr. B. N. Fisher—the pastor of Santa Rosa.

The Ladies Aid Society of the city held a very successful bazaar at which they cleared $91.65. The Oakland Ladies Aid is now in the midst of a similar effort with an idea of helping enlarge our church building.

The sub-committee to whom was referred the setting of the time for our next reunion has decided to hold it August 15 to 23, 1913, inclusive, at Irvington, Cal. So you can begin to prepare to attend, eight months will soon pass.

Bro. G. S. Lincoln the pastor was the morning speaker in the city on Sunday following in the evening by our minister in charge Bro. F. M. Sheehy—who was the morning speaker in Oakland with the pastor as evening preacher. Attendance good all day.

Bro. W. H. Kelley while crossing Market St. in the city on the evening of the 10th was struck by a street car and three ribs broken and otherwise bruised. He is at this writing doing well and on the way to recovery.

Sr. Gladys Kaighen Murphy and husband Mr. Wm. Murphy soon departs for Chicago for a brief stay. We hope the good Chicago Saints may make them welcome and in turn enjoy Sr. Gladys' talent of song.

Dec. 26.

We visited Bro. W. H. Kelley Christmas and found him much improved. He was able to walk around some. He thinks of remaining another week in the hospital. He is in the Habemann Hospital, California and Maple st., San Francisco, Calif.

An impressive Christmas service was held by each Sunday-school of the bay cities. The temper and spirit of each were of a higher order than usual showing a closer walk with the Savior and less of the tinsel and foolishness of the world.

A beautiful baptism occurred recently at the font in Berkeley. Sr. Elsie Boydston was baptized by Bro. F. M. Sheehy. She was confirmed at the morning service by the writer and Bro. Sheehy.

Bishop Parkin was the morning speaker in the city and Elder H. D. Simpson preached at night. The pastor did the Oakland preaching.

We learn of the death of Sr. Nancy Morrison at Los Angeles on Nov. 17. Sr. Morrison was the widow of Dr. Morrison of Millsboro, Ill.

We close the page of another year, Is there aught on the record to cause us fear? We view the clean page of the year just here, Will this page from a record of wrong steps be clear?

ST. JOSEPH, MO., FIRST BRANCH.

On Sunday morning the 22nd, Elder V. M. Goodrich preached a Christmas sermon to a good-sized audience. The theme was God's best gift to man, the gift of his dear son, and was beautifully elaborated to the edification of his hearers. In the evening, Elder Roy Slye gave an interesting discourse on the restoration. The writer had the pleasure of being the teacher of this young brother in his childhood days in the Sunday-school, and consequently takes great interest and pride in his work in the church, and right here we wish to say that there are a number of young men in our branch that are coming right to the front as earnest diligent workers, and we knew that some of them will be noble standard bearers in the years to come; "God is marshaling his army."

At the six o'clock prayer service on the evening of the 22nd Bro. Charles Morton and Thomas Hale, were ordained, the former to be president of the 16th quorum of deacons, the latter as his counselor, Elders B. J. Dice and V. M. Goodrich officiating.

Tuesday evening the 24th a happy throng of children gathered at the church to entertain their parents and friends with their annual Christmas exercises and to participate in the usual treat provided by the school. They acquitted themselves well and their efforts were appreciated. Wednesday being Christmas day, the usual evening prayer meeting was deferred to Thursday evening. The same action was taken in regard to New Year's day.

Sunday the 29th, the same order of services obtained as on the preceding Sunday; Bro. Goodrich delivering the morning sermon and Bro. Roy Slye occupying the pulpit in the evening. There are four brothers in the Slye family, and the other three all heard Bro. Roy preach that night one brother James is a member of the church and a good worker in the Religio. The other two are yet to be converted but we have hopes.

Quite an interesting and affecting episode occurred in the Sunday-school. This being the last Sunday that Bro. Herbert Ennis would officiate as superintendent closing a period of active faithful service, extending over seven and one-half years—the school thought it fitting to present him with some lasting memento of their love and appreciation of his untiring devotion to the Sunday-school cause in this branch.

Accordingly Bro. Goodrich in a heartfelt speech, presented him with a handsomely framed enlarged picture of the school which was taken for this special purpose. Tears dimmed the eyes of many as Bro. Ennis feelingly thanked them for this loving thoughtfulness.

The evening prayer meeting was characterized by expressions of thankfulness for the blessings of the past and hope and determination for the future.

Bro. Goodrich goes about with a radiant countenance these days—a dear, dainty little maiden made her appearance at his home on the 18th, and so sweet and charming was she that they gladly bade her welcome, and now the name of Charline Margaret Goodrich adorns the cradle roll.

The Religio is preparing a special program to be given on the evening of the 17th. The district Sunday-school and Religio convention meets on the 18th, and those expecting to attend are invited to come the evening before that they may enjoy this program which promises to be excellent.

REPORTER.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Sr. Carter Scott of Davis City, after nine years of distress with an injured knee, and getting worse, finally went to Mercy Hospital in Chicago and had the right leg amputated. Her husband brought her home Dec. 16th and she has been comfortable and free from the old pain and agony that life seems sweet again. With the appliances now so skillfully made it is expected that she will be able to walk with fair comfort and enjoy the remainder of her life. Sr. Scott is a sister of Sr. Columbus Scott. Their husbands are cousins.

Bro. and Sr. J. W. Wight have been at Omaha where an operation for removal of a tumor was had, with such success that she is doing well and is at home recovering.

Sr. W. A. France and daughter Bessie were injured by their horse running away and throwing them out of the buggy. No bones broken but they were bruised and badly shaken, especially Sr. France, by reason of her being thrown against a stump.

The sermons in Lamoni on Sunday, December 22, were by Bro. J. W. Wight, R. M. Elwin, Frank Hackett and Eli Hayer. Bro. Joseph Roberts preached the morning sermon at Andover, and at night Bro. R. S. Safaryds closed the two weeks' meeting held by him and Bro. L. G. Holloway. The results are said to be encouraging.

Bro. J. D. Schofield and W. B. Paul filled the appointments at the new Bloomington chapel, morning and night. Bro. C. H. Jones spoke twice at Evergreen chapel.

Bro. J. F. Garver came in from Lucas, Ward, and Hiteman, where he has been laboring for sometime. He baptized two near Lucas, and states that prospects are very good throughout that region.

Star of Bethlehem Sunday-school had the usual Christmas eve exercises at the church with satisfactory results in the way of songs, recitations and happiness among the children and grownups. The house was filled with the interested parents, friends, and Saints in general. Also on Christmas night an entertainment was given at the Children's Home by those living there. The long dining room was beautifully decorated, and a large gathering of those interested in the Home witnessed the exercises by the little folks, under the skillful management of Sr. Helen Robinson, daughter of Bro. and Sr. W. P. Robinson, who conduct the daily life there. Sr. Helen has the tact, ability and perseverance so much needed in training, directing, and getting good results. Then the tree was unloaded of the presents for each child.

The fine weather and smooth roads enjoyed thus far this winter have enabled people to travel in comfort, both with teams and autos, for visiting and pleasure as well as business. One year ago the snow was deep.

Sr. Mildred Suman, an attendant at Graceland College for several years, was married on December 19th at the home of her parents in Moline, Illinois, to Bro. C. E. Erwin, one of the professors in Graceland College, Bro. Amos Berve officiating.

Bro. Albert Carmichael and E. D. Moore preached at the house of the Lord yesterday, and Bro. Joseph Roberts and C. J. Peters filled the evening appointments at the Homes. At nearby places there was preaching by Bro. J. F. Garver at Bloomington chapel and Eli Hayer at Andover.

ALFRED.

CENTRAL CHICAGO BRANCH.

We are quite happy in the precious gospel of our blessed Master, and we are trying to keep the banner to the breeze.

Last Sunday there were four baptisms at our branch—two sons of Bro. and Sr. Keown, and Bro. and Sr. Krebs' son Fred, and Bro. J. W. Collus who is the head of the family, and his companion is soon to follow.

Elder Jasper O. Dutton was the speaker last Sunday evening, and while the branch correspondent was not present to hear the stirring instruction, he has been credibly informed that those who were so fortunate heard something that will last for some time to come.

The Sunday-school entertainment was a splendid success, the church being well filled with attentive listeners, and those taking part showed careful training.

The organization of a new Sunday-school among the colored Saints of the city will be a feature of the advancement of the work in Chicago. This takes place on Sunday the 29th inst.

Quite a nice party of the Saints from Flint, Mich., spent last Sunday with the Saints of the Central Branch. They came to see our city and especially our missionary and his wife, Bro. and Sr. Dowker.

Elder D. E. Dowker was suddenly called to Independence, Mo., by the death of his mother who has been a sufferer from nervous prostration.

The work is upward and onward, and may all labor together for the kingdom.

Dec. 28, 1912.

CORRESPONDENT.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Our district conference convened here Dec. 14 and 15. As large an attendance as we ever had was present and all were strengthened and encouraged. A pleasing feature was four baptisms followed by confirmation. One, Bro. Charles Jones will be pleased to hear, was Miss Carrie Procter, the writer cannot recall her present name as she is married and has several little ones.

Bro. Lewis delivered the morning sermon which was reported as being full of good thoughts, touching the hearts of those present and giving comfort and strength. Bro. Dowker occupied the evening hour, his theme being "The one church." Many good thoughts were gleaned therefrom. Conference adjourned to meet in St. Charles, Mo., March 14 and 15, 1913.

Bro. Sawley of the missionary force spoke to us the morning of Dec. 22d, using as his text Acts 5:29-33. Beautiful lessons were gathered from the story of his conversion and work in the grand and glorious gospel. Bro. Sawley has labored the past week in Brentwood, Mo., the result of which looks promising. One little bud by request, will be baptized Christmas day in a stream near her home in Brentwood, by Bro. Sawley. He will go to other parts of the district after Christmas day. Thus are these men of God blessed in the Master's cause.

Bro. Archibald was the speaker the evening of Dec. 22d, his subject being, "The babe of Bethlehem, and the Christ as he is to us today."

CORRESPONDENCE

ROUTE 16, MILROY, IND., DEC. 22.

Editor Ensign—As I never see any letters in the ENSIGN from this part of the country I thought a letter from here might be of some interest to somebody. There are four of us Saints here, my sister and her husband, my wife and me. We live close together and have good times. There is a Christian church near us, but the people will not read our papers or tracts to learn the difference between our church and others but if there are any who are honest in heart, some day they will listen to the true gospel of our Savior and obey it. The people here are good to help those who are sick and unable to help themselves. We are trying to do the best we can towards spreading the gospel of Christ among the people. I am trying to shun all the temptations and to live a better life towards God and I ask all the Saints to pray for me and my family that we may be stronger in the faith.

I love this latter-day work and I would love to have my son embrace this gospel before it is too late. I would love to do something to help the gospel along, but I am too poor to do anything as far as finance is concerned. I would love to have the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants but I am too poor to buy them as my family needs all I can earn, but I am thankful to my God that he has blessed us with good health.

I ask an interest in the prayers of God's people that I may ever live right before God.

JOHN EULITT.

INDEPENDENCE, MO., DEC. 30.

Editor Ensign—We wish to take this means of expressing our thanks and appreciation to the many Saints and friends who so tenderly sympathized with us in our late bereavement caused by the death of our companion and mother. Though it was not altogether unexpected we were hardly prepared for the shock. Also wish to express our hearty appreciation to the brethren and sisters who so nobly assisted in the services in song, prayer, and preaching.

Your brother,
WM. DOWKER and family.

MOUNTAINVILLE, Mo., Dec. 21.

Dear Ensign:—As it has been some time since seeing anything from this locality in your valuable columns, I take this opportunity of writing a few lines. As a branch, we are still alive; and while there is still room for much needed improvement in many ways, we see much to encourage us to continue on our perfection.

Bro. F. J. Ebeling has been with us for some, breaking the bread of life before the people, and we trust and believe that his labors have not been in vain. During his stay he assisted us in making improvements in decorating the interior of our chapel, which improves its appearance very much. From this place he has gone into new territory at Sargentville, Sedgwick, etc., where the gospel story is being well received by interested listeners.

This branch is presided over by our highly esteemed brother, Elder Moody P. Eaton, who, we believe, is putting forth good efforts for the upbuilding of God's kingdom and the establishing of the truth in the earth. While we are somewhat limited as to an efficient working force we are struggling on, striving to do our best under adverse circumstances to overcome and destroy the works of the enemy of righteousness.

Permit me to say that I am still trying, amidst the peculiar circumstances and environments surrounding me, to press on towards the high calling in Christ Jesus, and to win the race, outlined by our dear Savior. Every day I realize more and more the nature of the gospel in helping one to overcome evil and to strengthen us to go on gaining new and higher ground each day. Desiring the prayers of the Saints, I remain your brother,

WALLACE A. SMALL.

JAY, Fla., Dec. 21.

Editor Ensign:—As I read so many letters in your columns I am anxious to let the Saints know what God is doing in this part of his vineyard. During last November from the 8th to the 18th, Bro. J. W. Dubose preached at the homes of Bro. F. M. Edeker and Sr. Indiana Wagener with good attendance. We did not think that there would be much interest, but he was called back Dec. 8th to baptize two dear ones.—Bro. R. C. Wagener and his sister, Mrs. E. M. Thompson, and there are others who are near the water, for they have expressed themselves so. What few Saints that are here are doing all they can to keep them interested by handing them tracts to read. There was a lot of good done here as this is a new place and the prejudice was great. We do hope that there will be another missionary to follow soon. If any will come we will do all we can to help them out. We are not handy to a branch,—about twelve miles to the nearest one, but we try to let our light shine so others may see our good works and be constrained to accept this gospel. We ask that the Saints will pray for us that we may hold out faithful.

I have lately been baptized into the kingdom and have enjoyed many blessings since, and I do strive to live faithful that I may overcome the adversary and walk before God as will please him. There are only eleven Saints here and we have no place to worship. I trust our number may grow till we will have a place in which to meet and praise God.

Your brother in Christ,
LEE POWELL.

OMAHA, Nebr., Dec. 17.

Editor Ensign:—Once more I will try to send a few lines to your ever welcome visitor in my home. If there is any one thing that makes me feel as though I am falling behind in not keeping posted as to what is going on in the field it is when I am deprived of perusing the columns of the ENSIGN. But I realize that I have been more of a receiver than a giver, so far as contributing to our publications, notwithstanding Jesus has said "It is more blessed to give than to receive." But I have never felt especially condemned because I have not written more for I thought I had a fairly good excuse, for I feel that the space is too valuable to be occupied with the material that I could furnish.

So far this season I have not attempted very often. If I have done wrong in not appearing often enough, or in being too often, I hope to be forgiven. After almost thirteen years in active missionary work I am glad to be able to say I can see many changes in that time for the better, and the coming and going has been wrought both with pleasure and sorrow. I have seen the angel's message gladden the hearts of many both in life and in death.

As time passes and I think we all know the end of the world and redemption of Zion draw near, the more I see the necessity of a closer walk with God. And how can this be done unless I am willing to keep his commandments and love him more. I also realize that we need more of the Divine and less of the human, in order to accomplish that which has been committed to our trust. So may the Father's blessing rest upon the faithful is my desire and prayer. I have nothing flattering at the present to write concerning my field,—the Northern Nebraska District. But I can say we have the faithful few, who I believe are trying to do the best they can to move the cause of Zion.

In September I visited Columbus, Nebr., and I found the faithful few there and wondered if we all were placed under similar conditions if we would do as well. Our fall conference was held at Blair, Nebr., and there the faithful surely did their part to encourage the visitors to step up higher. But since then one of the faithful has gone to his (I believe) well earned reward, because he was always at his post of duty, although aged, that of a deacon looking after the meeting house and the comfort of the Saints,—a splendid example for some of our young men. This was Bro. Quen Lytle.

Since this time I have held a three weeks' meeting at Decatur, Nebr., with not much interest only with the same few, as at other places already mentioned. But they were at their place: and gave what assistance they could.

I have not seen anything from Omaha for some time and though I am not the authorized correspondent, I cannot leave this branch out of this letter. While my wife and I labored here for four years as city missionaries, and during that time, we had many joyous times with the Saints here, and learned to love them because of their many acts of kindness, oftentimes not knowing how to express our thankfulness to them, nor at times did we know what act we could do to be of lasting good to them, nor do we yet know how to repay it all. But to show your readers that they have not forgotten how to gladden the heart and soul of the missionaries, on last week about twenty took us by surprise and called on us and left about ten dollars worth of provisions when they left, and it was surely thankfully received. For one week before I came home to find Sr. Baker in bed with what the doctors call nerve trouble in her spine, and at present writing can sit up very little. I tell you at times like this it makes one feel and know the effect of the gospel, when Saints will demonstrate it this way. And now Bro. Editor, if you don't think it unwise I want to say something more along this line. I find some of our branches having a hard time to meet their little expenses to pay fuel and light with sometimes a dollar or two per month to the janitor, and they think their expenses are awful! The Saints of Omaha are all laboring people and few of them have their own homes, but they meet the expenses above mentioned at city prices, and in addition to this, for years they have cared for their missionaries in the way of paying their board, street car fare, and so far as myself is concerned practically clothed me; and now they are still maintaining their missionary and paying for their new church. I will venture that their present expenses (out side of all they are doing as to such surprises as I have mentioned) is not less than sixty to seventy dollars per month. So please do not think there are no faithful ones here. But just like all other places it is the few. May God bless such is my prayer.

I have found good Saints wherever I have been able to labor in our district. I cannot forget to mention Winnebago, Nebr., where the few faithful without branch or house of worship are trying to do the best they can by having a home class Sunday-school, and are always glad to see the missionary. All have helped, and the great day of accounting all will receive their reward.

With no fear as to the triumph of this, God's cause, I remain yours in the conflict,

YATES CENTER, Kas., Dec. 22.

Editor Ensign:—It has been several years since I wrote to your paper. I live five miles east and one mile north of Yates Center, Kas., and am still in the faith, and if any difference as I grow older my faith in God and his church grows stronger. I am trying to tell the gospel story at a school house near us but the people seem to be afraid and say nothing for or against my preaching. There is a United Brethren church house on my place. They have preaching and Sunday-school every Sunday afternoon at two o'clock in which I am a teacher of the old folks' class. I try to give them the true doctrine in that way. We don't like this part of Kansas very well and would trade our farm for a well improved one near a good town in Missouri if we could.

Yours in bonds of love,
T. J. MAUZEY.

CAMERON, Mo., Dec. 21.

Dear Ensign:—By request of Brother Ammon White, I assisted in the evangelistic services at the stone church, Independence, Mo., beginning Sunday, November 10th and continued over the following Sunday. As I had promised to meet with the St. Louis Branch Sunday, November 17th, I left Independence, Saturday p. m. I felt keenly the responsibility of the week's work to be done at Independence, as it was the first effort, (if I remember correctly) put forth by the brethren of the evangelical order in holding a revival service there. I was much pleased with the reception given and the interest manifested. The order of the meetings was: prayer meeting from 2:30 p. m. to 4 p. m. song service 7 to 7:30 p. m., preaching 7:45 p. m. Had two sessions for boys and girls from 4:15 to 5 p. m. Bro. Ammon in the first session gave a talk from a chart that was entertaining and instructive, and the young folks enjoyed the session. The second session I talked to them.

The order of all meetings was arranged by Bro. White and met with my approval. We were very pleased to have the presence and assistance of our esteemed and aged brother and co-laborer, Henry Kemp. In the first prayer and testimony meeting, Sunday 2 p. m. this aged brother spoke very encouragingly of the undertaking of his brethren in charge of the services, and he said it would be a blessing. To me it was and I believe to others. I appreciated the good, comfortable quarters I had with Bro. and Sr. Ammon White and the short, but pleasant visits with several of the brothers and sisters.

I left the city of Saints for St. Louis cheered and strengthened and with a heart of gratitude to him that made it possible for one so weak as myself to be numbered with his servants and saints in the Marvelous Work and Wonder and to receive his recognition and approval. May we continue to be worthy of same. I am safe in saying that there are a large number of Saints in Independence that are striving to be saints indeed.

I met with the St. Louis branch; preached Sunday morning and evening, the 17th; also preached for five, nights the same week; had good liberty and interest. This branch is fortunate in having a large number of faithful and intelligent workers, with Bro. Russell Archibald as their president, who has the confidence and support of the members and ministry, which he justly deserves. Bro. J. W. Rushton was on hand Sunday 24th; preached morning and evening and continued over the following Sunday, and Monday, December 2d, gave a profitable talk to men only. His efforts during the meetings were highly spoken of. The Ladies Mite Society did a good work during the two weeks meetings by serving a tree lunch, which was very much appreciated by those that worked in the city until 6 p. m. and lived out too far to go home and return in time for services. This was a wise provision and attributed much to the success of the meetings. Many thanks for the valuable assistance. There are also some excellent singers in the branch whose faithful attendance at all the services did much to assist, by the soul reviving songs of the choir.— Bro. Edward Bell chorister, and Sr Waldron organist.

While laboring in St. Louis we made our home with Bro. and Sr. Thomas McKevit, 1240 Graham St. which is in the Cheltenham branch, five miles from the St. Louis church. Elder Henry Roberts is in charge of that branch, he is a safe leader; but has one fault, more confidence in others than in himself, which sometimes is a mistake. Bro. McKevit is priest; they have a membership of about fifty and have a neat little house of their own to worship in. The young, active ministers of the city, found in the Oak Hill and St. Louis Branches, also in Leadsdowne branch, will find a welcome by the Cheltenham saints, if they will give them a helping hand. Call Bro. Roberts by phone, and make your appointment so that due notice can be given.

The 23d of November being my sixty-fifth birthday, the knowledge of the same was spread among the Saints of Cheltenham branch, and to my surprise, there came several, in ones and twos, to spend the evening at the home of Bro. and Sr. McKevit. I was pleased to see them call, but it did not occur to me that a surprise was in store, and that I was the cause of the gathering, until there came quite a number in one body with well-filled baskets. Truly it was a complete surprise, as doubtless many present noticed, for usually when we expect to entertain company, especially in large numbers, we put on our best; but here I had no collar on, shirt was not newly laundered, shoes need polishing, and my hair had finger marks in it. It was Saturday evening, and I was just contemplating taking a bath when they started to come.

Prior to partaking of the good things spread on the large table, where twelve could be comfortably seated at one time, (and there were three sittings, thirty-six in all.) Sr. McKevit in behalf of the Sister's Aid Society, in a few chosen words, presented me with $5.00 which was acknowledged by me in feeble words, but with grateful heart. There are circumstances and scenes in life that seem like a dream and this was one; but this surprise was the real thing, being away from home, where loved ones during the day would often speak about it being pa's birthday, and some reminded me of such by cards, so I appreciated this the more. I was very grateful that I was among friends; we had a time long to be remembered.

I would like to have remained during the meetings held by Bro. Ruston, but duty called me to Nebo, Illinois, where I spoke eight times in the Saint's church, which is located six miles south of Nebo in the country; the road is rough and hilly; they farm three sides of the land which is very productive. I was surprised to see the good rich corn on the side hills and on top of the same. Thanksgiving day brought about one hundred Saints and friends together at the church: I spoke at 11 a. m. after which the contents of well-filled baskets and boxes were spread on a long table, where all, with thankful hearts, partook of the rich well prepared dinner. The afternoon was enjoyed in listening to short talks from some of the brethren and friends; three Baptist ministers took part, having been together all day it was thought advisable not to have preaching that night as all had to go home and do their chores. Bro. W. A. Guthrie is the presiding elder of Nebo, and he is always ready to defend the work and is competent. He is spoken of very highly by the business men of Nebo and has the respect and confidence of his brethren. He is willingly supported by the priest, teacher and deacon, whose names I cannot just call to mind. The majority of the Saints are strong in the faith, and I believe will renew their diligence in the work. I found them a kind, affectionate band of Saints, and did not forget that the patriarch had to have means to travel as well as the stenographer, which is so often overlooked in different branches.

From Nebo we went to St. Charles, which is comparatively a new branch of fifty members. Bro. D. L. Lehman, elder in charge assisted by Brethren Law, and DeCoster priest, Bro. Sampson teacher and Bro. Martin, deacon. Bro. East an elder, has rendered valuable services; preached four times and gave several blessings here, as well as in Nebo. On my way to St. Charles I called at Alton, preached twice. There is, in my opinion, good prospect for the work at all of these places. Bro. Sawley and Dowker, missionaries, have done some real good work in the St. Louis district and are well spoken of by the Saints, which is always good news to me.

The St. Louis conference convened at the stone church, Saturday 14th at 6 p. m. A large delegation present, and the business was done without a jar, including the election of district officers for the coming year; Bro. Archibald president, Bro. Elliott and Baraclough, High priests, vice-presidents, C. Hemington, secretary; Bro. Reeves district treasurer, and S. Burgess, historian, Bro. Russell Archibald, bishop's agent. Sunday, preaching at 11 a. m. by writer. There were four ladies baptized by Bro. Elliott, one of whom I know was converted during the meetings, 2:30 was prayer and testimony meetings, and the confirmation of those baptized, 7:45 preaching by Bro. Dowker. This was one of the largest conferences in the history of the St. Louis district, and it was certainly gratifying to hear the report of the local brethren from various parts of the district; so many new openings and all report much interest. May the unity, love and push continue; the prospect for the work is very encouraging; may wisdom and understanding and discernment continue. I intend after the holidays to visit some of the branches in Independence. Stake; would like to hear from those in charge if they think it advisable for me to do some labor. Wishing all the compliments of the season. In gospel bonds, I remain,

Your brother,

Wm. Lewis.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

GOSPEL LOGIC.

By Francis J. Ebeling.

Of all the forms and phases of religion there is only one that will stand a logical examination, and that is the one set forth in the New Testament. Its peculiar adaptability to every human need, the universal adaptation of it in some form, the abundant evidence of its antiquity gives it the impress of divinity.

All truth is logical and logic is but the simple process of determining the truth or falsity of a proposition.

The truth of a proposition can always be known by the working principle. If the principle works to the moral uplift of the adherent and betterment of society in general, such principle should be welcomed by all as truth; but should it tend to demoralization, the results would prove its character.

This gospel was offered to the world in 1830 by a young, unsophisticated boy as the same gospel that blessed the world nineteen hundred years ago, claiming to have restored all the elements which make for happiness, with the promise that all those who would honestly accept it need not be in doubt, but could receive a witness for themselves. This promise, if false, carries with it its own destruction, and it is not logical to suppose a person would ever make such an offer with the least hope of success, unless he was thoroughly imbued with sincerity. Hardly would a counterfeiter place a spurious piece of money in another's hand, and the same time urge him to take it to a government essayer and have it tested. An honest man would not hesitate to make such an offer.

When Joseph Smith presented the gospel to the world he made just such an offer, hence no honest person need be deceived, for it costs nothing to obtain the proof.

In the closing pages of the Book of Mormon the divine test for ascertaining the truth or falsity of said book is given. "And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that you would ask God, the eternal Father, in the name of Christ if these things are not true, and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you by the power of the Holy Ghost."—Moroni 10:1, small edition.

It is hardly logical to even suppose an impostor would give you the true means of detecting his imposition. The beauty of this is it places the responsibility upon the words of Jesus Christ as recorded in the book in which all professing Christianity believes, which says, (John 15:16), "Whosoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you." This being a true proposition no one need be in the dark relative to the truth of the Book of Mormon. If the promise of Christ should fail in this instance, it is liable to fail in every other instance, hence his word is of no more benefit to us than that of an ordinary man.

Christ says "Ask and ye shall receive;" and the Book of Mormon urges all to put him to the test. Inasmuch as this has been a safe and sound principle to follow in all ages of the past, would it not be as safe today? Principles never change, but the same cause will invariably produce the same effect. If the Book of Mormon was asking something new and unheard of as to its veracity we might be justified in rejecting it at once, but when it simply and sincerely asks you to apply the time honored principle in which all Christian people believe, where is the danger?

Since the working principles of the Book of Mormon are only calculated to uplift and bless mankind, why should it be despised. If true, it gives its believers the advanced knowledge of the history of the most remarkable people of the world, the American Indian, of whose origin great scholars of all the world have labored hard to learn. There is nothing in it that will injure a man by believing. It tells me to believe in Jesus Christ, repent and be baptized, and ever thereafter to lead a good, pure, godly life. If I do all this and still believe in its origin, will God damn me? If I believe in Jesus Christ, repent of all my sins, and live right all the rest of my days, and still believe the Book of Mormon, and in the judgement day I find the Book of Mormon originated with man, be that whomsoever he may be, will God condemn me for an honest belief in a book coming from man, after I have lived up to all the requirements of the New Testament? Logic, consistency and justice would answer, "No."

Then the philosophical deduction of the whole proposition is this: If the Book of Mormon is false we are just as well off as other believers in the Bible, and if true we are just that much ahead of them. All other things being equal,—if our opponents are right we lose nothing,—they gain nothing. If we are right they lose much and we gain much. Why then should our opponents spend so much time and energy in trying to prove the Book of Mormon false when they gain nothing in the end and possibly lose much?

This latter-day message is founded upon the principle of revelation, upon which our opponents have fought us as though it was an exterminating plague. They say if they prove revelation to be a false principle in these days, down goes our whole church. True, but what have they gained should they prove it? If our salvation hinges upon it you have simply destroyed our hope of salvation which no Christian should delight in. And if our salvation does not depend upon it and we live as good as our opponents, we will fare just as well as they in the day of judgment.

If present revelation is not essential to celestial happiness and our opponents can secure that glorious condition without it, surely we can too, providing we live to the gospel of the New Testament, (minus revelation). If they can be saved without a belief in that principle, we can be saved with it. Surely God will not condemn me for believing in a principle today that blessed and saved people two thousand years ago. If revelation is not necessary today and my opponent can be saved without it, surely I can be saved too, providing I have faith in Christ, repent of all my sins, be baptized and live a good life till death. Hence I am just as well off as they if they are right, while they are much worse off if I am right. If I am right they are wrong. If they are wrong I am right.

Latter Day Saints believe that living prophets and apostles are necessary to obtain perfection, that wherever the true church is, in it they will be found, as so forcibly and logically set forth in 1 Cor. 12, and Eph. 4. Paul says they were for the perfecting of the saints. We are told today apostles and prophets were only for the first age of christianity. So, to be logical, if apostles were for the first age only then perfection was for the first age only.

Again we make the logical deduction, if our opponents can be saved without apostles and prophets, surely we can be saved with them. If I repent and be baptized and live the best I know how with the Bible in my hand, will I be condemned for believing in apostles and prophets? If a belief in them blessed and perfected men two thousand years ago why should the same belief condemn me in this age? If those officers are not necessary in the church today we lose nothing, but if they should prove a necessity, we have gained a great deal above those who reject them. If we are right we are far better off than they. If they are right we are as well off as they. So we have nothing to lose and everything to gain, while they have nothing to gain and a great deal to lose. That which pleased God and blessed man at one time, will not displease God and curse man at another time.

In John 3:5, Jesus says: "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Latter Day Saints believe this just as it reads, and believe that both water and Spirit baptism are essential to salvation.

There is a class of people claiming to be true followers of Christ with considerable influence in the world who say they can be saved without water baptism, but contend very earnestly for the Spirit baptism. On the other hand there is a large class of people who makes great claims to be the only true disciples, who denies the Spirit baptism but contends most strenuously for water baptism.

Latter Day Saints claim both baptisms are essential to salvation. The logic of the proposition is this. If our friends on the right can be saved with Spirit baptism only we can be saved surely with water and Spirit. And if our friends of the left can be saved with water baptism alone surely Latter Day Saints can be saved with both.

If our friends on the right hand are right we are right for we have all they have and more too, if we are right they are wrong. If our friends on the left hand are right we are right; if they are wrong we are right. Again we have nothing to lose while they have nothing to gain, while we have much gain and they have much to lose, provided we live right otherwise.

Every true proposition carries with it, its own weight of evidence, by placing in contrast the results of the affirmative and negative. If the working principle of an affirmative tend to benefit and bless humanity, and if it is of such a character as to place the believer in it upon an equality with the negative providing the negative is correct, it is safe and sound proposition to stand upon.

Upon this premise I very effectually silenced an infidel a few years ago who had been attending my meetings. He invited me very kindly to his house for the night, to which I accepted. It was not very long until we were in an earnest conversation on the merits and demerits of the Christian religion. He was quite gentlemanly all through the talk, contending that all there was of man was what he is here and now, making quite a strong argument of the Ingelsol type. He held that the Bible originated only with man. After he had fully destroyed, as he thought, all the Christian's hope, I began by asking: "Now my friend what have you gained supposing you have undermined my faith in this divine mission of Jesus Christ. Have you offered me anything better?" I continued by submitting this hypothetical proposition, "Suppose now you are right, that all beyond the grave is an eternal blank. You die and I die we are both on the same level. You gain nothing I lose nothing, but on the other hand suppose all these things you have heard me preach during these meetings are true. Viz. resurrection of the dead, immortality beyond the grave. Life on the earth with Christ for a thousand years and after that enter that golden city, New Jerusalem that John saw coming down from God out of heaven, when God shall wipe away all tears, and suffering, separation, sin and death shall be unknown. Suppose all are true. Who now has the best of the question from a philosophical standpoint? If true, unlike the other proposition I gain a great deal and you lose a great deal. I have everything to gain and nothing to lose, while you have nothing to gain and a great deal to lose. Laying the Bible aside now. I again asked who is the better off? The only reply was: "Let us go to bed." While this young man has always been my friend, he has never tried to put his faith above mine in my presence.

This is the effectual argument the Christian world in general brings against the infidel. It can be used just as effectually against the unbeliever with reference to this latter day work. If our philosophy be true we are so much better off than they are. If untrue we are just as well off, keeping constantly in mind that God will not condemn you for an honest belief in the Book of Mormon present revelations, living apostles and prophets, providing you repent and be baptized and live as near to the New Testament as possible.

It has always occurred to me if I were going to oppose another's belief it would be that belief of which the keeping of it would impose upon the rights and privileges of others, and tend to degrade. But where no single item or principle can be shown to be contrary to the code of good morals, only ignorance or blind prejudice would inspire opposition or persecution.

In a conversation with a high school professor in Southern Ohio I made the statement that I knew the doctrine I was teaching was true. He immediately took me to account for making such a statement, and said I did not know or could not know what I claimed to know. I contended I was entitled to know of the truthfulness of the doctrine of Jesus Christ by virtue of the promise made to all who obeyed as Jesus had said in John 1:17, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine. I said to him. "I claim to have obeyed those principles which entitles me to this knowledge. And since you have acknowledged you have never complied with those principles you are in no position to deny my claim to knowledge which my obedience to those principles has brought to me." I continued by saying no man can intelligently criticize another until he has been in the same position of the other man. And illustrated by the following: "Suppose I were to go to your school Monday and you have a problem worked out upon the blackboard in geometry or trigonometry. You had worked it by the principles of mathematics which you had mastered, and suppose I should say my dear sir, you don't know that that is right; and you should ask if I had ever studied the principles of mathematics and I should answer, 'No.' What would you think of me?"

He replied, "I think you would be a fool." I then asked "What do you think I think of you, since you have confessed you had not followed the principles of the gospel which entitles one to the knowledge you question? In other words you have judged my confessed knowledge by your ignorance. The logic of this question is apparent to all. It is true in every profession in life.

During the first year of my ministry I was holding meetings in old Virginia. Among the few who came out was a young lady of intelligence, a school teacher. She became interested and was about to obey. We set a day to have the final talk preparatory to baptism, but she failed to put in an appearance. A few days later I met her and she told me she had changed her mind, and said her mother had died rejoicing in God, in the Methodist church and she wanted to go where her mother was and as she went to heaven in the Methodist church she could too. And I must confess it troubled me considerably and I could not answer her at the moment. I thought if salvation was to be obtained in some popular and respected church, what was the use of me making such a sacrifice in preaching such an unpopular doctrine. And while those thoughts were flooding my mind I was moved to ask her these questions:

"Do you think your mother is in heaven?"

"Yes."

"Do you think she lived up to all the light she received in the Methodist church?"

"Yes."

"Haven't you told me you have heard more truths during my meetings than all you have ever heard in your mother's church?"

"Yes."

"Do you want to go where your mother is?"

"Yes."

"Then you must do just as your mother did,—live up to all the light you have. We ask you to surrender no truths you have already, but to receive more."

She turned from me with a sad heart. She felt the force of my position.

All those who die in any church, or no church, having done the best they could in this life, will have opportunity to receive the fullness of the gospel in the spirit world.

If, as some argue for the heathen—they will be saved in ignorance. Then the ignorance of man is the power unto salvation. For the greater part of the human family have passed away in absolute ignorance of the true gospel. The Lord says of them in Doctrine and Covenants that they will come up in the first resurrection. This church is the only one holding a gospel salvation for the benighted heathen. Again demonstrating the fact all truth is beautiful; consistent, and resulting in the happiness of humanity.

I was holding a series of meetings in Toledo, Ohio, and had announced four lectures on baptism. I had brought in all the evidence we usually do on the object, purpose and mode of baptism, but had not said anything about the thief on the cross, keeping that till the last night. But a certain class-leader could stand it no longer so on the third night advanced the front for an argument. After reviewing much which we had gone over in the three lectures. He introduced the thief on the cross, as if it were a Gibraltar against our position on baptism. He overlooked all the plain Scriptural proof I presented, and contended that the thief went to heaven without baptism. Seeing that he would not accept logical argument. I said, "My friend, I want to ask you a few questions. "Who is your example, the thief on the cross or Jesus Christ?" "Christ," he replied. "Who died for you, the thief on the cross or Jesus Christ?" "Christ," he replied again. "Then why not follow Christ and go to heaven like Christ rather than to make the thief your example?"

It seems strange that men who claim to believe the teaching of Christ and have accepted him as their guide and leader, will pass by all the plain teachings such as, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." John 3:5. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16:15. "Repent and be baptized . . . for the remission of sins." Acts 2:38. "Whereunto even baptism doth also now save us." 1 Peter 3:21. And many other plain declarations, and cling to the example of the thief and all this because they do not understand the Bible for there is circumstantial evidence that the thief had been baptized.

So many places we go we find some people standing aloof from the church, yet fully believing the doctrine. Ask them why they do not come into the church and frequently the reply will be: "So and so belongs to the church, and as long as he is in it I won't come in, I don't want to associate with such characters. Applying the Socratic method of teaching I asked the following questions:

"Are those people so bad you do not want to associate with them?"

"Yes."

"Do you want to be where you won't have to associate with them?"

"Yes."

"Would you like to spend eternity with such characters?"

"No."

"Then you had better obey the gospel and come into the church. If those people are as bad as you think they are so that you surely not want to associate with them here, they will surely not find a place in heaven, because they have not obeyed the gospel after coming into the church; and if you continue to refuse to obey the gospel and remain outside the church, you too will fail in gaining heaven, and the probabilities are that you will have to spend eternity with those whose association you so much avoided here. Now the best way to avoid having to spend eternity with such individuals is for you to come into the church and live up to all the requirements of the gospel, which will insure you an inheritance with the righteous."

There is no consistent reason why one should not accept and obey the gospel. We may invent many excuses but no reason. Hence every objection the critic may bring against the Christian religion as set forth in the Scriptures, goes down before the searching rays of reason, logic, and philosophy.

I love this latter-day work because it appeals to my judgment, reason, and manhood. The intelligence of heaven is enwrapped within it, and the more we delve into it the more we find which appeals to our intelligence.

On an occasion when I was riding on a train I picked up a pamphlet of instructions to conductors, and after reading a list of instructions to be followed in case of accidents or emergencies, I found at the end this one, "In case of doubt take the safe side." How quickly I applied it to the latter-day work. Since the angel message of the last days has shaken the creeds, and thousands of people are in doubt as to what is the truth, and which is the true church, I would say, "In case of doubt, take the safe side," and the safe side is that which the Scriptures point out,—the truth which saved mankind two thousand years ago. The doctrine which was preached then, and the church which they had then, find their identity in the doctrine and organization of the one which we present to the world.

A belief in revelation, tongues, prophecy, healing, miracles, and apostles and prophets, and also the gospel principles of faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, etc., is the side which made the ancients so safe, and if their salvation was assured by taking that side, then if we take the same side today we also shall be safe. There is no evidence that any other way is safe. To take any other way is to take a chance in regard to our salvation. We promise everything that any other church does which is in harmony with the Scriptures, and much more than any other church here and hereafter which is also according to the Scriptures but which other churches deny.

Negativeness is a characteristic of false religion. Truth is woven with denial of other truth in order to give reason for acceptance, like it was in the Garden of Eden when Satan told our first parents that they should not surely die but should be as gods, knowing good and evil. From that day to this that negative force has been in evidence, and the plain teachings of Christ have been laid aside on the sole ground that they are not necessary now and have been done away. Jesus said "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven," and others have said, "It is not necessary now." He also said, "These signs shall follow them that believe," but others say, "They are done away." Whom will you accept, Jesus, who has never recinded these positive statements, or others who have negatived them without any authority from him? Which is the safe side?

This church denies you nothing given to those under the gospel anciently, but holds that the church is a living institution, having within it the life and light of Christ by which it not only is able to reaffirm all the ancient truth, it is able to receive instruction and guidance to enable it to meet every emergency. It is still in communication with him as it was anciently. A church acknowledged by him was a safe one then, and not until it ceased to have his recognition and acknowledgment did it cease to be safe. A church with his endorsement is safe today. "In case of doubt, take the safe side."

DEFENDS MODERN MIRACLES.

Miracles were defended as a present-day possibility and an earlier-day actuality by the Rev. H. Page Dyer in a sermon in Ascension P. E. church, Philadelphia. In the course of his address he said: "The question of belief in miracles really seems to involve practically the belief in God, as now living, consciously acting, personally directing his creation. If one believes there is a God who made all laws (far more than we know of), who can therefore dispense with them, modify them, bring into play higher processes unknown to us; who can reach his end by routes far more varied and unsuspected by us; who can accomplish his purposes by methods which to us (but not really) seem to contradict other divine ones, then we don't fear to expect wonders and we are willing to say: 'This to me is a miracle.'

"If we believe there is an omnipotent, living, interested and controlling Person, and that he chose to work miracles in days gone by—working them through men and women on earth—then why must I dogmatically assent that he cannot do so now, or even that he will not do so now. Rather, I must say that he, being omnipotent, surely can, and if he sees a need for it, surely will work miracles today. To say he cannot, denies his Godhead; to say he will not, is presuming to declare what is the unrevealed will of God, which would be irreverently presumptuous and evidently beyond our knowledge."—Inter Ocean

READING THE BIBLE.

A New York newspaper once reported a clergyman as saying that the number of words in a Sunday newspaper is very nearly the number of words in the New Testament. There are many, however, who feel that they have abundant time to read the paper, but plead the lack of time as their one great excuse for not reading the Bible. The paragraph suggested to me the question: How much time is actually necessary in order to read the Bible through? I then formed the plan of noting down the amount of time required to read the different books through at an average rate, pausing now and then to make memoranda. The intention was not at all to see how much could be read in a given time. I do not believe in hurrying through the Bible, as one would hurry through a story book, but it is my belief that, in order to get the full force of a book in the Bible or out of it, one should read it straight through, and as much of it at a sitting as possible. Reading the whole of Matthew is the best preparation for understanding its last two lines; of Job, for the realization of the triumph of faith; of Ruth or Esther, to get those marvelous stories in all their matchless beauty. Spend two hours some Sabbath afternoon in reading the entire glorious prophecy of Isaiah; follow them with an hour and a half with Matthew, and see how the prophecy was fulfilled.

This consecutive reading need not preclude careful and prayerful study of special passages, nor does it militate against reading the same books more slowly with note and comment. One of the greatest foes to an appreciation of the Bible as literature is scrappy, inconsecutive reading. Once, at least, and as often as possible thereafter, read every book in the Bible from beginning to end, with the fewest possible delays and hindrances. Such reading, especially is begun with the prayer, "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law," will enable you to appreciate more thoroughly the Word of God as literature, to gain new revelations of its unequalled beauty, manifesting the love of God and teaching us his will. You will find some things in the Bible which you didn't know were there.—The Presbyterian.

THE SCAPE-GOAT OF THE CENTURIES.

The present austere attitude of the Ottoman Government towards all Hebrews in Palestine, reminds us forcibly of the disappointed champion wrestler who, in the course of his athletic competitions encountered a redoubtable antagonist that gained the mastery over him before a great crowd of spectators.

Becoming depressed by his humiliating defeat, he immediately repaired to his house; awoke his younger brother, belaboring him with stunning blows. Neither tears nor pleadings stayed the sinewy arms of the practised wrestler from dealing direct and sideway, crushing blows, whilst complacently muttering to himself:—"Aha, Aha, my arms are still strong and serviceable . . . !

There is no need to insist upon or emphasize the applicability of the above illustration.

A word to the wise is sufficient!

Indeed, the exceptionally drastic measures adopted against the Jews whilst hostilities are still carried on in another part of the empire, are very strange, unless they are providentially meant as a reminder to the Zionists that Israel is still the scape-goat of the centuries—yea, that he is still the embodiment of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah.

No true historian will deny that, since the very commencement of the diaspora, the Jews have been made responsible for every calamity and catastrophe that has befallen humanity in general and nations in particular; not only in remote and medieval centuries, but up to modern times, and even in the so-called most civilized countries—Turkey not excepted . . . !

Every revolution, every insurrection, every economic or political crisis has been, and still is attributed to nothing else but to the supposed evil genius and nefast influence of the Jews.

Now, by force of habit and constant submission to the inevitable, no severity however relentless, surprises the Jew. He scarcely resents even the most obvious injustice studiously directed against him.

This resigned state of Jewish psychology is more than ever noticeable in the present resuscitation of the derogatory disabilities which are being strongly re-inforced against them. These are as follows:—

1. Every Jew, of whatever nationality, is deprived of the right of acquiring real estate in Palestine.

2. No Jewish emigrant or pilgrim can remain in Palestine longer than ninety days, maximum, from the day when his passport is taken away from him in exchange for a red paper.

3. Government spies are charged to find out and indicate the whereabouts of Jewish would-be settlers, so that they may be expelled.

One would have thought that upon the revival of such outrageous edicts, the Ottoman Jews would rise in the name of justice against this unconstitutional and racial inequality; but it is not so.

The Jew is accustomed to kiss the rod that smites him. Regardless of the exceptional treatment meted out to him, he still runs to the Wailing Wall and Rachel's Tomb to pray for the victory of the Turkish armies over their enemies. He still saves a mite from his scanty earning towards the Red Crescent fund.

Moreover, the absurdity of the edicts is greater than the intolerance, when we consider that since the year 1884, the Jews have in various ways enriched the treasury by at least 500,000,000 francs, and changed over seven million acres of arid wilderness into arable land,—that brings in an annual tax and dime of half a million Turkish pounds.

It is the Jews, and the Jews only, that have made land in Palestine valuable.

In the seventies, the Effendis deprived the fellahin of their land for almost nothing.

When the Jews came, agricultural land was purchased by them at good prices, which fact enabled the former impecunious peasants to cultivate the rest of their property with profit to themselves and to the government.

The Jews admitted Arabs to Agricultural school at Mikveh, Israel, and showed them how the most barren land by scientific methods, may be reclaimed and rendered fertile.

For all these advantages, the sons of Jacob are now being reminded by Ishmael that they are mere sojourners in the land of their forefathers.

It is more than irony—it is sad—nay, it is heart-rending!

But after all dear readers, we must not forget that Judah is still the scape-goat of the nations!—Y. F. Z. in The Truth, Jerusalem.

• NUGGETS.

If you would be popular with the world don't be religious. If you would be popular with religionists be good, but not too good. If you should happen to know anything break it gently—even Christians cannot endure sudden shock. But if you don't care to be popular—well, Christ wasn't popular.

If you "know" a thing, be sure that you know it before you publish it, else it might come to pass that you only thought you knew it, and there was something wrong with your thinker.

No doubt the Lord will heal, if he intends to just as quickly and effectually from administration that has nothing prophetic in it, as if he had the way mapped out for him by a prophecy indited by sympathy.

It is wonderful how obscure some of God's instructions are, when we do not want to follow them. And it is also wonderful how many of us would love to be pleasing to the Lord if he would allow us to adopt our own methods of doing it.

It is quite evident that the modern airship is not God's method of translating men to celestial glory; from the fact that when the thing goes wrong the body starts downward whatever might be said of the rest of the man,—and alas! how often the thing goes wrong.

Does it ever occur to the Religio-politician—in other words the ecclesiastico-demagogue, that the Lord has never yet given the church a schedule to run the nations by? It would not be reverential to say that he forgot it. Perhaps it would be well for the church to study its own schedule for a while yet.

When flags are "half mast" it denotes that somebody in the world is dead. Would it indicate anything like that if our ENSIGN should ever fail to be at the very top of the staff or, that there would be something wrong with the "staff"—It is quite suggestive that the missionaries are sent out into the world. Who pulls on that halyard anyway?

To recognize a grand truth, is a grand thing in a man. To be actuated by that truth is to magnify its grandeur, "Thy word is truth."

Query—Does the Lord ever send little showers to be divided up into excuses for tender skinned Saints to stay away from church? or is it all misappropriation?

To feel from day to day that you are really overcoming something in your nature that had prevented you from arising to your ideal plane, means that in some way you are in touch with Divinity. To be in touch with Divinity is to be on the safe road.

When two declare themselves ready and willing to go "half way" the best Christian is not particular as to the exact distance; nor will he wait until the space has been evenly divided, before starting; nor will he stop should he reach the half-way mark first.

The prize value of a nickle, sometimes is determined by whether it is heading toward a "picture show" or the "translation fund."

Gold has not much intrinsic value until it is separated from the dross. It is bought however many times with a view to the separation. Fortunately for us we were bought dross and all, more fortunate for us if we will permit the means of separation. It is the owner's right to use his own means to secure the end.

When farmers discover a young horse that keeps his shoulder solid to the collar when in harness, he usually selects him for a leader. More than two or three raps over the head to the half wise, with a pen-mall, is superfluous.

If all the energy that Christians consume in pulling cross-wise were utilized in a straight-ahead pull—the cause of Christ would be going some all right.

Continual trying is no failure even though we do not succeed according to our aspirations. The consciousness of effort is an inspiration to ones self and an incentive to others. The man who will not try is always a failure.

Falling is not necessarily to be commended never-the-less sometimes men learn more in a fall than they otherwise would. They may at least enjoy the pleasure of being able to get up again.

He that taketh a city is considered a great man and his picture can be seen in the papers—half way around the world. But he that ruleth his own Spirit—is really a greater man—and his picture no doubt graces the galleries of heaven—Teach us Lord how to be great.

OLIO.

MRS. KATE GOODWIN, EDITOR.
1416 W. Walnut St., Independence, Mo.

Christmas come and gone! And still the holiday spirit lingers yet a little while to grace the hum-drum present and cast a halo round common thoughts and deeds and common things. And to whom does it not bring thoughts of other days, of other faces now gone, of festivities that cheered another home—the moving, breathing elements of which are scattered to the four winds, but the spirit and love of which will live forever.

However that may be, the recurrent day always carries my mind back to a mental picture of certain good old days that memory has stored for my later life's conning and you may be sure it is born anew in my thoughts with the sacredness of frankincense and myrrh. It is the picture of an old home—now passed away and broken up—of faces long since gone. ARE there any days like those? At least are there any Christmas days? Are those feasts like those? Are there any HOMES like those?

Such a baking and stewing, chopping and pounding, such a shining and dusting and scrubbing as goes on for days before; "spic and span" is the watch-word of every feminine warrior in the house who is able to wage war on the enemy, dirt, and it was not unusual to see the woman-folk armed (soldier fashion) with mop and broom, whisking around in and out of closets and unknown corners, with a dust rag flapping gayly in the rear like a banner on which could fitly have been inscribed,— "cleanliness is Godliness." In my child mind they were associated with the Amazon heroines of a past day, so zealously did they seem bent upon victory; at least their whole attitude seemed to speak the "conquer or die" embodied in petticoats, of the age of heroism.

But oh! how things did shine at the end of the crusade; no palace could have been more godly in its cleanliness; and it surely left a religious impress upon my childish heart. I loved to creep into a corner and curl up with the big grey tabby and watch the things that "shone" in the room and upon which the firelight played in the half-dusk; the mirror, the face of the clock, the polished andirons the freshly oiled furniture itself, all reflecting images which I created into people and things according to my fancy.

Then, as the day drew near, the smell of spicy cakes, juicy roasts, of mince and pumpkin pies, the laying out of the best linen from a, to me, wonderful cedar-wood chest, the bringing forth of the silver, kept for only such days as this; and later the happy and confused gathering round the board loaded with the savory products of love's labor, of family and friends, the alpha and omega of all our relations, the oldest of the family tree that could be found, with its numerous branches, from the stalwart limb of a grandfather down to the merest twig of a cherub slumbering in the cradle near by.

Are not these old times, old associations, and old faces, things to remember and recall? Rich, indeed the childhood that has such memories! And now I can never smell spice but a troop of beautiful, fairy images come dancing from some hidden forest glade of the past into the foreground of the present and I can hear nothing but the music of their feet, I cannot see, through the mist before my eyes aught but the faces, those angel faces gathered round a festal board of long ago.

THE QUEST OF THE THREE KINGS.

MRS. M. T. SHORT.

Jerusalem is moved,
And Herod trembles on his throne.
E'en now within the city walls,
Seeking a mightier one,
Are come three kings—they come from far,
Their gifts and homage to bestow,
Led by a new born star

The time of which the prophet spoke,
In days long past is come,
And he whose right it is to reign,
Is heir to David's throne
Of Him 'tis said he shall be called
The Mighty Prince of Peace,
He comes to set the captives free,
The prisoners to release.

Yet, not in Herod's stately halls,
Filled with the reveling throng,
Was seen the brightness of the star,
Nor heard the angel's song,
But out upon the midnight sky,
Above the field and plain,
The shepherds saw the wondrous sight,
And heard the heavenly strain.

And said they to each other, then,
"Surely for us, 'tis meet,
That we, too, find his resting place,
And worship at his feet,"
And Herod trembles as he hears,
These rumors from afar,
Calls in the wise men unto him
And asks them of the star.

Said one; "for near a hundred years
I watched the heavens above,
To see the star foretold arise,
The day star of His love,—
"One night, far shining in the west,
I saw its glorious rays,
It led me here, oh, tell me where
The infant King now lies."

Another speaks; "scarce more than boy
I held my father's throne,
Yet longed I for a mightier king
Than earth had ever known,
I knew when that bright star arose,
In majesty above,
Would lead me to the Holy One,
All other kings might love."

Another wise man, rising, said,
"Wisdom I sought for years,
When lo! the new star rose and shone
And banished all my fears,
I knew the time at last had come,
I knew the king was near,
Oh, tell me where; where shall we find
The one whom we revere."

Herod is troubled and with him
Is all Jerusalem;
"Oh rabbis wise, search ye the scrolls,
And bring me word again."
For Herod's fierce and wicked heart
With jealousy is torn,
As he demands of priests and scribes,
Where shall the Christ be born.
With careful search the rabbis wise,
In reverence answer him,
"We find Oh king, 'tis written thus,
Of lovely Bethlehem,
Thou art not least in Juda's realm
Midst which the princes dwell,
For out of thee shall come a king,
To rule mine Israel."

"To Bethlehem go, then, my friends"
Said Herod, with all guile,
"And bring me word that I may come,
And worship, too, the child."
And bending low, the kings depart
While Herod hears afar,
Their voices borne upon the air,
"Behold the Star! the Star!"

HIGHER.

The following lines were written by a young man while confined in goal for drunkenness. He had a good English and classical education, and a mind of unusual power, but drink destroyed him:

Begin, my soul, a life of loftier aim,
A life unchained by base and earthly things—
No more let self and sense thy homage claim,
But use with dignity thy spirit's wings—
Beneath thy feet with resolution tread
The low-born appetite, the mean desire;
In conscious nobleness lift thy head
Higher, still higher!—Ex.

He who reigns within himself and rules passions, desires and tears, is more than a king.

No machine has yet been invented to save labor in the service of God.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Seattle and British Columbia District conference will convene with the Seattle Branch the second Saturday in February, 1913. Sunday-school and Religio conventions will convene on Friday, of same week, at 10 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. respectively. Branch clerks will receive blanks upon which to make their reports in ample time, for six months ending January, 31st. It is hoped that all the ministry located and laboring within the district will mail reports direct to the undersigned not later than February 1st. Also, all that possibly can, still be in attendance.

FRED'X. W. HOLMAN, Dist. Sec'y,
4233 Bagley Ave., Seattle, Wash.

The Northern Wisconsin District conference will convene at Porcupine, Wis., with the Frankfort Branch, February 15th and 16th, 1913. Please send your branch and official reports in early to A. L. Whiteaker, Arkansas, Wis., care of S. Livingston. Teams will meet you at Durand Friday the 14th. If you come sooner than that, write to S. Livingston at address above.

A. L. Whiteaker, Dis. Pres., Leroy Colbert, Clerk.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Convention of Religio and Sunday schools of the Far West District will convene at the First St. Joseph Branch January 18-19, 1913.

Delegates for the general convention will be elected, therefore a large attendance is desired so that the district may be well represented. Send to your list of delegates at your earliest opportunity.

Come and let us make this convention one of the most interesting as well as instructive ever held in this district, bring in your suggestions for the good of the Religio and Sunday-school, and let us strive to live closer to our motto "Onward and upward."

R. L. HENRY, Secy.

2844 Olive St. Joseph, Mo.

Sunday-school convention of the Northern Wisconsin District will follow the conference. We want an early report of all the schools in the district, with the official reports. Address Leroy Colbert, Supt., Arkansas, Wis.

The Northeastern Illinois Religio convention convenes Friday afternoon, January 10th, at Plano, Ill. The election of officers will be one of the main features.

ELDERS PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

We desire to organize an elder's quorum during the conference to be held at Plano, Illinois January 11 and 12, 1913, and would like to have all the elders who can come, from Northeastern Illinois District, Kewanee District, Northern and Southern Wisconsin Districts, and all those living in that part of Nauvoo District in Illinois, and as many of those in the Eastern Iowa District as may desire to be present with us at the organization. Visiting elders from other districts will be welcome.

PRIESTS, TEACHERS AND DEACONS.

If there are enough of these officers present we will try and affect an organization of a quorum of each of these orders of the Aronic Priesthood, for the Northeastern Illinois District. Visiting priests, teachers and deacons will be welcome at the organization of the order to which they belong. Brethren come to the conference and assist in these organizations.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The South Missouri District conference, convened with the West Plains Branch in the Valley View M. E. church near Chapin, Mo. on Saturday, Nov. 23d, 1912, at 10 a. m. with President J. F. Cunningham and J. F. Davis, presiding. Five branches reported as follows: Thayer, 36, gain 1; Grove Springs, 48, gain 1; Beaver, 89, gain 4; Springfield 201, no change; Woodside, 48, no change. Branches not reporting—West Plains. Logan Creek, Piedmont; Avas; Naylor and Macomb, six in all. Ministry reporting—Elders J. T. Davis, J. F. Cunningham, G. A. Davis, A. J. Fletcher, G. Edwards, J. W. Quinley, G. W. Anderson, Benj. Pearson, W. H. Kelley, T. J. Simpson, A. M. D. McGuire; and G. W. Boatman. A petition from Saints near Niangua was read, and on motion referred to the sub-missionary and dist. president. A petition from the Thayer Branch to restore license to Riley F. Cunningham was referred to sub-missionary and Elder W. H. Kelley.

Next conference at Springfield in March. At our priesthood meetings, the subject was, the Law of Tithing. It was discussed in all its phases and much light gained thereon. The social service was a spiritual feast. Preaching by Elders W. H. Kelley and James T. Davis.

A vote of thanks was tendered for the use of the building, and the choir service which were offered to us without request,—a kindness and consideration seldom shown, and which also reflects credit on the daily lives of the Saints near Chapin.

MARRIAGES.

LIBERGHIEU—Blakesley, at the home of the bride, Independence, Mo., December 11th, Mr. Wm. M. Liberghieu and Mary E. Blakesley. Elder John C. Foss officiating.

OBITUARY.

ORR.—Sr. Margaret Found was born in Scotland, Oct. 11, 1832. She was married to John H. Orr, July 19, 1852, at Dalkieth, Scotland by Elder Brewington, and came to America in 1856 and later to Utah. Becoming disgusted with conditions there they came to Iowa and in 1880 to Ottumwa where they united with the Reorganized church, August 13, 1893, and has been a faithful Saint but a great sufferer.

She leaves three daughters, two sons and a foster son, twenty-five grand-children, ten great grand-children, two brothers and three sisters, her husband having preceded her in 1906. She died December 14th. Funeral from the Saint's chapel, Elder Edw'd. Giles assisting. Elder Jas. McKiernan preached the sermon.

DIED.

DETRAY.—At Independence, Mo., December 25, 1912, Bro. Albert C. DeTray, aged 67 years. He had been ill for some weeks previously, but his demise was hastened by a fall which broke his hip. He was born at Texas, Crawford County, Ohio, Nov. 7, 1845. Married Miss Adeline Gould, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, September 28, 1876 who preceded him March 3, 1912. Three sons and one daughter survive him, and his mother, and a brother. Bro. W. H. Garrett conducted the funeral service. Internment in Mound Grove cemetery.

DOWKER.—Hannah Dowker was born Sept. 30, 1849, at Waterloo, Canada. On Jan. 7, 1871, she was united in marriage to Wm. Dowker, to which union six children were born, three boys and three girls, all of whom survive her. Namely: Wm. H., of Danville, Ill., Mrs. Lydia Warren of Lansing, Mich., Mrs. Lucinda McKinzie and Mrs. Rachel Harder of Flint, Mich., Mr. J. A. of Independence, Mo., and Mr. D. E. Chicago, Ill. Also fourteen grand children and two great grand children.

On March 20, 1887, she became convinced of the truth of the angel's message and was baptized at Bayport, Mich., by J. J. Cornish, at which time she entered into active service as an elder's companion, since which time she has been true to the trust imposed. With her husband she came to Independence, November 30th, going to the home of her son, J. A. Dowker, where she remained until her death, December 23d. Although she suffered untold agony since February last, she never complained. Funeral service in charge of G. E. Harrington, sermon by Elder F. C. Smith at the Stone Church,

DID YOU EVER SEE

A 100-acre Grain Farm that was WORTH $200,000.00?

Come with us on one of our excursions to

HAMILTON, POLK CO., FLORIDA

And we will show you thousands of acres of Grape Fruit and Orange groves that cannot be bought for $2000 per acre, as they are paying a net profit of from $250 to $1000 per acre every year. We will sell you fruit lands adjoining these groves that you can develop to the same point of perfection—land that the ownership of 40 acres means financial independence and freedom from blizzards and fuel bills—land where you can raise three crops of vegetables a year between your fruit trees, and make from $500 to $1000 per acre during the three years it takes for a grove to come into bearing. Think it over and then go with us and look it over.

40 ACRES AND INDEPENDENCE

Do you know that forty acres of this land developed to Orange and Grape-fruit trees assures an income to you of at least $10,000 per year? We stand ready to prove this statement to any one who will accompany us on one of our excursions, and if we cannot do so we will cheerfully refund the expenses of your trip. We will show you lands in Polk County that are producing some of the finest groves in the world today, yielding as high as 20 to 35 boxes of fruit to a single tree.

CHARLES FRY, EDITOR
W. H. DEAM, BUS. MANAGER

In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription.

In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to

THE SCULPTURE OF HABIT.

Not with a single stroke, but painfully and slow,
The sculptor fashions the human face;
E'en the rough cast takes many a careful blow,
Ten thousand chisel-points its finished grace.
Here is soft polishing, there the finest touch,
Ere the full likeness stands in solid stone;
Genius has toiled and planned, few dream how much,
To mold the features that we've loved or known.
So by our leadings, be they good or bad,
We carve our moral likeness, day by day,
Our acts of thought and will and deed will add
A charm to every line—a kindling ray—
Or mold our features silently to wear
The image of gross sin, or dark despair.
—George Bancroft Griffith.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES.

That the church now known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized by direct command of God on April 6, 1830, is a common belief among its members and ministers. The church has accepted as a revelation from God a document purporting to have been given on that day, and which made provision for the various officers which were to be placed in the church, and defined their duties. But it mattered very little as to the form of organization unless the basic principles were those which had been laid down by Christ, and those authorized and inspired of him.

What was the foundation which was laid for the church structure to be built upon, and is it the one which "no man can lay?"

The revelation already referred to declares "there is a God in heaven who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God, the framer of heaven and earth and all things which are in them, and that he created man male and female; after his own image and in his own likeness created he them, and gave unto them commandments that they should love and serve him the only living and true God, and that he should be the only Being whom they should worship." (Doctrine and Covenants 17:4), which declaration does not admit of any such practice as worshipping Joseph Smith, as the church has been ridiculously charged with doing in sensational and slanderous reports. Nor does it admit of such a doctrine as was taught by Brigham Young, who, while professing a belief in the work inaugurated by Joseph Smith, taught altogether contrary to the latter's teachings by advocating that "Adam is our God, and the only god with whom we have to do."

Further declaration of this revelation is that "all men must repent and believe on the name of Jesus Christ and worship the Father in his name, and endure in faith on his name to the end, or they cannot be saved in the kingdom of God." And another: "The Holy Ghost beareth record of the Father, and of the Son, which Father and Son, and Holy Ghost are one God, infinite and eternal, without end." Thus far these teachings must meet with the approval of every Bible believer, for they are in strict accord with the Bible and support it.

Passing to other revelations given at about the same time while the church was in its infancy, the following are found:

"Repent, repent and prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; yea, repent and be baptized every one of you, for the remission of your sins; yea, be baptized even by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost. Behold, verily, verily I say unto you, this is my gospel, and remember that they shall have faith in me, or they can in no wise be saved: and upon this rock I will build my church. Yea, upon this rock ye are built, and if ye continue, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; and ye shall remember the church articles and covenants to keep them; and those having faith you shall confirm in my church, by the laying on of the hands, and I will bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost upon them."—Doctrine and Covenants 32:2,3.

A very striking feature of these statements is that they point to the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as the one eternal God, and the gospel as taught by Christ as the means, by which he brings men to salvation. Not alone these statements already quoted is this position taken, but in all the revelations received by the church in addition to the Holy Scriptures there is agreement.

In a revelation embodying the law of God to the church is this:

"Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my Scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."—Doctrine and Covenants 42:16.

The church was not left to the uncertain teachings of any one man, nor any number of men, but from its beginning a fundamental law was laid down which should guide the church in its teachings and work. The church could not consistently be held responsible for either the false teaching or evil practices of any officer or member when such teaching and practices were contrary to this fundamental law, unless it should continue to approve and support such erring members. It must also be apparent that the transgression of one man, whether in his teaching or practice, or both, would not vitiate the fundamental law; and should that one be multiplied to include the whole membership, it would but prove the weakness and folly of man rather than the untruthfulness or ineffectiveness of the law itself.

Principles are to be judged upon their own merits rather than by the lives of men who may fail in coming up to them. No one would care to have the virtue of the principles taught by Christ determined by the conduct of those who have professed to follow them, and yet it is upon that basis largely that the doctrine advocated by Joseph Smith has been judged. Only when men live in strict accord with their accepted principles will their lives be a true exemplification of their principles, and a safe basis of judgment.

The gospel of Christ sets such a high standard of life and conduct that men more often fail of coming up to it than to any other standard, notwithstanding the commandments of God have been made so strict and plain, both anciently as recorded in the Bible, and in later times in the Book of Mormon and the revelations to the church. Warning has been given against teaching anything else than that which is found in the Scriptures, and also against doing anything that is contrary to the things taught therein. "And he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."

The fact that in the early years of the church some turned away to teach other doctrines, and fell into errors, does not affect the fundamental law in the least, and though a large part of the church body under the leadership of Brigham Young went so far as to adopt and advocate other doctrines, and fell into divers evils the result was that their connection with, and allegiance to, the fundamental law were broken. They both taught and practiced things which were not authorized in the law as given in the Bible, (referred to as the Holy Scriptures), Book of Mormon, and the revelations. It is not strange under these circumstances that Judge Sherman, in the court of common pleas in Lake County Ohio, in 1880, in a decision determining the title to church property said:

"That the church in Utah, the defendant of which John Taylor [Successor to Brigham Young], is president, has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original church."

But while a large portion of the church went astray, following after false leaders and false doctrines, there were many who continued to maintain the original principles upon which the church had been built, and these continued to work upon those principles, gathering together the scattered remnants and reorganizing the church, which has continued so build as perfectly as possible upon the foundation.

The statements of doctrine previously quoted are in strict agreement with the Bible doctrine. Faith in God is everywhere acknowledged as a Bible principle, as is also repentance from sin. But while Bible believers disagree on the question of baptism, this doctrine is restated in the later revelations with such plainness as to leave no room for dispute or doubt, and carries with it the promise that those who are obedient shall "receive the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, even as the apostles of old," and the statement is further made that "This is my gospel, . . . and upon this rock I will build my church."

The true church is made up of those who are obedient to the things taught in the Scriptures, and these are the ones,—the only ones, to whom God fulfills his promise of the Holy Ghost, and the only ones who are truly built upon the rock.

We hold these fundamental principles to be true today, as they ever have been, and as the church shall continue to build upon them it will have more and more the divine approval. They are safe principles, and the man who applies them to his life will be made better thereby, and find new light and strength through the Holy Spirit to lead him to greater heights until the baser things of his nature will be so far beneath him, that he shall henceforth live in the "light of God."

This week we begin our new department "The Round Table," which is open to all. Saints and friends desiring to ask questions relative to the Scriptures, the gospel, the church, or other related subjects, may send their questions to the editor. Unsigned letters may not be noticed.

Next week we begin a series of historical sketches by the editor which will deal with various phases of church history. A mere recital of dry facts will be avoided, and the sketches made as interesting as possible.

The business manager has found it necessary to reduce the volume of the church directory appearing on the last page. In this day of telephones and street cars visitors to the cities having the address of the meeting place and the pastor can easily find them, and it is not necessary that a complete directory of church services with other items should be published weekly. The list had grown so large that the space occupied counted at regular advertising rates amounted to nearly four hundred dollars per year all given gratis, and we believe such space can be used more profitably either to the ENSIGN with advertising, or to the readers with reading matter.

On New Year's Morning a special train passed through Independence on its way from Indianapolis to the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas, carrying thirty-three prisoners who had been convicted of conspiracy, and carrying dynamite contrary to the laws of the United States. The crimes of which they were found guilty extended over a period of half a dozen years, and until recent months the guilt of these particular men was hardly suspected. As early as 1830 the Lord said of the people: "Their folly and their abominations shall be made manifest in the eyes of all people." This is but one of the many instances in recent years where the secret abominations of men have been brought to light, though many others who have been found guilty have not been brought to suffer the penalty, as were these men upon New Year's morning.

INDEPENDENCE NEWS.

The year nineteen-thirteen has brought upon the several departments of church work the necessity of re-electing their officers. The branch at its business meeting Monday evening sustained Bro. G. E. Harrington with his counselors Brn. W. H. Garrett and M. H. Bond, as the presidency of the branch. Other officers elected or re-elected were Abraham Morgan priest, W. H. Callin teacher, J. G. Jenkins deacon, Louise Gelsch and Mary Steele secretaries. Lester H. Haas recorder, Audencia Anderson chorister, Sr. Eli Etzeshouser member library board. Among other items of business letters of removal were granted to James C. Page and Irene M. Fuld to Culbertson, Mont., and letters were received from Haddah Flinn, Holden, Mo., Elvin and Viola Brackebury, St. Joseph, Mo., Frank L. and Alice L. Ream, Twin Creek, Kansas.

A cold wave began making havoc of the fine weather which had remained so long, on Sunday morning, since which time snow has fallen followed by the temperature, showing that Old Boreas has not lost any of his old time vigor. The morning sermon was by Elder J. F. Curtis, and Elder R. W. Farrell spoke in the evening, both to the edification of the Saints. An excellent sacramental service was held in the afternoon at which Bro. Luff sang a number of verses by the Spirit. A young people's prayer and sacrament meeting was held in the upper auditorium.

Brethren occupying at the surrounding branches and missions so far as we have been able to learn of them are as follows: J. C. Foss at Malvern Hill, Charles Fry in the morning and J. W. Rushton in the evening at Grandview, John Jabud at Armstrong, W. D. Bullard at Argentine, Emsey Curtis at Courtney, W. P. Bootman in the evening at Englewood, G. E. Harrington at Mt. Washington, T. W. Chabrun at Central Kansas City, George Jenkins at Lees Summit, J. A. Dowler in the morning and E. Rannie in the evening at Walnut Park.

Two hundred and fifty attended the Religio last Friday night, which was the time for the election of officers. J. A. Gardner was elected president, C. C. Babb vice president, Della Braidwood supt. senior department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner supt. junior department, Sr. R. Brokaw secretary, John M. Lloyd treasurer, Mrs. A. V. Closson supt. home department, Ada Roberts supt. normal department, J. F. Rudd member library board, Mrs. A. Tohabill chorister, and Esther Tanburg pianist. The Religio has thirty classes. In addition to the usual subjects of study there is a class in the study of the normal outlines.

Excellent meetings are reported at the Walnut Park mission. On Monday evening an entertainment, largely musical, was given at the chapel, the proceeds of which were for the purpose of meeting the expense of the new addition recently built.

At the South Side branch the morning speaker was Ammon White, and in the evening Elvin Winegar was the speaker; an excellent sacrament meeting being held in the afternoon. The Sunday-school officers chosen for the year are Earl Corthell superintendent, J. T. Curtis assistant, Sr. Enoch Larson second assistant, Sadie Bailey secretary, A. K. Dilje treasurer, E. S. Losey chorister, Sr. J. A. Curiga organist. At the session last Sunday 225 were present, giving a collection of $4.13. The Christmas offering of this school this year was $2.88.

The South Side Religio is reported to have encouraging prospects for the new year. Those who will occupy in the several offices are F. A. Sherman president, Alvin Martin vice president, Effie Miller secretary, Cleonard Chamberlister treasurer, Robert Miller organist, Sr. J. A. Curtis chorister, Sr. W. H. Kelley home class superintendent. The attendance at the last meeting was about 115.

The Sunday-school at the stone church had an attendance last Sunday of 632, with 87 classes, five of which were perfect notwithstanding the inclement weather. A new department was established to include those studying the normal courses. The collection was $11.54, and the birthday offering $1.11.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

We beg pardon with the ENSIGN readers for the delay of our letter, but the holidays were a very busy time here in our branch and last Saturday and Sunday when we should have written Elder J. L. Bear and the writer was appointed by the district president, Elder B. J. Dice to hold a two-day's meeting at the German Branch, Stewartsville, Mo., but Bro. Bear was too busy with his work at the gas office to go and be appointed Elder W. S. Hodson to fill his appointment. The meeting was a spiritual feast to all who attended. We preached three sermons there and held two prayer meetings.

Our Christmas night entertainment at Second branch was a grand success with the largest audience ever in the church. No one who took part in the entertainment was permitted to practice or rehearse or for want of time, there were seventeen parties dispensed with. Near the close Bro. J. S. Lawton came in with his part, accompanied by a dozen helpers, some of whom represented the wise men following the bright star till it stopped over where the child "Jesus" supposed, and Mary his mother were at the manger at the birth of Christ. In order to carry this out as natural as it could be done a new system of electric lights had to be installed and Dr. Lawton put them in at his own expense at a cost of $50.00, and we have since learned that he is going to present it to the branch at our next business meeting, Wednesday 8th.

Gas has been so very poor this winter with higher rates, and it will be a great improvement to our branch to have the 1200 candle power lights.

We can say more about this in our next letter but the finest print can be read under them in any part of the church now.

Our services are largely attended both preaching and prayer meetings, Elder Bear and the writer doing the preaching since our last letter.

The writer is to address the Religio on the necessity of the translation in different languages Friday 10th at which time we hope to get a large collection for that fund.

The branch is to take up the matter at our next business meeting, the 8th, of arranging if possible for securing the services of Elder J. S. Roth to hold a series of meetings again as there is a large number of enquirers who were left on the brink or water's edge when he was here before, that his sermons would have weight with. We hope to be able to secure him for at least three weeks.

Our tithing receipts were very good for the year 1912. The writer, bishop's sub-agent collected from the 3d branch $173.66. Second branch $222.13 total $395.79.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Note.—This department will be devoted to questions and answers, and will be continued as often, or as long, as there is a legitimate demand for it. It is not designed to deal with "knotty" problems, or questions in which there is no profit, but to answer those questions which arise in the thoughts and experiences of many almost daily, and which concern their spiritual welfare. Questions by members or non-members will be welcomed. The names of the questioners will not be given.—Editor.

Would God send the sting of death, or a lifetime affliction upon an innocent child, in order to soften the hearts of sinful parents?

God does not punish the innocent for the guilty, though very often the transgressions of one unavoidably bring suffering to others who are innocent. The drunkard's family, and even his descendants for many generations, suffer the results of his sins. The Jews of today are bearing the reproach caused by their ancestors—thousands of years ago. When parents follow the ways of sin the Spirit of God is aggrieved and will not abide with them, for "God doth not dwell in unholy temples;" and when the Spirit of God leaves a home the adversary finds easy access in coming in to afflict either the guilty or the innocent. The relationship of the physical with the spiritual nature is too frequently overlooked, but according to the Scriptures wars, plagues, disasters, and afflictions are frequently the results of transgression; not that God sends them directly as punishments, but that through the withdrawal of his Spirit from either the individual or nation, Satan is given power to operate in bringing these distresses. There are instances where the innocent suffer when the parents are seemingly doing the very best they can to serve God, but if we could see as God sees we might easily trace the cause to sinfulness of some remote person or persons.

Does the parable of the talents in Matt. 25:14-30 refer to earthly possessions, or to the personal gifts of endowment?

Literally a talent among the Jews signified a certain measure of weight, a talent of silver being approximately of the value of $2,200, and a talent of gold, $35,000. In doctrine and Covenants 81:4, the word talents is used in reference to money. The Scriptures teach that "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof," and that men are but stewards of God in their ownership and use of earthly possessions, from which we conclude that the parable of the talents would properly apply to temporal things, showing that God requires of men who come into possession of the things of this world, a proper use of those things and a final accounting to him. The parable equally applies to personal endowments, which men should develop and use for the good of their fellow men to the glory of God.

What is the meaning of the Lord's supper? A minister held out the bread saying "Eat this, it represents the flesh of our Savior," and the wine saying "Drink this, it represents the blood of our Savior," and did not pray over the bread and wine at all.

The Lord's supper is a sacrament established by Christ, with the command, "This do in remembrance of me." Christ blessed the bread and gave thanks before passing the emblems to his disciples, (Mark 14:22-23), and it would not seem proper for others who are truly his ministers to administer the sacrament without a prayer of blessing. Eating of the bread and drinking of the wine in the sacrament is a renewal of the covenant which was made with God in baptism, showing that they "are willing to take upon them the name of thy Son, and always remember him and keep his commandments." Jesus said of the wine: "This is the blood of the new testament, which is shed for many," or, as the revised version states it, "the blood of the new covenant." "So the sacrament means a covenant, or the acknowledgment, or confirmation of a covenant, and the person partaking of the emblems legally administered, obligates himself to bear the name of Christ, to remember him, and keep his commandments. Warning is given in 1 Cor. 11:27-30 against partaking unworthily.

Please explain about the four beasts that are spoken of in Daniel, seventh chapter.

The four beasts represented four kingdoms, the lion being the first represented Babylon, the same which is represented by the head of gold in Daniel

2:32, 37, 38. The second beast, a bear, represented Medo-Persia which succeeded Babylon as ruler of the eastern world; the same kingdom as is represented by the arms and breast of Nebuchadnezzar's image in chapter two. The third beast was like a leopard and represented the Grecian Empire which came after Medo-Persia, and the fourth beast which is unnamed represented Rome. The seven heads are supposed to represent the seven different forms of government under which Rome ruled, and the ten horns the ten kingdoms into which Rome was divided. It is a remarkable fact that the rise and fall of kingdoms from Nebuchadnezzar's day to the present, accords with Daniel's prophetic vision of the four beasts, and his interpretation of the king's dream of the great image.

Will the war in Turkey be the last one we will have till Christ comes again?

What may be the immediate or final result of the present war in Turkey we do not know, but we have no reason for believing that it will be the last war prior to the coming of Christ. That Turkey is now and will be a prominent factor in world affairs is evident, but God over-rules among the nations in such a way that all his purposes will be accomplished in due time.

CORRESPONDENCE

LONDON, ENGL., DEC. 14.

Dear Ensign:—It is now nearing one year and a half since we left our home in Independence and reached the shores of old England, my parents' birth place, the fatherland upon which I have often wished to place my feet, and view the much talked of beauties and attractions within its borders.

And now I have no doubt but the Saints and friends in Independence will be looking for some news from us and hear something of what we have been doing.

During our first summer months here the weather was delightful, just warm enough to be comfortable, but when the month of November came and the winter months following, I did not know what might be coming upon this part of the earth, for the black fog, for which London is noted, came down thick and dense like midnight darkness, and nature seemed to be in mourning, we could scarcely see the street lights in midday. It was an experience for me, yet it was not nearly as exciting as an American cyclone. We were very thankful that the fogs came but a few times during the winter. Again we have the white mist, that is just as dense and almost as hard to see through, but not so doleful or depressing, so, between the fog mist and drizzling rain that continues almost daily during the winter months we sometimes long for a few days in the land of sunshine.

This is a mighty city; the greatest on earth, with its teeming millions of people, (equal to thirty Kansas Cities set side by side). There are many attractions here for the sight-seer, some of the most beautiful that the eyes could feast upon, and some that remind the thinking mind that the world in a measure is losing its barbarous spirit, and that the coming of Christ is near at hand. It will be remembered that this is an old historic city, and much history comes to mind when we look upon the old towers and castles behind whose walls kings, queens and nobles have served long years of imprisonment, languishing and sighing for freedom, most of whom were kept by the hand of tyranny till finally led out to their death.

However there are many pleasant things to be seen in this city. The parks and children's play grounds are all that the skill of man could make them. Surely God is not displeased with man for the many good and pleasant things he has done in this world. I am convinced if man would only acknowledge God in all the holy and true principles of the gospel, all would be well, and God the eternal Father would smile lovingly upon his creatures. Then the sin, woe, and misery we see on every hand would be gone like the morning dew before the sweet sunbeams of the summer morning.

No doubt you will be especially interested in hearing how the gospel-work is progressing in this part of the vineyard, and I wish I could give a more glowing account of its forward march. I am speaking more especially of London, which I think is one of the hardest fields in which our missionaries could be placed, as prejudice runs high, and every effort is being made to hinder this latter-day message. Preachers, lecturers, and all combine to falsify the truth with all the rubbish that can be gathered up from the enemies false and wicked statements. The picture shows come along to contribute their part towards picturing these things in their most horrible form and color, and it causes one to mourn and grow heart sick to think of it, yet to one who has felt the power of truth and has received a knowledge, it cannot grow dim or lose its beauty and grandeur. There are some that will not see with their eyes, neither will they understand with their hearts. One may preach and explain and show them the difference, but to them it is Mormonism, Brighamism and Utahism.

Some will listen and be reasonable, but will say: "If you would change the name of your church it would be better for your cause; you see the Utah Mormons have blackened the name of Latter Day Saints, that people turn from it in disgust because of the doings of those who have departed from the teachings of the original faith and followed the church organized by Brigham Young, who still call themselves Latter Day Saints; so people get confused and cannot see the difference." In this we can see how Scripture is being fulfilled in our day, 2 Peter chapter two, speaks of false teachers who would privily bring in heresies and cause many to follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth would be evilly spoken of. And again in Jude we are warned of these men who creep in unawares, turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, who defile the flesh, despise dominion. Woe is them for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam.

So we also find when the work of God is established on the earth, there Satan comes to do battle against it. How true is the statement,

"Where God erects a house of prayer Satan sets up his altar there."

So it will be until the time comes that he will be chained, and cast into the pit, when he will no more go out to deceive the nations; then the wicked will cease from troubling, and the weary will be at rest. Until then we must watch and fight and pray.

Still we have something to be thankful for here in London notwithstanding all the opposing powers that come up against us. God has provided us a few friends, one in particular, who is a newspaper journalist, who has used his influence to get our church before the people in its proper light, commenting on our people in a very favorable way, making the distinction between ours' and the Utah church very clearly, and set the people to thinking, and inquiring, as letters came to Bro. May not only from London people but from other lands; London papers go far, all over the English speaking world. This gentleman made the statement to Bro. May in a personal letter that our faith was built upon the principles of eternal truth, and that our church was just coming out from behind the clouds. He makes a confidant of Bro. May and sends for him to consult with him when he has anything of interest in the protection of the church. It is a bold stand to take, especially for a man like this to defend our church amidst his friends and personal interests, most of those friends being enemies to our church work. One would think such a man was not far from the kingdom.

Our work in the park has been continued nearly every Sunday afternoon this summer. Bro. May has done his part towards enlightening the people, but it is a hard battle in face of such opposition; when we would have a fair crowd and reasonably good attention, along would come a crowd of "Christian Evidence" people, with their pockets full of anti-Mormon literature, handing it to our crowd, trying to interrupt in every possible way, shouting out that we were the same as the Utah Mormons. If they are a sample of "Christian Evidence," I pity some of them on the day of reckoning, but hope before that day comes they may find out their mistake and repent. Park work may be discontinued during the wet, winter Sundays.

We had a delightful treat by the visit of our son William, who stayed with us about forty days; also Bro. and Sr. O. L. James with their children who stayed two weeks, then went to the continent. We had a joyful remembrance of bygone days; we trust they have arrived back safely at Independence.

But joys and sorrows follow each other; we have been called to mourn over the loss of our faithful Sr. Bradshaw; after a long, tedious wait, she was released from her suffering and her spirit took its flight to bask in the sunlight of sweet deliverance. I could but feel that her reward would be glorious, for while she had power of mind and body she was diligent in the work of God, and in deed and in truth a mother in Israel. It was with sad hearts we saw her laid away in her quiet resting place, till the resurrection morn, when I trust she may meet the loved ones left behind. Some in Independence will be sad to know of her death.

I am writing longer than I thought to, and will now say goodbye, trusting we may have some good news to tell you in the near future as there are some nearing the kingdom. Asking your faith and prayers, I hope to remain faithful.

Your sister,
Mrs. R. MAY.

GRANFIELD, Okla., Dec. 22.

Editor Ensign:—Since having read the dear pages and the very good letters and testimonies, with the excellent sermon by Bro. J. S. Roth, my heart is made thankful, for they give me renewed faith.

I can not resist the desire to write a few words in my weak way, that some of my friends and loved ones may know that I am yet in the faith. While I am isolated and deprived of the association of the dearest people on the earth to me, I am yet strong in the faith, and love the name that I am permitted to answer to,—Latter Day Saint, and I want above all to be worthy of the name.

I wonder why any of us should deprive ourselves of hearing the glorious gospel once delivered to the saints by Christ and the apostles. Our intention is to locate where we can attend church as soon as possible, and have our little boy in Sunday-school. We have our home base, each Sunday and we certainly enjoy it.

The letters from the elders in our state show that Oklahoma is hearing the truth, though it has not reached us here, with the exception of a few sermons two years ago by Bro. Smith and Chase. Last summer we had a card from Bro. Christensen saying that he and Bro. Hughes could spend a few days with us if we thought they could find a place in which to preach. I was sick at the time, and my son in very poor health, and he said he wanted to be baptized, and I felt very anxious for them to come. As Bro. Christensen said they could come in two weeks we wrote that we would be glad for them to come at that time, but we have not heard from him since. We certainly want an elder to come at any time.

There are only three saints in this town, but there are some good people here who never heard the gospel, and seem anxious to know something about our teachings. A Methodist lady said to me: "Mrs. Boyd, you must join our home mission society; you are too good not to be at work." I do not expressed myself to her giving my reasons for not joining, and asked her if a L. D. S. elder should come, would she go to hear him, or ask him to her home. She said: "Yes indeed, I see you are posted and know the Bible, and I have gained much light on the Scriptures by your talk." I told her we had the gospel in its fullness, and without a doubt to me the true church of Christ, and that I was so glad that I had been so fortunate as to have heard it and through faith to accept it. She said: "Well I never had a chance to be anything but a Methodist as I was not allowed to attend any other meeting, and was educated in a Methodist college."

I find many who are like this friend of mine, and she is a friend too and a lovely lady. Pray for me dear saints, that I may be restored to health, and that my son may have an opportunity to be baptized, and that we may all be faithful.

Your sister in the one faith,
VIRGINIA BOYD.

CALUMET, Okla., Dec. 26.

Dear Ensign:—Since last writing from Byron, I have preached at Helena and Freedom. We had a good meeting at Helena, with quite an interest manifested, and some investigating. The non-progressive Campbellites are strong there and we had some opposition from them, and since leaving we have learned, through Bro. Brewster, they have procured the services of one of their men who has been lecturing against present day revelation. But they are undertaking quite a task when they try to convince intelligent people, without proof, that an unchangeable God requires us to live and thrive by reading the "bill of fare," while our forefathers had the real food.

We preached twelve sermons while at Freedom, holding forth in the same district (first one) where Bro. A. M. Chase used to live, also Bro. F. C. Keck had a good interest there in the spring. We had the pleasure of leading seven precious souls down through the waters of regeneration, at the close of the meeting and one more young lady gave her name for baptism but her mother being of another persuasion objected. We hope the Lord will soften the hearts of her parents, that the young sister may have the desire of her heart granted here long.

There are twenty-five members at this place now and at the confirmation meeting we had a very spiritual prayer-meeting, also a short business session at which we organized a Sunday-school. The Saints also arranged to have weekly prayer-meetings and voted unanimously to petition those in authority for the organization of a branch, which will be attended to before very long. We left the Saints rejoicing and determined to press forward, and several others investigating and near the Kingdom.

The writer came from Freedom to this place where we had the pleasure of attending the Christmas entertainment under the auspices of Bro. Case and Christensen. There were about two hundred Lamanites present and the brethren had a nice tree prepared and a treat for all, also many nice presents presented. The work is progressing among this people, quite a number have obeyed the gospel, and others say they expect to obey soon but are waiting for warmer weather. I am young in the missionary work and desire an interest in the prayers of God's people, that the Lord will give me strength to continue in his work, and a greater degree of liberty and light than I have hitherto enjoyed.

In gospel bonds,
J. EVERETTE HUGHES.

WAYNESTON, Va., Dec. 13.

Editor Ensign:—The ENSIGN is our preacher. I have been reading so many nice letters and am so glad to hear from so many brothers and sisters that I learned to know during our short stay at Independence and Kansas City, Mo. I do not have church privileges here but thanks to the all wise Father above he can hear and answer our prayers here just same, and I hope to live a life worthy of the true gospel of Jesus Christ. I am praying that God will enlighten these good people here and help them to see the truth as he has shown me, and God is no respecter of persons and I know he will give light to all that will earnestly seek for the truth.

Saints, I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be able to do some good here and hold out faithful to the end. I have many things to try me. Please pray for my husband that he may learn and obey the truth. Ever praying for the upbuilding of Zion, your sister in the true gospel,

ALICE MARTIN.

To The Deacons of the Pittsburg District.

Dear Brethren:—That you may the more efficiently perform the duties of your office, you will please attend the District Conference to be held in Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 22nd, and 23, 1913; where we contemplate organizing a deacons quorum. If you cannot possibly attend, please forward to my home address (155 Selkirk St., Chatham, Ont.) your earliest convenience your full name and address.

Respectfully,

R. C. RUSSELL
Minister in general charge of mission No. 4.

OUR WORK AMONG THE LAMANITES.

KINGFISHER, Okla., Jan. 2, 1913.

Editor Ensign:—I wish to thank the saints who helped in the Christmas tree among the Indians. It was a success from every standpoint; many of them were made happy and we had a week's meetings among them. The tree was laden with nice presents, and a treat for all present; it was a beautiful sight standing in the center of our district tent nicely decorated, and all ready for the 200 Lamanites who came in early. We begun the exercises at 7 o'clock p. m. Bro. Christensen, Hughes, and the writer had done the work, assisted by sisters Ruth Tyler and Ethel Cook (Lamanites). Bro. Sanders and Yates came in time for the programme, which consisted of speeches, very short, from the writer, Bro. Yates and four Indians.

Our work is seemingly taking firm hold on these people, as we now have enough of them in the church for three branches which we hope to soon organize. Also hundreds of them talking of coming into the church. We baptized two at this meeting, and a goodly number of them gave their names for baptism as soon as the weather gets warm.

We blessed eight children, ordained one Indian chief and three medicine men to be ministers for the Lord among this peculiar people. They are leaders among them and we hope for good results from their efforts.

We certainly believe the time has come for the great awakening promised by the prophets of old, to come to this people in the best days.

These are rich people in lands, and are half starving, a part of the time, as the grafters are ready to get their money as soon as the agent writes the checks for them. I am thankful they could not sell their lands, with few exceptions.

They have from three-quarter sections, to two or three sections of 640 acres each to the family among them, and it is the best land in the country. I feel the Lord has reserved this people for the redemption of Zion.

Bro. Yates has done a good work among the Otoe's, and some preaching among the Sac and Foxes, also the Pawnees. But this awakening we have started here among the Cheyennes, Arapahos, Caddos, Kiowas and Comanches, is the most far reaching of any yet in the history of the church, their traditions about the sacred book once among them long since lost; the story of the Christ visiting this continent, going away and promising to return, and many others which are made more intensely interesting to them as they read the Book of Mormon and find the true church which gives them the very vivid realization of their heart's desires in obedience to the complete gospel brought to the earth by the angel.

Asking an interest in the prayers of the Saints for the progress of the work among this people, the Israel of God in America.

Your brother,
HUBERT CASE.

MOLER-TANT DEBATE.

BENTON, Ky., Dec. 13.

The Moler-Tant debate is a thing of the past. The battle is fought and the victory won. It is common for both sides to claim the victory in religious discussions. But if clear cut argument and gentlemanly conduct counts for anything, Bro. Moler certainly won the battle.

Usual church propositions were discussed. The debate was held 8 miles east of Paris, Tenn., Nov. 26-29, 1912, under the Latter Day Saint district tent. Large crowds were in attendance most of the time, and we are satisfied with the results. Bro. Moler is an able defender of the cause of truth. And far exceeded the expectation of many as a debater. His manly conduct and Christian demeanor contrasted with his opponent won for him the admiration of all.

We will not undertake to outline the argument proffered for as usual while Bro. Moler was in the affirmative, instead of trying to follow his argument, Elder Tant gave vent to his spleen in heaping a tirade of abuse on "Old Joe Smith," and "Old Lucy Smith" drawing his supply of sensational yarns from Braden, Neal, et al., often contradicting himself; for instance charging Joseph Smith, Jr., of being convicted a number of times and later claiming the reason he was never convicted was because he was mayor at Nauvoo etc.

Bro. Moler illustrated Tant's position with a cartoon which he exhibited showing the picture of a preacher, grip in hand labeled "anti"; "Lies about Joseph Smith," facing a rock wall labeled "L. D. S. argument" with these words "Hard to get around" and later the same preacher hiding behind a lot of "anti" trash. Bro. Moler also used a wheel chart representing the true church of Christ, and one representing the so-called church of Christ, represented by Tant. These with the picture of Thomas Campbell baptizing his first converts who had waded out to their ebbs, while he climbed out on a limb or root and ducked their heads under the water. Elder Tant could not gracefully stand defeat and gave vent to his feeling by heaping a tirade of abuse on Bro. Moler's head thus plainly showing his utter defeat, evidently hoping to make Bro. Moler mad. Bro. Moler informed him that he was not in the least offended at him, but just considered it was the best he could do as he could not meet his argument and that he felt ashamed for him. Bro. Moler thanked God that he was too much of a gentleman to retaliate.

At the close of the debate two fine ladies demanded baptism one of them exclaiming that the gospel shone brighter than ever. Bro. Moler baptized them the same afternoon. They live in the neighborhood where the debate was held. Others are almost persuaded and friends were made for the cause of truth.

We left Bro. Moler and Shupe to hold forth a few days on the battle ground by the kindly invitation of the people of the neighborhood and with the consent of Mr. Brown of the Christian faith who furnished the ground for the tent (he is a fine old gentleman and a friend to all lovers of truth) while the writer departed for Bethel church to hold some meetings Bro. Jesse Roberts also attended the debate and rendered valuable assistance. He is one of our young missionaries. We left him in Paris he expecting to start home in a few day. The writer is now holding forth on the old battle ground in Marshall Co., Kentucky.

This is where the White and Braden debate was held several years ago, and also later a mob shot into the arbor where Bro. Smith and Field were holding forth to a large crowd one shot taking effect. I am glad to say that the old mob spirit has died out and we can now hold forth without fear of being molested and more calls for preaching than we can fill. Hopefully yours in the conflict.

Benton, Ky., Dec. 13, 1912.

According to news reports Turkey has acceded to the demands of the allies, and agrees to give up practically all of her territory in Europe, reserving but a small part adjacent to Constantinople, thus bringing the war to a close. It yet remains for the allies, comprising Bulgaria, Serbia, Greece, and Montenegro to adjust the division of the conquered territory. The same spirit of greed is found among nations as is sometimes seen in individuals, which renders a peaceful settlement as yet uncertain.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

GOD'S PURPOSE IN US.

BY ELDER G. E. HARRINGTON.

Delivered at the funeral of St. Nora L. DeBerry, at Independence, Mo., November 26, 1912.

The speaker read the seventeenth chapter of John, and took for a text the sixth verse of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, as follows:

"But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

This is a time for serious thinking. If there is a time when our minds are drawn to matters that are serious, it is under such circumstances as these. Naturally we think of what was the object in the creation of ourselves. What have we gained by living? What will be the end of life, or what is our destiny to be? We have reached a conclusion through the many testimonies that have been given to us personally, and from others who have lived in the past, that we were created by God for a glorious destiny, and that we may reach that destiny our heavenly Father has prepared for us a means. This means can be understood and applied by us so that the purpose of the divine One need not be frustrated. We have the privilege given us of an association, of a power that is divine, that will aid us in executing the divine purpose in our lives here, that would qualify us, and give to us the assurance of a welcome entrance into the condition of glory that lies beyond. We have exercised ourselves by reason of the many obligations that we find have been imposed upon us by the divine hand, and when we think over our past, as we are likely to do under such circumstances as these, our reviewing will perhaps reveal to us a disobedient spirit; many things that will cause us some measure of regret and discouragement, and it is well that we are thus exercised under such circumstances, so that the soul, searching into itself, may realize the attitude that it has assumed towards God, its Creator, and the attitude which it should have assumed.

When we realize, in the examination of our lives, that we have departed from the way of God, having failed to perform the work that has been required of us, the tendency is to an awakening of our spiritual natures to the proper state, and there will arise a disposition for repentance, for returning to God, and if we have never sought him before, nor felt the necessity of divine help; nor given him the praise and worship that should have been given, we would most likely, under such conditions, be drawn to God, because we are made aware of the fact that the divine purpose in creating us, putting us here, giving us the many pleasures that there are for us, was an expression of the divine love. At the same time, giving us to understand that beyond this vale of sorrow and of tears, there is a beautiful place that is being prepared for us over yonder.

While we look forward to a place beyond, our minds are also drawn to the statement made by Christ that "If I go and prepare a place for you I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am ye may be also."—John 14:3.

We learn through the revelation given to us by the Prophet John on the Isle of Patmos that there is to be a reassembling of the spirits of mankind upon the earth; their bodies are to be raised and come forth to reign with Christ upon the earth for a thousand years. There is no doubt then, that the design of God in our creation was to bring us to glory; and the beloved Apostle Paul gives us clearly to understand that there is a higher sphere,—a spiritual realm, which we might be in, if we choose to abide by the blessed gospel of Jesus Christ, and allow it to perform its work of development upon our souls. We have a destiny that is glorious, and while we are harassed at times, while we are burdened at times, while we have many difficult problems to solve, while the sorrows of earth-life, and the struggles are sometimes intense, yet, with all of these there is a breaking in upon the souls of the children of God a light, enabling us to see the loving design of God concerning us. It is such a light as will enable us to reach a state of mind and spirit that will be marvellous to us in its expression of glory and happiness. These are the things that the attention of our minds is called to. These are the things that are provided for us by the great I AM.

Shall we love him? Shall we serve him? Shall we be willing to suffer? We have the blessed Savior as an example of the disposition to endure trial, to be smitten and not revile, to carry the burden of our sin without murmuring, to carry our sorrows, and struggle as he did against perverse natures who were seeking to destroy him. Through this trying and difficult pathway, our Master traveled, and bore the sorrows and trials, and toils that he might bring into the souls of men the light of God, that they might understand the love of God, and realize that though they have the sorrows and distresses of life, God has planned better things for them than are to be experienced in this life.

While men suffered in consequence of their own transgression many undesirable experiences, Christ himself was willing to pass through these things for our sake, yet keeping himself from sin thus demonstrating to us the possibility of our living in a condition of acceptability to God through them all,—that it was possible for us to endure all the trials and still maintain the standard of righteousness set before us by him, and be fitted to dwell with him when he shall come again.

God so loved the world that he sent him for us, to be a Leader, a Witness, and a Commander. He sent him to us to show us how we ought to live,—how we could live. He sent him to us that we might have a revelation of the nature of God; that we might, by seeing a reflection of God, be so influenced by that exalted nature, that we might take on the same nature.

Jesus prayed that his disciples might be one even as he and his Father were one, that they all might be one. That is the purpose of Jesus Christ, to bring about this oneness. That is the thought he seeks to impress upon our minds, that we shall be one; that by becoming one we may ultimately dwell with God. To become one we must necessarily understand how, and the principles which Christ advocated are the means of bringing us to that oneness if we live by them. Jesus not only taught them but exhibited them in his life, thereby reflecting the character of his Father.

What are we going to do in our lives here? What are we going to make our paramount thought and purpose? How are we going to meet the conditions and demands here? We must needs study the nature of the Christ who left the shining courts of glory in our interests. He who refused the offer of the adversary of the glory of this world, that by becoming subject to the things of this world, he might enter into the glory of his Father. He denied himself the pleasures, the honor, the power and glory of this world that he might help us, and bring us also to receive the glory of the Father.

It seems strange that God and Jesus Christ, this Son, should create man and then that Christ should come down and make himself lower than the creatures he had made and submit to humiliation at their hands even to the point of death. Yes! they spat upon him; they put upon him the crown of thorns; they chided him; they mocked him;—all of these things were done, but there was a power and strength within him which enabled him to demonstrate what man could do under the most trying circumstances. Jesus was Master. He was above the influences that opposed him, yet submitted to them in a measure, thus exhibiting the higher qualities of character, and especially self-control which his enemies did not have. He was not controlled by those evil powers, nor could they compel him to do anything that was wrong. They could not draw from him any expression of anger, spite, malice, or anything of that kind. No, his character was such and he had such control of his own nature, that the influence of evil could not bring from him any expression but that of love. We see the revelation of that after they had done everything they possibly could to him. They had put him on the cross; and in his dying breath he utters: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." What boundless love. The Son of God, submitting to the passions of wicked men, and when they had done all that they could do, his soul is still filled with love for them. They were ignorant and did not understand all they were doing, and our failure to understand causes us to do many things that are wrong. They were not able to penetrate the future and see the results of their acts, but Christ saw the results. They hurt him physically, but they tarnished not his soul, but they injured their souls: they brought upon themselves disaster and sorrow.

The love of God does not take away all suffering and trial, for it is necessary that men should suffer for their sins in order to be led to repentance.

If men could have perpetual joy in sin they would continue doing wrong, but the justice of God requires that his law shall have a penalty attached, so that when men violate it they will suffer the penalty and thereby be led to turn from the evil. So when these people sinned against Christ they brought upon themselves suffering, but the love of God was still extended to them and he was willing to work for their deliverance. Suffering is very often necessary with us to show us wherein we are out of harmony with God and to help us to repentance, for if we are to be saved, and if we are to receive the benefits of this matchless love of God, it will be because we have learned that our natures are out of harmony with him, and that we must work to bring them into harmony with his nature, and become altogether acceptable to him.

We sometimes complain of the difficulties and trials that come to us in life, and resist unconsciously the leadings of God's providences; we feel the sting of seeming injustice when our loved ones are taken from us, but in all that God does there is manifested his wonderful love and mercy; in the midst of trial he bears up those who look to him; when we resist his leadings because of our ignorance, he still leads us gently by the hand and teaches us how to follow; and even when our loved ones are taken from us, he fills with comfort and hope those who trust in him. We can afford to put our trust in him under all the circumstances which arise in life.

It is not wrong to sorrow for those who die, for the Lord has said: "Thou shalt live together in love, inasmuch that thou shalt weep for the loss of them that die, and more especially for those that have not hope of a glorious resurrection." It is not wrong to weep with those that weep, and mourn with those that mourn, but human sympathy leads us to help bear the burdens of another, and to extend sympathy and love. All the experiences of our lives may work to bring to us some greater good, and contribute to our development and perfection. But it depends very largely upon the attitude which we assume toward our trials and sorrows, for it is possible that by a wrong attitude we may cause these things to work to our detriment. If we recognize that there is a God in heaven, and that Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of the world, and that they are seeking the welfare and good of man, we can hardly think that God would permit anything to come upon us that would do us permanent injury, unless it is by our own voluntary act.

When this life is past and we can look back upon it, we shall no doubt see that all these experiences have been for our good, and that every one has had its influence in moulding, and changing our natures, and has contributed to our education and our character, and that through them all we have been brought nearer to God.

Our sister who has passed away has set us a beautiful example of faithfulness and patience, for up to her dying hour she remained firm in the faith, and manifested her love for God. She wanted to live to raise her boys and to be with those with whom she had been associated, but her prayer was, "I am willing to live, I am willing to go. Thou art full of wisdom and love and I am ready to abide thy divine will. Consequently, here I am, my heavenly Father, for the fulfillment of thy purpose concerning me."

When our loved ones have suffered without relief, it seems to manifest a degree of selfishness for us to desire to keep them here under those conditions. When we know that it is better for the suffering one to depart and be free from the trials and sufferings of this mortal life, it is better for us to say, "Thy will, O Lord, be done," and be willing to let them depart in peace. To part with loved ones is always a trial which causes sorrow and mourning, but let us not forget that Jesus left his Father to come to this sinful world. And again when his time had come to drink the bitter cup and suffer on the cross, he had to part with his own mother and leave her to the care of others. He parted with his beloved disciples and all that had become precious to him in this world, but not forever. He said "I will come again and receive you unto myself . . . that where I am ye may be also." While his separation from those whom he loved was but temporary, so is ours. The time will come when we too will pass over to be with those who have passed on before, and we shall all be reunited, those who are worthy of a place with Christ, and there will be no more separation.

So in the midst of our trials and sorrows we have hope, and that hope lightens our burdens and gives us joy. May God bless you and support you, and keep you every moment close to him that you may finally have the privilege of this glorious reunion with all the dear ones who have left you for a time.

A MYSTERY.

"Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15:51-52.

From the above quotation the religious world believes that at Christ's coming, all who are Christ's will be changed to an immortal condition. But such a position conflicts with the remainder of the scriptures, so that it is well to consider this question: Will we all be changed at the Master's coming, to an immortal state?

Remember that Paul does not take that position, but to shew that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. So as all will not sleep, they must all be changed. So they have concluded that it would be at Jesus coming but Paul says at the sounding of the last trump. For at Jesus coming there will be a trump sounded and the dead in Christ shall rise first. 1 Thess. 4:16. Then according to Doctrine and Covenants 85:28 there is a second trump to sound for them of the moon glory, and still a third trump. So the last trump must sound for the last resurrection.

We have the following in Doctrine and Covenants 43:7: "And my people shall be redeemed and shall reign with me on earth; for the great millennial, which I have spoken by the mouth of my servants, shall come; for Satan shall be bound; and when he is loosed again, he shall only reign for a little season, and then cometh the end of the earth; and he that liveth in righteousness, shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye."

By the above it will be seen that the great change will come at the end of the earth. At Jesus coming there will only be a partial change. For after his coming all that are permitted to live will live to be a hundred years old. Isaiah 65:20; and then the change will come.

"Yea, and blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth when the Lord shall come, and old things shall pass away, and all things become new. They shall rise from the dead and shall not die after and shall receive an inheritance before the Lord, in the Holy City, and he that liveth when the Lord shall come, and has kept the faith, blessed is he: nevertheless it is appointed to him to die at the age of man; wherefore children shall grow up until they become old, old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye." Doctrine and Covenants 63:13

Thus we see that Isaiah 65:20 shows us the age of man, and all that are a hundred years old at Christ's coming will be changed. From 3d Nephi 13: 6, in the Book of Mormon we see that John and the three Nephites will be changed when Christ comes in his glory. So at Jesus coming all of the people will not be changed, for the earth is to be peopled during the thousand years reign, and if all were to be changed to immortality how could the word of the Lord be fulfilled for Jesus says in the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage but are as the angels of heaven. (Luke 20, 35 and 36.)

So then during the thousand years some must be given in marriage for in Isaiah 65:17-23, we are informed that in the new earth they will build houses and inhabit them, and plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them, and they shall not labor in vain nor bring forth for trouble, for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them. Here the blessed seed of the Lord are none other than those born again not of corruptible seed but of incorruptible by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever. 1 Peter 1:23. These are none other than the Saints of God. So those who are the blessed seed of the Lord have offspring, their children.

We also invite you to Isaiah 11:4-9, which states that when righteousness shall prevail and the wolf and the lamb shall dwell together is when the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den. So here we have the sucking child mentioned and also the one that is old enough to be weaned. So to more fully understand that this is the meaning of the prophesy we quote, Doctrine and Covenants 45:10, and at that day when I shall come in my glory, shall the parable be fulfilled which I spake concerning the ten virgins; for they that are wise and have received the truth, and have taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, and have not been deceived, verily I say unto you. They shall not be hewn down and cast into the fire, but shall abide the day, and the earth shall be given unto them for an inheritance; and they shall multiply and wax strong, and their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation, for the Lord shall be in their midst and his glory shall be upon them, and he will be their king and their lawgiver."

So in the above it is quite plain that the Lord will be in their midst when they will multiply and wax strong in righteousness and grow up without sin unto salvation. So all the change that will be wrought upon the Saints at the Lord's coming will be the setting apart to a higher and nobler condition, with power over death until they arrive to a hundred years of age, and then changed to immortality and at the end of the thousand years all that are living in righteousness shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye, Doctrine and Covenants 43:7. J. F. PETRE.

APOSTROPHE TO THE HOME.

Sacred, time-honored, divinely-appointed home! The dwelling place of the family, God's first institution among men. The sweet retreat where two lives are lived as one. Where eyes meet that speak, and hearts meet that thrill again. Where immortal souls first beheld the blaze of day and, anon, childhood's merry laughter makes music sweeter than songs of birds in Paradise. Where father, mother, sister, brother, divide their joys and loves, and the fires go not out upon family altars, whereon Jehovah was worshipped before the Church was born.

Legalized, enduring, permanent home! Owned in fee as homes have been owned in every civilized nation since time began; owned as the old prophet possessed the abode to which the Syrian leper came; as Cincinnatus owned the field in which he plowed when the the Romans called him to save again his country from the advancing foe; as Jefferson owned Monticello, where Americans come to pay their vows; as Washington possessed Mount Vernon, where soldiers repair to fire afresh their valor; as the Greek all down the centuries have owned their abodes beside the silvery lakes, or the Swiss, their cottages on the Alpine heights; as men have owned their homes in the valleys, on the hill-tops and by the rivers in every clime beneath the stars; as Mary and Martha and Lazarus possessed their humble but permanent abode at Bethany, where the Son of God was always so welcome; as that abiding place was possessed described by Jesus in that most marvelous of his parables and to which the prodigal son returned after years of wandering and his father ran to meet him; as that abode was owned which the Savior had in mind when hanging on the cross he looked down and saw his mother and that disciple whom he loved standing by and said to his mother: "Woman behold thy son!" and then to the disciple, "Behold thy mother!" "And from that hour that disciple took her to his home now."

Beauteous, happy, enchanting home! Where business din and strife and hurly-burly must not come. Where Eos, goddess of the morn, drives her horses by break of day, strewing flowers as she goes, when the stars have gone out, the whip-poor-will has hushed, the sunbeams are dancing in the skies, and the lark is singing in the meadow. Where the yellow light is streaming through the great elms and oaks and walnuts. Where the apple, the peach, and the pear hang in luscious beauty side by side, the dew on the watermelon and the aroma is coming from the pomegranate. Where, ere long, the sun in his fiery chariot is about to cross the horizon: father calls; prayers are over; breakfast is eaten, and the boys go whistling to the field; the bobwhite answers; the black-birds follow in the furrow. Where the old white dwelling with its green window shutters nestles down midst the evergreens, the lilacs and the roses, while the ivy climbs up its sides, and the humming bird flutters in the honeysuckles. Where within is the clean swept floor, the bounteous table and the arched fireplace. Where rosy-cheeked childhood is sleeping in the cradle, venerable age sits in the old armed chair, and "God bless our home" hangs over the mantle.

Quiet, peaceful, restful home! The day is done. The summer clouds are clustered in the West, and the sun has just lain him down in his golden couch. The cows come lowing homeward over the hill. Father and the boys have returned from the field. They drink from the gourd at the spring or the oaken bucket that hangs in the well. The evening meal is such as only mother can prepare. Night has come. The pale moon rises slowly and hangs silent in the sky. All nature is locked in the holy hush. Naught is heard save the notes of the night-ingale or now and then the jingle of the sheep bell in the fold. It is autumn. The chill of night is on, and the family is assembled about the open fire with its dancing flames. Brightness is in every eye. Cheer is in every breast. Love is in every heart. Seriousness takes its turn with merry laughter. Ere long Morpheus calls to sleep. A chapter is read from the well-worn Bible. Hark! they are singing: the eldest daughter is leading—

"Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble there's no place like home,
A charm from the skies seems to hallow us there,
Which seek through the world is ne'er met with elsewhere.
Home! Home! Sweet, Sweet Home!
There's no place like Home! There's no place like Home!"

Hush! they are on their knees in prayer. Silver-haired grandfather is leading: "O thou God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob! Thou God of the family! We thank thee for this home, sweet reminder of our eternal home beyond the skies. In the strength of young manhood and under thy protecting Providence I carved it out of the wilderness. With my hands I built the house in which we kneel Thou knowest that my companion, who now sleeps in the churchyard, did her part, and sanctified it with her pure and lofty life. May this home long remain the inheritance of our children and our children's children. If any go out as thy servant who now speaks to Thee did, not knowing whither they go, may Thy hand lead them and bring them to a Christian home. And in the morning of the resurrection, through the atoning blood of Jesus Christ, thy divine Son, may we all without loss of one be reunited as a family in our Home on High,—there, ever and anon, to join in the hallelujahs of Angels and of those "who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Amen.

Precious, hallowed, consecrated home! Blessed be the God who ordained it. And all the curses which the bard had Eve to shower upon Cain when he slew his brother, Abel, rest upon the head of him who would destroy.—Judge Wm. H. Wallace in The Citizen.

HARMONY.

Just a moment. You desire the best there is in spiritual things, don't you? Of course you do, every desire of your inmost soul is that you may achieve spiritual excellence that you may climb by sure processes up to God. Then listen—There is a way, a sure way to climb. It is no secret, in fact it is so plain that most of the people are passing by every day and hour and don't see it. It is right at hand. It does not cost anything in dollars; the poor may obtain it, the rich may have it, but my brother it must be obtained in God's way. Strange isn't it, that God's way is different than our way? We like to be independent, and it is right to be independent enough to love the truth, be truthful to acknowledge God and humble enough to recognize in him the Master Mind. That is the secret.

When we recognize the Master Mind, God, as he is represented by Jesus Christ we see love personified, humbleness achieved, and the key of power uncovered from the dust of ages. Jesus was powerful in his submission: He became the Christ because he was willing to sacrifice to do. The world is at enmity with God. Don't be of the world, brother, the world will perish, but you must live forever. How? In harmony with the Master Mind, or out of harmony? You know how disagreeable music is that is not harmonious to the sensitive soul. How would it be in eternity when one would be out of harmony with the great power, the power that is felt, surging, filling, enlightening, purifying? Get in harmony, brother. Harmony in music is as old as the world. Harmony in gospel law is older. The pearl of great price is just in front of you, don't you see it shining there through the words of Jesus Christ? Ye must be born again. Born of the water and of the Spirit. Easy isn't it? Getting in harmony with God? A note out of place spoils the music. So we must repent of evil and turn away from it. Good to turn away from the thing that is destroying us soul and body? Born again—To understand a people we must live among them, think as they do, feel as they do. God is a spirit—has a spiritual body—we must be born of the spirit to understand him, and to enjoy his work. God loves his children, but his children must love one another. So God makes man a minister to and for man and gives the Holy Spirit to those who repent and are baptized using ministers selected or called by his own will to lay their hand upon the heads of those who are now ready to receive. God's way,—The Bible way. Get in harmony, brother.

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

IDENTITY OF THE AMERICAN INDIAN.

It is set down in the book of Esdras, in the Apocrypha of the Bible, that ten of the tribes of Israel journeyed northward one and a half years into a far country, where they might live up to their commandments, something they had not always done in the land of Palestine: that they were lost track of at the end of that time and nothing has been heard from them since. They sent back no word or message to their former companions and friends, and where they went and what was their ultimate fate has been left to blind conjecture from that day to this.

The theory that the ten lost tribes of Israel, after leaving their own country, finally landed on the shores of America and established themselves here is not a new one. It found lodgment in the mind of Lord Kingsborough, and has been advanced by many others since his day. Neither the adherence to a religious creed nor even a belief in the divine authenticity of the Bible is essential to the discussion of this most interesting question.

In the books that comprise what is known as the old Bible ancient authors wrote exhaustively of the experiences, both physical and spiritual, of their people. They gave their account of the creation of the earth, the fall of man, the flood, the Tower of Babel and many other unique things which they regarded as the direct dealings of God with them and their patriarchs and the first man.

If the ancient inhabitants of America were known to have been in possession of legends that coincided almost exactly with those of the ancient Hebrews as related in the Bible, is it not fair and logical to assume that the former, at some time or another, by some means or other, were in touch with the progenitors of the Jewish people or were a branch of that great people? Have the discoveries of explorers and American archaeologists solved the mystery? Do the ancient records found in the ruins of Mexico, Central and South America and in many parts of the United States answer the question as to the lost tribes of Israel? I think they do.

Before taking up the more serious evidences that point to the Hebraic origin of the ancient Americans let me call the reader's attention to the physical features of the American Indian. His countenance has the indelible mark of the Jewish race. The high cheek bones, the high arched nose and the slanting brow are unmistakable marks of his Hebrew descent, a curse having in all probability fallen upon the Indian as upon the descendants of Ham. I merely mention this in passing, and would not pretend to advance it as an argument in support of my contention. If it were not sustained by many others and more trustworthy evidences.

There were twelve tribes that made up the original number of Israelitish nations. And when they made sacrifices they made them on an altar built of twelve stones that had not been broken by any instrument. Priest, in his volume on "American Antiquities," declares that he encountered ample evidence to show that many of the tribes in Mexico and Central America offered up sacrifices on altars made of twelve unhewn stones, and that the sacrificial form and ceremony were identical with those of the ancient Hebrews. Most of the Indian tribes still have the ancient Hebrew way of reckoning time as is depicted upon the famous Aztec calendar stone.

On the authority of Dr. Le Plongeon, the eminent archaeologist, who spent eight years in Yucatan, assiduously studying the ancient ruins of that country, even the barbaric Toltecs left undeniable evidences that they were perfectly conversant with the Biblical history of the creation and of the garden of Eden, and, of course, the two illustrious personages who inhabited it.

In the ruins of Copan Dr. Le Plongeon discovered a crude painting representing a woman seated beneath a tree and a serpent entwined around the base of it. In the passage of the years their version of the celebrated temptation of the mother of the race took on a more poetic form than the one contained in the Bible. The Toltecs had it that the woman—"Suchiquecal" they called her—plucked a forbidden rose from a tree and by that act brought death upon the human family.

These same Toltecs had the legend of the Tower of Babel. Their version of it did not vary from that of the Bible in any essential feature. They understood that this tower was built for a refuge in the event of another deluge. This, of course, also indicates their familiarity with the Biblical story of the deluge. They even had the particulars.

Their legend speaks to the man who built a boat from a fir tree and that after the flood had subsided he became intoxicated on wine and allowed one of his sons to disgrace him.

As late as 1819 the Shawnee Indians, according to Black Hoop, one of their chiefs, had a tradition that their forefathers had come to this country across a great body of water, and up until the latter part of the eighteenth century they made an annual sacrifice to celebrate in thank offering their safe arrival to this land.

In his "History of the Indians" Camara publishes a statement made by several of the early missionaries telling of their experiences with an old chief of a Nicaraguan tribe. They discovered in their conversation with an old Indian that he was as conversant with the Biblical version of the creation, the fall, the deluge, and other notable experiences of the ancient Hebrews as were the missionaries themselves.

If one is sufficiently interested in this subject to go into it deeper and more thoroughly than I can take him in the small space at my disposal, let him read Paul de Roo's work on "Mexican Antiquities."

These authors clearly established that the Aztecs were familiar with Hebrew history as contained in the Bible. And their man named Zelua led a colony across a great body of land and then of water to the New World. About the only feature of the new county from which this colony came that remained in the Aztec tradition was that a high temple had been built in it.

By the time of which De Roo writes the Aztecs had lost the connection between the country from which their ancestors came and legend of the Garden of Eden, the flood and the Tower of Babel. They supposed those things happened in the new country.

The Aztecs have left the most interesting ruins prehaps of any nation that flourished in America in the far past. But I have no doubt that in the near future the many buried cities and others submerged under the sea, recently discovered off the coast of Yucatan, with their records and histories, will have been unearthed and that the true origin of America's ancient races will be made known by the discovery of some key to their hieroglyphics, an Aztec "Rosetta Stone."

These people committed the record of their travels and subsequent history in America to painting. These paintings have been gathered, or at least most of them have, and are contained in the Boturini collection and published by Cameth Careri and others.

Here we have, in these paintings, almost unimpeachable evidences of the fact that, so far as the Aztecs were concerned, they knew all about the Biblical version of the creation of those other incidents of which I have spoken. All these records were made hundreds of years before Columbus was born.

All Americans should take active interest in the history of their country and of all the races that have ever inhabited it. As I said before, it does not matter what one's religious belief is, or his lack of a belief, the subject is one that should interest all, purely for scientific and historic reasons if for no other.

If it can be established so clearly as to leave no room for doubt that a great branch of the ancient Hebrew race came to America and are really the progenitors of the Indian tribes, it would be a discovery of tremendous importance.

To my mind, the Hebrew origin of the Indian is already established.

Ever since I can remember I have had a great curiosity to know about the ancient people of America. And there was one race that captivated my imagination. This was the Aztecs. I read everything I could get my hands on that dealt with them in any way, and the more I read and investigated their history, the more impressed I became with their essentially dramatic characteristics.—Inter Ocean.

FOR THE BOY'S SAKE.

A Sunday-school Superintendent made the following confession at a County Sunday-school convention:

"I used to smoke. It was a pleasure that I thought did no harm to me or anyone else, and I believed I had a right to the enjoyment. Then one day I stopped. Here is the reason:

"A widowed woman, the mother of two lively boys in my school, hurried into my store one morning, walked straight up to me, and handed me a handful of cigarettes. I stared, and she explained: 'They dropped out of Joe's and Billy's pockets a little while ago, when I was mending their clothes. When I asked what cigarettes in their pockets meant, they both owned up to liking cigarettes, and smoking them whenever they got a chance. I talked to them about the hurt it would do them, and what do you think they said? They told me they didn't mean to keep on with cigarettes always. As soon as they grew bigger and could earn money, and afford it, they would change from cigarettes to cigars. "And cigars are all right," said my boys. "Good men smoke cigars—lots of them. Why ma, Mr. Wilson, our superintendent, smokes cigars; and Mr. Wilson's sure a good man, ain't he?"

"Mr. Wilson, went on the mother, 'I'm doing my best trying to train my two fatherless boys to be good men, and you've helped me many a time by the good teaching you've given them as their superintendent. They trust you and admire you, and think that it's all right for them to smoke if a good man like you smokes. Now I don't want my boys to smoke cigarettes; but when I talk that way to them, they point to your smoking as if that settled the matter. I don't know what to say or do; but it seemed best to come over and tell you plainly how it was. I feel sure you want to help, and not to hinder, every boy in your school; and I believe you would be willing to teach them by your example, as you are to teach them by your good words."

"Well, I was wanting a smoke at that minute; but the thought of that mother trying to grow two boys into good men, and being hindered by any habit of mine, settled the thing. The cigar box that stood handy went into the stove. "Tell Joe and Billy," I said, "that Mr. Wilson has quit smoking." And quit smoking I did. Since that day no boy has been able to point to my example as his excuse for smoking cigarettes or anything else."—Sunday School Times.

SNOBBERY OR EQUALITY.

Not long ago we had occasion to gather a few young women together for the purpose of furnishing one number on a program and were met with an instance of this snobbery that exists among our young people and we happen to know from former experiences of our own that it exists also among the children to a very marked degree—to a nauseating degree we should say. When "calling up" the girls each one asked this question: "Who else is going to be in it?" Upon learning it was "so and so" their reply was, "well, if they will I will, but if they don't I won't." In this particular case the girl had agreed to take part, perhaps because of others who had promised, but on meeting for rehearsal, and finding others in their place, withdrew.

Now, it was not the withdrawal of this young lady for which we cared, for her place was well filled by another; it was the way in which it was done, (the spirit we might say) and why it was done, or the implication involved—the result, however, proved that her fears of being compromised were groundless, and the result of her own effort upon that occasion was not such as to justify her "high and mighty attitude."

If this were exceptional it would be hardly worth mentioning, but it is not, and it is a matter of wonderment where our idea of "Equality" (that grand feeling of unity that is to redeem our Zion) is coming from let alone any practical working out of the idea; it is certainly not growing up with our children, or, not as much as might be, is it resident in our young people.

This "snobbery" is in our day school, rampant, which tide we cannot so well stem, but, alas and alack! it is in our Sunday school as well. The other day a mother said to me; "my little girl came home crying today because the other girls in her class were taunting her with the fact that she could not bring her contribution toward a gold locket for the teacher. This child's mother is a widow. A gold locket, indeed, and this among children of seven and eight. The teacher needed more, a few gold nuggets of wisdom to adorn the locket, rather than a gold locket for the outside—and no telling what the mothers of these children needed.

The spirit of giving? There was no real spirit of giving in this deal; it was the spirit of pandering to a new and false standard, in which "snobbery" and "todyism" are the chief elements.

And so we are doing from our childhood up, more and more—setting, or at the least complying with the demands of a standard which has been set by others, that well dressing and well appearing are the things best worth our while; that nothing else counts if it have not this accompaniment; "the outer show"; not the outer show of the inward grace, but the outer show of what is good enough for you is not good enough for me; the show of the strut, the swagger, and the smirk on the face, that one sees in the mein of the children now—always—too nice, indeed to speak to their elders, until we can think of true equality as an elusive and ever-vanishing myth, driven from our Eden of democracy by the angel (or demon?) of the flaming sword—Pride.

Some time ago, another mother—(of four) said: "It is all I can do to keep Mary in school, if she wears a last year's hat or a made over dress, she is taunted and actually isolated from other children; one has no idea with what poor children have to contend in our schools unless one has the experience in sending them, nor through them how hard it is for their parents. And so it goes, not the exception, but the rule until one would almost wish for a rule governing dress in the public schools, so as to eliminate at least one source of the evil.

But it is not only "dress" that separates us from others of our kind, it is—"woe is me"—it is gifts. We are endowed, perhaps, with a gift. Henceforth we are "different,"—the selected, we have found our niche—in which, like the Zormanite, we take our "holy stand," and cry, "we are not as others." We forget from whence the gift has come and exalt "self" with it, and have not one hundredth part of an idea as the real grandeur and nobility in that word "service" nor of the grand ennobling humility upon which this service depends. It is for this that gifts are given and for the solving of the problem of equality, and when ever we abort its use to self in any way—we have crippled our powers, we will not achieve a high purpose, and have become votary to the false god—Pride.

MARRIAGES.

FENN-LEE.—At the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. A. Lee, Independence, Mo., December 24th; Mr. Earl B. Fenn and Sr. Mae M. Lee, Elder A. V. Closson officiating.

DIED.

DEBERRY.—Nora L. Deberry died at Independence, Mo., Nov. 24th. She was born Oct. 12, 1869 at Linn Creek, Mo.; married to Thomas C. DeBerry in 1887. She became a member of the church in 1890, being baptized by John Davis and confirmed by J. C. Clapp, living a faithful life and bearing testimony to the goodness of God. She leaves husband, two sons and two daughters, one having preceded her to the better land. Services at South Side church, the sermon being by G. E. Harrington.

ROBERTS.—Hannah Raynor Roberts was born April 18, 1852, at Oldham, England. After coming to America she heard the latter-day message, and was baptized at Highland Lake, Mass., July 28, 1907, by H. W. Howlett, and was confirmed under the hands of U. W. Green and John Zimmerman. She died Dec. 4, 1912. Services at the church in Fall River, Mass., in charge of, and sermon preached by H. O. Smith. She had a large circle of friends who followed her to the grave, and who testified of her goodness. It will be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

Her husband preceded her to the spirit land. She never had any children of her own, but she filled the place in her mother heart by adopting the children of others, to whom she was a good, kind and faithful mother, one of them being the chief mourner at the services.

WATKINS.—Pearlie Louise, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Neal Watkins was born March 12, 1911, near Milton, Fla., died Sept. 5, 1912, making her one year, five months and seventeen days old, leaving father, mother and many relatives to mourn her death. Funeral in charge of Elder A. G. Miller.

JAMES.—At St. Louis, Mo., Wednesday, Dec. 5, 1912, Sr. Mabel Edith James. She was born at Allison, Ontario, Sept. 23, 1876, and married in Kansas City, Mo., March 6, 1896, to Mr. Frank James. United with the church in the year 1888, Elder F. C. Warnky officiating in baptismal rite. Her husband, one child, a daughter, one brother and one sister are her near surviving relatives. Funeral services conducted at the home of her brother, Bro. Joseph Mooney, in Maywood, by Elder M. H. Bond. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

SCOTT.—Marian Ellen Baggerly was born Dec. 29, 1829, in Clark Co., Indiana. At the age nineteen she was married to John A. Scott a musical professor and school teacher of more than local reputation and afterward a minister of the Latter Day Saints. To them were born six children.—Elder Columbus Scott of Lamoni, Iowa, Mrs. Lizzie Fisher of Centralia, Wash., Mrs. A. D. Thompson of Alexander, Kas., Mrs. Lee Sinclair of Coldwater, Mich., Elder S. W. L. Scott also Coldwater, and Cynthia O., who preceded her to the beautiful beyond. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church in the seventies by Elder W. W. Blair. She died at Coldwater, Mich., Dec. 7, 1912. Funeral services in charge of Elder Samuel Strobl.

BAILEY.—On Oct. 24, 1912, at Eldorado Springs, Mo., Velma Alberta, infant daughter of Bro. Bert and Sr. Gertrude Bailey, aged three months and nine days. Funeral services in charge of W. E. Reynolds assisted by Abner Lloyd.

SINGLETON.—Bro. Melvin Singleton died Nov. 16th of spinal meningitis at the general hospital at Kansas City, aged fifteen years. No funeral service could be held except at the grave in the cemetery at Independence where Bro. J. A. Tanner was in charge. The family is greatly bereaved and need the prayers of the Saints.

HERRICK.—George H. Herrick was born Aug. 2, 1870, in Montrose, Iowa; died Dec. 8, 1912, at Ft. Madison, Iowa, of tuberculosis. Married Miss Lenore Lambert Aug. 2, 1891. Twelve children were born to their union, three preceding him to the paradise of rest. He was baptized 1886 by H. C. Bronson. He leaves wife, nine children, father, one brother and three sisters. Funeral at the Saints' Church, sermon by C. C. Joenk, prayer by Bro. C. E. Harpa.

BRYAN.—Mary Frances Bryan was born in Holt County, Missouri, March 4, 1876. Was married to Richard Davis, Jan. 3, 1894. To this union one child was born, Theresa, who survives her mother. Some two years ago she was again married to Mr. Bryan. There are left to mourn her daughter, father, mother, two sisters, and five brothers. Funeral services at the home of the deceased father at Warrensburg, Mo., Elder G. E. Harrington preaching the sermon assisted by Nels Abrahams.

STOFF.—Elmer Stoff was born March 13, 1884, in Omaha, Neb., died at the home of his mother in Omaha, Nov. 19, 1912, of diabetes. From this he had been a sufferer for many years, but always cheerful and patient. He passed away in the faith of the gospel which he embraced in 1897 at the hands of Elder W. A. Smith. He leaves to mourn one son about three years, mother, sister, and four brothers. He left a good reputation among those with whom he lived. His companion preceded him in death about one year. The funeral was from the home of his mother. Sermon by J. M. Baker, prayer by J. W. Wight, and the remains were laid to rest in Papillion cemetery by those of his wife.

WARE.—Bro. B. F. Ware at Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 13, 1912, of pneumonia. Born Nov. 1, 1852; in July 1883 he was married to Elizabeth A. Johnson to whom were born a son Oscar, and a daughter Anna; both were with him and cared for him during his sickness. He was baptized by Elder D. F. Winn, March 6, 1889, and loved to hear his testimony and speak of the beautiful gospel as restored again in our day. Funeral at the home of his son, Oscar. Sermon by F. C. Warnky assisted by C. L. Monroe.

MOORE.—James William Moore was born July 29, 1843, at Washington County, Ohio; baptized January 20, 1876, by J. C. Foss at Lebanon, Ohio. Was ordained teacher July 9, 1876, by Edmond Thomas; died Nov. 12, 1912. He served in the Civil war, and was a great sufferer during the latter part of his life and finally succumbed to the dreaded disease—asthma.

WALLACE.—Alexander F. Wallace was born May 8, 1843, at St. Johns, E. B., Canada; was baptized May 22, 1910, by Elder S. C. Good; died Dec. 5, 1912. Funeral services were held at the home, sermon preached by Elder D. E. Dowker to a goodly number of sympathizing Saints and friends.

WHEELER.—At Independence, Mo., Dec. 15, 1912, Bro. Christian Wheeler. Born Jan. 6, 1836, at Kentringen, Baden, Germany, coming to this country when seventeen years old. He married Miss Amanda Reed at Courtland, New York, who died March 2, 1874, leaving two sons, George, now of Vineland, Kas., and Curtis K., of Marshall, Minn., and two daughters, Mrs. Edith Lewis of Courtland, and Electa who died at Vineland, Kas., August 1905. February 25, 1876, he married Miss Fannie Rounseville, who survives him. He was ordained a priest Feb. 26, 1899, by Elders I. N. Roberts and J. W. Davis, and sought faithfully to discharge his duties. Funeral in charge of Bro. W. H. Garrett, George Jenkins and G. E. Harrington.

WHEELER.—Thomas F. Wheeler was born at Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 27, 1847, died at Independence, Mo., Dec. 14, 1912. He was married May 4, 1876 to Nancy A. Hill who survives him, three sons having died in childhood. He also leaves three brothers and two sisters. He was baptized Oct. 24, 1886, by Elder James G. Scott, ordained a priest Sept. 11, 1887. Funeral preached at the Stone Church by George Jenkins, from Revelation 14:13

THE CONSERVATION ON RURAL HEALTH.

This subject is elaborately treated upon in the Commoner by Mr. G. E. Condra, chairman of committee on rural sanitation and health, Lincoln, Neb. The article is especially adapted to conditions in small towns and upon the farms. M. Condra says that the country is not keeping pace with the cities in the matter of safeguarding the public health, and presumes too much upon its healthful conditions. He says:

The federal government is about to establish a department of public health. The new turn in conservation is in order and timely, for reliable authority places the number of dangerously sick persons in the United States at about 3,000,000 and the annual deaths at about 1,500,000 of which more than 600,000 are by disease nearly wholly preventable. The economic loss from negligence resulting in such a death rate represents a vast sum. Good authority has placed the national loss from preventable sickness, preventable death, and the necessary care demanded thereat at about two billion dollars a year. It is plainly evident that too many people are sick in the United States, causing such an expense and requiring so much time in the way of care and medical treatment.

The way to check a part of this loss of time and life is being found. Students of the subject say that sickness is reduced, the death rate decreased, and the average length of life prolonged about in proportion as individuals and the public practice the principles of personal hygiene and sanitation. So, it appears that the great need of this time is more definite and reliable knowledge of the cause and prevention of disease.

CAUSE OF DISEASE

Only a short time back in history law-giving, religious ceremony, and healing were practiced by one and the same individual. Then practically nothing was known of the cause, and consequently very little of the prevention and treatment of disease. During the past century, and the past twenty-five years especially, scientists have given much time to the investigation of diseases as produced by natural causes. The microscope made it possible to study the minute forms of life and determine their relations to higher life. Such investigation gave a new conception of many diseases, in which the cause is found to be in the lower forms of life, such as bacteria and minute animal parasites, that gain access to the body and feed upon it when and where conditions are favorable. Not all bacteria are of the disease-producing kind; in fact many of them do a beneficial work, especially in the field of agriculture. Most diseases that spread from person to person are said to be contagious because they are catching. Society finds it necessary to guard against the spread of such by the use of disinfectants, in which the germs are killed, and by quarantine, in which the sick are isolated for a safe period of time.

Though there are many disease-producing organisms, not all of them have been studied in detail. Certain ones are known to cause specific diseases such as cholera, yellow fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, chicken-pox, whooping-cough, tonsillitis, mumps, syphilis, tuberculosis, etc. Put in a simple way, it may be said that our bodies represent the soil or ground and the germs the seed, which, if it finds a suitable place to grow and multiply in the body, does so, thereby causing a particular kind of disease.

The following, if done, would assist in reducing the amount of sickness and death by contagious diseases:

- 1. Cleaning up the farmstead and thus destroying with the home of specific germs.
2. Preventing the spread of germs from host to host.
3. Increasing the resistance of the body to germ infection through proper attention to diet and elimination.

Mr. Condra goes on to show that the transmission of disease-producing organisms is mainly through air, water, food, and by insects, and under the head of Sanitary Water says:

Drinking water of the farmstead should be guarded with extreme care, for it may become the leading medium through which disease is carried to the body.

The leading thing to guard against in most wells is organic pollution from stumps, garbage, barnyards and privies. A better knowledge of the nature and source of well water would serve to show the cause of such pollution. It is stated, the rain water, except which has seeps into the ground and percolates down to the water table, and below this the subsoil is completely saturated, and the water moves slowly in the direction of the lower land, where it may come to the surface in the form of seepage or springs.

Disease is also spread by careless methods of using drinking water supplied from sanitary sources. Germs of the sick are carried to new hosts by drinking in common from buckets, dipper, cups, etc. Most communities have patients suffering from tuberculosis, and in the contact of their lips with the cup or other vessel is apt to leave germs thereon. The next person using the cup may receive the germs into his body. A knowledge of hygiene and sanitation should be sufficient to cause us to refuse to accept this risk or chance of becoming infected. The "old caken bucket" from which tramps and all others could drink to their mutual danger has no virtue.

On the subject of education along the lines of health conservation he quotes Dr. R. H. Wolcott, dean of the medical college of the University of Nebraska as follows:

"Not only should the people be taught personal hygiene and be made to understand the importance of keeping themselves clean, but they should be taught community hygiene, or sanitation, and made to understand the necessity of keeping the surroundings of the home and the community clean. Science has taught us not only that disease germs swarm in filth of all kinds, but that insects which abound about us are the means of transmitting those disease germs to us directly by bites or indirectly by transferring them to food or other objects we put into our mouths or bring in contact with our bodies. Flies breed in filth, carry filth, and disseminate the disease germs in filth. Mosquitoes transmit malaria as well as other diseases. The amount of malaria usually found in a new country is due to a lack of clearing of the land and deficient drainage of surface water. But ponds do not breed most of the mosquitoes which trouble us in our homes, for in ponds fish and other animals serve to keep down the numbers. On the contrary, they are mostly reared in rainwater barrels, in old cans and cans part-filled with water, in unused wells, and in other places about the house where, from the attack of enemies, they breed in swarms and develop in a few days after a rain or during rainy weather."

CHARLES FRY, EDITOR
W. H. DEAM, BUS. MANAGER

In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address, and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription.

In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is enclosed it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclose it in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to

FAILURE.

BY L. M. MONTGOMERY.

I would not count it failure if in vain
I strove with earnest self-forgetfulness,
Of some high task fruition to obtain,
But did not win the guerdon of success;
If my poor effort no base thought did know,
I would not call it so.
But if I won it by a selfish might,
Staining endeavor by a servile greed,
By so much as one paltering with the right,
Or by the savor of one wrongful deed,
Then would I count attainment of desire
Failure most dire.—Sel.

MAKING A SUCCESS OF LIFE.

Success, according to the present usage of the word, is desired by all men. In their chosen lines they devote all their energies to the attainment of their purposes, and sometimes the effort becomes so intense that the opportunities of others are destroyed, or their rights infringed upon. True success should be the aim of every one, and every effort in life should be directed toward its attainment. But it is not always that men judge aright of what true success really is. Too often success is determined by the amount of money a man has made, or the extent of his business, or by his social or political standing; but in many cases such success has left behind it along the way wrecked businesses and wrecked souls.

Success in one thing is frequently gained at the expense or total loss of another which is far more valuable. For instance, a young man applies himself so diligently and closely to the pursuit of knowledge that he loses his health and perhaps his life, though such a loss is small—very small, compared with that of the man who gains wealth at the expense and loss of his character. Some men adulterate the products they manufacture thus destroying their integrity of character, and infringing upon the rights of others. Others use the power of past gains with which to crush and destroy the business of their competitors. The makers and exhibitors of picture films often use subjects that are immorally suggestive to the utter demoralization of the youth of the land, in order to make a large profit. Even some preachers will compromise the truth and preach only that which meets with popular favor in order to build up a large church.

Such things may be counted success by the world, but as a skirmish does not determine the outcome of a war, neither do such successes determine the success of a man's life. Will such things be counted success when in the final judgment the record of a man's life stands before him and others as a monument, showing that his success was built upon the disappointed hopes, broken hearts, plundered fortunes, wrecked lives, and lost souls, of his fellow men? Such successes fail with this life, and ultimately will declare the life failure of those who made them.

In what then is true success found? In service. The man who renders helpful service to his fellow man, who has maintained his rights equally with his own, who has come to their rescue when misfortune was about to overwhelm them, who has so wrought in life as to place before others a shield to protect them from evil, who has strengthened the influences that work for men's uplifting; he is the successful man. As to material wealth he may be either rich or poor; he may have built up great industries or he may have failed in the little corner store, but if he has done these other things he has been successful in life, for by them he has both preserved and strengthened the integrity of his own character.

In this age when success is counted almost entirely by worldly standards, it is essential that saints should seek to learn the true standard and gauge, their lives accordingly. The youth of our land are entering into the responsible positions of life with false standards which are commonly accepted in the world—standards which are mainly based upon wealth and social standing; but the children of the saints must be taught otherwise if they are to make a success of the work which the Lord has entrusted to his people, leading to the establishment of Zion.

A FORGIVING SPIRIT.

The nobleness of a man's character may be accurately estimated by his power and willingness to forgive those who have wrought injustice against him. It is not always easy to forgive in such cases, for generally the natural impulse is to retaliate and give vengeance for vengeance. It is Christlike to forgive however, and when the occasion for the exercise of this divine quality arises in the experience of the saint, he finds it a test of his discipleship.

Some years ago a brother who had become offended at another, failing to have his demands fully satisfied by the offending one remarked that he would not forgive but would hold the matter over till the day of judgment. The brother evidently did not realize the force of his position, overlooking the positive teaching of the Lord as recorded in Matthew 6:15: "But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."

One who is unwilling to forgive his fellow men is not a proper subject of mercy and is himself unforgiven so long as he occupies that attitude. The children of Christ are those who have been made such by obedience to his teachings and by the blessings of forgiveness and cleansing which he graciously bestows upon them, and the promise to such is that they shall come forth in the first resurrection at Christ's coming, while those who are not thus forgiven and cleansed must await until the second resurrection which is subsequent to the thousand years, and just prior to the judgment.

Thus it appears that for a man to say that he will not forgive till the judgment day, is equivalent to saying that he is willing to forego all the joy and glory that would come to him by having a place with Christ and the redeemed in the first resurrection, and wait unforgiven until the time comes for him to be judged at the bar of God. Who can afford to take such a position? Would it not be far better to settle the differences of this life as Christ has pointed out, which are so small when compared with one's eternal interests, rather than forfeit his hope of celestial glory?

An unforgiving spirit is one that engenders hatred with a train of kindred evils, which tend to crush all the better and nobler qualities of one's nature. It shuts the door of his soul to the light and intelligence of God; it prevents the application of the law of mercy, he cannot be one with God. The Lord has given warning against this condition in the following:

"Ye ought to forgive one another, for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses standeth condemned before the Lord, for there remaineth in him the greater sin."—Doctrine and Covenants 64:2.

A forgiving spirit tends to win the erring one and helps to make humanity as one. It justifies a man (other conditions being proper), and entitles him to forgiveness by his Father in heaven. It opens the door of his soul for the reception of all that God desires to give him, and helps him toward unity with God.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

Note.—The editor anticipates continuing for some time this series of historical sketches dealing with the history of the church. It is not intended to give a mere recital of facts, but to weave in with them a little of the philosophy of history.

FIRST STEPS.

An active attorney once said that any single important act of a man's life, examined with sufficient thoroughness, would reveal the character of the man.

Whatever may be thought of the character of Joseph Smith, it is a fact that many important acts stand out in the history of his short life, and if the above statement be true, that any one of them upon thorough investigation would reveal his character, then certainly an examination of many or all the acts of his life would determine his character beyond the possibility of doubt.

When fourteen years of age he attended a union revival in the little town of Manchester in the western part of New York, near which place he lived with his parents. This was in the winter of 1820, and like any boy or girl of that age, he was affected by the stirring appeals made to get all to "come to Christ." However the way did not seem clear to him and when the revival had closed he was still outside the fold, but still wondering what he should do. The several ministers were in conflict, and warred with each other over doctrine and other things, and each contended for his own church, and laid claim to as many of the new converts as possible, all of which but increased the confusion and uncertainty in the mind of the boy.

In his distress he went to the Bible, and whether by chance or otherwise he read the first chapter of the Epistle of James, and coming to the fifth verse he read:

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." Of this verse he said: "Never did any passage of Scripture come with more power to the heart of man than this did at this time to mine. It seemed to enter with great force into every feeling of my heart. I reflected on it again and again, knowing that if any person needed wisdom from God, I did, for how to act I did not know, and unless I could get more wisdom than I then had, would never know."

Acting upon that which he had read in the Scriptures he went alone into the woods to pray, and while thus engaged there came an answer to his prayer, which ultimately brought satisfaction to his soul. The nature of that answer will be left for a later sketch to describe, but just here we wish to examine more closely the steps that led up to it.

When this young man became concerned about his spiritual welfare his first step was to go to the word of God. Considering all the circumstances attending this act there is no reason for believing that his motive was other than good. He was too young to have formulated a scheme of deception, and to have appealed to the Bible as a pretence. There was nothing in his life, or in the standing of his father's family, which could have suggested to him at this time the idea of starting a new church, or any kind of movement of a public character. He had no companions who could have influenced him to do what he did. He was not before the public eye, and not even his own parents knew what was going on in his mind. So the act of going to the Bible was a spontaneous one, absolutely free from improper motive.

But apart from the motive was the act a proper one under the circumstances? It certainly was. No minister of any church would say he did wrong in going to the word of God for light and council, for do they not often preach from the texts: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." (Ps. 119:105) "Search the Scriptures." Jn. 5:39. Every Christian will say that the Bible is a safe guide. Can any fault be found then with this boy for going to that word to find help by which he could get out of a genuine distress? From every point of view his act was a proper one.

Having read in the word of God that which seemed to meet his immediate need, he believed it. Can any fault be found in him on this account?

Did he do wrong in believing the inspired word? If other men before him had ceased to believe all that that word contained, was that any reason why he should not believe it? But perhaps he did not know that other men did not believe it, and that he was violating the custom of the age in doing so. Regardless of what other men did or did not believe, he had implicit faith in the truthfulness of that which God had said by the mouth of his servant, and even those who themselves discredit such portions of the Scriptures can not consistently find fault with him for so doing.

Unlike many others who profess a belief in the word of God, and fail to put it into practice, this boy proceeded to put into practice what he had read and believed. Going to the woods where he could be alone he proceeded to "ask of God," fully expecting that in some way or other he would be given the information that he desired. Again it may be asked, did he do wrong? Was it improper for him to believe that God would fulfill his promise?

True Bible believers must admit that faith in God is not only proper but essential, for does not the Bible say that "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him?" (Heb. 11:6). It is possible for men to think they believe in the promises of God, but when they are brought to a practical test of their faith they find they don't have it. Too often people who believe that God answers prayer, do not believe that he will answer their particular prayer when they come to a real point of necessity. But this young man believed God. He believed that God would give him a definite answer to his appeal when he had a definite need, and if any fault is to be found with him for so doing, the responsibility for that fault must be laid upon the Bible and the promises made therein.

From whatever way we look at these incidents in the life of this man, nor does it matter how thoroughly, we find them to have been done without improper motive, and even without unconscious error. They sprung spontaneously from a sincere heart which was fired with a true faith—a faith which was strictly in accord with the word of God. Is it strange that God should hear such a prayer springing from such a heart? Would God be true to his promises should he fail to answer it? And is it not God's privilege to answer prayers in his own way? God answered this prayer, and the answer moved the world. It will be the subject of the next sketch.

Elder F. L. Sawley, who has for many years been an active worker in the ministry is at present in the Independence Sanitarium recuperating preparatory to taking treatment for hip joint disease from which he has suffered for thirty-five years. This will inform the brethren and friends of Bro. Sawley as to his whereabouts and condition, and those who desire to write him may address him in care of Independence Sanitarium.

INDEPENDENCE NEWS.

The low temperature was the cause of a smaller attendance than usual at the Sunday services. Elder Peter Anderson of the Twelve gave wise counsel and instruction to the morning congregation, touching upon the duties of the local officers in branches. Among other things he said that while the Sunday-school and Religio had their place as helps in the church work, there were two other things that were vastly more important, viz., the home and the church. Through the work outlined in the duties of the local officers as stated in the revelations to the church, the home is made one of the leading institutions to be built up in spirituality and righteousness. He said the greatest danger was not in the lack of interest, but in that interest being directed so strongly in certain lines that other more important lines were being in a measure neglected. The sermon was one that would give food for thought. Elder W. M. Aylor gave an excellent discourse in the evening.

Bro. D. J. Kralh, superintendent of the Sunday-school announced on Sunday that the amount of the Christmas offering for the Independence school was $543.65.

The choir under the direction of Sr. Audentia Anderson has been working upon the new collection of anthems selected by Bro. A. N. Hoxie. With the different choirs of the church preparing the same music, it ought to be an easy matter to assemble choirs of considerable size at the general conferences and reunions capable of excellently rendering anthems or other music with little extra training.

Bro. Andrew Cox who was one of the active members of the branch holding the office of priest, from the days when the branch was young, passed away on Monday morning.

Two little girls arrived from Portland, Oregon, on Sunday to make their home with Bro. and Sr. D. E. Tucker. They were Mary and Bertha Tucker, aged nine and seven years, respectively, nieces of Bro. Tucker, and whose father died a little more than a year ago. They will be well cared for in their new home.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Bro. R. S. Salyards conducted a two week's effort at the Olive Branch chapel about eight miles Southwest of Lamoni, closing last night. He did the most of the preaching, but Bro. L. G. Holloway and Amos Barvo spoke on some evenings, and Bro. W. P. Robinson preached twice on yesterday. Bro. Salyards states that the branch was organized in 1907, with 32 members. Since then 32 have been baptized and others added by letter, so that the branch now numbers 70 members.

The recent annual election there resulted in continuing Bro. Salyards as presiding elder, and in the choosing of Bro. Ernest Haskins, Joseph Braley, and William Johnston as priest, teacher and deacon of the branch.

Yesterday's sermons in Lamoni were by Bro. J. F. Garver, H. N. Snively, John Spaulding, and G. W. Needham. At nearby towns and chapels, so far as I have been able to gather items, the appointments were filled by Bro. Garver, Edward Harp and L. G. Holloway.

Bro. H. N. Snively recently preached during the evening of one week at the Lone Rock chapel, twelve miles from Lamoni.

The annual reunion in memory of the birth of Joseph Smith, December 23, 1805, was held this time at the home of Bro. and Sr. Salyards in Lamoni. No special business is reported, but a message of affectionate regard was sent to the present Joseph Smith at Independence.

Bro. A. N. Hoxie came again to Lamoni in the interest of the general choral work of the church, meeting with our choir on January 9. He commended the progress made and also reported good work done elsewhere by choirs and musicians.

By vote the Lamoni branch has provided for enlarging and improving the pulpit and choir platforms in preparation for the April conference, that the singers and church officials may have more seats than heretofore,

ALFRED.

CENTRAL CHURCH, KANSAS CITY, MO.

The last week in January is to be a week of prayer and denial, closing Sunday, February 2d with fasting and prayer for the good of the work at this place in particular. We need it, and are hopeful that much good may be accomplished in a spiritual way, as well as the realization of some funds which will go towards giving the church a general cleaning in the spring, which is much needed.

Our auxiliaries for the year will be in charge of Bro. A. H. Parsons superintendent of the Sunday-school, and Bro. D. H. Blair president of Religio. With the co-operation of the members of each of these organizations, the work in general at Central should show improvement at the close of the year after the past year.

Movement is on foot for the annual spring meetings, which will commence about March first. We are contemplating securing the services of Bro. J. W. Rushton and one of the evangelical ministry, and the effort in the main will be to build up our membership, some of which are sadly run down spiritually. Not until the membership in general is revived, can we hope for any great accomplishments at Central.

We do not lack for good, sound preaching both from our pastor and visiting brethren, but more personal work seems to be the crying need. It is contemplated that more house to house visiting from this time on will be done than in the past.

Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, president of Graceland College, and also president of the general organization of the Z. R. L. S. was in our city recently visiting relatives, and paid our local society a call, which was appreciated by the members. We believe that good was done by the short visit from our general head.

Jan. 13.

H. S.

QUINDARO.

We have had very good and instructive sermons from Bro. J. I. Kaplinger, Fred Cleveland, C. Dowler and our president, D. E. Hough. Bro. B. N. Rooks made us a proposition whereby we were to raise all the money we could and he would give us a like amount. We collected $155.20, the most of which came through the efforts of the Ladies Aid Society.

The following are the officers elected in the branch for the ensuing six months: D. E. Hough president, John Tucker priest, S. A. Johnson teacher, J. I. Kaplinger deacon, R. V. Barron secretary, W. Lewis librarian, Sr. John Tucker chorister, Sr. Maria Tucker organist.

The officers elected to the Religio are: J. I. Kaplinger president, M. Goodfellow vice president, Lela Tucker clerk, Viola Goodfellow treasurer, Kate Kaplinger chorister, Maria Tucker organist.

The officers elected for the Sunday-school are: John Tucker superintendent, Emmett Palmer assistant superintendent, Sr. Wm. Lewis secretary, Elmer Shelton treasurer, Sr. John Tucker chorister, Maria Tucker organist.

CARRIE BARRON.

UKIAH, CALIF.

On December 29 our father departed this life, and as he was not a member of the church it made us feel more sad at the parting, but amid our sorrow imagine our joy soon after on finding a family of Saints here and right near us too, whom we had not discovered, and six of them in the family, by the name of Erskins. They come to us from Monterey, and are from the Fresno Branch.

Bro. Erskins by previous appointment was called away on business not knowing that there were any Saints here. That these dear ones couldn't find us, made us feel as if our light shone very dimly.

Two precious souls were lately born into the kingdom and we are rejoicing.

We met Sr. L. A. Savage at Willits, formerly of Lamoni but lately from Conquille, Oregon. Sr. Grace, her daughter, was photographer to one of the bishops at Lamoni for a time.

Bro. J. D. Stead has offered to come and preach for us, but at this season it is quite disagreeable on account of the rain, and lately we have had very bitter cold weather—eighteen above zero. If you were here you would say cold!

Next Summer or Autumn we are going to make an unusual effort to have the district tent come here and those in charge may take out their note book and write "Ukiah" on it.

I am also making an effort to induce Saints to move to Ukiah and as Bro. Erskins is in the reality business. I am sure nice homes in a very healthful locality, could be supplied.

W. H. YORK, Pres. Ukiah Branch.
Box 571, Ukiah Calif.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Our regular sacrament service was held the morning of January 9th. Our pastor, Bro. R. Archibald was in charge and Bro. Rhoads and Reeves distributed the blessed emblems. A goodly attendance was present and a profitable time spent. The introductory remarks were made by Bro. Archibald and were truly encouraging. Among the many good thoughts presented were "Jesus was true unto death, and we were to deny ourselves take up the cross and follow Jesus the Christ."

Special prayer was offered for the afflicted ones of God's children, Sr. Peat formerly of St. Louis and Lamoni being specially remembered, she being severely attacked with that dangerous disease pneumonia. We sincerely trust our faith and prayers will be availing in her behalf as well as all of God's dear ones.

Bro. Archibald for the benefit of the ministry and lay of members, has a slip of announcements of those appointed to occupy during the month, put up in the church where all can take note, thus giving the ministry ample preparation for their work.

Our Sunday-school Christmas entertainment was very good. We have now started the new year with renewed interest and our recent election resulted in a change of officers. Our retiring superintendent Bro. G. S. Trowbridge who served so well, stated it as his opinion to be best to select another in his place, as he had so many duties in church work to attend to. He did not decline however to serve, which is characteristic of Bro. Trowbridge, ever being willing to do the best he can. The religio we will more fully report in Autumn Leaves. Bro. T. J. Elliott who has been the religio president during the last term could not accept the office again, as his services are now required in the Cheltenham branch as their pastor. Bro. A. M. Smith will preside as president of the society for the ensuing term.

At our last district conference Bro. G. S. Trowbridge was ordained to the office of elder.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

With hearts charged with the spirit of faith and good cheer—and a kindly feeling toward all and enmity toward none, we begin the pleasing toils of another year's gospel work. We hid all our readers a happy and prosperous New Year. May Zion flourish and her children grow in grace.

We visited the city on the 29th ult and enjoyed the congenial association of the saints speaking to them with good spirit. The religio elected officers, Bro. Emery Parks being retained as president. The Sunday-school is doing well under the charge of Sr. M. A. Saxe who is also our district superintendent.

Glady Marion Rood the darling grandchild of Bro. and Sr. J. A. Saxe, the child of their daughter Helen was blessed on the 29th ult at the church service by Bro. J. A. Saxe and Bishop C. A. Parkin.

Bro. H. J. Davison reports the work moving along nicely in Stockton where he is located in charge. Two were recently baptized by him.

Bro. J. D. Stead is in Sacramento this week holding meetings each night in their remodeled church. Election of officers there, places Bro. Geo. Daley, C. E. Ball, T. J. Law and F. Lamphrey in charge of the branch respectively.

The city sacrament service was good as was also the one in Oakland—the evening hours being occupied by Bro. C. A. Parkin in the city and Bro. Jacob Smith in Oakland. The Sunday-school and religio in Oakland both held elections without much change Bro. A. B. Domsos continued as superintendent of Sunday-school and Bro. J. W. Presley as president of religio.

A pleasing letter from Bro. G. J. Waller contains good news of the work on the islands, Bro. McConley and Barrett are laboring on the island of Hawaii at Hilo with success.

The San Jose Branch held its first meeting in their new church last Sunday and a very spiritual meeting it was.

Don't forget our district conference and dedication services together with Sunday-school and religio conventions to be held at Chico, February 28th and March 1st and 2d, 1913. Neither the reunion at Irvington, August 15th to 23d inclusive.

Bro. W. H. Kelley is still improving and will soon be able to attend church. He is being kindly cared for by Bro. Ben Parks at 2112 Union St., San Francisco.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., FIRST BRANCH.

We have been in the grip of a severe "spell of weather" of late. Snow, ice, and extreme cold here have prevailed to our present discomfort, but we presume future benefit.

Thursday evening the 2d the branch held its regular business meeting. Matters of importance were considered and disposed of. Bro. Goodrich presented to the branch the name of our young brethren, Roy R. Fifer and Paul Pugsley, for recommendation to the coming district conference for ordination, the former in the office of elder, the latter to that of priest. The branch concurred in the recommendation.

Friday evening the Religio held its semiannual election of officers which resulted as follows, Roy R. Fifer president,

The Religion is doing fine, and we look forward to a prosperous and busy year for it. Bro. Paul Pugeley the new vice president, who is also assistant chorister of the branch, has set on foot a movement to get a new piano for the class room and this has long been a crying need with us, we are sure the project will meet with the success it deserves. If it does we hope to have a new piano for the convention which meets the 18 and 19 inst.

The last two Sundays have been extremely cold therefore we have been agreeably surprised at the good attendance at Sunday school both days. We are making a splendid start for the year in every way in this important work. We are proud of our auxiliaries and delight in their progress.

Sunday the fifth Bro. Goodrich occupied the pulpit both morning and evening, dispensing the word as always with the earnestness and conviction of one who knows whereof he speaks. At the evening prayer service the Spirit of the faithful number present. During the service Bro. G. W. Best came in with a request for elders to go to administer to his little grandson, Dorna Piper, Jr. who had been brought from the home of his parents at Astell, Kas., a very sick child. In spite of all that could be done the little one daily, hourly grew worse until at last all hope for his recovery was abandoned by the five physicians called in consultation. At this stage a specialist was called in. He concurred in the opinion of the other physicians. The child had tubercular meningitis, and he could hold out no hope that he would recover. Death was even present when a small number of Saints that could be quickly summoned gathered at the home of Bro. Best, others who could be reached by telephone were requested to join in a season of supplication to God the great Physician that now in man's extremity, he would manifest his power to heal and bless mankind. A number of God's servants performed the holy ordinance of administration for the dying child, and thanks be to Almighty God, the Grim Reaper was rebuked and banished and the child dropped into a sweet sleep from which it awoke to its recovery. Oh who would not love to serve such a kind loving Father.

There has been much sickness among us of late, and the elders have been kept busy attending to calls for administration. On Thursday the 9th William E. Sage, husband of our aged sister Sage, passed away at his home in this city. Our sympathies are greatly enlisted for our dear sister as this sad event will leave her very lonely.

On Friday evening the 10th our beloved sister and mother in Israel, Harriet Burr passed peacefully to her long desired rest in the paradise of God, at the home of her grandson Bro. Gilbert Whitehead. Who has not known and loved dear Grandma Burr? Words are futile to attempt to depict her life. Devoted, self-sacrificing, hopeful, steadfast in testimony. How many times have we heard her strong clear voice declaring "I know that this gospel is true" She was lovingly cared for by Bro. Gilbert and wife who with their children were greatly attached to her and gave her every attention.

"How blest the righteous when he dies." Both these funerals occurred on Sunday the 12th, and Bro. Goodrich though suffering indisposition himself, having been confined to his bed for some days last week, officiated at both and also preached both morning and evening at the church.

The evening prayer service was a feast to the hungry souls of those who attended.

The stork left a bouncing 12 pound baby boy at the home of Bro. and Sr. Kony-Haden recently.

REPORTER.

EAST SAINT LOUIS, ILL.

Within the past month a new year has been ushered in and it found Landsdowne Branch at work. Some of us were, planning a pleasure excursion for New Year's afternoon, but when Bro. Vandel announced from the pulpit that every member of the branch residing in East St. Louis, would receive a New Year's call by some member of the priesthood we gave up all other plans.

The members of the priesthood were paired off, the territory was divided, and each pair given a list of names, by which to be guided in their visiting.

An invitation to the prayer meeting at the close of the day was left at each home. It is thought much good was accomplished.

We had an enjoyable sacrament service last Sunday morning at which the feeling of sympathy existing throughout the branch was spoken of by several in their testimonies. Bro. W. C. Carl was the speaker of the evening.

CORRESPONDENCE

BULLAHDELAH, N. S. W., ANS., Nov. 28.
Dear Ensign—Once more we are sending a few lines to say we are greatly enjoying our work in this far off land, and are fully appreciating all the pleasant times we are having with our dear brothers and sisters in the gospel. We are at this writing in Bullahdelah, where the reunions are usually held, as the city people enjoy coming here at that time, it being such a change from the busy life of a large city. We are on our way "Tuncurry" and other little villages to spend a day or two at each place, and say farewell.

Since last writing we spent a couple months in Melbourne, where Elder Pitt held meetings, and where we also visited surrounding branches in "Geelary" and "Hastings," holding a series of meetings and calling on and visiting with isolated members. We both greatly enjoyed our stay in Melbourne, which is a beautiful city indeed, the streets being so very wide, and beautifully laid out. The city of Melbourne is more like some of American cities than any other Australian city we have seen.

The work in Melbourne is onward and upward—as we can see a great improvement there since our first visit to the branch. Members seem enthusiastic and are faithful in attendance. Of course there are some who are not faithful, but this is the condition existing almost everywhere. After a couple months spent here the day of our parting with loved ones came. The evening before our departure a farewell had been planned for us, and we were all to meet at the church at eight p. m. When we arrived the saints and friends were assembled, including my cousins who are not members. First, a very interesting program was rendered, speeches made—words of consolation and encouragement spoken, then little tokens of love were given us—among them, a gold boomerang—with "laughing goburrah" on it, studded with pearls and amethysts,—a very pretty pin indeed. Another pin, gold map of Australia, given to me from cousins. Refreshments were served at close of farewell, and about eleven we all took our departure. Next day we were met at the boat by a large number of saints and friends, and for a short time we bade our loved ones the last farewell.

My visit to Australia has been very pleasant in the meeting of so many brothers and sisters and also cousins whom I had never anticipated the pleasure of meeting. Mother's brother, when a boy of seventeen, left his home in Ayr, Scotland, and went to Melbourne, and for years he corresponded with home folks, but upon their removal to America his letters after a time seemed to go astray, so it was my intention upon reaching this land to find him. We soon learned he had died only four years ago, and that for years he had grieved because of the silence in not hearing from us. This was a great disappointment to me as I had looked forward to the pleasure of seeing him. We had the pleasure of spending many pleasant hours with aunt and cousins, however, who greatly enjoyed hearing the beautiful songs of Zion's Praises.

We had a delightful day for sailing from Melbourne, calm sea and perfect weather. The boat also was one of the best we had ever traveled on—the "Morea," "Orient Line." We waved our handkerchiefs until we could not see our loved ones longer, then we sat down and shed tears as we realized we would never again perhaps meet the loved ones whom we had left behind. We were both unusually quiet all that afternoon, and spent our time ruminating over the pleasant and happy times spent in Melbourne.

The next day we spent up on deck playing shuffle block and other games, and also watching the whales. We had never before seen so many, and the sight was very interesting. One was very close to the boat and was surprised himself to find how close he was to it. We were kept busy for an hour or more going from one side of the boat to the other, watching them as they spotted the water so high.

The evening we spent playing and singing, especially the Zion's Praises, and it is wonderful how quickly the people notice the words of those hymns. A couple of ladies spoke to me after our little song service, and said, that we brought the little good there was in their nature out—and they really shed tears as they told me what effect the singing of those sweet words had upon them. This is but one experience.

We are many times told, after telling the gospel story, that what we say is just what they believe, but never heard it expressed or preached before. Th us we have tried to sow a little seed on our way and trust it may some future time bear fruit. After two days spent on the great deep we arrived safely in Sidney and were met at the boat by friends, and were soon at home at Bro. and Sr. Gresty and family, where we had promised to spend a month. We spent a very happy time with this interesting family, which is a very musical one; Bro. Gresty ranking among the first of Australian musicians. He is a famous orchestrator, and is kept busy all the time in that line and other duties. Sr. Myra, his daughter, has a beautiful soprano voice, and is ambitious to sometime visit America and cultivate her voice further. Our pleasant time with them passed too quickly, while laboring in the two branches here, and ere we realized it our time of departure had come, and we left for Wallsend via New Castle, where Bishop Lewis and family reside. We were kindly cared for here at the pleasant home of Bro. and Sr. Hopkins.

At Tevalba there is an effort being made for the spread of the gospel, and Elder Pitt was asked to preach a couple of evenings. He consented, and we found the little church, which was formerly occupied by the Methodists, but which belongs to the Reorganized Church now, well filled with an interested audience. The number of children, non-members, astonished us, and all gave excellent attention as Elder Pitt preached on the "Plan of Salvation." The children have been so well trained by Bro. Gammage in Sunday-school there that they could answer many different questions when asked. The choir numbering about thirty or forty children was seated on the platform to allow seating capacity for the large number of strangers. We feel that good will eventually result from this effort being put forth by Brn. Lewis and Gammage.

Tuesday we left Wallsend, driving the little missionary horse, "Tommy," with whom we had the narrow escape about six months ago, and we arrived in Bullahdelah next day at noon. We felt quite at home in Australia as we sped along over new routes, and watching for the sign boards which would direct us on our way. We passed Sandgate cemetery, the silent city of the dead; further on we descended a long hill and reached one of the richest farming districts of Australia, we were told; the valley of the Hunter River. We passed Dairys and saw some rich pasture lands—not the same as we see in our farming country however, as the grass here does not seem to grow so long and thick.

We soon reached Huxham "punt" and after driving on to it, we were soon across the river. Some short distance further we reached Raymond Terrace, a city of seven or eight thousand population. The same evening at six thirty we arrived at Booral where we were obliged to stop for the night, not having started early enough in the morning to complete our drive on to Bullahdelah. We stopped at the hotel there, and this we regretted, as we did not sleep at all that night. One bad feature of the hotels here is that there is a bar in connection with them, and one cannot get away from the realization that such wickedness is in progress in the building, especially when the glasses can be heard falling and men making an effort to talk—young men intoxicated—and this had such an effect upon me I could not sleep at all, and was glad when morning arrived and we were on our way to Bullahdelah.

We feel satisfied that the bars, or saloons as we call them, will ruin this country if permitted to exist as they do. On almost every business corner there is a bar, with the maid serving. It is a pitiable sight to pass young men (boys almost), as young as eighteen, intoxicated. There is certainly a great work here for Carrie Nation as well as others. There are too many unnecessary laws here, and not enough of the right kind. The drive from Booral was very pleasant. The rain fell a little heavy at times, making the road slippery around the mountain, but we drove slowly and reached our destination at noon. We are cared for at the hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. James Maybury.

Elder Pitt preached the same evening at the church, with good attendance. He also preaches tonight. We expect to leave early in the morning for Tuncurry. It is forty-four miles distant, and we are anticipating a pleasant drive. We both enjoy the drives, I especially. After a few days in Tuncurry and Avalon where we will for the last time spend a day or two with Bro. Sydney and Sr. Ina Smith Wright and family. We will leave there for this place again, on our return to Wallsend, and are planning to reach Sidney about December 14th. Christmas day we expect to spend with Bro. and Sr. Gresty and family in the Botanical Gardens; and on December 28th we leave for New Zealand.

So at last our faces are turned homeward. It seems a long time since we left home, and yet the time has passed quickly. We cannot realize Christmas is so near, especially as the weather some days is 100 and 102 in the shade. On the whole, we have suffered less with the heat here, than we did at home; yet we get exhausted much more easily here, and feel that our climate agrees with us better.

We are kept very busy in our work, yet we have greatly enjoyed it, and now that the time of departure is so near we regret leaving, as we have grown to love our Australian brothers and sisters. Our address now is Danedin, New Zealand, G. Post Office.

With best wishes to all the readers of the ENSIGN,
Your sister in the gospel,
ROSA P. PITT.

EAST JORDAN, Mich., Jan. 4.

Dear Ensign—I have taken your paper two years and don't know what I would do without it, for it is all the church privileges I have. I obeyed the gospel March 1, 1909 being baptized by Bro. James Davis of South Boardman, Mich., and I love the name Latter Day Saint. I have a husband and six children. Two girls belong to the Saints, but my husband does not. I need and ask the prayers of all the dear sisters and brothers that my husband, and the rest of my children will be Saints. I have many trials and temptations and ask for prayer that I can live faithful to the end.
Your sister in the true gospel,
Mrs. ANDIE McKEAGRE.

During the progress of the afternoon prayer service at Independence, Sunday, January 5th, the congregation sang the last verse of hymn number 361 in Saints' Hymnal, immediately after which Elder Joseph Luff sang by the Spirit the following with the same tune—"Shall we gather home to Zion?"

Gathered where I have appointed—
Fed and nourished by my hand—
Chosen, planted, and anointed—
Blessed people! favored land!
What to you shall mean this token?
What the fruitage of my grace?
My word kept—shall yours be broken
And my covenant efface?
Chorus.
Will ye make of this my Zion
Whence my glory forth may shine?
All my promises rely on
And henceforth be only mine?

Henceforth, till the consummation
Of my purpose, with my me
Will in glad co-operation
Work, till they my glory see
Will ye 'bide when peace hath taken
From the earth its lasting fight?
Will ye stand, nor e'er be shaken,
'Mid the gloom of lingering night?

Chorus.
Will ye—good for ill returning—
Enemies befriending and bless—
True discipleship discerning
And the seal of righteousness?

Who, though death or dire disaster
Threaten every hope, will cling
To my counsel, firmer, faster,
Whate'er that trust may bring?
Will ye pain esteem as pleasure,
And each sacrifice as gain,
If thereby ye may the measure
Of your Master's stature gain?

Chorus.
By these tokens faith hath voicing,
Love hath exhibition clear:
These in heaven shall cause rejoicing,
And proclaim my Zion here.

Wist ye not when praying often
That my will on earth be done,
Grace must first your spirits soften
And in service make you one?
One in sweet self-abnegation,
One in fellowship of love;
Without marks of wealth or station,
Save those mirrored from above:

Chorus.
With me, in which blest union
God and angels will combine:
Zion's light, by such communion
Will in glorious lustre shine.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

BAPTISM OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Sermon by Frederick A. Smith.

In the first chapter of John's gospel and the sixth verse we find this:

"There was a man sent from God whose name was John," and in the following two verses we are told what his especial work was. "The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that light, but was sent to bear witness of that light. That was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

Now over in the 32d and 33d verses he begins his testimony, or rather, he bears witness here:

"And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him, and I knew him not; but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost."

I have read this particular testimony for the especial purpose of carrying our thoughts to the witness that he bears, that Jesus was to baptize with the Holy Ghost. Sometimes I think this special feature of our work is possibly not so fully understood as it might be, I have seen places and individuals where it was practically not understood at all.

It is just as essential that we understand the object of the baptism of the Spirit, and its operation, as it is that we understand the object of the water baptism; and while I shall not make the effort to go into any lengthy description of how it is to be received, we shall try to deal more particularly upon its purpose and its object and how we may recognize and know it.

So we will pass over now, in the writings of John the 14th chapter. The brother quoted you the other day the third chapter in which the Master has plainly indicated that we must be born of the water and of the Spirit or we cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven. Now we emphasize this, for the reason that it is objected to on the ground that the spiritual baptism which we believe to be an essential feature, is entirely wrong. If that is wrong, then Christ made a mistake and he ought to have consulted the objectors before making the utterance, but, as I believe Christ stands ahead of them, and he evidently was in a position to know whereof he spake. I shall insist that Christ was the one that understood the matter, and the objectors will have to answer to him for their objections, and not to us as a people, but there is a feature that we might examine briefly.

Following the thought and the query that was made by the individual whom he was addressing, we find the Master making the statement, that that which is born of the flesh is flesh and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. He says, "The wind bloweth where it listeth and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit." He makes the comparison for us, and one objection that is raised that is not always answered satisfactorily, to my mind at least, has been that we could not practice baptism of the Holy Spirit in the sense in which water baptism is practiced, because we could not see the Spirit, it was not a visible operation, it was impracticable, it could not be carried out.

Now this little statement of the Master's has always made clear this thought, to my mind; made it so clear that I have used it frequently. It gives us to understand that the wind blows and we hear the sound of it; we cannot tell whence it comes or whither it goes, and yet we know it blows, we are conscious of that. And when I make the statement here that we cannot see it, I want you to think earnestly over the condition. It is a practical thing that exists around us every day. We are surrounded with it all the time, and it is like nearly all of those illustrations that Jesus gave to the human family, it is taken from the actual things of life that surround the people every day with which they were perfectly familiar.

Now we know that the wind blows. We say we know it; we hear it; if you step out into it you feel it and you are just as completely enveloped in it as it is possible for anything to be; you are conscious of that in the winter time when it goes about twenty-five degrees below zero; you are very much aware of the fact that the wind is blowing when you get out in it. How do you know that the wind blows and what is it that makes you say you see it?—we begin to get right at the point. You see the dust blowing in the air; you see the trees bending and waving in the power of that air that is in motion; you may see the rain drifting, and you will see the leaves whirling and the straws blowing as a consequence of the operation of the air; and all these bring to the eye the realization that the work is going on and the power is being manifest there; it is a clear thing to you because you see those evidences so plainly made manifest, and you know and are conscious that it is blowing, and blowing hard.

Before we go further into the examination of the operation of the Holy Spirit itself, and the influences and means by which we may recognize it, we shall first examine a little bit into what the office work of that Spirit is, and in making this examination we want you, as Latter Day Saints, to especially let your thoughts dwell upon it, for it is of importance to us; it is important to every believer in this great gospel of the kingdom of God to know something about the operation and work of that Spirit, and what God's design and purpose was in giving it. If we can get that in our minds fully fixed as to what the object and purpose is, we will begin to realize the benefits that ought to come from it, and we will also begin to more fully imbibe of the great interest that this work holds for us and the powers that may be ours, if we will improve the opportunities that we have.

In the 16th verse of the 14th chapter of John we have this language:

"And I will pray the Father and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you."

This is the promise made to his disciples at the time of his instructing them concerning his return to the great throne of his God and Father.

Now as to the object and purpose he had in view, he calls it a Comforter and then he proceeds to tell them more concerning it in the 26th verse:

"But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."

He is going to be a teacher according to this declaration of the Master himself in addressing this people, and as a teacher he shall teach them all things. Now in making that declaration, to my mind, he does not limit the possibilities of that teacher but he opens and unfolds it just as broadly as it may be necessary for anyone to go; he carries it out so widely and far as the knowledge of the universe may go, if it be possible for us as individuals to reach that condition, where, under the direction of the great Master that Spirit can bring enlightenment and knowledge to us, until it will change our finite minds and touch them with the power of inspiration that they may drink in to the fullest extent of the Infinite and all its advanced knowledge that it may hold.

It presents to us one of the grandest possibilities and hopes that could possibly be given to a people, and I do not see how he would have made a promise to his children, to his disciples, that could have carried with it a greater glory and greater good and enjoyment, than the promise that he has given of that Holy Spirit and its work.

In the 15th chapter and the 26th verse he tells us:

"But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me."

The testimony must come from God and he will use the means of that Holy Spirit that God has given as a means of communication between the throne of glory and the individual that comes honestly, conscientiously, and earnestly before God, seeking knowledge of him whom he seeks to serve. To my mind, friends, it is a grand thought. God would not leave us in ignorance. He would not ask us to work blindly; he does not ask us to go on and give to him a service without knowledge, but gives to us a means through which he can open up the window of communication and send out the dove of inspiration and knowledge to the human family that shall bear witness of the Christ himself.

Then we go to the 16th chapter and find in the 12th verse:

"Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth, for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak, and he will show you things to come. He shall glorify me, for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you."

Let us gather that thought, get it clear. "All things that the Father hath are mine," and this power of the Holy Spirit shall take it and show it unto you. Think of the possibilities that are unfolded for us there. Think how it would be possible for that Spirit even to open the very windows of heaven itself, and take the mind of the honest individual who is seeking to serve God, and lift him as he should be; take him up and show him the wonderful things of God, the wonderful powers of that great kingdom of heaven; unfolding to him the mysteries of God; cause him to see and understand more fully than he had ever done before, the magnitude and glory, that we might enjoy this life, and that it might open for us a greater knowledge of the things of God, that he might enter into full enjoyment of that which is in the world to come.

I have looked upon possibilities that come to us from the work of this Holy Spirit as a means of education, as shall fit and prepare us, instruct us along the lines of God and his work, shall make us acquainted with the heavenly things and their manner of doing, moving and operating, that when we shall pass from this stage of action if we shall do so before the time of setting up God's kingdom here upon the earth, we shall be ushered into the presence of the Almighty, it can be with that feeling of confidence and satisfaction, with that feeling of assurance, with that knowledge of the things of God that shall make it possible for us as individuals to feel at home, just as that song says: "And feel in the presence of Jesus at home."

I want to know if you all think you would feel that way if you were ushered into his presence now. Suppose you were suddenly ushered into the presence of the Almighty now. Do you think you would feel at home right now? If not, pray ask yourselves, why not? What reason would you have to offer why you would not feel at home? Why, you could not feel perfectly confident and easy as you feel in the association of each other now? Would it not be because of the thought that he was so far superior to you in knowledge, in purity, in all things, that you would feel your inferiority to such an extent that he would bring to you a sense of discomfort that would make you dread the idea of going into his presence? Now as I understand that spiritual work that is to be done here and the design of the Almighty in blessing us with the power that would help us to understand the deep and great things of God, and unfold to us all that was there so that when we came into his presence we would be ready and fitted for it, to go in there in perfect confidence and in the full enjoyment of all the freedom that he could possibly ask for.

The Apostle Paul in writing the first Corinthian letter in the second chapter, calls attention to this thought:

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

We can begin to understand how this counsel of the Master could make plain that statement in the third chapter of John, "Except ye are born again, you cannot see the kingdom of God." I believe I can conscientiously make the statement, that nearly every one that has come into this kingdom of God, has had to come in faith, and to them has been unfolded the knowledge of the kingdom of God and its character, the greatness and the magnitude of it after they have entered the portals and become the children of God. If there are those who have been so fortunate as to see previous to that time, it has been because of the goodness of God in manifesting to you by vision or dream beyond what most others have had that should strengthen you and give you courage to move in the responsible duty that you have assumed. It says, "The Spirit of God searcheth the deep things of God," and by that Spirit the power of revelation they are made known unto us. This is the thought that he brings to us.

This instruction is carried further by the apostle, and he says: "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." Hence the Spirit is necessary; it was a principle of truth and the power of God that should come down, and coming unto the individual, should make him partake of the divine and thus come nearer to God, and that information that we had sought should be found there, and become a reality to us, therefore we can enjoy the privileges of life and wisdom and knowledge, that to the individual who does not recognize God and does not put himself in a position to attain unto this great and wonderful blessing, never can know until it is made known to him in the great beyond.

How are we going to know the operation of the Spirit, for we are met on every hand with diverse ideas and wonders and operations and they tell us that they are all the work of the Holy Spirit; they are brought to us with the idea that they represent the power of God? I want you to reason here, for this is a feature that belongs to the work that we want to become a little better acquainted with than we have been in the past. Some may have reached out with the thought that because the power of healing and the administration under the elders' hands and by prayer unto God has been manifest in this great work, that that is the great manifestation of the power of God; but I have sometimes thought that it was not the greatest, by any means. While it was great in itself, and as the laws of nature were put into operation by God in a way that we do not understand always, yet it was but one of the small things. There are some things in the work of God that to my mind at least, unfolded the divine character to a greater extent, and a more lasting benefit to the human family, than simply the healing of the physical infirmities of the human body ever has done.

How do you know the wind blows? You say you went out and stood around the corner of the house where it would strike you in full force and were nearly lifted off your feet, and you knew it; and you saw the trees bending and falling and the force and operation of that power was made manifest to you and you acknowledged it for that reason. Your sight came in play there. You heard the roar of the breeze around the building and you say I heard it. It has appealed to three of the natural senses of man, and by these three natural senses at least you could testify truly that you knew that the wind blew and its effect and influence were manifest. Let me ask you if there is not just as clear and clean evidence in behalf of the working power of the Holy Ghost in the human race as there is of the wind blowing? And the Master in making that comparison, to my mind made a good one. I will read in the 12th chapter of Corinthians beginning with the 8th verse:

What is the manifestation? What is the manifestation of the wind blowing? You answer, the trees manifest it, and the dust blowing manifests it, the pressure against your body was a manifestation of it, the sound was a manifestation of it. When we ask you to think when you saw these things and heard them and felt them, do you not realize that there was a power at work there that caused the manifestation? That is the thought—it is the power that causes the manifestation of the Holy Spirit that we want to get hold of. We want to know something about it and understand, if we possibly can, that that will indicate to us that the Spirit is at work with the individuals.

We made the statement, and some objected because they said you could not see the immersion of an individual in the Holy Spirit and because it could not be witnessed by the natural eye, it was an impractical thing and could not be done. Let us see if it is. Was it not just as impractical to make the statement that you could not see the wind and you could not tell it was blowing because you could not see its outward application? You could not see the wind itself. You could tell though by feeling. You could tell by the manifestation or the effect of it just exactly what had happened there. Let us see what some of these things are:

"For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom."

That was the first one mentioned, and I believe this is one of the grandest manifestations of the Spirit of God and of the Holy Ghost working with the individual that you can possibly find; but it is a silent one; it is a quiet one; it is one of those peculiar manifestations that you have to look carefully to witness; you have to feel its presence; you have to be made conscious of it. I have thought sometimes that we were slow to recognize the working of the Spirit in individuals where it had given to them this especial blessing. It blesses the individual that receives it; it blesses those with whom they labor and mingle; it always does it and always will do it; it leads them along the paths of righteousness and uprightness; it will teach them all the time the means that will bring them to him and minister to those around them for good. Now think seriously if that is not true. We do not look at the individual's life and character; we fail to see in the evidences of work that is being done, possibly in a very quiet way, without any public demonstration, without heralding abroad everywhere, the wonderful gift of wisdom that God may have given to them. They go quietly about their work, but you discover after awhile, as they drop out of the community and pass to that beyond, you find here and there one that is blessing other individuals because of the exercise of that power of wise counsel, advice, instruction and help along the pathway of life. You look back over the individual's career and carefully examine into the record that has been made, and you discover to your astonishment that they have made a record clean and pure; free from errors, manifesting all along the line wonderful wisdom, and yet you have said in life possibly that you did not believe that individual ever had the Holy Ghost. Why, he could not speak in tongues; he never prophesied, he never gave the interpretation of a tongue; he seldom ever spoke in meeting, and you have concluded because they did not do any of these outward things that they did not have the gift of the Holy Ghost; but they had sufficient of it to make them wise unto salvation, and you discover after they are gone that they were indeed wise. To my mind it is one of the grandest and best gifts that God can give to us. It is one that blesses the individual and blesses the community with whom he lives and labors.

Let us notice another one:

"To another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit."

We see that very frequently among us. We hear people testify that we know this is the work of God. This knowledge, where did you get it? How do you know it? If you have been in this work any length of time you have seen individuals come from the outer world, have entered into the fold of Christ as it is taught in this great latter-day work, without the knowledge, or barely enough to read, and hardly that intelligently; some of them have had to spell every word as they read it. In the course of a few years, we have been amazed and astonished to see these individuals able to appear before the people with ease, and take a text from that which has been almost to them a sealed book, and been able to unfold and declare to the people the wonders of that book and its teachings in such a way that was a marvel to the world with whom they had mingled before.

Whence comes this knowledge? Here sits a brother before us that has represented this church as a missionary for years. He was taken from the plow, a boy that had no opportunity nor education such as they have today. He was sent right out under the inspiration of the Spirit that called him to go and preach the gospel. He went with trembling and fear; he has not made a big spread, as some may call it; that is not his life work; and yet he has an understanding of the things of God that is an astonishment to some, and they wonder at it. He can tell the truth that there has come to him that divine inspiration from God, that working of the Holy Spirit that has unfolded to his mind the things of God until he has drank deep of the fountain and rejoices in that that God has given. It is a manifestation of the Holy Spirit working with humanity. We have them all around us; we can point to them one after another.

How many of you have seen individuals that came into this work and made the statement that they have read that good book all their lives; they have studied it earnestly and made a deep and thorough research of it; then when they have been a few months in this work and they make the declaration that it is a new book, they wonder why they could not see it before. What was the meaning of that? It was but the working of that which God said should come, an evidence from on high, a manifestation; in other words, of the light of the Holy Spirit of God that brings to them knowledge and understanding of the work of God as it is given in his sacred word.

"To another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit."

The Doctrine and Covenants speaks of some individuals who may not receive always the gift and the understanding that others have, but the Lord says they may have the power to believe on the testimony of them that have the gift of knowledge; that gift which enables them to cling to the testimony that comes from others, of the wonderful power of God, although it may not be manifest in them as knowledge, but, that, dear friends, in many instances may be a manifestation of God's love and power to that individual that he is feeling after them to endow them with faith, that they may be able to bear and be able to stand.

The other one, the gift of faith to be healed.

When we can see the many manifestations of healing in the church, it gives us courage and strength, for we know God is working with us and his Holy Spirit is in the work and its manifestation; it is an evidence that the power of God is working there and moving there. I can call your attention to a sister who lives in Iowa. I have been called time and again to administer to her, and sometimes under most extreme conditions; one or two that were very critical, and to our surprise, it seemed in one or two instances but an instant until that individual was relieved and free; she has been wonderfully blessed with the gift to be healed; to her there always comes a blessing under these circumstances, and to her children comes the same, through that mother's faith that goes out to God in perfect confidence. Another manifestation of the power of God in working with his people. It brings peace and comfort, joy and happiness.

Now we will ask you the question: Why is it that the power of prophecy is sometimes given to some of the weakest individuals in the audience? I believe that possibly there is no audience who needs that manifestation more than that individual. They could comprehend it better; they could recognize in it the power of God that they could not recognize otherwise; it became necessary to work along in such a way as to give them the strength and inspiration that would enable them to know and feel that God was with them and blessing them. I have seen others who had the gift of tongues, and that gift has been one of the most abused, and the adversary has sought to use that as much or more than any other gift that he could palm off on the people. He has sought to use that to destroy the confidence in it, and thus make it the means by his influence, if possible, to destroy the confidence of the people in that gift, to destroy its power to testify of the word of God; and yet, I have heard the gift of tongues when I knew as well as I knew that I was living, that the power of God was working with it; it spoke peace to every soul that heard it. It brought the power of edification and strength, if we may not have understood the language itself.

The manifestation of the discernment of spirits. These are given to the individual; they are made manifest from time to time, and it does not follow because an individual may never have the gift of tongues, nor interpretation, prophecy or those outward demonstrations upon their part that they have not had the power of God; nor that the Holy Spirit has not worked with them; he may have come to them and given to them a knowledge of this work; he may have given to them power to understand the written word and comprehend it; he may have given them the power of discernment that should work for their good and others, and when they exercised it and used it, would prove it beneficial to them. And if you could see the workings of the heart and minds of some individuals, what a manifestation would it be to you that they had the Spirit of God working with them! If they are wise they will not always tell you what discernment may be to them. It would be an unwise thing for them to do it always.

But now when we discover all these things that are given of God for this especial purpose, and for evidence of the work of the Spirit—Paul says by the workings of the self-same Spirit God gave to everyone severally as he will. He is the one that is to minister unto us. Let me ask you to be thoughtful and sincere, and though you may not see in some the gifts of the outward demonstrations that they may indicate clearly to you that they drank in of the Holy Spirit, be careful how you pass judgment that this one or that one has never been able to see and feel the impress of the Holy Spirit of God and work under its influence.

Now friends, I ask you when we are permitted to taste of these things, when we are permitted to enjoy this power of God, should we not place our lives in harmony with his law, that we might be the recipients of these wonderful blessings that he has offered to the human family? It seems to me that it is worth every effort we can put forth to get it. I told my father once, after I had stepped out of the stand, when it seemed that God had blessed me almost beyond my containing, that one hour of that experience is worth a whole month of suffering to obtain it. And those of you who have felt this liberating influence can testify that it is grand beyond the power of description of a poor mortal tongue.

May God endow all of you with it abundantly, until you shall be able to shout glory and praise to his holy name. May he give you the wisdom to seek soberly and thoughtfully, and steadfastly, and put yourselves in line with the divine principles of truth until you can drink deep of that fountain, and he shall teach you that you may come unto perfection, that all may come to the fullness of the stature of men in Christ Jesus, a perfect man in him. May his blessing attend us until we shall be finally worthy of an inheritance in that divine presence, is my prayer, in Christ's name.

THE REASON BEHIND REVOLUTIONS.

There is that in human nature which waits and endures. It has come down along the toil-roads of ten thousand years—it is wonderful Patience, and immense Obedience to Those Who Rule. These long abide by the Social Order, even while that which is, trembles on the edges of death. Wise men, trying to better things, depend upon this reservoir of Conservatism, which perhaps gives them time in which to work out some truly great result. Evil and selfish men yet more depend upon it to enable them to put new burdens on the millions.

Everywhere and in all ages this great fact warns, appalls and still gives hope—the vast but not limitless endurance of our brothers and our sisters. Because of this, narrow-minded statesmen make war—for soldiers will answer the call, and nations will give their mouthfuls of bread to meet new taxes. But some day the man on whom the weight falls will stop, will question, will make an end; not in passion, but because he has appealed to that which rules the world of men—the Sense of Justice of the Average Man—and has received a decision against war.

The lesson of history is that all human endurance, all human conventions and close-knit systems, may at last wear down to the bone, and then suddenly, collapse. One need not remark, "There was the French Revolution." Sometimes, if the strong wisdom of those who study these things be not heeded, there may come a breaking up of all the old boundaries on such a scale as to make the Reign of Terror seem but an idle masque in an Italian garden.

The reason behind every revolution is ever the same: Too great a strain has been somewhere put upon human nature; obedience to the established order becomes impossible. Then chaos comes again; demons ride on the whirlwinds; image-breakers wreck the cathedrals; emirs on horseback burn Alexandrine libraries; the sands of the deserts cover gardens and vineyards; Vesuvius pours forth its lava on sleeping cities.

Safeguard against these disasters there is none, except the constant labor of those reformers whose watchwords are Education and Evolution, who fight to relieve the strain before it reaches the breaking point, who especially toil to so re-create and reinspire Law and Order that a loyal and joyous obedience is justified. In the last analysis this means the slow creation of higher and yet higher ideals of government, in which all take part, and to which all are willingly obedient.

Thus we arrive at a point of view where the Idealist and Reformer is in fact the only true Conservative, for he is transforming the ancient, outworn order into the new order, without violent revolution. Also, as it appears, the person who opposes all change is the one who sows the wind and reaps the sirocco. He it is who fosters and brings to pass every revolution.

But, one asks, what is the reason behind every great change in human affairs? By what standard are the mighty forces of life measured? Ah! but that is an easy question to one who lives among men. The ultimate Court of Appeal dwells unseen, eternal, sleeplessly ready to give reply in the Hour of Fate. It is the Sense of Justice which abides within the Average Man's heart, and passes judgment in the end upon individuals and systems. It is that which when a man is dead fixes his place forever in the minds of his neighbors. It is that which sometimes says to human endurance: "It is enough—stand aside so that the old order may pass away." It is the "Reason behind Revolution," but it is infinitely more, that which prevents revolution.—Charles Howard Shinn in The Public.

BIBLE SCENES IN MODERN GARB.

Even the structures of the ancient city of Jerusalem have changed. Where once were crumbling walls and ancient temples are now blocks of government buildings. On the site of the Jaffa Gate is a broad and imposing avenue. In the streets are tramways and taxicabs, and the western water cart has supplanted the man on foot with his goatskin of water. In the Plains of Sharon and off on the tablelands between Jaffa and Jerusalem, steam-driven threshing machines and self-binding reapers are at work. Water is supplied by means of pumps driven by motors. Abraham's well at Beersheba being pumped in this fashion. Up-to-date motor boats now cross the Sea of Galilee and a scheme is under consideration whereby similar boats will ply the River Jordan.—The Argonaut.

ARE PARENTS RESPONSIBLE FOR THEIR CHILDREN?

The wise man Solomon has said: "Train up a child, in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."—Proverbs, 22:6.

In summing up the whole matter, a child will show its raising, as its character has been moulded, so it will be. We know that the nature of a child is, in growing up, to grasp after knowledge and intelligence. Again we know that a child will know no evil, except it first learns evil, neither will it know righteousness except it first is taught it, and have parents a greater opportunity to teach righteousness to any one than to their children.

There is a commandment given to children to honor thy father and mother, that thy days may be long upon the land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee. Exodus 20:12. Certainly children can not honor their parents correctly except their parents teach them how.

Parents can not be too strict in teaching them the right. Teaching that right will prevail, and wrong will bring bad results.

I have observed many times that parents do not correct their children as they ought. I believe it is Solomon that said, He that spareth the rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes. Prov. 13:24. In the preceding verse there is this thought. There is distinction for want of judgment.

The thought is almost universal, that the rod spoken of is a club, or something equally as bad to punish with. There are children made worse with such treatment. But there is a way to control a child with love. Teaching them to love and to love them with kindness and judgment, as Solomon refers to in Prov. 13:23. Also Job, 21:9. There is a statement in Rev. 12:5, that all nations were to be ruled with a rod of iron.

Again I have noticed some command a child not to do a thing, and even punish it because it did it. Then later allow the child to do the same and seem to delight in it. So when a child once learns it can control—as many let the child do as it pleases, instead of the parents controlling—they will continue to do so, and have a tendency to be master.

A great many parents do not know what their children are doing half the time, and as nearly all are surrounded with evil environments, they are very apt to be led astray.

The most precious jewel that a husband and wife can possess is a child. One that possesses a pure and noble character, in the likeness of the Christ.

If parents will strive more to rear children in righteousness not only parents, but all others who have association with children to set such an example before them, we will sooner come to the culmination of God's work he has designed here on earth, and there will ultimately be better men and women, and better homes; better environments for all.

Zion will be the pure in heart, and God desires us to mould pure character and pure character will make pure hearts.

These few lines I present to the ENSIGN readers for consideration, trusting that God's work will move on to the purpose he has designed.

CHARLES A. NOLAN.

LIVE IN THE SUNSHINE.

Live in the sunshine, don't live in the gloom;
Carry some gladness the world to illumine.

Live on the housetop, not down in the cell;
Open-air Christians live nobly and well.

Live where the joys are, and scorn defeat,
Have a good-morrow for all whom you meet.

Live as a victor and triumphing go
Through this queer world beating down every foe.

Live in the sunshine—God meant it for you!
Live as the robins and sing the day through.

Live in the brightness and take this to heart—
The world will be gayer if you'll do your part.

THE YEAR'S DEPARTING.

Oh, the years they come, and the years they go,
As a troop of soldiers, that march in a row,
To the tune of the whistle of old Father Time
Accompanied, forsooth with a merry chime,
As he jingles his bells and whistles away
And tells off the hour, the year, and the day.

And the years they come, Oh so old, so old.
And the years they go, it will scarce be told
How many we own, only to declare
The greswome array would give us a scare.

Oh, the menacing glee of old Father Time
As he axes his bells and jingles away,
And we bid fare-well to this year and a day.

And the years bring with them a sad regret
And a sadder truth we would fain forget,
As our mirrored visage all wrinkled beset
Looms before us first vaguely then more clear
As a distant "perhaps" and a present "near."
And old Father Time, in threatening glee
Seems to mock as he tells off the years to me.

Oh, the years they go, and one by one
They depart, as the day, with setting sun,
And old Father Time he whistles a tune,
For the vanishing March and swift vanishing June,
And that menacing smile he will wear it for aye,
As he whistles the years of our lives away.

"Froggie in the meadow
Won't get out;
Take a little stick
And stir him about."

The pen is mightier than the sword,
So think we here in Zion:
The softened mewling of a cat
Or roar of kingly lion
Is best portrayed in written word;
In truth we spar and box,
And toss the apple of discord
In the hands of Mary Knox.

Into the temple of our God
An enemy has come,
The truth, it needeth not the sword,
The pen will drive it home.
"Tis written," is the fearful charge;
Fine silks and linen frocks
Are not for humble saints to wear
Or so says Mary Knox.

But there are those who would decry
The mightiness of the pen;
It surely isn't good to feel
Its prickings, now and then.
Think they, the ill wind, if it blows,
The way of progress blocks;
And so the reverend board decides
To "sit" on Mary Knox.

Rather a different weapon use—
The sharpness of the sword,
The open play too much disturbs,
This bandying with a word.
Rather the peaceful pit-a-pat,
The doctrine orthodox
Than oh-ee, oh, my! what's that—
The squeal, when Mary Knox.

Better the squeal of pain by far
Than grunt of dire content;
Than, turning over in the mire
Is foe to betterment,
Better the cry of evil, then,
Of wolves amidst the flocks,
That draws attention to the ill
By awful Mary Knox.

But its all the difference in the world
In goring of the ox;
The tempest in a teapot brews
Anon for Mary Knox.
And at the end of conference year
Her doom they'll surely fix;
And at the counting of the votes
There'll be one for Mary—'Knox."

PETERSBURG, IND., Jan. 3.

Editor Ensign:—As I have answered quite a number of letters today I feel I owe you one also, as you have brought so many of them to me of late, laden with so many good things, that are a rejoicing to the heart. You are a precious news bearer, if we receive the same and seek to profit thereby, we will surely become a lovable people as you bring us so much wise counsel. May we heed that which has been given in the past, that we may live such lives and perform such labor during the year we have just entered and our haeds may be laden with many, even more precious things than that of the past to bring to your pages, that the weary may have the burdens lifted from them, and that comfort, cheer and sunshine may fill their hearts.

Our Father above has been so good to us in the past and shall we not do something to show that we appreciate his loving kindness.

I feel I have much to be thankful for as the Lord has greatly blessed me in the past year, in the preaching of the word and with good health and many other blessings, and my desire is to live worthy of these blessings and my desire not only to live worthy of such and even greater blessings, but that I may become a greater blessing to my fellowmen. The work is slowly progressing in Southern Indiana, but in some parts of the district the work is losing ground, in some places because some have neglected their duty and in other places, because some that have labored, got tired and have gone to Zion to rest. Why not work while it is day and when we have finished our work, the Lord will call us to Zion, and maybe we will then be the pure in heart of which Zion shall be made up.

The greater part of last summer I was the only missionary in the Southern Indiana District, but at the present, there are four of us and we find plenty to do. Bro. Fred Moser and Chas. A. Nolan are at Arthur, Ind., where they are preaching in a church. This is a new opening. And H. E. Moler is at Derby and the writer will start meetings in Petersburg tonight.

Any of the Saints of the district that wish preaching, please write to me in care of Moroni Sandage, Littles, Indiana, Route 13.

Wishing you all a prosperous year, I am as ever in bonds,

JACOB HALB.

MORRHED, Kan., Dec. 31.

Dear Ensign:—I feel I would like to say a few words to the saints although my few words may not be as interesting as others, I am the only Latter Day Saint in this part of the country. All the sermons I get are in the Ensign and I do enjoy reading them also the letters from the brothers and sisters. I ask the saints to remember me in their prayers I have had many trials and I ask the saints to pray for my children as none of them belong to the church.

I was called to Chicago twice last summer, once by sickness, once by death, I did want to meet with the saints so while there but could not. I would like to ask will some of the southside saints call on my daughters, Mrs. Alice Lamont 723 East 40th st. and Mrs. Louise Gwatney also lives there she lost her husband last August. I would love for them to meet some of the saints and get interested enough to attend church pray for me that I may overcome all trials.

MRS. B. M. SAVAGE.

FISHER, Ark., Jan. 6.

Dear Ensign:—This is a new place and the good work has not been going on here long only since about the 25th of last June. But ten have been baptized and I think if we can have some preaching done here will be several more who will obey. I have been reading as much as one could since I was baptized and the more I read the more I want to read.

I have not been able to work, suffering from affliction but ask all the good saints to pray for my recovery. That I may live and do some good in Christ Jesus' name yet before I am called to go.

We have got several interested in examining the work of the Latter Day Saint's church. We want everybody to read for himself and see whether we are right or wrong. We all had a merry Christmas.

Your brother in Christ Jesus,

JAMES CARRY.

PARIS, Tenn., Jan. 6, 1913.

Dear Ensign:—I will write a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard. Christmas has come and gone with its joys and sorrows and we felt to thank the God of heaven for the gift of his Son to a fallen world that he might redeem mankind. I also thank the Lord every day for the blessings he has given me and that I could understand the angel's message when it came to me.

Dear Saints let us strive to live humble and thankful to the Lord and put all our trust in him, so we can meet Christ when he comes. That will be a glorious day to the faithful but it will be a day of sorrow to the unfaithful so let us watch and pray lest we enter into temptation.

The Saints of this district feel strengthened and encouraged as a result of the debate here in November between Bro. H. E. Moler and J. D. Tant of the Christian church. Bro. Moler is an able defender of the truth; he was filled with the Spirit of wisdom and made it so plain from the Bible that our church is the Church that none could fail to see it, but those with a darkened mind. We felt thankful that we could sing from the heart that "I have found the glorious gospel that was taught in former years,

With its gifts and blessings all so full and free."

Bro. Moler won the love and respect of all except a few on Mr. Tant's side. Bro. Moler kept as cool as a morning breeze while Mr. Tant was trying to make it hot for him so Mr. Tant failed in that, as well as in everything else he tried to do. When Bro. Moler was delivering his last speech it went hard with Mr. Tant. Bro. Jess Roberts said he died hard. I am glad I belong to a church that can be overthrown.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. IDUMBA COBB.

HARWOOD, Mo., Jan. 5.

Dear Ensign:—I am still in the faith, and we are trying to keep the Lord's work alive. The branch is in fair condition, though some few are very slothful. The Sunday-school and religio work is doing fine for which I am thankful for we are renting and are not located for another year and if any one knows of an opening I would be glad to hear from them. I would work on a ranch as foreman. If there are any Saints at Bozeman, Montana, would be glad to hear from them as we are thinking of going there.

Would be glad to hear from any one anywhere or any time. My address is Route 605. I remain as ever

T. L. McCORMICK.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, Dec. 19.

Dear Ensign:—Since sending you the notice concerning the note book which I am getting out, and when I commenced the manual work thereon, I found that it would be necessary to increase the proposed size.

As I am issuing them the sheets are four and one-fourth by seven and one-fourth. I found that if I made them as small as I thought at first, that we could not get the number of sheets that would be required to contain the matter in the cover of the I. P. note book. Incidentally I will say that the price has not been enlarged.

I am enclosing you a couple of "Follow Up" letters which we have issued here, and we are sending out another soon. These letters are sent to those interested in this field, as far as we may be able to get their addresses.

We try to have the Saints each take a few,—as many as may be,—and send them as a personal letter, following them up as we issue them from time to time. Elder C. A. Smurthwaite is our editor, and we print them on the multigraph.

We hope for good results from this campaign.
Sincerely yours,
A. M. CHASE.

A PARABLE.

BY JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

Said Christ our Lord, "I will go and see How the men, my brethren, believe in me." He passed not again through the gate of birth, But made Himself known to the children of earth.

Then said the chief priests and rulers, and kings, "Behold, now, the Giver of all good things; Go to, let us welcome with pomp and state Him who alone is mighty and great."

With carpets of gold the ground they spread Wherever the Son of Man should tread, And in palace-chambers lofty and rare They lodged him, and served him with kingly fare.

Great organs surged through arches dim Their jubilant floods in praise of him; And in church, and palace, and judgment-hall, He saw his image high over all.

But still, wherever his steps they led, The Lord in sorrow bent down his head, And from under the heavy foundation-stones, The son of Mary heard bitter groans.

And in church, and palace, and judgment-hall, He marked great fissures, that rent the wall, And opened wider and yet more wide As the living foundation heaved and sighed.

"Have ye founded your thrones, and altars, then, On the bodies and souls of living men? And think ye that building shall endure Which shelters the noble and crushes the poor?"

"With gates of silver and bars of gold Ye have fenced my sheep from their Father's fold; I have heard the dropping of their tears In heaven these eighteen hundred years."

"O Lord and Master, not ourde the guilt, We build but as our tanners built; Behold thine images, how they stand, Sovereign and sole, through all our land.

"Our task is hard,—with sword and flame To hold thy earth forever the same, And with sharp crooks of steel to keep Still, as thou ledest them, thy sheep."

Then Christ sought out an artisan, A low-browed, stunted, haggard man, And a motherless girl, whose fingers thin Pushed from her faintly want and sin.

These set He in the midst of them, And as they drew back their garment-hem, For fear of defilement, "Lo, here," said he, "The images ye have made of me!"

A New York divine asserts that the Sunday newspaper is one of the "seven curses of the city." Certain citizens, for obvious reasons, think the Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday newspapers the other six.—New York Evening Sun.

Any man can preach what humanity likes to hear, but to preach what humanity needs requires backbone—and religion.

In 1913,
I want to see some things take place
Ere 1913 rolls away:
Some things I know will help the race.
Ere 1913 rolls away,
I want the kibosh put to greed;
A full supply for every need;
An end to war of creed on creed,
Ere 1913 rolls away.
I want to see a world-wide peace
Ere 1913 rolls away.
And hatreds, too, I hope will cease
Ere 1913 rolls away.
I want men judged by honest worth;
I want a newer, fuller birth
Of peace and good will o'er the earth,
Ere 1913 rolls away.
I want foul schemes to go away
Ere 1913 rolls away.
All lusts and hates hung Haman high
Ere 1913 rolls away.
I want youth's playtime sacred made;
I want the wolf of hunger laid;
And joy in every home displayed,
Ere 1913 rolls away.
I want to see toll recompensed
Ere 1913 rolls away.
The era of fair play commenced
Ere 1913 rolls away.
I want all men both near and far
To know and feel they're on a par—
That their brothers' keepers are.
Ere 1913 rolls away.
These, some few things, I'd like to see
Ere 1913 rolls away.
If so, this world would better be,
Ere 1913 rolls away.
Here's hoping, then, that you and I
Will buckle down and gladly try
To help the glorious time draw nigh
Ere 1913 rolls away.—The Commoner.

W. H. DEAM, Bus. Manager

In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address, and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription.

In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to

EDITORIAL

TRUE CULTURE.

The highest culture is to speak no ill;
The best reformer is the man whose eyes
Are quick to see all beauty and all error;
And by his own discreet, well ordered life,
Alone reproves the erring.

When they gaze

Turns upon thine own soul, be most severe,
But when it falls upon a fellow-man
Let kindness control it; and refrain
From that belittling censure that springs forth
From common lips like weeds from marshy soil.
—ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

CHARITY IN CONVERSATION.

Charity fails to find its true expression through mankind more in their use of words, whether spoken or written, than in any other way. Ofttimes while the hand is administering blessing the tongue speaks but to wound, and in some cases the speaker remains unconscious of the effect of his words.

They are not the habitual scandal-mongers, and backbiters whose words cause the greater harm, for usually their standing is such that people take little notice of them; but the friends, the moralists, the teachers, and the ministers, when they step beyond the bounds of true charity to spread abroad, or magnify the faults of others, cause wounded feelings, embittered spirits, and estrangements, which are not easily removed. Nor are these the only effects of this kind of conversation, for the joy of life of those who hear, or those who read when the uncharitable words are written, is disrupted, and their peace disturbed, while the one from whom the words flow weakens himself in the estimation of his fellow men; and before God.

So many who have established for themselves high ideals of life and conduct, and are diligent in maintaining their ideals in practice, fail in manifesting the high ideal in their attitude toward others. In their zeal for high standards they allow the shortcomings of others to be magnified in their own minds until the multitude of better things are lost sight of, and frequently they feel that they have a special mission to point out those shortcomings and make the delinquents come up to their own ideals.

Few persons have their characters equally developed in all points, and usually people are more conscious of their developed qualities than they are of those which have been neglected. We judge according to our own ideals and standards, and naturally those who do not come up to our standards are looked upon as being inferior by us. On the other hand our "inferiors" have their standards which are in some points in advance of ours, so that in judging us they look upon us as being inferior to themselves.

While men cannot be oblivious to others' faults, to take a charitable view of them is a certain evidence of nobleness of character. True charity will enable one to look leniently upon the frailties of others, and it is a quality which can be cultivated by every one. Good counsel was given by John Hall when he said, "Keep clear of personalities in conversation. Do not easily report ill of others, but as far as possible, look upon the good side of human beings. Keep the atmosphere as pure as possible, and fragrant with gentleness and charity."

The remedy is in each individual searching more deeply into his own character and judging accurately the degree of development of its several attributes, noting those that lack and working for their improvement; leaving other persons to work out their own development in such ways as they see fit. It is not to be understood that no help is to be extended to others in the development of their characters, but all that can be done for that purpose must be of an affirmative kind rather than negative if it is to furnish any real help.

Addison says that "Charity is a habit of good will, or benevolence, in the soul, which disposes us to the love, assistance, and relief of mankind, especially those who stand in need of it." Webster speaks of it as "a disposition that inclines men to put the best construction on the words and actions of others." Moroni says that "Charity is the pure love of Christ," and we might well add "applied by man to man."

These things are attainable only by the help of the Spirit which God gives to those who put themselves in a worthy condition and seek for it. That Spirit reproves the world of sin; it searcheth the hearts, and all things, and it reveals to the willing child of God conditions within his own soul of which he had been unconscious before. That Spirit does not indiscriminately and unnecessarily reveal the faults of one man to another, but if such revelation is made it is either for the purpose of warning the recipient of some danger, or qualifying him to be of service in assisting the erring one to overcome his sin.

By following the leadings of the good Spirit, and the example of Christ in this regard man will keep upon the safe side, and the application of the principle of charity by each one in his conversation will make the world more cheerful, and a better place in which others may make the development they need.

WANT SMOOT CASE RE-OPENED.

"At a meeting of the executive board of the National Congress of Mothers, which met in New York last week, it was resolved to ask the United States Senate to re-open the Reed Smoot investigation.

It was largely owing to the efforts of the Congress of Mothers, combined with those of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, that the investigation of Senator Smoot's career was started in 1906, and officers of the Congress, pointing out the fact that Smoot's exclusion was approved by a majority of the investigating committee, and was afterward rejected, have declared that they would not rest content till the case was re-opened.

The board also adopted a long set of resolutions against the Mormon Church, urging Congress to legislate for the punishment and prevention of polygamy throughout the country."

The above clipping from the Presbyterian shows that the "Mormon question" will not down. While we hold no sympathy with the Mormon church in its attitude toward the government, believing that no church should attempt to influence or dominate the affairs of civil government, we think that there are other evils which are at the present time far more subversive of our government than that which emanates from Utah. The foundations of the republic are already trembling through the influence of corrupt wealth, as also through the influence of a certain hierarchy of vastly greater power than the one in the West. The greater dangers should be first removed, for it is not wisdom to run to the orchard to chase a boy from the plum tree when robbers are plundering the house.

MY DUTY.

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbor good. One person I have to make good: Myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may.—ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

THE VOICE OF GOD.

When the young boy—Joseph Smith—had gone before the Lord to seek the light which he so urgently needed, and had commenced to pray, there came over him, according to his statement, a cloud of darkness which had such an effect upon him as to bind his tongue so that he could not speak, and which rendered him helpless, struggling against this unseen power which seemed about to destroy him, he exerted all his strength to call upon God for deliverance from his enemy, and at the moment when it seemed that he must sink in despair there appeared a pillar of light directly over his head which descended gradually until it rested upon him and around him. At the appearance of the light the power which had bound him fled, and he found himself released.

Looking into the light above him he saw two personages whose brightness and glory defied all description, one of whom speaking to him and calling him by name, said, pointing to the other, "This is my beloved Son; hear him!

Upon presenting his request for information as to which church he should join, he was answered that he should join none of them for they were all wrong. The personage who spoke to him said of those who were the professors of Christianity that "they draw near me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me, they teach for doctrine the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof."

The relation of this incident to one of the ministers by the boy, brought upon him denunciation, and he was told by the minister that it was all of the devil, and that there were no revelations or visions in these days, for all such things had ceased with the apostles. The news spread in the community and opposition grew into hot persecution. The whole community was stirred by it as ultimately was also the world.

In examining the recital of this incident in the life of this man it is found to bear the evidences of sincerity and truthfulness. There can be little doubt but that he saw the vision, and we have seldom or never heard the correctness of his claim questioned; but on the other hand those who have opposed him and the work commenced by him the most strongly, admit that he was sincere in his testimony, but attribute the experience to the work of the devil as did the first minister to whom it was told, or to a diseased and disordered mind.

But does the nature of the incident bear out the claim that it had its origin in his satanic majesty? If it was the devil who showed him this vision and spoke the words that he heard, we wonder what power it was that threw around him the cloud of darkness and brought his whole being under bondage, and would have destroyed him had it not been for the deliverance brought by the power that came with the light? There evidently were two opposing powers of opposite character manifested, one the power of darkness and the other the power of the light, one which brought into bondage and one which gave liberty and freedom, one which sought to destroy and one which sought to save by pointing to "the beloved Son," one which brought fear and pain and one which brought hope and joy. If we admit that there was any spiritual power at all in this vision, we must admit that there were two opposing powers—one satanic, and one divine.

As to the claim that the vision was the result of a diseased and disordered mind, it is so unreasonable as to seem unworthy of consideration; yet learned men have written books for the purpose of establishing such a theory. Disordered brains may sometimes produce visions but there is no case known where a vision or other product of such a mind appealed to the intelligence of hundreds of thousands of earnest men and women. No lunatic ever before or since had anything of the kind which constituted the beginning of a work the importance of which has demanded the attention of the greater part of the world as did this. No, men with diseased and disordered minds do not start movements and become the leaders of large communities of people numbering hundreds of thousand as did Joseph Smith. If he had been thus afflicted at this early age of fourteen, surely the years of severe mental and physical strain incident to his leadership, amid sufferings and persecutions, would have been sufficient to have completely wrecked him, but his history and writings show the perfect vigor of both body and mind up to the time of his death. The vision can not be accounted for upon the grounds of a diseased mind.

What of the nature of the message communicated to him in this vision? Does it have the characteristics of truth? Does it bear the impress of divinity? Has it stood the test of time?

In his account of this vision the young man did not say who the persons were who spoke to him, though the implication is so clear that none who were familiar with the Bible would hesitate to infer that they were God the Father of heaven and earth, and his Son Jesus Christ. The command, "This is my beloved Son; hear him," is one which could properly be made by the Father, for according to the Scriptures Jesus Christ was made the Mediator between God and man, and as a Mediator the Father honored him in speaking to man at this time, even as he expects man to honor him in coming to God. Satan does not point men to Christ and command them to hear him.

The further instruction that the churches were all wrong in their creeds, and that the people worshipped God with their lips rather than with their hearts, though it seems to be a severe criticism, yet time has tended to prove its truthfulness. When we remember that every church then extant had its origin since the time that revelation had ceased with John the Revelator, and that their creeds had been formed under varying circumstances to meet the immediate emergencies of the occasions and the people, without divine direction, the only conclusion that can be drawn is that both creeds and churches were altogether human, and subject to error. If God had led these people in their efforts toward Christianity and they had followed his leadings, they would all have been led to the same principles of truth, and to one organization, for the Apostle Paul declared there were but one faith, and one body.

Since this message came to this young man, the errors of creed and organization have been unconsciously admitted by nearly all of these institutions, in the revision of their creeds and the changing of their organizations, thus unwittingly establishing the truthfulness of the message. Today many organizations are leaving many of the things they have held dear so long, and are uniting, thus reducing the number of organizations. The churches themselves are coming to believe that Christ never designed that there should be more than one church, and one doctrine.

The message has stood the test of time, and each year brings changes in the institutions operating under the name of Christianity which confirm more and more the truthfulness of that message given to the boy of Palmyra. According to the history further instructions were given later authorizing and directing the establishment of a work which would give opportunity for people to walk in the right way.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The musicians and singers of Independence and surrounding branches caught the spirit of the general church choir on last Sunday. It will be remembered that at the last general conference a movement was set on foot directed toward the unifying of the local choirs of the church in their work, and bringing about a co-operative effort for the formation of a large choir for service at the general conferences, and Bro. Albert N. Hoxie, Jr., was appointed general director of the proposed chorus with power to do such work as was necessary to bring it into existence.

In pursuance of this work Bro. Hoxie has made a selection of anthems which are especially adapted to the spirit of the gospel work, and which have been published by the Theodore A. Presser Co. of Philadelphia, and are now in the hands of a number of the church choirs. Bro. Hoxie has visited and given assistance in training the choirs at Chicago, Omaha, Lamoni, St. Joseph and other places, and will reach Tulsa, Oklahoma, and St. Louis, and other points before conference.

For several days he has been in this locality and by his arrangements the choirs of the Independence, South Side, and Kansas City Central branches, met at the Independence church Sunday afternoon for rehearsal, ninety members being present, and under his leadership some excellent work was done. The feelings of gladness and delight which usually accompany such a service of song were magnified manifold by the thrilling influences of the Spirit of God which placed the seal of divine approval upon the effort, and made plain to the minds of some the wonderful possibilities of the power of music in the gospel work, and which in a large measure is now lying dormant in the church.

President Patrick M. Smith in a short address made to the body said that the saints had not appreciated what an enormous factor music was in our work. He said that some years ago he dreamed he saw a chorus of five-hundred voices in the church, and he had lived in hopes of seeing his dream realized, and at last general conference ventured to suggest that an effort be made in that direction. He appreciated what had been done and hoped the work would be continued. With his optimistic eye Bro. Hoxie sees the realization of that dream in two years, and in addition sees the movement extend to include orchestral and band work, so that the choir of five-hundred voices shall be supported by an orchestra of fifty pieces.

Whether the movement shall attain these proportions within this time we do not know, but it remains an evident fact that there are great possibilities before this department of the church work, and these must have been in the mind of the Lord when he said many years ago, "Let the young men and the maidens cultivate the gifts of music and of songlet not the middle-aged and the old forget the gladness of their youth and let them aid and assist so far as their cares will permit." It should not be forgotten too that the Lord said in this connection that the service of song should be with humility and unity of Spirit both in them that sing and them that hear, in which case it will be blessed.

It is expected that there will be a combined choir of 150 voices at the general conference at Lamoni, Iowa, in April, and arrangements will be made for the Independence and Kansas City choirs to go by special car.

Elder Joseph Luff spoke at the morning hour and we were in hopes that we might give the ENSIGN readers the benefit of his sermon which was reported by Sr. Belle R. James, but because of the too numerous duties Bro. Luff will find it impracticable to prepare the sermon for publication. The usual afternoon prayer service was held which was good, having a large attendance. Two were confirmed by Brn. Luff and Garrett. Elder W. H. Kelley of Independence was the evening speaker.

The following items from the annual report of the Independence Sunday-school will be of interest to our many readers.

Enrollment of main school December 31, 1911.....	887
Enrollment of main school December 31, 1912.....	1049

Forty-nine members were present every Sunday. One class had a perfect attendance for entire year.

About one hundred of the South Side saints met on Monday evening at the church from where they marched to the home of Bro. H. W. Gould, president of the South Side Branch, taking him altogether by surprise. The evening was pleasantly occupied with speeches, music, etc. In behalf of the saints Bro. W. H. Kelley with an appropriate speech presented their host with five flexible books, viz., the King James and Inspired translations of the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Hymnal, to which Bro. Gould feelingly responded.

A box social will be held at Walnut Park chapel next Monday evening under the auspices of the Religio.

The Ensign Office has received an order for the ENSIGN to be sent to Hong Kong, China. Last year a copy went weekly to India, while many other foreign points are included in the subscription list.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

The writer is away so much of the time that his wife was chosen to do the writing when he is absent so we will try and always get our branch items to you every other week.

The branch work is moving along nicely both temporally and spiritually. We have secured Elder J. S. Roth to hold a series of meetings to begin at his option, possibly as soon as he finishes his engagement at Stewartville, Mo., where he is having a full house every night.

Our Sunday-school is gaining in number, the regular scholars often bringing new scholars with them who attend regular themselves now. Our Religio is also well attended and good interest is shown and three sets of church histories sold as a result of their interest.

Our prayer meetings are well attended and the many blessings they receive are testified of. Elder J. L. Bear and the writer has done all the preaching since our last letter to good effect and success.

The Far West District is well represented here on account of the Sunday-school and Religio convention which is being held at the First St. Joseph Branch, Saturday and Sunday, 18th and 19th.

Elder Chas. P. Paul, bishop's agent, is a guest of the writer and family. He is here in the interest of the line of tithing, and counseling his sub-agents as to points not fully understood. Bro. Charlie takes interest in this line of work and it never costs the church a penny for the many thousands of dollars collected by him or his sub-agents.

The writer wishes to state that on a business trip to Topeka, Kansas, he preached morning and evening, January 12th, and found that branch in a prosperous spiritual condition under Bro. Lucas (priest) as president. There being no elder there the writer administered to various sick folks and consecrated a supply of oil for them. Bro. Lucas is a fine appearing young man and succeeds in getting one of his sermons published in the Topeka Capital every Monday morning. What think ye of this saints? These published sermons bring people of every faith out to hear him. The editor of that great paper makes but very little if any alterations on his articles which set forth all the principles of doctrine and differences between the Salt Lake Church and the Reorganized Church.

A. A. RICHARDSON.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

The morning of January 12th, was the Christmas barrel opening and a nice short program was enjoyed after the Sunday-school lesson. As all the offerings were not returned we cannot give the full amount as yet.

Our newly elected superintendent, Bro. H. C. Burgess has arranged to have a responsive reading of one of the Psalms before the lesson and at the close someone previously appointed comments on the subject contained therein. The morning of the 19th the first Psalm was read and Bro. Archibald very ably explained it.

The regular priesthood meeting was held at 5:30 p. m. January 12th. Bro. Reeves occupied the morning hour, January 12th, his subject being, "Go On to Perfection."

Our aim should be to progress and contentment hinders progression. Bro. Archibald was the evening speaker his theme being "The Integrity of God's Word." Bro. Archibald also occupied the evening of Jan. 19th taking the sufferings of Paul's life as an example for us.

We were pleased to be privileged to hear the initiatory sermon of Bro. E. C. Bell who was recently ordained to the office of a priest the morning of January 19th. He truly was blessed in his effort. His reading was the 23d Psalm, taking his text from Mark 11:22, also reading of the experience of the three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace. His theme being "Faith."

The district Sunday-school and Religio will hold a joint convention, Jan. 25th and 26th. The election of both auxiliaries and business sessions will be held at 4 and 7 p. m. Saturday, and a splendid program is arranged for Sunday beginning at 2 p. m. Addresses, papers, discussions and musical numbers are arranged, a feature worthy of mention is an address by Bro. Rushton. The evening address will be 7:15 instead of 8 p. m.

Among recent worshippers with us were Bro. Parsons of Bourbon, Mo., and Bro. Burroughs of Brush Creek, Mo.
ELIZABETH PATTERSON.

CENTRAL CHURCH, KANSAS CITY, MO.

During the months that have passed since the last report from this branch we believe we have made progress in every way. We are gratified to be able to report better attendance at all meetings and more interest in every line of church work. Visitors from other branches have been with us and cheered us up by their presence and by using the talents that God has given them.

Sept 29th a social purity meeting was held in charge of Bro. E. W. Lloyd at which Dr. W. H. Smith of the Grandview Sanitarium and Bro. J. A. Tanner of Central church were the principal speakers. A large congregation was present and the meeting was a profitable one. Oct. 13th was occupied by the Stake Good Literature committee and a splendid program was rendered. October 18th, Bro. Alex Mcintosh Jr. and several young men and women from various branches, occupied the evening hour and the large congregation present was instructed and edified by talks on the Word of Wisdom, character, sociability, pride and the advantages of being a member of the church. It was evident that they had not forgotten the command of the Lord to cultivate the gift of music and song. Altogether the evening was one of interest and pleasure.

During the month ten lectures were delivered on the subject of Book of Mormon by Fred Cleveland which were poorly attended, people in this neighborhood do not seem to care to become acquainted with the contents of the "Golden Bible." November 3rd a musical program was rendered in charge of Sr. Myrtle Robertson which was enjoyed by those present.

Bro. and Sr. Ed Stewart was called upon to part with their baby boy. It was three months old and was sick only a few hours.

Bro. E. W. Lloyd will continue to preside over the Sunday-school and will be assisted by Sr. Margaret Robertson, the Religio under the leadership of Bro. Will Grainger is doing fine, the attendance being good and programs splendid. The teachers and officers make it a practice to be always present. Brn. Francis A. Evans, P. J. Raw, Simpson Farrington and J. H. Kaplinger will be the presiding officers for the coming six months. Bro. Farrington was lately ordained to the teacher's office and is trying to learn his duty. Mrs. Kenworthy and Womack are in poor health and desire the prayers of the saints. Bro. Thomas Lewis is still unable to care for himself, he has been an invalid for almost five years.

During the first week of this year Bro. William Lewis was with us and in the eight sermons he delivered, a great deal of instruction and good advice was given to us. We were helped and strengthened by his visit. Bro. and Sr. Nanny are home after a month's absence in Arkansas. Bro. Nanny endeavored to present the gospel to the people while there. All of our members are not active but some at least are trying to keep the financial law as well as the spiritual. More than $400 was collected in this branch during the past six months.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Considering Matt. 25:31-46; comparatively who are the sheep, the goats, and the brethren?

The passage seems to refer to the last judgment when "all nations" shall be gathered before the Son of man. While the common understanding is that the sheep refer to the obedient children of God, verses 37-40 destroy such an interpretation by showing that these sheep, or righteous ones, upon the right hand are not acquainted with Christ, and that they were unaware that the works for which they were rewarded had been done for him. The scriptures show that the children of God—those who have been obedient to the gospel—will be received by Christ at his coming and will be with him during the thousand years. (Read Matt. 25:10; 1 Cor. 15:23; Rev. 20:4,7, and others.) In Matt. 12:49-50 the Lord pointed to his disciples and called them his brethren, and says further "Whosoever shall do the will of my father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother." This makes it clear that the "brethren" who are with Christ at the time of judgment are those who have been obedient to his law, and they are distinct from those who stand upon the right hand and upon the left. There are many people in the world whose lives are noble and full of good works, but who do not obey the full law of Christ and never will. It is this class who will receive favor and reward in the day of judgment and standing upon the right hand of Christ will be permitted to enter into a kingdom of glory, in harmony with 1 Cor. 15: 39, 40. The goats who "shall go away into everlasting punishment" must be of the same class as the unprofitable servant in verse 30, and referred to in John 5:29 as "they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation," and in Rev. 20:15 as those who "were not found written in the book."

Is there scriptural reading, if so where is it found, for the statement that the saints shall judge the world, and does that mean that they shall sit in judgment at the day of judgment?

The passage referred to is probably in 1 Cor. 6:2. So little is found upon that point that it is difficult to determine in what way and to what extent the saints may participate in the judgment. Ps. 49:14; Dan. 7:22; Matt. 19:28; and Rev. 20:6 show that dominion, or the power to rule including the power to judge, will be given to the righteous, under Christ who sits upon the throne of his glory.

Please explain what the Apostle Paul meant in Ephesians 2:8,9.

In chapter one Paul speaks of the working of the mighty power of God in Christ when "he raised him from the dead and set him at his own right hand," etc., and made him to be the head over all things; and in chapter two, verse one he says, "And you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." He goes on to show that when they had been walking in the ways of the flesh, God had called them out and quickened them together with Christ, (verses 3,6), and it was thus by the mercy or grace of God that they were saved. At a later time the Lord said "The Spirit enlighteneth every man through the world, that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit, and every one that hearkeneth unto the voice of the Spirit cometh unto God." (Doctrine and Covenants 83:7). This shows that without the leading of God's Spirit light and life cannot come; "It is the gift of God." While salvation is a gift of God, it is only to those who are willing to follow the leading of his Spirit and do the things required in the law. Neither faith nor works alone will bring salvation but both together, the works being ordered by true faith in God's word. See James chapter two; John 3:5; Rev. 2:5, and other passages.

Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints protestant or non-protestant?

The reorganized church is neither protestant nor Catholic, having its origin altogether independent of any other organization upon earth. It is a remarkable fact that every protestant church had its origin within some previous organization, all of which are traceable to the Catholic or Roman church. The true church had its origin in the revelation of God and its authority traceable to angels sent of God in fulfillment of Rev. 14:6, 7; Mal. 3:1; 4:5, and other Scripture.

CORRESPONDENCE

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.

Dear Ensign:—Having just returned, my wife and I, from a trip through Arkansas and Oklahoma, I thought possibly a brief statement of trip and conditions might be of interest to at least those living in above territory.

The first point visited was Grannis, Ark. There the saints have a substantial house of worship, beautifully located, it was built by the united efforts of the saints, especially Bros. Ed Clinton and Elzie Youmans.

This place was the first battle ground of Bro. J. F. Curtis and Elder Boguard of the Baptist faith and the splendid victory for truth is still an inspiration to the saints, and often spoken of by many outsiders.

In connection with Bro. J. T. Riley, minister in charge of Western Arkansas, we held forth several nights, interest excellent and our conclusions are that by a wise, united, effort upon the part of the saints, an ingathering is near. Care must be used and, unity of action, be the watchword.

Our next stop was at Wilburton, Okla., where there is a branch of about 250 members, there they also have a comfortable house of worship.

This branch has been favored from time to time with the labors of most all the missionaries, who have labored in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Northern Texas, including a visit from Bro. Joseph Smith. There we met Bro. J. W. A. Bailey, of Warrensburg, Mo. He is president of the Central Oklahoma District and was presenting the gospel and the duties of the saints in power and much assurance. We assisted him for about a week. Bro. Hudson Harder and family live there. He is of the missionary force and formerly lived at Lamoni, Iowa, and is ever ready to render assistance to the work in every way possible.

We also mention Bro. and Sr. L. S. Moore and family who are always forward in every good word and work, also Dr. Dalby and wife, David Harder and wife and other noble saints too numerous to mention. On our leaving, we felt that good had come to us and we trust to the saints and to the work. We also felt that if zeal and saintly courage is observed this branch will be among the best of the church.

Our next objective point was the Rock Creek Branch where we visited with the family of Bro. Earl D. Bailey, at nights preaching at the town of Sperry, where we obtained the use of the new school-house. Attendance good, also liberty of spirit excellent, and invitations to continue, come back and stay longer were freely given. There is a fine opportunity for preaching at that place, several good saints live there who will assist in every way necessary.

Our next stop was at Tulsa, where there is a number of worthy saints. Among the number being Bro. and Sr. W. N. Robinson, Bro. and Sr. Adamson, Sr. Hettie King, Sr. Fry and others whose names we do not now recall.

There is no branch at Tulsa, but a fine Sunday-school is maintained under the management of Bro. Adamson, Bro. and Sr. Robinson, with other good assistants. We also met our genial sister, Jennie Yingling there. She and daughter, Louise being visitors at the home of her brother W. N. Robinson.

We occupied as the speaker at 11 a. m., Sunday, also in the evening and felt well in our work.

Our experience with the membership of the church is that with many there is a lack of studious investigation of the written word, also a failure to keep in close touch with the work by neglecting to carefully read our church periodicals, which furnish such a continuous fountain of light. No one can afford to neglect the constant pursuit of them.

Now as we enter upon the threshold of the New Year let our chief determination be to see that our service may commend us to God and to all good people, and if failure of any kind does come let it not be in the God part of our work and service.

Ellis Short.

MEDICINE LODGE, Kan. Dec. 29.

Editor Ensign:—After the death of my dear companion, Melvin L. Newland, last July 15th at Wagoner, Okla. I moved with my three children to this place, and am living with my mother, who is also a widow.

My oldest child a boy of eleven years was baptized by Bro. J. W. A. Bailey before we left Wagoner. Our membership is in the Wagoner branch. My husband was president of the Wagoner branch from its organization until his death and was a tireless worker for his Master. He was ordained an elder last February, and was ever ready to perform his duty at all times, and was a kind and affectionate husband and father. Words can not express how we miss him. We are very lonely here. There are no saints in this part of the state that we know of, and long to hear some more good gospel sermons. The sermons I hear at the other churches have so little gospel in them, and I get so little benefit from them that I do not care much about going to hear them.

I read the many good letters from other saints in the Ensign and I certainly know how to sympathize with the isolated ones. I shall always remember our association with the saints of Wagoner and their kindness to us in our great sorrow I was very sorry that circumstances were such that made it necessary for me to move away from the branch there for the saints there are dear to me and my prayer are that they may ever live worthy of the name which they bear and that the branch will grow and prosper. I feel a great responsibility in raising my little ones and realize how hard it is to be away from the influence of the true church and Sunday-school.

I ask an interest in your prayers that I may live faithful and raise my children as they should be. And pray especially for my boy who was baptized this last July and we came here right away he has never got to meet with the saints or hear a gospel sermon since that day. I know it will be hard for him and too not having a father to guide him is still worse. I was glad to read of the good work Bro. Case and others are doing among the Lamanites. Any elders passing this way would be welcome at our home and we would try to get a place for them to preach.

Ever praying for the upbuilding of Zion and His blessing upon the honest in heart.

Your sister in Christ,
LULU F. NEWLAND.

ALVA, Wyo., Jan. 3.

Editor Ensign:—Having enjoyed reading the ENSIGN so much am contributing a short letter of my own with the hopes that it may strengthen some other brother or sister's faith. I am a firm believer in the restored gospel and know it is of God. My dear husband was called away a short time ago and I have had several manifestations of the Spirit, which have been such a lot of comfort to me. I am so thankful to the dear Father that he led me to read and find the truth in this church. Before I was baptized in this church, I united with the Cambellite church and was baptized in that church. I was not satisfied in that church, but can say that I am perfectly satisfied with the Latter Day Saint faith, and am satisfied that it is Christ's church. I am hoping for the redemption of Zion, and I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be faithful.

Your sister in Christ,
GERTRUDE MORRIS.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Dec. 25, 1912.

Dear Ensign:—Not seeing anything from this place I will try and drop a few lines as there may be some who would like to hear from the historic spot. Peace, generally

I believe, is in the branch, and we have some good meetings here. I think the saints should be the happiest people in the world as they have the chance of the message of life as well as others and have the gospel in its fullness, and the assurance of the gifts and blessings by living according to the covenants entered into in the waters of baptism.

As this is the day set apart in which to commemorate the day of Christ's birth I desire, that from this day on I shall be more like him, in deed and in thought.

May the Lord bless each and every one with that degree of the Spirit that will help us to see alike and live by the gospel law.

Your brother in bonds,
JAMES MOORE.

AGATE, Nebr., Dec. 26.

Editor Ensign:—As I was sending in my renewal and three others for the ENSIGN I thought I would write a few lines from this part of the country,—Sioux County Nebraska. This is a new country to some of us, and is not very thickly settled on account of every one having 640 acres. That makes neighbors quite a distance apart, but we do not have much to do this time of the year but hitch up and hunt them up, and have a grand social chat. Every body is very sociable as a rule.

This is a nice country to live in when we do not have too much snow, and we surely have been blest so far this winter. The ground is bare and the air very pure and bracing. We had a Christmas tree and a good program by the school children. Every body had a good time. This country would be all right if there were not so many sand hills all around us. The wind seems to be delighted in sifting it over our way, and we live three miles from them.

This is mostly a grazing country, but we raised some fine small grain this year, also corn, and the very best of potatoes.

Bro. Layland came across from the Gearing conference the last of September and did some preaching in this vicinity. Held meetings at our school house, and at Bro. Brown's, and at our home. Some were quite interested, eight were baptized. B. A. Montgomery and son Hamel and wife; Mrs McCullough and two daughters, Nora and Bertha. Also two children of Bro. Brown's. This was the first preaching by our people in this part of the country. We were very glad to have the brother with us as we had not heard a sermon for three years. Some others are interested. Our own son and wife were going to be baptized but were called to South Dakota on account of sickness. When they got there she was taken sick and had to have an operation, but is getting along nicely, and we expect them home in a few days, then I suppose if Bro. Layland is not out of the country they will be baptized. The brother went from here to Harrison, Nebraska, twenty-six miles from here, where he is holding meetings. We have four members at Harrison; Bro. and Sr. Proctor and daughter and husband. I fear the waste basket so will close.

Yours in the one faith,
D. W. ALBERTSON.

HARTFORD, Mich., Jan. 7, 1913.

Editor Ensign:—We are still struggling to keep the work alive here and have testimony of God's watchcare over us and his approval of our weak efforts. Perhaps the following testimony would be of interest to the ENSIGN readers.

On Saturday evening December 14, 1912 my daughter, Sr. Lena Robertson, wife of H. N. Robertson, jeweler, received a very ugly flesh wound by the accidental dropping and discharging of one chamber of a 38 caliber colts revolver the ball entering the front of her right leg just above the ankle passing between the two bones and coming out at the back just below the knee making an ugly wound of eight inches or more in length, requiring immediate assistance of a surgeon.

As soon as possible the law of the Lord was honored and Elder Francis Earl was called upon to administer, and on December 31st in the afternoon she went to the store and after arriving there walked around without the aid of either crutch or cane and limping but very little and would nearly healed, and this without any pain to speak of; and on Jan. 2d she walked to the store a distance of six blocks around town some and then home again without any injury whatever. This has been a marvel to the neighbors, but while the surgeon did his duty in the line of his profession those afflicted did theirs in honoring the law of the Lord to whom alone is due the honor of this speedy recovery.

Yours in gospel love,
MRS. LUCY C. TRUMBULL.

O'FALLON, Ill., Dec. 30.

Editor Ensign:—Please send me your paper for I have been very lonesome without it. I have missed it a great deal for there are so many good sermons in it, and I know it is the Lord's work.

I have belonged to this church for nearly three years and the Lord has been with me and has shown me many things. I am standing on the solid rock that cannot be moved, for I know that this is the true church of Jesus Christ.

Before I came into the church I knew I had to do a great deal to get started right. I was a great lover of intoxicating drink, and tea and coffee, and tobacco, and tried at different times to quit but never could until I got the help of the Lord. I certainly feel to rejoice at the step I have taken with the Lord, and I rejoice in the work. We have a little branch of thirty-four members. The Sunday-school gave an entertainment on December 28th, and it was nice to hear the children render their parts.

Our boy was having fainting sicknesses, and would fall as if dead anywhere at any time, but after getting Bro. Dowker, elder, to administer to him he was not bothered after, and we are rejoiced over it. I have been afflicted and have been healed. I am superintendent of the home department, and am teaching a little class in the Sunday-school, and hope to go onward and upward in this work, and be faithful.

Your brother in the gospel,
Robert L. Ferguson.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT.

MRS. H. C. PITSEMBERGER.

The divine ego of man was in the beginning with God and was not created or made. Intelligence always existed in some condition.

"Intelligence or the light of truth was not created or made, neither indeed can be." Man was in the beginning with God." (Doc. and Cov. 90:5) Webster says "create" to make or produce by new combinations of matter already existing.

God in speaking of the spiritual creation in latter day revelation said, "by the power of my Spirit created I them." (Doc. and Cov. 28:8.)

God who is the Supreme Intelligence out of the existing intelligence created all the spirits of the different forms of intelligence from man to the smallest insect.

"God, is the god of the spirits of all flesh" (Num. 16:22.)

He placed all these different forms of intelligence in a sphere free to act for themselves. They are independent of other intelligences within the prescribed limit of their own sphere.

"All truth is independent in that sphere in which God has placed it to act for itself as all intelligence also; otherwise there is no-existence. (Doc. and Cov. 90:5).

Our spirits existed in heaven before our bodies were made. "I the Lord God had created all the children of men, and not yet a man to till the ground; for in heaven created I them and there was not yet flesh upon the earth." (Gen. 2:6 I. T.)

Alma says, "behold it hath been made known unto me by an angel that the spirits of all men as soon as they are departed from the mortal body—are taken home to God who gave them life." (Alma 19:43 B. M.)

We have no record of the acts of our agency there; but as our natural ability was determined before we could exercise our agency or choice here who shall say that we were not employed in the accomplishment of the designs of our Father to be carried out in the temporal creation.

The first rebellion that we have any account of was enacted in heaven. God who is perfect in intelligence knew that when man was placed upon the earth that he would fall; and when the plan of the redemption of the human family from the fall was being considered, Lucifer, a son of the morning, and an angel in authority in the presence of God, said he would go and meet the conditions, not one should be lost, if God would reward him with his honor and power.

God did not accept him and because of their agency he led a third part of the host of heaven in rebellion against God.

He was cast out of heaven and became "the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience."

That rebellion did not end when he and his host were cast out; it has been raging in the battlefield of the human heart since the fall of man.

THE TEMPORAL CREATION.

The spiritual creation which was first completed. The designs of the temporal creation which was the second creation are ready to be carried into execution by natures executive committee.

The price of the plan of redemption has been reckoned in the gift of God's Only Begotten Son.

The foundations of the earth are ready to be laid out of the existing eternal elements.

For this is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man" (Doc. and Cov. 22:23 edition of 1911.)

The foundations of the earth are laid; the measuring lines stretched upon it; the foundations fastened; the cloud made a garment for it; the sea shut up with set bars and doors, that it come no farther, and its proud waves staid; the morning was commanded; the day-spring caused to know his place; the rain fell to satisfy the desolate and waste ground; the tender herb sprang forth; the sun given for a light by day; the ordinances of the moon and stars for light by night.

Man was not yet upon the earth.

THE CREATION OF MAN.

Since God created the earth for his glory and the immortality and eternal life of man, he knew that those spirit beings whom he had created in heaven could come in contact with the environment of this life only through earthly conditions.

And that the earth might answer the end of its creation and the spirit have a body in the resurrection, the spirit must bear the image of the "earthly."

Of the sixty-eight elements (now known to man) that compose the liquids, solids, and gases of the material world fifteen enter into the composition of the human body. God created the physical body of Adam out of the dust of the earth. It was of the earth "earthly." He created it in his own image that it might have correspondence with him. He endowed it with eyes, ears, hands and feet and all the physical organs that constitute man. He breathed into it the breath of life and it became a living soul—a channel of physical life to others.

The rays of light as they met the eye enabled the Spirit to come in contact with the environment of vision.

The ear responded to the waves of sound as they were produced by the voices of nature and the spirits responsive chords reproduced them in harmony. It was adapted to its environment.

After the lower forms of animal life had been created and brought to Adam that he might name them there was not found a companion for him, God caused a deep sleep to fall upon him and He took one of his ribs and made a woman and brought her unto him.

We cannot go beyond the divine creative act of God in making a woman out of a rib, when He had created Adam and the lower forms of animal life out of the dust of the ground. She was not taken from the hand that she should serve; nor from the foot that should be trampled upon; nor from the head that she should rule; but from near the heart of Adam that she might be to him as his other self to love as himself.

He understood the relationship of the woman to himself and said, "This I know is bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh. Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh. They were representatives of the highest form of functorial life through which the divine purpose of the creation was to be wrought. They were given the care of the Garden of Eden which God had planted as the beginning of their life work.

There were a number of fruit trees in it, the fruit of which they were privileged to partake of; but they had been commanded that in the day that they should partake of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil" they should die.

"Nevertheless thou mayest choose for thyself, for it is given unto thee; but remember that I forbid it. (Gen. 2:21 I. T.)

As intelligence is free to act in the sphere in which God placed it, it was free to act for itself when God placed it in the "Garden of Eden."

They could choose for themselves whether they would partake of the tree of life or whether they would partake of "the tree of knowledge of good and evil" which would separate them from God.

"Behold here is the agency of man and here is the condemnation of man because that which was from the beginning is plainly manifest unto them and they receive not the light."—Doc. and Cov. 90:5.

Adam had never been away from God and that which was from the beginning was ever before him Light and truth was not manifest unto him for he knew no darkness or error.

There was something lacking in him. He had not a knowledge of good and evil." And it must needs be that the devil tempt the children of men or they could not be agents unto themselves; for if they never should have bitter, they could not know the sweet. (Doc. and Cov. 28:10.)

THE FALL.

We do not know how long they remained in the garden before the following took place:

Satan—Yea hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

Eve—We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat it of neither shall ye touch it lest ye die.

Satan—Ye shall not surely die; for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods knowing good and evil.

Adam and Eve must not partake of the fruit of the forbidden tree or that which God had said would follow. God is not changeable.

They yielded to the temptation of Satan and in yielding they transgressed the commandment and became subject to the will of the Devil.

Because of the transgression justice had a claim upon them, and the divine attribute of justice must be met; otherwise God would be changeable and the plan of redemption frustrated.

God cast them out of the garden of Eden and they became spiritually dead.

IN THE REALM OF RESEARCH AND INVESTIGATION.

They were in a realm where they could no longer partake of the tree of life and live. They had no power within themselves to maintain life. Correspondence between their soul and its Spiritual environment had ceased. Their spiritual death would naturally result in their physical death; for by their transgression sin entered; and death is the result of sin.

The seeds of disintegration were already sown.

"Dust thou art unto dust returnest thou" was awaiting them. They would soon fall out of correspondence with their physical environment.

The ear would no longer respond to the waves of sound. No human voice could awaken them. The eye would no longer meet the rays of light. Their dead bodies would soon be cast out from the presence of their children. And as dead bodies are cast out from the presence of the living, so they had by their transgression been cast out of the Garden of Eden, from the presence of God.

They were commanded to till the earth and earn their bread by the sweat of their brow. We do not know whether Adam was sufficiently versed in horticulture to know whether there would be an early fall or not, but he was in a realm where he might of himself learn a good many truths by research and investigation. Outside the circle of this realm was God but it was impossible for him to find Him.

"Canst thou by searching find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? It is as high as heaven; what canst thou do? deeper than hell; what canst thou know? The measure thereof is no longer than the earth, and broader than the sea. If he cut off, and shut up or gather together—who can hinder him? (Job 11:7-11).

They had been cut off from the tree of life. The door to their spiritual vision had been closed. If he cut off and shut up . . . who can hinder? God held within his power the right to close the door to his spiritual vision. With all the searching and wisdom of Adam, he could not find God unless he opened unto him.

The door has been closed to man's spiritual vision from that day to this only when God sees fit to reveal himself unto man. The curtain is drawn between our spiritual existence in heaven and our spirits clothed upon with an infant body. We enter upon the experiences of life with no previous knowledge of them. According to the best evidence obtainable nature receives the infant from the arms of its mother without a single idea of the meaning of anything. He gazes in wonder at his hands. Does not know that they are a part of himself.

Anatomical evidence reveals a nervous mechanism fairly well organized. It has all the organs found in the human body when Adam was created. He is a perfect babe but not a full developed man. And into the frail palace of his infant soul come unnumbered messages of pleasure or pain. From hand, foot, face and finger-tips, come messages of joy or pain that by some mute logic are traced to their source. And by these experiences of pain and pleasure he grasps the idea of externality and self."

By and by nature begins his training by compelling him to ask questions. She sets interrogation points all along the road-side and he runs into them.

He asks, What makes it dark? Does the sun go to rest because it is dark? What makes the moon run with you when you run, and stand still when you stand still? Who made the stars? Who made God? Can God see me in the night when I am asleep? When does God sleep? There are question marks in every empty bird's nest and in every ghostly shadow that goes creeping over the hill; in the stars above, in the rocks beneath. For him the world is filled with wonders and they still increase as he arrives at more mature years. Her interrogation points become interrogations in the mind of man and he is searching them out.

Man is not satisfied with his present attainment. He was not satisfied with our first locomotive, he must make an improvement, and the Pullman car is the result. He was not satisfied with the laying of the Atlantic Cable he must establish communication over land and sea; and today the world is called a "whispering gallery" because of its network of communication.

He was not satisfied with the present mode of travel he must go through the air, and aeroplanes is the result. The great discoveries and inventions of the day are the result of research and investigation.

Man with all his wisdom and achievements is not satisfied. There is a yearning for that which will satisfy the soul. He may study astronomy and find the "Star of Bethlehem;" or botany and find the "rose of Sharon," or "the lily of the valley;" or archaeology and find "the rock of ages;" or history and find the "father of the race." But he cannot find God unless God opens unto him.

THE GOSPEL LAW COMMITTED TO MAN.

Adam had transgressed the law given in the Garden of Eden. Mercy could have no claim upon him until justice had been satisfied in death.

Through the atonement which had been reckoned in the death of the "Only Begotten Son of God" mercy could reach him.

"God gave unto Adam and his seed, that they should not die aeternally the temporal death . . . until he had sent his angels to declare unto them repentance and redemption through faith on his Only Begotten Son."

He appointed unto him the days of his probation; "that by his natural death he might be raised in immortality unto eternal life;" "wherefore teach it unto your children that all men everywhere must repent or they can in no wise enter the kingdom of God. . . . Therefore I give unto you a commandment to teach these things freely unto your children, saying that by reason of transgression cometh the fall, which fall bringeth death; and inasmuch as ye were born into the world by water and blood and the spirit which I have made, and so become of dust a living soul; even so ye must be born again, into the kingdom of heaven, of water and of the Spirit, and be cleansed by blood, even the blood of mine Only Begotten.—Gen. 6:59-62, I. T.

THE SPIRITUAL BIRTH.

God's laws are alike in the physical and spiritual realm. Our spirits pass from the spiritual realm into the physical by birth. And we pass from the physical into the spiritual by birth. Birth means "passing from one element to another."

The physical birth is conditioned in the flesh and transmits only physical life. The spiritual birth is conditioned in the gospel and transmits spiritual life. Earthly fathers are fathers of the flesh only. The physical body, the offspring of man, when subjected to analysis is found to be all earthly elements. The Spirit of God cannot be analyzed by man for it is of God.

"The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God . . . neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned."—1 Cor. 2:14. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard;" "Having eyes to see they see not, and ears to hear they hear not." Isaiah said many years before Christ was born that "he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears."

The personal presence of Christ in flesh and blood did not reveal to those around him that he was the Son of God. This revelation must come from God the Father of our spirits.

"The things of God knoweth no man but the Spirit of God."—1 Cor. 2:11.

Christ was in the world and the world was made by him and it knew him not. Flesh and blood cannot see the kingdom of God. "Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again."—John 3:7. This statement clearly teaches a new birth, or the ushering in of a new life. But before there can be birth there must be a begetting. We cannot be born again by "just believing." There is no such thing as "self-begetting." That is a man made law in the creeds of men. God has nothing to do with it. We read, "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." God by the preaching of the gospel, begins to quicken the spiritual germ that is implanted, and in due time it begins to grow and there is a desire for baptism.

The birth takes place in baptism. The element of sin is left and there is entrance into the church or kingdom of God.

The door to the spiritual vision has been opened by birth, just as the door to the physical vision has been opened by birth. There is a babe in Christ, for it has just been born. It is not a perfect man which has attained unto the measure of the fullness of the stature of Christ, but it is a perfect babe. And as new born babes must be nurtured with tender care, so must new born babes in Christ be nurtured in the word of truth.

The physical man discerns the things of the material world through the physical sense perceptions. The spiritual man discerns the things of God through the spiritual sense perceptions. Spiritual things are not revealed to the babe in Christ all at once, for it has just come out of the darkness into the light, and is not capable of beholding all the glorious truths of the things of God any more than the new born babe is capable of gazing at the sun. God reveals them, "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little," just as it is able to comprehend them. He opens the door to our spiritual vision by the gospel birth.

"Why not the spirits of mortals be proud?

Made to be perfect as God.
Made to do good with the heavenly crown,
Made to be perfect as God.
Made to be equal with God's own Son,
Made with the Father and Christ to be one,
That their will on earth as in heaven be done,
All to be perfect as God."

PROHIBITION.

A Lecture By Elder J. S. Roth.

Ladies and Gentlemen! We read in Matthew 12:34: "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." That is the reason that I am a prohibitionist. For from the abundance, or in other words, from the fullness of my heart or my mind shall I speak.

Should there be a text needed for the examination of this interesting subject, you will find it in Genesis 4:9, and it reads: "Am I my brother's keeper?" My answer is yes, most assuredly, so long as it is possible for me by my actions, my voice and vote, to keep my brother from the curse of all curses—intoxicating drinks, which leads man down, down, down, below the brute beast; for I never saw a beast yet that would drink the vile stuff, then finish up by quaffing the old stinking pipe till they have devils in the form of snakes in their hearts, their heads, and in their boots.

Your speaker knew a man and his wife who were well off once, they owned a bank, but they commenced drinking and went down till they broke up, lost all they had in this world, and the creditors got 33 per cent of their money. I was one of them. Both the man and his wife died a most horrible death; they could be heard screaming for a block from their house: "O take these snakes away, take them out of my mouth, they are choking me, O tare them away, tare them away for they are killing me." Again, others will go on drinking till they land in the asylum or the penitentiary, then at the gallows, then in the prison house or hell, as the Bible calls it.

We read in 1 Cor. 6:10, "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, or revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." Also in Proverbs 20:1, we read: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." I might give more Bible texts to prove that it is wrong to use the vile stuff. But why will man violate the laws of God and of nature, and make himself lower than the beast? First drinking, then gambling, and swearing; then follows smoking, Sabbath-breaking, debauchery, forgery, robbery, murder, the gallows and damnation.

I was never more surprised than I was a short time ago when I read that one of the western states had granted the women the right of franchise. And the very first vote they voted the state wet. Is that possible? Can it be? I hope not. If they did what in the world could have been their motive for so doing? Was it because it was nothing to them individually if the state went wet? The following selection may cover the ground; I do not know the author.

NOTHING AND SOMETHING.

It is nothing to me, the beauty said
With a careless toss of her pretty head;
The man is weak, if he can't refrain
From the cup you say is fraught with pain.
It was something to her in after years,
When her eyes were drenched with burning tears,
And she watched in lonely grief and dread,
And started to hear a staggering tread.
It is nothing to me, the mother said;
I have no fear that my boy will tread
The downward path of sin and shame,
And crush my heart and darken his name.
It was something to her when that only son,
From the path of right was early won,
And madly cast in the flowing bowl,
A ruined body and sin-wrecked soul.

It is nothing to me, the merchant said,
As over the ledger he bent his head;
I'm busy today with tare and tret,
And have no time to fume and fret.
It was something to him when over the wire
A message came from a funeral pyre,
A drunken conductor had wrecked a train,
And his wife and child were among the slain.

It is nothing to me, the young man cried;
In his eye was a flash of scorn and pride,
I heed not the dreadful thing ye tell,
I can rule myself, I know full well.
'Twas something to him when in prison he lay,
The victim of drink, life ebbing away,
As he thought of his wretched child and wife,
And the mournful wreck of his wasted life.

It is nothing to me, the voter said;
The party's loss is my greatest dread,
Then gave his vote for the liquor trade,
Though hearts were crushed and drunkards made.
It was something to him in after life,
When his daughter became a drunkard's wife,
And her hungry children cried for bread,
And trembled to hear their father's tread.

It is nothing to us to idly sleep,
While the cohorts of death their vigils keep,
To gather the young and thoughtless in,
And grind in 'our midst a grist of sin?
It is something—yes, for us to stand,
And clasp by faith our Savior's hand,
To learn to labor, live and fight,
On the side of God and changeless right.

Is the above overdrawn? I think not. Perhaps the following will be the experience of some who voted in favor of the liquor traffic. It is called the slingscale, and is a dialogue between father and mother.

Mother—Our boy is out late at night. Father—Well we must tax the saloons $50. Mother—Husband, I believe John drinks. Father—We must put that tax at $100. Mother—My dear husband, our boy is being ruined. Father—Try'm awhile at $200. Mother—Oh, my God! my boy came home drunk. Father—Well, well, we must make it $300. Mother—Just think, William, our boy is in jail. Father—I'll fix those saloons. Tax 'em $400. Mother—My poor is a confirmed drunkard. Father—Up with that tax and make it $500. Mother—Oh, our once noble boy is a wreck. Father—Now I'll stop 'em, make it $600. Mother—O, my God! We carried our poor boy to a drunkard's grave today. Father—Well, I declare, we must regulate this terrible traffic; we ought to have made that tax $1000 at first. Is that the way to crush out this viper, this demon of hell? No, no, never. Speak right out against it. Vote against it every chance you have.

I wonder how any one who claims to love his brother, or to be a follower of Christ, can vote in favor of the saloons. No lover of Christ can or will do so. But he will, and must do all in his power to prevent the manufacture and sale of the body and soul destroying stuff, and thereby be his brother's keeper. Today is the time to act; tomorrow may be too late. Gov. Hanly has truly spoken my sentiments in an article on the saloon business, wherein he says:

"I bear no malice towards those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic. I hate its every phase. I hate it for its intolerance. I hate it for its arrogance. I hate it for its hypocrisy. I hate it for its cant and craft and false pretenses. I hate it for its commercialism. I hate it for its avarice. I hate it for its sordid love of gain at any price. I hate it for its domination in politics. I hate it for its corrupting influence in civic affairs. I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the country; for the cowards it makes of public men. I hate it for its utter disregard of law. I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compact of state constitution. I hate it for the load it straps to labor's back; for the palsied hand it gives to toil, for its wounds to genius; for the tragedies of its might-have-beens. I hate it for the human wrecks it has caused, I hate it for the almshouses it begets; for the prisons it fills; for the insanity it begets; for its countless graves in potter's fields. I hate it for the mental ruin it imposes on its victims; for its spiritual blight; for its moral degradation; I hate it for the crimes it has committed. I hate it for the homes it has destroyed. I hate it for the hearts it has broken. I hate it for the grief it causes womanhood, the scalding tears, the hopes deferred, the strangled aspirations, its burden of want and care. I hate it for its heartless cruelty to the aged, the infirm and the helpless; for the shadow it throws upon the lives of children; for its monstrous injustice to blameless little ones. I hate it as virtue hates vice, as truth hates error, as righteousness hates sin, as justice hates wrong, as liberty hates tyranny, as freedom hates oppression. I hate it as Abraham Lincoln hated slavery. And as he sometimes saw in prophetic vision the end of slavery and the coming of the time when the sun should shine and the rain should fall upon no slave in the Republic, so I sometimes seem to see the end of this unholy traffic; the coming of the time, if it does not wholly cease to be, it shall find no safe habitation any where beneath OLD GLORY'S stainless stars."

I thank God that there are men who are not afraid to boldly and fearlessly fight the demon of intoxicating drinks. Oh, I wish we had thousands more like Gov. Hadley. For intoxicating drinks, as stated by another, is the seed of all vices. "Is there any vice in the United States that slays at least 60,000 people annually, or as others believe and affirm, 120,000? or that slays the seed of a harvest of the most fatal kind of diseases and renders all other lighter diseases more acute and perhaps even fatal in the end, or that causes at least one-third of all the madness confined in our asylums, or that prompts directly or indirectly, seventy-five percent of all crimes, or that produces an unseen and secret world of all kinds of moral evil and personal degradation which no police court ever knows and no human eye ever sees, or that in the midst of our immense and multiplying wealth, produces not poverty which is honorable but pauperism which is a degradation to a civilized people? That ruins men of every class and condition of life, from the highest to the lowest; men of every degree of culture and of education, of every honorable profession, public officials, military and naval officers and privates, railway and household servants, and worse than all, that ruins women of every class, from the most rude to the most refined; that above all other evils is the most potent cause of destruction to the domestic life of all classes."

It seems that nothing will satisfy the greed of the demon alcohol but the most terrible outrages. He rejoices at the thousands of delirium tremens patients he carries to hospitals. He loves craze, and rejoices when he sees it hanging from the doors of homes where a son or father lies dead, who has fallen down early under his juggernaut wheels. He has taken and is still taking vitality from the blood, and instead, filled it with poison, disease and death. And hath transformed this body—fearfully and wonderfully made as God's master-piece of creation into a vile, loathsome, sinking mass of brutality; has entered the brain—the temple of thought, dethroned reason and made it reel with folly; has taken the beam of intelligence from the eye, and given in exchange the stupid stare of idiocy and dullness. He has taken the impress of ennobled manhood from the face and left the mark of cruelty and brutishness—has taken cunning from the hands and turned them from deeds of usefulness into instruments of brutality and murder; has broken the ties of friendship and planted the seeds of enmity.

He has made the kind, indulgent father a brute, a tyrant, a murderer; has transformed the kind affectioned mother into a fiend of brutish incarnation. He has made obedient sons and daughters the breakers of hearts and destroyers of homes. He has taken luxuries from the tables and compelled men to cry for bread on account of famine. He has stolen men's palaces and given them hovels. He has robbed them of valuable acres and given them not even a decent burial place in death.

He has filled our streets and highways with violence and lawlessness; complicated our laws and crowded our courts; filled to overflowing, houses of correction and penitentiaries; taken away faith, hope and charity; yea all that is lovely and of good report, and has given instead, despair, infidelity, enmity and all the emotions and deeds of wickedness. He has banished Christ from the heart and created hell within. He has wrecked and enfeebled the brain, shattered and destroyed the body, imperiled and damned the soul.

Another writer has pictured it out truthfully when he wrote as follows:

"The saloon is a bar to heaven, a door to hell—
Whoever named it named it well!
A bar to manliness and wealth,
A door to want and broken health.
A bar to honor, pride, and fame,
A door to sin, and grief and shame;
A bar to hope, a bar to prayer,
A door to darkness and despair.
A bar to honored, useful life,
A door to brawling, senseless strife;
A bar to that true and brave,
A door to every drunkard's grave.
A bar to joy that home imparts,
A door to woe and aching hearts;
A bar to heaven, a door to hell—
Whoever named it named it well."

There is no end to the argument in opposition to the saloon business, and its damnable work among all nations. Is it therefore not my duty as well as every body else to try to save my brother, my neighbor, my neighbor's son from this terrible plight, the saloon, the curse of the rum devil. Yes, I am my brother's keeper.

FROM THE JAWS OF DEATH.

Emery Ferguson of Blue Springs Recovers After Remarkable Case of Surgery at Sanitarium.

During the week, Emery Ferguson will leave the Independence Sanitarium for his home. He was brought here with apparently but a few hours to live. A horse had kicked him and injured him so seriously that the spleen was removed and one gallon of blood found loose in the abdominal cavity. Physicians know of but three cases of similar nature.

Mr Ferguson was received into the Independence Sanitarium on December 17th, last. The day before he had been kicked by a horse. Dr. Rowe of Blue Springs brought the patient to the Sanitarium, where an operation was performed by Dr. E. D. Twyman, assisted by Dr. Rowe and Dr. Messenger.

There were no external evidences as to the nature of the injury, but when the incision was made, it was obvious there was an alarming hemorrhage from the enlarged spleen, which had been crushed by the force of the kick. Nothing could be done in attempting to save the man's life but to remove the spleen; repair work being impossible because of the nature of the injury.

The gravity of the operation will be appreciated by noting the dimensions of the incision, which was "T" shaped, the vertical incision extending from the pelvic bone to the ribs, and the lateral incision extending eight inches to the lumber region.

The loss of blood was excessive, there being one gallon free in the abdominal cavity. It was necessary to prepare a combination possessing the chemical constituents of the blood to be injected before and immediately after the operation in order to prevent collapse.

The doctors had seen three similar cases, two of whom died because adequate hospital equipment was not at hand.

The immense value to the community of a well equipped and up-to-date hospital is not only shown by this case but by many others. The Independence Sanitarium is equipped to give every scientific care and many lives have already been saved because this institution is here. While the sanitarium was built by the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints and is under the church control, it is thrown open with all its equipment and service to the physicians of the city and they get the benefit. The people understand and appreciate how great is the value of such an institution.—Independence Examiner.

MRS. KATE GOODWIN, Editor,

"Nevertheless read all good books."
We catch the moments as they fly.

In drifting fides of time;
Perchance some good in floating by.

Drummond says; "The moral man is acted upon and changed continuously by the influences, secret and open of his surroundings, by the company he keeps, by the books he reads; in short all that constitutes the habitual atmosphere of his thoughts and the little world of his daily choice."

I wish there were some way to emphasize those few words "the habitual atmosphere of our thoughts" to every mind not actually sunk in the slumber of a false security so that we would each (we woman folk I mean) turn the search light of introspection upon our selves and ask this vital question; what is actually the atmosphere of our thoughts, the little world of our daily choice. Is it a deep well or a shallow babbling brook from which we draw a full or scant supply of living water for the soul's refreshment? Are we doing the least thing, making even a feeble effort to grow—if even so little—to broaden—to deepen, so that our intercourse with each other may be of a better kind, our ideals more lofty, our conversations when we meet may be clean and free from vulgarity and petty gossip, which, to our shame be it said, often does run through our talk like a filthy underground stream that seeps into every vacant and hidden crevice of our natures and pollutes it, where it finally reaches the open surface, and its babblings are heard and its wanton mark is seen.

Do we read a little or study a little to give our minds something to feed upon. Many of us do, but some of course cannot. The demands of a family of small children are all their strength will allow. They must wait till a little later day when the children are older and can help themselves, but many can and do not. They have not created this habitual atmosphere for the thoughts and so are apt to grow trivial and narrow and without resource within themselves. We all know women who are miserable if left alone a few hours—consequently must run to the neighbors and you may be sure such a woman it a gossip—she could not content herself with a book and all her mind has to feed upon is other peoples doings.

That sort of thing tends to moral degeneracy as surely as the actual deed of sin. The first is passive sinning the latter is active sinning—there's the only difference; The first is subtle and wends its way to the slough unconsciously; the other is open and conscious. To just simply let our lives run on, in which we do our daily stint mechanically, without once taking the thought that will add its cubit to our stature; this is the most pathetic thing in the world—the most tragic I should say—the most degrading and there is nothing more certain than at the end it will bring death.

In the last year we have seen the hopeful sign—the desire for uplift—that is the first step—and the uplift will be sure to come; for desires are unspoken prayers. They put the soul in the attitude of wanting and pleading and receiving. If any one thinks that is little enough let him consider how far a desire will reach. It is the first step, it is the seed in the ground—it reaches, so it has enough of life within it and is nourished, to the very goal.

Then let us each one reflect that it is our business, individually, to keep this little seed alive and surround it with the right soil—(or the habitual atmosphere)—and not expect some body or society to do it for us. In one sense we are individuals eternally, that is, we must make our own struggles, the real victory comes to the one who, as an individual has fought his own battle, then and then only can he impart of his strength to others. Let us do our reading and some of our thinking as individuals, then, when a system is outlined for us, which will become better as we study it out, then we can give little as well as take a great deal.

How many times we could find refuge for wayward thoughts in a good book. How many times it will lift the fog and mists from the brain. How, some times, we can again take up our work with new zest after one quiet hour with such a friend, often we are looking as at our face in a mirror, into our own hearts. We see, anew, a vain hope turned to dust and ashes, and the chords of sympathy are stirred. We see some noble aim achieved and take new heart. We see some great sacrifice made and make new resolves, and so it goes on, that which we are taking into our minds is weaving itself into our souls, making us fitter and more respective beings, and perhaps brings us nearer to our brother-man.

Take, for instance, Longfellow's "Evangeline." To me this poem has exalted common labor—forever, and a day. The simple beautiful life of these people in the village of Grand Pre is a picture that we all need to refresh ourselves with. No rich, no poor, no locks on the doors, no fear. Just common work in which all shared and which they exalted for above drudgery because it was the labor of love. And service: How beautifully portrayed is this woman's—serving in her own household! What glad waiting upon! What queenly service!

And so have all the poets sung of the hearth and home and their singing has perpetuated to us the love of such, and will to any who may run and read.

There is Meredith's "Lucille"—in which we find exemplified a lofty sacrificing womanhood. There is Tennyson's "Princess"—the sweetest story of its kind ever written.

These, with others of their kind draw us and hold us nearer to the worship of our household gods. They will not—these men who speak to all ages—let the embers die upon the altar of home. And thus we are nourished and helped by the reading of such things.

The Woman's Auxiliary has a library which they are willing to enlarge, but the fact of the matter is, the books lie idle upon the shelves and few have been touched. We would like to read some of them and give a short review from time to time as we have space and give some possible stimulus to others. All who are in favor say "Aye."

WARNING FOR YOUNG WOMEN.

"Don'ts" for girls and young women are contained in a special pamphlet issued by the National Vigilance Association following the passing of the White Slave Traffic Act. These warnings include the following:

Never ask the way of any but officials.
Never stay to help a woman who apparently faints at your feet in the street, but call a policeman immediately.
Never accept a lift offered by a stranger in a vehicle of any description.

Do not accept sweets, food or drink, or smell flowers offered by a stranger, as they may contain drugs.
Do not speak to strangers.

Never accompany a stranger (even if dressed as a hospital nurse) or believe stories of a relative having met with an accident, as this is a common device to kidnap girls.

If accosted by a stranger (whether man or woman) walk as quickly as possible to the nearest policeman.

Not long ago there was a duplicate of this or something like it issued for women in Chicago.

Don't be out after dark without an escort.
Don't wear jewels on the street.
Don't open the door to a stranger.

In other words—telling the woman to stay at home as much as possible and mind her own business—be modest and cultivate that poise that would make it hard for a man to speak to her in any way but the most gentlemanly way, a dignity which even a criminal might recognize and respect under most circumstances. Not only the effort but the need of thrusting her back—back into the path she was meant to tread and where the protection was more assured.

FOR ROASTING FOWL.

A fowl should always be placed upon its knees, instead of upon its back, then the juices will naturally fall, making the white meat, which is apt to be dry, juicy. Fifteen minutes before serving, turn the fowl upon its back to brown the breast.

IMPORTANT TO PARENTS.

The new Junior Quarterly for January, February, and March presents lessons for your children upon the following subjects:

The Beginning, The Creation of Man, The First Home, Satan, The First Sin, God's Plan to Save Men, Baptism of Adam, The First Children, God's Ministers, Enoch, Noah and the Flood, The Rainbow. The lesson committee considers that children aged 9, 10, and 11 should study these and such like themes.

For the first two years of the course the lessons are taken from the Old Testament "with references to the Book of Mormon, as they historically occur in the prophecy of Joseph, the scattering from Babel, and at the time of the captivity."

Therefore, the above mentioned twelve subjects will not appear again for three years, after which the pupils now in the grade below will take them up and follow the same course as outlined. QUERY: Do you want your boy or girl of junior age to pass on and miss these important subjects,—lessons that they need at this stage of their development—do you?

Does your school take the Junior Quarterly? If not, why not? And what are you going to do about it? If the school is remiss in duty, why not order it sent direct to your home address. They are only four cents per quarter, or twelve cents per year, in advance, sent post paid to any address. A sample copy free for the asking. No time to lose.

Get your name on our regular mailing list. Send all orders to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa.

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

In and for the state and country of Sweden. Saints and friends of the work of Christ under the name and denomination of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:

Please take notice that upon the recommendation of the missionary in charge, Bro. H. N. Hansen of Copenhagen, Denmark, and other saints and friends in Sweden, Sr. Hanna Lawrence of Warmland, Bjorneborg, Sweden, has been appointed agent of the presiding bishopric of the said Reorganized church to act in and for the state and country of Sweden according to the rules and regulations governing said society.

The said Sr. Hanna Lawrence is hereby authorized to receive and receipt for funds in behalf of said church and to use the same in aiding and sustaining, by incidental expenses and otherwise, ministers of said Reorganized church in their work in the country of Sweden, and also to administer to the poor and needy and help those who need help as may be necessary from time to time in carrying on the financial work as agent in said country. And to report the same to the presiding bishopric of the said Reorganized church from time to time as requested and annually on the 31st of December of each year.

We take pleasure in recommending Sr. Lawrence to the saints and friends of the cause of our blessed Lord in said territory and trust that all who are striving for good and interested in the Lord's work may be ready to help and assist her in order to accomplish the work that will be to the glorying of the name of our heavenly Father, and to such as do this may his peace and blessing attend, helping them to overcome. In behalf of the bishopric, I am

Very respectfully,
E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.
Independence, Mo., Jan. 15.

EASTERN SAINTS.

By vote of those present at the New Bedford Sunday-school convention, it was voted to postpone the drawing for reunion lots till the conference convening at Fall River, February 1st, 1913. I desire to call the attention of saints interested in the reunion grounds to this drawing and ask you to make application to me at 7 Minor street, Winter Hill, Massachusetts, as soon possible if you desire to participate in this first drawing. To those not desiring to take part, in this first drawing, you may make application any time thereafter to me.

M. C. FISHER.

MARRIAGES.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Mrs. E. S. Scheeler, Altoona, Iowa. I am sending two names of non-members for a renewal of Ensign for the year 1913, hoping that the little gospel messenger may win its way into their hearts and that they will receive the message it bears, and sooner or later obey our dear Saviour's commands by being baptized into the kingdom of God.

It does me world's of good to read my Herald and Ensign. The letters and testimonies they bear are soul inspiring and strengthening especially to those like myself who have no church privileges, but I know this work is true and I want to live my religion and serve God with a humble heart that I may be saved in the celestial kingdom of God.

Mrs. Annie Feock, Manson, Iowa. Please find enclosed money order for renewal of your very valuable paper, Zion's Ensign. I am a non-member of the L. D. S. church, but am in sympathy with the work. May God abundantly bless you in your work.

Byron R. Moore, Charleston, Ill. I am sending fee for renewal subscription. I am not a member but a believer and enjoy reading the Ensign, and can not think of doing without it.

THE SANITARIUM.

The Independence Sanitarium is under the control of a board of trustees elected by the general conference of the Reorganized Church. Its mission is to furnish "a place of refuge and help for the sick and afflicted . . . where they may be removed from the influences and environments unfavorable to the exercise of proper faith upon the healing of the sick," as stated by the revelation of 1906 which directed its establishment.

For many years the world has been coming to recognize more fully the close relationship between man's physical and mental or spiritual natures, and several distinct movements have been started for the treating of sick patients either partially or entirely by psychic processes. The church is not particularly in sympathy with such methods, but it does recognize that in this day as in former times the Spirit of God can and does operate upon man's whole being for the removal, under proper conditions, of both spiritual and physical ailments, and that in some cases such blessing comes through faith which operates in the inner man.

That the Lord recognizes the virtue of natural remedies in addition to the spiritual forces is evident from the appointment of Thomas B. Marsh, one of the early ministers of the church, by revelation, to be a physician to the church, in the first year of its existence. And later in the appointment of Joseph Luff, a member of the Quorum of Twelve, to be a physician to the church, and to have the oversight of the sanitarium as a medical director.

While we recognize faith as one of the potent factors in the restoration of health, it is also apparent that the exercise of faith is in a large measure dependent upon the environment. Jesus himself would make no effort toward raising the daughter of Jairus until the unbelieving had left the house, and when those having faith are surrounded in their sickness with friends who are out of sympathy with that faith, its exercise is in a large measure prohibited. Ofttimes too, unsanitary conditions exist in homes which affect unfavorably both the exercise of faith and the exercise of the bodily functions, to the delaying of health or possibly to the ultimate loss of life, when if conditions had been favorable much suffering, and perhaps the loss of life itself might have been avoided.

In another way is this sanitarium a place of refuge. While the majority of physicians are men of honor, there are some who are the reverse, and patients who fall into their hands are frequently subjected to long and ineffective treatments, or to severe and unnecessary operations, all for the enrichment of the physician, and the adding of burdens to the afflicted or their families that are grievous to be borne. Many who are afflicted hesitate to place themselves in the hands of physicians because of their poverty and the fear of the financial burdens which follow.

The Independence Sanitarium is a place to which our sick and afflicted may go for treatment and nursing under conditions which are sanitary, quiet, and pleasant; and where they may receive the ordinances of the gospel such as the anointing with oil and the laying on of hands of the elders as taught in the Scriptures, under conditions in which they are surrounded by those of like faith, and which are free from the influences of evil which attend persons of evil minds and habits, and where the Spirit of God is free to come and operate in giving both spiritual and physical blessing to the needy. Those of the patients who are able to attend find delight and cheer in the daily prayer services, while others have access to the gospel ordinances whenever needed.

The editor recently visited this institution and was kindly received by Dr. W. E. Messenger, the house physician, who cheerfully gave information from which the following items are noted.

The institution was opened December 15, 1909, and up to December 31, 1912, four hundred six patients and been admitted: most of whom were saints, but including six of the Presbyterian faith, eight Baptists, twenty-seven Methodists, six Catholics, and a number having other denominational affiliation. Accommodations can be conveniently given to over fifty patients at a time, but that number has so far not been reached. The expense of maintaining such an institution is great, and so far the receipts have not been sufficient to meet it, but the church has cheerfully met the deficiency, knowing that it is according to the divine will that the work done there should be maintained.

Of the one hundred sixty-nine admitted during 1912, eighteen died, or a little more than ten per cent. It must be remembered that the sanitarium is not a guarantee against death any more than the ordinance of laying on of hands, but in some instances patients come whose opportunities of recovery are slight indeed, but they recognize that it is a good place to die in, as much so as it is in which to get well. In speaking of the number of deaths Dr. Messenger remarked that he feared our readers would get the impression that nearly all who went there died because every death was chronicled in the paper while nothing or little was said about those who got well.

There have been many cases of healing which have been remarkable, one the latest being that of Mr. Emery E. Ferguson of Blue Springs, Mo., and which was mentioned in our last issue. We have heard the testimonies of a number who have been gratified at the results of treatment and care at this institution, and the promises made to the church in 1906 by President Joseph Smith relative to such results, when he by divine direction proposed its establishment, have been to some extent realized, and we trust will be more fully realized in the future.

It is doubtful if the saints generally have known or appreciated the advantages they have in this institution which is conducted solely for the good it can do. The physicians and nurses are self-sacrificing, and the church and its members are self-sacrificing in the offering of their means to meet the annual deficiency in its maintenance.

DEATH OF ELDER WILLIAM S. PENDER.

We regret to announce the death of Brother William S. Pender, who has been an active missionary in the field for twenty-four years, having labored much of that time in the West from British Columbia to Mexico. He was appointed a mission to Mexico by the last general conference but because of the unsettled conditions there incident to the civil war, missionary work in that land was impracticable. He was a member of the First Quorum of Seventy. He died at Muscatine, Iowa, the place of his birth, on Sunday, January 19th. Funeral services at Fanning, Kansas, in charge of Bishop Bullard who preached the sermon. His age was 57 years.

The mind of man is sensitive beyond all that we know of sensitiveness in material things. The photograph plate is not more sensitive to light than is the mind of man to evil thoughts. The passage of one single evil thought through the mind leaves an indelible impression upon it. For this reason Christians should be careful to think no evil, but should think continually on the thing that are noble, pure and good.—Sel.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

ANGEL MINISTRATION.

For many centuries the Christian world has believed that the ministration of angels to men, in common with other manifestations of divine power in direct ways, had ceased. Children have long been taught that the completion of the New Testament ended the revelation of God's mind and will, and that anything which might purport to come from him by any direct means whatsoever was to be rejected.

As to the point of angel ministration the Bible nowhere says that it was to cease, but upon the other hand it is shown that angels were sent to God's children through all the different periods of time from the days of Adam to the time of John the Revelator, for the purpose of teaching men the things of God, warning them of dangers and delivering them from disasters, directing the prophets and ministers in their work, and giving power in times of emergency for the accomplishment of God's purposes.

Since the Bible teaches that God does not change in his character or purpose, then it would be but a natural conclusion that as he would continue his work he would use the same methods which he had followed for four thousand years, which included the ministration of angels. There is no consistent reason why they should not continue their ministrations to the end of time, for every condition which rendered their presence necessary during the early ages of the world exists now, and the work of God as outlined in the Scriptures extends to the end of time.

But while reason favors a belief in present angel ministration, the Bible gives more direct evidence upon that point. The parable of the wheat and tares in Matt. 13 covers a period reaching from the days of Christ to the end of the world, and it is in the latter part of that period when the gathering is to take place preparatory to the coming of Christ that "The Son of man shall send forth his angels," and the further statement is made that the "reapers are the angels." In like manner the parable of the net cast into the sea which gathered of every kind and which was gathered to shore and a separation of the good from the bad took place; "So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from the just."—Verse 49.

The Lord tells of this ministration in still another form in Matt. 24, and says in verse 31, "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." It is not to be supposed that this great work of gathering the faithful from every part of the world is to be done in a day, nor the work of binding the tares in bundles, but that time will be required. Isaiah 62:10-12 speaks upon this point showing that the way will be prepared and a standard lifted up for the people, and a proclamation made to "the end of the world" a part of which was to be "Behold his reward is with him, and his his work before him." So the Lord's work is to precede his coming, and the angels are to have a part to do in that preparatory work.

The fourteenth chapter of Revelations also shows the manner in which those angels will come not as a great army simultaneously, but each in his turn for the performance of his particular part of the work. Verses 6 and 7 speak of one angel who is to bring the gospel to preach to all nations, which gospel is probably the same as the "sound of a trumpet" previously mentioned, by which the elect are to be gathered. This apostle who wrote these "Revelations" speaks of many other angels who were to come, so that if the Bible be taken as a guide in the matter the believer will be ready to accept such accounts of angel visitation as may be supported with proper evidence of their genuineness, and will be looking for their ministrations to continue, notwithstanding the erroneous belief which has prevailed so long.

More than three years after the vision related in the last sketch, the young man Joseph Smith retired one evening, and sensing his unworthiness before God sought him in earnest prayer. According to his account while thus engaged he discovered a light appearing in the room in which appeared a personage standing by his bedside. He was dressed in a loose robe of exquisite whiteness beyond anything earthly he had ever seen and his whole person was glorious beyond description."

Calling the young man by name, he said that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God, and that God had a work for him—the young man—to do, and that his name should be had for good and evil among all nations. This messenger quoted many of the prophecies of the Bible including the third and fourth chapters of Malachi; also the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled. Quoting the twenty-second and twenty-third verses of the third chapter of Acts he said that that prophet was Christ, but the day had not yet come "when they who would not hear his voice should be cut off from among the people," but soon would come. He also quoted the second chapter of Joel from the 28th to the last verse and said it was soon to be fulfilled.

Information was also given of a record which contained an account of the ancient inhabitants of America, and which also contained an account of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which record was in due time to be brought forth from its burial place in the earth to help in the work which should be done in connection with the fulfillment of the many prophecies already referred to. Warning was given that covetousness was not to govern the motive of this young man in his participation in the work, and that the record which was written upon sheets of gold was not to be brought forth with a view of getting gain, but that the divine purpose in bringing forth this record was to increase light and intelligence.

It may be urged that this purported angel visitation rests solely upon the statement of one man. But it may be asked what further proof is there that the angel strove with Jacob all night than the word of Jacob himself? Or that the angel appeared to Zechariah at the altar, or to Peter in the prison, or to John upon Patmos, and to many others, except the testimony of the persons themselves? And yet people believe all of them without a question. The fact that the work or message of every one of these angels is in harmony with the work of God which extends down through the ages is sufficient proof that they came and that they were the messengers of God.

So with the angel which appeared upon the night of September 21st, 1823. His coming was in harmony with the Scripture prophecies; the message he brought was in confirmation of the truthfulness of the Bible; his literal interpretation of the ancient prophecies, though conflicting with the accepted views of the day, were in agreement with the interpretations given in the Bible itself. These are evidences that cannot be lightly cast aside, and the declaration of blind prejudice that "Angels don't come now;" does not answer them.

But there is further evidence of the genuineness and divinity of this angel visit. One of his purported statements was that the name of Joseph Smith should be known for good and evil among all people. The young man must be credited with prophetic power of his own if the claim of angel visitation be rejected, for the prophetic statement has been singularly fulfilled, and today he is loved for his goodness by people in all parts of the world who have accepted of his mission, and is despised and looked upon as a false prophet by those who have not. Perhaps there is no name before the world today that is more despised than his.

The record referred to has come forth, and it is of such a character as to make it self-evident that the young man did not produce it of his own power. The Bible prophecies which the angel quoted and said were soon to be fulfilled, have begun to be fulfilled, as also other prophecies. The incident of this angel's visit is but one in a series of events connected with the great work which was wrought through this man, in all of which there is a wonderful harmony, and when each step, or event, upon examination is found to be in agreement with the Scriptures, or in fulfillment of prophecy, then the evidences are sufficient for accepting this account of the angel's visit for all that it purports to be.

A NEW BOOK.

A compilation of over one hundred tongues, prophecies, dreams, and their spiritual manifestations, has been made by Elder Alvin Kustley, who is publishing the same, the book being now on the press. The Ensign Publishing House will not receive orders for this work, but they must be sent directly to the publisher—Elder Alvin Kustley whose advertisement will shortly appear. Watch for it.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Editor's note.—In the issue of December 5th we announced the opening of the Ensign to marriage announcements free of charge, the object being to place all upon an equality in that regard. We request our correspondents to furnish us with the essential items of all "Marriages." We do not include such reports in "Branch Items."

Elder George H. Harrington, president of the stake, was the speaker at the morning service his theme being "Music in the service of God." Elder M. H. Bond, also of the stake presidency, was the evening speaker. The afternoon meeting while good, was hardly equal to the usual prayer service in activity and spiritual life.

Miss Kate Chatburn of the Bandon Oregon high school debating team won the silver cup trophy in the final contest at Bandon, January 15th. Sr. Chatburn is the daughter of Bro. Frank J. Chatburn, and grand-daughter of "Ye Jots Man."

Pres. F. M. Smith and wife went to Haines City, Florida last week to remain until the middle of March. We trust Sr. Smith will find renewed health in the land of sunshine and flowers.

The members of the various quorums of the priesthood resident in this vicinity met on Sunday evening to discuss the various problems relating to their several lines of work. The officers are set in the church according to the provisions of the law, but their work can only be made effectual as they may become acquainted with their duties and do them, and any effort which helps the officers to become effectual should be welcomed and supported.

CHICAGO, ILL., FIRST BRANCH.

The old year has solemnly passed, and with the last lingering faintly dying echoes of its challenge still appealing to conscience, "Dare to do right, dare to be true," we have assumed the burden of another period of action in the arena of life. We hope to acquit ourselves credibly.

Both old and young rejoice in the fact, that we are in possession of a church edifice which affords us many advantages we never yet have had the pleasure of enjoying in this city. Notwithstanding the fact that there is still a heavy incumbrance against our property, we will have very little cause for worry, as an appeal for monthly pledges has been promptly and willingly met to the extent that the debt is amply covered, and the indications are promising in fact we have the fullest confidence, that those pledges will be faithfully paid when due.

The branch recently held its annual business meeting; Jas. Keir again being elected as presiding elder; C. B. Hartsborn, presiding priest, F. E. Bone, presiding teacher, and J. H. Camp, deacon.

At the Sunday school and Religio business sessions, very few changes were made in the election of officers.

The mild winter has certainly left an abundant supply of sick people in its wake. Unfortunately we have not been overlooked, and it we hope add pray that this scourge will soon be over.

Brother F. A. Smith stopped over a short time after the Plaine conference to complete the quorum organizations of elders and priests of this district. His sermon last Sunday evening was a good one in every particular.

F. Wipper.

1518 S. Trumbull Ave.

LAMONI, IOWA.

On Sunday morning, January 19, Bro. Amos Berve was the speaker in our house of worship. Bro. Roy Sly of St. Joseph, Missouri, preached the evening discourse. This was his first effort in the pulpit here and his theme and manner pleased the audience.

At the two homes Bro. J. D. Schofield and F. M. McDonald filled the appointments.

Bro. J. F. Garver, J. A. Gunsolley and G. R. Wells were in service both morning and evening, the first at Bloomington chapel, the second at Oland chapel, and the last at Andover village. Encouraging conditions exist at each place. Bro. Earl Hall was the speaker at the Ward school house.

Sr. Susan C. Lance died at Liberty Home on January 26, aged 85 years, 2 months and 14 days. She was born in North Carolina, united with the Utah church and with many others removed to Alamosa, Colorado. There she heard the truth about the Reorganized church in 1884 and was baptized by Bro. James Casfall. Has been cared for by the church during the past few years. Funeral sermon by Bro. R. M. Elvin, assisted by Bro. John Smith.

In my January 16th notes, the name Olive branch should read Oland branch and the teacher chosen was Joseph Braby. Bro. Heman C. Smith attended a meeting of the Nebraska State Historical Society, held at Lincoln recently.

Bro. J. W. Wight left here January 17, to attend to missionary needs in Western Iowa, Little Sioux District, and elsewhere.

Bro. J. H. Baker of Lamoni, now laboring a Oklahoma had so severe an attack of heart disease on January 3rd, as to become unconscious. On receipt of a telegram Sr. Baker started by first train, accompanied by their daughter, Sr. White, but when they arrived they found Bro. Baker out again. We hope the trouble will not return to him.

The sermons of yesterday in Lamoni were by Bro. D. C. White, and S. M. Reiste at the church, and by Bro. John Wahlstrom and Oscar Anderson at the two homes. Bro. F. M. McDonald and Edward Harp spoke at Andover. H. N. Sively at Evergreen, Frank Hackett at the Bloomington chapel, and Bro. L. G. Holloway at the Wood school house. This last the beginning of a series of sermons to be held this week by Bro. Holloway and Eli Hayer.

Bro. John Wahlstrom has returned to Lamoni and bought a home intending to stay. He went to Dakota years ago and then to Canada and did well financially.

Yesterday afternoon the regular day for considering the Order of Enoch question, the chief speakers were Bro. G. R. Wells and R. J. Lambert concerning the needed store house for the benefit of the Lord's work and his people, who shall have charge and kindred matters. The things spoken seemed to be very satisfactory to the hearers. Some other brethren spoke a few minutes each.

ALPRED.

Jan. 27.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Elder G. S. Lincoln preached the morning sermon in the city and Elder Anthony spoke at night with good interest, while the Oakland congregation was edified by Elder E. J. Clark and E. Ingham respectively. We hear flattering accounts of the services, also the Sunday-school and Religio.

Sr. Wm. Pitt and daughter Mildred are spending a few days in the bay cities on their way home from the South. She had not lost her love for her Zion home by being in California.

For the year 1912 there were thirty-seven names placed on the tithing book with $1911.64 paid into the bishop's fund by the Oakland Branch. Bro. and Sr. Geo. F. Abbott live in Humboldt, Calif., isolated from church services, but every month as they get his monthly wages they remember the Lord's work by sending their tithing. In a recent letter they write of the Lord's great blessings to them and of their firmness in the blessed faith. It pays to do as the Lord commands. Such will find an inheritance in Zion where there will be no more isolation.

Bro. W. H. Kelley has so far recovered as to be able to attend church in the city and preached the morning sermon. He felt no ill effects from it on Monday when we saw him. Bro. J. Saxe preached in the evening.

We spent the second Sunday at Windsor and Santa Rosa. Notwithstanding the incessant rain we held three very pleasant meetings. At Windsor we met in the house of Mr. and Sr. Archer which was cheerfully given for the purpose, with a hearty invitation for all to stay for dinner—which a number did. At Santa Rosa we found a nice Religio at work under the care of Sr. Etta J. Cooper, with willing responses in the program, in which we helped.

We have a prospect for new openings for gospel work at Flournoy, Tehama Co., and at Headsburg, Sonoma Co. Bro. J. D. Stead is looking after the former place—he is now at Auburn, Placer Co., trying to create an interest with but moderate encouragement. He will soon go to Tehama Co., where we hope for success. Sr. Nellie Humes lives there with Bro. and Sr. W. H. Thompson.

Bro. E. Ingham spent Sunday last with the San Jose Branch, speaking morning and evening. Bro. Ingham is a safe expounder.

At a recent election in the San Francisco Branch Bro. J. A. Saxe was elected president, Bro. Lincoln priest, Bro. Cecil Hawley teacher. It is a new experience for Bro. Saxe but we feel sure he has a goodly store of latent ability which will develop as necessity demands.

Bro. and Sr. H. E. Gelatt late from Lamoni, Iowa, have located in Oakland and add to our number of church goers. Bro. Gelatt is a printer and works in the city.

Bro. J. D. Stead closed his week's service in Sacramento with good results. The attendance fair, the spiritual interest good. If there be openings anywhere in the district for a series of meetings Bro. Stead would gladly respond—or Bro. D. R. Chambers, but we do not know his location. Letters sent to us for either one, we will forward.

Don't forget the Chico conference and conventions Feb. 28th and March 1, 2. Send statistical and individual reports to Elder J. A. Lawn, Hollister, San Benito Co., Calif., ten days before time. Let us have a full report, and good attendance. Those intending to go would do a favor by sending a card to Elder H. A. Hintz, 1001 Main St., Chico, Calif., the president of the branch, as they wish to make ample preparations. All will be welcomed and cared for.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., FIRST BRANCH.

We have been luxuriating in a "California climate," for the last two weeks, and our ears are often greeted with the phrase, "ideal winter." This condition makes good congregations, to the satisfaction of the preacher.

Saturday the 18th the district Sunday-school and Religio convention met with us at 8:45 in prayer service. It is to be regretted that this meeting was so slimly attended, as upon the blessing of God depended the success of the convention, and this meeting was appointed as the time and place to earnestly seek it. By ten o'clock most of the out of town delegates had arrived and a good sized audience was present at the opening session of Sunday-school business. The annual election of district officers resulted as follows: S. H. Simmons superintendent, C. A. Morton assistant superintendent, R. L. Henry secretary, G. W. Mauley treasurer, Sr. E. E. McCormack home class superintendent.

At 2 p. m. Religio business was the order. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. S. Andes president, John Hampton vice president, Paul Pugsley secretary, Emma Lewis home department superintendent.

The evening session was devoted to entertaining features. The new piano secured by the committee appointed by the Religio helped materially in the musical part of the program.

Sunday morning the 19th, the Sunday-school had a splendid attendance; Bro. Samuel Burgess addressed the school in an interesting manner.

At 11 o'clock Bro. Hale Smith gave a talk on "Public Health," which showed careful study and research. This was followed by a blackboard demonstration of the word "program" by our old-time superintendent, D. J. Krahl. This brother is beloved by our people, and his appearance among us is always joyfully greeted.

The afternoon session was very interesting. Talks on "Library Work" by Bro. Burgess, and "The Boy Problem" by Bro. Krahl, were excellent. "Home Department Work" was instructive and entertaining. The executive committee was authorized to set the time and place of next meeting.

Evening services closed a quite enjoyable convention. Religio services on the 17th were very good and a number of visitors were present. On the 24th at their regular monthly prayer meeting the Religio eclipsed any meeting of the kind held for a long time, and the young people rejoiced over the earnest prayers and testimonies so freely given. This is very encouraging and edifying to old as well as young. Our young people both in Sunday-school and Religion are doing nobly. We are proud of them.

Sunday morning the 26th Bro. S. A. Burgess was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service. His effort was impressive and commanded close attention. The evening sermon was by our pastor. The five thirty prayer service was spiritual and uplifting.

There is considerable sickness among us at present. Bro. Goodrich and his associate elders are kept pretty busy answering calls for administration. God is good and many rich blessings follow.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Doctrine and Covenants 42:15 says that the "Inspired Translation" is to be taught to all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people. Does that mean that it is to be used to the exclusion of other translations as authority in presenting the gospel, even among unbelievers? To what extent is it supposed to be used?

The statement referred to reads: "Thou shalt ask, and my scriptures shall be given as I have appointed, and they shall be preserved in safety; and it is expedient that thou shouldst hold thy peace concerning them, and not teach them until ye have received them in full. And I give unto you a commandment, that then ye shall teach them unto all men; for they shall be taught unto all nations kindreds, tongues, and people." This "Translation" was a correction of the King James translation, with other matter added, "by the Spirit of Revelation," and the statement just quoted shows that when the work was completed, they—the scriptures—were to be taught to all nations. The work was not published until 1867, but the principles taught therein were taught many years before and have been taught since by the church in its reorganized state. So far as we are aware most of the elders use the King James translation in their missionary work, though some hold it to be preferable to use the inspired. It seems that the main reason for using the King James is that it is accepted as a standard with all English speaking people. As the gospel goes to nations of other tongues the Inspired will likely be used exclusively. The latter is accepted as final authority in the church, not that it conflicts with the former in any vital point of doctrine but that minor errors are corrected, and many of the vital points made more clear.

There is an elder of the Reorganized Church here who said when we are baptized or born again into the kingdom of God, our hearts don't need to be changed, but our minds only. I have understood that our hearts must be changed in order for us to become the children of God.

The elder should read Luke 6:45: "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh." Prov. 28:14 "He that hardeneth his heart shall fall." Doctrine and Covenants 105:6 "Purify your hearts before me." Luke 4:18, one part of Christ's mission was to "heal the broken-hearted," but he cannot reach the harden heart. Simon the sorcerer was converted in his mind, but not in heart.—Acts 8:13-23.

Are the ministers of the Reorganized Church called "Reverend?"

No. The common term designating the ministers is "Elder," which is usually applied to the individuals occupying in the various offices of the church including the presidency and the apostles. There seems to be a tendency in the church to apply other titles such as "Apostle," and "Bishop," etc., but with few exceptions this is not encouraged by those holding those offices. We see no harm in such titles unless they be used to create unwarranted distinctions between the different departments of the priesthood.

Will the children of wicked parents be lost because of their parent's disobedience?

Yes and No. So far as the parental influence leads the children to disobedience and the children follow the example of their parents, they will remain under the same condemnation and will suffer loss, but as every soul must have opportunity of hearing the gospel each one must ultimately decide for himself whether he will obey or disobey, and he will be judged according to his own works rather than those of his parents. God will punish no one for the sins of another.

Is there repentance after death?

Since the commission which Jesus gave to his apostles provided that the gospel should be preached "to every living creature" (Mark 16:15), and Peter says that Christ "went and preached unto the spirits in prison." 3:19, and that the gospel was preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit," (4:6), it would be a natural conclusion that those who did not have opportunity of hearing the gospel in this life would hear it in the spirit world, and as the gospel includes the doctrine of repentance, repentance must of necessity be possible after this life. Other scriptures bear out this conclusion.

Who is the "Holy One" spoken of in Hab. 3:3?

It is usually understood as referring to Christ.

What was the mark placed upon Cain for killing his brother Abel?

The Scriptures do not say. Anything we might suggest on this point would be but a surmise.

CORRESPONDENCE

TRENTON, Mo., Jan. 23.

Dear Ensign Readers—I want to ask a favor of you. Will you please send to my address your ENSIGN of Jan. 23, 1913, which has a lecture by Elder J. S. Roth on Prohibition. I am president of the Trenton W. C. T. U. literature department; have held that office for two years and starting on another one; have distributed from thirty-five to fifty pages of literature per week. So you see I can use lots of temperance literature. I think this lecture of Bro. Roth's comes as near covering and explaining it as it is, and I am very anxious to get it in circulation, so please, dear readers, do not be slow in sending. I love all good work and it affords me much pleasure to work for something that I know is pleasing to my Savior. Ever praying for the upbuilding of Zion and God's blessings upon the honest in heart.

Your sister in Christ,
Mrs. J. D. Proffit.

FARGO, Texas, Jan. 13.

Editor Ensign—As I never see anything from the panhandle of Texas I will drop a few lines to your highly esteemed paper. I am twelve miles northeast of the old town of Vernon in the Red River Valley. It is almost a sand desert here, although there is some good farming land here. My objections to this locality are, it is very cold and windy here this time of year and we have sand storms here sometimes that almost hides the sun, often driving people from their work; it becomes so bad at times in the spring that crops are entirely ruined by it as if fire had passed through the young stuff. So having lost my farm on account of drouth and other causes that prevail here, I have resolved to go into Oklahoma. I want to go northeast but I am afraid to go too far east for fear of malaria. I want to live among a branch of saints.

I am writing this in hopes that some of the saints may see it and write giving me a discription of their country. I wish to locate somewhere east of the Red River Branch of the Frisco R. R. If there are saints in that scope of country anywhere from there to Arkansas please write me. I am a teacher in the church and would be glad to work in the church again. I have been away from church privileges for two years. I have been in the church ever since 1888 and my faith grows stronger all the time. My wife and I are trying to always live as becometh saints, for we love this gospel work and hope to endure to the end of life.

I have received many great blessings in my twenty odd years in this church, and know that the Lord is watching over his flock. Please ask me, "How do you know you are right?" I tell them I have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints, therefore am entitled to that Holy Spirit of promise spoken of in John 14th chapter. Saints pray for us.

Yours in the conflict,
V. A. Herron.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., January 13, 1913.

Editor Ensign—It is a long time since I last wrote to our silent preacher but I have not lost interest in it; but love to read the grand testimonies it brings to us each week. I have been kept quite busy all this conference year. I made a trip to Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas last fall.

I had the offer to preach in a M. E. church in Kansas, also in a Presbyterian church in the same town; but as I could not get an answer from the sub-missionary in charge and the district president of that district in time, I had to respectfully decline to hold the meetings as they requested me to do. I was very sorry that I could not comply with their request, but I had been informed by one of the submissionaries of Iowa that I had no right to preach anywhere without first getting permission from the submissionary in charge the president of the district and the local authority where the meetings are to be held, and as I did not have time to do all that, it cut me out of holding meetings in those two churches.

I am in midst of a series of meetings here in the Stewartsville Branch now, and notwithstanding it was six or eight below zero yesterday, we had a fine crowd at 11, and 7:30 p. m. a goodly number of old folks were in the crowd. If the weather holds good the meetings will continue for several weeks more. Then from here to one of the St. Joseph branches.

I had a splendid meeting in the Cameron branch in November. There is a fine lot of saints in that branch; a few are just a little sleepy. We also had a good meeting in the Delano branch, the saints being edified and strengthened in the faith.

We often hear of saints who want to locate in the "Regions round about;" the writer is not in the real estate business, but if a good saint wants to locate in the regions round about, I know of a splendid place; one of the best farms in Davis County, 162 acres of splendid land, one mile from the Mabel station on the Rock railroad, three-fourths mile from school, a new large house, barn and other buildings. The owner must sell because he is not able to farm any longer; and will sell reasonable. A grand chance for a saint or any one else. Any one interested in such a place, write to W. C. Roth, Weatherby, Missouri, for particulars.

I am so glad to read of the grand work the brethren are doing among the Lamanites. May God bless them in bringing them into the gospel light. During the past year I held meetings at Knobnoster and at Holdon. I enjoyed my visit with those good people. May God bless them. Then I had a fine visit with the old time friends in Independence, made a pleasant call on our congenial Bishop E. L. Kelley.

My next stop was at Mount Washington where I found some more of the old Iowa Saints. Those energetic young saints, Brother and Sister Jellings, C. Hand, Stovbaugh, and others are an honor to the work. There I found Bro. Baker busy in the tent work; while I was there his wife took sick, and he requested me to continue the tent work; so by the request of the local authority I held forth over two Sundays with splendid liberty. (I have never held meetings any where without the request or consent of those in authority; six were baptized there by the branch president during the meetings.)

I pray God's blessing on all his true servants, that they may gather many sheaves into his kingdom. I have passed my seventieth mile stone, but I am still anxious to be at my Father's business. Please remember me in your supplications at a throne of grace. I met with an accident last week, one of my ribs was cracked; but I kept right on so far, and hope I shall be able to do so.

I remain your Brother in the faith
Elder J. S. Roth.

PALMERSVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 13.

Dear Ensign—I have read the precious pages of the ENSIGN and will try to write a few words about this precious gospel. I am just a small girl—aged 13. Not very long ago at our reunion I was made to know the truth of Jesus and was baptized—father, mother, and myself.

I have certainly been made glad since I have been in this gospel. We have Sunday-school most every Sunday at our little church, but we hardly ever have preaching, but we do not forget to send up our humble prayers. Not long ago mother was taken sick about sundown, and midnight she woke up with a severe pain in her side and could not move. We could not get any elders so we prayed ourselves by our bed sides and in few moments she was as well as ever. I thank the Lord that he stretched his mighty arm over us. I would like to hear from some of the saints in Independence. I ask the prayers of all the Latter Day Saints.

Your little sister in the gospel bonds,
Hortense Sanders.

LAKE, Mich., Jan. 21.

Dear Ensign—"Let the good work go on." Having never written to the paper before I hardly know how to begin, but we must not expect to receive without giving, and as I have received much spiritual good from reading the letters that appear from week to week, I must expect to give, only I cannot give as interesting an experience as some can. My only aim in life is to please my heavenly Master knowing that if I wish to inherit that glory that I so much desire, I must be always be willing to be up and doing. Surely there is something for all of us to do not only those holding authority but the laity as well.

I came into this work February 20, 1910, and have never yet felt sorry though many times I have been tempted to lay down my armor, yet I would always hear that still voice saying, "I gave my life for you, what hast thou given me?"

Not long after I was confirmed into this work I attended a sacrament meeting and was tempted by the evil one to keep my seat and not say anything, thinking that I would not benefit anybody, yet that good Spirit was ever working in our midst, when one in authority (the teacher of the branch) arose and admonished us all to not resist the Spirit of God, but do as he has commanded, confess our sins one to another and pray for forgiveness,—not to be slothful servants.

I could hardly wait for him to be seated when the Spirit impelled me seemingly, to arise to my feet, what for I know not, but I had no sooner arose to my feet when the Spirit of God rested upon me in power, and it was then and there that I covenanted with my heavenly Father that if he would give me strength I would abstain from the use of tobacco (which I had used since I was twelve years old) and fit myself for the work he had for me to do.

I have never regretted the step taken for I am greatly improved in health although I have been tempted many times but thus far have withstood the enemy and pray I always shall.

On October 10, 1911, I was ordained a priest and while the hands were upon my head the Lord spoke through one of his servants and repeated what he had told me at my confirmation "that if I would be faithful I would be as a polished shaft in his hands." How well I have proven myself worthy will be known on the great judgment day.

I have only led two into the waters of baptism as yet but hope to do more. May I prove worthy to stand and bring many into the fold and be the means of seeing my near relatives in the church and kingdom.

Hoping I may be remembered in prayer for the prayers of the righteous availeth much.

Yours in the conflict,
Asa B. Rowe.

GALENA, Kas., Jan. 5.

Editor Ensign—At the last conference of the Spring River district the Galena Branch was officially disorganized by request of the few remaining members.

Bro. T. W. Chaborn told me how I might continue to be of some service to the cause; and if I could get into correspondence with Brother Frank Hedrick (I believe he is president of the district in which the city of Atchison is located) I might place a matter in his care in which he might be of incalculable benefit to a twelve year old girl, a baptized member of our church. If Bro. Hedrick sees this will he please send his address to me.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

THE POWER OF THE CHURCH.

Sermon delivered by Apostle J. W. Wight, at Lamoni, Iowa
December 22, 1912.

REPORTED BY ESTELLA WIGHT.

In the third chapter, second letter to Timothy, and the first five verses: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away."

The portion to which we wish to call your attention more especially is the fifth verse: "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away."

There can be no question but that the things outlined in the lesson read are receiving their fulfillment in our own time, to a degree at least, and in fact, to quite a large degree; but I am not so much concerned about the things outlined in the preceding verses as I am with reference to the verse to which your especial attention is called. There is to be a people professing religion in the last days, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. I have no disposition whatever to undertake to determine who these people are, or in any sense of the term malign or criticize anybody. I do not believe in negative preaching. I believe in affirmation. It think there is altogether too much negative work, and not enough affirmative presented from the pulpit. "Who made thee a judge?" What right have I to determine other than to conclude as to whether that which I believe is in harmony with the word of God? I do not believe in finding fault. I do not believe we have a right to say that this man or that man or the other man is not right, and we are: for the fact of the matter is, that it becomes everyone of us to examine ourselves and see whether we be in the faith. "Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be rebrotates."

I am concerned as to the meaning of this statement: "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," and I think, as a people, we ought to examine ourselves, and discover in the examination, if we can, as to whether we can come under this criticism; as to whether the apostle, in writing as he did, no doubt by the inspiration of God, had reference to us, as to whether in reality we have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof.

I wish to invite your attention to the first chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and to the statement made here with reference to power. In the eighth verse of this first chapter the apostle says:

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

I wish to say in this connection that we understand that the word "power" is here closely associated with the word "authority;" and I wish to call your attention also to this important fact, as it appears to me such a true likeness of the thought of real life. Jesus had gone down to a little village prior to his departure into heaven. It was here he had been wont to go in life, and possibly it was the most homelike place that he had found, and this being the fact, it is a possible reason why he went down there just before departing into heaven. He had with him eleven men—special witnesses. Men unto whom he had given power or authority over devils, to heal all manner of sickness, to cleanse the leper; to whom he had said, "Freely ye have received, freely give." (or freely impart). He raised his hands, blessed those men, but commanded them (and it seems to me that there is force in that commandment) "But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high."

I want you to think of it now. I want you to associate the fact with the previous promise, the previous authority granted unto these men: and yet, notwithstanding that fact, there comes the commandment, "But tarry," do not go. Wait in Jerusalem, or in the city, until ye have been endowed with power from on high.

I go back to the morn of creation and read of a man made of the dust of the earth, and how that after he had been thus fashioned, God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul: I read of an occurrence in John of the Christ who on one occasion, being associated with the apostles, that he breathed upon them and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." These two facts associate themselves in my mind this morning as being closely related, as having a relationship worth inquiring into. These men, notwithstanding that from a physical standpoint they had the power, the volition, could breathe, move, speak, all that, had not, so far as they were spiritually concerned, the power of volition, until they had tarried, waited for the endowment, the power of life.

Another fact associates itself in my mind along this line. Just as it was necessary in Eden's morn to breathe into that inanimate body the breath of life, and that body become a living soul, so the great body or church of Christ must have in it the breath of life, the power of the Spirit, and without it, it is evidently inanimate, with no power of volition: no power to speak, no power to see, no power to hear, and grasping the thought from this standpoint, it is not at all wonderful that the Master said, though he had breathed upon them, do not move, do not go, until you have received the power, until you have been endued, the power has come upon you, and you have, as a church, as my body, the breath of life in you and the power of volition. And you may just as well tell me that the physical man can have the power of volition without the spirit, or in the morn of creation the "breath of life," as to tell me the church without this Spirit can have the power, the volition.

I am not surprised, then, as I read the historical statement, "But tarry ye," that that statement was made, and, to me, without that Spirit the church is as inanimate as this body will be when the spirit has taken its departure; consequently the great body or church of Christ was actually in a condition or state of suspended animation between the time when the Christ took his departure to the courts of glory, and the time when the endowing power came.

I remember another statement made by him for our good. It may appear to some that if the church was thus inanimate, where was the animation while Christ was upon the earth and the Spirit had not come, that is, in its enduing power? I answer it thus: Christ said, "I go away, but I will not leave you comfortless. I will send unto you another comforter." The very word, "another" comforter, clearly implies that they had had a comforter, or in other words, the clear conclusion is that the Christ had been their comforter, their life force, so well could he have said, "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." He was the life force, the comforter while with them; but leaving them, leaving his church, leaving his body, the church, that body became inanimate, as it were; in a state of suspended animation; hence, the necessity, "But tarry ye until ye be endued with power from on high."

Learning from this important fact as to the necessity of its existence, its power, its authority, and as to the question of its power and authority, let me invite your attention to the day of Pentecost, found recorded here in the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. These men had tarried; they had waited, were in the act of fasting and prayer. There came into that chamber where they were assembled, the sound of a mighty, rushing wind, which filled the whole house where they were assembled, and immediately cloven tongues like as of fire sat upon each of them. They arose and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. The Spirit, the authority from God, the power of God resting upon them; life force reanimated the church, and once again it could breathe, it could move, it could gesture, it could talk, and these men under a condition of this kind began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance.

And in thinking about these occurrences, though they be historical in their nature, I have felt that if the church of Jesus Christ, as a body, is now in existence, that it exists, in the true sense of the term, as a result of the same power, the same authority that it did then; for this body, this church can no more change than can he himself, and; as a consequence, we should, in making this examination in harmony with the thought outlined to first examine yourselves and see whether you be in the faith, we ought in making the examination, determine as to whether our belief is based upon the thought that these occurrences can come now as they came eighteen and more centuries ago, or in any age of the world's history; so far as that is concerned, that God, by the power his Spirit, sent unto his church to give that church life and life more abundantly, will make himself manifest in the same way to his church and people today as he made himself manifest then; and that should be one of the viewpoints from which one should undertake to examine himself as to whether he be in the faith or not.

These men, arising and speaking with new tongues, made manifest the power of God, and I want to call your attention to one special incident with relation to it. There was one among them who was mouthpiece in behalf, or in defense of his brethren. Accusation had been made that these men were drunken. The mouthpiece of these apostles, arising, said, substantially: Man and brethren, these are not drunken as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day. This is that which is spoken of by Joel, the prophet. The same Spirit which Joel prophesied of in his second chapter; this is that same Spirit which ye now see and hear. It is what is causing these men to talk as they do.

And you do not know that that man fifty days before this had been such a moral coward that three several times he denied his Lord and Christ, finally cursing and swearing. I presume he did that to help his auditors to conclude that he could not be a follower of Jesus or else he would not curse nor swear. I do not know, whatever his purpose was it is immaterial, but anyhow he was a moral coward, denied his Lord and Christ three different times; but under the influence of the endowment he here faces a multitude of people—just a little few before around those dying embers—now it is a multitude, and to their faces he tells that multitude how with wicked hands they have taken and crucified their Lord and Master; how that he has arisen and when they hear this they are pricked in their hearts, and they cry out. "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Here comes the important fact, the man that stood face to face with the multitude under this endowing power (no moral coward now) and in harmony with the power of the gospel, the authority granted unto him, he answers the query of those who cry out in the agony of their souls, "What shall we do?" "Repent and be baptized everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

There is the thought. He was laying down the fundamental truths incident to their obedience if they will become a part of the great body of Jesus Christ. If they will enter they must repent of their sins. "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Isaiah says that the Lord our God is calling, "Come unto me all ye ends of the earth and be ye saved." The call is certainly far-reaching enough. The "promise" goes as far the "call." The promise is to you directly here under the sound of my voice, to your offspring, and to all, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. A promise upon condition of having obtained faith in Christ. For they had obtained faith. They had believed Peter's statement, obtained faith in the Christ, now, "What shall we do?" "Repeat of your sins, be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of those sins."

I will tell you from an affirmative standpoint, I do not try to seek to divert the word, in any sense but leave the plain, positive statement there as it fell from the lips of the inspired apostle, and accept it in its plainness, without undertaking to divert it in any sense of the term. Believe; be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ; do this for the remission of sins. The inspired apostle said it. He said it when he was under the power of that promised endowment, and Jesus had said, "Howbeit, when he the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth." He also said, "He will not testify of himself. That which he hears, that shall he speak, and he will show you things to come."

I am glad in my heart, glad in my soul of the promise of the Master. I am glad in my soul that under its divine influence the man who fifty days before this event had been a moral coward, could now stand forth to face the throng, the people that had thronged the place, and tell them how they with wicked hands had taken and crucified their Lord and Master, and then when they asked the question, "What shall we do?" in plain, simple language, with no possibility of ambiguity, answers so positively, so directly, "Repent. You have obtained faith in Christ. You have shown it. Now repent and then be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ." Here's the power of God being made manifest through the inspired apostle, and he is no longer a coward. Under the influence of the divine affluus he is not a coward. Now the moral cowardice is gone. He is bold under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost; the life force of the church has entered into him; he feels its throbbings; he feels its quickening power, and he feels that he can well afford to declare the great power and truth of God to these anxious, hungering, thirsting souls calling out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Let me tell you that if people have a true form of godliness, they will not deny the power thereof, and if I should in any sense of the term undertake to deny the power of God, the apostle says "From such turn away." Let us not deny the power of God.

I examine it from another standpoint, as to how it is obtained, and invite your attention to the historical statement with relation to this same man Peter and his brother in the gospel John. They are at Jerusalem. A man has gone down to that place called Samaria, Philip by name. He preaches there, works miracles, and when the people see these miracles they wonder, and after beholding them they are finally baptized, the record says (in the 8th chapter of Acts you will find it), both men and women. And "when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God (they had been baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, hence baptism must have been the word of God; for the apostles heard that they had received the word of God), they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost; (For as yet he had fallen upon none of them)." And the historian tells us that they laid their hands on them and that when they laid their hands on them they received the Holy Ghost; for a man that had been a sorcerer, but becoming converted, to an extent at least, under Philip's preaching, and being baptized, when, he saw that through the laying on of the hands of the apostles the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, that on whomsoever he should lay his hands they might receive a like gift, and Peter said, "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God might be purchased with money." It cannot be, my friends. It is utterly impossible. You cannot purchase the gift of God with money. They received the Holy Ghost through the laying on of the hands of the apostles. That is what the historian tells us. There can be no question so far as the history is concerned.

Now I cannot tell you this morning as to why God saw fit to determine or ordain, conclude in his mind, and make the declaration to man that he should lay hands upon the head of an individual; that his, God's servants, should do it. I do not know why. I do not know why he chose that method, but knowing that he did choose that method, so far as the history reveals the fact, and the inspiration that from time to time, has come to me personally, knowing it from that standpoint, I wish to proceed and do exactly as God wants me to do.

I remember in Australia on one occasion in the city of Melbourne I was talking with a very learned man, a minister of another church. We were having a friendly talk, and he finally said to me, "Mr. Wight, I will tell you I would not dare presume to lay my hands on anybody for the gift of the Holy Ghost."

I said, "Pardon me, sir, is it not a fact that in the church of which you are a member, your ministry lay their hands upon other men to set them apart as ministers for God?"

"Yes sir, most decidedly."

"Now," said I, "so far as I am concerned, taking it from the standpoint of presumption as you have done, it seems to me to be as great a presumption to lay hands upon a man to set him apart as God's minister, to minister in the sacred ordinances of God's house, as it is to lay hands upon another for the reception of the Holy Ghost. And more than that," said I, "we have just as much historical evidence in favor of the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, as we do to ordain men to the ministry. Just as positive, just as direct in its teaching."

And after I had said that to him he said, "Well, I will tell you, Elder, I hadn't thought of it in that light before."

Now he was simply assuming without making investigation, but it is likely that thereafter he was more careful about presuming in such matters, for how could he help seeing that after all from the standpoint of presumption it is just as presumptuous to lay our hands upon a man to ordain him a minister of the church or house of God as it is to lay hands upon him to confirm him a member in the church, asking God to bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost; but the one commandment is equally binding with the other, both in teaching and in practice.

I call your attention to one more statement from the Acts of the Apostles, and then I shall leave this part of the subject. I believe I will turn to it and read it so as there will be no possibility of mistake by quotation. Beginning with the first verse of the 19th chapter:

"And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples, he said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost."

Now stop a moment. Suppose I preach to this congregation with reference to faith, with reference to repentance, with reference to baptism, and go no farther, say nothing whatever about the Holy Ghost, the gift of the Holy Ghost, the power of the Holy Ghost, say not a word about it, and you have never heard it preached. Finally you conclude, a good many of you at least, to be baptized. Somebody else comes along after a time, perhaps Brother Lambert, and they say, "How are you, Brother Lambert," and in talking with them he asks the question: "Well, have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed?" And they say to him, "Why, we have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." Now don't you see that you would be like these men? You hear me preach about every thing but the Holy Ghost but do not hear anything about it. The man that had baptized these twelve men, whoever it was, had said nothing whatever about the Holy Spirit. And now what does Paul say? "Unto what then were ye baptized?" What! you have been baptized and haven't heard anything about the Holy Spirit? "Unto what then were ye baptized?" Why, they said, unto John's baptism. They evidently misapprehended the question. And some people have concluded that John did not baptize with a Christian baptism because of the statement there. But if anybody ever tells you that John did not baptize with a Christian baptism, you just ask them the question as to why Christ was baptized by John if his baptism was not Christian.

"Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues and prophesied."

Here then is the practice of the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. So the Holy Ghost was obtained then by the laying on of hands. Somebody says, "Well, but, Elder, what about Cornelius, on whom the Holy Ghost fell without any laying on of hands?" Well, so far as that question is concerned I would answer it like this: That among all the other scriptural statements this seems to be the exception. If it be positively true that he never had hands laid upon him for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and we have no statement that he did, this is the exception. If it be true that he had no hands laid upon him, it is an exception. But even if he did not, this is the exception, and I ask you in view of that thought, ought we to take the exception or the rule? Teachers here of our public schools, teachers here of Graceland College, do they in the schoolroom teach the boys and girls to accept the exception, or do they teach them to accept the rule? The rule is to lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. The rule being that, let us accept the rule, take it from an affirmative standpoint and move forward, and not undertake to block the wheels of progress by putting sprags in the way.

Some say that the Holy Spirit is with us, that we have it the church. If so there will be certain manifestations of its power.

I call your attention to the 12th chapter of the first Corinthian letter and determine accordingly. Paul writing to the Corinthian saints (remember he was writing to those in the church) says, "Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant. Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led. Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."

Somebody, some infidel may say, "Why, that is not true. I can say that Jesus is the Christ." That may be true, so can the parrot! But the evident meaning is that without the aid of the Spirit none can say it intelligently. Now is the Holy Ghost in the church? Let us see: "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. (Not a different one). And there are differences of administration, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all."

Do you see how beautifully the apostle here weaves into this little statement in these two verses that the Holy Spirit, Jesus Christ, and God are all combined?

"And there are diversities of operation, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."

So if the power of God is really in the church, the authority obtained by the presence of the Holy Spirit, if it is really in the church, then these gifts will be made manifest in the church, even though it may be said they are not necessary now. They are just as essential now as they were eighteen hundred years ago, and no more than God can change, no more than Jesus Christ can change, can the Holy Spirit change, and so, as in its office-work eighteen hundred years ago it imparted these nine gifts, so will it be if the Holy Spirit is in the church today, the power of God being made manifest, the great life force, imparting its gifts to the church.

If, then, we have not only the form but the power as well, in the church, there will be a manifestation in the imparting of these gifts by the Holy Spirit. And the Holy Spirit will give not life alone to Christ's "body"—the church—but the power or authority that must belong to the church to help it to move forward in the great work of redemption.

SHOULD THE HUSBAND AND FATHER BE A DESPOT?

ELDER W. H. DEAM.

The following extracts are from a letter received a short time ago from a brother:

"I would like to know the laws concerning the home, that is the relation of father and husband to wife and children. Has the husband the right, according to the laws of the church, to command the wife and children to do all he wants them to do. I know of a family of saints where the father assumes to be ruler over the family. He says the Bible commands the man to rule his wife, and keeps telling her to obey him, and tells the children that they don't honor him. The home is almost broken up. He gets stirred up so that there is fear of bodily harm. . . . The wife is almost ready to take her name from the church, because that in every little thing she does not agree with her husband in, he scolds her continuously, saying that as long as her name is on the church record he will be held accountable if she does not reverence and obey him, taking for his position the statement in Genesis, 'Thy husband shall rule over thee,' and that in Ephesians, where Paul says, 'The husband is the head of the wife.' The children are said to be above the average as to obedience and helpfulness."

My understanding of the relation of children to father is that they shall obey him in that which is just and right, and that the laws of the land will protect the children against that which is unjust, against abuse and mistreatment. Children should honor their father and mother. They are responsible to the mother just as much as to the father. They should honor both. If either are unreasonable and unjust with the children they have no claim on them for honor.

In the 6th chapter of Ephesians Paul says: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right." It is just and right that they obey their parents in the Lord, but he does not intimate that they should obey them in that which is not just and right. All that is "in the Lord" is right, but all that is not in the Lord cannot be "just and right." You will notice that he uses the plural number "parents" and that means both father and mother. Now notice what Paul in the same connection says about the father:—"And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." To "nurture" the children would not be to dominate over them and abuse them, but would be that they should be loving, kind and considerate, and yet firm on that which is just and right that they may be trained up to be good, honorable men and women. The father should care for his offspring with kindness and not rule over them as a despot. As human beings they should not be deprived of their personality nor their rights.

Now as to the wife, she has been chosen as a helpmeet, a co-partner. Take it from a business standpoint, and grant for argument sake that the husband is at the head of the partnership, has not the wife rights and a voice in the management of their affairs. How long would any one stay in business with another if he, because he had a greater interest invested, would domineer and be oppressive? To be the head of an institution does not take all rights from others.

Concerning the husband we read Proverbs 5:18, "Let thy fountain be blessed, and rejoice with the wife of thy youth." Rejoice with her, and not cause her sorrow and discontent instead of rejoicing. Again in Ecclesiastes 9:9, we read, "Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest," etc. In Ephesians 5:28 we read, "So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself," and in the 31st verse Paul says: "For this cause shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh." The man and wife should be one. If they are not they are not fulfilling the law. If a man domineers over his wife he is domineering over himself, which is folly.

If we take Paul for authority we must admit that the wife and husband stand on equal footing, one having just as much authority as the other, for we read in 1 Cor. 7:3, 4, as follows: "Let the husband render unto the wife due benevolence: and likewise the wife unto the husband. The wife hath not power over her own body, but the husband; and likewise also the husband hath not power over his own body, but the wife." From this we take it that neither are at liberty to do as they please without advice from the other. They are bound together by a bond and when one does just as he pleases regardless of the wishes of the other he is breaking that bond, nor should there be strenuous opposition to each other in granting desires, because the wife's desires if just and right should be the husband's desires, and vice versa. No, there is no law, human or divine, that gives the husband the right to rule over his wife as a despot. Although he may be considered the head, and in most cases take the lead in family affairs, yet she is co-partner with him and is entitled to just as much consideration as accorded to him. It hurts me to hear the expression, "The lords of creation." Although some men may assume such lordship it is an insult to true manhood and the true marriage relationship. The Lord said a man and wife are one flesh, and as such how can one rule over the other?

DEVELOPMENT.

"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow." Matt. 6:28.

"So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground; and should sleep, and rise night and day; and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how." Mark 4:26, 27.

Contemplating the life that is, and that which is to be the legitimate outgrowth thereof, the foregoing texts presented to our mind, a new thought, and we desire to here give expression to some of the more essential truths pertaining thereto, and if possible make clear the real vital import of the Master's words. The texts deal with growth; they imply a developing, and unfolding, an evolving out of an imperfect state, or condition into a perfect one.

Growth, like every thing else, is governed by certain immutable laws, and it should be observed that environment also affects it in a measure, therefore there can be a perfect, or an imperfect growth, i. e., the germ of life if properly environed will grow, unfold, and develop into a perfect type of its antecedent. Consider the lilies, how they grow." Webster defines the word grow, thus: "To be augmented by natural process; to increase; to swell; To rise from the soil; to produce.

Now if we may apply this definition to the christian life, it occurs to us the meaning of the Master's words will be obvious,—to begin however it must be observed, that growth is always associated with life, it is a manifestation of life, and where there is no life there can be no growth, and on the other hand where there is no growth, it is at least strong evidence, that there is but little or no life. And if there be life it is not properly environed so as to produce a growth.

For example, we may hold in our possession, the seeds of the most beautiful and fragrant lilies, and the seeds too may be fertile, but if we keep them out of the proper environment, no growth can be had, we cannot see the lilies grow. If the seeds are sown in poor light soil without the necessary amount of moisture and sunlight, there will at best be but an imperfect growth, and if all those things be had, and the soil is not properly cultivated and fertilized, and necessary attention given to the dressing of the plant we cannot expect to see a perfect lily.

"So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground." The kingdom of God is here likened unto something, that something is the casting of seed into the ground, and it is therefore obvious that before a man can grow into the likeness of the Divine he must first receive of the Divine,—that first receiving however may be very small, but the seeds of Divine love, and of Divine life must be implanted within the heart and mind of man,—and then if that planting be surrounded by the proper environment it will grow, unfold, develop, evolve from one stage of life to a more complete one, and in time will attain unto the likeness of the antecedent life.

God is the author of life, and therefore the director and producer of growth. One has said "you cannot make the lilies grow, God must do that," and then reasons that you cannot make the Christ life develop within you, which in one sense of the term is true, but in another sense is erroneous.

It must be conceded that we can condition the growth of the lilies, since we can largely modify and arrange their environment, we can augment the conditions of growth by properly cultivating and fertilizing, and therefore it is within our power to produce ordinary lilies, or extraordinary lilies, they may be very common, or we may cause them to be superb.

So in like manner, while an unborn man—spiritually unborn—cannot enter the kingdom of God, yet after he has been born again "not of corruptible but of incorruptible seed" he can to a great degree condition the growth of his spiritual character, he can cultivate his heart and mind, by meditation and study, he can fertilize it by loving thoughts and kind deeds, he can water it with the dew of reverence and humility, he can prune and dress it by chastity and devotion, and so while he may not know how the lily grows, he knows that he can materially affect its growth, and while he may not know just how the spiritual life unfolds and develops within his heart, he can and does know that he can largely condition that growth, he can root it up and destroy it if he chooses, he can provide it with barren soil and thus stultify its growth, or he can fertilize and cultivate it and make the growth superb.

He may behold the tender blade, next the stalk, and at length the bud forming and the leaves unfolding to the sun, he may not understand by what process this all takes place, but he can and does know that the immutable laws of nature direct it, and that those laws are augmented by proper environment. So also we may know the spiritual growth is governed and directed by the immutable laws of God, and that we can in a measure augment those laws and make the growth more prolific by a persistent arranging and modifying of the conditions surrounding that spiritual growth.

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be." When the seeds of Divine love have been implanted within the heart, and the tender blade of faith begins to grow up and manifest itself we cannot as yet tell what the end will be, because proper caring for and cultivating of that tender plant of faith may cause it to grow into a perfect life fully developed and rounded out, complete and grand, a perfect likeness of the divine Master, or it may be stultified in its growth and reach a lesser state of life, and so we can readily understand the other parable of the blessed Christ, of the thirty, sixty, and the hundred fold. The condition of the soil, the fertilizing and cultivating, the amount of heat and moisture all figure materially in the laws of growth, and when we understand that we have within our own reach and power, largely the conditioning of our life and its development, we will then be able to labor with God for the upbuilding not only of ourselves but of the whole world.

THE COOKERY OF STARCHES.

This paper is to deal with the cookery of starches and will be presented in a series of experiments the results of which you will be expected to record and apply in working out the recipes following.

Iodine is the chemical used to test for starch, and when applied to any food containing that element it will immediately turn blue.

Experiment 1.
Using small quantities of flour, rice, potatoes, corn meal, barley, and oat meal, apply iodine. Which foods contain starch?

Experiment 2.
(a) Mix one teaspoon cornstarch and one-half cup cold water and heat to 70 degrees C. (below boiling point.) Let stand till cool.

(b) Mix one teaspoonful of cornstarch and one-half cup water and boil two minutes. Let stand till cool and compare with (a) What do you infer as to the solubility and cooking temperature of starch?

Experiment 3.
(a) Stir one tablespoon of cornstarch into one-half cup of boiling water.
(b) Pour one-half cup boiling water on one tablespoon of cornstarch.

(c) Mix portions of cornstarch with (1) cold water, (2) sugar, and (3) fat, respectively. Add boiling water to each. What do you conclude as to the method of combining a starchy product with a liquid? How would you make gravy, cream soups, cornstarch puddings, etc.?

Experiment 4.
Compare the rate of evaporation of water boiled in a shallow broad vessel, with that boiled in a narrow one of approximately the same capacity. How will this evaporation affect the division of a large recipe?

Prepare a cornstarch mold using one-half cup of milk as liquid, one tablespoon of cornstarch and one tablespoon of sugar.

Experiment 5.
Does flour contain starch? (Experiment 1.)

Combine one tablespoon of flour, and enough liquid to make a (1) thick sauce, (2) a medium sauce, and (3) a thin sauce. Tabulate your results. (Measure the liquid accurately.) Prepare cream toast, and cream dried beef.

Experiment 6.
Cook rice by the following methods and compare results; (a) Cook one-fourth cup rice in one quart of rapidly boiling water. (b) Boil one-fourth cup rice in three to four times as much water for five minutes. Finish cooking in a double boiler. (c) Boil one-fourth cup rice fifteen minutes. Strain, rinse in cold water, and cook in a steamer till soft. Determine the proportion of salt that should be added to properly season the rice. How will it vary in these different methods of cooking?

Experiment 7.
Pare two potatoes and cook by placing them in boiling salted water. Cook till easily pierced with a fork. Drain one and thoroughly dry. Allow the second to stand in the water half an hour. Compare.

Experiment 8.
Principle of preparing vegetable soup.—To four tablespoon of mashed potato add one-half cup thin white sauce. (Ex. 5). Dilute with milk to the right consistency for potato soup. Season to suit taste. Keep a careful record of the amount of milk used and write a recipe for one quart of potato soup. Could a potato soup be made without using flour? What is the function of the latter.?

Experiment 9.
Test carrots, turnips, and other vegetables for starch. What other condition besides the presence and absence of this would affect the cookery of vegetables. Classify the different kinds of vegetables to show the relation between composition and methods of cooking.

Prepare spinach or creamed carrots and creamed cabbage, onion or turnip. Save the water in which these vegetables have been cooked for Experiment 10.

Experiment 10.
Convert cooked vegetables into soup, applying the principles illustrated in Experiment 8. What difference in proportions must be made when succulent vegetables are used?

P. S. Nearly all these experiments have been taken in whole or part from those given in the "Application of Heat to Food Materials," Department of Household Administration, the University of Chicago.

CHILDREN'S HOME OFFERINGS.

The method of raising funds for the children's home at Lamon Iowa, adopted by the committee appointed by the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service, has been the means of furnishing much needed help in the maintenance of the home. The plan is to appoint one or more workers in each local who engages the members to pay five cents per month, and when a sufficient amount is on hand, to forward to the treasurer of the local with the names and amounts of those contributing. Many members have also secured offerings from their friends at a distance some of whom have paid more than the sixty cents a year. Those desiring to contribute for this worthy purpose through the Woman's Auxiliary, may send their contributions to Mrs. Letta Tilton, Lamoni, Iowa, who is the general treasurer, and due credit will be given.

All items are reported to the general society at its annual meeting in April, but we include here the following names of those who have contributed from a distance, and reported by Sr. M. Bierlein.

From Kidder, South Dakota, Mr. E. E. Moore 60 cents, Mrs. E. E. Moore 51; Newark, S. Dak., Mrs. Lizzie Schulte $4.50, Mr. Geo. Schulte $1, Alice Schulte 15 cts., Irene Schulte 15 cts., Mr. E. M. Burk 60 cts., Mr. Willie Schulte 50 cts., Miss Augusta Schulte 50 cts., Mr. J. D. Bierlein $2; Straubville, N. Dak., Mr. Fred Schulte $1; Jerusalem, Pal., Mrs. Mary Floyd 50 cents; Rogers, Minn., Mrs. J. P. Grant $2; Henry Homo $1; Independence, Mo., Miss Grace Stonger 60 cents, Martha Bierlein 60 cents, Mrs. Highman 75 cents.

MISCELLANEOUS

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

NORTHEAST MISSOURI DISTRICT conference will be held at Bevier, Mo., February 15, 16, 1913. Send all reports to Wm. C. Chapman, Highes, Mo.
Wm. C. Chapman, Dist. Sec.

INDEPENDENCE STAKE.—You are hereby informed of the coming stake conference to be held at Independence First Church, March 8, 9, 1913, commencing at 10:00 a. m. We desire as large a representation as is possible, in view of the fact that important business will be transacted, as well as the selection of delegates to the general conference. We shall expect those belonging to quorums to report directly to their secretary, who will report to the stake secretary. Those not belonging to any quorum will report to the stake secretary direct. Both individual and secretaries' reports must be in his hands at least ten (10) days before conference.

G. E. Harrington, Pres.
L. H. Haas, Secretary.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA DISTRICT conference will meet at Meadow Grove, Nebraska, February 22, 23. Branch clerks please have reports in due time.

F. S. Gatenby, Dist. Sec.

Orchard, Nebr.

PORTLAND DISTRICT conference will convene at Portland, Oregon, Saturday, February 22, 1913, in the saints' church two blocks north of Glisan St., on E. 76th. Come expecting a good time and help us make it so.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

NORTH DAKOTA DISTRICT.—Conference convened at Berlin January 11, 1913, at 3:15 p. m. with Elder Wm. Sparling and J. S. Wagener presiding. W. E. Shakespeare, secretary pro tem. Ministers reporting: Elders Wm. Sparling, J. E. Wildermuth, J. C. Page, E. E. Meddle, and J. S. Wagener. Priests, W. E. Shakespeare, Wm. Shockow, W. H. Hagood, and Calvin J. Wagar, teacher. Branches reporting, Fargo 38, Gain, 2. Gilroy, 35, Loss 3. Minot, new branch 30.

Bishop's agent's report.—On hand last report $175.42, received since, $110.42, total 1285.84. Paid out since last report, $730. Balance on hand, $555.84. The account was audited.

By motion the Leeds Branch was declared disorganized and books and records ordered sent to district secretary and that letters of removal be issued to members of said branch to the proper branches until all are properly placed.

By motion the money held by the reunion committee was accepted and ordered placed in the district treasury. A motion was passed favoring the organizing of a branch in the northeast part of the state.

The following delegates to general conference were chosen, Wm. Sparling, W. E. Shakespeare, J. C. Page, J. S. Wagener, Geo. Young, J. E. Wildermuth, Sr. John Young, Sr. Lena Graham, Thos. Leach, Len Mofft, Sr. Emilie McLeod.

A motion favoring the holding of the joint reunion to be held in Fargo next summer being held so as to end with the last Sunday in June, was passed. Also that the next conference be held on the Tuesday of the Reunion.

The speakers were Wm. Sparling, W. E. Shakespeare, and J. C. Page. The Sunday-school held its session at 9:45 a. m. In the afternoon a very spiritual prayer and sacrament meeting was enjoyed, in which the Spirit bore witness to the truthfulness of the work to the encouragement of all present.

SPARTA, Mich., Jan. 15.

Editor Ensign:—The contest going on in Sparta for some time past finally developed into a splendid debate between the Disciple Church and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The church propositions had been signed for some time waiting for the Disciple man to get ready.

While we speak in praise of the debate we want to be understood that we cherish the good spirit that was brought into the contest and prevailed until the close. We sincerely believe that the debate will awaken an interest in our work and help to get it before the people of the world. Among those who presided we would not fail to mention Elder Geo. W. Burt, president of the Central Michigan District, our moderator who did credit to the occasion by enforcing the law governing. That had much to do with the splendid results. And as the debate advanced the interest deepened, and the meetings grew in attendance.

We deem it not necessary to mention the points under discussion, but we would like the privilege and deem it a duty as well to speak in much praise of Elder Ernest N. Burt of Beaverton, Mich., who defended the truth under the power of the Spirit of the Master. It was acknowledged that we seldom saw and felt the power of God more than when Elder Burt made his closing defense. The audience was spell-bound. The evil powers were aroused and the heaven is working as never before. If the Disciple man could have proven that he survived the Apostolic age, he might have saved a deacon and himself as an elder. But he did not even retain or save their much cherished name Christian, for the two-edge sword was fatal under the act of the Spirit.

According to all reports we have won a decided victory in favor of the Latter Day Saints. Elder Geo. W. Burt returned home the 13th. Elder Ernest N. Burt is to continue his meetings here in this place.

Hopefully yours,
F. T. Field.

FROM UTAH.

Editor Ensign:—Not having troubled your grand and newsy columns since July last, I hope this may not find its way to the waste basket. Leaving the city of salt July 16th I arrived in Midvale where I was made to feel at home with Bro. James Wardle and his noble family of singers. There I was laid up with a bad cold, but kindly and tenderly cared for as if at home, may God reward them four fold. While there I broke the bread of life; also at Sandy on the 29th at 7:30 p. m. while preaching on the street and quoting from the Utah Doctrine and Covenants a Brighamite (half drunk) shouted out at the top of his voice, "You are a — liar," which was repeated. He got so hot under the collar that it took two men to hold him to keep him from getting up into the buggy in which I was standing. I said in reply that if what I had said was a lie I got it out of their own book, — but the mill continued to grind, while the man with the star stood by—seemingly to protect the lawbreaker at least. He showed no signs of keeping order—which he must have been sworn to do, but I remembered who I was and where I was.

My next stop was at Pleasant Grove where I called on Elder J. C. Jensen and family who made me welcome; thence to Provo where I labored some in connection with Elder M. F. Gowell and Bro. Charles Chase in street work. We have a church and branch there; Elder T. J. Pollard in charge. Bro. and Sr. Gowell are doing good there in a house to house fireside work, as well as being a great help to the branch and lone missionary.

My next stop was Nephi where I was made welcome at the home of Sr. Martha Coleman and her daughter Annie; thence south to Deseret where Elder J. M. Stubbart joined me in missionary work. He is surely an agreeable and wise co-laborer. I had good company but what about him? We put in a few days at Deseret, Oasis and Hinkley; thence south (into a water canal and out) to Milford where we were made welcome by Mr. and Sr. Arthur Wood, (Sr. Wood was formerly a L-an-noui girl) and Hugh J. Barton.

From there we moved on to Greenville where we were kindly cared for by Mr. P. Jack Barton and the few saints there; thence to Beaver where lives our aged Bro. Edward Davis and wife; returning to Deseret where I reluctantly left my co-laborer to look after his business affairs while I moved on to Provo to trouble the waters.

September 28th found me in Salt Lake City to attend our district conference, after which I remained in the city a few days and assisted Elder A. M. Chase in street work and to compile a missionary note book (between meetings). I find Elder Chase and his most noble family to be true earnest gospel workers all along the line. From the city I went north to Ogden and Plain City, at the former lives Bro. Wells Chase and his noble family and other good saints. At the latter is the home of Bro. and Sr. Coy, also Bro. and Sr. Hudson; thence to Malad, Idaho, where the waters were again troubled. Here we have a church, a branch, a noble band of saints, Elder Elias E. Richards in charge. From there returned to Ogden where we also have a church and branch, and found that Elder J. E. Vanderwood and family had located there which will prove to be a great help to all concerned. I next moved on south by way of City, Midvale, Sandy, Provo, Nephi, Mantu where is the home of Elder S. P. Rasmussen and wife; found him in poor health.

My next stop was Gunnison where I got the use of the Presbyterian Church, through the kindness of Rev. Hamilton; thence south to Salina and Elsinore where I spent the holidays with Elder Hans Lorenson and family who made me feel at home. I also stopped off at Richfield, the home of Bro. Joseph J. Jensen and Melvin N. Ross where the lone missionary was made welcome.

The Hansen, Swensen and Young, Stewart debate is still fresh in the memory of the Richfieldites. Here I had the use of the M. E. Church through the kindness of the trustees and the Rev. Ira S. Haverfield, who even did the janitor work, furnished heat and lights free. May God reward such broad minded and whole souled men. But what of the narrow, contracted, selfrighteous beings who tore my meeting notices from the public bulletin board and other places in Richfield as well as other points. Think of the school board and superintendent of schools in Salt Lake City compelling two little girls to salute the U. S. flag or be expelled from school, when at the same time Joseph F. Smith and many others in Utah are allowed to trample said flag under foot and drag it in the dust comparatively, by living in polygamy in open violation of the laws of God and the land, according to their own confession. I have no objections however to saluting the flag.

I hope that none of our people in any part of the world, will become so narrow minded as to close our churches or homes against the Brighamites or any other people, white or black, take them in, give them your best bed and eatables at your command, treat them with kindness, go and hear them preach and if they can break down our church structure with a soap bubble let it fall—the sooner the better.

On December 9th I called on Bro. and Sr. Ether Blanchard of Springville, Utah, and with them lives Sr. Margaret Goff (Sr. B's mother) who was born Dec. 25, 1808, having now passed her one hundred and four years. Springville is also the home of Bro. and Sr. J. C. Humphrey. In conclusion I must say that all along the line, the saints in Utah have all been very kind to me; the sisters aid society made me a present of a good warm overcoat, (in Salt Lake City) and on the evening of October 10th the saints of that branch had quite a feast at the home of Bro. and Sr. Chase in honor of your humble servant's sixty-second birthday. May God bless them for their loving kindness, which shall ever be remembered.

In gospel bonds,
J. C. Christensen.

EDITORIAL

LOVE BY DOING.

'Tis not the largeness of the plan
Within the mind of man,
Nor the great dreams and rosy schemes
With which he teems.
'Tis what He does; that day by day Opens Life's shining way.
'Tis in the doing we best prove
Our work and love.

HE THAT OVERCOMETH.

"He that overcometh shall inherit all things."—
Revelation 21:7.

The purpose of the gospel is to bring about such a transformation of the whole nature of man as will fit him for an entrance into the presence of God, there to receive an everlasting inheritance. The principles of the gospel are such that when they are applied to man that work of transformation begins at once, and is continued by a continued application of them until perfection is attained. These principles are living ones, as Christ said: "The words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are life;" (John 6:63) and as they are applied to man's life there is a power of life which attends them so that they become realities in his nature.

WHAT TO OVERCOME.

In the "sermon on the mount" Christ in the early part of his ministry set forth those principles which showed what man had to overcome. "Blessed are the poor in spirit; for their's is the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5:3). This condition without which there can be no admission into the kingdom of heaven, is the opposite of pride, arrogance, self-esteem, self-sufficiency, self-exaltation, etc., and these are clearly some of the things that are to be overcome.

"Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth." The opposites of meekness are resentment, hatred, enmity, malice, revenge, irritability, etc., which things forbid receiving an eternal inheritance.

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." Indifference to the essential things of life is a sure barrier to celestial glory, and a careless neglect of the important demands of the laws of life will leave one unfitted for the higher conditions which are otherwise attainable. A diligent effort is required, a hungering and thirsting which indicates an earnest desire for the good and true. Indifference to these things is a condition which must be overcome.

"Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy." An unkind, unforgiving, and vindictive spirit cannot dwell where love reigns, and these injurious qualities of character must be overcome if man would dwell with God.

Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." Impurity affects both body and soul, and Christ gave commandment "that ye suffer none of these things to enter into your heart," for the result of a violation of this law would be a casting of the whole body into hell. (Matt. 5:31, Inspired Translation).

"Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God." A contentious and quarrelsome spirit is opposed to all happiness, and cannot dwell in the presence of God. The possessor must remove it if he would attain to the perfect standard of character.

There are other conditions referred to by the Lord and his ministry as standing in the way of eternal life and which must be removed, some of which are summed in the statement "Out of the heart of men, proceedeth evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: all these evil things come from within, and defile the man." Mark 7:21-23. These are the things of the world and of flesh, and are the things that must be overcome in order for one "to inherit all things."

It is not so much the world of environment that man has to overcome, but the things that are within his own nature, and he will not need the arm of flesh nor material weapons in that warfare, but faith. The world within is greater than the world without.

HOW TO OVERCOME.

Peter said of certain followers of Christ, "They have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." (2 Peter 2:20). John says: "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God." (1 John 5:4,5). From these Scriptures it is clear that faith and knowledge are essential in overcoming the world; not faith in self or in man, but faith in God and Christ and which grows out of the belief "that Jesus Christ is the Son of God;" not knowledge of the incidental things of this life, but the "knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." These are the essential things for overcoming the world.

But there are others. It is also stated that man must be "born of God." "Whoever is born of God overcometh the world." What is that birth? Jesus makes it very plain in John 3:3-9. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." And again in John 1:12,13: "But as many as received him gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Peter also declares the necessity of this birth: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit... being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." (1 Peter 1:22,23). It is not said that we are born of the word of God, but by, or according to, the word of God. The soul is purified in obeying the truth, and a portion of that truth is that man must be born again—of water and of the Spirit.

OVERCOMING DEPENDENT UPON DIVINE HELP.

Man cannot of his own power recover from the original fall by which sin took hold of his nature. There must be brought to his help the divine power, and the coming of that power is dependent upon the birth of the Spirit. But man must put himself in a proper attitude before God in order to receive of his Spirit. It can only come "to as many as receive him," "to them that believe on his name," (Christ), "to those who obey the truth through the Spirit." When man performs his part and puts himself in harmony with the law, then Christ performs his, and man receives power to become a son of God, he is born of God, and having the divine assistance he is able to rise to heights otherwise unattainable, overcoming all the things of evil.

Christ is the great Helper. "His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness," (2 Peter 1:3), without which we cannot overcome and "inherit all things." Man must apply the principles of honor and virtue, and holiness, of faith and obedience, to his life, when God through his Son Jesus Christ will apply to him the divine power, and by these things he will overcome. "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." (2 Peter 1:10,11).

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

COMING FORTH OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.

One of the results of the angel ministrations related in part in our last sketch was the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon from its long hiding in the earth. This book was written upon leaves of gold by an ancient prophet named Mormon, the leaves being bound together forming a book. Mormon lived about 400 A. D. and prior to his death turned the work over to his son Moroni who completed it, and who presumably deposited it in its safe resting place, after the nation had been broken up by civil and foreign war, and anarchy prevailed to such an extent that those who would not renounce their faith in Christ were put to death.

The place of this record was shown to the young man in vision upon the visitation of the angel as told in our last sketch, and so definitely was the scene fixed in his mind that when he went to the place he recognized every feature of it. It was near the brow of a hill not far from Manchester in the state of New York that he found the spot and removing the earth from a partly exposed stone he raised the latter to find a box formed of stones carefully put together in which lay the record and Urin and Thummin. The same angel which had previously appeared to him, re-appeared and gave him further information and instructions concerning the record and the work he was to do.

It was not till September 22, 1827, that he was permitted to take the plates and the instrument by which they might be translated, and shortly after that time the translation was begun, and continued under trying circumstances of trial and persecution until August 1829, when the manuscript was put into the hands of the printer and the book issued in March 1830. The book has been assailed upon every point but is still accepted today by hundreds of thousands of people for all it purports to be.

The book is a record of an ancient nation who lived upon the western continent, and having its origin in a colony of Israelites who came from Jerusalem about B. C. 600, a few years prior to the destruction of that city by the Babylonians, and the taking of the Jews captive into Babylon. This colony was led by a prophet, and they brought with them a copy of the Scriptures—such as they had at that time—which enabled them to retain a knowledge of God and his law, and to look forward with faith in the promises made regarding a Messiah who should come.

This people became divided and grew into two great nations, one holding faith in the Scriptures, and the other rejecting the same and going into extreme forms of wickedness and idolatry. To the better part the Lord sent prophets from time to time and revealed himself to them, so that the people were warned of their unfaithfulness and called to repentance. To them Christ appeared after his resurrection and taught the gospel as he had taught it to their far removed brethren at Jerusalem.

At the end of their national existence which had lasted over a thousand years, Moroni took the record which had been made by his father and completed by himself, and must have deposited it in the earth for safe keeping. The angel who visited Joseph Smith stated that he was Moroni.

This may seem a strange story to some, but when the evidences which have a relation to it are examined, it is found to be a very consistent one. The claim that it was brought to light through angel ministrations is altogether in agreement with the Bible teachings as shown in our last sketch, and if some object on the ground that this angel purported to be one who had lived on the earth, we need but to refer to the historical fact of Moses and Elias appearing to Christ in the transfiguration; and the testimony of the angel who appeared to John the Revelator who said, "I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus"—Rev. 19:10.

The story related in the Book of Mormon finds many corroborative evidences in the Bible. The latter informs us that Israel would be scattered abroad into every part of the world. The promise was made to Jacob at the time he used a stone for his pillow and had the vision of the ladder which reached up to heaven with angels ascending and descending, while the voice of God spoke from above saying among other things: "And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south. . . . And behold I am with thee, and will bring thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of."—Gen. 28:14,15. These promises include his posterity, and give assurance that God will be with them—evidently in the way shown in the vision, i. e. by angels ascending and descending, as well as by other ways—in all places whither they would go; and that those promises should remain until he would bring them back to a permanent inheritance in their own land. That time has not come yet, but this record shows that the promise as to God's presence with his people, was true upon this land for they heard the voice of God through their prophets and received angel ministrations.

The eighty-fifth Psalm speaks of the time when God shall bring again the captivity of Jacob—not of a few but of the whole nation—when he shall turn away all his wrath, and in preparation for that event the prophet says the Lord will speak peace to his people, and that salvation will come near them in order that glory may dwell in their land. The means by which that salvation is to come is pointed out: "Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven." The Book of Mormon is the only work that harmonized with this prophecy. It came out of the earth; it came at a time when righteousness looked down from heaven, and God again spoke to his people.

The coming forth of that truth is more fully related in Isaiah twenty-nine. A nation is to speak out of the dust of the earth; a book is to come forth which the learned men will not be able to read, but which is left to an unlearned man to read. That book is to come forth at the time that God begins to do a marvelous work, and that marvelous work is to be done just prior to the time that Canaan is to be restored to its fertility. The details of this prophecy began to be fulfilled in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the restoration of the gospel with many subsequent events.

The internal teachings of the Book of Mormon include the gospel of Jesus Christ, many points of which are made more clear, and tends to strengthen the faith of those who believe in the Bible, while those who do not believe the latter will find in the former additional evidence of the truthfulness of the gospel principles.

To him who thoroughly searches into these things, the evidences will multiply, they cannot be given in this short sketch.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

After several weeks of fair weather the snow began gently falling at noon on Sunday until the ground was covered with a mantle of white. A fair attendance was found at the services however, especially the afternoon sacrament service.

The morning sermon was by Bro. W. H. Garrett of the stake presidency, and was of a character to inspire a greater effort toward a higher spiritual life. The evening sermon was by Charles Fry. The sacrament service was well attended, and an intense desire for better lives and better service in the work of God was shown in the prayers and testimonies. Under the inspiration of such meetings the saints get a higher conception of the gospel work and of their duty, which enables them to work more effectively for a higher life.

At the South Side Bro. H. W. Gould, president of the branch was the morning speaker, and Bro. Arthur Gillen spoke at night, both efforts being well spoken of, as was also the afternoon sacrament meeting. The attendance at Sunday school was 323, with a collection of $5.31. The business meeting of this branch on Monday evening reported a membership of 301, the branch having been organized June 12, 1910, with 88 members. The president stated that it had grown in spiritual life as well as in numbers.

The attendances at Walnut Park were lessened by a number being kept at home through sickness. The regular Sunday school was held in the morning and Elder George Shearer preached at 11, and Elder John Zahnd at 7:45. The sisters of Walnut Park were the pleased recipients of a new sewing machine presented by the White Sewing Machine Co., in consequence of the mission receiving the greatest number of votes in a voting contest.

Business meetings seemed to be the order in nearly all the local branches on Monday evening. The usual routine of business was done by the Independence Branch with the election of nearly 400 delegates to the stake conference added.

The attendance at Sunday school was 756 and the collections $18.53. There were 23 perfect classes.

Of the appointments at adjacent branches Elder J. C. Fos spoke in the morning at Beattings Heights. G. E. Harrington at Courtney where he spoke three times. Alvin Knisley at Armstrong. R. Bullard at 4th Kansas City in the morning and at Mt. Washington in the evening. A. V. Clouson at Chelsea Park.

Note.—The items under Central Church, Kansas City, in issue of Jan. 23d, should have been headed Second Kansas City Branch. It was one of those errors which make us wonder how they happen.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

The sky was so clear February 1st that the poor people here would have thought it necessary to hold an umbrella over the ground hog on the 2nd as he come out of his hole that he might not see his shadow, but alas! it was cloudy and snowed during the day which must have aggravated the plumber, coal and gas men.

The late Prof. Coucher of Oregon, Mo., who was weather man some years ago said the ground hog theory had only failed four times in twenty-seven years.

Our branch is moving along nicely in all its departments of labor. The Sunday school and Religio work we think is ahead of the labors of the priesthood in some ways as it is hard sometimes for the elders to make all the calls for administration to the sick when coupled with efforts of the Aaronic priesthood in the capacity of visiting the various members of the branch.

Two families of saints and their children have moved here and will send for their letters and come into our branch. As the writer has not learned yet from whence they came will write more about it later on.

Bro. C. W. Etheredge of Atchison, Kas., preached Jan. 26th, morning text Hebrews 4:1; in the evening his subject was the necessity for the priesthood to use the inspired books in the pulpit. This was one of the most able sermons we have heard on the subject. Elder W. S. Hodson assisted him in the morning and Elder J. L. Bear in the evening. The rest of the preaching since our last letter to you being done by Bro. Bear and our branch priest, F. R. Gist.

The writer is booked for a synopsis speech of Oliver Cowdery's first sermon in 1831 to the tribe of the Delaware Indians beyond the Kansas River, to be delivered before the Religio February 14th.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

January 25th and 26th was our district Sunday school and Religio convention. The business sessions were held on Saturday afternoon and evening at which time the officers of each organization were elected for the ensuing term.

The 26th was a very busy day as well as a profitable one. A prayer service was held at 8:15 a. m. Sunday school at 9:30, Bro. Rob Lloyd making remarks on the 4th Psalm which were interesting indeed.

The two preaching services were devoted to the interests of the young people. Bro. George Reeves and G. S. Trowbridge who delivered the discourses acquitted themselves nobly and the blessed Spirit opened their minds to the extent that many good thoughts were delivered. The afternoon session which was from two p. m. till five consisted of excellent papers and talks pertinent to the auxiliary work which we trust will not soon be forgotten. The musical numbers both vocal and instrumental were also soul inspiring. We felt we were highly favored in having Bro. Rushton among the speakers, and Bro. Hoxie of Philadelphia, who favored us with several excellent violin selections. A goodly number was present and we trust the good presented will be put into practice.

Sunday, February 2nd, according to the arrangement of our Sunday school superintendent, Bro. H. C. Burgess, the 8th Psalm was read as a responsive reading, Bro. Frank Smith making the commentary remarks. The morning prayer services are helping those who take advantage of them. At eleven a. m. was the regular sacrament service, Bro. Archibald being in charge. The opening remarks were made by Bro. S. A. Burgess recently returned from an extended business trip. These with remarks made by Bro. Archibald were edifying and encouraging. Bro. Reeves and Trowbridge administered the sacred emblems and the Spirit of the Master was present. We are always pleased to hear the prayer or testimony of our aged Bro. McFarland who is seldom absent from the sacrament service. Special prayer was offered for Bro. Sawley one of our missionary number. We sincerely trust he will feel the power of God with him in his trial.

The dear little son of Bro. and Sr. Barrett has been seriously afflicted the past few weeks but he has been greatly benefited, and we sincerely trust he will be fully restored.

Bro. Rushton has been holding meetings in Lansdown with good interest the past few weeks.

The priesthood meeting was held at 5:30 p. m. Feb. 2nd.

SHAKE OFF THE DUST.

We are glad to be able to inform the saints that we have made commendable advancement in the work in hand relative to the United Order of Enoch during the year 1912. We have now reduced the debt upon the land to about one half the purchase price and feel we can breathe more freely and the "prospect pleases," for we feel assured our hopes will soon be realized, viz, freedom from debt and interest, and the work so long ago ordered of the Lord taking an onward stride.

"Beautiful for situation" is the plot of land purchased for the Saints to build their homes upon and where we expect to build shops and factories when we have freed the land from encumbrance. Let the saints near and far cheerfully respond to the needs so pressing upon us and purchase the remaining lots, or liberally support the effort being made to successfully carry on the work.

Brother Edward Rannie has done a splendid work for the Order, in his field of labor, advocating its principles and purpose among those with whom he mingles. We are now in receipt of an order for three lots and a prospective fourth from him, which work could be duplicated by many of our missionaries if they would inform themselves of the splendid work to be performed by the Order when financially upon its feet. We are making a desperate effort to meet every claim against the land within six months, let every saint get busy and with the same determination join hands with us and the work will be accomplished.

We have written to presidents of branches personal letters—covering most of the states, the majority of which have not even thought the matter worth a two cent stamp for a reply, and yet they are preaching and advocating the redemption of ZION, gathering etc., and when a practical demonstration of our faith is called for, they are apparently as silent as the tomb.

What is our cause in this matter, is YOURS, wherever you may live, for the command is to all; for the benefits are for all those who have made "covenant with the Lord by sacrifice," and if the provisions for the redemption of the saints of Zion are not made, there must of necessity be confusion and disappointment come to those who move into the center State or the regions round about.

"The United Order of Enoch" has been organized for the purpose of making preparations for the gathering together and sustaining the children of God. The land has been purchased that there may be homes provided for those who gather, that the purposes of God may be fulfilled in granting inheritances and stewardships to the worthy among us; the rich among us, or such as have a surplus to cast into the treasury as provided in Section 77 and 101 in D. C. Zion cannot be built up under any other law than that given; no other impulses than those of love and sacrifice can be put into operation to successfully bring about God's purposes, then why delay the carrying out of what is demanded of us and which can be easily accomplished if we all decide to do what is required of us?

The duty of helping this movement is resting upon every saint and we should require no further appeal to get busy, and with the force of help representing our missionary equipment, if they will take up this important matter and work at it, we will soon be prepared to sing the doxology, and our work then will be begun.

I have just made enquiry at the office of the First Presidency and find there are five hundred and twenty-eight branches of the church in the United States, if each branch president would collect an average of fifty cents per member and forward that amount to M. H. Siegfried, Treasurer, there will be sufficient to liquidate our debt, and if necessary to build a church on the plot as soon as there is sufficient saints there to demand its use. Won't you do this for the Master's sake? Let us with Israel of old say, "All thou hast commanded of us will we do."

R. BULLARD.

CORRESPONDENCE

ADRIAN, North Dakota, Jan. 16.

Dear Ensign:—I assay the task of writing a few lines to you, because of the blessings you have brought to us, and that others that have been made to drink of the same Spirit that we have may rejoice at the contribution of our unit.

I want to tell of the good time we have just had at our North Dakota District conference held at Berlin, Jan. 11 and 12. There were present of the ministry, Elders Wm. Sparling, J. E. Wildermuth, Jas. C. Page, Priests W. E. Shakespear, and Thos. Leitch. The sacrament meeting Sunday afternoon was a spiritual feast, there was prophecy, tongues, interpretation, and singing in tongues,—a revelation that, as Bro. Sparling said, was enough to convince the whole town of Berlin that our gospel was true if they would only consider it.

Two were baptized on Saturday afternoon a Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Slater they are from Brooklyn, New York. It was 24 degrees below zero, but the candidates did not wish to put off that which they had learned was their duty to do, and now they are rejoicing in having found the truth. They will make worthy members.

Others were satisfied of the truth of the gospel but put off obeying for reasons that to them seemed to be in the way of them living up to the requirements. Oh if all as soon as duty was made clear would move out to perform that duty. I believe by the help of God there is no difficulty that could stand in the way and prevent us from doing it.

I spent two weeks just before our conference at Sykeston at the pleasant and hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Rasmussen. We held meetings nearly every night, and never had so many invitations to visit outsiders in their homes, so we were going about every day, and feel that I did some good, one lady desired to be baptized, but there was no water that could be reached to attend to it then. We hope to get back there and attend to it before long.

Our work at Anamosa is holding its own and some who have opposed us in the past there are now talking of obeying, and they were to organize a Sunday-school there on January 5th, I was there and preached once to them in December. It will be remembered that it was here that we met some opposition last year. I visited Logan the fore part of December, this is the place that our reunion was held last year. We held meetings for more than a week and had some good sized audiences to preach to. Sr. Wm. Hecker is superintendent of a union Sunday-school at this place with an enrollment of something like fifty they use our Zion's Praises and Primary Quarterlies, we hope in time they will all see the superiority of our senior quarterlies and adopt them. Sr. Hecker with others have also recently organized a ladies union aid and the saints are getting the support of the ladies of the community, while I was there they gave an oyster-supper which netted them over thirty dollars, and they turned over to me twenty-five dollars to send to the Children's Home as a Christmas present.

I must not fail to mention a trip to Cottonwood Lake, I went to Williston and took stage north it is forty-five miles, I got to Marmon, and learned the stage on from there would not go that day so I struck out a foot, it was about twenty miles on farther, I walked till I was tired out and it was getting dark, so stopped at a farm house, the lady made me welcome and listened very attentively to me explain our faith, she bought a Book of Mormon and would take nothing for my night's lodging. She belongs to the Methodist church, I started on the next morning and walked for some time when a little boy came running out to the road and all out of breath asked, "Are you the elder?" This was on Thanksgiving morning and proved to be where Sr. Myrtle Pennell lived and she was looking for the saints to gather there for turkey dinner. I stopped got acquainted with the saints, had a feast of good things to eat, and spoke a number of evenings in the school house, but without gaining the interest of the outsiders. But the saints came and we thoroughly enjoyed ourselves, and when I left the saints remembered that it takes money to travel. Sr. Pennell was left a widow about a year ago with four small children, and wants to locate with a branch where there is an opportunity of making a living. Her children are model ones and she is willing to do anything and not afraid of work. Write her if you know of an opportunity.

In October I was out to my claim in Montana and built a nice little house on it, and while there we were organized into a branch with 19 members, Bro. Sam Andes is in charge with the zeal manifest by all it bids fair of doing good. Other saints will move there in the spring and some are about to unite that are there. The land around us is all taken now.

We are still in the Faith and anxious to do all we can for the work of God. Sorry to learn that some grow weary and give up the fight this is the result of first neglecting our small duties. May we ever be faithful to the end.

I am here trying to hold some meetings in a country school house, we have no members here, I am staying with a family named Palmer they have a daughter, Mrs. Albert Langdon that is a member. The mother is convinced and told me she intended to unite with the church. May peace attend the people of God everywhere.

Your brother in Christ,

THEBES, Ill., Jan. 29.

Editor Ensign:—As I have been a member of the church for some time and have never written I will now do so.

I am a long ways from my parent and amongst strangers with only my husband and little daughter. I am very lonely. I am the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Burley of Grove Springs, Mo.

It seems as though the gospel has never been preached in this part for, if there are any members of the church here I do not know it. If any of the elders are passing this way I would like to have them visit us.

My husband has never heard the gospel, but I pray that he may yet hear it, and believe, and be saved. I want the prayers of all the saints that I may yet find the true way. Hoping that some elder may come this way soon. As ever a worker for Christ.

Box 7.
Mrs. Nora Nelson.

McLEOD, Okla., Jan. 29th.

Dear Ensign:—As I am all alone in this part and no saints around at all, I would like to ask the prayers of the saints as I am all alone in my troubles. I lost my dear companion last fall and have more and more burdens to bear.

Your sister in Christ
Pauline Klemm.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Jan. 16.

Dear Ensign:—As I have often read and enjoyed many of the dear letters written to the ENSIGN by the saints of God in different parts of the country, I thought a few words from Burlington might be appreciated, especially by those who have labored amongst us and more so, when they notice that this is the first attempt I have made to write and tell others outside of our own district about our church and Sunday-school in which we all love to labor.

Our superintendent has often written articles in the different papers about our school, in which she mentions about our dear primary class of which I have the joy and pleasure of being teacher and if you my dear readers could see the love and affection those dear little ones show, and see the expression on their sweet smiling faces when I tell them the interesting stories of Jesus and his followers, you like myself would want to take them all in your arms at once and hug them, thank God that he has given you the opportunity of proclaiming his gospel in so sweet a way. And though I have enjoyed every Sunday with them since I have taken the class which is almost a year and a half, I must confess that I was very down-hearted and sad this last Sunday, for as ones love and affection grows with these dear ones it is very hard to part with them, but as my class had grown to the number of thirteen it was decided that it was too many for one teacher so the six oldest ones were formed into another class, and when I told them I would no longer be their teacher, the sweet smiles seemed to fade away and tear drops sprang up in place. Although my heart ached to keep them; still tears of joy fill my eyes since I know they loved me.

But ah, dear saints, my young heart has not only enjoyed the happiness of the gospel in Sunday-school for last Sunday we had one of the grandest sacrament meetings I have ever been to. Bro. Arber of Independence, Mo., was with us and he and Bro. Miller took charge of the meeting. At first the Spirit was withheld from us, but after a few prayers were offered the Spirit was poured upon us in such a manner, that I'm sure was felt by all inasmuch that most every one offered their prayers and testimonies with tears of joy, and some of whom had never before been able to speak a word rose and with a loud voice praised the heavenly Father. So great was the power that before closing Bro. Arber arose and prophesied concerning our branch, in which he told us to be more in unity, for the Lord had a great work for us to do and in order to accomplish it we were to be more as one. Now dear saints I ask an interest in your prayers that we may continue to work onward and upward toward that one point—Unity, so that when the Spirit calls we may feel that the Lord is still with us and we are able to do his work.

Yours in faith
Esther Ortleb.

BELLAIR, Ill., Jan. 27.

Editor Ensign:—Preaching by Elders S. S. Smith, Sam Hoover two weeks in our new church, they came the 3rd of January. After closing our meeting the 16th, rain kept the people away and our efforts so far as we could see were not a success. Looking over the situation here I see no cause for discouragement or discontent. Sunday, January 26, we had for the first time Sunday school in the church. We wish the saints in the southeast districts to visit us. Let us develop a grand and precious faith in God.

I believe that nowhere in the world among any other people does there exist such true and holy fellowship as among the members of the Reorganized church.

When the gospel of Christ is believed and obeyed. It removes all bitterness from the soul, and fills the heart with divine love. We all have chances every day to do something noble, of magnifying the cause of truth; encouraging someone who is weak, helping someone in the gospel work. We shall seek to dignify our work however humble it be, by the Spirit and manner in which we do it. Bro. S. S. Smith, writes to the Bellair saints that he will be here this week we hope he will come. We will not be weary in well doing.

The first of April we will try to have an organ, for the church. Dear fellow-helpers give us your prayers, and write us a word of encouragement. This is the Lord's work and we his servants.

Your sister in Christ,
Mary A. Ferguson.

STOCKTON, CAL. Jan.

Stockton can be readily found on the map of California, being not many miles south of Sacramento in which is the state capitol.

It can be also quite easily found in a more material way should one wish to locate in a good prosperous city in this great state. The writer with others would especially like to see a few energetic spiritual Latter Day Saints families move into this city. There is a branch of good saints here, with a nice, almost new chapel free of debt, but a little too large for the present congregation.

Fifteen or twenty more live saints would make Stockton one of the most desirable places to live in to be found in north California, and that is saying a whole lot. Without startling the world with wonderful achievements, the little band of honest worshippers are moving along the lines of progress in peace and comparative prosperity. The Religio is regularly sustained on Friday evenings and is quite interesting. The Sunday-school has lately added a larger blackboard, a two yard schedule-chart with new feature of regular program, a standard of excellence chart to its stock of school furnishings, also three points of excellence in its attempt for a higher standard, or grade.

The church proper is moving along nicely without friction or faction, to better and more punctual attendance in all lines of church work. Prayer meeting on Wednesday evening. Preaching on Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sacramento meeting every first Sunday in the month at 11 o'clock, Religio at 6 p. m. Sunday. All scattered saints and friends, also those passing through the city are kindly invited to come and worship with us, especially missionaries. Take San Joaquin street car—get off at Jackson street, go one block east and one-half block South, and find a welcome.

The financial arm of the work here is not dead. While a fine organ is being paid for upon the installment plan, and well along toward the finish, a cement approach, and side walk have recently been laid, and a new stove installed both paid for, and the extra expense of a local pastor is cheerfully and successfully borne.

Bro. Missionary Stead ran in upon us on two different Sundays and gave us some good sermons, so reported—the writer being absent. We like to have the missionaries meet with us from time to time as circumstances enable them. Their association and a change of platform works good, and enjoyable. The writer has had an opportunity to visit Rep-on, where they have a nice Sunday-school conducted by the few saints who live there—also visited San Francisco. All lines of church work moving along in good shape.

We are trying to fight the battle of life, manfully hopefully and peacefully and praying the Father to eventually give us the victory.

In gospel ties,
H. I. Davison.

KENNETT, Mo., Jan. 25.

Editor Ensign:—I am alone in the world. I mean I have no close family ties except a lone sister and we are the only saints I know of in this county. If there are any near here I would be glad to hear from them. Also I would like to hear from some one in the cotton belt, where is a branch that has meeting at least least once a month. I am so tired of living where I cannot hear any preaching I want to go somewhere wherever I can get work to make a living.

I would also like to hear from any one, anywhere who like myself, is without the comfort of home family ties.

Your lonely brother,
Geo. N. Brush.

PEEBLES, Ohio, Route 6, Jan. 15.

Editor Ensign:—As I am sending you a dollar to renew my subscription for our dear paper I will also write a few lines for your valuable pages. We are among the isolated ones, being about twelve miles from the nearest branch and do not attend very much as the roads are so bad this time of year but we are trying to let our light shine the best we can and will give our papers to any that will read them.

What has become of Bro. J. S. Roth, I miss his writing so much if he sees this I hope he will write soon for the paper. We would like to hear from him, and Mr. Alice Corson if she sees this I would like a letter from her.

We ask an interest in the prayers of all God's people that we may prove faithful and do what the Lord finds for us to do.

Your brother and sister in Christ,
J. P. and MARY F. COLVIN.

CATARACT, Wis., Jan. 28.

Editor Ensign:—Bro. R. D. Davis and the writer have been holding services for a couple of weeks. This is an entirely new opening, our work never having been presented here before. Yet the interest and attendance have been the best I have ever had in my missionary experience. The people though generally poor in this world's goods have treated us royally, thus making our work in their interest a pleasure, besides the whole community turned out every evening packing the school house full, thus enabling us to tell them the gospel story subject by subject, and enabling them to get a general understanding of our position. There is splendid material here for a branch sometime in the future if these good, honest hearted people continue to investigate the truth. I have never seen such interest manifested in religion before. May God bless them to their good is my prayer.

Your co-worker,
Elder B. C. Flint.

WINSLOW, Ind., Jan. 28.

Dear Ensign:—Since reading the dear letters in the ENSIGN I felt that it was my duty to write a few lines for its pages for we never see anything from this part of the country. There are no saints here but myself and husband, and we were baptized last August by Bro. Jacob Hall. There are a few more that seem to be interested. Two brethren were here in December and preached some for us, and we hope that some of the elders will come this way in the spring. We are praying for a good opening here, so the time may come that we can enjoy meeting and Sunday school, for I have several children that I would like to be in Sunday school. Here they have Sunday school in the summer time, but they are the "Holiness" people and they teach so much different to what we believe.

So pray for us that we may live worthy of the name Latter Day Saints, and any time an elder is coming this way, he will be welcome at our home.

Your sister in the one faith,
Elsie Coleman.

THE CURTIS-CARLIN DEBATE.

The Curtis-Carling debate is on. Last night 1000 people in the tabernacle built jointly by Latter Day Saints and Baptists, for the occasion. Bro. J. F. Curtis opened up with a fair exposition of our position, using chart and an array of Scriptures. Carling ignoring chart and Scripture, striking hard at "Old Joe" the "Mormon God" etc., etc. It looks well for us notwithstanding the revivings of Carling—both men seem to be in fine fettle—the great audience is expecting the fur to fly, so note it be. Sr. Belle James is the stenographer.

T. W. Chaturban.

JOPLIN, Mo.

About 1000 out this first night of Curtis-Carlin debate. Carlin was very nervous and put a lame fight. Baptists disappointed in their man. We saints feel well with the start. There is quite an excitement. The temporary building will seat about 1,100 perhaps and was full first night. We can not seat the people. It will continue twelve nights.

The Union Pacific railroad has issued an order that any employee found going into or coming from a saloon will be discharged immediately. The order is made in the interest of safety and efficiency. The Union Pacific has had in effect for several years a regulation that no drinking man shall have anything to do with the moving of trains, but the new rule applies to clerks in the headquarters as well as to trainmen. It matters not under the new rule whether or not the employee takes a drink. If he is seen entering or leaving a saloon he will be discharged.—Kansas City Star.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

THE SECOND OFFENSE.

THE STATEMENTS OF THE LAW.—WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

PATRIARCH J. R. LAMBERT.

"Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall be cast out; but he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart, and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive; but if he doeth it again, he shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out."—Doctrine and Covenants 42:7, middle portion of the paragraph.

What is meant by "the second offense," is made plain by the statements of the law just quoted. When one has been properly tried before a legally constituted church tribunal, and found guilty, it is case number one, and the first offense; and when the same party, tried in like manner, but at a later date, is found guilty of repeating the crime, it is case number two, and the second offense.

The point at issue, which is an important one, and one upon which there is some difference of opinion, is this: After the party has been found guilty of the second offense, can he properly come back into the church by repentance and baptism? Some believe that he can, while others believe that he can not.

It must be conceded, I think, that the language of the law is quite plain and specific; but we get into trouble when we try to go beyond what is expressed in the law, and especially when we move in opposition to what is already revealed.

Concerning the one who is found guilty of the first offense, the Lord specifically says: "And he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall be cast out;" but it does not say, "he shall not be forgiven." "But he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart, and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive."

Here we are plainly told when (that is, under what conditions,) we shall forgive, and when we shall not forgive. When the second offense has been committed, repentance ceases, and forgiveness is at an end. To extend forgiveness after this, is to do it without any warrant found in the law, and in opposition to the law. But, of course, we need to understand what forgiveness means, and what it does not mean, as herein used.

Now, after confessing his guilt and making a solemn promise before God and the church that he will do it no more, he repeats this terrible crime with its terrible consequences! Now what does the Lord say concerning him? He shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out." Not one word about repentance, and forgiveness is positively forbidden. The Lord finds no place for his repentance. Shall we try to find one? In the first offense, the Lord tells us, plainly, under what conditions we may forgive, but in the second offense, where it is much more needed, if the opposite view be a correct one, he does not so much as intimate that he can come back at all!

This revelation from which we have quoted contains a record of the law which was and is to govern the church till Jesus comes to rule and reign over his people. (See Doctrine and Covenants 41:1,2; 42:1,8;5:5.) In this law, all the sins found in the catalogue are mentioned and condemned, in specific and general terms. Two of them, the second offense of adultery, and killing, are unpardonable. And all those of mature years, who are intelligent readers of history, both sacred and profane, need not be told that these two sins have always been closely associated. The first frequently leads to the second.

But let us notice what the Lord says of them. Of the first, as we have already seen, he says, "He shall not be forgiven;" and of the second, "Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come."

And it shall come to pass, that if any persons among you shall kill, they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proven according to the laws of the land."—Doctrine and Covenants 42:7, 6, 21.

A few pertinent and significant questions will throw light on the subject. Those who accept the opposite view of this question must believe, with us, that the guilty one is "cast out" in an unrepentant and unforgiven condition, or that, although he has truly repented, the Lord will not accept his repentance.

First. Why does the Lord command that he (the guilty one) "shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out?"

Second. In case he can and does repent, before he is cast out, why is it that the Lord will not accept his repentance, then, but at a later date, he will accept it?

Third. If it be said, he can not truly and sincerely repent, because he must pay the penalty of being cast out, then, we ask, How long will the penalty attach? Upon what seems to be a fair claim of repentance, can he come back into the church the next day, or week, or month? If so, what has been gained, either for the church or the transgressor, by casting him out?

Fourth. Why did the Lord give such particular instructions as to what we must do with the guilty one, and then, while he is yet on our hands and may ask for admission into the church at any time, leave us without one word of instruction?

All this seems to indicate, very plainly, that the design of God is to leave the guilty party right where the expressed terms of the law leave him, that is, unforgiven and outside of the pales of the church. There is, without doubt, good and sufficient reason why it should be so, else it would not have been so ordered.

OBJECTIONS CONSIDERED.

First. It is claimed that our position is in conflict with the teaching of the gospel, which requires us to forgive all men, and that without limitations or conditions.

If this be true, why not forgive him before he is cast out, and especially so when he puts forth the claim of repentance? But the law says, without any reference to confession and repentance "He shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast."

Second. "That means," says the objector, "that we are not to forgive him at that time, but afterwards we may."

Parenthetical words, phrases, and sentences are sometimes useful and permissible, and sometimes they are not. When used to throw additional light upon what is already indicated, they serve a good purpose; but when used to add to and change what is already indicated, they are neither useful nor permissible.

Forgiveness, permit us to say, is of two kinds. First, personal or individual forgiveness, without any reference to the administration of the law. This kind requires us to forgive all men, without any regard to the conditions imposed on the wrongdoer, or to limitations of time. But we will let the Doctrine and Covenants explain itself.

"My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another, and forgave not one another in their hearts, [italics mine] and for this evil they were afflicted, and sorely chastened; wherefore I say unto you, that ye ought to forgive one another, for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespass, standeth condemned before the Lord, for there remaineth in him the greater sin. I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men; and ye ought to say in your hearts, let God judge between me and thee, and reward thee according to thy deeds. And he that repenteth not of his sins, and confesseth them not, then ye shall bring him before the church, and do with him as the Scriptures saith unto you, either by commandment, or by revelation. And this ye shall do that God might be glorified, not because ye forgive not, having not compassion, but that ye may be justified in the eyes of the law, that ye may not offend him who is your Lawgiver."—Doctrine and Covenants 64:2, latter part of the paragraph.

This divine instruction places the matter before us in excellent shape, and leads us right up to the second kind of forgiveness; namely, what we will term legal forgiveness. We must have compassion on the erring ones, and in our hearts forgive them, but at the same time, if they will not confess and repent, they must be delivered up to the church to be dealt with according to the law of the church. Why? "That God might be glorified;" "that we may be justified in the eyes of the law;" "that we may not offend him who is" our "Lawgiver." Strong reasons these, and they ought to satisfy all who claim to have faith in God.

As ministers and members of the church of God, we are required to be compassionate and forgive all from the heart; but as administrators of the law, we can only forgive in accordance with the terms of the law. Where God says, in the law of the church, "forgive," we must forgive, not only from the heart, but in a legal sense; and where God says "he shall not be forgiven," we must not forgive him, that is, in a legal sense, and as administrators of the law.

It is easily seen that the forgiveness spoken of in Doctrine and Covenants 42:7, is of a legal character, and in nowise conflicts with that forgiveness of the heart which is required of all the saints, always, everywhere, and under all conditions.

Third. "But," says the objector, "when we deal with members of the church for other transgressions, we receive them back, under proper conditions, although there is no special provision of law to justify this practice. Why not, then, receive back anyone who has been found guilty of the second offense of adultery?"

The answer is easy. The cases are not parallel. If the objector can find one or more places where we have been instructed, when dealing with the members of the church for these "other transgressions," not to forgive, but cast them out, then, clearly, the same law will apply as in the second offense of adultery. This law applies to parallel cases, but not to dissimilar ones.

Fourth. We are told that there is no gospel in our position. The gospel says, "Come," and we say, "He shall not come."

This is begging the question. If the law, given of God, prohibits their coming back, then it is not we, but God, who says "They shall not come." If the law does not prohibit them from coming back into the church, let it be shown.

In Doctrine and Covenants 42:20, we read: "But if ye shall find that any persons have left their companions for the sake of adultery, and they themselves are the offenders, and their companions are living, they shall be cast out from among you."

Is there any invitation to "come" in this statement? Is there any gospel in it?

In paragraph 21 we are instructed to deliver up to the laws of the land any persons found guilty of killing; and we are bidden to remember that for such persons there is "no forgiveness." If capital punishment is in vogue where they are delivered up, they are very liable to be executed for their crime. Is there any invitation to "come" in this instruction? It is not harsh for us to ask those who use these objections, to tell us if there is any gospel in this word of the Lord to us. We do it in all kindness, that these objections may be legitimately removed.

Paragraph 20, referred to above, not only instructs the church to cast out those who leave their companions for the sake of adultery, when they themselves are the offenders, but it also says the following: "And again I say unto you, that ye shall be watchful and careful [italics mine], with all inquiry, that ye receive none such among you if they are married, and if they are not married, they shall repent of all their sins, or ye shall not receive them."

Notice, please, that in the cases herein cited, not one word is said about the condition of repentance, except concerning those who are guilty of fornication and are not married. These may come into the church if they repent. So it is very plain, we think, that we may get ourselves into a condition where we can not repent, because there is found no place for repentance.

Fifth. Another objection which has been made to do duty is fairly stated in this way, and is founded upon the teaching of Christ: "There is but one sin for which there is no forgiveness, and that is to sin against the Holy Ghost."

We kindly remind those who use this objection that until the sin against the Holy Ghost is properly defined, and it is proved that the second offense of adultery is no part of that sin, the objection is without force. This has not been done, nor is there any probability that it will be done.

The sin against the Holy Ghost, as we understand it, is the "sin unto death," of which John says, "I do not say he shall pray for it." (1 John 5:16.) It is a denial of Christ and his gospel, in word, or in act, or both. We may as effectually deny Christ and the righteousness of God revealed in the gospel, by deeds of unrighteousness, as by word only. Surely no one will deny this.

It is true, according to Matthew 12:31, 32; Mark 3:28-30; Luke 12:10, that Jesus taught that speaking against the Holy Ghost is unpardonable sin; but he did not claim this to be the only sin that is unpardonable. Had he done so, there would be a direct conflict between Christ in the New Testament and Christ in the Doctrine and Covenants; for, as we have seen, the latter book says: "And he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come;" and of the one guilty of the second offense of adultery, it says, "He shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out."

The New Testament record shows that Je

was answering the Pharisees who claimed that he had an "unclean spirit," and that he cast out devils "by Beelzebub the prince of devils." (Mark 3: 30; Matthew 12:24.) Jesus shows that in setting up that illogical, unscriptural, and false claim, they were sinning against the Holy Ghost.

In Doctrine and Covenants 76:4, we have a more complete description of the sin against the Holy Ghost, in its entirety. It is defined as follows: "To deny the truth and defy my power; to deny 'the Holy Spirit, after having received it;' to deny 'the only begotten Son of the Father.'"

There are few, if any, sins found in the catalogue of sin and crime, which will more quickly and effectually move its adherents away from God, and Christ, and the gospel, than the crime of adultery, especially if one has become so steeped in the abomination as to be found guilty of what is known to the church as the "second offense."

Every sin for which there is no forgiveness, is a sin against the Holy Ghost, and all of them, put together, constitute the sin against the Holy Ghost, in its entirety.

What God does, or authorizes to be done, is always the best that can be done for all concerned, under existing conditions. It is, therefore, a most excellent and important thing to "have faith in God." God does not forget the poor, unfortunate transgressor, nor does he forget the needed protection and purity of his church.

Speaking for myself (and I believe for a large class of intelligent and God-fearing men and women), I am more and more confirmed in the belief, that God has directed that these poor unfortunates, steeped in crime of the most debasing character, should be left just where we should be willing to leave them, namely, outside of the church of God, unrepentant and unforgiven.

ORIGIN OF MORMON POLYGAMY.

ELDER J. W. PETERSON.

Anent several magazine articles which appeared sometime ago, certain authors have either obscured or misstated the origin of polygamy in the Mormon church. Those articles prove conclusively the unreliability of Mormon testimony and more especially of the leaders. For writers to impeach their witnesses and then use their testimony to fasten polygamy on Joseph Smith, comes far short of consistency. One writer shows so nicely and so completely the duplicity of the whole Mormon fabric, so far as it applies to Utah, that one's admiration is chilled to find him afterward, quoting these same Mormons, as to the origin of polygamy.

Their unsupported testimony, that Joseph Smith either sanctioned or practiced polygamy has been successfully met by his widow and sons. They would better know his domestic life than any others, and their statement should have full weight.

The origin of polygamy has been the foundation of prolonged and costly law suits. In every decision, its origin has been laid at the door of Brigham Young, and not that of Joseph Smith. If the writers are unaware of these court decisions, they are not well enough acquainted with the Mormon question to be reliable. If they are aware of them and suppress the facts they are equally unreliable. The good they hope to do is greatly overshadowed in the minds of more than a hundred thousand people, half, at least, of whom can prove the "Smith origin" of polygamy, unreliable and untrue. Many readers are aggrieved that the plain facts have been misstated. This people, thus aggrieved, are among the most honorable and patriotic of our country, and are in no way connected with the Utah people, though by the less informed, are often referred to as "Mormons." They are located in all parts of the world, including the larger cities of our own country, and Canada. Many of them occupy places of honor and trust, for which they are especially adapted because of their religious training.

ORIGIN AND DIVISION OF THE CHURCH.

During the administration of Joseph Smith from 1830 to 1844 the original church was one and undivided; and had grown to about 150,000 to 200,000 members. At the death of Joseph Smith, a certain faction of the church was led away from the faith by Brigham Young, and settled in Utah. Other factions, under different leaders, settled in various places. Some as far as Jerusalem, and others on the islands of the South Pacific. The Smith family refused to follow any of them, but formed a nucleus around which the scattered fragments rallied. The eldest son of Joseph Smith became their leader, which position he yet holds. He is the real and legal successor to his father. During the presidency of his father as well as that of his own, persons in any way favoring polygamy were expelled from the church. No society had stricter laws against that crime, and none were more swift to execute them.

JOSEPH SMITH HIMSELF ON POLYGAMY.

Joseph Smith was by no means silent concerning polygamy. On February 1, 1844 he published the following notice in the official church paper:

"As we have been credibly informed, that an elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by the name of Hiram Brown, has been preaching polygamy and other false and corrupt doctrines in the County of Lapeer. State of Michigan.

This is to notify him and the church in general, that he has been cut off the church, for his iniquity; and he is further notified to appear at the special conference, on the sixth of April next, to make answer to these charges.

JOSEPH SMITH,
HYRUM SMITH,Presidents of the church."

This notice calls polygamy a "false and corrupt doctrine." All the teachings of Joseph Smith on that or similar subjects, support that belief. He was not charged with any other belief until long after his death, and even then by unreliable characters. When the charge was falsely made in Utah, and re-echoed by others in the east, it was boldly and successfully disproved by his widow, sons, and most intimate acquaintances: But they were poor and few in number; with a world against them. No matter how just their cause or how clear their proofs the literature of that time and until recently, was closed to the facts. Inch by inch, and step by step, with a world to move, meeting every possible opposition, and assailed from every possible quarter, they have forged and blasted their way and nothing has been able to overthrow their proofs that Joseph Smith was not the author of polygamy. The principle defence of certain magazines has been, "a fear to face the facts." It hardly seems American to refuse to hear or print both sides, but such seems to be their plan. So we turn to the dailies.

THE ORIGINAL LAW OF MARRIAGE IS UNREPEALED.

The only "General Assembly" ever held by the church during the life of Joseph Smith, or since, adopted, without a dissenting voice, the following marriage contract; which forever excludes polygamy from that society.

"You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition, that is: keeping yourselves wholly for each other and from all others during your lives?"

They also issued at that time, the following article of faith:

"We declare that we believe that one man should have one wife and one woman but one husband, except in cases of death, when either is at liberty to marry again." Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 111.

These resolutions were adopted August, 1835 at Kirtland, Ohio. There never having been another council of equal authority, even in Utah, either before or since, clearly proves that law of marriage still in force. And just as clearly proves the Utah church to be apostates from the faith of Joseph Smith, no matter what their claim.

IN THE COURTS.

Hon. Judge L. S. Sherman rendered the following decision in the Court of Common Pleas, Lake County, Ohio, February 1880:

"The Court do find as matters of fact . . . That the church in Utah has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, and ordinances of said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and has incorporated into its system of faith, the doctrine of Celestial Marriage and a plurality of wives, and the doctrine of Adam-God worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of said original church."

It will be noted that the Utah church departed from the faith established by Joseph Smith, by attaching the doctrine of polygamy and other erroneous tenets. Polygamy was not therefore a doctrine of the original church. Joseph Smith would have as surely been cast out of the church as any other man, had he attempted the introduction of polygamy into it.

The doctrine of referendum and recall, has always been a very prominent one in the true Latter Day Saint faith, but is treated in Utah much like the Mexican Constitution was under Diaz.

Judge John F. Phillips, U. S. Circuit Judge of the Western Division of Missouri rendered the following decision in Kansas City, Missouri, March 16, 1894:

"There can be no question of the fact that Brigham Young's assumed presidency was a bold and bald usurpation. . . .

Claim is made by the Utah church that this doctrine of polygamy is predicated of a revelation made to Joseph Smith in July 1843. No such revelation was ever made public during the life of Joseph Smith, and under the laws of the church it could not become a law until submitted to, and adopted by the church. This was never done. . . .

It is charged by the respondents as an echo of the Utah Church, that Joseph Smith, the martyr, secretly taught and practiced polygamy; and the Utah contingent furnishes the evidence and two of the women to prove this fact. It would be uncharitable to say of these women, they have borne false testimony as to their connection with Joseph Smith; but in view of the evidence and circumstances surrounding the alleged intercourse it is difficult to escape the conclusion that at most they were but sports in 'nest hiding.' In view of the contention of the Salt Lake party that polygamy obtained in Nauvoo as early as 1841, it must be a little embarrassing to President Woodruff when he is confronted as he was with the evidence in this case, with a published card in the church organ in Nauvoo in October 1842, certifying that he knew of no other rule or system of marriage than the one published in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. . . . A similar certificate was published by the Ladies' Relief Society of the same place, signed by Emma Smith the wife of Joseph Smith, and Phoebe Woodruff, the wife of the present President Woodruff. No such marriage occurred under the rules of the church and no offspring come from the imputed illicit intercourse, although Joseph Smith was in the full vigor of young manhood."

The rule of marriage observed by the original church is still in force in the church over which the son of Joseph Smith presides. This rule, Brigham Young eliminated from the standard books of the church, and is one totally repudiated by the Utah people.

CERTAIN REPUTED WIVES.

It was a great thing in later years, to be regarded as the plural wife of Joseph Smith, to be looked up to, and honored by polygamists everywhere in Utah, and the Mormon leaders in particular. No matter if thereby they would prove themselves guilty of living in secret adultery, and no matter if they perjure themselves, if they could only be honored as the plural wife of Joseph Smith. No matter either, with certain magazine writers, if these same women had previously signed a statement to the contrary. Their contradictory testimony is sent forth to the world as though it might have some weight. Well did Judge Phillips say of them: "False testimony." "Embarassing testimony." etc.

THE BOGUS REVELATION.

Young was a man of resources. Not a straw was left unturned to fasten polygamy on Joseph Smith; and for the reason that the church had great confidence in Joseph Smith who had never betrayed that trust. They knew his private life and superior Christian character. If they could be made to believe that he was inspired to establish such a rule of marriage, they would sooner accept it.

But what of the revelation itself? It was not in the handwriting of Joseph Smith or that of his private secretary. Nor did the secretary know anything of it, when in after years, the report came from Utah, that Joseph Smith was charged with being its author. He died but recently an honored old man, still declaring the report untrue.

It was necessary for Young therefore, to claim that Emma, the wife of Joseph Smith, had burned the original manuscript. Unfortunately he reckoned without his host, for Emma was the best of women. A descendant of Judge Hale of England the "honest miller" of whom every British and American schoolboy has been proud. Of her, the Nauvoo Independent published the following, at the time of her death, which took place April 30, 1879.

"She was loved and respected by all her neighbors for her kind and charitable disposition. She was a good and faithful wife, a kind and loving mother, as the expression of her children and associates will verify. If such a record as she has left does not render a person worthy of a better life beyond, it is difficult to conceive how it can be done. The assembly was large; almost every one knew Mrs. Emma Smith-Bidamon, some intimately and for many years; some but a few months, but it is safe to say that the respect, esteem, and love by which she was regarded by all, is but a just tribute to the sterling virtues of the woman, wife, and mother, whom the community so soberly, so sadly, and so tenderly laid away to rest, on this beautiful May day, by the side of the Father of Waters, the mighty Mississippi."

This statement in a secular paper and in a community where nearly everyone was hostile to her faith, must be received at full value.

Did she burn the revelation of polygamy. Let her answer:

Question.—Mrs. Bidamon, have you seen the revelation on polygamy?

Answer.—I have.

Question.—Have you read it?

Answer.—I have read it and heard it read.

Question.—Did you ever see that document in manuscript, purporting to be a revelation to authorize polygamy?

Answer.—No; I never did.

Question.—Did Joseph Smith ever teach you the doctrine of polygamy, as being revealed to him, or as a correct and righteous principle?

Answer.—He never did.

Question.—What about the statement of Brigham Young, that you burnt the original manuscript of that revelation?

Answer.—It is false in all its parts, made out of whole cloth, without any foundation of truth." (Church History, Vol. 3, pp. 351-352.)

A part of her last testimony is as follows:

"There was no such thing as polygamy or spiritual wifery taught publicly or privately before my husband's death, that I have now, or ever have had any knowledge of.

Did he not have other wives than yourself?

He had no other wife but me, nor did he to my knowledge ever have." (Church History, p. 255.)

Whom shall we believe, the notorious Brigham, nineteen times steeped in crime, or the noble Emma of "sterling virtues," in whom the whole community found no fault?

Not till 1852 was there any mention made of any such revelation, for the best of all reasons: it was not in existence. It was first produced at a conference in Salt Lake City, Utah, August 1852, but dated back to 1843. This would make it appear abortive—given in 1843 and not made public till nine years later.

On that occasion Brigham Young said:

"The revelation has been in my possession many years; and who has known of it? None but those who should know it. I keep a patent lock on my desk, and there does not anything leak out that should not."

No wonder that some one has ironically commented:

"Now how strangely inconsistent, that the revelation should be given nine or ten years before its time, and have to lie eight or nine years under his patent lock before it would be time to proclaim it. Here, then, we have a specimen of an abortive revelation,—come before its time, had to be put in the sacred incubator, under a patent lock, for eight or nine years, and shown occasionally—just often enough to get the thing used to it, so it could go abroad. So much for this curious revelation—came in an abortion—got burned up—then got locked up—and now has gone forth to damn everybody who does not believe it. It is a perfect phoenix."

IT "DAMNS THE MORMONS," TOO.

I would be pleased to give the entire text to the bogus revelation, but it is a very lengthy document. One paragraph will be sufficient, the fourth.

"For behold! I reveal unto you a new and everlasting covenant; and if ye abide not that covenant then are ye damned; for no one can reject this covenant, and be permitted to enter into my glory."

Clearly, then, every Brighamite who does not observe the conditions of this covenant must be "damned." Polygamy is one of its specifications.

Undoubtedly the Utah Mormons have secured statehood through ostensible promises and have deceived the government. It is further evident they will continue to do so, as long as they accept as genuine the divine threat of "damnation" for refusing to enter polygamy. How much confidence can be given to persons making an adverse pledge, however clear, when with their whole soul they accept and fear the other. No pledge of monogamy could be accepted from them so long as they really expect to be "damned" for keeping it, and their only salvation depends on breaking it.

So long as they believe such a curse to be hanging over them, their officers, either legislative, or judicial, will, in the very nature of things, circumvent any law to the contrary. Their missionaries traveling throughout the length of our country would, under the conditions, enter its practice, if at all possible,—openly, if they could, secretly, if they must. "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still." Here is the kernel of the whole matter, and the key to the whole situation: "If ye abide not this covenant then are ye damned."

CONDITIONS IN UTAH.

It is only fair for me to say that when the aforesaid writers give a history of conditions in Utah from personal knowledge and observation, they state conditions correctly, but what do they know about the origin of polygamy? They were not born at the time, and in some instances their fathers were not born then. We have now reached the third and fourth generation of polygamists. Its origin as claimed by the Mormons rests on the unsupported testimony of Brigham Young, a few of his partners in crime, and some magazine writers. We are glad these men have told what they know, but let them be silent on matters they do not know.

Statehood should be withdrawn from Utah and every polygamist disfranchised. They believe polygamy to be a virtue and that they will be "damned" without it. That bogus revelation is the whole fault. Depriving them of statehood until they reject that document heartily, cannot be called persecution as they are apt to think in Utah, but it would be prosecution for the crime of polygamy. It is time the American people should raise up and stamp out the crime. It is purely the twin brother of adultery. If politicians continue to dally with that matter in the future, as they have in the past, they should be removed and more honorable men chosen to fill the places they have disgraced.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

If statehood cannot be withdrawn from Utah, then, the next best thing is a constitutional amendment abolishing and prohibiting polygamy. Recent writers suggest such a course as if it were new and original. Due credit has not been given to the real originators of that idea. Some of the women's societies, though they knew the originators, still claimed the honors. As early as 1870, again in 1876, the anti-polygamist Latter Day Saints, with the sons of Joseph Smith as leaders, memorialized congress on this matter. (See General Conference Resolutions Nos. 107, 178.) In 1902 they were plainly asked to provide for a constitutional amendment prohibiting polygamy, and this was reiterated in 1903. (Resolutions Nos. 520 and 530.)

Many Congressmen thinking these petitions rested on religious prejudice, failed to properly consider the facts. Honors have been seized by others that do not justly belong to them. Even now that I have given the facts and their proofs, many will be slow to accept them.

NO DESCENDENTS OF JOSEPH SMITH IN UTAH.

It may be news to some of your readers to learn that not a descendent of Joseph Smith accepted the Utah faith, or became members of that organization. The Joseph Fielding Smith now president of the Utah church, is a nephew and not a descendent of Joseph Smith. What then became of the four sons of the original Joseph Smith? One would conclude from Cannon, Hendrick, Lewis and others, that they have never been in existence. Why did they not give them proper credit? Evidently, because the mere mention of their claims, as sustained by the courts, would overthrow their statement relative to the origin of polygamy. Was it the part of valor to suppress such claims?

BRIGHAM YOUNG ORGANIZED A NEW CHURCH.

Instead of Brigham Young being the successor of Joseph Smith, and his organization the continuation of the original church, Young constructed it upon a different basis, altered the faith lamentably, rebaptized and reordained those of his followers who had been members and officers of the original church.

At the time of Joseph Smith's death Brigham Young succeeded in leading away about one twentieth of the church; and in the years following a few thousand more, most of them from Europe.

Young was not the highest officer in the church at the time, nor in the line of legal succession. Illegally, and casting his own vote to make a majority in his own quorum, he became leader of those who followed him. This in the month of December 1847 after he and his company had been re-baptized the previous August. It was nearly six years after that, and eight years after the death of Joseph Smith, that he introduced polygamy into the Mormon church.

THE ORIGINAL CHURCH CONTINUES.

The exodus of Brigham Young took from the church many of its leading members, making it necessary to reorganize the remainder, not upon a different basis or a changed faith, as Brigham Young had done, but upon the same former foundation as the original church, which excluded polygamy.

This organization since 1852, has successfully challenged the claims of Brigham Young, and now numbers tens of thousands living in all parts of the world, known for their loyalty to the government, their probity of character, and their opposition to polygamy. It has always been against that evil and its kind, and made the first attack against it and that too in the very door yard of Brigham Young.

Joseph Smith the son of Joseph Smith became head of this organization April 6th 1860 which position he yet holds. The headquarters of this church are at Lamoni, Iowa. The president lives at Independence, Missouri, and is now the sole survivor of his father's sons. He has occasionally traveled in Utah, smiting polygamy and its kindred evils with herulean blows. He is now an honored old man in his eighty-first year known throughout the world for his breadth of thought and his nobleness of character. He has for more than fifty years presided over the same church of which his father was former president and founder, and for nearly that long has been editor of the official church paper, The Saint's Herald. He and his church are a standing rebuke to the statement that his father was the author of Mormon polygamy.

If salvation depends on polygamy as the Utah church claim, what a fatal mistake the original Smith made that he did not teach it to his wife and sons. Most people will conclude that he knew nothing of the revelation attributed to him by certain unreliable witnesses in Utah, and that he regarded polygamy as a crime. He was not there fore its author.

HOME.

The Highest idea of God, is Father, and of Heaven is Home.

What is our home to us? What are we to our home? What is our home to our children?

I do not know that we can ask ourselves any more important questions.

What is our home to us? Is it the best place on earth? Are we making it express our best self, does our "best self" comprise purity, dignity simplicity and honesty?

Does our home-making fully fill the desire of our heart for work, do we feel that the home was organized by our heavenly Father, and that it is an honor that he called us to care for it?

Do we know that the "source of the foundation of every government is within its individual home," and it can give character through that of the parents and the children they bear?

It should be a sanctuary from the world, a place where perfect understanding and harmony is found, a haven of rest for our husband where he will be free from the care of a hard day spent in labor and discouragement.

Will he find a cheerful greeting, a little petting?—yes, I know our husband's are called the stronger sex, but they have a little weakness along that line.

Is our home an expression of our love for beauty by our neat appearance, articles of our tasty handwork here and there, a shelf of pretty well cared for plants in the window, good books in easy reach, a well prepared meal ready for a neatly set table. Nothing stiff or too trim in the atmosphere only pleasant and homey. Little wonder if the good man quickens his pace as the light shines through the window.

Together are you preparing the best home in your power for the children that may come to you? It need not express wealth, the appointments need not be elaborate. Nothing expresses real home comfort to any mind so well as home made necessities prettily finished showing good taste and use—not up to date? No! glad of it! I almost hate that hackneyed phrase "up to date!"

WHAT ARE WE TO OUR HOMES?

If we as men and women "Are centers of force, constantly creating new energies," are we able to put a circuit upon our influence: If not it depends upon us to make that influence all it should be.

Our home was not forced upon us it was our own choice. We have not well considered the work we are marking out for ourselves if we do not realize that there is something for us to do to be able to keep our home as a sacred trust.

It is right that we feel happy in the pleasure we feel upon entering our new home. We enjoy selecting our furniture, the arranging is pleasant; it does not seem hard to make laws for the government of our home but there is work we have to do with ourselves, individual differences must be overcome before we become a unit.

Unity diminishes the friction and makes the machinery of the home run smooth. While there are two supports, the builder and keeper, the home is one,

It is necessary that a home be built upon an honest foundation, governed by simple unaffected rules of love and helpfulness.

It is the wife that has most to do with creating the atmosphere of the home and that it may have a cheerful air her work as home keeper must be congenial.

You are not what you should be to your home if you do not put the best of yourself into it, do not know the true treasures of home-keeping if your work is a burden, it would mean more to you if you realized the magnity and purpose of it.

We must get far from the true meaning of the word and work to see it as a limit to our usefulness, must deny the spirit of it to conclude that its constant duties are degrading, must have a false opinion of ourselves to conclude that we have natural qualifications for a higher station.

There is no call for the sympathy we often hear expressed for the home-keeper who is satisfied with her work, have a poor idea of what a home will hold unless we realize that the best there is can be brought into it. Our best ideas can be worked out in the home.

What is our home to our children? Is it not to make it what it should be for the children that we have a right to expect will come to us that we have been planning and building?

When we consider that the child is largely what we make it and that it is the influence of the home that helps develop character, we will understand something of what our home should be for our children. We must build upon an honest foundation. If there is a spirit as well as letter in all teaching there certainly is in honesty. It is not only that we pay to every man that which we owe but that we are honestly what we seem. The principle applies to our home, our furnishing, our clothing that in nothing we go beyond our means, and if by the help of God's Spirit we can help our children to be satisfied with life on this firm foundation there will be born in them that noble, independent dignity that will mark them as noble men and women.

Have you qualified so as to be your children's best helper? Are you willing to lose yourself that you may appear again in them? Have you sufficient self-control to only direct, leaving the work for them to do? Are you your children's best friend "chum" they will like to call you. Is it your constant effort to keep them near you? Do you try to make them feel that they are a factor in the home? That they are looked to, to help to sustain it so that its support is their first interest. Do you furnish them some home amusements and books of profit and interest—dont forget the interest—they are only children yet.

It may be hard to spare the money but it will bring good interest. Do they know that their little friends are welcome and do you sometimes surprise them with a little treat? Are you willing to lay by the work you had planned so that all can go nutting, fishing or for a tramp in the woods.

Yes, I know all this close companionship is laying up for a time of lonely heartache when you "Lose the first place with your boy" but you are building for the time when

In the deeds of your sons through the ages
The strength of your life shall be shown.

The warmth of your home fireside will comfort your children through life and a gleam of it will reach into eternity so your home will continue forever.

MRS. C. J. CLARK.

Liberty is the result of law—not, as many suppose, of the absence of law.

In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address, and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription.

In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and give your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to DUTY.

As the path of duty is made plain,
May grace be given that I may walk therein,
Not like the hireling, for his selfish gain,
With backward glances and reluctant tread,
Making a merit of his coward dread—
But, cheerful, in the light around me thrown,
Walking as one to pleasant service led;
Doing God's will as if it were my own,
Yet trusting not in mine, but in his strength alone.
—WHITTIER.

EXCEPT YOUR RIGHTEOUSNESS EXCEED THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF THE PHARISEES.

A brother missionary writing from the field inquiringly offers the following comment:

"In most branches that I have visited—and some of them are forty years old—the saints as a rule are held in high esteem in the business world and by their neighbors, and yet it is almost impossible to get their neighbors to come to either the regular or special meetings. The majority of these branches are not able to hold their membership; the fact that some die and others move away would only be a partial reason. Why are not converts made to keep up the number? The presumption from a Scriptural standpoint is that the lives of the saints would highly recommend the gospel, their lives would be an epistle known and read of all men, as a light on a hill. If people who know the worth of the gospel by the lives of the saints will not listen, how can we expect strangers who have heard nothing but bad about us to do so?"

The questions involved in the above are vital and it is well that the officers and members of branches should consider earnestly why branches do not grow. Branches of the church, like individual members, vary in their spirituality and spiritual development, and while some are manifesting a high degree of spiritual life and are growing in numbers, others are either standing still or are decreasing in membership, and seem to be without spiritual life. Yet in these same branches there are members whose lives are above reproach to the world. They are honored and respected by their neighbors and friends, their counsel highly esteemed, and their integrity above reproach, yet the branches to which they belong do not progress.

As to their condition in relation to the church, people who are non-members may be divided into two classes; first, those who are walking in sin and iniquity through choice. These are not susceptible, or but slightly so, to the drawings of the Holy Spirit as it may be manifested through the saints with whom they come in contact, and see nothing in a real live spiritual branch which appeals to them. The fault of such not coming to the light under the circumstances is their own, and does not attach to the saints; they have hardened their hearts. Second, those whose true desire is to do right, (though perhaps often failing), and generally referred to as the "honest in heart." These are susceptible to the influences of the Spirit, and coming into association with a body of saints with whom the Spirit of God is, will recognize its presence, and will follow its leadings to obedience.

Why then do branches not grow? Should we ask why a certain tree does not grow, the answer would likely be either because its environment is such that it cannot get the elements necessary for such growth, or because its internal condition is such that it cannot take of the elements which are available sufficiently to maintain growth and life. The same answer may apply to branches of the church, as also to the whole church.

Growth is dependent upon two things; viz., a proper state of internal life, and the availability of proper external elements.

Observation has revealed few if any communities where there are no honest in heart, but some places which have seemed in that condition, have under the ministration of the message of life, produced a goodly number of new members, and that too after the church had been represented (?) in those communities many years—in some cases to the number of forty—without noticeable growth. The Spirit has not ceased to strive with the "gentiles" as yet, and no doubt every community has in it some individuals who may be reached and gathered in when the internal conditions are proper.

The reason or reasons for lack of growth must be sought for within the church rather than without. While many good people are following after the ways of the world they are nevertheless longing for a better way, and if they could be but shown the way of life they would gladly walk therein. But it is not true that many of our branches have not come up to the standard of righteousness required in the gospel by which their light is able to shine out to lighten others pathways? The individual life of the saints has much to do in this, and though many—a large majority—are living above reproach in the eyes of their fellowmen, more is required of them because of the greater light given. Many men of the world also live above reproach, and if the lives of the saints are no higher than these, and there is no difference, except that the saints belong to the church and attend its services, then the world sees little in them that draws toward the church.

The statement of Christ applies here. "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 5:20. Common honesty and morality are not sufficient for Latter Day Saints, for if they would reach the sluggish life of the children of the world it can only be by having their characters so highly developed that the power of God will be with them to such an extent that those of the world who are in the least degree susceptible to its influence, will recognize its presence, and by it be drawn into the light.

But apart from the individual responsibility of the members is the responsibility of the branch, and of the church in its collective capacity. The church has obligations to the world as well as to its own members, and if those obligations are not fulfilled the church as a church will be without the approval of God and consequently without his presence, and without the power to reach the world, or, in other words, to grow.

What are these obligations? First, providing a suitable church home, a pure house, a holy temple, in which those who come in from the world will find that which will build them up in the divine life. Without this the honest man of the world will not see in the church what he wants, nor will the member receive what he anticipated, so that the former will not come in and the latter is liable to drift away.

In the early days of the church the Lord said to the elders: "Ye shall see that my law is kept," and that law is definitely stated in section forty-two of the Doctrine and Covenants, and that part relating to transgressors is summed up in this: "He that sinneth and repenteth not, shall be cast out." Notwithstanding the plainness of this law there are branches which have so far neglected its plain provisions that members who have gone back to the world of sin and have remained so for years, without desire or intent to do right, have been left upon the records as members in good standing. Suppose there be but one such in a branch of one hundred members, the ninety-nine of which are good, noble saints, and that one is retained in his sin year after year, is the branch not thereby under condemnation? and will the Spirit of God be poured out in a branch to an abundant degree under those conditions? The sin of Achan was sufficient to bring a whole nation under condemnation. (See Joshua 7th chapter).

We believe that herein lies the leading cause of the lifeless, and declining condition of some of the branches.

The second obligation of the church is by the united efforts of its members to work for the extension of the gospel that others may be brought to a knowledge of it and to membership in the kingdom of God. Some branches fail in this, and the reasons are many. In one it may be that God has blessed some one member with an abundance of the temporal things of life, but through selfishness little if any of his means go for the extension of the gospel work. He is a good man, respected and honored for his honesty and uprightness, but he with-holds his means and fails to use his personal opportunities, and thus causes the church through lack of funds to fail to fulfill its obligation.

In another branch it may be that the presiding officer makes the church interests so secondary to his personal interests that the former are not cared for. Sometimes there is a lack of systematic effort upon the part of the officers looking toward reaching out for an ingathering. So there are various causes why the power of God is with-held, and the branch fails to grow.

With a proper spiritual life a branch cannot fail to reach out and gather in the worthy of the world. That spiritual life may be attained and preserved by an individual and collective observance of the laws given, under which conditions the Spirit of God will be manifested through his people to the convincing of many whose hearts have seemed to be hard and unyielding, and the work will develop to proportions little dreamed of. "All victory and glory is brought to pass unto you through your diligence, faithfulness, and prayers of faith."—Doctrine and Covenants 100:7.

REPRESENTATION IN THE PRESS.

No small number of the brethren have succeeded in reaching the public through the secular press, by securing the publication of sermons, sermon synopses, and articles setting forth the doctrine and position of the church. In some cases the elders have been permitted to furnish a weekly sermon, and others are making effort along that line. All this shows the liberality of the press, and their willingness to treat us fairly, and it is probable that many other papers which have not heard from us would be as liberal, and would willingly publish suitable matter if our brethren would but make the effort to furnish it.

Of those who have sent us papers containing articles or sermons we note the following: Brn. Frank A. Russell, Colorado Springs; W. E. LaRue, Brooklyn; H. O. Smith, Fall River, Mass.; J. W. Peterson, Winnepeg, Man.; O. R. Miller, Burlington, Iowa; and others. The articles which these brethren furnished to their local papers are very effective in correcting popular errors respecting the church and setting forth the true principles of the gospel. We appreciate the copies sent us though not able to use all in the ENSIGN.

The armistice between Turkey and the allies which has lasted several weeks during which time efforts have been made for peace, came to an end recently and the war has been resumed. On several occasions peace had seemingly been secured only to be lost again. The final result is now more uncertain than before.

No free government or the blessing of liberty can be preserved to any people but by a firm adherence to justice, moderation, temperance, frugality, and by a frequent recurrence to fundamental principles.

Character alone will count in the judgment, and character is not formed in an hour or a day. It combines motive, effort, trial, patience, endurance, and Christlike experiences to develop the virtue that commends men and women to God.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Elder Daniel MacGregor superintendent of the general Sunday school association has been here the past week looking after the interests of the association. The executive committee is arranging the program for the coming convention at Lamoni.

Elder MacGregor was the speaker both morning and evening on Sunday, and gave two excellent gospel sermons of a missionary character, which were reported by Sr. James, and which we hope to publish in the Ensign.

The afternoon prayer meeting in charge of Bro. Bullard, Garrett, and Newton, seemed to lack in activity upon the part of the saints, though many good points were made prominent in the prayers and testimonies. We have learned by both experience and observation that the value of a prayer service is not always to be determined by the seeing of the eye and the hearing of the ear. Some commonplace remark, or some feeble testimony, may be the planting of a seed of truth in another's mind and heart, which will grow to the bringing forth of a better life. And even the moments of meditation under the influence of the Spirit, may lead the heart to new resolves leading the saint to higher ground.

A musical and literary program will be given at the church under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service on next Tuesday evening, February 19th. A collection will be taken for the benefit of the Children's Home.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., FIRST BRANCH.

Sunday the 2d, the pulpit at the brick church was occupied during the morning hour by "our preacher of the twinkling eyes," Bro. John Davis of Stewartville. Bro. Davis has been holding meetings for several weeks at the Third Branch and at Wyatt Park mission.

Preceding the evening prayer service, Kenneth, the young son of Bro. and Sr. Herbert D. Ennis, was baptized by his father. The scene was peculiarly affecting, as the father was to leave for Texas on the following Tuesday, and the little son had earnestly requested to be baptized prior to his departure. He was confirmed at the meeting following by his father and Bro. Goodrich, the latter pronouncing the prophetic confirmation calling him "now" to a work in future years, which we feel sure he will accomplish.

The Woman's Auxiliary met for usual service in the afternoon. Bro. Goodrich preached the evening discourse, thus closing a busy day.

Tuesday evening, the 4th, a large and enthusiastic teachers' meeting was held. Many plans for the advancement of the Sunday school work were discussed, and necessary preparations for putting them into practice made. Bro. Tilden our new superintendent is an ardent and untiring worker and is putting new vitality and energy into the school. We have also been very fortunate in the selection of a secretary and assistant, Bro. Roy Tilden and Evan Hopkins are both young men of ability, and are putting into effect some very practical and progressive ideas.

Wednesday night prayer service is being well attended. Friday evening was regular business meeting in the Religio. A good sized budget of business was disposed of. The young people of the church are, the majority of them, loyal to the Religio, and are building up a fine society. Bro. Roy Fifer who is serving in his second year as president has done much to unite the young people, and his heart is in the Religio work. The social committee, Bro. Paul Pugsley chairman, announced a Valentine social for next Friday night.

Bro. Goodrich went to Stewartville for the purpose of holding a two-days' meeting there Saturday and Sunday, 8th and 9th. Our speaker both morning and evening was the veteran missionary, Elder I. S. Roth of Stewartville. The sermons were delivered in his usual stirring manner.

Large attendance at Sunday school on the 9th. New seating arrangements were being tried out and everybody was busy. The rostrum over the baptismal font has a handsome new rug, the gift of the Ladies Aid Society. The Sunday school will purchase a new table for the rostrum. The Religio has put a beautiful new piano into the class room so we are so nicely fixed. Thanks to the great Giver of all for these pleasant surroundings. Let us not be unduly proud, but humbly thankful that God has blessed us, and enabled us to have these comforts.

Last Tuesday our dear Bro. Ennis departed for his future home in Texas, taking with him his second son, Hollis. The eldest son, Lowell, had already preceded them. The rest of the family will go later. We all afford to lose this faithful family from our midst, and we feel that their going will be a serious loss to us, but we send our loving wishes and prayers with them.

Another dear one, a faithful worker and devoted saint is about about to leave—Sr. Nellie Scott nee Niedorp. She is dearly beloved by all who knew her and it will be a sad day for us when she leaves us. Business calls her husband to another place. One more dear one will leave us this week—our own "Ethel" Kinnaman. She goes to New York to continue the study of music. We hope her absence will only be temporary.—God's blessing attend them all is our earnest prayer.

REPORTER.

DENVER BRANCH.

The regular business session of the Denver Branch was held December 1, 1912. Rumor had it we were to have a missionary sent here to preside over the branch. With some difficulty we were able to decide who should be president. Choice for the different offices were as follows: president, E. F. Shupe; priest, Thomas Merrin; teacher, E. J. Williams; deacon, William Corran. Brother Homer Shupe was sustained as secretary.

Just two days later our missionary, Elder B. J. Scott of Independence put in an appearance and two weeks later Bro. E. F. Shupe resigned as president and Elder Scott was chosen to fill the vacancy.

The work is moving along nicely and an increase in attendance is noticed also an increase in spirituality, there being an attendance of over eighty at the last sacrament meeting. This meeting indeed was a feast to our souls, the gift of tongues and interpretation being made manifest.

Meetings are being held in different parts of the city which are very interesting and some are seeking the light.

On January 13, 1913, George E. Bowen and Elsie L. Durfee became members of the church, being baptized by Elder B. J. Scott.

The little daughter of Bro. and Sr. Ed. Fishburne; Mildred Louist, was blessed Feb. 2d, 1913, by Elders B. J. Scott and G. F. Walling.

Monday evening, February 3rd, our business meeting was held and delegates were chosen for our district conference which will convene in the Denver chapel—March 1, 1913. The Sunday school convention will be held February 28th, and the Religio will convene Thursday, February 27th, for which a very pleasing program is being planned. A good attendance is hoped for at all of the meetings.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

In the city Elder H. D. Simpson preached the morning sermon, Bro. D. MacGregor in the evening, who preached the morning sermon in Oakland. The pastor speaking at night, on January 29th.

Bro. C. A. Parkin spent the last Sunday at Santa Rosa speaking morning and evening and reports good meetings. The sacramental services in the bay cities were both well attended and spiritual. In Oakland little Percy Pery who had been baptized on Saturday, was confirmed by Elders J. A. Anthony and the writer. Percy is a nephew of Bro. Edgar Smith.

The short visit of our general Sunday school superintendent, Daniel MacGregor with us was enjoyed and productive of much good. He preached in each of the branches, and held a successful Sunday school meeting in the city. He started on the 29th ult. for Salt Lake City and the East on Sunday school business. Success attend the Canadian Scotchman in his good work.

The good work in Stockton is moving along nicely under the care of Bro. H. J. Davison; we also have word from the Ceres Branch of a good sacramental service, though they have a visitation of sickness.

By the time this is read it will be nearing the time for the dist. conference to be held at Chico, February 28, March 2.

With deep regrets we chronicle the departure of Bro. and Sr. A. B. Domonoske on the 4th for Urbana, Illinois, where he has accepted a position of instructor in Mechanical Engineering in the state university. It is the parting of the ways to a family strongly bound together hitherto but in hope of regathering sometime—somewhere. This young couple carry with them the confidence and respect of their multitude of friends on the coast.

At our last Sunday school session Bro. A. B. Domonoske resigned as superintendent on account of his removal; which was accepted with a vote of appreciation of labors performed. Dr. W. P. Bush was unanimously chosen to succeed him in this important work, by vote of the 'school and the sanction of the Spirit over-ruling this work.

We spent Sunday night with the San Francisco Branch attending the religio and speaking at the usual hour. Matters are moving out nicely under the new president Bro. J. A. Saxe with his able assistants.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MILLENBORO, IA., Dec. 26.

Editor Ensign:—Pen nor tongue could ever tell how my heart rejoices in this gospel, and Oh, how I long to do something more. I feel like I have not done anything when I read how this work is going on in other places, and around here as far as ten and twenty miles, when I hand, the Herald or Ensign to any of the people to read, they say they never heard of that church. "My husband is not a member yet, but of late I have had hope that he will come in. I have kept on trusting that God would in his own good time soften his heart, and how thankful I am to my dear Savior that he will answer the humble cry from weak and humble as well as the strong. Dear saints pray for my husband that he may see and be awakened from darkness into light. I know that God has heard my prayers in the past. My husband often speaks in favor of the church and I believe if one of the ministers would come out this way, and he could get acquainted with some of our good and faithful ones, that he would accept the gospel. Oh, may God speed the time that my home and each heart in it will be filled with the Christ Spirit.

I want to tell you how thankful I feel to my dear Savior for the blessing through a hard trial just about ten months ago. I had to pass through an operation and I made up my mind on the way to the hospital to send for two of the elders and trust to the loving father who had cared for my needs in time of other trials. I felt I must have some of God's people very near me. I called Bro. Charles E. Harpe and Bro. O. R. Miller who administered to me before and after the operation and I came through it safely, and my husband was pleased with the elders and I can see such a change in him. The doctors, and all, marvelled at my gaining strength so fast, and I have been doing my own work since three weeks and a half from the time the operation took place, and dear saints, I give God the praise. Pray for me that in every time of trial I can overcome. May God bless all his believing children in any prayer.

Your sister in Christ,

Zuliah Clawson.

HEYBURN, Idaho, Jan. 23.

Editor Ensign:—I'm in need of help I would like a middle-aged lady, I know there is plenty in the world without homes, and we would give you a good home. We live on a ranch two miles from Heyburn four miles from Rupert a government station and four miles from Burley on the Miami-Idaho Project.

We have an eighty acre ranch, well stocked, three cows, two young orchards just beginning to bear and we raise lots of alfalfa, wheat and oats.

My husband works away at carpentering a good deal and that leaves me alone. Our son lives close to us and attends to the store when Mr. Gill is away, and I am more lonely than ever since our daughter, Mrs. Akrin Kinsley died. No more visits to look forward to, no more beautiful letters.

The Idaho conference was held here at our school house which was good. There's only one sister five miles from me, and my son's land joins ours on the south, but he doesn't take any interest in the church like he should, and my husband doesn't belong and our two boys are indifferent but belong. I am so lonely and would be so glad to get some saint to come and live with me. The climate is good here my health is better here than in the East. Good schools all over; the country is beginning to be fine. I have tried to do all I could to spread the gospel, and have superintended the Sunday school at our school house the last two summers. Sent some Ensigns to non-members and scattered our literature some. We are right among the Utah Mormons. Saints please pray for me that I don't faint by the way. I feel as though my burden is heavier than I can bear.

Your sister in sorrow

WELLSTON, Ohio, Jan. 23, 1913.

Dear Ensign.—I believe it has been over a year since I wrote for your columns, so will send a little "Missionary" news.

After finishing my duties as attendant at the Kirtland Temple, went to Uniopolis, O., where we have a small branch, of faithful saints and friends who lately erected a neat church building, with only a few dollars of an indebtedness upon it. Labored here for some time, did some ordaining, baptized 3, and tried to be generally useful.

By direction of the Minister in charge, ordained Jesso Hardin an elder. He has offered his services to the church. Is a young man of ability and if faithful will do effective work for the Master. Bro. Samuel Brown joined me after I had been there for about three weeks. There are a number of "dry land saints" there, who should be in the church. If they never do come in, yet they will receive their reward for taking care of God's servants and giving them a home.

From Uniopolis we went to Jerry City, where a number of saints live. Bro. Ed. Patten, a priest, motored us to his home and provided for our needs. On the way, we were saluted by tenor, alto, contralto, bass, soprano, and a variety of other tones not in the vocal calendar, in the way of "barking." It was puzzling to know where it came from. Bro. Patten finally explained that an engineer of an oil well engine often ran five or six engines, separated by three or four miles, and they put these "barkers" on the exhaust to tell if they were running all right. After being there for a day or two you cease to notice the sound. The Lord says: "My Spirit will not always strive." We can become so accustomed to its pleadings that finally we cease to become conscious of it and we eventually lose it. At various times there has been an effort made to build up the work there, but very little apparently accomplished. We decided to try and obtain a new place to hold services, but some of the sisters anticipated us and procured the nice roomy school-house at Merrill, about four miles from Bro. Patten's. We preached there two evenings, when, on Thursday evening, the Christian Alliance Minister, who held forth there on that evening and Sunday morning, made an attack on us, and the people were informed about "Joe Smith denying the Book of Mormon before he died." (Isn't that a new one on you, Mr. Editor?) Bro. Patten attended his service and took notes. Friday evening we informed the people that we were abundantly able to answer the assertions which were made on Thursday evening, and were ready to do so if the people wished or if they preferred us to go right ahead preaching the gospel and cover the subjects introduced by the reverend gentleman later on, we were subject to their will. We put it to a vote of the audience, and it was unanimous that we should continue the preaching. We were congratulated later by some of those present for the "diplomacy we used and the gentlemanly manner in which we conducted ourselves.

I gave three of my illustrated lectures on the Book of Mormon, Sr. Mary Morris from Uniopolis and Sr. Olive Hettrick of Toledo, lending us their sweet voices to make these services attractive, and the capacity of the room was taxed to accommodate the audience. Quite an interest was developed which Bro. Patten, an able defender of the faith, will look after. Bro. Brown baptized two. While we made friends, we also had an enemy or two. One evening, after the service, as we were on our way home, riding in a buggy, we were signaled to halt by a woman who attended our service; she explained that some one had stretched a heavy wire across the road, it was just the right height to either pull our heads off or missing us would catch the buggy top. It pleased the woman when we told her she was our "guardian angel" that time.

Leaving the Saints at Jerry City, who had so abundantly taken care of our various needs, arrived at Toledo, where we again have a live branch. This congregation is fortunate in having an unusually talented number of young officers, and several of these have efficient helpmates.

Now it was time to go home for Christmas. After the holidays, made for New Philadelphia, Ohio., intending to stay there for about a month. But was telegraphed for by Bro. R. C. Russell, Minister in charge, who asked me to bring my lecturing outfit so arrived here on January 7. Bro. Russell had rented the Lubin Theatre. Before we closed the lectures we had the place packed.

Bro. Russell got in a written discussion with the Baptist preacher, on the subject of "Death Bed Repentance." As the subject was now being discussed around town we obtained large sheets of white paper, paint, and brush, and placed the following in our large show windows: What and Where is Hell, Some New Views on Who Go There, and How Long Old Questions. Do They Remain? This is the place where the preacher is not afraid to be quizzed. Try him.

Then we made two lantern slides, one of these was made of glaring red celluloid, (same material as moving picture films are made of) and the same matter was written on as we had in the window. The two moving picture theatres near us consented to run them on between change of films, so thousands saw our ad. Result, had to turn people away, as place was filled and many standing in the isles! Monday we placed the following in our windows:

What and Where is HEAVEN,
 Who Go There?
 Hear Some Old Ideas Exploited!
 7:00 by "Big Joe".

Subject To Night,
 HEAVEN,
 Where Is It,
 What Is It,
 New Light on an Old Subject,
 7:00 by "Big Joe."

It rained all day and all evening, and rained hard, but the place was almost filled, some of the leading business men of the town being present. The "Big Joe" refers to the large new town clock, in a tower near center of business section, and so called by the people.

Tuesday morning we placed the following in the windows. Why was this Theatre almost filled last evening, (pouring down rain) Sunday Evening packed to its Limit.

Why? Ask those who come to the preaching. Be here inside when "Big Joe" says 7:00 outside.

In the other large window we placed a large family Bible, opened at 1 Cor. 12:27 and Eph. 4:11, long red ribbons run from high up on the window, down to the verses referred to, attract people from across the street. Above the Bible, stuck to the window, in large letters we have this:

Here is the Bible Church, Christ's Church,
 Which ones in town is it? Are any of them it? Hear what the Preacher says at 7.

In the other window, is this, That Bible in the other window is open at verses describing the only form of Church, Christ ever built, to preach salvation. Have you such a Church as that Bible describes in this town?

These various signs had arrows pointing to the Bible referred to, and on the sign referring to rain, had two umbrellas pictured, and the rain coming down in torrents.

We are arranging my stereopticon to throw our advertising from our building at night on a street across the street near a prominent corner. Smoked glass, written on with a sharp instrument, makes the lettering stand out clear and white, surrounded with black. Of course such advertising is only possible where an arc light is used in the lantern.

Have strips of cardboard 2 inches wide, 28 inches long, will lay these out and paint a church building on them as a whole. Then will letter each strip with one of the offices of the church, the gifts and blessings and place in the window shall leave it there for a couple of days, then take away all but Pastors and Deacons and ask, Does that look like the New Testament Church?

We are planning to get the school children in a contest finding how many times Christian is mentioned in New Testament as name of God's people, and how many times "Saints" is used in that way.

C. Edward Miller.

LOOKING GLASS, Ore., Dec. 21.

Editor Ensign:—I have not seen your dear face for several months and long to see you. I am on our farm at this place again for awhile at least, haven't heard a sermon since last conference at the dear old place called Myrtle Point, but we did hear some fine sermons there. I listened to Bro. Crumley talk and explain to my niece one evening at my daughter's in Roseburg. She belongs to the Christian church but she seems to like to talk to me and Blanch Currie, my daughter about our belief.

I would like to be able to send the ENSIGN to several different parties this Christmas, but can't I hope I shall be able to get my son interested in listening to me read this paper to him; he is the only one of my seven children that is not in the church. Some of the protestant ladies here said, that they didn't learn anything at their meetings so what was the use of going to hear these men preach. With best wishes.

I. A. Buell.

MCKENZIE, Ala., Dec. 28, 1912.

Dear Ensign:—I have been greatly interested in reading our church papers, so I trust that this may at least help someone who may be struggling along as I am to gain eternal life. I am thankful for the many blessings I have received. I have had some trials as all saints do. I hope to live humble and faithful, discharging every duty so that I may enjoy more of God's Holy Spirit and when my life work is ended, I may dwell with Christ and the pure in heart. I desire to be humble and faithful as one of God's children. Asking an interest in the prayers of all of the saints.

Clyde Hawkins.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan. 16.

Editor Ensign:—It is now some little time since I last wrote to our missionary paper. We are always glad, that through it we receive news from the "city of the saints" and other parts of the world.

I cannot say that I have much news to tell, because the gospel moves slowly in this part of the world. There are three principal things that we have against us here—pride, pleasure, and indifference; and these things are hard to work against. But we have been able to reach a few—very few indeed, considering the mass of the people. And when we look back on the history of this people, it is not so very long ago since they were delivered from the Catholic reign, and that same spirit is still among the people, to pay heed to the priest, and follow his counsel, whether right or wrong, but we will try in patience to present the true light and give them an opportunity to come out of bondage.

I can say that my last writing to the ENSIGN was not in vain. I was very glad to receive such a response to my appeal for help for the work here. The names are too many to write here, but we have them nevertheless on paper, and they will in due time go to the bishop of the church, to your credit, and I know it will stand to your credit on the other side when the reckoning time will come.

But hereby, one and all, accept of my very best thanks for the same; and may God's blessings be yours in return. By this help we are able to continue yet a little while in our work. There is much to be done here, we have the hall rent, tracts, and other things to pay for.

Since we received the help I have made a trip among the few scattered saints that we have in this part of the country, in Eskilstuna, my place of labor the last time I was in this country; I had fairly good attendance. And in Bjoineborg, Varmland, where we have our faithful and energetic worker, Sr. H. Lawrence. It is indeed a pleasure, "for the many times lonely missionary," to meet with such saints, and together with them enjoy the sweet influence of God's Spirit. There, to my surprise, I spoke to quite a few, as it seemed, interested listeners; but we could not make the meetings as public as we wanted, because of the rule from the lord of the place, prejudiced by the religious bigots. Here lives also Bro. and Sr. Ramsen.

I can also say that I am glad to hear from home of the assistance that some have given my family; it is hard enough for a man to be this far from home, without hearing that the family are forgotten by neighbors and friends. A visit for a right purpose to a missionary's family is a good assistance, many times. But I have learned that my family have been looked after, with more than visits, for which I thank you all.

Hope to be remembered in your faith and prayer to God, for the success of the work in this field, that we may be able to hold out faithful to the charge entrusted to our care.

Fearing that this letter is not boiled down enough, I will close, wishing the ENSIGN and all its workers and readers a happy new year, I remain yours for Christ,

Oscar Wm. Okerlind.

FROM THE NORTH COUNTRY.

CALGARY, Alberta.

Editor Ensign:—Perhaps a few items from the "north country" may be acceptable with your many readers.

I attended the district conference at Edmonton, Alta., December 27-29, enjoying the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. J. N. Baldwin. We had an excellent conference, quite largely attended for the time of the year, and a fine spirit of peace and tranquility prevailed throughout. One of those gatherings that makes a man feel like going again. And why not? The saints should be the happiest people in the world. They have the genuine "Pearl of Great Price," and the only people in the world who have a real tangible idea of "life" and what it means. "Because I live ye shall live also," is a comforting assurance of the passing of mundane conditions, to be superseded by the "life more abundant." Glorious hope! Life! What an eternity of meaning in the combination of four letters, in contrast with the delusive pleasures of this earthly existence. And how insignificantly trivial is worldly nobility when compared with the majestic grandeur of eternal bliss. But, Brother Editor, I did not intend to sermonize when I sat down to write.

I left Edmonton Sunday evening at midnight and came to Calgary to make an effort to sow the good seed. There are only a few saints in this city but they are making a noble effort to assist ye missionary. We were soon in touch with the reporters and as a result both the Calgary Daily Herald and the News-Telegram gave us a nice write-up. We secured a room in the Board of Trade for Sunday evenings where we are holding forth. Crowds are not large but attention is excellent. We are also holding cottage meetings during the week and we are hopeful of visible results ere long.

Conditions in this country are altogether different to what they are in the States. It is a difficult matter to get people out more than once a week, and a very great many are totally indifferent to religious effort of any kind. Another thing which militates against us to quite an extent is the people seem to be creed-bound and will not hazard an investigation.

But while we are unable to report great results we rejoice in the success of others who are more fortunate in locating the "honest in heart." May the good work go on.

At last accounts Elder Mortimer was in the vicinity of Prince Albert, Elder Peterson in Winnipeg, Elder Crabb at Edmonton, and Elder Cornish at Senlac. Five missionaries in a territory of twenty-five thousand square miles. What will the harvest be?

I am having good liberty in presenting the word which is a source of encouragement, and while I am not satisfied with personal accomplishment in the conquest of self, I am hopeful of ultimate triumph.

In gospel bonds,
E. E. Long.

MENA, Ark., Dec., 1912.

Dear Ensign:—I know beyond any doubt that this is truly the church of Christ. I am thankful that I have been led to see the truth, and have been admitted into the true brotherhood of the church of Christ.

I will give my experience. About three years ago when lying in my sick bed, in Dallas, Texas, suffering untold agony of mind and body, I prayed as best I could, (not then being a reader of the Bible to any extent, and not a member of any church) that the Lord would spare my life. I then and there promised God that if he would show me which was his church that I would at once join it. When I was able to travel I came to Mena, Ark., where my father and mother live. My father was a Christian, or Campbellite, preacher, but not serving at the time, but I thinking to honor my father and mother joined the Christian Church.

I soon became dissatisfied with that church when at Hallettville, Okla. Then Bro. J. W. A. Baily came there and commenced preaching on the street, and it was not long until I saw he had the truth. I was then baptized by him, and have felt the Holy Spirit working in me at times to such an extent that I can now truly say the Lord has answered that weak prayer, and has shown me his true church on earth.

I have been so overwhelmed with people claiming that the grave or death is the only hell that we will ever have to suffer, that I will send you a copy of the way I live of out-doing such soul sleepers, and this article may be of use, to others young in the faith.

I will first call your attention to the scripture as recorded in Revelation 20:3-7: "And cast him into the bottomless pit, and set a seal upon him . . . and Satan shall be loosed out of his prison." We see here that the bottomless pit and the prison are the same place.

We will now go to Ezek. 31:16, "I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall when I cast him down to hell, with them that descend into the pit."

Please, dear reader, get your Bible and read the entire 31st chapter of Ezekiel, and the 32d chapter from the 18th verse to the end, then you will see very plainly that the pit, prison, and hell are all the same place.

I now ask, did you notice that this place is bottomless? Did you ever see or hear of a grave which had no bottom? I think not. Then Isaiah 24:22, pit and prison are the same. Then Zech. 9:11,12, we find that there are prisoners in the pit, but no water there.

But where is the pit, prison, or hell located? Read Ezek. 31st and 32d chapters again, where we see that it is the nether parts of the earth; you will also notice that in verse 16 the 31st chapter that there is to be some comfort for those who drink water; then in chapter 32, verses 22-26, please take notice that the graves are about him, in the sides of the pit, and notice it says graves, not grave, and pit, prison and hell, not pits, prisons, or hells. Notice also verse 30 that they bear their shame. Now, how could they bear their shame, or rather how could they have any shame to bear if death were oblivion? Answer if you can.

In Rev. 20:3, we find it has no bottom. In Matt. 12:40, we see that the Son of man (Christ) was to be in the heart of the earth; then in Eph. 4:9, we see that he did descend into the lower parts of the earth. Now what did he do down there?—preached to the spirits in prison,—see 1 Peter 3:19,20. But in order that you may not say that they were just spirits, of nothing, read the 6th verse of the next chapter, where we see that the gospel was preached to them that are dead.

Dear friend if death is oblivion or the grave is hell, what good would it do to preach to the dead? As they would know nothing of it, or what use would the spirits in prison have for preaching, if they were not the spirits of mankind? I can find no statement in the Bible of anyone except the Son of man preaching to the spirits in prison, neither do I find that any other person preached to the dead. Hence I am compelled to think that it was the spirits of those that were dead to which Christ was preaching in the prison.

I have shown that pit, prison, and hell are the same place, and that it is in the nether parts, heart or center of the earth, that there is no bottom to it, no water in it, that some are to be comforted there, that hosts of people are there, some are to be ashamed at being there, that the gospel was preached to them, that Christ was there and did the preaching.

Then you may read Rev. 20:10-14, notice in verse 10 they are to be tormented day and night; verse 12, all are to be judged according to their works. Verse 13 bears this out. Verses 13 and 14 show that death and hell are not the same place or thing. We find in Psalms 9:17, that the wicked and all nations that forget God, are to be turned into hell. Can you find where the righteous are turned into hell? Can you find any children in hell? All are put in the grave, young or old, good or bad, just the same; then we find in Hosea 4:9, that the same ones will be both punished and rewarded,—(Jer. 21:14), to be punished according to our doings. Some are to be punished more than others—Luke 12:47,48; Rev. 22:12.

In Luke 16, the rich man and Lazarus were both conscious, and must have been likened unto the human race. Whether or not it was a parable makes no difference to us.

The wicked are tormented day and night, while the righteous are not. If death or the grave, was the only hell, all would be punished just the same. Would it be like a just God to inflict the same punishment on a baby or a righteous person, as he did on the most wicked?

Dear reader, if you are not yet satisfied please read Mark 9:42-48, where the worm dieth not, if you happen to be a soul sleeper, I pray you take heed that you may be accounted worthy of a great reward in the hereafter and escape the punishment that awaits the wicked.

Your brother in Christ,
R. F. Davis.

MORRISON, Ill.

Dear Ensign:—I do not know how to express my love for your (to me) valuable paper. I became a saint about one year and a half ago, brought to a knowledge of the truth by reading the ENSIGN, and searching the Scriptures. It was my niece, Mrs. Charles Williams of Vancouver, who sent it to me. Inclosed find one dollar for the extension of the ENSIGN.

Mrs. O. S. Mann.

Bro. O. K. Okerlind, Stockholm, Sweden, writes on Jan. 3d: I wish you all a happy and prosperous new year, and pray that your work in sending out our good ENSIGN may be crowned with success, and many be reached by it, and converted to the truth; if there were any here that could read it I would get some subscriptions for it.

Can say we are all well here and doing the best we can under conditions prevailing. Indifference is the worst opposition we have in this country, and that is bad enough, but hope we will gain a foot hold here some day, but it is a hard mission all the same, the people have too much of the Catholic spirit in them yet.

We have had a very rainy season here ever since I arrived in August, but hope the real winter will set in soon.

Best wishes and kind regards to all the ENSIGN workers, and all saints in Independence.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

SERMON DELIVERED BY ELDER G. E. HARRINGTON JANUARY 26, 1913.

REPORTED BY BELLE ROBINSON JAMES.

Sometime ago our choir used to sing a piece having these words:

"By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept when we remembered Zion. We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof. For there they that carried us away captive required of us a song; and they that wanted us required of us mirth, saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion. How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land? If I forget thee, Oh Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cling to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy."

David is one that I believe has poured out in song the most beautiful of thought. Hear him in the one hundred and forty eighth Psalm:—

"Praise ye the Lord. Praise ye the Lord from the heavens; praise him in the heights. Praise ye him, all his angels; praise ye him all his hosts. Praise ye him, sun and moon; praise him, all ye stars of light. Praise him ye heavens of heavens, and ye heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens. Let them praise the name of the Lord for he commanded and they were created."

In connection with this I will read a few verses from the fourteenth chapter of Revelations, that favored chapter which tells us of the angel commissioned from heaven to restore the gospel. Preceding that statement, however, we have these words.

"And I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Zion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads. And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps; and they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth. These are they which were not defiled with women: for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb. And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God."

I presume you have guessed the theme this morning. We are to talk to you about the subject of music, Music has its place, it has its influence, and we ought to try and find out what is the purpose of God concerning us regarding it. Since we are his children, having accepted the gospel, and promising him to be under his direction, our thought should be to consider it seriously, for music plays so important a part in our services, therefore its character should be a matter of deep concern to us. I think it is not unreasonable for us to give consideration to this matter, and not only with reference to music as we have it in the church but with reference to music as we have it in our homes. If we are given to certain of the careless exciting classes of music in our homes, we can easily adapt ourselves to the same class in our services at church. We might justly say there should be a difference between the class of music played and sung on Sunday and other days of the week. On the Sabbath day the presumption is, that it is a day given us of God where our soul's service shall be such that we shall feel no sorrow nor regret over the work of the day; but rather, having been invited into the presence of the Master, among his children, there will have been awakened within us those thoughts contributing to those joys, that when we are through with the day, we shall feel that we have gained something valuable, feeling better, having better purposes, stronger desires for good, and possibly holier feelings.

I look upon development in the church and kingdom of God as constant. We do not shine suddenly; we do not grow magnificent instantly, it is a work of progression, gradual in its development, and while we know not our possibilities, the intent of God is that they shall be reached, and with what little time we have here, we should seek to realize our privileges and advantages, and appreciate our responsibilities, and what is possible for us to gain of value that we may exert an influence for good upon our surroundings.

It would therefore appear that we should be insistent upon an examination of ourselves, demanding of ourselves that we gather and distribute some good every day, that we may grow, that we shall never cease growing, that we shall aspire and make efforts to climb, that we shall work—I was going to say necessarily—but rather temperately; as there are injuries that are liable to come to any of us by exhausting our powers in any one direction. The intent of God is that we shall be rounded out, capable of an appreciation of all things good, noble, beneficial and glorious. That is the intent of God, he wants to help us into that state from day to day where we will be capable of placing a proper estimation upon things of permanent value Music then having its place and value, can and should be appreciated.

What part are we playing in it? How many of the congregation present have their hymn-books? How many of you are willing that the choir shall do all the singing? Have you ever felt any responsibility along this line? You will remember I read to you of the hundred and forty and four thousand that were going to sing a song that no other could sing, and why? Evidently because of the purity of their lives. Does purity, then, in any sense, contribute to an exalted spiritual musical idea? It evidently does. Purity of life, holiness of purpose, enables us to drink in the sweets of the Spirit of God, and fired with that holy and beautiful feeling and spiritual thought, the whole being is lit up with the glorious light of heaven, as a result of a consecration of soul, of a proper attitude and acceptability attained and maintained before God. God is pleased to give it us as we seek for it. I like to hear the entire congregation singing in lofty spiritual union.

I am pleased to note the interest that is being taken in our rising generation here in this place, and that we have some whose love for this department is such that they are willing to give of their time without asking compensation—willing to bestow thought and influence and give those that are willing to place themselves under the training, the opportunity for musical culture. Such efforts prove a blessing to us and to them, and there is no question about there being joys experienced as a result of this training that can not be had, nor has been had heretofore, without it.

Music, it has been said by some, is or can be made beautiful, I wish to call your attention to some things which have been said regarding it. The object it is said is to excite pleasurable emotions. It is also said that the emotions are subject matter which musical works are intended to illustrate. This however is disputed by one individual by the name of Hanslick. He says both are false. Here is his contention.

"The beautiful aims at nothing, since it is nothing but a form, which though valuable for many purposes, according to its nature, has, as such, no aim beyond itself. Art aims, above all, at producing something beautiful, which effects not our feelings, but the organs of pure contemplation, our imagination."

Again, he says, representations are what charm us, not the beautiful melody as such, it does not charm us, but what it implies. Music he informs us, consists of sounds artistically combined, of euphony and rhythm. Of course I am not going to enter into a discussion with these musical philosophers. I feel I am incompetent to enter into a range of thought that would give you a philosophic view of the science of music, but rather, I desire to treat of it from a practical point of view. Its application has sometimes been made to individuals who have felt disinclined to work. I remember of one time reading an instance of the kind occurring in one of the old countries, where about 11 o'clock in the day, and about 5 o'clock in the evening there was a lassitude of disinterestedness manifested on the part of the employees of a certain company who were concerned considerably about their profits, appreciating the fact that there was power in music, the idea suggested itself to them to introduce it at these particular times, a violinist was procured who at these hours of waning activities began playing music of a lively character, its effect was magical, gratifying and profitable, the faster the music the greater the activity, I don't know whether you would want to use it as a commodity to your financial advantage or not.

We know far reaching and powerful influences are exerted over the mind when appropriate music is well rendered. While listening last evening to that memorable composition "Marching through Georgia." I could feel something of the nature of the inspiration and the determination that existed in the men who were fighting for the Union and the freedom of the slaves. If we could but put ourselves in the position that those men were in, and hear those notes struck, and in our imagination hear the words of inspiring song playing before our minds, and our purpose the liberation of our fellow beings, we could imagine something of the power and influence that were animating these courageous men who took their guns in the interest of liberty. Powerful—unquestionably powerful.

I remember quite a number of years ago, being associated with an organization, whose disposition was to try and rid the world of one of its most prominent and powerful religions if possible. I well remember our band playing, or our drum and fife corps, marching up the street, myself with others, passing by one of their churches, playing a piece that was intended to cause irritation on their part, but gratification on ours, together with a willingness to die if necessary in an effort to exterminate them, to show a daring and incite bitterness; the feelings we experienced were intensified largely by the music, it seemed to give life, energy, courage and determination beyond what ordinarily would have existed.

If then, we recognize it as possessing such a power, it becomes necessary to use discrimination in kind as well as in its application. I ask the question, Why should I desire to be fired with a disposition to exterminate any one? Simply because the motive was wrong, but does that make the music wrong? That depends upon its associations in some instances, and the associations in this case were, not necessarily the men, but the words that accompanied the music. The music helped to develop my imagination and intensify my feelings leading me to wrong results, consequently we need to pay attention to what is likely to be generated within us as a result of the music we are listening to—not that music is necessarily wrong, but that the application is wrong at times.

In some of these places where many of our young men fall by way of temptation, there is and has been efforts made to keep the music going, because of its attractiveness, and as something that will allure. While God intends that music shall be inspiring and elevating, man has taken hold of that beautiful instrument, and has caused or tried to cause the destruction of mankind with it. They have put it near the saloon, they have put it in the saloon, they have secured the best they could to place in there, with which to entice the young men to partake of the death-dealing stuff they have to offer them. With this great advertising medium, with this wonderful influence, they are capable of securing the destruction of many, (while primarily, I presume their thought is not to destroy) but their love for the almighty dollar, regardless of the effect flowing from their efforts, is the dominating thought in their minds, so the wise business head says, I will get the thing that will help me in my business, being in the business of selling liquor I want everybody to drink liquor, and I am going to plan so they will want to drink it, therefore I will bring in the music, because I know of its influence over, and pleasure to humanity, I know they like it and will follow after it, and I will get rich. What do I care about the boy or the father or mother or the sister or the child at home? No. No. There is a misapplication and wrong use of this beautiful and ennobling force that God has given to us.

But while these attractions are in these places that we have referred to, we have also the beautiful in music with songs, songs that serve to awaken high moral sensibilities in those who are partially degraded. We have "Father, dear father, come home with me now" You know that old pathetic song, It has played an important part in causing changes to take place in the hearts of degenerate parents Yes, deperate ones. Music has drawn from evil as well as drawing into evil, Music may draw into evil as well draw to good and to God. What kind of music shall we make? Shall we place ourselves in position where we will contribute in any sense to detract from the holy and joyful purposes that are intended by the Creator in giving of this beautiful art to us? That is the question.

The Lord has spoken to us with reference to the matter, and has told us in Section 119, paragraph 6, in Doctrine and Covenants something about what he would like to have us do in regard to this musical attainment, I will read you this paragraph.

"The service of song in the house of the Lord with humility and unity of spirit in them that sing and that them hear is blessed, and acceptable with God; but song with grievous sadness in them that sing and bitterness of spirit in them that hear is not pleasing to God. Therefore in all the congregations of the people of God, let all strife and contention concerning song service cease; and that the worship in the house of the Lord may be complete and wholly acceptable, let them who shall be moved thereto by a desire and the gift to sing take upon them the burden and care of the service, and use therein instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large and as wisdom and choice may direct. Let the young men and maidens cultivate the gift of music and of song; let not the middle-aged and the old forget the gladness of their youth and let them aid and assist so far as their cares will permit, and remember that saints should be cheerful in their warfare, that they may be joyous in their triumph. Nevertheless, let the organ and the stringed instrument, and the instrument of brass be silent when the saints assemble for prayer and testimony, that the feelings of the tender and sad may not be intruded upon." etc.

Here the Lord helps us to see the propriety and adaptability of music. If we had a brass band playing during the prayer meeting at every song, the chances are that you would not feel very spiritually minded. You might be interested but you would be disturbed, and that disturbance would not conduce to your best spiritual sensitive nature, consequently the Almighty has required that these instruments of brass should not be played during the prayer service.

Shall we have secular music on the Sabbath day? Are we justified in our homes of getting our phonograph and producing a lot of this "rag-time" music? How spiritual will be your minds after you get through with that kind of an entertainment? Will you be apt to bear your testimony very readily in the prayer meeting? Will you very suddenly fall on your knees in offering prayer? If there is not a good effect following it of a spiritual nature, it seems to me that we are disqualified as worshippers in the house of God. I have heard that kind of music played on the Sabbath day, and I have been invited to homes and I did not really know what to do with myself. I did not want to offend, but I tried to get them to play something of a sacred nature. I believe the day of worship should be devoted to worship and to proper service, and I believe that proper service requires the elimination of the secular to the point of necessity. If then, it is not good for our homes on the Sabbath day, it is not good for our churches on the Sabbath day.

It looks to me as though there should be within this great company of people, a spiritual perception, a musical perception, and a consecration of soul that would bring to pass or develop a class of music adaptable to our condition and apply it, that a proper spiritual musical atmosphere be secured. It makes no difference in what organization or auxiliary it may be in the church, the aim should be to provide in the musical line what God would be pleased with. Are these tunes, these combinations of sounds, are these activities along the musical lines pleasing to my heavenly Father? If they are, alright, but if they are not, what shall we say? Now I believe that everything that we do in this church on the Sabbath day should have a spiritual thought associated with it.

It is a difficult matter to take of the secular classes of music like we have in the world and bring them in here where, as some have expressed it, the feet are apt to tingle, and expect a very high spiritual state of mind. All things should conduce to the bringing about of a proper spiritual poise. We want good thought, we want good feeling, we want a high and noble, and purely spiritual emotion. That is what we need, whether we want it or not, that is what we should desire, that is what we should strive for.

I remember not a great many years ago seeing those who were marching in one of our auxiliaries, and the music was so dancified—to use a new term—that the children, they smiled, they jigged along. Now, when I saw that I said, that doesn't go to make a proper spiritual condition. It ought not to be. We heard a sermon sometime ago on decorum in the church. Reverence was emphasized—you remember that. If reverence is to be emphasized, then we cannot very properly take a class of secular music that is in use all over the world in the ball-rooms—anything you please—and bring it into our church and have a desirable effect.

I know it has been said it is not right that the devil should have all the tunes, and therefore one of the religious organizations said, "We are going to take what they call the devil's tunes and put them to good words and we are going to win the world to Christ with them." I am not in sympathy with that idea at all. I believe there is a classification, a proper classification of music to be had. I believe that we should get that, that causes and preserves a desirable state of mind.

I have heard in this building the most beautiful tones I have ever listened to—of course I have never been to the opera and to some other places. Some of you may have heard something more beautiful, but I believe the possibility of the most beautiful is within the church and kingdom of God.

I believe that the consecrated soul can get that spiritual musical perception that will enable it when expressing itself to give forth the purest of tones and that which will inspire the most desirable pleasures within the soul. I say I have listened to those beautiful tones in this building of ours both from the organ and from the voice. I have rejoiced, I have wept. I have felt the divine power coming as a result of it here, I have felt it elsewhere in our churches too. I thank God for this. I know that we can have joy in music. I know that God wants us to have the best in music. I know we can have the best in music if we place ourselves before God as well as under proper training.

Music had its origination somewhere, and they sometimes give me to understand that you cannot generate the thing that has already been generated before, and the masters are existent, and if you are to have a cultivated musical mind, you will have to go to the masters, you must travel here and there, you must be here and there. Well, perhaps it is so, but it does occur to my mind that there is a possibility of a generation of something equally as good in the house of God and among the children of God as there is on the outside, notwithstanding the fact that there are a great many good things outside, but our aim should be beyond anything that we know of in existence. You will say, "You are going too far." Perhaps I am. But I believe there is a possibility, I believe that within the church and kingdom of God we can get the highest possible musical attainments. If I did not, then I would have to discredit that Scripture that I read to you awhile ago. Where the one hundred and forty-four thousand were going to sing a song that nobody else could sing, and they sang it because of the purity of their lives.

Then if pure lives exist, pure minds exist, pure bodies are existing, what is to prevent adding to that, the spiritual light which shall come; from giving us an illustration of what God can do when we co-operate with him upon right lines? You are to co-operate with God—to work with him. He is willing to work with you, and if, as we find in the 86th section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, we live by the law of God and keep the Word of Wisdom, we shall have both knowledge in abundance and hidden treasures of wisdom, which would make us the equal intellectually of any in the world. May we not expect then, that, if there is a possibility of our ascending the scale of intelligence equal with any others that exist along the literary lines or along other lines, may we not in the musical art? May we not reach the highest attainment possible? I say, it is a possibility. Live the Word of Wisdom, keep the law of God, comply with his requirements, and he will show you what he can do, with your help.

Now we are going to have, according to the statement of the paper, some sacred music in one of the halls that have lately been erected in Independence. Going to have sacred concerts on Sunday, and I presume it will be about the time we are going to have our prayer meeting. I think it is afternoon concerts, and I find that some of our people are inclined to help to move that thing along. It looks to my mind like it is a kind of a competition in spiritual affairs without proper direction. Here at the house of worship is the place for God's people to be at the appointed times. In your prayer meeting as well as in your preaching service. Here is where you can do your best work. Here is where you can enthrall the souls of men. Here is where you can impress them with the best and most noble thoughts. Here is where can be generated those impulses that will give spiritual vigor to the soul and send it out with shining light and power to affect humanity. You might take other means, they take second place.

Now I hope that our folks will feel this same special interest in doing like the Lord has said, "Attend to the house of worship on this my holy day." God has said, "Come to my house. I know what is best for you, you are children. You are not wise. You are insufficiently intelligent, you cannot judge for yourselves, for that reason I have given you my law. I know that if you will keep it you will be better by it, but if you will be a law unto yourself, you will get what you work for and if you are working for something that I do not want you to work for, you get your compensation from some other source, and not from me."

I know there is a tendency on the part of us all to drift into those places that contribute to our pleasures. I know that the priesthood is not exempt from the disposition. I know there is a tendency to get into some departments of church work on the part of members of the priesthood, that work which they have not been called first to. I say this in reference to it. The Lord says, Let every man learn his duty in the office to which he has been called and labor therein, and if he does not labor therein he is to be considered a slothful servant. Ah, if you take the other way, and do something which God never called you to do, and take your choice, in a way, by which you will have failed to perform the work of the office that you have been called to, and accepted, you are losing out. I am going to read that.

"Wherefore, let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence, (not temporizing with it). He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so. Amen."

Now while there may be privileges where obligations are not urgent upon some of the ministry, they might properly engage in the service of song, but to chain themselves up to it, I cannot conceive of that being harmonious with the divine intent except by special spiritual direction. I believe that they can enter in and participate occasionally as they have the time and opportunity but primarily the thought of God is that when a man accepts an office in the church and kingdom of God, the work of that office must be done first, and he who ignores it, ignores the purposes of the Divine. I say the law is superior to all men. So the counsel, let it come from where it may, cannot supersede the law of God, and if we have a correct conception and interpretation of that law, it is that men who have accepted responsibility in the church are obligated to the extent of their ability to discharge the responsibilities imposed upon them by their acceptance of the ordination they have received.

In conclusion I will read you something about this wonderful art called music. It is by one whose name is Lafcadio Hearn, who says:—

"Great music is a psychical storm, agitating to unimaginable depth the mystery of the past within us. Or we might say it is a prodigious incantation, every different instrument and voice making separate appeal to different billions of parental memories. There are tones that call up all the ghosts of youth and joy and tendencies—there are tones that evoke all phantom pain of perished passions—there are tones that resurrect all dead sensations of majesty, and might, and glory—all expired exultations, all forgotten magnanimities."

Further he says:—

"Pleasure and pain; they commingle in all great music, and therefore, that music can move us more profoundly than the voice of ocean, or than any other voice can do. But in music's larger utterance it is ever the sorrow that makes the undertone, the surf mutter of the sea of soul. Strange to think how vast the sum of joy and woe that must have been experienced before the sense of music could evolve in the brain of man."

Music is a blessed and comforting influence unto us. I presume that I have carried this proposition far enough at the present time. You may have some criticisms, if you do, just come to me and we will talk the matter over.

LITTLE THINGS.

J. E. YATES.

Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth. Jas. 3:5. Fire is not the only thing transmitted by contact, but as fire must have fuel or it will expire, so with every contagious element. Anger and cholera of spirit are highly contagious. An angry person coming in conversational contact with one as calm as the summer morning may transmit the contagion, and they, again to others, and still others, the virus of angry words crystalize into evil deeds, and lo, a little spark of irascibility has spoiled the equilibrium of a soul, upset the tranquility of a home, wrought contention in a church, and disrupted a community:—"and behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

Fire transmits its havoc by tongues of flame, and gossip, contention, wrath, seditious strife, hatred and every wicked work are also transmitted by tongue—tongues which for being in human mouths, sear none the less than the scorching blast of a furnace.

As fire without fuel must die, wrath unfed cannot spread. When hate receives hate in return it has fuel to spare and to burn, but when hate receives loving replies it skulks and smoulders and dies.

For like begets like when assisted; or affinities seek their kind, and a love, or a hate or a being, is barren when apart from its kind.

To extinguish fire before it burns out—pour on water. To extinguish the burnings of sin before the vitality of the soul is consumed—apply, the "Water of Life." To kill love—withhold loves responses and apply hate. To kill hate—without hates responses and apply love. To destroy peace—apply contentions. To destroy contentions—be peaceful. "Two it takes to make a quarrel, one can always end it."

To kill good—apply—ah, there is no element known to men or devils which can vanquish intrinsic good.

Good: truth in act word or person can be obscured for a time, its growth can be for a time apparently checked, the debris of evil and the rubbish of lies can bury it up, but the divine spark of good in the soul of man can ever feed upon the debris intended by evil forces to bury it; and when God makes even the wrath of devils to praise him bursting flames of good, shall illuminate the nations; and even they who have nurtured in their own hearts the Divine taper of good shall be made to rapturously exclaim "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"

Futurity cannot be estimated to be small in any department merely because its beginnings appear small now.

A little fire, of the good or bad variety can do great things when spread by the laws of its own contagion. Even a song is contagious, so is gloom. Love is infectious, so is hate. Goodness is contagious, so is evil, and there is a disinfectant for each.

Evil forces automatically supply their devotees with fortifications repelling the penetrating power of the good they may chance to meet, by keeping every cell of brain and tissue so full of their own lotion that there is not room to absorb good even if they were floating in it.

The righteous cannot hope to avoid contact with the evil contagion, but there is a disinfectant, safe and trustworthy in the following ancient prescription:—

"Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not with flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, and having done all, to stand.

Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; Above all, taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God.—Eph. 6, 11-17. And Remember—

Little lovings lead by legion,
Little hatings marshal strife
Little deeds of thought and action
Fashion out the greatest life.

THE PURPOSE OF THE GOSPEL.

ELDER CHARLES DERRY.

The ultimate purpose of the gospel of Christ is the salvation of the world, but before that can be brought about, mankind must be entirely actuated in all their words, works, and dealings towards God and each other by the Spirit and principle of love.

There is no other plan or system known to humanity that can bring that condition about. It may be said that that has failed, but it has failed only with those that have refused to adopt it. Those who have really and truly adopted it, making it the rule of their lives, have realized its power to infuse into their nature the divine essence of love, they love God, and loving him, they love his creatures, and this love has been manifested in all ages by their willingness and their anxiety to bless their fellow man, to the extent that they have sacrificed all things, even yielding up their lives that their fellows might be led to see the beauty and power of the gospel and to pray for their enemies, as Jesus did when in his dying agonies, he prayed "Father forgive them, they know not what they do;" and Stephen, whom his enemies stoned to death, and he cried, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge."

But in order to attain to this excellence of character we "must be born again." Our natures are carnal, sensual, selfish; we become so by yielding to sin so that our natures may be changed we must become "new creatures in Christ Jesus," that is, we must partake of his nature, and that nature is love. I repeat: The gospel of Christ is the only system that can bring us up to that exalted condition and in order that it may do this, there must be a unity of faith in God, his word and ordinances. He must be believed as he represents himself. His word must be received as he delivers it to us. Man's imaginations about God have invariably been vain and conflicting. There cannot be two conceptions of Him and both be correct, and the wrong conception cannot be pleasing to him or beneficial to his creatures.

THE SIN OF GREED.

The world rejects the message of love,
Offered by angels, sent from above;
But makes a mad rush at break-neck speed,
Down into the dark abyss of greed.

They seek in vain for the cause of their woe,
They study, and pray, yet do not know
That perfect love is the crying need,
While the all prevailing sin is greed.

'Tis perfect love that casts out all fears,
That multiplies joy, and dries our tears—
Makes us immune from the scars of greed,
The wounds inflicted by venal greed.

—D. R. BALDWIN.

THE POWER OF MEDITATION.

It is by meditation that principles of truth are assimilated and become part of ourselves. Not by the hurried and partial hearing do those principles exert their full appeal, but in the afterthought—like the return of the flood tide to the sea—the period of meditation and reflection.

The fruit of silent deliberation is a change of viewpoint. The stand from which we look upon the affairs of life is everchanging,—logically it must be so; for as a strange idea comes to us our conception of things is transformed by just the value of the new thought, and we adjust ourselves to the fresh state of mind which it produces. Our point of view, while changing ground frequently, need not shift from side to side, but may be on the ascending scale. If it is thus, we are progressing, broadening, improving.

A radical change of view spells regeneration, and this may come only as we find and concede our former attitude to be wrong. As, with this spirit of meditation, we weigh and test our reasons for thinking as we do and being what we are, we may achieve the perfect idea and by it construct and transform our lives. Meditate; deliberate; reflect.

—L. F. P. CURRY.

THE ROUND TABLE.

From whence comes the custom of consecrating or sanctifying the oil used in the church for anointing purposes?

The precedent seems to have been established by the first presidency of the church in 1836 shortly after the organization of the various quorums, and at a time when there was a remarkable outpouring of the Holy Spirit. See Church History, Vol. 2, p 17. The blessing or consecrating of the oil to be used for sacred purposes has its parallel in the blessing of the bread and wine of the sacrament, ordination in setting men apart for the sacred ministry, the dedication of temples, etc.

Is Kirtland a stake of Zion, and are the saints to gather there?

Kirtland, Ohio, is not at the present time organized into a stake, though it is designated in some of the revelations as the place for a stake of Zion. We know of no command requiring the saints to gather there; but the time may come when it will be made a place of gathering.

Are we keeping the Sabbath the Lord intended us to keep?

Yes. In a revelation given in 1887 the Lord said: "The saints are to observe the first day of the week commonly called the Lord's day, as a day of rest: as a day of worship, as given in the covenants and commandments."—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 7. This is in harmony with the practice of the saints of the New Testament times who met upon the first day of the week. See Acts 20: 7; 1 Cor. 16: 2; etc.

If Saturday is the Sabbath, why do we keep Sunday?

Saturday was the Sabbath of the Jews under the Mosaic law, which law was fulfilled in Christ. But under the gospel the first day of the week was observed by the early "Christians" and termed the Lord's day. Jesus said that "The Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath day," and it was within his province to direct his followers as to which day they should observe. Since they observed the first day without protest from the apostles who were directed to teach "them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo I am with you al-way," but with the approval of the apostles, and the presence of Christ through his Spirit in their worship, it is apparent that the change must have been made by direction of the Lord even though no record of it is found in the New Testament.

How many times does the word "Saints" occur in the Bible?

Thirty-seven times in the Old Testament and sixty-two times in the New Testament.

How many corrections of the King James Bible were made in the "Inspired Translation," and where may they be found?

We do not know that they have been numbered, but they extend through all the Bible. The little book "Three Bibles Compared" gives many of the most important changes.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 4.
Dear Ensign:—My last correspondence to your column was from my western mission, Idaho, where I lost my companion on Dec. 7, after an illness of near four months. Being somewhat suspicious of the termination of her case, but at a time when we yet both feigned to see the haven of recovery in the dim distance I elicited from her information, that in the event of death it was her desire that I should take her to Independence, get a lot large enough for the two of us and bury her there. Thus have I come home to do and thus have I done. Which accounts for my presence home and addressing you from home.

I respectfully and gratefully acknowledge the many, many letters of sympathy which came to me from far and near, and duly appreciate them from first to last, though it is true, as one of them said: "I have no power to help you, you must sob out your weary day." I thank those who prayed for a dispensation of healing power in answer to my request. And let me say that very near, if not unto the bitter end, did I look for a rift in the clouds and a sun-burst of healing glory; when all at once the "billows roared, 'a sunken ship!'" and I was left alone with little Lorne on mighty main to seek the shore. Evidently I had mistaken the "approach of night for the dawning of the day."

Little did I think in former years when I sang "The baggage coach ahead" that I would carry out its parts, and I shall not forget the many friendly strangers on journey hither who apprehended the situation with tears and proffered their kind hands.

Somewhere about the time her sickness began wife approached me as follows one day: "Alvin, I may get well, or I may die. I don't know, and it is best to be prepared for even the unexpected. If I do die, I want you to let Alice have Lorne, for she loves him as her own and she will be good to him; This also I have done. Alice is my sister. With the child, all is well. As for me, I will go on with my warfare. Joseph Smith said to me one day soon after, I came home: "Cling to your faith Alvin." I will try. I hope for the fulfillment of a promise made me since my return here in December through a certain brother: "You will yet do a work that will gladden your hear."

During my stay home and retirement for the past few weeks, though in comparative silence I have been active in carrying out a book plan conceived in the west last summer, my Hazel lending me some assistance in copying, at her own pleasure, during her extended prostration. The work consists of a vast collection of tongues, prophecies, visions, dreams, songs in the Spirit, such as Alfred White's on the "Redemption of Zion." Washington's vision, the songs through Luff and Evans recently published in Herald and Ensign, and Luff's revelation of 1906 and A. H. Smith's revelation to us and the Hedrickites some years ago, and one hundred or more others. Some were previously published; some never before. Some were given in the early church; some in the Reorganized Church. It contains the words of the Spirit instead of cases of healing and enables the scattered and isolated to have a little testimony meeting by themselves. For price and address see advertisement in Ensign for February 6, if not also current number.

MRS. KATE GOODWIN, EDITOR.

MOTHER.

This story is told of the tragedy of a woman who staves and sacrifices to educate children who pay her back with sneers and contempt:

Listen, you superior young people, to this little story from real life.

There is a woman, a plain, homely old woman, without one vestige of culture or style, or anything that you consider smart, and that would make her interesting to you. Her eyes are faded, her hands are hard and work-knotted, her face is lined with wrinkles, her hair is grey and sparse and she gathers it into a little knob about the size of a walnut, at the back of her head.

She doesn't know how to dress, or how to pick out the clothes that would best conceal her defects. She prefers to sit in the kitchen rather than the parlor. She has no society small talk, and her grammer is not always beyond reproach. At the table she likes to eat with her knife, and drink her tea out of the saucer.

She's just a plain, ordinary old woman. There are tens of thousands like her. Nothing to make you give her a second glance, or a second thought, unless you might happen to get a glimpse into her heart, and see there a tragedy that is as black and bitter as ingratitude and wasted love and effort can make one.

Years and years ago this old woman was a young woman, pretty and gay, strong of body and strong of heart, and filled with the joy of living. She was poor and she married a man no better off than she was, but they both had youth, and health, and industry, and ambition, and they set out working shoulder to shoulder, to make their fortune.

AND THEN BEGAN THE LIFE OF TOIL AND SACRIFICE.

They began housekeeping in a couple of rooms, with scarcely a stick of furniture, but the young wife kept it as neat as wax and there was always a savory meal, smoking hot, on the table when the husband came home from work.

Then the babies began coming—pitching over each other's heels so fast they came—until there were six of them, but never a one more than there was a welcome for in the mother's heart and a place for in the mother's arms.

But how she had to work to take care of them, for she was too poor to have any outside help! How she cleaned and scrubbed to keep the little home tidy! What long hours she bent over the washtub and ironing board that they might be kept clean and sweet! How she stewed over the cook stove that cheap cuts of meat might be turned into appetizing and nourishing dishes for them! How she sewed, and mended, and patched, that they might not be ashamed by their clothes before their comrades.

These were the years in which the young woman turned into the old woman before her time. This was when her upstanding young figure lost its elasticity, and her shoulders grew round and bent under the burdens they bore. These were the years when the long night vigils she kept by sick beds, after a weary day, faded the blue out of her eyes. This was when the heat of the kitchen range burned the roses out of her cheeks.

People asked her why she did not keep her oldest girl home from school to help her, and why she did not put Johnny who had grown a big lad, out to work; but the woman steadfastly refused to listen to such suggestions. In her soul she nourished a great ambition, toward which she struggled through sickness and pain, with feet that faltered with weariness, and bones that cried out for rest.

THE PELICAN SONS AND DAUGHTERS WHO PAID BACK IN SNEERS.

And this ambition was to give her children an education; to give them advantages she herself had never had; to raise them up above herself. Well, she succeeded, as a woman always does when she gives her whole heart to a single object. She put her children through the Grammar School and the High School, and because education was her fetish, with almost incredible self-sacrifice, she put them also through college.

And the result of all her life's hard labor is that her children are ashamed of her. They loathe her opinions and deride her views. They criticize her grammar and correct her table manners. They sneer at her old-fashioned way of doing things, and she is without respect and without honor in her own house.

Worse, she is afraid of her children who give themselves such airs of superiority. When they have company she meekly keeps in the background. Before she speaks she trembles lest her pronunciation should offend Mary's cultivated ear. She eats deprecatingly lest she be committing some breach of table etiquette, to which James will call attention. She quakes if she ventures to express an opinion, in dread of the contemptuous curl that John's lip will take over Mother's ignorance.

None of the children's snubs are lost on the old woman. Every one stabs down where mother-love lives, and the wound bleeds in tears that water her pillow at night.

She wonders if her children know how cruel they are; if they realize how their criticisms hurt; if they cannot see that the very reason she has had no time to cultivate her self, to preserve her beauty, to learn how to dress, to learn to play bridge is because she gave every minute and hour, every ounce of strength and vitality that was in her to their service; to securing to them advantages she had never had.

She laid herself a splendid sacrifice on the altar of motherhood, and those to whom she offered up herself, both body and soul, spurn the gift by which they have profited.

DOES THIS CHARGE FIT YOU, YOUNG MAN OR YOUNG WOMAN.

Is this woman your mother, young man? Is this your mother, young woman? Look into your own conduct and see; and, if you have been in the habit of looking down upon mother, because she is not as well educated as you are, quit it, and try to pay some of the debts you owe to her.

Be sure of this—that when the roll of real heroes is written out, the names of those women who deliberately raised their children up above themselves, will lead all the rest. HAVE YOU A HEART BROKEN OLD MOTHER OF WHOM YOU ARE ASHAMED?

CHURCH SECRETARY.

DELEGATE CREDENTIALS TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Delegate credential blanks, provided for by action of general conference, have been sent to presidents or secretaries of the various stakes, districts, or branches not in districts. Such officers are requested to forward credentials of delegates appointed to represent their organizations at the general conference of 1913, to the church secretary, as soon as possible, that the report of the committee on credentials may be made up and printed before the opening of the conference, as provided for by the session of 1911. Credentials of delegates appointed at fall or winter conferences should be forwarded without delay, and of those yet to be appointed, immediately after appointment. All credentials should be in hand as early in the month of March as possible.

One certificate for each delegation, with number of members in district or branch, and names of its delegates, signed by the president and secretary of body appointing, with name of such organization and place and date of conference or business meeting, is sufficient; separate, individual credentials to delegates are not necessary. Please insert "Total membership" in all cases; also report if delegates are authorized to cast majority and minority vote.

Any failing to receive blanks will be supplied on application to the undersigned.

The rules governing "representation" and the "restrictions of delegate voting" provide as follows:

"Each district shall be entitled to one delegate for every twenty-five members of said district, and one vote in conference for each delegate to which they may be entitled. Scattered members in districts, including those enrolled as members of other districts, may be included in the enumeration of membership.

"The delegates present at conference from any one district shall be entitled to cast the full vote of the district of which they are delegates, unless otherwise instructed by their district conference:

"Provided, that in case of a disagreement of views among the members of said delegation (the full delegation not being present), they shall be entitled to cast only their individual votes as said delegates.

"No one delegate shall be entitled to cast, as representative in the same conference, more than twenty votes.

"Each regularly organized branch of the church not included in an organized district, shall be entitled to one delegate, who shall have the same privilege as delegates of districts. But when the membership of such branch exceeds twenty-five it shall be entitled to one delegate for each twenty-five members."

For further information concerning representation, choice, and instruction of delegates, etc., see Rules of Order, chapter 17.

EDITORIAL

Long since, in sore distress, I heard one pray,
Lord, who prevailst with resistless might,
Ever from war and strife keep me away;
My battles fight.

I know not if I play the Pharisee,
And if my brother, after all, be right,
But mine shall be the warrior's plea to thee,—
Strength for the fight.

I do not ask that thou shalt front the fray,
And drive the warring foe from my sight;
I only ask, O Lord, by night, by day,
Strength for the fight!—Sel.

TEMPTATION.

WHAT IS IT?

Temptation comes to every man, though many do not recognize it as such. Some think of it as an allurements to sin by influences that are manifestly vile and wicked, and so easily recognized that none need be deceived, but history and experience both teach otherwise. Temptation, whether satanic or human is invariably of a nature to appear good, and by the offer of something that is of itself desirable, and in many cases proper, lead the subject of the temptation into sin and bondage.

Synonymous with the term tempt are the words entice, allure, attract, decoy, seduce, all of which express the idea of leading astray by a deceptive offer of pleasure or good. The temptation often has behind it a dark scheme so deeply laid that the victim never suspects its nature until he at a later time begins to suffer the results. As the young horse is enticed into the pen by a feed of grain only to find himself enslaved, so are many people led into the bondage of sin.

HOW SATAN TEMPTS.

In Eden Satan gave promise of good to Eve and said: "In the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." He made prominent that which was to be desired, and through that secured the fall of man by which they were brought under his bondage. He came at a later time to Christ—not with cloven hoofs, and fierce horns as some hold, but undoubtedly as an angel of light, presenting himself in the best possible attitude—to offer him comfort and help, (?) just at a time when he was most in need.

The Lord had fasted forty days and was fainting for food when Satan came and said: "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." Here again Satan suggests the good and proper, but with a dark design which was discerned by the Son of God, but which perhaps few men would have discerned under similar circumstances. He waited to make his appeal until he found Jesus in trying circumstances, when his body was emaciated from fasting and he was faint; it was then he sought to take advantage and bring the Son of God down into subjection to himself. He did not hesitate to quote Scripture in his effort to induce Jesus to yield himself into his hands.

So Satan tempts all men. He watches his opportunity, and when he finds the object of his temptation in distress or in need, then he makes his deceptive offers of good. It is when a man's faith is being tested by trial that Satan comes and says: "Give up your faith, it does no good to believe in God, you will be free if you cast off all care." It is when the cashier is without legitimate money that the tempter says: "Take it from the bank, you can cover it up, in won't be known." And so with other temptations. He offers bread, money, wealth, pleasure, social influence, and other attractive things, but those who yield to his seductive pleadings ultimately awake to discover that he has stolen their faith, and honor, or virtue. He takes from them all that which—to paraphrase Shakespeare—does not enrich himself but makes them poor indeed.

DIPLOMACY IN TEMPTATION.

It is already seen that Satan is a diplomat, but his tactics are still more apparent by examining carefully his dealings with Christ. He was very solicitous for the Lord's welfare; he didn't want him to be hungry, and so he sympathetically suggests that the Lord make bread for himself out of stones, and thereby he would prove that he was the Son of God. The mere making and eating of bread were not sinful, for Jesus at another time miraculously made bread for five thousand men, of which he presumably himself partook; but he evidently saw that Satan's gentle offer was but the first step in a deeply laid scheme which had for its object his downfall. It was but an effort to get him to cross over to Satan's side when he would be at his mercy.

Had Eve discerned the design back of the temptation as clearly as did Christ, the world's history might have been altogether different. Moroni says "Whatsoever thing persuadeth men to do evil, and believe not in Christ, and deny him, and serve not God . . . is of the devil." Satan often offers a morsel of good in order to ensnare with evil, and hence the necessity of watching, and looking into the motive behind that which appeals in the name of righteousness and truth.

Does man look below the surface when pleasing offers are made to him? Sometimes, though in many cases not, it is feared. The stones that glitter are too frequently taken for golden ore. The things of the world and of the appetites which give pleasure are mistaken for the deeper things of life which bring permanent joy. Thus man needs to look deep into the things of life and guard his eternal interests from the seductive allurements of the adversary.

HOW TO AVOID TEMPTATION.

Christ maintained safety by keeping "If is written" between himself and the tempter. He kept altogether upon the safe side without yielding to the least degree. Had he gone one step across the line his cause would have been lost. Satan laughs at the man who puts one foot over the line still declaring his integrity, knowing that he has an easy victim, but the world is full of such men who yield just a little though believing with all their hearts that they can step back when they get ready, and they will stay upon the right side, but sooner or later they discover that their adversary has fastened around them his chains and they are bound.

No man can afford to parley with Satan in temptation, but if he, knowing the law of God, keeps upon the right side, he is safe, for Satan can never cross the line. It is only when man gets upon the devil's side that he falls. Peter, in speaking of the things of righteousness, says: "For if ye do these things ye shall never fall." (2 Peter 1:10). Paul also: "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." Truth, righteousness, the gospel of peace, and faith with the Spirit of God, constitute the only defense against the great deceiver. (Eph. 6: 10-18). The warning of Christ who successfully met and resisted the plea of the adversary, was "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."—Matt. 26:41.

Christ alone, of all men, was the only one who did not fall under the influence of Satan, "for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God," (Romans 3:23). Since men are born under the bondage of sin, deliverance can only come through Him who never sinned, for "By the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." When man seeks to put himself in harmony with truth and right he receives divine help through Christ, and he is able to get upon the right side and like Paul he is freed from the bondage of sin.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

THE BOOK OF MORMON WITNESSES.

Upon the completion of the work of translation as noted in the last sketch, the plates were returned to the possession of the angel who called for them. Up to this time Joseph Smith was the only one who had seen the plates, and while many gave credence to his statements relative to them he must have felt keenly the unenviable position of being the only witness, and that his claim was unsupported by another human being. The manuscript was in his hands which was all he had to show to substantiate his claim that an ancient record had been put into his possession by angelic hands, and that by divine power he had been enabled to translate it. The situation had grown oppressive to him. Must he send out that record to the world with only his unsupported testimony?

He remembered that in the translation of the work he had seen a prophetic statement that God would provide three other witnesses. Several friends and relatives had gathered at the home of Mr. Whitmer when the subject of the witnesses came up, and they resolved to seek the Lord in regard to the matter. Going to a secluded place Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdry, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, called upon the Lord in earnest supplication, "Presently we beheld a light above us in the air of exceeding brightness, and behold, an angel stood before us. In his hands he held the plates which we had been praying for those to have a view of. He turned over the leaves one by one, so that we could see them, and discover the engravings thereon distinctly. He addressed himself to David Whitmer, and said: 'David, blessed is the Lord, and he that keeps his commandments.' When immediately afterwards we heard a voice from out of the bright light above us, saying, 'These plates have been revealed by the power of God, and they have been translated by the power of God; the translation of them which you have seen is correct, and I command you to bear record of what you now see and hear.'"—Church History Vol. 1, p. 46.

A heavy burden was removed from the mind of Joseph Smith when other men received the same testimony as he himself had received, and from the same source, and his joy was expressed to his parents as he related the glorious experience and he said: "Now they know for themselves that I do not go about to deceive the people."

Oliver Cowdry, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, prepared a document to which they attached their signatures, which certified that they had seen the plates, and that they knew that they had been translated correctly by the gift and power of God, "for his voice hath declared it unto us. . . and we also testify that we have seen the engravings which are upon the plates; and they have been shown unto us by the power of God and not of man. And we declare with words of soberness, that an angel of God came down from heaven, and he brought and laid before our eyes, that we beheld and saw the plates, and the engravings thereon."

Here are three men who saw the same things which Joseph Smith had seen. They saw the angel, and heard his voice. They heard the voice from above declaring that the plates which they saw had been revealed by the power of God and translated correctly. At least this is their testimony. Is it true?

Consideration and credence must be given the testimony of a number of witnesses unless they can be shown to be unreliable and their testimony false. In a court of law the testimony of three men unimpeached will establish any fact, and the court or jury must give consideration thereto, for if proper human testimony is rejected there could be no stability or safety in anything in this world. Men seldom think how much the things which they accept and believe pertaining both to temporal and spiritual things, are dependent upon the testimony of their fellow men, but usually accept upon meager testimony that which accords with their views, and reject that which may not accord even though it be supported with an abundance of reliable testimony.

The testimony of these three men concerning the Book of Mormon has stood every test. There never has been shown that there was any improper motive behind it, and they have never been impeached. It has been stated a number of times that some or all of these witnesses afterward denied their testimony, and even encyclopedias have published such denial; but it is not true. Each of these three men maintained the truth of his testimony to the end of life, and reaffirmed it whenever occasion gave opportunity.

Oliver Cowdery in 1848 stated, "I wrote with my own pen the entire Book of Mormon (save a few pages), as it fell from the lips of the prophet Joseph Smith, as he translated it by the gift and power of God, by the means of the Urim and Thummim. . . . I beheld with my eyes and handled with my hands the gold plates from which it was translated. . . . That book is true. Sidney Rigdon did not write it. Mr. Spaulding did not write it. I wrote it myself as it fell from the lips of the prophet." Upon his death-bed at Richmond, Mo., in 1850, he said to David Whitmer, another witness, "Brother David, be true to your testimony to the Book of Mormon."

Martin Harris died at Clarkston, Utah, in 1875. In 1853 he said: "I know that the Book of Mormon is true. . . . I know that the plates have been translated by the gift and power of God, for his voice declared it unto us." In 1870 he wrote: "I do say that the angel did show me the plates containing the Book of Mormon. In 1871: 'No man ever heard me in any way deny the truth of the Book of Mormon, the administration of the angel that showed me the plates,' etc." Four days before he died referring to the Book of Mormon testimony, he said: "I cannot and dare not deny it lest the power of God should consume me."

David Whitmer the last to die of these witnesses lived until 1888. His reaffirmations of his former testimony are so numerous and direct that none who have any knowledge of his history, question them in the least. Up to the time of his death he continued to declare that he saw the angel, that the angel showed him the plates, and that he was given assurance from heaven that the translation was true. The various statements of this man, with the others quoted will be found in volume one of the church history.

Can such testimony as this be lightly cast aside? The Book of Mormon would have been just as true without these witnesses but a critical world would have found an excuse for not believing; and God designed to leave them without excuse. He left not himself without witness. There are abundant evidences of the truthfulness of the book, other than that of this testimony, but the latter helps to meet every possible demand from an unbelieving world.

These men did not always agree with Joseph Smith, and some of them became estranged from him, even to the point of opposing him, but their testimony of the Book of Mormon was never changed. No act or word of theirs ever recalled or weakened the original testimony of these three witnesses as given in the prefatory pages of the Book of Mormon.

We call attention to the announcement in this issue of the general conference reception committee. Parties intending going to the conference at Lamoni should correspond with the committee early and have all arrangements made, and thus avoid confusion and disappointment upon arrival.

Sunday school superintendents may receive free a little temperance booklet entitled "101 Shors at the Liquor Traffic," by sending their addresses to the publisher—Lewis R. Horton, Hutton Building, Spokane, Wash.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The delightful weather of Sunday gave occasion for a large attendance at all the services. Notwithstanding the two auditoriums and the large hall at the rear of the church are brought into service for the Sunday school, the officers find it difficult to find suitable places for all the classes of which there are over eighty.

Elder George Jeukius spoke at the morning hour giving an excellent discourse on the law of life. A peaceful yet active prayer meeting was held in the afternoon in charge of Bro. Bond, Garrett, and H. B. Sterrett.

Mr. H. C. Bonisb of Minneapolis, representing the (Mo.) Prohibition State Committee was given the evening hour for a prohibition lecture on "David and Goliath." The liquor interests are described under the figure of Goliath in proportion and character, while David was a type of the Prohibition movement. The parallel was carried to an interesting extent, and considerable humor enlivened the address. Mr. Bonisb has been engaged in Prohibition work for thirty years and the manner in which he handled his subject showed a wide experience in the temperance and Prohibition work. He found an audience in sympathy with his efforts for good, as he invariably does among Latter Day Saints. A collection was taken to assist him in his work.

Bro. J. A. Koehler who has been doing missionary work in the Eastern Maine District has returned to Independence and was a welcome attendant at the afternoon prayer service in which he took part, bearing testimony of the goodness of God. He has recently recovered from a severe siege of sickness—pneumonia he believe—and found it necessary to get away for a time from the rigorous climate of the Maine coast.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn, our "Jots man" returned home from his mission in Kansas in charge of Bishop Ellis Short, suffering from a severe case of erysipelas in the face, following an attack of the grippe, which rendered him very weak. With good nursing and other help which he can get at home we hope that he will soon be alright again.

QUINDARO BRANCH.

The branch is in a very good, spiritual condition, everybody seems to be doing "something for somebody quick."

The social committee of the Religio will give a social with an entertainment and light lunch at Bro. Roy Barron's place, Saturday evening, Feb. 22d. Everybody invited.

We hear that Bro. Rooks and family with C. S. Barron and wife will soon be with us again.

We have had some very instructive sermons by Bro. Hough, Kaplinger, Doll, Eason, Tucker, and Christy.

We hope as soon as the weather gets settled to do a great work in a house to house preaching campaign, Bro. J. J. Kaplinger in charge. February 16th.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Having finished a series of services in Landsdowne, Bro. Rushton kindly favored the St. Louis saints with four excellent discourses. The thoughts so beautifully expressed and the encouragement and instruction contained therein will not soon be forgotten. We should indeed be thankful to our heavenly Father for sending such messages of love and enlightenment through his servants.

The subjects considered by Bro. Rushton were "Reverence for the Holy thing,"—"The Baptism of Fire"—"The Prodigals,"—and "The Lamb as the Emblem of the Kingdom of God in contrast with the emblems of nations," showing that in gentleness, meekness, and love there is strength and power.

February 12, being the anniversary of Bro. Rushton's birth, A goodly number of the saints gathered at the home of Bro. and Sr. S. R. Burgess, where Bro. Rushton abode while here, to tender their congratulations and best wishes to him. A nice program was rendered, a light luncheon served, and altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent.

The morning of Feb. 16th, Bro. G. S. Trowbridge creditably occupied, his theme being, God and his law are the same yesterday, today and forever and the necessity of obeying the same law today.

Bro. S. A. Burgess' discourse in the evening of Feb. 16th, favored by the Spirit, was encouraging indeed. His subject was "Christianity." Reading Paul's defense before King Agrippa.

Our Sunday school superintendent Bro. H. C. Burgess gave a talk Sunday, Feb. 16th on Enosh which was very much enjoyed.

The Mite society will have charge of the Religio program Feb. 21st after which a social is promised.

Last Friday afternoon Bro. S. A. Burgess preached the funeral sermon of Bro. James, who had been very ill the past few weeks. At one time he rallied through administration, but sank again. Sr. James and family have our sincere sympathy.

A number of children have been sick of late, but we are thankful they are improving.

ELIZABETH PATTERSON.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

The weather was beautiful yesterday. There were 64 Sunday school children in attendance with their parents and teachers and quite a few new scholars brought along by the children.

The services both morning and evening were very large. The morning hour was occupied by Bro. Joseph Moore (teacher) for 20 minutes and Bro. Philo L. Rogers (deacon) for 20 minutes. Bro. Moore's subject, "Authenticity of the Book of Mormon," Bro. Rogers' "Prayer."

Evening prayer meeting was the most spiritual for some time there being so many present it was like a conference prayer meeting. Bro. J. L. Rear and Bro. August Ehlers speaking in prophecy concerning the faithful saints whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life. Bro. Gist and Rapp were in charge. Evening preaching by the writer; subject: "Bible Reasons Why This Church has no Salaried Ministers."

Our regular priesthood meetings are held and all matters for the advancement of the branch are adjusted in wisdom according as God giveth it.

Religio under its wise young president's management, Bro. Roqert Beadnell, (branch deacon), is progressing and has a very large attendance always.

The program for Friday 21st will be a debate, subject: "Pay Cash for what we buy or our Bills."

We are at work on arrangements to take care of quarterly conference which convenes here at our branch, Feb. 22d and 23d. We look for a large attendance, immediately after which Elder J. S. Roth of Weatherby, Mo., begins a series of meetings to continue three weeks.

Bro. and Sr. Daniel and Minnie Lynch and children of Springfield, Mo., Branch have moved here and as Bro. Lynch secured a good position he will send for their letters and come in to our branch.

There is another brother whose name we forgot has come here and secured employment and will send for his family and letters who belongs to the Thayer, Mo., Branch.

There are also two other families here who will soon come in by letters. There is also a sister from the Topoka Branch.

Bro. J. S. Lawton presented the new electric lights just installed to the branch.

CORRESPONDENCE

ST. CHARLES, MO., Feb. 2.

Dear Ensign:—I will write a few lines for I feel there is some that will be pleased to know of the St. Charles Branch and its progress. As strength for those that lean on that old rusty word, "can't" and there isn't anything I can do." I will say to such . . . yes, there is much you can do. I wish to say I was a rank Catholic; married by a priest in St. Charles and moved to Alton, Ill., sometime afterward and there found the gospel. After showing five others the light I was led back to St. Charles and at the same time with a bad case of the gospel fever and, as all saints should I began to tell the gospel story and sing that old time religion, and do you know I found some that were willing to believe all that was in the Bible, and after I labored and searched for the honest in heart. I was visited by Bro. John Dowker trying to locate a good place for a fight for the Lord. I had been calling on the Lord to send someone to gather the honest. My prayers were answered. The tent was pitched and after a small season of work we had a branch of about 25 good strong saints after which my work called me to Alton, Ill., again.

Still with the fever I caused some to become interested and after getting permission to preach, I, by the help of the Lord, led twelve more to the narrow path and by this victory material was then had to establish a branch which was done; having a full set of officers. Several have been added to their list since. I then returned to St. Charles and continued to cry to the people, in a nest of Catholics and Lutherans; the branch numbers fifty now. When I began, my wife and I were the only saints near this place and we received the hand of another sister who told my wife she and her husband were coming in as soon as the weather moderated a little and others interested and many have heard but have not obeyed the gospel.

I prayed for God to help me to build up a branch here. He did it. I wished to meet one of the twelve. I sheltered one of them for the Lord; I also had Bro. Lewis one of the patriarchs and received my blessing, and the saints here also. Now, think! Conference will be held here in March. Now I give God the glory and praise for using a corn husker like me to represent his great work and sow the seed and plant, and Bro. Dowker and Bro. Jesse Paxton delivered some good packages and by the help of others of God's servants, we now have the work established. Bro. Noah Cook was with us this last Sunday and took charge of the services and gave us great encouragement, and after supper my wife was sick and Bro. Cook and Bro. Brooks East administered to her and Bro. Cook spoke in tongues in which was a promise that my wife's father would yet be a latter day saint, whose name is Capt. James Hill who is the son of Capt. Hill who led the men that drove the saints from Jackson Co., Mo., after which he received the name of Capt. J. S. Hill for the dispersing of the saints. But after doing this Mr. Hill said to his wife "I am sorry I did this, they were good people. Capt. J. S. Hill my father-in-law now making his home with me is yet living as a witness for this.

My wife's mother embraced the latter day work before passing on the other side and now by the gift of tongues we have the promise of the father. Pray Saints that this Capt. J. S. Hill will soon be one of us. His testimony would sure mean much to help polish the fair name of the precious bride church of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Pray for us saints. May God give us all strength to overcome I ask in the name of Jesus.

Your brother
Victor De Coster V. Cheer.

Gleanings

Bro Alva Christensen, Calumet, Okla., writes in a letter to his father, Bro. C. Christensen, Independence, Mo., of the work among the Indians of Oklahoma. These people are very much impressed with our church. The day after Christmas a meeting was held and Bro. Case spoke to about fifty of them. They granted approval all around the circle, which is the way they show they are taking it well.

The Lord is not slack in fulfilling his word in regard to signs following. We were called upon to administer to Sr. Reuben Taylor for severe earache which was removed at once. Then to Sr. Phillip Cook who had been badly afflicted for a year, such as a certain woman of the Bible had been for twelve years. We administered twice, then told them to continue to pray. They prayed all night, and at midnight she was healed and has since been alright. Then these Lamanites, who are members of the church, went to another sick man who had been given up to die by the doctors and prayed for him, and at midnight he was healed, and his father was overjoyed. The next is Bro. Little Call who had tuberculosis of the hip, also neuralgia of the face, and as soon as we took our hands from his head he said all the pain was gone.

During these prayers they also prayed for their wives and one or two old Indians at home, and at the same time one of the old men came out of the tent and says he saw a star or ball of light come up from the east and traveled until it stood over Phillips' tent. He ran in to tell the others to come out to see it which they did. So they say it is a testimony that their prayers were answered. When they pray they are surprised if they do not get a favorable answer from God. Today they begin a three day fast for Bro. Tyler who is near death with consumption. They observed fasts before they heard the angel's message.

Oh, that the white saints would unite calling upon the Lord in faith to minister the much needed blessings to these fallen people. Take care my white brother or sister how you esteem these children, for perhaps that gray shawl and dark skin hides a nobler soul than thine. Nay, it does not hide the soul for from the windows of deeds shines their real character, as unselfishness, kindness, stability, faith, hope, love, peace, long-suffering, and manifold virtues which I have surely seen.

Bro. R. G. Campbell, Portsmouth, Ohio. The letters and articles in the Ensign are food for me. If there are any saints in this town I should like to know of them for there are none like God's saints to me. I would be glad to have an elder stop.

Sr. Mary McMillan, Holden, Mo. The Ensign is a welcome visitor to my home as I can not always attend the meetings, and it brings comfort and cheer. I want to live right and keep our Savior's commandments, though at times I feel very weak and discouraged, but I will press onward and upward till the end, that I may receive a crown of life that fadeeth not away.

LENORA, Kas., Feb. 3.

Dear Ensign—This finds us seated gazing over the plains of Western Kansas. We have been deprived of the association of the saints for the past six or seven weeks, until a week ago yesterday. Have been on the battle front and have found plenty to do. I started a meeting near Burr Oak, Kas., the 24th of November in the neighborhood of Bro. M. Umphrey. Bro. Umphrey was thinking of moving back to Michigan, his old home. They are fine saints. I held at a school house near them for two weeks with some interest.

From there to Lebanon, stopping over night with Bro. and Sr. Guy Warner. The next morning we found ourselves spinning along toward Jennings, Kas., arriving there about 4 p. m. Drove out to a little country town by the name of Lucerne, where we passed nearly two years of our life. It was here that we underwent a severe seige of sickness which was the means of bringing me into the L. D. S. church. I began a meeting at the Lucerne school house Dec. 15th, preached twenty-three sermons. From there we went to the Bon Creek school house and held there until I had preached nineteen sermons, making forty-two sermons in all at the two places. We have no saints at all in those two places, but expect some in the near future as there are a number who are talking of being baptized. These people knew but very little of our doctrine before I started meetings there. We shelled the evening's fort and aroused the old brag, the devil, in the form of men. They talked of importing a man here to scalp us but we told them to bring him on.

I had intended to close at Bon Creek two nights before I did but when more opposition was raised I stayed two nights longer to let them know I wasn't very easily bluffed. The fight seems to have cooled down and we haven't seen their man yet.

We had very large crowds at both of these places, many nights there were from 75 to 100 present. We could not seat nearly all the crowd. I sold nine books of Mormons besides other church books, and succeeded in getting them to read their bibles. The entire community is astir.

I came to this point, nine miles south of Lenora, a week ago yesterday; this is nine miles east of Lucerne. Have preached here over two Sundays and closed last night. I expect to leave today for Portis, Downs, and Osborne.

There are many opportunities for preaching out here in Western Kansas. I have been staying at Bro. J. N. Boyd's the past week, they are fine saints. I have now preached sixty-six sermons in the past seventy days. Haven't lost much time. May write a few lines later and tell about my experience—how I was brought into the L. D. S. church, but I haven't the time at this writing.

I feel fine in the work. The Lord has surely stood by me. To him be the honor and praise for all that we have been permitted to accomplish in his work.

Your brother in the conflict for truth,
J. D. Shower.

DUNLAP, Iowa, Jan. 7.

Dear Ensign—As I have not been a member of this church very long, my wife and I both being baptized one year ago last August under the hand of Bro. W. A. Smith while he was holding tent meetings in Dunlap, Iowa. I write a few lines in testimony of the truthfulness of this great latter-day work.

Up to the time of my conversion I was a very wicked man, being almost an infidel, not being able to understand the Scriptures satisfactorily to my mind; but after attending a number of Bro. Smith's meetings and hearing the gospel in great plainness, and being desirous of obtaining truth and having the promise that if I would do the Master's will I should know of the doctrine, I resolved to put it to the test, and I can say that I am satisfied and that I know the work to be true, and that it is indeed a great and glorious work in which we are engaged.

After having hands laid upon me for the reception of the Holy Spirit which I received to a great degree after some days spent in prayer and searching of the Scriptures for under its burning influence the truth was manifest in great plainness and I was made to feel a love for all the workmanship of God's hand for this same Spirit certainly teaches the peaceable things of the kingdom, and I was caused to weep with joy, and I have received many blessings from the Lord's hand since, and having received several direct answers to prayer for which I am very thankful. But I realize my weakness and I sincerely ask the prayers of the saints that I may become stronger for I desire to comply with the whole law and to do much good toward bringing about the redemption of Zion and upbuilding of God's work on the earth. Hoping that I may be able to abide his coming, I remain your brother in the one faith,

Geo. I. Hansen.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

THESE ARE MEN I'M SURE, who were anxious to hear about the greatest debater that ever was pulled off, in the history of our church, at least as far as I know. It was perhaps the best arranged, and was carried out to a nicety.

The saints and Baptists had a joint committee each side posting $100 to cover expenses. They agreed to build a large temporary building to seat about twelve hundred people. It was full mostly each night, and some few nights, standing room was at a premium.

We had splendid order all the way through, with very little for the moderators to do, except listen and keep time. Only two points of order called, and each was rendered in our favor although: the chairman was a Baptist deacon whom I had known from a boy and believed him to be a good honest fair minded man. His name was Roy Carrow a brother of our Shelby Carrow.

The debate started in with vim. Bro. Curtis entered right into his affirmation getting along real well in fact setting up his line of affirmative argument proving beyond a doubt to those versed in Bible knowledge, that his line of argument would never be moved. Elder Carlin made very little attempt to assail the affirmative, but thinking there was a more effective way by reading the old stock in trade from Beedle, John D. Lee, H. Smucker Tullidge, Whitmer, and the like. He labored very hard and shouted very loud in order to impress upon his hearers that he had something rich, and he usually left the worst he could find to get off on his last speech.

He is an able man alright but he more than met his match, was the verdict of almost all.

He is a twister of the twisters and has a way of leaving a good impression on the people that he has scored quite a point. But when Brother Curtis would come back with overwhelming proof and knock-out blows, it made Carlin's argument look like perforated tissue paper. Bro. Curtis has a style of his own and goes right after his opponent. Clearing up as he goes and showing clearly that the statements made by our enemies were not reliable and further was a willful perversion of the facts in the case.

I never saw any one follow his opponent in everything he brought up so completely as Bro. Curtis did. It truly was a fine thing and proved beyond a doubt that those slanders can be met, but in order to do so it takes lots of study, and many dollars to buy these old and rare volumes and our people sometimes forget this fact and think all they have to do is to pay the elder his train fare. When at the same time that same elder has spent his own private money to buy these sometimes costly books.

I am glad the saints at Jeppli and surrounding country showed their appreciation of such a noble defense in behalf of our work.

In Carlin's affirmation it was the same old song: John the Baptist was a preacher who baptized our blessed Lord so that makes Christ a Baptist. If you take the Baptist word Carlin failed to prove this, which left him in a lurch for nowhere in the Bible do we find a Baptist church.

Bro. Curtis showed if John was a Baptist he was not one of this kind, for he was also a prophet, something the Baptists don't have in their church. John also baptized for remission. These Baptists say they are baptized because their sins are already remitted. Carlin says salvation is wholly by grace and is obtained before baptism. Bro. Curtis showed Christ was against him in Mark 16:16.

Carlin said Judas was not one of the apostles but was a devil. Bro. Curtis showed by numerous passages Judas was one of the twelve apostles but turned out to be a devil later. Carlin claimed Paul as an apostle, but rejected all others after him. Carlin brought his large dictionary to prove an apostle was one sent to preach, leaving the inference anyone sent to preach might be an apostle. But Bro. Curtis took his (Carlin's) dictionary and proved him out of harmony with even Webster, he told Carlin he had brought that there. Now he could carry it back again. The congregation gave Carlin the laugh, he told Curtis to strike him blind if he had the power. Curtis says I had better open your eyes you are as blind as a bat now—another laugh. Carlin told Curtis he ought to have a sign erected up here—All Kinds of Twisting Done—Curtis cutely told him he did not need a better sign than I have here, he says you are my sign, another laugh on Carlin.

Carlin thought he would try another joke, so he said "I am the big rooster and you are the little batman." Curtis came back and said, "You are mistaken Carlin: I'm an apostle and a preacher and you know how the preachers treat chicken, and roosters they get it in the neck: That's where you have got it. The people could not hold their laughter any longer, and they turned loose.

It was only too plain the rooster had got it in the neck. He, Carlin did not appear to be over anxious to enter into their succession. Bro. Curtis forced the fighting on this point showing their claims then showing that those same organizations had little or nothing in common with Baptist teaching.

Carlin like other debaters went back on Roger Williams. He went back on the Philadelphia confession of faith, even declaring the one that Curtis had was not like his, he tried to twist out of it but Bro. C. held him to it and asked him "Why don't you stop printing them?" You are still selling them at the Baptist publishing house for 25 cents."

To say the least it was a complete victory for the truth and the saints felt well. At the close of the debate Bro. Curtis read 20 verses composed by the writer which brought the house down, several offering 25 and 50 cts for a copy. So we had 500 struck off, which will be sold for 5 cents a copy while they last, by writing me at my home address.

HENRIETTA, Okla., Jan. 22, 1913.

Dear Ensign—I have been thinking of writing to you columns for some time; I and my two daughters were baptized at Seattle, Washington, by Bro. J. W. Davis and the same evening confirmed by Bro. I. N. White and Bro. Wm. Johnson and Bro. J. W. Davis. At the time of our confirmation I hardly could keep from shouting aloud, and the remembrance of that day fills me with great joy and hope.

I have been made to rejoice many times since in this glorious latter day work. I had been a member of the Catholic church 22 years and after waiting with the Reorganized church I felt that my very life was entirely new. I have two sons and three daughters my daughters all belong to the church but my sons don't. They will not let me talk to them about this latter day work. I am making my home with my youngest son at present, when I am out of work I don't get much work to do but I have been blessed in being able to earn enough that I bought the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants and I take the Ensign. I would be so lonesome without the Ensign as I am isolated and it is all the preaching I hear what I get from Ensign and Herald. I haven't heard a sermon since last February when Bro. Edgar H. Smith passed through here on his way to Independence. He is the only latter day saint that has ever preached in this country. It is about forty miles from here to the nearest branch and that is Holdenville, Okla., it being so far I never get to attend church. There is a little band of saints about two miles from here but as I have never seen any account of any of them writing to your valuable columns I thought I would try to write—it is my first.

With love and best wishes to all the saints and success to the brethren who are carrying this latter day gospel throughout the world. May the Lord bless them with a good harvest. I desire the prayers of the brothers and sisters that I may hold out faithful to the end. Your sister in gospel bonds,

Mrs. N. McNellis.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Sr. Mary E. West, Osceola, Mo.—We live on a farm five and one-half miles southeast of Lowry City and four miles from Osceola. We are strangers here and if there are any saints living about here we would like for them to call on us.

Bro. J. B. Heide, Oakland, Iowa.—I would like to have one of the missionaries of the Pottawatomie District communicate with me soon, as I have an opening here for preaching.

Bro. John Ehlitt, Milroy, Ind.—As some one has sent me the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, I wish to thank him, or her, for the gift. I appreciate the kindness and I read the pages with a careful study and it is a great help to me. We are trying to live a true life towards our Maker as I know that he has been with us many times. Some good brother has also sent me a lot of tracts, and I thank him for his kindness.

Sr. C. A. Hendrickson, Enola, Ark.—This is a new place and the work was introduced here last summer by Bro. Jesse Simmons. He gave us some noble sermons which started up the Christian people, and the next thing was a debate. It was held in September and made many friends to our work. Bro. James Smith was moderator. If Brn. Simmons and Smith see this they may know the latch string is on the outside of our door.

Bro. J. W. Layton, in private letter writes from Holden, Mo., Feb. 3d.—The meetings conducted by Brn. Curtis and Lewis were productive of good to the branch here. Bro. Lewis left the 25th for Knobnoster and Bro. Curtis remained over Sunday, and at the afternoon meeting Bro. Fred McWhity was ordained a priest, and Bro. I. Johnson to the office of deacon, and provision made for the ordination of Bro. B. Ament to the office of priest which was done at the evening meeting. Thirteen were baptized last Sunday.

C. A. Brown, R. F. D. 1, Cairo, Mo.—Having sold out on route two, would like to get a place to work for some good man in a good L. D. S. neighborhood; would prefer farm work.

E. Rannie, Palmyra, Neb.—While in Nebraska City I attended a lecture given by a gentleman who said that the "sons of God" mentioned in Genesis 6:2, meant angels who became the husbands of the women, and their children were giants, monstrosities. Also that the angels governed the world until Noah's time and that they made a failure of it, and from that time on it was governed by human beings.

Sr. Matron, Chetopa, Kas.—It seems hard at times to be isolated from the saints, but my mind is called back to some poetry in the Ensign several years ago written by one of our missionaries while waiting in a depot, the central thought being "God is with me, I am not alone." It strengthened me and I praised the Lord as I read it. I am trying to trust the Lord more and more. Remember me saints, as you meet together in prayer meeting that the Lord may heal me of my affliction.

Mrs. Belle Rollins, Rollins, Mont.—I find great help and benefit through the sermons of the silent preacher. It is the only privilege I have of hearing from those of like faith. The Josephite elders have never been through here that I know of. A Mr. Little, a Moody evangelist, is trying to get the people to unite. There are a number of denominations, and many who belong to none. What we really need is the truth, which I very much desire on account of our own large family, some of whom have asked repeatedly, "Why do not some of the elders come?"

Mrs. E. D. Guest, Green Cove Springs, Fla.—I get so much comfort from your, and the Herald's pages, being an isolated member. I would be so glad if some of the elders could come. I have attended the reunion at McKenzie for two years. It is certainly grand to be with the saints. I wish the Ensign or Herald Office would print "Beatrice Witherspoon" in book form. It is one of the first things I remember reading when a girl. If any of the elders can come here we will do the best we can for him.

George F. Clarke, Tabor, Ia.—Last spring the saints purchased a fine lot one block east of main street, and the church building was moved from the country where it had fallen into disuse, so the saints have a nice place to worship in now. There is a membership of over sixty with Bro. M. W. Gaylord president, and Bro. Geo. Kemp acting priest. We have a Relief with about thirty-five members. I ask the prayers of the saints that if is the Lord's will I may be healed of spinal affliction.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

IMMUTABILITY OF GOD'S LAW.

A SERMON BY ELDER J. S. ROTH, AT STEWARTSVILLE, MO., JAN. 17, 1913.

Beloved hearers, I am truly glad that I am still alive, and that I have this opportunity of presenting to you God's word for your consideration. I do not think there is a class of people under the sun that is so misunderstood, and so misrepresented, as the people represented by your speaker. We are accused of adding to, and taking from God's holy word, just because we believe that God is unchangeable, and does speak to his children today, just as he did anciently; and for that reason we are warned, and told by man, that we have no right to add to God's word. I believe with all my soul that no man, or set of men, have the right to add one single word, or sentence to God's word, and present it to the people for their consideration as God's law; for God is unchangeable, and his law is immutable. But I expect to prove from the Scriptures, that those people who claim that we have added to, or taken from God's word, are the very ones that have done that. Now if I prove that, I am sure no one ought to object to it; but should I fail, then my side goes by the board. Now I want to read my text, and you will find it in Ecclesiastes 3:14, 15:

"I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever; nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it: (that is by man) and God doeth it, that men should fear before him. That which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past.

Now we might delineate or meditate on that text for hours, or even days, and we would not get all the grandeur and weight out of it. I want to impress the first thought deeply upon your minds. That very sentence proves that God is unchangeable—for what he doeth, it shall be forever—and that his law is immutable; therefore the plan of salvation never changes. But I have heard the statement made that God has one way of saving the Jews and then another plan for saving the Gentiles. If that statement is true, then my text is false; which will you take, the text or the statement of man? Can you afford to believe the wise man, the writer of the text, made a mistake when he said whatsoever God doeth shall be forever? I cannot afford to believe that he was wrong. For I cannot believe that when they wrote under the influence of inspiration, they made mistakes. If we believe that they were all false prophets, then we might believe that they were wrong. There were some false prophets in that day, of course, but this is recorded as the statement of a true prophet. He says "I know," no guess work, he understood what he was talking about.

I would not dare say that God did not inspire him to say that. But before I examine that any farther I want to give you another text in Deuteronomy 4:2:

"Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it."

The same warning is again repeated in chapter 12:32. I can conceive no other reason for God to be so very particular about it, then, because he is unchangeable and his law is immutable; and I positively believe that when God gives man a law, that that man has no right to change that, either by adding or subtracting. Again James corroborates that statement in his letter (1:17). "Father of lights, with whom is, no variableness, neither shadow of turning." That confirms the first text, that what God doeth shall be forever. Now I will give you the strongest text in the whole Bible, and the one that is hurled at us from the right and from the left. Revelation 22: 18, 19:

"For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

Now that surely belongs to us, and to every son and daughter of Adam's race, no difference when he has lived or when he shall live. He has no right to add to God's word or take from it, one is just as guilty as the other; he that addeth, shall have the plagues added, and he that diminisheth, shall lose his glory. Now the question may arise, what right have we as a church, or individuals to receive revelation from God, when it positively forbids man to add to God's word. "Yes, but that is the very point at issue, it does not say that God has no right to add to his word; he withholds that right from man only. He still holds the right to speak to man. If he cannot and dare not speak to his children any more through his prophets after he gave that text to Moses, then Isaiah, Jeremiah, Daniel, Hosea, and all the prophets will have added the plagues, written in that book. You can see the inconsistency of that.

God did not curtail his own right to add, but he will not allow man to add to it, for Peter says in 2d Peter 1:20, 21: Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. For For the prophesy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake, as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." A very good reason I think, why God will not allow man to add, because he would be liable to make mistakes, but when God moves on him with the Holy Ghost then he will tell the truth and it is God and not man that adds.

So then we have firmly fixed it, that no man has a right to add, or diminish from God's word. We will proceed with our argument, by adding another text. Deuteronomy 32:31: "For their rock is not as our rock, even our enemies themselves being judges" Their rock is not our rock; that is, they do not stand on the same ground or foundation that we do. That is, our enemies do not believe that we have a right to have a revelation now, and we do, that is the difference; and I shall prove that we are right, and they, (our enemies) shall be the judges. That is surely fair, is it not?

Some people throw up their hands in holy horror when we talk of God giving us a revelation now. "O!" they say, "that is dangerous doctrine, it opens the way for heresy to get into the church." They say, a man might give a false revelation. Yes, of course, a man might. But we are not talking about a man giving revelations, but of God giving them. I admit that there have been many false revelations given, but not by the Holy Spirit, but by a false spirit or by the spirit of man, that is why God forbid man to give revelations, because he is liable to err, and to express his own wishes or desires, just as Brigham Young did when he gave the revelation on polygamy.

But we are told that we need no more revelation, we have the Bible and that is all we need. I can find a man not far from here who said that a few nights ago. I have a letter in my grip from a man in Pennsylvania, in which he says, "We have all that we need, since the day that Christ ascended to heaven, we have all the Bible, or revelation that we need for our salvation. For that reason, says he, your church claims too much, for we need no more revelation. Can you believe all that? Can you believe that we do not need the whole New Testament? For not one word of it was written when Christ ascended. All that Paul, Peter, James, John and all of the Apostles wrote, was done after that. And Paul says in Galatians 1:12, "For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." So you see that if we had all that we needed when Christ ascended, then Paul was deceived. But I prefer to believe that Paul was right, and that man is wrong. Jesus says in John 16:12-14: "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come. He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you."

Now I wish those who claim that we have no right to hear from God by revelation now, to tell us how they know that Jesus has told all that the disciples could not hear at that time. He here says that the Holy Ghost will show them things to come. Has he done all that? Has God told man all that he, God, knows? Has he nothing more to say to them? Is that the way a father acts toward his family here on earth? After they have served him, and loved him, and lived with him for years then he says to them: "Well I will have no more to do with you. I will never speak to any of you again; I told you when you were little children all that I ever intend to say to you, so do not bother me any more, for I will not talk to you again." Did any of you ever hear a father that was compso mentis talk that way to his children? No you never did. If God will not speak to us any more, why do we pray to him? What is the use of praying, if he will not answer?

But if Jesus has not told all, or revealed all that he had to tell his disciples, then I hold that he will still show us things to come, man to the contrary notwithstanding. Jesus says in the last chapter of Matthew 28:20, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" Now if the world has not come to an end, then Jesus will be with us, on the condition that we observe all that he taught. How can Jesus be with us always? Only by his holy Spirit. And that is to confirm the believer by the gifts which follow the believers, showing them things yet to come; as he has said in Mark 16:17. "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues," etc. They shall speak with new tongues, God is going to show them something, and they will have power by the Spirit to reveal it to others by an unknown tongue. Jesus has promised to do that till the end of the world. Man says that he will not. Now who has taken from the word of God? Have not those who say Jesus will not do that? Therefore they shall have taken from them their part to the tree of life.

"They shall cast out devils," so says Jesus. I have heard people say that there was no devil, but all that was evil was devil. I heard a preacher say all the devil that there is, was our evil wicked desires, the evil that was within us, that was all the devil that there is. Well if that is true, then it puts Jesus in rather a bad light. See Matthew 4:5. "Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple." Is it possible that the evil desires of Jesus led him up there? The Bible says it was the devil, so you see some one else has taken from God's word, and has added something else, so they will suffer for it . . .

But a better translation of Matthew 4:5 reads. "Then Jesus was taken up into the holy city, and the Spirit setteth him on the pinnacle of the temple. Then the devil came unto him and said, . . ." etc. Is it possible that the devil spoken of there was only the evil wicked desires of Jesus? Or was it only his evil intentions? Oh shame on him who would change God's word so by adding to, and taking from. The 9th verse says "The devil said all these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." Is it possible that it was only the evil desires and wicked thoughts of Jesus that did all that talking? Who has added to the word of God there!

Let me give you another quotation along that line, Matthew 25:41. "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for (your bad wicked thoughts and their angels.) No, no, that is the way the man that adds to God's word talks, but Jesus said," prepared for the devils and his angels! Is there a devil? Jesus says there is. Man to the contrary, notwithstanding.

In Luke 10:18 we read, "I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven!" Was that only bad wicked thoughts that he saw falling from heaven? We read in Gen. 3:1, that the serpent beguiled Eve; And they disobeyed God. I heard a preacher say that Adam did not fall down; but that he fell up. That Adam was a much better man AFTER he fell, than he was before. Well if that is so, then God was terribly cruel for punishing Adam for getting better. God, instead of punishing him, should have said, Adam, since you are so much better because of the sin you committed, I want you to keep right on falling UPWARD, and you will come out all right after you fall up about ten times. Of course I will punish you for falling, but I do that because every time you fall you are better than you were before. O how preposterous! And then call it preaching. Is that not adding to God's word?

Paul says in Romans 5:1, 2. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. "O, hold on Paul, for you must be wrong, you must get out of your old ruts; for we are boldly told now that Adam was BETTER after he fell, then he was before, so surely that was not the cause of sin. Get out of your old ruts, and fall in line with the new thoughts. But how about Galatians 1:8,9. If man or angels preach anything different from Paul he shall be cursed. I believe I shall prefer to stay right in the old ruts. . . . That man said that to prove that Adam fell upwards, that he fell upstairs and skinned his shins. I question the statement: for he blundered as he was going upstairs, and skinned his shins sliding down over the edge of the step, and not sliding upwards. So Adam fell downwards and not up.

Webster says "To fall, to drop, to sink." Just imagine if you can, to sink upwards; Again, "To fall, the act of dropping or descending from a higher plane to a lower." "Just think of descending from a higher plane to a lower by falling upward." Again, "Falling, tumbling, as one falls on ice." Do you go up or down, when you fall on the ice? Again, "The fall of our first parents in eating the forbidden fruit." I guess Webster better get out of the old ruts too. And learn that Adam, and some others fell upwards. So it was the devil that caused the fall of man.

But the poet has truly portrayed the mind of some people in this age of the world. And if they did not do so by inspiration, they were good guessers, as one wrote in the following words.

"Men don't believe in a devil now, as their fathers used to do;
They have opened the doors of the widest creed to let his majesty through,
And there isn't a print of his cloven foot, nor a fiery dart from his bow,
To be found in earth or air today; for the world has voted it so.
But who is mixing the terrible draught that palsies heart and brain?
Who loads the bier of each passing year with ten hundred thousand slain?
Who blights the bloom of the earth today with the fiery breath of hell?
If the devil isn't and never was, won't somebody rise and tell?
Who dogs the steps of the toiling saint? Who digs the pits for his feet?
Who sows the tares in the fields of Time, wherever God sows the wheat?
The devil is voted not to be, and of course the thing is true;
But who is doing the terrible work which the devil alone should do?
We're told that he does not go about like a roaring lion now;
But whom shall we hold responsible for the everlasting row
To be heard in church and state today to earth's remotest bound
If the devil, by unanimous vote, is nowhere to be found?
Won't somebody step to the front forthwith, and make his bow and show,
How the frauds and crimes of a single day spring up.
We'd like to know.
The devil is voted not to be, and of course the devil's gone,
But simple people would like to know who carries his business on.

But we have a right to look for revelation and prophecy in this age of the world? See Acts 2:38, "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Here is a promise made to all, and in the 17th verse is another one to all flesh. That in the last days your sons and daughters shall prophesy, and any one that says they shall not be guilty of taking away from the words of this book. In 1st Corinthians, 12:28, we learn that God set in the church, first, apostles; second, prophets; and the 12th verse says the body is one; and in Colossians 1:18 it says the body is the church; then if the body is the church, and Paul says that the body, the church is one, not two or three hundred, then somebody has added all the rest, and they will come under condemnation. For the text says that whatsoever God doeth shall be forever, no man hath a right to add to it not even in churches or organizations. Now who is guilty of adding? let our enemies be judges.

And God set into that one body apostles, and what he doeth it shall be forever. No man hath a right to take them out of it, and if twelve apostles are not in the church today as they were when God set them there—living men—then somebody has taken them out, and he shall have taken from him his part in the holy city: who is guilty now of taking from the word of God? I told you in the start that I would prove those who blamed us for that crime, were the guilty ones, and I will prove that more and more as we proceed.

The 18th verse says that God set them in the body (not bodies,) as it pleased him. Now it it pleased God to set twelve live men in his church as apostles, and next prophets, and they were all live men, when and where did he ever tell man that he was displeased with his work now? and that they had finished their work, and therefore he would discharge them? only those who do not believe that God speaks to man in this age will make that claim, and if God will not, and does not speak to them, how do they know that God allowed them to take away from that which he said should be forever, and nothing can be taken from it? But those who take the right of adding to and subtracting, say that when the twelve apostles died, then they had no more use for them; but they forget that as one of them was killed, the vacancy was filled by another (because the office still remained) till we have the names of some eighteen or twenty apostles, but only twelve at a time. So you see that what God doeth it shall be forever, and that which has been is now, and the same organization of the church that has been in Christ's day is now, and forever shall be. For no man has right to change it by addition or subtraction. Now if any come to you and tell you that you do not need those officers nor the gifts, they are taking away from the word of God.

Paul says in Galatians 1:8,9, that if a man or an angel preach anything different from that which he preached, he shall be accursed, that is he shall have taken from him his part out of the holy city; you see it is a fearful thing to trifle with God's word. Now see what Paul says in 1st Cor. 14:1. "Follow after charity and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye prophesy." (5th verse.) "I would that ye all speak with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied." (37th verse.) "If any man think himself to be a prophet or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord. Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues." Are we spiritual? Can we have the Spirit of God, and deny these gifts? No, verily no. He that does is taking from the word of God, and he shall have taken from him his part of the tree of life. So you see again, those who accuse us of adding or subtracting from the work of God, are the guilty ones.

I read in John 3:5. "Jesus answered, Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." I quoted that to a man some time ago, and he said "well that was all right for the Jews, but it is not for us, we can be saved without being baptized." Another man said, that Jesus did not mean water, but he meant the word, that we must be born of the word and the Spirit; another said it meant the truth; another said it meant when we were born into this world. Jesus said it meant WATER. Now you can readily see that every one of those men were adding and diminishing from God's word, and yet they were ready to yell "deceivers, false prophets," when we said that God had revealed some new truth to us. Now who is the guilty one? let our enemies be judges.

I heard a man say once, that any one who believed that he had to be baptized before he could be saved, was mistaken and made water his God, for Jesus Christ saved us by faith. Now was he adding or subtracting from God's word? Let us see what Jesus says about that in Acts 9:6 "And he (Saul) trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, (only believe on Jesus?) No, he said, "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou MUST do." Now what did Ananias tell him that he MUST do? See Acts 22:16, for the answer. "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Is it possible that any can be so blind as not to see what Jesus meant when he told Saul what he must do to be saved and then turn around and say that they can be saved and not do what he had to do? He that does that, is guilty of both adding and subtracting from God's word.

A preacher in Boone told me that baptism was not essential to salvation, because Paul said that he was glad that he had baptized none. I asked him, did Paul say that he had baptized none? and the answer was, "yes." Well, I said I never saw that. And we got the Bible and turned to 1 Cor. 1:14, and read, "I thank God that I baptised none of you, but Crispus and Gaius." That does not say that he was glad that he baptized none. And in the sixteenth verse he said that he baptized some others. And I can show you that Paul baptized quite a number more. See Acts 16:14. There he baptized Lydia and her household. And in the twenty-eighth verse Paul baptized the jailor and his household; In Acts 18:8, he baptized still more, also Acts 19:5, he kept right on baptizing. Well when I got him into the corner with his adding and subtracting, he said, "Well my dinner must be ready, so I must go. Good by."

I read an account of a preacher in Chicago who took roses and pulled them to peices, and then took a handful and scattered them on some babies heads, and while so doing, he said, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost." I cannot find anywhere that Jesus said that ye shall sprinkle roses on the children, but he did say, "Except a man be born of (roses) no," water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Did that man in Chicago add and subtract you all know.

I read in Colossians 2:12. "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God who hath raised him from the dead." I can see no chance for any one to construe that to mean sprinkling roses without taking away a lot from God's word and then adding, and for that, they shall have added the plagues spoke of. I read some time ago a statement in a paper, That Elijah had baptized 225 in one day, (I mean Elijah number two of Chicago,) and he baptized them all three times, face forward. And some 'one asked him, "Do you claim that is the way that Christ baptized, three times face forward?" and Elijah said, "No sir, but Jesus did not have the proper mode."

What do you think, my dear hearers? Did that man add to or subtract from God's word. Does that not sound a little like blasphemy? A man knew better than Jesus, and Jesus said I came not to do mine own will but the will of him that sent me. Did Jesus not know that the Father wanted him to be buried in baptism? And yet we read in Matthew 3:16, "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him; and lo a voice from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Is it possible that Jesus did not know the right mode of baptism? And yet he did just what his father told him to do.

Too bad that Elijah was not there to tell him which was the right way. He should have told him, Lord, in this age of the world when we bury a man, we put him half way into the ground, then we bury the upper half three times, no difference about the lower half, but the upper half must be put in three times, then that is what we call the true mode of burying. Then you see that Jesus would not have made that mistake of being buried only once. Or some one ought to have been there and told him, O Jesus, why do you want to go into that water? why you will get your clothes wet, don't you know that you can be buried in baptism just as well by having a little water on your head? Or still easier, some roses scattered over your head. O, it is too bad that those wise men did not live in that age, so that they could have told God that he had no right to be well pleased with his dear Son, because the Son was not baptized right. Who is adding and subtracting now?

In John 8:29. Jesus said, "And he that sent me is with me; the Father hath not left me alone for I do always those things that please him." So then from that I get the idea that Jesus was baptized all right, when he was buried in water, for he says that he always does that which pleases his Father. So then that leaves a great many who do not that which pleases the Father. In the 31st verse, "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." I cannot see any license for any one in that to change Jesus' words and say that he did not have the right mode of baptism. For Jesus did not say "If you continue in so much of my word as suiteth you, then I will make you free," but it is just the same as he said in Matthew 28: 19,20, teach them "to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." No chance for any one to add or subtract there. Now who is guilty?

Another objector says that baptism is not essential, because John said, in his first Epistle, 1:7: "And the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from sin." Yes it does say so, but that does not say that we need not to be baptized. To whom is he talking? to those who had been baptized, and that is the way and the only way for us to apply the blood of Jesus. If you were in a deep hole in the ground, and no earthly chance for you to get out, and you would plead with those up on top of the ground to help you out, and some one would get a ladder just long enough to reach you so you could get out by it, and the ladder would be let down to you, and then you shout, "O, I am so happy now for I am out! and the ladder saved me, for I am out;" what good would that ladder do you unless you made use of it, you would have to apply yourself to the ladder, and apply the ladder to you. Just so with the blood of Jesus, we must apply the blood to us, and we must apply ourselves to the blood, by obeying all that Jesus commanded us to do; that is the way that his blood will cleanse us from all our sins.

Paul says in Hebrews 6:1,2, that the principles of the doctrine of Christ are faith, repentance, baptism—and you will notice that is in the plural, baptism by water and by the Spirit—the next is the laying on of hands. Has any man or men added to God's word or subtracted from it in that line? Paul says in 1st Timothy 6:3-7, "If any man teach otherwise and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness." So that gives nobody a chance to deviate from the doctrine of Christ, not even Elijah. Now what is Christ's doctrine about the laying on of hands? Acts 8:17. Here we have Philip baptizing men and women, and babies? No, no! Philip knew better than that, because he knew that they had to repent first, and babies cannot repent, therefore they cannot be baptized, therein somebody will have to answer for adding to God's word.

When Peter and John came down from Jerusalem they prayed for those who had been baptized that they might receive the Holy Ghost, and then got the Holy Ghost, just because the apostles prayed for them to have it? O no, no. That is the way they do who add or subtract from God's word. Now let us see what they did do. (verse 17.) "Then laid they their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost." That is God's way, that is Christ's way, as we will see in Acts 9:6, Jesus told him what he must do. Now see the 17th verse. "And Ananias went his way, and entered the house; and putting his hands on him said. 'Bro. Saul, the Lord even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.'" Can any one add enough to that so that they can slide around it? Mark you, Jesus commanded that. And he said "teach all things whatsoever I have commanded you." And Paul said that if man or angel preached any thing else he should be cursed; the angel of revelation said if any man added to it, or subtracted from it he would be guilty.

Now in Acts 19:6 we find out whether Paul complied with Christ's word and commandments. Paul remembered what Jesus told him the very first talk he had with him, when Jesus told him what he must do, that he must be baptized and have hands laid on him.

Now he comes to Ephesus and there he found some who belonged to a church and by talking with them, he learned that they had not obeyed the gospel; yet somebody had baptized them in the right mode by immersion, for that was the way that John baptized, but the man that baptized them did not have the authority from God, for Jesus says in John 3:34, "For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God." So that proves that God had not sent him, for he did not tell the people that they had to have hands laid on them for the gift of the Holy Ghost, yet Jesus told Saul that he must do that. For that reason Paul did not recognize their baptism, for it was done by one who did not teach the whole law; then when Paul had rebaptized them he laid his hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost. That is what Paul preached and did.

In Matthew 19:13, we have another use of the laying on of hands: "Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them and pray." Who does that now? Who has taken that away from the words of this book? That ordinance was in the church away back, as you will see in Genesis 48:14, where Jacob blessed the two lads. Why is that ordinance not in the churches today? It is in Christ's church for they have not added to God's word, neither have they taken a word from it. But just see what Paul says to Titus about that kind of preachers. (Titus 1:10): "For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision; whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake." So we see that there was money in the play, that is the reason they taught things that they ought not; and omitted some things that Christ taught, and taught things which he did not teach. Perhaps that may have something to do with that kind of work today, the money that is in it.

But when we turn to Paul's words in 2 Thess. 1:7,8, we learn that there is not much consolation for those who add and subtract from God's word, when Christ comes again. He says: "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." Not very consoling for those who teach only part of the gospel and leave out the rest.

In John 14:12, we read: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he also do." And again in Mark 16:18, Jesus says they that believe in him shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. Who has taken that from God's word now?

In James 5:14, we read that if anybody is sick they shall send for the best doctor and if he gets well, the doctor did well; but if he dies, you must not blame the doctor for it is not his fault—O, I believe I got that a little mixed; but you must not blame me, for my father was a preacher, and I must watch very closely that I do not get his old ideas mixed in, and preach according to my old creed. But let me read it from the book now. "Is any sick among you? (that is in His church, not in man made churches) let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick and the Lord shall raise him up." Has anybody taken that from God's word, or do they still practice it?

Well, says one: "Don't you folks ever call a doctor for the sick?" Yes sir, we do. We do not believe in making fools of ourselves; but first, if it is possible, call for the elders as God hath said. Then if they are not healed, do the next best; call for the very best doctor, and ask God to give him wisdom so that the sick one may get relief. I believe that God has given men wisdom to manufacture medicine out of the herbs which God planted in the earth for the use of man; why then should man be so foolish as to refuse to use them when it is necessary; and not let our sick suffer because of our foolishness.

But my hour is up, so I will close by quoting one more text found in Eccl. 12:13, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep his commandments: for this is the WHOLE DUTY OF MAN." And when we do that there is no chance or danger of anyone adding or subtracting from God's word.

May our God help us all to fear him with reverential fear so that we will keep all of his commandments, and be saved in his celestial kingdom.

DEPARTMENT OF Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service

MRS. KATE GOODWIN, EDITOR.
1416 W. Walnut St., Independence, Mo.

Valentine's Day was one time celebrated in England and Scotland, and in different parts of the continent by a peculiar and amusing custom. On the eve of St. Valentine a number of maids and bachelors would assemble together and inscribe upon little billets the names of an equal number of maids and bachelors of their acquaintance, throw the whole into a receptacle of some sort, and then draw them, lottery-wise—care being taken to draw one of the opposite sex. The person thus drawn became one's valentine.

These imaginary engagements, as may readily be supposed, often led to real ones; because one necessary consequence of them was, that, for a whole year; a bachelor remained bound to the service of his valentine, somewhat after the fashion of a medieval knight of romance to his lady love.

The connection of the custom with St. Valentine is purely accidental. In the legends of the saints of that name no trace of the practice peculiar to the 14th of February is found. It is supposed that the custom of putting the names of young women in a box from which they were drawn by the men was changed and given a religious aspect by the Christian clergy who substituted the names of saints for those of the women; and it is certainly a usage more or less widely extended in the Roman Catholic church to select, either on St. Valentine's Day or some other, a patron saint for the year, who is termed a Valentine.

But it is far more probable that the custom of choosing valentines is a relic of that nature—religion which was undoubtedly the primitive form of religion in north western Europe, as elsewhere; and that it sprang from a recognition of the peculiarity of the season. Hence in Bailey's Dictionary the following is given:—"About this time of year the birds choose their mates, and probably thence came the custom of choosing valentines."

TWO VALENTINES.

Just on the threshold, timidly, she stood,
Between fair girl and fairer womanhood,
A bride to be, sweet as a dream, though real
As warm, rich-flowing blood can ever feel;
The living, breathing pulse of inner life,
Coursing her veins, bringing the color life,
To glowing, vivid cheek and sparkling eye,
Veiled with a mist, that softens into modesty,
The sudden glint of piquancy, amid the various charms
That restfully with-holds from his eager waiting arms.
And from the stronghold—love—out on the sea of life
The morning fades; the maid is crowned Wife.
The flower has bloomed; and in the golden noon
A bud clings to the parent stem; the boon
Heaven-sent, fullness of fruitage brings; the joy
Of dainty little tasks,—the sweet employ
Of motherhood, lends a soft light and grace
To all her being; and raptures to her face.
Life's fairest crowning, this, earth's highest pleasure,
God's best creation; filling up the measure
Of happiness. To his enraptured gaze
In reverent wonder at the mystery, the maze
Of birth and life, this picture is far sweeter than the other
He breathes a prayer of praise and deep content;
And speaks the one word Mother.

THE ARROW AND THE SONG.

A PARODY.

Love shot an arrow into the air,
It lodged in the heart of a maiden, where
It shivered and bent and wounded sore,
No balm could be found for the maiden, more.

The maid shot a song into the air
It fell to the earth I know not where
But a youth, in passing, caught the lay,
And carried the song in his heart alive.

Not long afterward, in love's yoke
He found the arrow and the heart it broke,
And the living song, both lover and friend
Sways the life of the man to the journey's end.

Possibly the rebels in Mexico put new life into their fight because they had grown tired of being outclassed as soldiers by the suffragettes of London.

"After all, it is a very simple thing that I am trying to do—just to show the world a happy home. If I show to each friend a different phase of home life, there is no deception in it. A happy home is the only thing in the world that is really worth while."

"And the best thing in it," said her husband, "is the home missionary."

J. A. Jaques, Pres.

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT.

Notice is hereby given of the appointment of Elder Jesse Hardin to labor in Kirtland District at the conference year, the Presidency and Minister in Charge concurring in the appointment.
 Frederick M. Smith, Sec. First Presidency.
 R. C. Russell, Minister in Charge.
 Independence, Mo., February 12, 1913.

GENERAL CONFERENCE RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

The undersigned have been appointed to act as a reception committee to arrange for the entertainment of delegates and visitors who may be in attendance at the general conference.

If you expect to come and desire the service of the committee, write us early so we may know how many and who we will have to prepare for.

Assignments will be made in the order in which the applications are received, so do not wait till the last minute before you write.

At a recent meeting of the branch the price of board and lodging was fixed at $4.00 per week.

Send all applications to the secretary, and let us know just what places are wanted for. Don't say "my friend and I," we need to know who your friend is,—whether man, woman, or child.

Will you be here in time for the conventions?

Will you remain till conference closes?

Kindly observe these points when writing us and we will be better able to please you.

- C. F. Goode, chairman.
- C. I. Carpenter, Secretary,
- J. F. Garver,
- L. G. Holloway,
- Isaac Carlile,
- W. B. Paul,
- John Davis,
- O. E. Green
- A. O. White.

CORRECTIONS.

In issue of Feb. 6th, page 4, second column, under "Objections Answered," the last sentence of the second paragraph should have added the word "out," making it read "but shall be cast out." Also page 7, first column, third line from the top, the word "circuit" should be "limit."

REUNION NOTICE.

EASTERN AND CENTRAL MICHIGAN.—These districts will unite in holding a reunion June 13-22, at Port Huron, Mich. Please remember the date and place, and make your plans to attend. Due notice will be given as to price of meals, tents, etc.

Arthur Allen, Pres. Reunion Com.

TO THE QUORUM OF HIGH PRIESTS.

Greeting:—Dear Brethren, another conference year is fast drawing to a close, and it will be necessary to send in our annual reports to the quorum.

The rule of the quorum is, that reports should be in the hands of the secretary, Robert M. Elvin, Lamoni, Iowa, on or before March 10th. He is very particular to try to help you to report on time by sending blanks late enough so that you can fill them out immediately upon receipt of the same and mail to him so they will reach him by date mentioned.

Please to use figures in reporting, do not say, "preached many times," or "presided many times," etc., for the secretary cannot compute the term "many times" and give definite figures to the general conference in our quorum report.

We want our quorum work correctly represented, and if you neglect to report on time this cannot be done.

Please do not fail to report by March 10th.

Yours for better work,

Joseph A. Tanner, Pres.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 12, 1913.

DIED.

WHITING.—Elder W. W. Whiting died at Independence, Mo., Jan. 8, 1913. He was born April 6, 1838, at Charlottville, Ontario. In 1862 he was married to Miss Hannah Laughey, Coal Valley, Illinois, of which union were born ten children, seven of whom are living. He united with the church Dec. 6, 1872, at Beloit, Iowa, and ordained an elder Sept. 14, 1878, at Galland's Grove, Iowa, by Charles Derry. For about thirty years he labored as a missionary accompanied at times by his two daughters who assisted him in singing. In 1906 he removed to Independence from South Dakota. He was an active and faithful man in his work in the church and an upright honorable citizen wherever he lived. Services were at the stone church, Elders C. E. Harrington, W. A. Smith, M. H. Bond, W. H. Garrett, and E. L. Kelley taking part.

BALLINGER.—Sarah Ellen Ballinger died at Wesley Hospital, Kansas City, Sunday, Feb. 2d. She was born at E. Plainville, Ohio, Sept. 21, 1856, and was baptized Nov. 9, 1873, at Kingston, Mo., by W. T. Bozarth. She was married to Bro. N. B. Ballinger on Dec. 25th, 1873, and from this union eight children were born, four boys and four girls, six of whom are living. She had three brothers and three sisters who with her mother and seven grandchildren remain to mourn their loss. She with her husband came to Independence in 1885. She was an earnest, consistent, and faithful member of the church, a loving mother, and a good wife. Services at stone church, Independence, in charge of W. H. Garrett, sermon by G. E. Harrington.

COX.—At Salt Lake City, Jan. 17, 1913, John S. Cox. He was born in England, July 27, 1845, and came to this state in July, 1883. He has been a member of the Reorganization for years. He leaves, besides his children and grandchildren, an aged wife to mourn the loss. He had been sick about six months, but only took his bed about Christmas. Funeral in charge of A. M. Chase, interment in city cemetery. He died in hope of the "better resurrection."

COX.—Andrew J. Cox died at his residence, Independence, Mo., Jan. 13, 1913. Was born October 14, 1847, in Williamson Co., Illinois. Baptized May 30, 1871, at Howard City, Kansas, by Elder F. C. Warnky, confirmed by F. C. Warnky and W. S. Taylor. Ordained a priest July 2, 1875, at Little Sioux, Iowa, by Elder James Caffall. He came to Independence, Mo., Oct. 6, 1878. Funeral services at the church, sermon by Elder F. C. Warnky. His wife, three daughters, two sons, together with three sisters and two brothers and several grandchildren and one great grandchild are left to mourn their loss, as well as his many friends.

PRESCOTT.—Sr. Anna Prescott was born at O'Fallon, Ill., Sept. 20, 1883; died at Roslyn, Wash., Dec. 18th, being 29 years, and 2 months old. She leaves husband, three children, father, mother, one brother and three sisters, and a host of other relatives. She was a member of the church from childhood. Elder Wm. Johnson preached the sermon. The Pythian Sisters, and Rebecca having charge.

CRANDALL.—Bro. Lewis F. Crandall was born in Oneida, Co., N. Y., July, 1845; died at Langley, Wash., Jan. 1, 1913, being 67 years and 5 months old. Bro. Crandall was a consistent member of the church, being a man of few words, and one in whom could be placed the utmost confidence. The attendance at the funeral attested his social standing in the community. There is left to mourn, wife, three sons, and three daughters. He was buried by the Order of Masons, sermon by Elder Wm. Johnson.

HAWKS.—Abraham S. Hawks was born in Decatur, Ill., April 27, 1826; died at Plano, Ill., Jan. 27, 1913. Aged 86 years and 9 months. Bro. Hawks was a veteran having served in the 21st Regiment, Iowa Volunteer Infantry from June 19, 1862, till the close of the war. Bro. Hawks and his companion, Sr. Hawks, united with the church at Plano, Ill., in the year 1881, and both held their membership in the Plano Branch while they lived. Two sons, Mr. Lee Hawks and Mr. Jesse Hawks, grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends remain to cherish his memory and mourn his loss. His remains were laid to rest in the Plano cemetery, Sermon by Elder Chas. H. Burr.

JENNINGS.—Mona Leon Jennings, daughter of Bro. Joseph E. and Sr. Laura R. Jennings; born Jan. 28, 1912, died Jan. 28, 1913. Blessed by Elder J. C. Foss. A little bud, a tender plant, has been gathered with the little ones on the other side, thus to await the coming of its parents. Funeral conducted at Independence, Mo., by Elder George Jenkins.

ETZENHOUSER.—At Salt Lake City, Jan. 5, 1913, Julia Jeffs Etzenhouser. She was born in Missouri, Jan. 14, 1845. In her youth she married Abraham Jeffs and raised a large family to him. Bro. Jeffs died in this city, and in 1911 she married Bro. Etzenhouser, of Independence, Mo. Bro. Etzenhouser died within a year, and since that she has made her home with her children, dying at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Kennison. Funeral was in charge of A. M. Chase, As some of the family are in the Mormon Church, by their wish, Bishop Iverson, of the Second Ward was one of the speakers. Interment was in the city cemetery.

MARTIN.—Alfonzo T. Martin was born at Grand Round, Union Co., Oregon, Feb. 7, 1863, baptized eleven years ago at Santa Cruz, Calif., by Elder Jacob Smith; died Dec. 27, 1912, at Independence, Mo. He leaves a noble, saintly wife, six boys and three girls. He has gone to dwell with the two little ones that departed this life in their infancy. Funeral services in charge of H. W. Gould, sermon by Elder J. C. Foss. Interment in Mount Grove.

DAVIS.—Sr. Nettie E. Hartman-Davis was born June 15, 1860, at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, died at Seattle, Wash., January 1, 1913, being 52 years and 6 months of age, was married to Zenas F. Davis, March 10, 1890. She was baptized by Elder Willard Smith May 1, 1892, retaining membership until death. Sr. Davis was a patient sufferer, taken with that dreaded disease of cancer. In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.
When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address, and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. IS PROTESTANTISM DECLINING?

ALL THINGS GOVERNED BY LAW.

There is an eternal law which by its constant operation tends to show the reality of things. All things and all persons are tested by it, so that that which is will be made manifest sooner or later. It was this law of the determination of things that the Apostle Paul referred to in 1 Cor. 3:13, "Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." And again in Gal. 6:7, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Christ also calls attention to it, "There is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad."—Mark 4:22.

This law is universal and absolute in its work; nothing escapes, but everything whether true or false, good or bad, noble or ignoble, open or secret, is subject to its unceasing processes. Under this law governments have gone down, empires have fallen, and with them multitudes of religious and secular institutions. The good is tested with the bad and the same law which works for the elimination of the bad, also preserves the good. Christianity, with all that purports to be Christianity, is under the testing process today, and will remain so until it shall be thoroughly purified, and only that which is able to abide the test will remain to complete its work in the redemption of the human race free from the restraints and encumbrances of error.

GOOD AND BAD MINGLED.

That the pure principles of Christ have been largely buried in an accumulation of false tradition, erroneous creeds, human doctrines, and unwarranted practices, from the time of the dark ages, is admitted by numerous divines of the Protestant evangelical churches. The wickedness of Rome overshadowed the righteousness of the gospel of Christ and reduced it to the level of the lowest of human standards, but Rome has been tried and found wanting, hence the rise of Protestant churches, which under their founders sought to bring back the original purity of the gospel, though in doing so many of the evils and errors of Romanism were retained. But notwithstanding these Protestantism flourished and has reached a great magnitude.

EVIDENCES OF ERROR APPEAR.

With the passing of time evidences of the working of the law of determination in regard to Protestantism begin to appear, and its errors and weaknesses are being made manifest. Men and conditions both within and without the Protestant faith have wrought to force the issues involving the divinity of each principle of belief, each fact of history, and each work now being done under the various organizations until there has come in recent years a change of belief on many points of doctrine, necessitating a change of creed, form, and policy, which virtually is an admission of the previous existence of error. Protestantism is being tested, and whatever within it is divine will endure, but all that comes short of divinity must ultimately go down. Whether there is sufficient of the divine in it to preserve its institutional forms when the test shall be completed must be determined by the result.

STATEMENTS OF THEOLOGIANS.

The effect of the testing process is keenly felt and talked of by many leading minds. Frank Ilsley Paradise writes in the Harvard Theological Review October, 1908: "This great moral crisis, which is so acute within the church of Rome, is present in some degree within all bodies of organized evangelical Christianity." The Rev. John Josiah Munro, D. D., in The Presbyterian for September, 1912, says, "That the church in our day is facing grave problems is what many keen thinkers believe to be true." The Rev. T. S. Childs, D. D., writing under the topic "Is the Church Approaching a Crisis?" in the Presbyterian for January 29, 1913, says: "There are those whose numbers and intelligence cannot be ignored, who believe that the church is approaching, if she has not already entered upon the era of the great final apostasy."

WORLD'S NEEDS NOT BEING MET.

Some of the conditions that are so apparent are also mentioned by these and other writers. William Lyman Phelps, professor of English in Yale University, says: "The main difficulty with the church today is that the people in the pews do not have the gospel preached to them. The hungry sheep look up and are not fed. . . . The Protestant clergy are afraid to preach Christianity, partly because they do not believe it and partly because they are afraid it won't 'draw.'" Mr. Paradise, previously quoted also says: "To enter a gathering of one of their councils is to pass into an unfamiliar atmosphere. . . . It seems not to meet face to face the existing conditions of life." "Its immense services to humanity are justly valued; yet its power of moral leadership is steadily slipping from its grasp. . . . the mighty stream of human activity passes it by."

PROTESTANTISM IN THE WAY OF PROGRESS.

The creedal restraints and other elements of spiritual bondage found in some proportion in both Catholicism and Protestantism are touched upon by the same writer in the following: "The children of democracy have been fed on the food of liberty; and liberty has meant that there shall be no obstruction in the path of development, nor hindrance to the fullest attainment of personal right. It has meant in the higher sphere of intelligence, that the pursuit of knowledge and understanding shall break through all barriers of tradition in its way toward the goal. . . . Between the world which exalts intellectual integrity into a high moral ideal, and an institution which demands of its disciples either indirectness or limitation of thought there can be no abiding union." "As a whole the church remains strangely detached from the vital interests of the masses, as well as from the controlling spirit of the intellectual world."

Other evidences of the decline of Protestantism are given by the various writers, and include, growth of unbelief in the Bible, heretical doctrines in the pulpit, infidel teachings in the colleges and theological seminaries, rejection of the essential truths of Christianity, general desecration of the Lord's day even by Christians, putting charitable work before the spiritual, the astounding growth of systems like Eddyism and Mormonism, corrupt politics in which church members participate, and the growth of socialism. The Rev. Munro further says: "In closing, let me say it is the preaching of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ that is needed today. And it is the only thing that can save our modern American cities from the doom that befell Rome in the year 476 A. D. This is the Church's only solvent;" and Mr. Paradise continues: "The age of the prophet is upon us—the prophet who shall understand the aspirations, the hopes, and the discontents of the time—and whose clear spiritual eyes shall see the revealed purpose of God in this seething and flowing life."

THE AGE OF THE PROPHET.

Protestantism may be unaware that the age of the prophet has already come, not the prophet who sees with intellectual eyes only, but a prophet who, like the prophets of old, sees by the divine light of the Holy Spirit. The gospel of Jesus Christ has again been brought forth out of the debris of dead forms, and shaken from its accumulation of tradition and error, is again declared to men as the means of salvation both in this world and in the world to come. True, it has not been endorsed by the masses—it never was. Its truth has not been demonstrated by men of learning—it never has been, nor can it be.

The doctrine of the immaculate conception is generally discarded now because men have been trying to demonstrate it by scientific methods and have failed, but Paul expressed the principle involved when he said: "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghost." It is a fact to be revealed from heaven, not demonstrated by human wisdom. It is the same with other gospel principles. Think of the scientist attempting to demonstrate the forgiveness of sins in baptism. Of course he would fail but does such failure destroy the fact of such forgiveness coming to one who thus complies with the law of Christ? Or think of one trying to demonstrate the baptism of the Holy Ghost or miracles by scientific methods. It could not be done, but the fact of such baptism could not be removed from the consciousness of those who had received it, nor can the testimonies of miracles be discredited.

The new prophet with the old gospel has restored these living principles and brought them within the experience of thousands of souls, whose faith is based upon the facts of Christianity as revealed to them by the Holy Ghost, rather than upon uncertain tradition, or upon the demonstrations of men.

The Church of Jesus Christ is subject to the law of determination equally with all others. It must be tested; it will be tested, and whatsoever may have been brought into it by human hands which is not after God's order will sooner or later be eliminated, and only that which is divine will remain. Each member and each minister should so work that his contributions of service shall add to the divine structure the things which will endure every test.

The sixteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States was recently ratified by the required number of states and thus becomes a part of the constitutional law. It reads:

"The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States and without regard to any census or enumeration."

This amendment gives Congress power to pass laws taxing incomes, and which will place the burden of taxation upon men of means in proportion to their ability to pay.

As early as 1831 Joseph Smith taught that the burdens of public expense should be distributed in proportion to men's ability to pay, and it has been a rule of the church to the present time, and now after eighty-two years the nation has accepted that principle and made it a part of the constitutional law. Surely Joseph Smith and the Latter Day Saints who have truly followed his principles, have not been behind the times.

The Kenyon-Shepherd bill forbidding interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors into prohibition territory has passed both houses of Congress, and the president is fully expected to sign it, thus making it a law. We hope to see this enforced, for to allow shipments of liquor where the people have declared themselves against it is opposed to the principles of democracy. The majority should rule.

Following soon after the conviction and imprisonment of thirty-three labor union men for conspiracy comes the conviction of twenty-nine business men who were officers and employees of the National Cash Register Company for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. A jail sentence with fine was affixed in each case. An appeal is being sought. Wealthy malefactors should be granted no favors which are not accorded to their poorer brethren, but all should be held to be equal before the law.

We call attention of the saints and elders to the kind offer made by a friend of the church, Mr. E. Stafford of this city, who will send the ENSIGN to interested non-members for three months free. Send him the names of your outside friends.

The Madero government in Mexico has been overthrown and Gen. Huerta has been made provisional president until an election can be had, and now, as one editor put it many months ago, "Peace is raging in Mexico."

We are in receipt of a neatly printed announcement and program of the "Ground Breaking," for the new chapel of the Beacon Light Mission, Philadelphia, which was held Sunday, Feb. 16th, with Elders H. O. Smith of Fall River, Mass., W. E. LaRue of Brooklyn, and W. W. Smith, John Zimmerman, A. D. Angus, and E. B. Hull of Philadelphia, participating in the exercises. Elder Hull has been in charge of this mission for some months and it has outgrown its present quarters. The building with lot is to cost $20,000. Evangelistic services are also being held at the Saints' Church, with Elder H. O. Smith as the principal speaker; full attendance and good interest. See Elder Hull's letter in this issue.

The North Philadelphia Institute held its mid-winter lecture and opening exercises of the spring term on Monday evening, Feb. 17th at the Saints' Church, the lecture being given by Dr. Jesse D. Burks, Director Bureau of Municipal Research. The institute has a faculty of seventeen, with classes in history, book-keeping and rapid calculation, stenography, arithmetic, English, weave formation and design, millinery, dressmaking, embroidery, gymnastics, sociology, with lessons on piano, violin, and in vocal.

We are informed that eleven have been baptized at Joplin during the meetings following the Curtis-Carlin debate.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

Independence and vicinity received a rain last Thursday and Friday which falling upon the cold earth covered everything with a heavy coating of ice. Fortunately it ceased before extensive damage was done to trees and wires, etc.

Sunday was a day of excellent services at the stone church though the attendance was lighter than usual on account of falling snow. The Sunday school had a profitable session and was favored with a solo upon the euphonium by Bro. J. A. Robinson's wife playing the piano accompaniment. The orchestra under the leadership of Bro. Arthur H. Mills is a regular feature of the Sunday school and renders efficient service. The use of instruments in the gatherings of saints is according to the divine instruction given many years ago to "use therein instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct."

The morning sermon was by Bishop Bullard, and dealt with the duty of the saints applying to temporal things. It was well received and cannot fail to accomplish good. At this service Bro. Albert Hoxie, Jr., rendered a violin solo in the place of the usual organ voluntary with uplifting effect.

The afternoon prayer service was the most spiritual and active of any held for some time. The outward spiritual gifts were manifested through several to the edification and encouragement of the saints. Elder J. D. Shower who has recently returned from the missionary field, spoke in the evening, his subject being "The Resurrection."

The united choirs of the two Independence and Central K. C. branches held a rehearsal on Saturday evening and another at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, under the direction of Bro. A. N. Hoxie, Jr., general church chorister. Ninety-five singers took part Sunday afternoon. The Independence choir under the leadership of Sr. Audientia Anderson, the South Side choir under the leadership of Bro. E. S. Losey, and the Central church choir in charge of Sr. Amy Wining, have been doing excellent work in their individual capacity. Bro. Hoxie reports the general choir movement to be growing.

The priesthood held its monthly meeting on Monday evening, and after the opening exercises divided into quorums to discuss various questions relative to the work of each. On the third Monday of next month the priesthood will meet in a united assembly to consider matters of general importance.

Sr. Samuel Wyatt died at her home near the sanitarium on Wednesday afternoon, the 20th, dropsy being the cause of death. We also report the death of Bro. J. C. Coleman living near Mt. Washington, on Saturday last.

A church directory of Kansas City has been prepared including the churches of the two cities. Eleven branches of the Reorganized Church are listed in it, with lists of the church buildings, time of services, and other essential items, with items of interest relating to each church up to one hundred words.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Notes have not been written the past month because of a severe attack of la grippe, but now try to take up the work again.

One of the pleasant things to write of is that on Sunday, February 16, a branch was organized of saints living in Bloomington Township, those residing two to five miles northwest of Lamoni. The chapel recently built by our people is about five miles from town. For years previous our ministers have used the Center school-house; also a Sunday-school was a lively part of the work. Bro. John Smith the stake president, was chosen as presiding elder, Bro. Vaughn C. Bailey as presiding priest and Bro. James Martin, senior, Isaac Monroe as excellent priests. Bro. J. W. Vail as teacher and Bro. E. R. Outhouse as deacon. Sr. Ida Monroe is branch clerk, Sr. Edith Monroe is organist, Sr. Mary Mann is chorister. Bro. Fred Ford member of library board. Total enrollment 61 members.

Bro. J. F. Garver and R. S. Salyards of the stake presidency have been busy in making protracted efforts at various places, the former being now at Lone Rock Branch, where he and Bro L. G. Holloway have continued many nights. Three were baptized last week by Bro. Garver. Before that he baptized a number during his effort at Graceland Branch, north of Lucas. Bro. Salyards has been holding forth each night at Evergreen Branch. Bro. W. P. Robinson speaking one night in his stead. No doubt prospects are for good result.

During three Sundays the brethren accompanying in town and country were R. V. Hopkins, Albert Carmichael, W. P. Robinson, L. B. Moore, Earl Hall, Eli Hayer, H. A. Stebbins, Frank Kaestner, W. E. Shakespear, Joseph Roberts, D. C. White, C. J. Peters, R. M. Elvin, and James Martin.

The going of Bro. Lewis Gaultier may be called a sad thing, yet it was a happy release for a man in his ninety-sixth year who had suffered so long.

His obituary will be found in the regular column. He had lived there thirty years and proven his integrity. Nearly seventy years since he accepted the latter day message and was baptized.

In place of the regular sermon on yesterday morning the branch officers occupied the time. Bro. J. W. Barr, presiding priest, could not be present, but the presiding elder, Bro. John Smith, and the teacher and deacon, Bro. John Weedmerk and Herbert Barto, spoke to the saints upon the duties they owe to God and the church and to each other. There appeared to be a general good feeling on the part of the speakers and the congregation.

The evening sermon was by Bro. F. M. Weld, and at the homes, Bro. F. M. McDonald and John Wahlstrom occupied. Bro. G. R. Wells was at Bloomington chapel, morning and night and Edward Harp and Eli Hayer at Andover. The work at Lone Rock and Evergreen I have already noted.

While la grippe has hurt many during the past month no one has died from its effects.

ALFRED.

Feb., 24.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Our prospective new openings have wonderfully materialized. Bro. J. D. Stead as an energetic seventy has succeeded in making two new openings in Tehama Co. at one of which he baptized two and blessed a child—and was making an effort at a third place. This opening was brought about by a request from Sr. Nellie Humes a young maiden for an elder to come, to which Bro. Stead responded. We would love to hear from other isolated saints where meetings might be held.

The San Francisco Branch has added materially to its official strength by the ordination of Bro. Elmer Hartsough, Kenneth Richmond, and Emery Parks to the office of priest and Bro. Alma Saxe to the office of deacon. These are all new members of the priesthood except Bro. Kenneth Richmond who held the office of deacon. The ordaining was performed by Bro. J. A. Saxe, G. S. Lincoln, H. D. Simpson and C. A. Parkin—a very spiritual session was enjoyed the Spirit bearing witness to the call.

Bro. W. H. Kelley preached the evening sermon in Oakland on the 9th and on the 12th started for his home in the east intending to stop for a short rest in Nebraska. He was cheerful though not in perfect health.

On the 9th in the city Bro. C. A. Parkin preached the morning sermon followed in the evening by Bro. G. S. Lincoln—who preached the morning sermon in Oakland.

Bro. G. J. Waller arrived from Honolulu on the 12th and preached the Sunday morning sermon in Oakland to the edifying of the saints. Though busily engaged in business affairs and delving somewhat into the political affairs of the government, yet he never forgets to seek "first to build up the kingdom"—showing by his works he loves the church best of all.

We were called recently to Santa Cruz to attend the funeral of Sr. Clara Merrill who passed away after a lingering and painful illness. The high respect she was held in was shown by the many visible tokens at the funeral. The singing was beautifully rendered by two sisters members of the Congregational choir with which Clara sang before her sickness.

We have quite a visitation of troublesome affliction and it was thought best to appoint a day of fasting and prayer with arrangement for administration at 8 o'clock. So Tuesday the 18th was set aside. Thus far some remarkable results have occurred; yet we have not received in fullness the blessings sought, but are trustful.

J. M. Terry.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Is remission of sins the purpose of the sacrament?

The Scriptures do not directly teach that the sacrament is for the remission of sins, though it is probable that forgiveness is one of the conditions attending or resulting from a proper observance of that ceremony. To partake worthily requires repentance if sin has been committed, a willingness to keep the commandments, and to bear the name of Christ, which constitutes a renewal of the covenant made in baptism. All these point to forgiveness as being associated with the sacrament.

Did Judas partake of the sacrament? See Matt. 26.

The several accounts of the supper as given in Matt. 26:26-30, Mark 14:17-26, Luke 22:14-23, and John 13:1-30, seem to indicate that Judas was with Christ and the other apostles until after the passing of the bread and wine, and we discover no statement which would imply otherwise.

Did Christ's spirit go and preach to the spirits in prison, or did he go in body after the resurrection?

The passages touching upon this point in 1 Pet. 3:18-20, and Doctrine and Covenants 76:6, do not make it clear whether Christ's visit to the spirit prison was while his body lay in the tomb or after his resurrection. The former view is the one most generally held.

Cain's mark was blackness of the skin; found in Genesis 7:10, Inspired Version.

This statement comes from a brother in reply to our answer to the question "What was the mark placed upon Cain for killing his brother Abel?" (See Round Table for Jan. 30th). Gen. 5:19-26, Inspired Version shows that Cain was cursed, and that the earth should not yield her strength, and that he should be a fugitive and vagabond in the earth, because of the killing of his brother. When he complained that his punishment was more than he could bear and that men would kill him, the Lord said he set a mark upon Cain "lest any finding him should kill him." The mark was not a curse but a blessing for the saving of his life. Long after this another son was born to Adam and Eve named Seth. The grandson of Seth was named Cainan, a good man, who settled with his father in a land of promise which they called Cainan where they grew into a great people. Enoch was the great-grandson of Cainan and became a prophet, crying repentance to the people who were by this time becoming extremely wicked. In a vision Enoch saw wars arise between the people of Cainan and the people of Shum, and also saw that the people of Cainan divided and the Lord cursed their land. "And there was a blackness came upon all the children of Cainan that they were despised among all people." Enoch commenced his work not less than 557 years after the birth of Seth so that it was probably not less than 600 years or more after Cain was cursed that this vision of blackness coming upon the people of Cainan was given to Enoch. A careful reading of Chapters 5, 6, 7, Inspired Version will convince anyone that the blackness referred to in 7:10, came hundreds of years later and had no connection whatever to Cain or his descendants. We should be careful not to arrive at conclusions without proper evidence. There is no scriptural evidence that Cain or his posterity were cursed with blackness.

Where will I find the following passage? "God willeth not the death of any, but rather that they would turn and live."

Ezek. 33:11. It reads: "I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live." Read the rest of the verse, and also Ezek. 18:23,32.

Please explain Daniel 11:44,45. Is that prophecy having its fulfillment in the present Balkan-Turkish war?

We have seen no interpretation of this passage which is satisfactory, and any we might offer would be but speculative like others. Some of the conditions seem to fit the present situation in Turkey, but until all the conditions of the prophecy fit, it would be unsafe to make the application to that nation.

CORRESPONDENCE

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Feb. 9.

Dear Ensign:—The year 1913 finds the Third St. Joseph Branch still strong in the faith, though a dark cloud has threatened our peace to destroy; and did to quote an extent, and now we are looking for the silver lining, as there must be one not far ahead. It seems the darker the cloud, the greater the blessing for those who love and serve the Lord under any and all circumstances. And I believe we as a branch feel determined to cultivate that beautiful gift of charity for one another, and likewise a forgiving spirit. The Scriptures say though we perform many kind and good deeds and have not charity, it profiteth us nothing. So we can see how essential it is to cultivate this priceless gift.

I believe we should all strive to learn by heart the definition in full of the word charity, and we will be surprised if we strive to put our knowledge into practice, what a scope of territory this word takes in. We have been benefited of late by elevating and inspiring sermons through Bro. I. N. Roberts, John Davis, David Powell, all good material from Steuartsville, which place we love so well, for it was there the gospel overcame us and brought light upon our pathway.

Our worthy president has done well, with the rest of the branch officers, who have done all that lay in their power for the upbuilding of the work here. We heretofore introduced ourselves as the Third St. Joseph Branch, which name we are proud to bear. Some who labored with us were formerly known as The Happy Mission at one time, later were called Zion's Hope Mission. But three years ago (Feb. 22d) our branch was organized, and we are now a branch, (if you would bear with me) like one large family. The membership is about 130. The building is well filled at the prayer services as well as preaching, which I think speaks well as to the spiritual condition of the branch.

A social was given recently by the sisters and well patronized by those of the First Branch; come again brothers and sisters, many times we have a feast of a different kind, that might also suit the appetite. Since the organization of the branch from twelve to fifteen families have removed to this part of the city, that years ago was given Bro. J. M. Terry to know that the work was to be founded here, and it truly has been verified for the same evidence has been given to others even while in the stand, Bro. F. C. Keck stopped preaching, and said by the Spirit, that there was a great work to be done here and that our numbers would increase. Bro. David Powell, while in conversation with the writer, said it was revealed to him that ere long many additions to our number would be had, and even our little church would have to be enlarged. This truly was encouraging to me for there are those in whom I am deeply interested, nothing for them to lose but all for them to gain.

The Sunday school is thriving, as Sr. Jones the superintendent is fully qualified for her duty in that line as well as Religio, in which both are her delight. Her daughter Ora's work is well worthy of commendation also. Ever at her post as a true saint should be.

The Woman's Auxiliary has also been organized here. The meetings are very interesting, but as yet not many are sufficiently interested to attend regularly. Hope to see the work in this auxiliary prosper, for indeed the superintendent, Sr. Ora Liggett tries to make it a success, and deserves our support.

Our business meeting was announced for next Saturday evening and hope regardless of all personalities that the very best material of the branch may be selected to carry on this great work in which we are engaged. This morning six of our priesthood were called upon by our president, each for a ten minute talk. All responded cheerfully and were blessed in their efforts in saying that which was edifying. Bro. Burns and wife come up from Atchison often in their car, when the roads are good. They are always a strength to us for they are real live saints.

In bonds,
Sr. Phoebe E. Woodsides.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Jan. 24.

Editor Ensign—I have been taking your paper for quite awhile. I am very glad that I have the pleasure of reading over it. The most interesting part of it to me are the various letters from over the missionary field. It makes me feel happy to read how the saints are gaining elsewhere.

I am now living here in Trinidad, Colo., and am very happy to say that our little branch is alive in the good work. The members are mostly out away from town and there are only a few close enough to take part in our meetings.

We have a deacon so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he cannot get out of bed only when he has someone to assist him. Please pray for him all who read this.

Notwithstanding the few saints here we have a very nice Religio. Bro. H. W. Berry our branch president is laboring diligently to push on the good work. We are also glad that Mrs. Nora Hammond and Emma Jensen are diligent workers for the advancement of the branch.

The path before us now looks clear. The Lord has recently made it known to a brother to not leave Trinidad, but to stay and perform the work he had for him to do here. With love and best wishes to all the saints, I will close.

Your brother in the love,
Robert E. Conajly.

BERRYDALE, Fla., Feb. 3, 1913.

Editor Ensign—it may be unwise to attempt to write for publication, when one has nothing of special importance to say; but, if some of us did not do that, we would seldom write, if we wrote at all.

At present writing, I am in the "Sunny South," and am trying to keep busy, telling the gospel story; and, so far, I have succeeded in keeping at work, most of the time. And, in my effort, I have been blessed, cheered, and strengthened by the Spirit of the Master. My work has been confined to the branches, so far, as advised by the one in charge; hence my preaching has been mostly to the saints. Have preached at McKenzie, Ala., both in town and at the saint's church, three miles from town. Found good saints there, alive to the interests of the work. Was very favorably impressed with the attitude of the young people towards the work. They have some promising young men and women in the church there: some of them are married and some are single. I expect to hear some good report from them in the future. From McKenzie, I came to Dixonville, Ala., and preached one week for the saints. Found good saints there, also, and a lively band of young people pushing the interests of the Sunday-school and Religio. The work done here in past years, by some of our leading Sunday school and Religio workers, is bearing gospel fruit in all these branches.

At Berrydale there are also a goodly number of intelligent earnest looking young people who seem to be alive to the interests of the work; but they are greatly handicapped in their efforts, living so far from the church—they don't have stone roads to the church, either. But they seem to make up, in pluck and energy, what is lacking in physical conveniences; hence I shall look for them to do a good work for the Master.

Everywhere I have been, I have been kindly received by the saints, both old and young, and have been made to feel at home among them. I feel, too, that my work has not been altogether in vain. How much good has been done, I know not; but I have tried to do my duty, and to do it with an eye single to the glory of God. The longer I live, and the longer I labor in this great work, the more clearly I see the necessity of the ministry of the church being wholly consecrated to the work. "For without me, ye can do nothing," is just as true now as when it was uttered by the Master.

Shall leave here for Botta, Fla., the last of this week if all goes well. My field address is McKenzie, Alabama.

Yours in the fight for Zion's Redemption.
Isaac M. Smith.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 6.

Dear Ensign:—It has been quite a long time since I wrote a letter to be published in the columns of the ENSIGN, but it has not been because I had lost interest in the gospel work or become idle as a missionary in the mission field, but up to December 30, 1912, I had labored as earnestly and devotedly as strength of body and mind would allow me to for eighteen years, and finally am forced to stop for awhile, and am now a patient in our sanitarium, fondly hoping, earnestly praying, and my main object in writing this letter is that all who are interested in missionary work, and for the work's sake, will remember me in your prayers that I may have a speedy recovery, and that I may be enabled with God's blessings to patiently and meekly endure whatever pain or suffering I may have to pass through in order to get the relief I am seeking for here, that I may just as soon as possible be out in the mission field, a place where I have during the past years learned to love to labor; and more than this I want to assure all of I can that I have, am, and expect to always be found trying to live worthy of your confidence, faith and prayers.

Many times in the past years I have asked for the prayers of the saints, and many times has temporary relief come to me for a season for which I feel indeed very grateful.

Since coming here worn out as I was to a great extent from suffering and over work at times I have been very nervous and weak but through repeated administrations I am getting much better, so that while I am propped up in bed I can read and write which of itself is a great pleasure to me.

Many have sent me very encouraging letters after they have seen the notice of my being here in the ENSIGN, for which I am indeed grateful though I may not be able to answer them all.

You may be assured that I am in no way discouraged, but very much the opposite, I can think over and see many, many encouraging features in the gospel to not only encourage but they appear delightful to contemplate. And though I am bodily, sorely afflicted, I am glad that I am numbered with the people of God, have found and been a partaker of the grand blessings connected with the restored old Jerusalem gospel, and that my hopes in it of eternal life grow brighter as the years come and go.

I am made more glad all the time that not only myself but all others who come in contact with this gospel from the various walks of life and obey it, not only in obedience to its outward ordinances but who try to apply every pure principle in their every day life and conduct, find in the gospel what is claimed by inspired writers what it really is: "The power of God unto salvation;" so that besetting sins are subdued and overcome, our weaknesses are changed to works of righteousness.

We are caused to know because of this righteous transformation from sin to living and doing right, that God is indeed our Father and our Friend, and we are his sons and daughters. Hence we can and do rejoice in knowing all of this.

May God continue to bless all his righteous Israel, is, and shall continue to be, our humble prayer and desire.

Elder F. L. Sawley.

A letter from the postmaster at Independence, Mississippi, to the postmaster at Independence, Mo., has been handed by the latter to the business manager, Bro. W. H. Deam, to which the saints should give heed. The letter says:

"Enclosed you will find advice of Canadian M. O. which must have been intended for your office. We receive one of these nearly every day. This office is not international and we cannot use these orders. This payee E. L. Kelley, and Ensign Publishing House, should do something to stop this trouble."

It is probable that the difficulty arises from the unfamiliarity of some with the abbreviation of the name Missouri, writing it Mis. or Miss. which applies to Mississippi. Missouri should be written in full, or the usual abbreviation Mo. Care should be taken in sending money that all names and addresses be plainly written. The name of Ensign Publishing House has been spelled in over twenty-five different ways on the letters and orders received, the most distressing of all being a money order made out to "The Insane Publishing Co.;" and of course we had to answer to that name to get the order cashed, but otherwise we don't admit the charge.

BEACON LIGHT CHAPEL.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

Ground was broken for the second Philadelphia church on Sunday afternoon, February 16th at four o'clock. The exercise was in charge of District president A. D. Angus and his associates. Special hymns were sung and music by the orchestra from the Saints' church. H. O. Smith of Fall River, Mass., offered the invocation. W. E. LaRue of Brooklyn, N. Y. delivered an appropriate address, followed by the breaking of ground by Bishop John Zimmermann; W. W. Smith made the dedicatory prayer and benediction by E. B. Hull.

This new church is the result of an effort made by the Philadelphia, Pa. Saints, beginning in February, 1911. At this time two members of the branch, namely O. T. Christy and Ethna Wilson visited the Beacon Light Mission in a section of the city called Kensington; this mission was owned and run by two ladies, they not having a regular preacher, invited our people to speak for them. Wm. Anderson and W. W. Smith willingly responded and preached for them every Sunday evening until May 21, 1911, when the branch assumed the entire control, by renting the building and soon after buying the furniture. U. W. Green, missionary in charge desiring to help the Philadelphia saints in this special effort sent E. B. Hull there to labor in this mission. Regular services were inaugurated, thousands of tracts and pamphlets scattered throughout the locality, a Sunday school established, which now has an enrollment of 150, with an average attendance of over one hundred. Preaching and prayer services are well attended; a children's service is held every Sunday evening at 6:30, this service has been a success, about 75 at every session, the children are taught facts by object lessons, good habit talks, Bible stories etc.

On December 23, 1912, the Saints of Philadelphia, agreed to buy ground and build a church to house the mission, for their present quarters are entirely too small to accommodate those that desire to attend. A suitable piece of ground, (size 72 wide by 53 deep) was secured on E street, above Indiana Ave., facing one of the city parks. The new building will be constructed of Port deposit granite and brick, the main room being 40 wide and 52 deep, outside of the basement and upper room will be a tower which includes the main entrance to building with heating plant underneath, the toilet rooms and coal pocket is also outside of the main rooms. The entire structure, including the ground will cost about $20,000. It is expected to have the basement finished some time in April, the upper story will be finished when the crowds attending the services warrant the full completion of the building. Present indications are that the Beacon Light Chapel will grow to be a factor for good in the neighborhood, gathering in the honest in heart and spreading the tidings of great joy to all people who are hungering and thirsting for God's truth.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

SCRIPTURAL TIME.

J. F. GUNSOLLEY.

References are "Inspired Version," Book of Mormon authorized edition, and Doctrine and Covenants. Not all Scripture referring to time will be cited, but enough of the more important, and to the point, to give approximate dates. It will be discovered as we proceed, that there are a few events not definitely reorded so as to arrive at dates with absolute accuracy. The record will be examined as it is, and deductions made accordingly.

Book of Mormon page 448 par. 38, and the latter part—"All is as one day, with God; and time only is measured unto man." 2 Peter 3:8; "But concerning the coming of the Lord, beloved, I would not have you ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." Gen. 2:4 reads as "the day" in which the creation was completed.

The thought gathered is a thousand years as man counts time is only one day with God, and one day with God is as a thousand years with man. D. and C. 22. "God spake unto Moses, saying, Behold I am the Lord God Almighty, and endless is my name, for I am without beginning of days or end, and is not this endless? And behold, thou art my son, therefore look, and I will shew thee the workmanship of mine hands, but not all; for my works are without end, and also my words, for they never cease; wherefore, no man can behold all my works except he behold all my glory; and no can behold all my glory, and afterwards remain in the flesh, on the earth. . . . and now, behold, this one thing I show unto thee, Moses, my son; for thou art in the world, and now I show it unto thee. And it came to pass, that Moses looked and beheld the world upon which he was created. And the end thereof, and all the children of men, which are, and which were created; of the same he greatly marveled, and wondered. . . . And worlds without number have I created, and I also created them for mine own purpose; . . . But only an account of this earth, and the inhabitants thereof, give I unto you. The heavens, they are many and can not be numbered unto man, but they are numbered unto me, . . . and as one earth shall pass away, and the heavens thereof, even so shall another come; . . . I will speak unto you concerning this earth upon which you stand; and you shall write the things which I shall speak." Gen. 1, "The Lord spake unto Moses saying, Behold, I reveal unto you concerning this heaven and this earth; write the words which I speak. Yea, in the beginning I created the heaven, and the earth upon which thou standest."

The chapter continues with an account of the creation of the earth, etc., saying—"The evening and the morning were the first day" up to and including the sixth day. Gen. 2. "Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them, And on the seventh day, I, God, ended my work. . . . and I rested on the seventh day from all my work; . . . and I, God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it, because that in it I had rested from all my work."

The thought gathered from the foregoing is—The Bible contains an account of the creation of this earth and the inhabitants thereof, and it took God, six days and part of the seventh to finish his work concerning this earth. Moses was commanded to write an account of the creation as revealed unto him. Adam was taught to write and was commanded to keep a record. In the records made by Adam, Moses and others, is an account of time made in such a way that it is some work to search out and classify so as to get items covering all the time. Such items are in the Bible and a compilation is submitted herewith, which will be helpful to consult as we proceed.

CHRONOLOGY.

Table of Bible Chronology (B.C.) listing figures from Adam to Israel, including birth and death dates and durations of reigns.

Table of Bible Chronology (B.C.) listing figures from Israelites to Zedekiah, including birth and death dates and durations of reigns.

The first man of all men was called Adam, and he was 130 years old at birth of Seth, who was 105 at birth of Enos who was 90 at birth of Canaan, who was 74 at birth of son. Mahalaleh 65, Jared 162, Enoch 65, Methusaleh 187, Lamech 182 at birth of Noah.

In Gen. 7:85 it figures out that Noah was 492 years old at birth of Shem, but to use these figures it will make Methusaleh living after the flood, and as the account says only eight souls were saved in the ark it will be necessary to figure some way to harmonize the story. Gen. 8:36, reads that the flood was in the 600th year of Noah's age. Verse 55 says "in the 601st year of Noah's age were the waters dried up. Gen. 11:7, "Shem being an hundred years old, begat Arphaxad two years after the flood." Two years after the flood with the one year of the flood, taken from the age of Shem would make the age of Shem 97 at the beginning of the flood. The flood began in the 600th year of Noah. So that the age of Shem, 97, taken from age of Noah, 600, at beginning of flood would make Noah 503 years old at birth of Shem. Which figuring also gives Methusaleh the age of 969, he living up to time of the flood.

Shem was 100 years old at birth of Arphaxad. Luke 3:36 in giving a genealogy of Christ say that Cainan was the son of Arphaxad, while the old Testament says nothing about Cainan, and Luke does not give his age.

Presuming that Luke knew what he was writing about it would be but reasonable to suppose that the age of Cainan at birth of son would be on an average with the others so the average is put at 30. Arphaxad 35, Cainan 30, (average) Salah 30, Heber 34, Peleg 30, Reu 32, Serug 29, Nahor 29, Terah 100, (average). Gen. 11:15 "Terah lived seventy years, (and) begat Abram, Nahor and Haran." An indefinite statement. One student on Chronology says that Terah was 130 at birth of Abram, so I take the average at 100. Abraham 100 at birth of Isaac, who was 60 at birth of Jacob and he was 130 when moving to Egypt.

Israelites were in Egypt 215 years. The genealogy is Levi, Kohath, Amram and Moses, four generations, or in the fourth generation they should come out. Levi aged 137, Kohath 133, Amram 137. Moses 80 (120). The record does not give age of father at birth of son. Amram married his fathers sister, Jochebed, a daughter of Levi, and considering the age of man in those days it will take close figuring to get 215 years for the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt.

The promise made to Abram together with the period of 430 years is explained in Gal. 3:16-18, "And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was 430 years after can not disannul." In other words, The law given to Moses on Sinai was 430 years after the promise made to Abraham: Abraham was about 75 years old when the promise was made, 25 years more to the birth of Isaac, and 60 more to birth of Jacob, and 130 more to moving to Egypt, make 215 years, and 215 for the sojourn in Egypt make the 430 years between making the promise to Abraham, and the giving of the law on Sinai soon after the Exodus.

From the Exodus to the beginning of Solomon's reign was 476 years. The Kings of Judah in succession and number of years reign of each one is as follows: Solomon 40, Rehoboam 17, Abijam 3, Asa 41, Jehoshaphat 25, Jehoram 8, Ahaziah 1, Athaliah (Queen) 6, Joash 40, Amaziah 29, Uzziah 52, Azah 16, Hezekiah 29, Manasseh 55, Amon 2, Josiah 31, Jehoahz 3, Jehoikim 11, Jehoiachin 3, Zedekiah 11. Zedekiah was taken captive by the king of Babylon 589 B. C. Lehi came out from Jerusalem in the first year of the reign of Zedekiah which was 600 B. C. Zedekiah only reigned about 10 1/2 years, being taken captive in his 11th year, which would be 589 B. C. See B. M. Omni 1; 26. Mosiah 13:67. Nephi (3rd) 1:1. These items added together gives a sum of 4012 years as the time from Adam to Jesus Christ—in round numbers 4000 years.

Enoch saw in vision—"Jesus Christ . . . who shall come in the meridian of time" Gen. 6; 60, 65. In Heb. 9:26 is found this language "For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world; but now once in the meridian of time hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."

In Doctrine and Covenants 36:9 is a question by Enoch and answered by the Lord. "When shall the blood of the righteous be shed, that will they that mourn may be sanctified and have eternal life? And the Lord said, It shall be in the meridian of time, in the days of wickedness and vengeance. And behold, Enoch saw the day of the coming of the Son of Man, even in the flesh." Sec. 39:1 reads, "Hearken and listen to the voice of him who is from all eternity to all eternity, the great I AM, even Jesus-Christ, the light and life of the world; A light which shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not; the same which came in the meridian of time unto my own, and my own received me not."

The foregoing quotations clearly show that the time in which Jesus Christ came in the flesh to this earth was the meridian of time, as time is measured to man on this earth. The question arises as to what is the meaning of the word "meridian," as used in these quotations.

When the Scriptures were translated into our language, such words were used as would best express the meaning of the original, and the Lord when speaking to any nation uses words in their language to best convey his meaning to the understanding of the people. Hence the word "meridian" when used in relation to time conveys the thought to the mind of the writer that it is the middle, center, or half way point. When the sun is at its meridian, we say it is noon, midday. The day half gone. The sun at its highest. In the center of a half circle, midway between the two horizons.

If this be the true meaning; Then Jesus Christ coming in the meridian of time, 4000 years from Adam, we can then count on about 4000 years to follow or until it shall be said that "time shall be no longer" as relating to this earth, or when this earth having fulfilled the end for which it was created, shall pass away and a new heaven and a new earth shall take its place.

God was six days in creating the heaven and the earth, finishing his work and resting on the seventh day. One day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day. God may have been 6000 years creating the heavens and earth, finishing and resting in the seven thousandth year. Be this as it may be the record says it was done in seven days.

See in Revelations about the seven angels. The book with the seven seals etc. Also Doctrine and Covenants 85 where it is repeated concerning the seven angels sounding their trumpets and what follows. Par. 34 "and then shall the first angel again sound his trumpet in the ears of all living, and reveal the secret acts of men and the mighty works of God in the first thousandth year. And then shall the second angel sound his trumpet and reveal the secret acts of men; . . . and the mighty works of God in the second thousandth year; and so on until the seventh angel shall sound his trumpet; and he shall stand forth upon the land and upon the sea, and swear in the name of him who sitteth upon the throne, that there shall be time no longer, and Satan shall be bound, . . . and shall not be loosed for the space of a thousand years."

This shows a period of seven thousand years corresponding with the seven days of creation, and the following will show that the seven thousandth year in which Satan is bound is the day or time in which the earth rests. Gen. 7. Enoch continues telling what he saw in vision and after he saw "the Son of Man ascend up to the Father" and many things that followed—verse 72 reads, "And there shall be mine abode, and it shall be Zion, which shall come forth out of all the creations which I have made; and for the space of a thousand years shall the earth rest and . . . Enoch saw the day of the coming of the Son of Man, in the last days, to dwell on the earth, in righteousness, for the space of a thousand years."

It is quite generally accepted that Jesus Christ is coming the second time, to reign on the earth a thousand years; called the millennial reign and that Satan shall be bound having no power over the children of men, but after the thousand years—Rev. 20:3, "and after that he must be loosed for a little season," and verse 7 "and when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations," etc. Doctrine and Covenants 43:7 "for the great millennial shall come; for Satan shall be bound, and when he is loosed again, he shall only reign for a little season, and then cometh the end of the earth," sec. 28:6 "and again, verily, verily I say unto you, that when the thousand years are ended, and men again begin to deny their God, then will I spare the earth but for a little season; and the end shall come, and the heaven and the earth shall be consumed, and pass away, and there shall be a new heaven and a new earth."

After the thousand years; Satan is loosed for a little season to deceive the nations, and then, when men again begin to deny their God, will the earth be spared but for a little season. Indicating that there will be some time after the millennial reign. How long a time from the close of the millenium to the end of the earth is not recorded. But in Rev. 19, John heard the voice of seven thunders and was permitted to write but a little of what he heard. Verses 5 and 6, "and the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven and swore by him that liveth for ever and ever . . . that there should be time no longer." And in Doctrine and Covenants 85:35, "and he shall stand forth upon the land and upon the sea, and swear in the name of him who sitteth upon the throne, that there shall be time no longer."

When the heaven and the earth pass away, and all things become new, will be the most fitting time for the saying "time shall be no longer." When this earth passes away, then the record concerning it will be finished, and time will no more be measured to man. Those who are worthy will be in the presence of God though all eternity, and those unworthy will be sent to their place. Then "let him that is righteous be righteous still and him that is filthy be filthy still."

According to the Scriptures there seems to be a period of time measured to man consisting of seven days as represented in the creative period, and in Revelations, former and latter day, there seems to be the period of seven thousand years and two little seasons. The first little season after the millennial reign when Satan shall be loosed, "and when men begin again to deny God—then shall the earth be spared but for a little season." After the millenium Satan gathers his hosts and Michael gathers his hosts preparatory for the last great battle. Then follows the judgment day, end of the earth, all taking some time. How long is not recorded.

According to the best authority on time, Doctrine and Covenants 17:1, "The rise of the church of Christ in these last days since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh," proves that we are now in 1913 A. D. The Old Testament and Book of Mormon, (and I wonder if there is any better authority on time) as has already been cited, gives items that figure up 4000 (4012?) years from Adam to Jesus Christ, which added to 1913 makes now 5913 years since time was first measured to man. Lacking 87 years of completing the six thousand years or till the beginning of the seven thousandth year or the day when the earth shall rest, as seen by Enoch. Jesus Christ coming in the meridian of time, 4000 years from Adam, and if that be the center or noon time, or midday of time, then it will take another 4000 years to complete the time that is measured to man on this earth. And when time ceases to be measured to man, then will be fulfilled the saying that "time should be no longer."

When the judgment day comes and all men receive a reward according to their works; The heaven and earth pass away and all things become new; Then the record of this earth will be finished. It will be closed, laid away and of no more use, only as a document of reference. Time will cease so far as this earth is concerned. And man will be in eternity and time will no longer be measured to those who once lived on this earth.

We have only an abridged account of the history of the earth. The Scriptures appeal to the writer as being the best authority and upon them is based the conclusion arrived at in this article. The question, "Where are we at?" was put to the writer some time ago, and this is an effort at answering it. Not trying to fix a time for the second advent, as some have done and as one party accused the writer of trying to do by the work called "Bible chronology." Perfection is not claimed. It is a compilation of items as found recorded.

IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER?

ELDER E. E. LONG.

Is the world growing better? Popular opinion says it is and the idea is augmented by the teaching of men and women who are prominent in religious circles.

The world had an exalted opinion of itself before the flood; the citizens of Sodom and Gomorrah were righteous in their own estimation; the Jews were strictly religious when Jesus appeared among them; but like the antediluvians and Sodomites, they were ripe in iniquity and their destruction was near at hand.

It is human to err, and the natural tendency of man is to wander away from God. The history of the world attests this fact.

What of our own times? Why, the people are being taxed almost beyond endurance for money to build instruments of war, while a general feeling of unrest pervades society. The war clouds have been hanging dangerously low over all Europe of late incident to the Balkan uprising—which, by the way, is a religious war—while some of our American republics are in the throes of revolution.

Crime of every description is on the increase, some of the worst criminals being on the pay rolls of police and detective departments. Greed and spoilism is the common attribute of the "idle rich," while class hatred grows apace. Needless to say, political corruption is almost a universal condition.

We have churches and religious institutions a plenty, and fraternal organizations almost without number, but they furnish no antidote for wickedness in high places. Society is honey-combed with a subtle infidelity more dangerous than the agnosticism of Ingersoll. High church men are picking the Bible to pieces to palliate the consciences of the unconverted multitude; and the "white-slaver" plies his trade to satisfy their carnality. The christianity of Christ is at a discount while substitutes of all kinds command a premium.

The world growing better? What do the Scriptures say?

"But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matt. 24:37-39.

"For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape."—1 Thess. 5:2,3.

"Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles: prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up: Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong."—Joel 3:9,10.

What sarcastic irony there is in the "peace," "disarmament," "eternal amity," talk we hear, in the light of the foregoing, and the immense appropriations being made for "dreadnaughts!"

Notwithstanding the prevalence of the jingoistic spirit the people are being lulled into carnal security by men who "teach for hire and divine for money." God sent Noah to warn the people of their impending doom, but they rejected the overtures of mercy. Israel was repeatedly called upon to repent, but they stoned the prophets and killed those who bore the message of peace. So today, the man who cries repentance, and points to the signs of the times, is speedily caricatured as a "calamity-howler" and he becomes an object of ridicule. It ever has been so and the strangeness of it all is that humanity has not learned the lesson ere this.

It is true we have made wonderful advancement along certain lines, but the increase of intelligence only enhances our responsibility to God. The idea that the world is growing better is contrary to prophetic forecast, out of line with the trend of history, and a contradiction of the facts before us.

THE MAN WHO SMOKES.

The man who smokes is very unwise and also very weak morally. Smoking, like drinking, chewing, and swearing is a bad habit and requires a little strength and determination to stop its use. Why do big, strong men and boys say I know it's a bad habit but I just can't quit? They always advise people that don't use it never to begin it. Isn't that equal to saying, "I am a poor, weak slave to my habit or habits?" Where is the boasted strength of man after that assertion? Those habits generally lead into bad company, for when a man becomes a weakling to one master he loses his will power and he imagines becoming addicted to them makes him a man indeed, when in reality it makes him a slave and he hasn't the courage to say "no" to temptation.

It also bars a man or boy from holding office in this great latter-day work, and we can all see the wisdom of it too, for the man or boy who hasn't the courage to say no or turn his back on evil would be a poor representative for our dear Lord and Master the Holy One of Israel. We are told the Spirit of God will not dwell in unclean temples, we can see plainer than ever that a man or boy that smokes or indulges in any unclean or evil habit would not do at all for an officer in this glorious latter-day work, for he would be a poor officer indeed without the Spirit of God to direct his mind when difficult problems come up for solution. Is it not time for men and boys to awaken to their responsibilities, and shake off the fetters that have bound them so long and come to the realization that they are at last what the Lord intended them to be—big, strong, free men, morally, physically and mentally.

SECRET OF "TEMPERED COPPER."

The old fable about the ability of the ancients to temper copper as we now temper steel, so that copper knives with a sharp edge could be produced, has been often disproved, but still frequently crops up. Its probable origin is now shown by Walter Gowland, a distinguished English metallurgist and emeritus professor at the Royal School of Mines, as well as an antiquary of note. Professor Gowland proves that it is possible to make bronze very hard by hammering, and that the prehistoric knives of "tempered copper" were really of bronze with hammered edges. He shows also that the ancient smelted bronze directly from ores of mixt copper and tin, so that they may not have been aware of the fact that it is an alloy. We quote from an account in The Mining and Scientific Press (San Francisco, December 28,) which says:

"Walter Gowland, at a recent lecture in London, . . . showed that during the early metal age, and later, bronze was not obtained by melting metallic copper and tin together" but by the reduction of oxidized copper ores containing cassiterite, or of copper ores to which cassiterite ore was added. It is important that this fact should be recorded, seeing that some modern metallurgists allege that such a process is impossible, and that whenever tin and copper ores are smelted together the tin does not unite with the copper but passes into the slag. These allegations were evidently not founded on experiment, but on erroneous deductions from the methods of smelting in use at the present time.

"In order to determine the possibility of producing bronze, Mr. Gowland constructed a simple furnace consisting merely of a hole in the ground. In this he treated a mixture of 15 pounds of malachite, containing 30 per cent, copper, and 10 pounds of cassiterite ore, containing 20 per cent, tin, together with charcoal and limestone. . . . On the conclusion of the reaction, the slag and remaining fuel were removed and the metal allowed to solidify. An analysis of the metal showed 78 per cent, copper and 22 per cent, tin. A series of experiments were undertaken with varying proportions of the ore, and in every case copper-tin alloys were obtained. . . . The second point raised by Mr. Gowland referred to the supposed lost art of tempering bronze. In the old days the bronze castings for tools and weapons were hammered at the cutting edges to produce the right degree of hardness and temper. No other method was ever employed, such as heat treatment. The same effect can be produced on modern bronzes, by hammering, and in fact an even greater hardness can be obtained. Thus the notion that the art of tempering bronze, has been lost is a fallacy."—The Literary Digest.

DUNCES WHO MAY BLAME TOBACCO—That over 90 per cent. of all boys who fail in the grammar and high schools are smokers, is asserted by Prof. M. V. O'Shea of the University of Wisconsin, as quoted in the University's Press Bulletin (Madison, December 16.) The tobacco evil, he declares, is the most serious one that the public schools have to contend with. We read:

"Most boys do not learn to smoke because they like tobacco, but because their schoolfellows smoke. It is a social thing with the boy. By doing it he thinks he is one of 'the crowd' and not an 'outsider.' Unruly boys are almost always addicted to the cigaret habit. Smoking robs pupils of their docility. Records kept of the work of students who are not addicted to the smoking habit when they entered high school but who acquired it later show that not only did these pupils become harder to manage, but the quality of their school work also declined greatly. What a hold the smoking evil has gained on public school boys is indicated by the statements made by a number of high school principals who declare that from fifty to eighty per cent. of high school pupils are now using cigars etc. It is an interesting fact that the strongest sentiment against smoking has arisen in communities in which the raising of tobacco is, the principle industry. Tobacco men do not want young boys in their own communities to smoke, and in a number of places in Wisconsin various organizations have taken a stand against smoking by school children."—Literary Digest.

DEPARTMENT OF
Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service

MRS. KATE GOODWIN, EDITOR,
1416 W. Walnut St., Independence, Mo.

An excellent program was rendered by the Mother's Department of the Auxiliary, the evening of Feb. 18th, and the success attending it, gives us reason to hope it is the first of many. We do not see why it would not be well to give a series of such entertainments to stimulate enthusiasm for the society, not only for this department but the others as well.

There is plenty of talent, skilled highly developed talent among our women, together with that which is undeveloped requiring a channel for expression, to furnish, not only in the general sense, but interesting and instructive entertainment at any time; the fact that we turn our efforts into ducats for the good of the cause is no detriment, but rather should add to the desire of each to throw in her mite and do her part that the society as a whole may be strengthened, and stimulate the growth of a public sentiment in its favor.

Perhaps in things religious and moral the adage "Let the women do the work," is too literally carried out but there's one thing certain, the woman can do it. No doubt they (vaguely speaking) would like to be shown. Then let us show them.

THE INTEREST FOR MOTHERS IN MONTESSORI PLAY MATERIALS.
BY JENNIE B. MERRILL, PH. D.

Every mother has been aroused to more than a passing interest in the new system of education for young children planned by Dr. Maria Montessori, an Italian physician.

Are her new educational materials, toys, do you ask? Yes, and no.

A baby will make a toy of anything, a shoe or a box, a spoon or a spool, a chair or a feather.

You may have heard of the bright, young father who was left alone with baby. He put a little molasses on baby's fingers and gave him a feather to play with! Baby was happy seated on the floor, passing the feather from hand to hand while papa enjoyed his newspaper. Was the feather an educational toy? Surely it was! It held baby's attention!

In this sense one may call any object an educational toy if it amuses and interests and concentrates a child's attention.

To learn to concentrate, to use hand and eye together, is an important starting point in education. While Dr. Montessori's materials do not exactly correspond to our notions of "a toy," they are in reality educational toys. Some of the material which she has suggested up to the present time, for she is still experimenting, is adapted for use in the nursery with children generally considered too young to be gathered in groups outside of their own homes. It may be used at two years of age, possibly a little earlier, and from that age into the sixth year.

Dr. Montessori has been dealing mainly with children gathered in day nurseries or "Children's Houses" in the tenement suburbs of Rome—children whose parents are bread winners from necessity.

Her theories, however, apply to all children. Some of the wealthy women of Italy are experimenting in their own homes with these simple, practical, everyday "exercises of life" as adapted by Dr. Montessori in her system of child training. Indeed it was such a woman, the late Baroness Franchette, who instructed me in the new method in 1909.

Mothers in this country have already inaugurated the "Home Nursery Group" by inviting a few neighbors' children to join their own, knowing that in the home nursery there are usually not enough children to make a social atmosphere comparatively independent of adults.

Working with children whose homes were quite barren of materials that can be used as toys. Dr. Montessori introduced with the "Children's Houses," a specific set of educational toys as well as some of the well-known toys of childhood. While off-hand materials may be used by an experienced mother or teacher to excellent advantage, there are greater advantages and conveniences in the new devices.

A ball is an educational necessity, though an apple may at times take its place. Dr. Montessori found it possible to prepare her own material before a manufacturer was found. So may any mother if she cannot afford to provide it in the form in which Dr. Montessori now presents it for use, in a completed series of exercises arranged in five grades.

It will interest mothers to hear that Dr. Montessori as a biologist, has great confidence in the natural instincts and likings of a young child. The child's natural tendencies point the way, and with a mother's instinct to interpret them, many simple educational devices and toys have been contrived in the home from time to time.

Any observing mother well knows how a very young child loves to touch, to handle. This is trying, oftentimes, and when this tendency is not recognized as an absolute necessity in securing touch sensations—as of hard and soft, rough and smooth, sticky and slippery, cold and hot, elastic and inelastic, and many others—mother may be tempted too often to say, "Don't touch," or "Hands off," just as baby is becoming a little discoverer or even an experimenter. Ignorant nurses interfere constantly with these precious experiments, and baby's hands grow hungry for touch and muscular sensations which are needed to feed the growing mind and to acquaint the child with the world he lives in. He cannot learn to know his world through eyes and ears alone. He must touch. Because there are so many things the little ones must not handle, Dr. Montessori provides a special set of durable objects, varying in form, color, size and qualities, the children may handle freely and carry from place to place with impunity, until they are not only satisfied, but have also acquired a degree of delicacy and exactness in adjusting pieces to piece.

Being a student of psychology, Dr. Montessori knows that we have in reality more than five senses. To be sure, there are differences of opinion in regard to the necessity or possibility of trying to exercise the senses independently of each other as Dr. Montessori approves in her games of blindfolding, but without entering to any great depth in this fascinating discussion, the observing mother may discern readily that every child is acquiring various sensations and perceptions by touching and handling objects in the simple, everyday, practical events of life. He is not merely handling. But does she fully realize how much the child not only advances in sense training, but also in will training by the process of dressing and undressing at an early age? By washing his own little hands as many times a day as necessary? By handling spoons and dishes, by moving chairs, by later setting the table and putting the room in order? We do well to remember that "In early childhood the itching palm of every sense is an outstretched inquiry to the whole world!" And we surely should endeavor to put the child early in touch with nature, but Dr. Montessori is teaching us afresh that there is education in handling a spoon, in handling a piece of soap, in carrying a dish, in squeezing a sponge, in managing a brush and comb or a broom. Do you see now why she places at the head of her everyday program, "Practical exercises of life?" This is not all of her message, but it comes first in point of time.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Many of our women take the "Mother's Magazine" and have doubtless read this article; then again, many have not. For their benefit it is published. It will be seen the general tone of the article is a plea for self-control (in the parent) a judicious letting alone, being more potent in training than the constant hampering with "don't's" and "mustn't's" which so many parents call educating.

Those who have read Spencer's "Education" will readily see the harmony between this theory and his idea that the child is self-educated.

MISCELLANEOUS

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.—District conference will convene with the Springfield Branch, at the church, "Dale and Kellet on Saturday, March 22d at 10 a. m., continuing over Sunday the 23d. All branch and ministry reports should be sent to the undersigned, also branch officers should send or bring their branch assessments of $1 00 to each conference to help defray the district expenses which are now in arrears. We hope to see a good representation present, as important matter is to be presented. Bring the Spirit of the work with you and be on time.

TO THE ELDERS OF INDEPENDENCE STAKE, not now in quorum: You are requested to meet in the lower auditorium of the stone church, Saturday evening, March 8th, at 7:00 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing the First Kansas City Quorum of Elders.

G. E. Harrington, Stake Pres.

To the scattered and isolated saints in Northern Wisconsin, Greeting: We are trying to reach everyone of you and earnestly invite you to join our Sunday school ranks in Home Study. The new Graded Lessons are so instructive everyone will enjoy them. Please let me hear from you so I can help you with quarterlies and enroll you with us and receive the benefit. Send me your name and address soon.

Mrs. Rillie Moore, Dist. Home Dept. Supt. Necedah, Wis.

FOR GOSPEL LITERATURE SUPERINTENDENTS:—The time for reporting is at hand, and all district superintendents and good literature committees outside of districts should make a full report of work done for the period ending December 31, 1912. We have sent report blanks to all those names and addresses we have. Those who have received blanks and those who have not, should report at the earliest possible date in order that I may make proper report to the general convention in April. Please do not delay this matter. Report whether you have done anything or not.

Still in the light,

Harvey Sandy, Gen. Supt.

1007 Vine St., Kansas City, Mo.

KIRTLAND DISTRICT.—Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service will hold its annual convention at New Philadelphia, Ohio, during the district conference which will be held Mar. 1st and 2d. We trust each local will be represented and will come prepared to help out this much needed work. A collection for the benefit of the district fund will be taken.

Mrs. F. J. Ebeling, Dist. Sec.
Willoughby, Ohio.

EASTERN IOWA DISTRICT.—Those who were elected delegates to the next general conference are the following: John Heide, Mira Heide, Warren Turner, Martha Roush, James McKiernan, J. B. Wildermuth, Dora Wildermuth, F. B. Farr, C. G. Dykes, Effie Dikes, Wm. Stoll, Cora Hart, Wesley Richards.
Mrs. Melvina Gray, Dist. Sec.

TO THE FIRST SEVENTY.

Dear Brethren—I have this day sent blanks for reporting to the quorum which I trust you will not mislay, and that your reports will be made out and mailed to me soon after the first of next month. In the remarks please to give me information whether you are occupying as branch or district president, or as bishop's agent, or counselor to a bishop. Or whether you occupy any official position with the Sunday school, Religion, or Social Purity Societies.

The first meeting this year will be April 4th unless a later notice appears between now and the 15th of March. Watch for special notices.

It may fall to receive the blank for reporting by the 1st of March, notify me by card and I will send you another. I have sent them to the latest address that you have given to me.

The officers will send out a special notice between now and the 20th of March relative to some of the important measures that we must consider this year.

Respectfully,

J. F. Mintun, Sec. First Seventy.

1205 Filmore St., Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 18, 1913.

GENERAL CONFERENCE AT LAMONI.

Do you expect to attend? If so read the reception committee's notice in last week's issue and write to the secretary at once, so we may know who we will have to prepare for. This is important if you wish us to find a place for you.

C. I. Carpenter, Sec.

Lamoni, Iowa.

PRESIDENTS OF SEVENTY.

You adjourned April 1912 to meet March 27, 1913, at 6:30 p. m. at Lamoni, Ia.

C. Scott, Senior President.

TO NON-MEMBERS.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 20.

As I am sending the ENSIGN free for awhile to non-members, who will send me their names and addresses, possibly some of the ministry may also know of some who are interested in this latter-day gospel. If they will let me know of such ones I will also send them the ENSIGN for awhile, I am at the present time sending to quite a number and as I have not heard anything from them I would like to hear from them, by them writing a letter to the ENSIGN, saying if they get the ENSIGN and what they think of it, and whatsoever they might care to write about this latter-day work.

General conference will soon convene at Lamoni, Iowa, and if you are notified of the expiration of your free subscriptions, and you should want it to continue until after conference that you might get the conference proceedings let me know your wants and I will have the time extended.

Hoping to hear from many, also see some letters in the ENSIGN from its readers. Hopeful for the consummation of this great latter-day work, I am yours for truth,

E. Stafford.

Independence, Mo., Lock Box 54.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE.

To the conference of the Galland's Grove District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:

Your committee appointed to draft a resolution of condolence on the death of Elder W. W. Whiting who died recently at Independence, Mo., beg leave to report as follows: Elder W. W. Whiting was baptized into Christ at Deloit, Iowa, many years ago, and was an active minister in the Galland's Grove, Iowa, District for years. He served as president of the Galland's Grove District for a considerable length of time, and was a successful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord.

Elder Whiting was a loyal husband, a loving father, a true Christian, a worthy neighbor, and a good citizen; therefore be it

Resolved, that in this matter we bow in humble reverence to the divine mandate, and hereby extend to his wife and children, and other relatives, our condolence, and commend them to the love, sympathy, care, and directing power of Almighty God, in whom they trust.

Most respectfully submitted,
Chas. E. BUTTERWORTH
F. R. SCHAEFER
COLUMBUS SCOTT

Sunday, February 9, 1913, at the close of the afternoon session, the above preamble and resolution was adopted by the unanimous vote of the conference, with a request that a copy be sent to his family, and that it be published in the Harold and ENSIGN.

In gospel bonds,

C. J. Hunt, President.
Mrs. C. J. Hunt, Sec.

MARRIAGES.

MAHLER-GILLSON.—At Rigetown, Ontario, January 13th Mr. Frederick Charles Mahler of Delaware, Ont., and Sr. Eudora May Gillson of Rigetown, Ont., Priest Hartford Crowder officiating.

ADDRESSES.

R. May, 2 Coburn Rd., Bow, London, England.

DIED.

LASLEY.—At Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 6, 1913, of peritonitis. Miss Audentia Lasley, aged twenty-five years. Her parents live near Lamoni and the family has an honorable name. They have been friendly to the church for many years but have not obeyed the gospel. The baby of the daughter was brought to Lamoni and services held in the Saint's church, sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. R. Salyards and John Smith. She was laid to rest in Rose Hill cemetery.

ORTON.—Mrs. Lenora Springer Orton was born at Southampton, Cayuga; New York, Sept. 2, 1835, died at the home of her daughter near Bascomb, Crawford county, Wisconsin. She was united in marriage to James C. Orton in the year 1857 who preceded her in death. To this union were born six children, four of whom mourn her death. She was united with the church over twenty years ago and remained all her life a faithful saint, a loving mother and friend to all. Funeral was held at the Buckheath Ridge church near Lancaster, Wis. sermon by Aug. E. Gratz as assisted by George R. Burdette.

SHERMAN.—At Independence, Mo., February 19, 1913, Mildred M., daughter of Bro. Roy and Sr. Esther Sherman, aged two weeks and four days service in charge of Welton Wood, sermon by J. C. Foss. Interment in Mound Grove.

GAULTER.—At Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 13, 1913, of cancer Elder Lewis Gaultler aged 75 years, three months and 16 days. He was born in LaRoche, France, October 28, 1817. His parents desired that he should grow up in America, therefore in 1827 bound him out to a friend, the captain of a trading ship, who lived at Bath, Maine, when the boy was not yet ten years old. He was on the sea in summer but each winter attended school at Bath. At eighteen he became a full seaman, and later, until he quit the sea, was first mate of the ship. They did business between American ports and the ports of England, Wales, France and the West Indies.

In 1843 at their ship, the Swanton took two loads of Latter Day Saints from Liverpool to New Orleans on their way to Nauvoo, before there were railways to take people overland. On the second trip he became so convinced by the sermons preached on ship board and by seeing the results of their faith that he was baptized after their arrival in New Orleans in February, 1844. In July, 1845, he gave up his sea life and went to Nauvoo to be with the church. There in December, 1845, he married Miss Harriet Morgan. Their Union is now broken by death after sixty-seven years of companionship. Notwithstanding the evils they saw and felt yet they knew the gospel was true and so in 1850 they went to Utah there they had trying experiences, among them the entire destruction of the crops of 1853 by grasshoppers, when the famine distressed everybody. Cattle died of starvation and some had to eat the flesh from the bones in order to live. Others came through with less suffering, although old wheat sold as high as five dollars per bushel and few could afford bread of any kind.

In 1864 they moved to Malad, Idaho, and in 1866 both believed the message of the Reorganized Church and united with it in 1870 they went to Gallatin County, Montana. There he labored in ministry work and as agent for Bishop I. L. Rogers collecting and disbursing church money. In 1882 the family came to Lamoni and remained.

Their four sons and seven daughters all reached maturity, but later there died Sr. Sarah Willer, Sr. Lizzie Sorenson, Sr. Julia Moore, Phoebe (unmarried), and Loren. The six living are Lewis, William, Alexander, Mrs. Harriet McManus, Sr. Emma Cochran and Sr. Louise Stafford. All but the latter (who lives in Oklahoma) were present at their father's death.

Bro. Gaultler made a good record for honesty, and integrity, Sr. Gaultler is past eighty-five years, but she bears up nobly under the trials she has had.

Bro. A. S. Cochran had charge of the burial, Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached the sermon as requested by Bro. Gaultler, and Bro. R. M. Elvin offered the prayer at the grave.

WALLACE.—Evan A. Wallace died at Portland, Ore., Jan. 29th aged 65 years, 11 months, and one day. He was born in Iowa, Feb. 28, 1847 and in 1868 was married to Sarah A. Jackson, and in 1873 removed to Oregon. Ten children had blessed his life, two of whom had preceded him to the higher life, while four sons and four daughters and his widow survive him. He was a good and loving husband and father; and highly respected having lived an upright life life and was ready to answer the summons of the Master.

KNAPP.—Emma Anna Statia Geno was born April 10, 1852 at St. Clair, Mich., married in 1866 to William Akey to which union were born seven children. Being left a widow she married Luther J. Flood, to this union was born one son. In 1879 she was married to Milton L. Knapp at Lesterville, Mich. one daughter blessed this union, Sr. C. W. Fritz of Lillian Neb.

Becoming dissatisfied with the church of her childhood (Catholic) she left and in 1888 united with the Methodist church and later with the Baptist seeking the light. She fully heard the restored gospel and was baptized at Fuson, Mo., by J. T. Davis. She died near Merna, Neb., February 15, 1913, leaving husband, one son, two daughters, twenty-four grand-children and one great-grand-child. Funeral in charge of Rev. Mayfield.

OLIVER.—Henry Ferguson Oliver, son of William and Laura Oliver was born July 23, 1910, blessed October, 1910, by Elder A. H. D. Edwards, died Dec. 20, 1912, aged 2 years and 5 months. Funeral service at home of parents, sermon by Elder A. H. D. Edwards. Of such is the kingdom of God.

PORTER.—Mary A. Porter was born in Ohio, March 1, 1834; came with her parents to Tipton, Iowa, when ten years of age and eight years later to Moline, Ill., where she was married to Robert Christy, Aug. 24, 1856, a few years later coming to Western Iowa near Akron. To them were born two sons, and three daughters, all of whom survive except one daughter. The husband, Robert Christy, died January 8, 1906. She lived a faithful, Christian life from childhood, uniting with the Methodist Church when fifteen years of age and later united with the Latter Day Saints, (Reorganized), in which she has been a faithful, consistent member for over fifty years. She died at the home of her daughter at Akron Dec. 28, 1912, aged 78 years and 10 months. Two brothers and one sister besides the children and a host of friends mourn their loss. Services in charge of Rev. Stuart, sermon by Bro. J. L. Parker, of Sioux City, Dec. 31, 1912.

TROOK.—Estella Trook nee Austin was born May 3, 1878, at Union, Cass Co., Nebr. The immediate cause of death was the accidental explosion of coal oil in her home at Lincoln, Nebr., in which she was fatally burned and died on the morning of January 29, 1913, at 2:30 o'clock. Sr. Trook leaves a husband and six children to mourn her departure, besides many relatives and friends. She was of lovable disposition, a devoted mother, a true companion indeed. Funeral sermon by J. R. Sulton at Union, Nebr., interment at same place.

PENDER.—Wm. S. Pender was born Dec. 23, 1861, at Muscatine, Muscatine Co., Iowa. Married Fannie Gurrwell Oct. 24, 1900. Passed away Sunday, Jan. 19, 1913, at Muscatine. Baptized about the year 1874 by John T. Davis, and was ordained an elder, and later was ordained to the office of seventy. Has been an active missionary for twenty-four years. His companion being his constant companion through all his faithful service. His mission extended from British Columbia to Mexico. Through all his years of faithful service he was a constant sufferer, but faithful at his post of duty he served his Master till the silent messenger called him to join the victors who have passed on before. His body was laid to rest in the Fanning cemetery, peacefully to await the call from the archangel to arise and join those who are Christ's at his coming. Funeral services at the saints' church, Fanning, Kas., where many of the saints and friends gathered to pay their last tribute of respect and love to our departed brother. Services and sermon by Richard Bullard.

In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address, and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription. In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

WAYS AND MEANS OF SPREADING THE GOSPEL.

When Jesus said to his apostles "Go ye therefore and teach all nations," he declared the universal adaptability of the gospel. The prophet Isaiah long before said that "the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising." The gospel was not designed for a favored few but for all people, of every nation, and one of the obligations of the church of Jesus Christ is to work for the extension of that gospel so that its mission shall be fulfilled.

THE MINISTRY.

In establishing the church the Lord provided certain officers having various duties leading to the gathering in of such persons as might be found willing to come in upon the terms of the gospel, and of building up in knowledge and righteousness those who had been brought in. This work necessitates a continual effort being made to move out and inform others of the gospel who have not hitherto been privileged to hear it, that they might also be given opportunity of coming in and receiving the benefits which the gospel brings.

As leaders in this work the ministry are appointed having their several duties defined in the law, but the details of their work are of necessity left for them and the church to devise; nor is the work left alone in the hands of the ministry, but the whole membership have a responsibility which they cannot escape—not to go out as public representatives of the church, but to uphold the hands of those who do go out, and do supplementary work in the many ways that are convenient. It is of the supplementary work that we wish to write, and perhaps offer a helpful suggestion to those who desire to help in extending the gospel.

FINANCES.

It is apparent that no such work as that of sending out the gospel message to all the world can be done without finances. The missionaries must have means with which to pay their railway and steamship fares, clothing, and other necessities. They are often under the necessity of paying for places in which to hold services, for advertising, or even for board. Their families must be supported in their absence. To meet these needs the Lord has provided a system of tithes and offerings which if observed by the whole membership will amply supply every legitimate demand. At times missionaries have been taken from the field, or withheld from appointment, or have found it necessary on their own volition to leave the Master's work, because of a lack of funds by which they and their families could be supported. Thus every member who gives of his means for this work is helping to spread the gospel and will be justly entitled to share in the reward.

LITERATURE.

One of the means which the church has adopted of sending the gospel news to the world is that of literature, including periodicals, books, and tracts. But the ability of the publishing houses to reach the people directly is limited, and the greater part of the work of distributing the publications—especially the tracts—must lie with the membership who are located in the various cities, towns, hamlets, and rural districts, in close touch with the multitudes who have not yet learned of the fullness of the gospel.

The promiscuous distribution of tracts brings but slight results, and to be effectual tracts must be distributed carefully and wisely, adapting them to the particular beliefs or desires of the ones receiving them. This necessitates acquaintance in some degree. One sister seeks the acquaintance of strangers whom she meets when conditions are favorable, and tastefully offers some gospel truth, and if she finds a responsive interest, usually secures the name and address of her new found friend, and later sends her some tracts or church papers. In some such cases she has heard from the recipients with favorable results. Other members are sending the ENSIGN to their outside friends for varying periods of time. Others who take the church papers hand them to their neighbors after reading or send them to distant friends, and many persons have been made acquainted with the gospel in this way some of whom have come into the church. Others make loans or gifts of some of the books put out by the church. All of these things need to be done with judgment and tact.

PERSONAL WORK.

Many branches have been raised up through the efforts of some one member or family who have started the work by talking with their neighbors, or starting a Sunday school, or a home class. One family moved into a town and shortly after started a Sunday school in their house, which grew, resulting in many being baptized and a branch of the church being organized there. A sister not far from Independence prepared herself for usefulness by study and prayer, and then spent a portion of her time almost every day whether fair or stormy, in visiting the homes of people within her reach, though she never pressed her visit where she was not desired. So active and earnest were her efforts that she says in many cases she was directed by the Spirit at what homes to call. As a result of her efforts which were followed by those of the elders, nearly forty have been baptized and a flourishing branch organized in that community.

Not every one perhaps can work in exactly the same manner that this sister did, but every one can, and should, do something in his own way according to his own talents and abilities, using wisdom and charity, and seeking divine guidance. An essential requirement in all such work is an upright character which manifests a worthy example for those whom we wish to lead to Christ. These things all help in reaching "every creature" with the gospel.

The editor would be pleased to hear from those who have been successful in spreading the truth, and be glad to pass the suggestions along that others might be helped.

WORK BEGAN ON NEW CHURCH.

Active work was begun Monday on the site to be occupied by the new Latter Day Saints church on east McPherson St. Several teams are engaged in hauling rock for the foundation of the edifice, which will be of brick.

The work will be pushed as rapidly as possible and it won't be many months until they are worshipping in the new building.—Knobnoster Gem.

What right has a man to ask Jesus to forgive him, when his heart is still burning with hatred or festering with grudges against a fellow creature? Confession, to be of avail, must let go of its hold on the sin confessed.—T. L. COYLER.

The sense of duty smooths our path through life. We become that which we make ourselves. We strive against inclinations to do wrong, we strive for the inclination to do right, and little by little we become that for which we strive. Every day's effort makes the struggle easier.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

DIVINE AUTHORITY BESTOWED.

As no man can legally represent another except by the authorization of that other, so no man can legally represent God unless he is authorized of God. Men may of themselves do many good things in behalf of their fellow men but the line must be drawn against acting in any official capacity for any man, such as performing business transactions in his name or making promises which he has not specifically authorized to be done; and in like manner men may do many things for God in building up the good, but no work can justly be done nor any promises made for this life or for eternity in his name without specific authorization.

This principle is clearly set forth in the Bible. Passing over the many evidences of the Old Testament, the whole work of the New Testament is found to have been based upon that principle. The first prophet John the Baptist was "sent of God," and Jesus also was sent of the Father. Christ himself chose those whom he would have to represent him, and said to his apostles "Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you, and ordained you." John 15:16. Again he said, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." John 20:21. None will question the authority of Jesus Christ to represent his Father in a legal way, and the ministers of Christ being sent with the same authority are qualified also to represent him in harmony with the law governing.

While the right to act was transmitted from man to man through the ordinance of laying on hands, and known as ordination, yet the call to office was made by the Lord in person while he was upon earth, and by the revelation of the Holy Ghost after his ascension. In Acts 13:1-3 is shown the way the Lord chose to perpetuate his ministry. They were called by the Holy Ghost, but were set apart or ordained by the laying on of hands of men who were already authorized to act for God.

While the Catholic and some Protestant churches hold that the authority of God has been transmitted through an unbroken line of ordinations from the apostles to the present, the Reorganized church holds that such authority long since ceased through transgression, and should an unbroken line of ordinations be admitted, such ordinations having for centuries been performed without a call from God, could not confer the right to act for God, for as already shown this right could only be had by a call from God, and an ordination by the laying on of hands. The direct revelation of the Holy Ghost has long been denied and also lost, hence there could be no call to this authority until God should again reveal himself.

In previous sketches we have seen how God has revealed himself in this last dispensation, and by such revelation it was again established that God is, that he is the same unchangeable God. Having reaffirmed the gospel of the Bible in the giving of the Book of Mormon, the basis was thus laid for the official work which was to follow and which would require the authority to act for God, and to represent Jesus Christ.

Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith relate that having learned in the Scriptures of the ordinance of baptism for the remission of sins, and desiring to be obedient, yet not knowing how to proceed, sought the Lord in prayer, and while calling upon the Lord according to the statement of the latter "A messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us, he ordained us, saying unto us, 'Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion, for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness.'" This was May 15, 1829. Church History Vol. 1, p. 34.

The account continues: "The messenger who visited us on this occasion, and conferred this priesthood upon us, said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedec, which priesthood he said should in due time be conferred on us."

Oliver Cowdery writes of this wonderful event: "On a sudden, as from the midst of eternity, the voice of the Redeemer spake peace to us, while the veil was parted and the angel of God came down clothed with glory, and delivered the anxiously looked for message, and the keys of the gospel of repentance. . . . As in the blaze of day, yet more—above the glitter of the May sunbeam, which then shed its brilliancy over the face of nature, his voice, though mild, pierced to the center, and his words 'I am thy fellow servant,' dispelled every fear. We listened—we gazed—we admired." "Twas a message from the voice of the angel from glory—'twas a message from the Most High and as we heard, we rejoiced, while his love enkindled upon our souls, and we were rapt in the vision of the Almighty." "We received under his hand the holy priesthood, as he said, 'Upon you my fellow-servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer this priesthood and this authority.'"

In this instance, of necessity, both the call and ordination came directly from heaven, since none were to be found upon earth holding the authority to officially act for God in ordaining these men or anyone else. This authority was the same as held by John the Baptist and under which he officiated as the fore-runner of Christ. He baptized with water unto repentance and taught the preparatory gospel of faith, repentance, and baptism of water, but declared himself inferior to Christ who should come after him and who should baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire. With this same authority these men were permitted to baptize and proceed with the work of the gospel to the same extent that John the Baptist had.

This claim to divine authority through anglic ordination may seem strange to some who have grown up under the belief that angels no longer minister to men. But the recent sketch on "Angel Ministration," shows the Scriptural reasonableness and necessity for such ministration, and that angels were to come in the last days in connection with the restoration of the gospel in its primitive purity and power. The event which is here related is consistent when considered in connection with other events and the conditions of the world, and it is in harmony with the prophetic statements of the Bible. The results too have shown the wisdom of the event.

The probability of these two young men having "manufactured" this story as a part of an extensive and deeply laid plot to deceive is slight indeed. No motive can be found for such a plot. With all other religious reformers the question of authority was the least considered in their work, and there is nothing to show that it had been thought of by these two until they received information from the lips of the angel by whom they were ordained.

This ordination came previous to any official act, and under it they were authorized to speak in the name of Christ in declaring the gospel of faith, repentance, and baptism by water for the remission of sins, and to perform the ordinance of baptism, and ordain others by divine direction to the same authority. Joseph Smith further writes of the angel, "He commanded us to go and be baptized, and gave us directions that I should baptize Oliver Cowdery, and afterwards that he should baptize me. Accordingly we went and were baptized, I baptized him first, and afterward he baptized me." Thus was commenced the work which prepared the way for the next great event—The organization of the church.

THE EDITOR YIELDS A POINT.

Bro. Alvin Knisley offers a criticism in "perfect, good, jolly nature," on the editor's position in the Round Table discussion of Cain, and which we receive in the same way. He says:

"God is responsible for the following statement in Section 36, and paragraph 4, of the Doctrine and Covenants:

'And the Lord said unto Enoch, Behold my abode forever; and Enoch also beheld the residue of the people which were the sons of Adam, and they were a mixture of all the seed of Adam, save it were the seed of Cain, for the seed of Cain were black, and had no place among them.'

Moral: 'We should be careful not to arrive at conclusions without proper evidence.'

The editor finds the same Scriptural statement in Gen. 7:23, of the inspired version, thus settling the question as to the color of the seed of Cain. However the editorial statements that the Scriptures do not say what was the mark placed upon

Cain, and that the blackness which came over the people, of Cainan as mentioned in Gen. 7:10 did not refer to Cain or his posterity, and that the "mark" placed upon Cain was a blessing rather than a punishment, are unchanged. We may infer some things but it is unsafe to hold inferences as facts. We yield the point that the "seed of Cain were black," having overlooked the passage pointed out by our brother.

We are in receipt of a "Loose Leaf Filler" sent us by Bro. A. M. Chase, our energetic missionary in Salt Lake City. Though hand-made it is almost equal to print in neatness and legibility and contains 124 pages including an index. Many quotations of historical and doctrinal value, showing the differences between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church, are included, with copies of Utah Church documents which we have not seen elsewhere such as—a recommendation and permit to take a plural wife, etc.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The severe weather of last week has been broken and today's (4th) balmy air gives assurance that spring is not far off. As this is the day on which the new president is inaugurated, the fair weather is no doubt appreciated especially in Washington, where Woodrow Wilson makes the oath which qualifies him as president of the United States, to succeed William H. Taft. May the administration be as fair as the day.

Elder M. H. Bond of the stake presidency gave an excellent discourse on Sunday morning in which he mentioned some experiences by which he was led from darkness into the light of the gospel. The sacramental service at 2:30 had a large attendance, and an excellent feeling prevailed except at the latter part of the meeting when the good feeling was marred somewhat by the introduction of some discussion of questions which have no proper place in the prayer service. Controversial matters should never be introduced in a prayer meeting, and if the saints in their testimonies would avoid referring to the faults of others, or seeking to place rules or restrictions upon the conduct of others, they would avoid spoiling many good prayer meetings. The evening sermon was by Elder George Jenkins.

Elder G. E. Harrington went to Lexington to preach the funeral of Arthur Beard who was accidentally killed, and also occupied the evening hour there. Other appointments of which we have learned are John Zahnd at Grandview, John W. Rushton at Central in the evening, W. A. Smith at Walnut Park in the morning and Charles Fry in the evening, J. F. Curtis at South Side, J. C. Foss at Quindaro Branch.

Elder Curtis is holding a series of meetings at the South Side church this week with good interest. Bro. Alva Chrestensen has returned from his mission field in Oklahoma where he has been laboring among the Indians. He reports progress of the gospel among them.

Elder E. A. Blakesley, counselor to Bishop Kelley arrived Monday from Galien, Mich., to officiate in a bishop's court and perform other matters belonging to the presiding bishopric of the church.

Bro. Leonard Harrington who has been studying medicine at Vienna, Austria, has recently gone to Munich, Germany, where he will complete his studies. He says he appreciates the Ensign in the far away land.

The monthly business meeting of the Independence Branch met on Monday evening with the stake presidency—G. E. Harrington, M. H. Bond, and W. H. Garrett, presiding, and Sr. Louise Geisich secretary. The business transacted was mostly of a routine character.

CENTRAL CHURCH, KANSAS CITY, MO.

(Too late for last week.)

We are still doing business at the same old stand. Some times we think we're up and sometimes down. Taking the branch as a whole looking at it from the standpoint of the writer, there is no great advancement being made. Progress is slow. We have a number of efficient workers that are doing service, and then again we have a lot of capable workers that are workless.

Just now the Religio seems to be making the best showing in some ways, the average attendance having almost doubled in the past two months. A live up-to-date Religio will materially help branch work. Attendance at preaching service is also considerably better on the average, the attendance for Sunday, Feb. 16th being the largest since the special meetings last spring. Bishop Kelley was with us in the morning and Bro. Daniel MacGregor in the evening. The choir has been rendering excellent service in the way of special efforts which is having good effect. Bro. Hoxie of Philadelphia, with his violin was with us last evening. No comment is necessary here.

Quarterly business meeting the 3d instant selected delegates to the stake conference at Independence, March 8-9. The statistical report showed the membership now 376, a gain of one over the last report. It was voted to hold cottage prayer meetings instead of re-establishing the Wednesday evening prayer meeting. It was thought in this way that many could be helped that cannot, or at least do not attend such a service at the church. The success of the plan remains to be seen. We are sure the principle is right.

It has been thought best to postpone the annual spring meeting until sometime next fall. Sr. Nancy Beagle died during the month. There has been and still is considerable sickness among the saints, although nothing of a very serious nature.

The Ladies' Aid is reported to be alive and doing a good work, with plenty of opportunities for rendering good service.

The teachers' normal work is taking on some new life, and this is encouraging. Here is seed sown that will bear fruit later on if not now. Pastor Tanner has charge of this work, and he understands the business from A to Z. In this department of the work, the Religio is not one whit behind the Sunday school, Sr. D. H. Blair, conducting a general drill from the Religio normal work.

Sunday school is somewhat handicapped just at the present time owing to the fact that our Superintendent Bro. Parsons, has removed to Independence, and the continued illness of his father preventing his regular attendance.

February 24.

H. S.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., SECOND BRANCH.

Our district conference of February 22d and 23d, was one to be long remembered as there was a very large representation from all over the district. There was a large amount of business that came before the conference which was disposed of in its own order. Our district president, B. J. Dice opened up the conference with an appropriate talk and decided well in all the difficult matters which were sometimes perplexing but his study of the rules of order made him efficient throughout the day. The evening speaker was Elder Swen Swenson assisted by Elder Chas. P. Paul. The attendance was exceedingly large—Sunday school was one to be long remembered with several birthday offerings but the largest one was the Washington birthday offering everybody seemed to honor the birth of the father of our country.

Sunday morning Elder Chas. E. Harpe of Lamoni was the speaker at eleven.

Prayer meeting at 2:30 was in charge of Elders V. M. Goodrich and A. W. Head; the seating capacity was exhausted and two or three dozen chairs had to be brought in to the service; then the steps of the pulpit served for seats for many children. There were three prophecies given which were needed and the meeting was a grand spiritual feast for those present.

The evening hour was occupied by Elder F. B. Farr, assisted by Elder L. F. Ferguson. The audience was not quite so large as there was preaching at the 1st and 3d branches.

Elder J. S. Roth began his series of meetings here Monday Feb. 24th and is having large crowds every night with from 15 to 30 and 40, and not less than 85 to 1005 Sunday evening, March 2d of those not of the faith. The Elder has a very convincing way in winning the hearts and minds of those who belong to other churches and those who are not members of any church.

We began our meetings after all the other churches in South St. Joe had had their revival meetings but since Bro. Roth started his meetings we notice the same churches are again adorned with the stretched signs across their buildings, which reads thus—Gospel Meetings Every Night Come and hear the Singing. We have more outsiders than any three put together and larger crowds than any two with their big meetings. We think we will baptize from 4 to 6 for the first week's labor of Bro. Roth.

The Religio is held Sunday afternoons at 4 o'clock on account of giving way to not break into Bro. Roth's meetings Friday evenings.

Our choir is composed of ten to twelve voices and piano and 8 stringed instruments. It is quite interesting to hear this string band as it is composed of very small children under the musical direction of Bro. Philo L. Rogers.

Bro. Chas. R. Bootman was ordained priest at the conference.

The wedding of Bro. Charles P. Paul and Sr. Lola Blanche Atkins was at first a quiet affair but the news spread far ahead of newspaper reports and proved to keep the telephones and operators quite busy for several hours here in the city and in Dekalb Co.

A. A. RICHARDSON.

March 2, 1913.

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

The reports coming from the sunny South through our esteemed Bro. H. D. Ennis, of blossoming roses, strawberries gleaming lusciously red on the vines—ten pound cabbages, on the market and everything else correspondingly summy—sound like fairy tales to us, who are at present, inhabiting a snow and ice-cradled region with a frigid atmosphere surrounding us.

However we are rejoicing in the knowledge that this cannot last always, and presently breezes will blow birds will sing and flowers will bloom for us, and we will forget the winter of our discontent."

As a church we have been active in many ways of late. In addition to sermons by our pastor, we have been favored by a number of other speakers, and you know variety is always entertaining.

Bro. Fred B. Farr of Cameron and John Davis of Stewartville, held a series of meetings at the brick church last week, which were fairly well attended considering the cold and stormy weather and which we hope will be productive of good.

We understand Bro. Davis will hold meetings at Wyatt Park Mission during the coming week.

On Saturday and Sunday the 22d and 23d, occurred the regular district conference, at the Second Branch, South St. Joseph. At the Sunday afternoon prayer and testimony meeting so great was the throng that it was impossible to seat all and numbers filled the vestibule and ante rooms, many standing all during the services. It reminded us of the hymn

"Give us room that we may dwell"
Zion's children cry aloud.

See their numbers how they swell,
How they gather like a cloud."

Thank God for the harvesters and the harvest. At the beginning of the meeting four earnest serious looking young men were ordained and set apart to the following offices—one elder and three priests. Two of these were members of the first branch—Bro. Roy R. Fifer, elder and Bro. Paul Pugsley, priest.

How it rejoices our hearts to see noble young men like these coming to the front in the work of the Lord. May the good Father supply the spiritual help necessary to the carrying on of their work we humbly pray. God's Holy Spirit was with us in abundance at this meeting, to the cheering and comforting of the saints. Little Charline Margaret Goodrich, was blessed by Bro. A. W. Head, her father assisting.

Truly our Sunday school seems to be permeated, by an atmosphere of vivid life. We were astonished at the number present on the morning of the 2nd which was unusually cold. The interest in the school is increasing. New members coming every Sunday. New and interesting features are introduced every Sunday. Our school is one to be proud of. The graded quarterlies are well received and seem to be well studied.

Our beautiful new table purchased by the school is in every way perfectly adapted to the needs of Branch Religio and school and is also a handsome ornament to the room.

The Religio is experiencing a delightful wave of sociability and hospitality, an evidence of congeniality and good comradeship beautiful to see. The attendance is fine, interest in the lessons—evident, and the happiness of the young folks, (none of them over 80) in their innocent pleasures is such cheering to see. The Valentine social on the 14th was a decided success.

On the 21st the members were surprised by some of their number, by a Washington Birthday party. Patriotic decorations made gay the room, patriotic songs and readings entertained, and refreshments consisting of hatched shaped cakes and cherry punch were served.

On the next Friday, Sr. Ruby Jackson surprised the members with a nice little treat, and at the close of the last meeting, Bro. and Sr. Roy Weamer took the Religious home with them in a body and entertained them royally. Long live the spirit of sociability and good fellowship and above all long live the interest in God's work that is at present displayed by the young people.

This branch is going to turn out a number of "earnest workers for the Master." Praise be to him. The prayer union, has been meeting at the homes of the shut ins this winter and the meetings have been spiritual and comforting to a great degree, both to visitors and visited.

A number are looking forward with pleasant anticipation to attending general conference.

REPORTER.

HOLDEN, MO.

The new year has brought many blessings to the Holden Branch. The middle of January, Bro. J. F. Curtis dropped in and spoke for us on Sunday, which resulted in a two week's effort, Bro. Wm. Lewis coming in on Wednesday to assist, best interest was manifested from the first, good attendance of saints and outsiders. On the 26th thirteen precense souls was led into the water by Bro. Curtis.

Feb. 16th President J. W. Layton was permitted to lead four more through the door into the kingdom.

By the direction of the Lord and the vote of the branch seven of the brothers have been ordained to the Aaronic priesthood, and one recommended to the stake conference for the office of elder.

The wedding bells ringing, as a branch we have lost one of our most faithful workers, Sister Berda Lovell, who will make her home near Lamoni with Bro. Roy Chandler, the captured.

Bro. Lewis' services in the branch will not soon be forgotten, he left us meditating on his wise fatherly counsel and advice, his testimonies were grand, about 30 blessings were given while here, assisted by his daughter Ruth.

We were shocked when the news came that Bro. D. D. Babcock had passed away at the Kingston Home in Independence, where he had gone some 5 weeks before to spend the remainder of his days, the remains were brought here for interment.

Jan. 24th Bro. Curtis enroute home from his recent debate, stopped and held three more interesting meetings baptizing eight more, making an addition of twenty-five to this branch this year, Bro. Curtis' labors are much appreciated among us.

R. O. Self and C. Conley opened up meetings at the Fairview school house, good interest.

Sunday school and Religio are doing fine work, Saints are awaking to their blessings and privileges, and the work looks bright before us.

A. A. S.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

The morning of Feb. 23, the young people's prayer service was reported as having been exceptionally good, and Bro. H. C. Burgess the Sunday school supt., urged that all who could possibly do so attend, and receive the blessings such services afford. We have been favored the past two Sundays with good talks to the school by Bro. Chas. Tanner our assistant supt. and Sr. G. Evans our treasurer. Sr. Evans was formerly Sybilja Burgess.

The Religio is doing nicely; good interest in lessons, and fine programs. The Mite Society had charge of the program the evening of Feb. 21st in honor of their 37th anniversary also Washington's birthday. The evening was a very pleasant one indeed. A pleasing feature was the ladies' songs as they were stated around a quilt in a quilting frame. Refreshments were served at the close of the program.

Bro. G. S. Trowbridge delivered a splendid discourse the morning of Feb. 23d, his theme being "We cannot serve God and mammon."

Bro. Archibald occupied the evening hour. his theme being organization and organization.

Our sacrament service was presided over by Bro. Archibald and Filibot assisted by Bro. Reeves and Trowbridge. A peaceful spirit reigned, the admonition of which seemed to be, "Unity"

Bro. S. A. Burgess delivered the evening discourse, March 24th his subject being, Brotherly Love.

The district conference will convene in St. Charles, Mo., March 15th and 16th.

CORRESPONDENCE

MONTE VISTA, Colo., Feb. 3.

Dear Ensign—The saints here are alive and doing what they can for the advancement of the work, but as they have no house of worship we have had to do the best we could, holding forth at Sr. Schall's house when we were here, and from house to house we warned the people of the restored gospel. On February 7th we baptized one lady, and on the 2d we baptized two more making nine in all at this place, and there are others believing our message, and we hope will be with us before long. Thus far I have baptized twenty-three precious souls into the kingdom of the Lord, and hope to be able to continue in the good work, and do all I can for the salvation of my fellowmen.

In gospel bonds,
J. F. Petre.

HILLMAN, Northern Mich., Feb. 7.

Dear Ensign—A few lines to let you hear from this part of the vineyard. I came here just before conference last fall. Bro. Alvin Ellis and myself held some meetings in a hall at Hillman, and also went out five miles to a school house. I met some with whom I had been raised until about twenty-five years old, then were separated over thirty years. I began to tell the gospel to them and they soon became interested. I baptized eight at that place, Bro. Ellis two, making ten here now; I baptized two on Sunday, the second, and Wednesday evening, the fifth, joined together Sr. Ruth Crowford and Owen Wood in matrimony, at their mother's house.

The work is moving along nicely in the Northern District though sometimes it has been stormy and cold. I have been here this time ten days. I go away on Monday to another part of the field of labor. I also have had the pleasure of baptizing three of my sister's children—two girls and a boy. They had grown up and were married and had families; so the good work moves along. Best wishes to all.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
A. E. Burr.

WEST FORK, Ind., Feb. 6.

Editor Ensign—Some time ago I wrote a short letter to you but only an extract of it was published so this time I will just write the extracts.

Jan. 7th Bro. Chas. A. Nolan and the writer came to Birdseye and found the little band of Saints and their little Sunday school in a prosperous condition. We began meetings at the old L. D. S. fort, Oak Hill school house, Bro. Halb came Jan. 19th and on account of rainy weather he stayed and helped us in our meeting.

We had good attendance and fairly good interest and order until Sunday night, Jan. 26th, a bullet, supposed to be fired from a 22 caliber rifle, came through a north window passed about two feet in front of the speaker and went through the opposite window. Bits of glass were scattered over the desk and on the preacher's Bible.

Three nights later five or six rocks came through the window and rolled over the floor near the desk where the speaker stood. By this time a number of the people were afraid and the attendance was small so we closed February 2nd.

The saints here are honoring the law and trying to find out who the guilty parties are and have them dealt with according to law.

This neighborhood like some others is not as good as it should be, but there are a number of people who may come into the church sometime if the gospel work will be continued. We hope that the missionaries who may be sent to Southern Indiana the ensuing conference year will look after the needs of this part of the field next summer and hold more meetings there and at several places round about.

We began a meeting at West Fork yesterday. Bro. Moler came in a little before meeting time and helped us start the meeting. Bro. Nolan and Moler will continue the meeting and I will labor with Bro. Halb a short time before going home to Hutton Valley, Mo.

In gospel bonds,
Fred Moser, Jr.

LEOMINSTER, Mass.

Dear Ensign—I want to thank the dear sisters that wrote kind letters of cheer to me and my husband. He has been confined to the house for some time with nervous heart trouble and I have been a helpless shut-in for years so dear ones you can see what kindness means to us. We not only are poor but have many other cares and troubles. As long as I could do right fancy work we got along, but the past two years I have been unable to knit but little. I still have a number of pairs of baby booties at 35c I would be grateful for orders to get things I need badly. Husband works when he can and is very kind to me but the days are long and weary.

Your sister in Jesus,
Mrs. Roy Cowles.

343 LANCASTER ST.

MADISON, Wis.

Editor Ensign—Since returning from a trip through the west I have thought that a description of it might interest your readers.

My husband and I left the North Western Depot at Madison, Wis., on April 9, 1912, at 10:30 o'clock for St. Paul, Minnesota, reaching there without seeing much of the country, on Wednesday morning at 7:30, April 10th. We had breakfast, then a trolley ride to Minneapolis, returning in time to get tickets and sleeper for Spokane, Wash., on the Great Northern line.

We started on our trip with well filled lunch basket. Our car was a tourist sleeper, with a cook stove in vestibule, which many used for cooking and making coffee.

Our first two days was over a very desolate country, made more desolate by the flood-waters of the Missouri and smaller rivers. We saw many cabins on little knolls surrounded with water. Some were deserted, others with perhaps horses, cows, pigs and chickens huddled on a half acre. Once in awhile we could see people, mostly men and very few women and children. This impressed me more than anything else I saw while I was gone, except the large cities.

Just before sundown we had our first glimpse of the mountains. Before this our car of homesekers chattered, read, or dozed the time away. But no more books were looked at. The scenery was grand and beautiful. We were awe-struck at the deep chasms and long, high bridges; the swiftly flowing rivers, or small streams tumbling down the mountain sides making miniature falls. The vegetation and the people both seemed to change.

On Friday morning we reached Spokane and changed cars for Redmond, a little town in Central Oregon. We saw plenty of mountain scenery here and finally crossed the Columbia River. We changed cars again at a cluster of houses called Fall Bridge, where we stopped until Saturday at 12:30 in the afternoon. As far as the eye could see, nothing but sand met our view.

Leaving this town the railroad followed a river most of the way, which cut through a very deep canon, which once in awhile spread out showing farms or ranches and living things. Some places the walls of the canon were very steep and hundreds of feet high; so narrow in places there was just room for the track. One place we passed through four long tunnels in twenty minutes. Everything was very wild as this road was less than a year old.

We passed over high bridges where we could look down seventy or eighty feet and see the timbers sway and move with the motion of the train as it crawled over them. We could see construction gangs and rough men with rolls of bedding on their back, for this new country could not always supply them sleeping bunks or beds. The scenery was more wonderful than any we had yet seen. We reached Redmond at six o'clock in a snow and sleet storm although everywhere vegetation was green. We remained in Redmond three months, visiting our daughter and enjoying the mountains. We could see many peaks of the Cascade Range, the highest ones being Mt. Jefferson and Mt. Hood; also the Three Sisters.

The vegetation was sage brush, bunch grass and juniper trees, with strange flowers of many varieties. We enjoyed our visit and trip very much, but I soon tired of the mountains always being there, and the rivers never flowing quietly but rushing along over stones, down steep inclines and never stopping. And soon the strange gray look of the sage and juniper made me wish for level Wisconsin with her quiet lakes and green vegetation.

We left Redmond, June 16th, for Portland over the same road as far as Spokane. From there we passed through farming and grazing country, finally seeing timber again. We spent two days in Portland sight-seeing in auto and trolley cars. Its newness made it different from our eastern cities. We spent one evening at The Oakes, a beautiful park with all kinds of amusements; and here we began to see Chinese in plenty.

Tuesday morning we left for San Francisco and a sight of the old Pacific. As we rode all night we didn't see much scenery but we passed through Sacramento. It was wonderful to see the line of cars run the ferry boat and float across the bay to the city. Here we spent nearly two days sight-seeing. Most of the time we were at the beach and Cliff House, going in the evening with a crowd and a guide through Chinatown; down flights of stairs to cellars, up long flights to tenements. Chinese were everywhere. Some scowling darkly as if resenting our intrusion; others were jolly and ready to talk. One house was filled with relics of the earthquake and fire. The city still shows ravages of both, but most of it has been rebuilt.

We left San Francisco at sundown for Salt Lake City over the mountains. Just at daylight we awoke to find it snowing hard and the ground covered. For miles we went through long snow sheds and then much fir and pine timber could be seen.

The next morning we awoke to find our train just starting across Great Salt Lake. The wind was still but there seemed to be a dead swell on the lake, the waters looking like oil. It was beautiful, with the sun just coming up turning the waters to the colors of the rainbow.

We spent one day seeing Salt Lake City and the temple. At noon we went to the tabernacle with a guide and heard the great organ recital. We saw many curious sights. Old adobe houses that must have been built by the first settlers, were still standing.

Tired and footsore we were glad to start on the last of our trip. From here on we saw the most wonderful scenery in our long ride through Grand Canon. I am not able to describe it in the least. We were three hours on an observation car riding over the hanging bridge, between walls three thousand feet on one side and fifteen hundred on the other where we could see miners at work.

Finally we reached Kansas City where we spent the night, but were too tired for sight-seeing, and too dusty and smoky as we had come where they used coal instead of oil in the engines, which by the way, it took three to pull the train over the mountains.

We arrived home at noon, June 30th, and found everything well and our friends apparently glad to see us return.

Mrs. H. D. Stevens.

The ability to enter an opportunity does not come with the opportunity, but has preceded it, and is waiting for it. Here is the difference between the faithful and the faithless. The one is ever acquiring new ability for the coming opportunity. The other is looking for the opportunity, without any heed to preparation for it. This is the difference between Daniel and the other students and members of the faculty, and the King's counselors. When the door opened, when the opportunity came, Daniel entered, and the others had to stay out.—Ex.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

A LIVING CHURCH.

Sermon delivered at the Stone Church, Independence, Mo., Sunday Morning, Feb. 17, 1913, by Elder Geo. Jenkins. REPORTED BY SR. BELLE R. JAMES.

I can truthfully say that I am glad to be with you, though not as your speaker. It is not my purpose to entertain you, but to break unto you the bread of life, realizing the fact that there are those in our midst that are far better acquainted with the things of God and that which God has revealed for our salvation, so that it seems to us that it would have been better for us to have been a hearer, one of those to be taught rather than to attempt to teach. We shall endeavor to present to you some of those things that seem to be so reasonable to us, something it seems that all mankind should know and understand.

I take as a basis for that which I wish to present, Genesis 2d chapter, 7th verse. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul. In connection with this, the 20th chapter of John, 22d verse. "And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them: receive ye the Holy Ghost." While the first part of our text is in the fore part of the Old Testament, and the latter part in the New, we have quite a bit of territory lying between the two; but we hope to blend the two together, so that we can see the relationship in the two lives thus given—one of the man that is formed from the dust of the ground, and the other the one that was formed from those individuals whom God had created, who by following the Master, had been gathered and organized into a body which he called the body of Christ or the church. As with the first creation so with the second, or the formation of the living body, the church. There had to be a Designer and a Creator of both and each was created in such a manner as to render it capable of fulfilling the purposes which the Creator designed.

We do not believe that God made this dust from which he formed man, or this world, out of nothing, but from existing material. He called together the particles that constitute this earth, and put into operation the law which brought these elements together; thus making the earth for this specific purpose, that he might have a place where those spirits that he had formed before this time, might come and receive a body. From these assembled elements he formed the human body—created man, but we are given to understand that after man had been molded from the dust, there was no life at all in him, no more than any other lump of clay. But God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life—and we might say right here this breath of life was understood by Solomon to be the spirit, as shown by his statement referring to death: "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." (Ecc. 12:7), evidencing to us that the man who was made from the dust will go back to its elements from whence it came, and the spirit upon leaving that form would go back to God who gave it. This separation of body and spirit called death came by reason of the transgression of God's law; thus for a limited time, seemingly, thwarting the plan and the purposes of God in making this earth, the eternal home of man.

Hence we find that this man is called Adam—I was going to say, and I believe I will put it that way—that he was the only animal that God created having a spirit with that degree of intelligence as to be able to reason. No other creature did God create and place within it that intelligence which you could reason with, to which you give light and receive light in return. And I want to urge this thought because it has its application in the later creation referred to in the latter part of our text. God never placed that same spirit in any other animal except man, and for proof, you may go with me to any corner of the globe and there take an animal, a monkey if you like, take also a child, each of them one day old, and if you like to give the monkey double the amount of teaching that you do the babe, continuing day by day, but so far as the little animal is concerned, you can never raise it in the scale of intelligence to the point where you can reason with it; or any other animal. You cannot do it; but on the other hand the babe will develop in its mental powers and in time be capable of reasoning with you. So we see that there is a difference in the two. No matter how far up the scale of attainments the child is brought you can lift it higher, but the other you cannot. You may teach the other to do some tricks, but you never can impart to it that intelligence that you can to the child.

Now in all of his creation God never breathed into anything the same spirit of life like he breathed into man, and hence Solomon has said, "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" The one is always being elevated and growing higher under the right culture, while the other will go back. Now, then, as you notice, man is the only one in which the spirit of intelligence was placed.

The second text, that of John 20:22, "And when he had so said, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, receive ye the Holy Ghost." In this instance the second man, the church, which the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Ephesians first chapter and twenty-third verse says in his body, that is Christ's; so that from the existing material of human beings which God had formed, Jesus came and organized the spiritual body, or church. The first was made of the elements, and was called Adam, and in preparation for the second, God selects a man whose name was John and sends him to preach the gospel of a higher life, and to baptize, and bring together the individual parts for the formation of the spiritual body, the church, and as the Bible says here, his preaching was to prepare this people. He preached to them faith, repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins that they might be prepared; and I want to say here that it is an utter impossibility to prepare this material in any other way.

Just look at Adam. God has a specific rule here by which the material might be brought together that the world might be made, that from that he could thus form this first man. No other way, perhaps of doing this. If you think so, go out into the world and try it. Make the form of a man, and in it put eyes, and ears and nose and arms and limbs, and mouth, and breathe into it the breath of life if you can. Of course it cannot be done. So we hold that it was just as much impossible in the second instance for man to prepare a body or church into which the Holy Ghost can be breathed.

Hence, then, we see the necessity of God sending John for this work, that he might prepare a people, that this spirit might enter into. So then, as in the first instance, if you can go and make a mud man and breathe into it the spirit of life and make it a living soul, then you might go and bring together a congregation of people without the voice of God and without God's direction, and give the Holy Ghost. It will be just as easy for you to do the one as the other. But we find it cannot be done.

In the second instance Jesus told them that "it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you." So we discover that when Jesus was forming his church he breathed upon them that they might receive the Holy Ghost which is the life and light of the body, in a similar manner as God breathed upon Adam that he might receive life.

Now you will notice that there were organs within the first creation, it being a complete organization. I have many times wondered, with what little study I have done along the line of trying to understand man, "Oh man, understandest thou thyself?" In studying anatomy and physiology we find that every muscle and every nerve, every capillary and every vein, with every other part, works harmoniously together, all being necessary in order for the human body to fulfill the design of the Creator, and when any part is weakened or destroyed, the effectiveness of the body is impaired to a certain degree, the whole body suffers. So we find that within the church the Lord has placed those parts or officers called apostles, prophets, elders, priests, teachers, deacons, and others I might name, each officer having his proper place and work in that body.

Take the organ of sight; you cannot see out of the ear; nor hear by the eye; God so decreed that the eye had its specific work to do, and also the ear and one part cannot take the place of another. So within the church-man, that there was a specific work for each officer to do, and the work assigned to the apostle could not be done by the deacon or by the elder; every officer is necessary, and hence the necessity of the body of Christ retaining its identity, with every part intact in order that that body in its organic form might accomplish all that God designed in its formation. Take away the eyes; destroy the hearing; can it be possible that a man will reach a high degree of efficiency? Without the organ of sight or hearing he could not without help maintain himself. Then if he cannot, it argues that this second man—the church cannot perform its work, and maintain life, with one or more of the vital parts removed. The church cannot get along without the apostle, the prophet, or the priest, and nothing can be supplied in their places any more than you can substitute something to take the place of an eye which has been removed.

So in forming that church, we go back to where Jesus took his departure, that the breath of life, or the Holy Spirit did come into the church. We see that demonstrated on the day of Pentecost. When the Holy Spirit did come upon that body and it gave that body life. I want to say further that it gave life to every particle of that body just the same as in the first instance; that there was life throughout the entire being; that God had breathed into the nostrils the breath of life. So then, in this man-church that God had formed, placing this spirit in them, that it gave life so that it moved in a way to accomplish the work that God designed it should.

I want to call your attention to another thought right here, and that is, that when God sent his Holy Spirit, the Holy Ghost into this man-church that he had formed, there was no other church under the sun that had that Spirit, or that he placed that spirit within. There were other organizations, other bodies that had been formed by man. There was the body called the Pharisees Church, the Sadducees, and the Essenes, but neither Jesus Christ nor God ever breathed into them the Holy Ghost. No more than in the first instance when he made Adam and the other animals that surrounded him. In Adam only did he give that spirit of life; and so in the formation of this second man, the church, in that church, the Nazarene church, in that church and that alone, separate and apart from all others did he send the Holy Ghost.

Now what was the office work of that Spirit? When Adam received the breath of life he became a living soul. It gave him intelligence; he could comprehend; he could see; he could understand; he could talk; he could hear and reason and you could reason with him and he could reason with you. When the church received the breath of life—the Holy Ghost, it became a living body, the tabernacle in which Christ dwelt through the Spirit as stated by Paul in Eph. 2:22, and through that living body Christ spoke to men, and so long as it retained its life he would continue to speak.

We read in Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians 12:8, "For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom." Yes, the wisdom of God that came by that Holy Spirit, the Holy Ghost. "To another knowledge," and to this one that received the understanding or the Spirit of knowledge, that individual's knowledge was thus increased, because he was now in a position in which he could receive from God and as he received from God light and understanding, he could impart it to others. There were other ways in which the Spirit manifested itself showing that life was in the body.

The purpose of the church was the development and salvation of the souls of man. Man could not have been saved without it. It was necessary to have it, and so we read in the Acts of the Apostles: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."—Acts 2:47. If they could have been saved without the church, there would have been no necessity in organizing it; and as we see it was necessary for their salvation, so he organized it just as it should have been organized in order to accomplish that work.

This Spirit that came to the church, which was the Holy Ghost, was to lead and guide into all truth, and the Savior has left upon record this statement, that he that worshipped God must worship him in Spirit and in truth. Men may worship in sincerity but not have a bit of truth, and they may have the truth without worshipping in Spirit, so we see the necessity of this Spirit coming when it does come and it leads into all truth, then we can intelligently worship the great Creator that has called upon us to give our life-work and service to him.

If that church is in existence now will it not perform the same kind of labor and work that it did when it was first formed? Take Adam, he was to till the soil. We see men working along that line yet. We see the stone-mason, the brick-layer, the carpenter, we see men performing the same work today that he did in the beginning of the world. Then, how about the church? We go back to the days of the organization of the church. It started to bring about the salvation of man, began to work along that line; and we see the apostles having a specific work to do. We see that the elders had a specific work to do, and likewise the bishops and others. So we see it is necessary today for the same kind of work to go on; and when we see the workman today carrying his tools along the street, we can tell what kind of a workman he is by the tools he carries. If he has carpenter tools, we think he is a carpenter going out to build a house; so it is with the doctor, lawyer, stone-mason. He may not be so good as some, but we know he is working at that trade. Hence we find within the church, though it may not be accomplishing as fast today what you and I desire that it should, but we are aware of the fact that it is coming up to the standard of perfection that God has designed, yet in this organization the officers Christ placed in the church are still there, with all the manifestations of life through the Spirit, and the work is going on for the salvation of men.

So in this church the Spirit is at work in order for the perfecting of the saints of God. We take the life in this body, the blood. It has its office work to do; for instance there is an injury upon this finger: the blood immediately goes to work to restore and heal that; and we want to say right here that every law that God has given is a law of life. He never has given a law of death. We see that immediately when there is a repair needed, not only in the body, but in the trees of the forest, and all forms of life, that God's law is a law of life and tends that way and will work to restore injured parts and keep the organization perfect.

God has placed the Spirit within the church to preserve it and heal it of any defects that might come upon it, just like the bark upon the tree; knock it off, and it isn't but a little while until the law of life will rebark that sapling. Knock it off a second time and again the law of life will set to work and rebark it. Why? It is God's work, designed to preserve and save life; and so it is with this Spirit that God has sent to this church or body of Christ of which he is the head. That Spirit is to preserve life, eternal life, and as it works within our members it will accomplish that; and while it is given in order to perpetuate life, we find that each particle of this body must perform its part of the work in order that this may be done. The officers placed in the church are all necessary. A priest going according to the law to perform his duty from house to house, praying with and teaching the saints is preserving life within them. The elder also and the teacher and deacon, working according to their respective duties as defined in the law will heal injuries and bring about perfection.

John says: "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." How can the blood of this brother here coursing through his veins heal the bruise upon my finger? No. It must be the blood within my body. So it is the Spirit of God, that the blood of Jesus—not the blood that trickled down on Calvary's cross, but that Spirit of life which the Holy Ghost coming to you and to your speaker in our every day life will throw out such a flood of life to the individual or member that has become sick by reason of those powers coming against him in opposition to the law of God, has caused him to do something that is wrong. By that spirit of love, meekness and kindness that we exhibit towards him, we are thus sending to him the life-giving properties that Jesus Christ designed we should through our mission work and our performance of that part of the work within the body of Christ; we are sending help and encouragement to our brother which when it reaches him, will cause him to retrace his footsteps and come to Christ.

Brothers and sisters, you never can reach that plane of spirituality by making men and women stepping stones upon which you step and lift yourself up; but by placing them higher than yourself, they will reach out and take you by the hand and help you up. This is that spirit of love working, which is the Holy Ghost sent down from the Father of life.

"But," says one, "I see good traits and good character in all people." We do, Yes, we see that, and we have just now coming to our mind this quotation, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her evil deeds, for her sins have reached unto heaven." Evidencing to us that there are good people there, but God wants to bring them in where they can reach greater perfection and accomplish greater and grander things than it is possible to reach or accomplish without it.

So then it is necessary that we have that spirit, there is a law which governs us as members. For instance, there is blood coursing through my body, and in order for this arm to contain the blood, the arm must be connected with the body. So it is with the individual that wants to work under the influence of God's law and the divine Spirit and receive the efficacy that comes through it. He must be attached to that body through which it is given. Then when he is connected with that body the Spirit which is the life of the body will reach the individual member and he is made alive and kept alive. Thus we see the same kind of character demonstrated in the life of that individual as it was in Christ.

The church then, organized by divine direction after the original pattern, works to the end that God might be glorified, and that we attain to the highest possible attainments in this life. Hence, then, I say, the necessity of extending the hand of love which will elevate our brother, which will do him good. And I want to state here, the individual that receives the most, he is the individual that gives the most. It is in giving that we receive, and in holding back it is taken from us. For the Savior said, "If that light which is in you become darkness, behold, how great is that darkness." We find that it is necessary that that Spirit is with us, and when it is, we will be walking as the Master taught: and how beautiful it is to look upon the life of Christ! In every move of life it was to help men, to raise them higher and to be a benefit unto them. So then again, can we afford to live in any other way, only letting our ambition be that we are going to elevate humanity, we are going to lift him up and do him good?

I have often thought, dear saints and friends, that we come far short of this one thing, that we seek every opportunity of helping to bless everybody? It seems that the tendency is to help self; loving self all the time. Leave self out of it; taking Jesus as the example. Leaving the rule "All of self and none of thee," and turning over the page and saying, "None of self and all of thee," seems to me should be our mission in life, which would bring joy, peace and comfort to those whom we associate with; and I want to say that in my life work, the joy and comfort that has come to me has been when I have tried to assist and help others, and make others comfortable and make them joyous and happy. Peace has come to me when I have given peace; and anguish has come to me when I have caused sorrow. We ought to learn the important lesson that we are to give, be always on the side of giving, that we may bless God; and I am glad to state, kind friends, that in my missionary work in the last 21 years or more that in the world where I have gone and have given peace and comfort and solace, it has brought peace and comfort to me; and I want to state still further, that we have the best people on the earth, so far as that is concerned to aid and assist and bring joy and peace and comfort. I have tried being in the world; I know what it is to be there; so that which will do us good on the other side will be the seeds of kindness, of good deeds that we have sown here.

There is a rule that you can apply in every action of life, and Paul said "That which you sow you shall also reap." No man ever went out and sowed wheat and then gathered corn; but if we are going to reap that which we sow, dear friends, the reaping time is on the other side. It is the sowing time now. I hear the young men saying, "But I must sow my wild oats." I say "Go and sow them, but you will reap them in tares if you do." My advice would be look at what the harvest is going to be and then sow. Count the cost and see whether you can afford it or not, or whether it will profit you. And in many instances when I have sat down and counted the cost, I have thought No, it will not do, I will sow the good seed. A boy of 12 years sat in my congregation one morning when I said, "When you came into the church, the angel in heaven with a golden pen wrote your name on a white page without a blot. Is it that way today? What are you doing? Are your good deeds overbalancing the bad ones? How many more good deeds did you do yesterday than bad ones? Monday morning the boy came to me and said, "My bad deeds yesterday over-ran the good ones. I am going to change." He wrote down the times he thought he did wrong and those times he did right and the bad over-balanced the good. He says, I must change; I want the good deeds to over-balance the bad ones. I don't want it to be all bad ones."

And I was glad that I left such an impression upon the youth, of that kind.

If we could only begin now the record and see how many more good deeds we could do than those evil deeds, it would be far better for us and it will please us better when we come to the time when we must bid farewell to the scenes of this life and have to look God in the face and answer to him for the conduct of our life here.

So may God help us today, friends, that we see to it, that that life, that Spirit, the Holy Ghost which has come to us, shall not be driven from us and taken away, but that we retain it, and in retaining it, it will thus cause our body to do those things that will honor and glorify God. Thank you.

BIBLE TRANSLATIONS.

BY ELDER T. C. KELLEY.

For years there have fallen upon the heads of Latter Day Saints generally and Joseph Smith particularly, very severe and sometimes very unkind criticisms, because Joseph translated and the saints accept the inspired translation of the "Holy Scriptures."

Through pulpit and press our enemies have sought to make the people believe that we did not believe in the Bible at all, because we did not accept the King James Translation as being absolutely perfect. Very frequently they have sought to make capital out of the statement in the epitome of faith, which says: "We believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God so far as it is translated correctly."

This, they argue, leaves Joseph free to make any alteration in the text which might be deemed necessary to sustain his own ideas.

The Book of Mormon says that "many plain and precious things," were taken from the book,—the record of the Jews—the Bible. (Page 36, last edition.)

Because of this, too, the saints have been accused of opposing and even fighting the Bible.

Of course, the accusation is untrue, and the criticism groundless, but if it were true as our unfair critics would have it, we are still a long ways behind the Baptists in "attacking" the Bible as witness the following:

OLD TEXTS REREAD.

BY THE INTERPRETER

It was remarked once by a famous interpreter that the most men read their Bibles "like cows that stand in the thick grass and trample the finest flowers and herbs." Certainly a closer scrutiny discloses new beauties, reveals new meanings and often takes away old longstanding difficulties of belief.

In connection with Israel's flight out of Egypt, for example, there is a difficult passage where a more careful reading removes the misconception. It is the oft-quoted text regarding the "spoiled" jewelry of old Egypt. "And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses, and they borrowed of the Egyptians jewels of gold, and raiment" (Exodus 12:35).

For the correction of this iniquitous translation, it is sufficient simply to point to the fact that the word strangely rendered borrowed here is the same as that properly translated in Psalm 2:8 ASK. "Ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Substitute the word "borrow," and the reading is as ridiculous in this case as the King James reading of Exodus 12:35 is vicious.

Think of the son being told to borrow of the Father. What he did was to ask, make demand, lay claim, on the basis of what were his just deserts; and precisely this is what the long-enslaved but now conspicuously owned and honored Israelites did with their Egyptian oppressors. Considering what was rightly theirs and yet had long been withheld, with God's good hand upon them, they asked or made demand for such legitimate gifts and accustomed presents as would be them on their way; and they got them, their late masters fairly pressing the bonus on them at the last, to hasten their steps.

—Young People, Vol. 33, No 1, Page 4. Published by The American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia.

"Interpreter" calls this an "iniquitous translation." If so, a serious charge lies at the door of the translators of the King James version of the Bible. If they have done "iniquitous work in this instance, may they not have done the same in divers other instances?

Baptists, as well as others, find much fault with Latter Day Saints for making the claim that the King James, as also all other translations, were marred by imperfections, and that the Inspired translation is less liable to criticism than any other. But I have yet to hear of any Latter Day Saint charging that the translators of the authorized version, were guilty of "iniquitous" conduct, in their work of translating the Bible.

With much harshness, Baptists and others, have criticised, Section 64, par. 6. Doctrine and Covenants; some of them calling it "the stealing revelation," because it teaches that in order to provide for his Saints, the Lord may "take when he please, and pay as seemeth him good: Wherefore, as ye are agents, and ye are on the Lord's errand; and whatsoever ye do according to the will of the Lord, is the Lord's business," etc.

This has been tortured into a permission to steal, or rob, or "spoil" the Gentiles by the saints. But this is plainly a misconstruction of the language, for the plain requirement is, that whatever is done must be done "according to the will of the Lord."

This Baptist interpreter reasons that it would have been iniquitous for the Israelites to have "borrowed" from the Egyptians, and denounces the King James version, as an "iniquitous" one, because as it stands, the language compels us to believe that wrong doing on the part of God's people was condoned if not encouraged.

But the Doctrine and Covenants teaches that whatever they did must be "according to the will of the Lord," and yet this is construed or rather misconstrued so as to encourage thieving or robbery.

There may be some merit in this Baptist interpretation of Exodus 12:35, but those who make it and those who accept it, ought to be consistent enough to employ the same rules of interpretation to both the Bible and Doctrine and Covenants. Failure to do so, subjects them to the charge of prejudice and bigotry, and also advertises their disregard of the golden rule.

HOW A SISTER HELPED TO SPREAD THE GOSPEL.

Dear Ensign—Having been requested by your editor to write some of my experiences while trying to warn others of this gospel that we love dearer than our lives. I will tell you of one call that I made about one year ago, which is still bringing good results.

About three miles from our home there was an Advent woman holding Bible studies, and as I had been invited to attend her meetings, I made it a subject of prayer but was not impressed to attend until three weeks later, when the Spirit told me to go. I found there about eight women each with her Bible—there were four different denominations represented." The lesson for the hour was found in Rev. 12 chapter which she explained as we as a church understand it, and she gave us to understand that the Seventh day Advent was the church and the only church accepted by Christ.

I made no argument until her hour was up and she had closed her meeting, then I said if you would like to stay for a short time I would like to compare the Seventh day Advent and the L. D. S. church with the one we have been studying about, the one that was clothed with the sun and had a crown of twelve stars. They were all willing to listen. So in order to be the church accepted of Christ of course there would be no difference existing between the two. So we began with the organization of the church, and ask if her church had twelve apostles, which she had to admit had none, the same with prophets, patriarchs, priests, seventies teachers, etc., we found no resemblance whatever with the one established by Christ, but that they were all found in the L. D. S.

We then took in comparison the doctrine of the church and found the creed lacking, she made light of the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Spirit, also for blessing of children although it was read to her very plainly from the Bible of which she said in the beginning that she believed every word. She also denied the consciousness of the spirit between death and the resurrection. I referred them to the rich man and Lazarus. She said that was only a parable, but I said, Jesus said there was a certain rich man, but we could find other proof. We then read 1st Peter 3:18-20, where Christ after his crucifixion preached to those spirits that were disobedient in the days of Noah, while the ark was being built, we also read from 1 Peter 4:5-6 for, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the Spirit, showing plainly that the spirit was conscious, and that it could hear, repent, and reform, in the spirit world.

All understood it but the two Advent women. Their leader said our teaching was all of the devil. I said "if it is you can read it from your Bible as well as mine for they have the same teaching.

Well the two Advent women left and the others all stayed until lamp light and listened to the beautiful message the angel brought, and upon invitation I met with them every week at another house and more added to our meetings. This broke up the former meeting and she had to start in a different locality.

The result of our meetings were two ladies baptized in about three months, after our first meeting, both of which we have reason to be proud, for the ability they possess that enable them to be a great help in this work. Last Sunday we had the pleasure of witnessing the baptism of their two sons one a young man with notable character. In his confirmation he was told that he had a great work to do and the time was near when he would be ordained to the priesthood. The other was a bright boy of 11 years. There are a number of others that will follow soon.

This is the result of a little sacrifice, and the blessing of God's Holy Spirit without which very little good would be accomplished. Great results follow the distribution of good literature and the explaining of the gospel when we go out trusting in God for direction and I have learned that we do not have to leave the work of warning our neighbor wholly to the priesthood, but God will bless the sisters also.

Are we willing to make the sacrifice in order that this work may spread and that those that are in darkness may be made to see the light.

Your sister in the gospel

ANOTHER RELIC GOES.

The only log house in Nauvoo that was built by the Mormons, that has been standing in late years, has been torn down. The picture shown herewith is a good photograph of it.

The house was standing on August Lange's property on Young street. This house was occupied during Mormon days by Mr. Corey, private secretary of Joseph Smith. It was one of many similar log houses built by the Mormons. When the Mormons first came to Nauvoo most of the houses built were log houses and shacks—temporary quarters to house the many people who came here. Most of these have now disappeared. Quite a number of the more substantial houses built later are still standing.—The Nauvoo Independent.

THE INTEREST FOR MOTHERS IN MONTESSORI PLAY MATERIALS.

BY JENNIE B. MERRILL, PH. D.
CONCLUDED.

Dr. Montessori claims that we are not only neglecting the full training of the senses, but that we make children domineering and disobedient by waiting on them so much as we do; she claims that we wait upon them, doing many unnecessary things for them because we are "in a hurry." We cannot wait for the little one!

What would become of us, she asks, if we fell into the midst of a population of jugglers, or of lightning-change impersonators? What should we do if, as we continued to act in our usual way, we saw ourselves assailed by these sleight-of-hand performers, hustled into our clothes, fed so rapidly that we could scarcely swallow, if everything we tried to do was snatched from our hands and completed in a twinkling, and we ourselves reduced to impotence and to a humiliating inertia.

Not knowing how else to express our confusion, we would defend ourselves from these madmen with blows and yells; and they having only the best will in the world to serve us, would call us haughty, rebellious, incapable of doing anything. We would say to those people, "come into our country and you will see the splendid civilization we have established, you will see our wonderful achievements." These jugglers would admire us infinitely, hardly able to believe their eyes, as they observed our world, so full of beauty and attraction, so well regulated, so peaceful, so kindly, but all so much stouter than theirs.

"Something of this sort," says the good doctor, "occurs between children and adults."

Dr. Montessori is intensely practical. She claims that we feed children and button their clothing for them much longer than necessary, and in so doing rob them of their personal rights of independence—even though we do it in kindness. We rob them of their rights to exercise their senses and their muscles in practical ways. She does not wish us to teach them to do these things, much less compel them, but instead has offered to us suggestions that will enable the child to teach himself. She believes in auto- or self-education with as little actual teaching or intervention as possible. She has in short turned the tables upon us adults, and says to us, "Hands off!"

It is quite true that it may not be possible, or at least convenient, for the child of three to dress himself wholly if breakfast or dinner or the train is waiting. We must not be unreasonable, but later in the day he may practice buttoning or lacing upon a little "loom," especially made for him, until his fingers are strengthened for more rapid movements. Dr. Montessori has in use twelve of these little looms, with flaps of different qualities of muslin, leather and cloth, with different sizes and kinds of buttons and with laces and ribbons to tie. It is all so simple and natural! The children love to work with these looms. They will concentrate upon one such loom for a half hour or even longer. It is as a toy to them. There is no hurry about it, and their fingers gradually become accustomed to the intricate movements necessary in lacing, in handling a button-book, or in tying a bow.

How many struggles and tears would be saved if more time could be given for the little ones to participate in such practical ways in the daily home tasks of buttoning up?

To the child who always loves to imitate his elders, it is no unpleasant task because no adult is hovering near, saying "No—no, that is wrong—take it out," etc. Dr. Montessori says, "Do not correct—let the child find the way. We learn by mistakes." If there are several children the younger ones will learn from the older ones.

Let the child skip buttons, or skip holes in lacing on the looms. If he asks to be shown, show him, but say little or possibly nothing. A child cannot listen and observe too.

We want to train children to concentrate, and we proceed by talking, or perhaps even by scolding, and by so doing we divide and dissipate attention. Let them concentrate upon the work while we keep in the background.

If you have no loom, why not take a little shoe, stuff it with paper to give it shape and let the child work upon it as long as he is content to do so? Even the feel of the tool in his hand is something for a first experience. Do not chide if that is all he gains. If he puts the book through a button-hole without securing it around the button, do not exclaim or try to show the next step—he will take another step next time or next or next, if left to himself. Do not hurry the child; do not teach him; he is trying an experiment in self-instruction. Let us watch it from a distant corner and learn how patient a little child can be, and how he enjoys making the simple, practical movements which he has watched mother and nurse making daily for many months. This is why he can teach himself. He has learned all he can by watching and seeing; he must get the "feel" in his hands and muscles.

Be patient with me while I repeat, "It is an important part of the method to let the child work alone—to keep your hands off." You are not to try to exercise the child's imagination by calling the buttons anything but buttons, nor the holes anything but holes. If you do not talk, you will not be tempted to do this. It is not the time during a practical exercise to divide the attention of a child between the real and the imaginary.

There are those who claim that Dr. Montessori neglects the imagination. We know also that there are those who claim that there is too much "make-believe" in the kindergarten. At present we suggest education in this particular. Let the child concentrate his attention as he wills to do upon his little task. Do not interrupt. Do not distract. Do not intervene. Observe, unnoticed, if you have time. It is fascinating to watch a little child learning to work with his hands, learning to be useful to himself and others, learning to use his own brain.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Sr. Florence B. Hopkins, Naylor, Mo.—Do any of the saints know of a little girl that needs a home? If so I would love to hear from them; would like her to be seven or eight years old.

N. H. Shaffer, Cappon Alberta, Gentleman:—Several years ago I bought a few small books or leaflets and I am so well pleased that I read some of them five to eight times—Creed Making, Book of Mormon, Reasons Why, and several others, and they are all rich. I want to see what you have, and if you will send me the ENSIGN I can then see what you have. I should also like to know of any saints here in central Alberta. I am no church member but I love to read such as you have. I live in twp. 24, Range 5.

Mrs. S. George, Pasco, Wash.—May I ask a favor of someone to write an article on Christian Science. There are many of them living here, and I have made every effort to enlighten them and ask help in this line.

Bro. F. T. Dobbie, Needville, Neb.—I came here a year ago last November and last spring, my son went blind and I felt it to be my duty to stay till he got better. He is some better but can't drive a team yet. We ask the saints to pray for him.

Elizabeth A. Ellis, Livingstone, Wis., Feb. 11.—It is with pleasure that I write these lines to you. I love to read the many letters and prophecies as I believe this is the church of Christ, and the way he taught when on earth, and if we do what is right God will bless us and help us to meet him in celestial glory. My husband departed the 27th of August and Bro. O. B. Wildermuth preached his funeral, and he has got a good name here; the people thought it was fine. May God's blessing fall on all who read this is my prayer.

Mrs. J. L. Gwynn, East Greenwich, R. I., R. F. D. No. 1, Feb. 14.—Dear ENSIGN enclosed find $1.00 remittance thanking you for sending it. I would like to know something about Pearl of Great Price "what is our attitude towards it."

The other day my husband's employer had lets to say about Joseph Smith, and the books, impostor, etc. I told him I did not know anything about the book, but humbly bore my testimony to the truth of what I did know about the work, and sent him a few Ensigns commencing with the church history. I wish I could afford to give him a year's subscription; he is one of the best men I know of. I get discouraged once in a while but I find opposition always does me good. An elder will find a welcome at my home.

Mrs. M. F. Lowry, McHue, Ark., Feb. 12.—I have been a member of the church for a long time. And this is my first time to write. I was baptized by Bro. F. L. Sawley, Feb. 25, 1904. I am now away from parents and in a strange place. I would like to know if there are any saints living near this place, or Batesville, Ark., which is our nearest railroad town it being about seven miles.

My husband does not belong to the church. But takes the Ensign and reads very much. I hope he may in time unite with the church. I am the eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Lowry of Mt. Vernon, Ill. I hope we may be where we can go to church and live among saints.

Mrs. Eva Thompson, Helm, Miss.—I have read the precious page of the Ensign and will try to write a few words I hardly know how begin but we must not expect to receive without giving as I have received much spiritual good from reading the letters that appear from week to week but I cannot give as interesting an experience as some can—my only aim in life is to please my heavenly Master. I was baptized the eighth of last December by Bro. J. W. Dubose I have never regretted the step I took although I have many temptations. My husband has never heard the gospel. If there are any saints in this country I do not know it, I am a long ways from my parents with my husband and little son. I do hope my husband will live to hear the gospel and believe and be saved. If any of the elders ever pass through this country they will be welcome at my home. I ask the prayers of all the saints.

Beulah Bledso, Washington, Ok., Feb. 21. I thought I would write as I never saw anything from this part of the vineyard. I am just a little girl, aged 14 and it has not been long since we were made to understand the gospel: it was but last summer when papa, mamma and myself were baptized into the kingdom by elder R. M. Maloney. We haven't any church here as there are but nine of the saints here. If any of the elders see this and are passing through this part of the country we would be glad to have them stop and hold a meeting for us. I will close by asking the prayers of all saints.

Ella Hawkins, McKinzie, Ala., Feb. 20.—I have been greatly cheered in reading our church paper, so much till I thought I would write. I trust this may at least help someone who may be struggling along as I am to gain eternal life. I am thankful for the many blessings I have received in this life for I do know I have received many good blessings since I have been in the church. I desire to press onward and let my light shine that it may cheer someone, discharging every duty so that I may enjoy more of God's Holy Spirit. I ask an interest in the prayers of all the saints.

Mrs. Jessie Love, Mansfield, Wash.—Since reading the letters in the Ensign thought it my duty to write a few lines as I have never seen anything from this part of the west. The gospel has never been preached in this part of the country. The people in general are quite prejudiced.

The fall of 1911 was the first time in seven years that I had had the privilege of meeting with the saints, was while visiting relatives in and near Pittsburg, Kans.

While there I was baptized into the fold by Bro. Geo. Edwards. I ask an interest in the prayers of the saints, as I am one among the isolated ones.

Willard E. Green, S. Boardman, Mich., Feb. 17.—My heart is in the work and I long to see Zion redeemed and the United Order of Enoch placed in a condition to help the poor of the church. While this is God's plan to bring about equality I can not see why the saints can not see it and trust him and do their duty and not follow after the world.

If Zion is ever redeemed it will be done in the Lord's way, not man's. Some seem to think and say "we can do nothing to help," and fold their arms. They do not seem to think that times count and wait for the dollars to come, and so the Lord's work stands still. Let us wake up and help to redeem the land that was promised by the Lord.

I for one would like to dwell in Zion when the saints are gathered and be with our Lord and Redeemer.

WOODBINE, IOWA, Feb. 8.

Editor Ensign:—I thought that I would write to your sacred pages and let you know that we are alive in the work of the Lord. We have been blessed this year in telling the glorious gospel story. Closed a series of four weeks meetings last night at this place. Baptized seventeen precious souls into the kingdom of God at this place and others are near the door. This makes thirty-eight that I have baptized this year so far. We feel happy in the gospel work, and I pray that God will bless his children and that the honest in heart will be gathered into the fold.

Your brother,
W. A. Smith.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 24.

Editor Ensign:—I am enclosing, under separate cover, a copy of my "Loose leaf filler," of "Note Book," they are ready for mailing, and those who wish them can now be accommodated. You will see that it is made up, mainly, of excerpts from standard Mormon works, without argument, leaving every one free to make his own argument. Price for "Filler," 50 cents.

Our Utah District conference has just passed, being held here the 22nd and 23rd. A full delegation to our general conventions and conference was chosen, and will, we trust, be on hand to represent the cause.

Bro. J. C. Christensen, J. E. Vanderwood, M. F. Gowell, C. S. Chase, and the writer were the general missionaries present. As our secretary will, probably, send you a full account of this we will not burden you further on that score.

The work in this district moves but slowly, yet we think there are indications for an onward movement along the line. Good reports came from the work in Ogden, and we are hopeful of a better day for the branch there.

Weather here is good for the season, and we are hopeful that, in spite of the fact that Mr. Ground Hog saw his shadow, if he awoke on the fateful day, our winter has mostly passed into the yesterday.

Sr. Salome Albertson, who has been suffering with a very severe attack of the spinal meningitis, is convalescing nicely, for which we give thanks to our heavenly Father. Others of our sick are generally improving.

Sincerely and busily in the cause,
A. M. Chase.

BRISTOL, Ill., Feb. 24.

Dear Ensign:—I wish to thank all the dear saints (through your columns) who have written letters of inquiry so full of love and sympathy concerning my husband during his severe sickness, and pray God to bless each one abundantly. I would gladly have written each one but could not as my hands and heart have been full for eleven weeks. We also feel grateful for the many earnest prayers that have been offered in his behalf, and feel glad to say he is slowly improving, though not able to sit up long at a time, nor get up and down alone. We are hopeful in God's own due time he will be able to work for the Master. Still asking an interest in the prayers of God's loving saints,
I remain yours in gospel bonds,

Mrs. W. A. McDowell.

TILDEN, Neb., Feb. 20.

I would like to ask the saints through your columns to pray earnestly for my dear afflicted mother. Mrs. Nettie Roatcap that she may gain the use of her limbs and be able to walk again once more. Pray also for my husband so he will be softened and obey the truth and be a saint of God and help me to teach our little boys the way of eternal life. I need the prayers of my dear brothers and sisters in Christ too. I am so weak and helpless in the faith.

Your sister in Jesus Christ
Mrs. Grace Austin.

-CORRECTIONS.

Several typographical errors occurred in our last issue though fortunately they were discovered before more than a small part of the edition was printed. We give the correction for the benefit of those who received the incorrect papers.

Auxiliary department page 6, the editorial following the selected article should precede it.

In the obituary of Sr. Audentia Lasley, the statement "the baby of the daughter was brought to Lamoni" should read "the body of the daughter," etc. Also obituary of Bro. Lewis Gaultier should give his age as 95 instead of 75.

LO, THE HONEST INDIAN.

Tulsa, Ok., Feb. 17.—The proverbial reputation of a full blood Indian for standing by his word was exemplified in the county court here today. Tom Hickory, an old Creek, had agreed to sell a valuable piece of land to a friend for $8,000. The United States Indian agency interfered, appraising the land at $16,000.

"I no want $16,000, I want $8,000—Indian keep his word." Hickory told the court today when the government asked to have the sale set aside. The case is still pending.—K. C. Journal.

A FRIEND OF GOD.

"And Abraham was called the Friend of God.—James 2:23.

To be acknowledged as a friend of a great man is a distinction to be prized, and men frequently point with delight to their school day association with other men who have risen to power and honor among men; but Abraham was a friend of God—a distinction that can not be surpassed by any earthly honor.

Friendship is the attachment and affection arising from mutual esteem and good will; or, as Plato says: "Friendship is, strictly speaking, reciprocal benevolence, which inclines each party to be as solicitous for the welfare of the other as for his own. This equality of affection is created and preserved by a similarity of disposition and manners." Thus friendship can only exist in a degree proportionate with the similarity of character and purpose of the friends, and persons without mutual interests do not become friends. It is said there can be "no friendship in the ungrateful man, the multiloquous man, or the coward. The first cannot prize the favors; the second cannot keep thy counsel; the third dares not vindicate thy honor."

True friendship seems to be a state that can exist only between persons of true and upright character, and while strong attachments exist between men who are corrupt, it usually requires but the appearance of adverse circumstances to break such attachments, as is evident by the numerous accomplices in crime who turn "state's evidence" against their associates, when the penalty of the law confronts them. True friendship is strengthened by adversity and trial.

ABRAHAM'S FRIENDSHIP.

Abraham became the friend of God by becoming like God in character so that they mutually esteemed each other; they honored each other, and sought to do that which pleased each other. The Lord said of him: "Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws." (Gen. 26:5), and being a friend of God the Lord wrought great things for him. The Lord led him out of his native country which was then in decay and brought him to a new land. By special interposition he gave him a son in his old age. He made covenant with him that he would make his posterity great and through them bless all nations, and that he would give him the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. He delivered him from dangers, and prospered him greatly.

OTHERS MAY BECOME FRIENDS OF GOD.

The Lord does not respect one person more than another only as the one may be more worthy of respect. Men who walk in sin being diverse in character from God can not be his friends, and he can not give them the same honor as his friends. Jesus says: "If any man will serve me, him will my Father honor." Jn. 12:26, and Paul says that God will give "glory, honor, and peace, to every man that worketh good." Rom. 2:10. Friendship implies mutuality, and the man who walks in sin and darkness has little or nothing in common with God who is the embodiment of light and truth. They can not be friends.

HOW MEN BECOME FRIENDS OF GOD.

Abraham became the friend of God by obeying his voice, and keeping his commandments and statutes, and Jesus says: "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." (Jn. 15:14). Friendship with God is a closer relationship even than that of a son, for one must be a son or daughter in order to grow into the relationship of a friend. The disciples were first called servants, but Christ said to them: "Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." A child does not, and can not enter into the confidences of his father, but as he grows to manhood his father takes him into his employ and he learns the business, and finally is taken into partnership. As a partner, or business friend, he is entitled to know all things pertaining to the business. Thus acquaintance, with knowledge of mutual interests, and unity of effort, are the things which make friendship perfect.

If one would be a friend of God he must become acquainted with God, and gain a knowledge of the things of mutual concern, and unite his effort with that of God to attain the desired end. Knowledge without unity of effort will work disaster, and so will active work performed without knowledge. To be the friend of God one must understand him, and work altogether in harmony with his will, for the man who is reckless is not in a condition to receive the things which God would reveal to a friend. Since likeness of character is essential to friendship the man who desires to be a friend of God must bring his character to conform to that of God. Sin of every kind bars friendship, as James says: "The friendship of the world is enmity with God, whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." (4:4).

ARE WE FRIENDS OF GOD?

It is possible to think we are keeping all the commandments when we are not, or we may be servants without having reached the point of friendship. The proof of friendship in Abraham was that he had communion with God, and God revealed to him all things of mutual concern which were necessary in carrying out their common purposes. It was the same with the apostles, as Jesus said: "All things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." They had common knowledge of things pertaining to their work, by which they were able to work in unity with God.

Every man who truly seeks to work with God, if it be in no other work than the saving of his own soul, is entitled to the knowledge which is essential in accomplishing that work. There must be mutual recognition and acknowledgement between him and God; there must be communion.

In proportion to one's likings for the things of the world is his friendship toward God lacking; "Ye cannot serve God and mammon," but if he despises the things of the world, and loves the things which are of God, having communion with him by which he receives a knowledge of the things of God, then he holds the friendship which Abraham and the apostles had. In this no man needs to deceive himself.

The Lord may acknowledge us as children though in some things we are disobedient, but he can acknowledge us as friends only when we by keeping all his commandments become like him in character, and his desires are our desires, his work our work, and his law our law.

Two states, Illinois and Colorado, have in force mothers' compensation laws, under which mothers without support other than by their own labor may receive allowances for the support of their children. A number of other states are considering the advisability of making such provision. It is recognized that many children who have to be left by their mothers who go out to work for their support, turn out to be bad because of lack of home training, many of which the states have to support later on as criminals, and that it is far better to offer the support at a time when the children need a mother's care and can be so trained that they will become honorable citizens. It is much better to work for the prevention of evil conditions that to have to deal with them after they are matured.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST ORGANIZED.

By the spring of 1830 the Book of Mormon had been published by which was given in connection with the Bible a basis of faith and doctrine, the Aaronic priesthood had been given under which men were authorized to teach that doctrine and administer in the ordinances of baptism and the laying on of hands for the conferring of that priesthood upon others agreeably to the will of the Lord, a number had been baptized, and revelations had been given which were at the same time prophetic and instructive, directing the leaders how to proceed in their work. The time was becoming ripe for this body of baptized believers to be organized after the pattern which Christ gave as recorded in the New Testament. But in order to perform this work one more qualification was necessary, viz.: possession of the higher priesthood which had been previously promised.

THE MELCHISEDEK PRIESTHOOD GIVEN.

The history states: "We now became anxious to have that promise realized to us, which the angel that conferred upon us the Aaronic priesthood had given us, viz.: that provided we continued faithful, we should also have the Melchisedec priesthood, which holds the authority of the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. We had for some time made this matter a subject of humble prayer, and at length we got together in the chamber of Mr. Whitmer's house in order more particularly to seek of the Lord what we now so earnestly desired: and here to our unspeakable satisfaction did we realize the truth of the Savior's promise: 'Ask, and you shall receive, seek, and you shall find, knock, and it shall be opened unto you;' for we had not long been engaged in solemn and fervent prayer when the word of the Lord came unto us in the chamber, commanding us that I should ordain Oliver Cowdery to be an elder in the Church of Jesus Christ, and that he also should ordain me to the same office, and then to ordain others as it should be made known unto us, from time to time: we were however, commanded to defer this our ordination until such times as it should be practicable to have our brethren, who had been, and who should be baptized, assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers."—Joseph Smith in Church History, Vol. 1, p. 60.

The date on which the above command was given is not definitely stated, but a revelation had been received giving instructions how to organize the church and pointing out the day when it should be done, and agreeably to the instructions those baptized met at the house of Mr. Whitmer at Fayette, Seneca County, New York, on the sixth day of April, 1830, for the purpose of organizing, there being six members present.

THE CHURCH ORGANIZED.

Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to our heavenly Father, we proceeded (according to previous commandment) to call on our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed and be organized as a church according to said commandment which we had received. To these they consented by unanimous vote. I then laid my hands upon Oliver Cowdery and ordained him an elder of the 'Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' after which he ordained me also to the office of an elder of said church. We then took bread and blessed it, and brake it with them, also wine, blessed it and drank it with them. We then laid our hands on each individual member of the church present that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and be confirmed members of the church of Christ. The Holy Ghost was poured out upon us to a very great degree. Some prophesied, whilst we all praised the Lord and rejoiced exceedingly." p. 76.

Thus on the same day were fulfilled the commandments to organize and ordain to the Melchisedec priesthood. This manner of ordination may seem strange to some, but the priesthood which they already held would in the emergency by special command of God qualify them to so ordain each other. At least the ordination was performed in exact harmony with the instructions which they had received, and the immediate bestowal of the Holy Ghost upon those upon whom they laid their hands under the authority of this ordination gives evidence of the approval of God, and the actual reception of the power belonging to that priesthood. The perpetuation of these powers and blessings in the church is further evidence that the accounts given of these things by the first elders are true, for under the authority of this priesthood many have received the gift of the Holy Ghost with various gifts of the Spirit, such as faith, wisdom, knowledge, miracles, prophecy, tongues, etc., as enumerated in 1 Cor. 12:8-10.

The pattern previously given for the organization of the church included, a president of the high priesthood, twelve apostles, high councilors, high priests, bishops, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. It provided for local branches and conferences, and defined the manner of baptism, confirmation, administering the sacrament, and ordination. If, as some suppose, Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were working a fraud, their self-confidence in being able to carry out so extensive a plan must have been immeasurable. Human institutions form their principles and organizations according to apparent needs and prospective possibilities based upon human foresight, but here is an institution provided for which is so extensive in organization and so replete in its accepted principles and methods, that we can hardly conceive of it being the product of the human mind unaided by divinity, and all this before the organization had been formed, and before the material was in prospect for such formation. It requires an unreasonable belief in the wisdom of man to believe that Joseph Smith of himself, or anyone else, formulated this plan and gave it to the world. It is easier to believe that what he told in such a simple straightforward way, relative to receiving direction from God, is true.

Of necessity the development of the organization in fact must be gradual, and though the church began with but six members, the number grew, new officers were called and ordained to fill the various offices, but so far as we have been able to learn some of the quorums provided for have never to this day had a full quota of officers. The officers have been ordained however, as they have been called and needed, and the system brought forward by the inexperienced young man—Joseph Smith has been found, after eighty years of practical operation, to be without fault or defect. As the church has grown and the working principles laid down before its organization have been tested, not one has been discarded, and no office has been found unnecessary.

The church thus organized according to the command of God has been preserved through varying vicissitudes to the present, and though many have fallen away through transgression the faithful have fully proven the truth of Christ's promise that the signs should follow them that believe, by which the divinity of the work has been confirmed.

Having complained to the office of failing to receive the ENSIGN a sister later writes apologetically saying the trouble was due to a careless mail carrier who dropped it upon the road where it was buried in the mud. She says it was finally resurrected, again fulfilling the prophecy "Truth shall spring out of the earth." In behalf of the ENSIGN we express appreciation of the compliment.

Mission services are being held from March 9th to March 16th at the saints' church, Brooklyn, N. Y. Bro. Walter W. Smith pastor at Philadelphia is the speaker.

Bro. W. M. Aylor informs us that since Feb. 1st clergy credentials are acknowledged by the railways from points in Oklahoma and the South to as far north as Kansas City, or possibly through Kansas to St. Joseph. Brethren coming to general conference from the South would do well to enquire upon this point before purchasing tickets.

A new class will be formed this Spring in the nurses training course at the Independence Sanitarium, and the institution is ready to receive a number of new students for this course. Those desiring admission should write to the Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Mo., for application blanks and information.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The Independence Stake conference was held here last Saturday and Sunday with a good representation from the various branches in the stake. The usual routine of business was transacted, the minutes of which will be reported in due time. The Sunday services were well attended and enjoyed by all. Elder J. A. Tanner of Kansas City preaching an excellent discourse in the morning, and Elder W. M. Aylor speaking to an unusually large congregation in the evening. The Sunday school was full of life and interest. The afternoon was devoted to a prayer service which was good, the gift of prophecy being manifested, and a number of excellent testimonies being given.

Bro. I. N. White of the Twelve has been gradually improving from what once seemed to be broken health, and has been able to attend a number of services of late. He hopes to be able to again take up the work of the ministry and we trust and pray that this hope may be realized. His life has been devoted to the service of God and he is still willing to continue his labors according to the strength given.

Special services will be held at the Walnut Park Mission, Independence, commencing next Sunday with Patriarch Ammon White as the speaker, and Elder Arthur Gillen continuing through the week or longer. An orchestra will assist the singers in a special song service preceding each meeting.

After a lapse of some weeks covering the severe winter weather, open air meetings have been begun upon the streets of Kansas City by Bro. C. E. Guinand. Last Sunday he had a gathering of between two and three hundred on Market Square where he held them for two and a half hours, preaching and answering questions. Considerable interest was shown.

The Independence Stake is one of the subsidiary organizations within the church, covering a territory of ten counties, seven of which are in Missouri and three in Kansas. At the present time it has 19 organized branches, and about 8 missions where regular services are held, enrolling altogether a membership of 5308. Of this number 528 hold some office in the priesthood, or approximately one in ten. The presidency consists of three high priests, and a high council composed of twelve high priests have supreme judiciary powers within the stake, though appeals may be taken from this court to the high council of the church. They also have other powers which in practice have not been clearly defined. A bishop has charge of the finances and temporal affairs of the church and reports his accounts to the stake conferences and also to the presiding bishop of the church. A secretary and recorder keeps the records of the stake. Other members of the priesthood are not officers of the stake, but those laboring in the stake do so in harmony with the rules governing. The local congregations called "branches" are independent in all matters which are purely local, while the stake is also independent of the church in matters which concern only the stake.

A bronze key by which Joseph and Hyrum Smith were locked in the jail at Carthage, Ill., at the time they were murdered, June 27, 1844, has been brought from Rock Island, Ill., by the hand of Bro. Joseph Arber for presentation to President Joseph Smith, son of Joseph Smith the Prophet. This key came into the possession of Mr. W. E. Davis a carpenter, now living at Rock Island, Ill., in 1870, when he was employed to remodel the old jail at Carthage. New locks were placed upon the doors and this key was left in his hands. Mr. Davis, now in advanced years, is a son of T. J. Davis who was an elder in the church in an early day. The key is a relic of the times of severe persecution against the church, and which we hope are forever past.

The Religio Good Literature Committee of the Independence Local has arranged for a time saving week for the Independence Branch, beginning last Sunday. The plan is to have each member devote one half hour each day to do some work for the spread of the gospel to those who have not been previously reached by it. The half hour may be spent in visiting and talking with friends or strangers, writing letters, distributing literature, and such other work as will send the gospel to those in need. The committee has provided ten thousand tracts which may be obtained by the members of the branch for use in this effort. The committee is to be commended for their diligence, and are worthy the support of every member in this noble cause. A week of diligence in this direction should be a precedent by which the work of each week should be done. The regular prayer service next Sunday afternoon will be devoted to testimonies of results and will be known as "Result Meeting."

LANSDOWNE BRANCH, ILL.

Since our last report the Lansdowne saints and their friends have enjoyed a great treat. We have had with us Bro. Rushton and each evening brought us a feast of good things, spiritual and intellectual. The interest and attendance was good. We held our sacrament service at 2:30 p. m. in order to have preaching both morning and evening. Bro. Rushton presided and a good spirit prevailed.

The Religio enjoyed a pleasant time Valentine's evening. The lesson was given in sections by three different people and was very interesting. A few moments were then spent listening to readings and musical selections after which divided hearts were passed and the gentlemen or boy which ever it might be, ate pie with the lady holding the missing portions of his heart. The evening was a most successful and enjoyable one.

The aid society is planning a measuring social to be held at the home of Sr. Young, Thursday evening, and the Religio officers are working on their Easter program.

LAMONI, IOWA.

The semi-annual conference of Lamoni stake was held here on Saturday and Sunday, March 1st and 2d with Bro. J. W. Wight, John Smith, J. F. Garver and R. S. Salyards presiding. Besides the routine order there was not much business transacted. The Hiteman Branch asked for the ordination of Bro. David J. Williams and the Evergreen Branch asked the ordination of Bro. W. E. Shakespear, both to office of elder. This being approved both by the High council and the conference they were ordained on Sunday afternoon by Bro. F. A. Smith and J. W. Wight. Bro. Smith speaker for Bro. Williams and Bro. Wight for Bro. Shakespear. One hundred and twenty were named as delegates to the April conference. There was preaching during the session by Bro. E. B. Morgan, J. R. Lambert and M. Turpen.

On Friday, February 28, was held the joint sessions of the Sunday school and Religio associations of the stake. Bro. A. L. Keen and C. L. Carpenter presiding. Routine business was done and each body selected its own delegates to the annual conventions. Also the Stake Sunday school association continued, Bro. A. L. Keen as superintendent and the Religio selected Bro. D. J. Williams as president for the coming year.

Considering the snow storm and the severe cold just at the time of conference there was quite a fair attendance from branches outside Lamoni.

Bro. J. R. Lambert and R. M. Elvin officiated at weddings recently but existing rules do not permit mention of items in these notes.

Another death that of an aged pilgrim, Sr. Mary K. Bell, who died March 5, at the age of 83 years, 3 months and 1 day. She was born near Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1824, and married Sheba Bell in 1842. In 1846 they moved to Bartholomew County, Indiana, where they heard the restored gospel in 1850 and were baptized by Elder David Klapp. They followed none of the factions but moved to Minnesota in 1858 and lived there the most of the time until 1898 when they came to Lamoni. Bro. Bell died here in 1908. All of their nine children survive them. Six sons and three daughters, and six were present at their mother's funeral. Services at the residence, sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. A. S. Cochran.

The four sermons in town yesterday were by Bro. Joseph Roberts and Oscar Anderson of the stake bishopric at the church, and by Bro. J. A. Gunsolley and R. V. Hopkins at the two saint's homes in the evening.

Bro. John Smith filled the appointments at Bloomington church. Bro. Leonard Holloway at Evergreen and Bro. Edward Harp and Gus Bergman at Andover.

THIRD ST. JOSEPH BRANCH.

Saturday evening, Feb. 15th, was election of branch officers. Elder H. B. Toddickson was chosen as our president and he is amply qualified for the position which was proved to us in bygone years, when he worked so faithfully and untiringly in the little house known as the "Aspey Mission," later "Zion's Hope Mission," and under his care a greater number of our members embraced the gospel. Other officers were: Bro. Wm. Clay presiding priest, Bro. Eugene Vaughn teacher, Bro. T. B. Hale deacon, Bro. R. H. Omans chorister and Sr. Ora Jones organist.

Feb. 19th the morning service was devoted to ten minute talks by the branch officers, and the prayer service at 4:45 was especially encouraging, and an exhortation from the Lord for greater faithfulness and diligence was received, with the promise that his work here should prosper.

Sunday, Feb. 23d, our attendance was small owing to the conference at the Second Branch. However two excellent sermons were delivered by visiting elders, containing encouragement and instruction, Bro. John Davis at 11 a. m., and Elder V. N. Sheldon at 7:30 p. m.

Bro. Clarence Pickering, a very spiritual minded young man, was ordained to the office of priest at the conference, and a good work is expected of him.

Our Religio, under the guidance of Sr. Jones, who has served us so long and is ever on the alert to help the erring one with her gentle influence, is steadily increasing. A new project is uppermost in the minds of the Religians at present, that is, one and all are anxious to contribute their help to make a new piano, which has been bought, our very own at an early date.

Chorister R. H. Omans has been very faithful in coming such a long distance every Monday evening during the winter weather, and now with the added assistance of a new instrument, we expect to have remarkable results in our singing, for that is such an essential part of the services.

Grace Mason.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

Bro. J. A. Saxe the pastor reports an excellent sacramental service in the city branch with a goodly degree of spirituality. Elder J. A. Anthony preached the evening sermon. The service in Oakland was well attended and occupied the full time—the evening sermon being preached by Bro. E. J. Clark acting priest of the branch.

Bro. G. J. Waller preached the morning sermon in the city on the 23d, followed in the evening by Priest Emery S. Parks in his first effort since ordination. Bro. Waller preached in the evening in Oakland with good spirit. He started on the 26th on an eastern trip.

The conventions and conference of the district at Chico passed off without a single jar. Bro. Earl Opsal was elected vice president of the Religio-organization, all other officers remain the same, of district and Sunday school.

At three o'clock on Sunday the church edifice was dedicated, being well filled with saints and strangers who appreciated the service. The sermon was by Elder F. M. Sheehy, the prayer by Elder J. M. Terry. The singing by the trained junior choir was unique and pleasing.

Sermons during conference were by Elders H. J. Davison, C. E. Crumley, F. M. Sheehy, and the writer. The saints of Chico are worthy of praise for the kind and efficient way they cared for the thirty or more delegates. The work they received an impetus that will carry it forward. Bro. J. D. Stead and H. J. Davison remained to hold a few additional services. The next conference will be held at the Irvington reunion to be held Aug. 15-23 inclusive.

We met Bro. and Sr. A. H. Anderson of Mission, Ill., who are enroute home from Southern California. We remember with pleasure our stay with Bro. Anderson during a conference, when we were laboring in Chicago, with his well related family altar.

Bro. and Sr. W. Morrison will take a business trip to Arizona in the interest of the Mascot Copper mine in which he is interested.

We are arranging for our annual protracted meeting to be held soon.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy started east on the 4th expecting to stop at Santa Fe in the interest of the archeological work—there being there a museum of recent finds. Bro. Sheehy carries with him the highest regards and confidence of this part of his mission, and it is the unanimous wish, though unexpressed in conference resolutions, that he be returned to this mission.

CORRESPONDENCE

POCAHELLO, Idaho, Feb. 6.

Editor Ensign:—This writing finds us at the hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. J. M. Daniels of this place—we call Mr. Daniel's brother although he is not nominally a member of the church, and it is to be hoped that in the near future he will be with us indeed and in truth. We received a phone message on Monday last requesting us to come to this city since the town was being worked by a revivalist of the Missionary Baptist church, and that it might be an excellent opportunity to present the true gospel. Reaching here Tuesday evening was met at the train by Sr. Daniels and went over to the revival service, being a little late so only got a part of the sermon, at the close of the service was introduced to the Missionary revivalist a Mr. Minegar, who appears to be a very nice man,—he was invited to come and spend the afternoon with us the day following which he consented to do, to have an interview with us along gospel lines.

The next morning we went to the newspaper offices viz. The Tribune which is a daily, and the Chronicle which is a tri-weekly and got very favorable representation in both of them, and called at the Y. M. C. A. and met the man in charge of a Mr. Richardson, left an epitome of faith with him and disabused his mind of some things that he held as being the fruits of Latter Day Saint theology and practice.

Among the chief of which was our position on marriage etc., and showed him that Joseph Smith was the strongest opposer of polygamy the world had ever produced, that his teaching from first to last was uncompromisingly against such transgressions.

At the appointed time the Rev. Mr. Minegar came and we sat down for a pleasant afternoon's conference together in the presence of the family, the spirit of brotherly love prevailed and as we passed along the line we gave him an idea of our ethical ideals and aspirations, and that Jesus Christ and not Joseph Smith was the author and finisher of our faith, and that the works of Joseph Smith only enabled us to have greater faith in God, and in his Son, Jesus Christ. We showed what the Book of Mormon claimed to be and really is, how it confirmed the Bible truth, and became another witness to both Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ. We went further and showed how the Book of Mormon condemned polygamy and kindred evils, and that it is the strongest witness we have to combat the evils of polygamy with.

Our interview was very pleasant and we left a lasting impression for good upon him and he said "I'll tell the pastor here you are all right." We provided him with some literature, and in the evening attended his service again and met the pastor, who gave us a very hearty handshake, and said "I'm glad to meet you brother, I read your article in the Tribune, and can heartily indorse it, it is sound doctrine, anything that tends to uplift the race is good."

And to our mind it is better to pursue this method of gaining the good will of the people and teach them in the spirit of love, than to antagonize them and thus create a greater prejudice on their part, and hence cut off every avenue we have of reaching them.

We expect to hold some cottage meetings at the home of Bro. and Sr. Daniels while here, and stimulate and revive the few saints here as well as give the work a fair representation by our newspaper work. Printer's ink is the most profitable thing we can use, and I feel our coming here has been profitable, in that it has made clear to some at least the real beauty of the gospel, and have maintained the good name of the church of Christ, and thus opened an avenue for further service and a possibility of doing a greater amount of good to mankind.

Our work at Ogden is increasing and we are hopeful of the outcome.

Hopefully,

J. E. Vanderwood.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 18.

Dear Ensign:—It has been a long time since we wrote anything for your precious pages. We indeed enjoy reading the good news from the different parts of the Lord's vineyard. We are still interested in the salvation of souls, and rejoice to hear how the gospel wins its way. We cannot report any great work done but we can report that there has been a steady advancement which means substantial growth. We are still looking to higher ground and shall indeed rejoice when we shall have conquered all things.

We felt when appointed to labor here that it would be impossible for us to shoulder the responsibility but determined to do all we could to advance the interests of the work. The missionary work in a city of this kind is a difficult problem, and all any one can do is earnestly seek the guidance of the Master whose servants we are and then go to work to do as impressed. There has been a number of baptisms in the past summer and winter. An experience that I think will be well worth while writing for and all to sit up and take notice to see how much good can be accomplished in this city.

A Bro. and Sr. Wm. Dennis of Ashland, Wis., realizing what a wonderful work they had espoused, felt it their duty to tell others about it. In accord with this desire they wrote to some former friends in this city, a Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Collins. Tracts were sent and visits made. Mrs. Collins took up the study of the gospel in earnest and was convinced it was better than that which she had. But with Mr. Collins it was different; he opposed it but it did no good for he could not reject the work and be honest with himself, so at last he gave up, and investigated for himself, and was convinced it was God's work. Mrs. Collins was in very poor health, we were called to administer and she received help, but was not able to be baptized with her husband, she being baptized three weeks later, it being the second time she had been out of the house in fourteen months. Although it was very cold she suffered no harm and has been able to come to meetings ever since and they are both rejoicing in the hope of the gospel.

The members of the priesthood are putting forth an effort to do their duty, and we are indeed thankful for the noble support that we have received from them.

The three branches, the First Chicago Branch, the Central Branch, and the West Pullman Branch are ably presided over by Elders James F. Keir, Henry P. N. Keir and Robert N. Burwell respectively, with efficient corps of officers sustaining them. We have found so many kind hearted saints and they nobly looked after our needs in a temporal way, Praying for the advancement of the work and the redemption, I am your brother,

David E. Dowker.

DONALSON, Ky., Feb. 22.

Bishop E. L. Kelley, Independence, Mo.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed you will please find $5.00 which I send as tithes or offering. I am one of the isolated ones. We never hear preaching unless an elder chanced to come this way. The first to preach the gospel in this part of the country was Elder C. L. Snow about the year 1906 and since then Elders R. L. McClain, T. C. Kelly, J. T. Davis, H. E. Moler, F. Moser, have been here and held some meetings for us. We hope they will come again for the people here surely need the gospel.

I send this money with a free good will and a prayerful heart and only wish it was ten times as much. I pray it may go to help some missionary or his family, or some worthy poor. I wish I had more to send but this is all I can send now, though I hope I can send more soon. Trusting the Lord will bless me with more to send,

Your sister in the gospel,

Mrs. E. C. Skaggs.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Feb. 21, 1913.

Editor Ensign:—The following is part of a communication from A. Kippe of Grasslichterfelde, Berlin, Germany, and will no doubt be appreciated by all interested in the spread of truth, I hence forward same to the ENSIGN readers. The brother says:

"I had occasion to visit a Mormon congregation at Einsbeck and preached to them twice at the request of Bro. Greene, heretofore an elder of the Utah church. They wanted to hear a "Josephite" and learn the difference between the two churches. I had fine liberty, the Lord was with me thus that already the next day I baptized four precious souls, among them their Elder Greene, Bro. Christian Eggers 75 years old stepped into the water with a leg painful with eczema. When he came out the pain was gone, and within a few days eczema healed, he had suffered for ten years. Two days afterward I baptized again five souls. About seven more feel converted and will be baptized next spring when I shall come over there again. I have been an elder for five years and not before baptized anybody, and now at once nine souls, and such a strong testimony of our Lord acknowledging my work in the old brother's healed leg, and a special satisfaction to me it was, that a Utah elder was my first baptized one!

At Hanover City, Brunswick, Hamburg etc., a good work could be done among the members of the Utah church. Bro. Greene is well acquainted there. At Hanover City many members feel dissatisfied with the Utah church, have rented a little hall at their own expense and wanted me to preach to them also, but I am very sorry I have not the means to go there. The Utah elders feel all enraged against me, saying our president is a spiritual etc."

The brethren in this field are all engaged doing what they can under the condition that confronts us, but the foregoing is the most encouraging news that has reached me lately.

Sr. Hansen and I expect to sail from here March 6, for New York on our homeward journey hoping to meet many of your readers at the General Conference at Lamoni.

In gospel bonds,

H. N. Hansen.

PLAINFIELD, Ind., March 6.

Editor Ensign:—In Southern Indiana we have been having such weather as to greatly hinder our work of preaching the gospel. Rain, snow, and mud, with freezing and thawing alternately, keep the roads in such shape that traveling is a very arduous unpleasant task. Just now we are in a section "where the mud does not trouble us much, but the bad March weather continues. This kind of weather, hindering us so much in our work, increases our longing to see our home in Holden, Missouri.

We have worked altogether in the country this winter, and have "roughed it" somewhat, but have thereby been made acquainted with the fact that our power of endurance is not what it was twenty-two years ago. We now soon fatigue when it comes to walking.

Bro. Jacob Hall, Fred Moser, Jr. and Chas. Nolan have done good work during the winter. Bro. Moser and Nolan have worked together most of the time, and I find their efforts have been well received and appreciated by both Saints and friends. I hear good words for them wherever they have been. That they possess the qualities of courage and zeal that are required, along with other qualifications, to make good missionaries, was evidenced by their experience near Bilsley, where one of them was shot at while preaching, and a few nights later a volley of rocks thrown through a window into their congregation. Neither of them flinched, nor manifested any desire to quit the place until it became apparent that their work there was done.

I am now with Bro. and Sr. Wm. Harbtreit trying to hold a few meetings at the school house. This is one of the old waste places of the Southern Indiana District. Most of the saints have either died or moved away. The immigration of saints to Missouri has seriously crippled a number of branches in this district, and the district itself thereby affected. The few remaining are left to do the best they can, or perish. Some are holding on nobly, others get discouraged and easily give up. If those going to Missouri better their condition, and better assist in building up the work of the Lord, all well and good. But otherwise—might have been better to stand by the work here which they professed to have so much love for.

News of good interest attending the efforts of the brethren in Tennessee is reported.

The missionaries have begun to think about general conference, and how to get there.

H. E. Moler.

JOPLIN, Mo., Feb. 21.

Editor Ensign:—The Joplin saints are rejoicing. We have been having such excellent prayer meetings; all seeming to have enjoyed God's Spirit. It is very encouraging to see this happy band of saints united as one family. It is not to be wondered at that God's Spirit is with them. I am happy in the thought that the saints everywhere are awakening to the importance of cultivating a love which will cause them to overlook the faults and also see the good in our fellow creatures.

We have gained one of the most splendid victories through the Curtis-Carlton debate that I ever saw. There has been a great deal of good accomplished. Then the protracted meetings which followed were attended with such interest. Bro. Curtis was indeed loath to leave.

It may be of interest to the Kansas City and Independence saints to hear that my brother-in-law, Mr. Jack Seaford, was baptized last night by Bro. J. F. Curtis.

The saints of this branch held a fast for him a few weeks ago. We kept praying and have certainly met with the desired results. So we are happy to think that we are able to serve a God who hears and answers prayers. Bro. Curtis has baptized eleven since the debate and we were sorry to see him leave.

Yours in the one faith,

Caro B. Catlin.

MENTOR, O., March 3, 1913.

Dear Ensign:—I am writing this letter praying that it will enter into many homes and tell them of the good work Bro. Joseph Luff is doing. We thought it would be the only thing we could do to show our appreciation for the kindness and interest shown us by him. Our daughter is six years old and had a tapeworm for four years. Eight different doctors had treated her without success. They starved her and gave her such strong medicines that she would be sick for weeks after, and we thought we would lose her. We had given up all hope of ever getting the trouble removed until through the efforts and kindness of Bro. Joseph Luff and Bro. E. L. Kelley, we were able to take her to Bro. Luff's home, where he treated her, and in three hours, without her fasting, he removed a tape worm forty-five feet long, and the child was not sick one minute, and she is gaining every day, and we pray that God will bless and strengthen Bro. Joseph Luff in the good work that he is doing.

Yours in gospel bonds

Robt. E. Bainer, Sr. Dessie C. Bainer.

MAGAZINE NUMBER OF THE HERALD.

DEVOTED TO THE WORK OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE MARTYR.

On April 2, the Herald will issue a Magazine Number of extraordinary interest. We give below a list of special articles, subject to change providing lack of space shall crowd any of them out.

Editorial Department.

1. "The line of attack and Defense; religious Ideas introduced by Joseph Smith." This is a review of methods of attack upon our work, and our line of defense, and a statement of eight important religious ideas advocated by Joseph Smith. Illustrated with interesting views, including one of the forest where the first vision occurred, another of the room where the second vision was received, and numerous others of interest.

2. "Autograph Letters of Joseph Smith to his wife Emma." Facsimiles of two intensely interesting letters. The first written from Carthage Jail just a few hours before his death, probably the last words that he penned. The other written in chains from the jail in Richmond in 1838. These letters wrench the heart, while they give a true insight into the life of this man.

3. "Character sketches of Joseph Smith." Taken from reading by leading phrenologists, and from writings of personal friends and observers not members of the church.

Original Articles.

4. "The Tragedy at Carthage," by W. E. LaRue. Extract reprinted from our Historical Series, illustrated.

5. "Among Our Poets." Poems by some of our well known writers of verse, including, "The Tomb of the Martyrs," by Eleanor Waldorf Kearney.

6. "Joseph Smith; his reaffirmation of the Eternal Verities," by Charles E. Crumley. Illustrated.

7. "Joseph Smith; his attitude toward property, its distribution and uses," by Bishop Joseph Roberts. Illustrated.

8. "Joseph Smith; his prophecies," by F. M. Cooper. Illustrated.

9. "Joseph Smith; his influence on Modern Religious Thought," by Mark H. Siegfried. Illustrated.

The cover design is in colors. On the second page of the cover is reproduced a song composed by David H. Smith, with music by Audentia Anderson, "The Unknown Grave," referring to the fact that for many years the location of the tomb of the Martyrs was known only to the immediate family.

This will be one of the most interesting Magazine Numbers that we have ever published. Extra copies will be on sale during Conference, or can be ordered by mail from the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, for five cents each, 50 cents per dozen.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

THE FAITH AND PRACTICE OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH.

ELDER H. O. SMITH.

Editor's note.—This paper was read by Bro. Smith before the Ministerial Association of Fall River, Mass. Of the occasion he writes: "I certainly never had a finer experience in my life and the cordiality with which my paper was received was very gratifying to me. It speaks very highly for the Christian Spirit manifested by the ministers of Fall River. All seemed to be satisfied with the information I had given, and did not for a moment question the truthfulness of it, or show any of the animosity that is usually shown towards us."

We are glad to have the privilege of passing it on to our readers.

I presume if a text were needed upon which to base my paper this-morning that I would find the following from Paul's address before Felix very appropriate: "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets". Like Paul, too, as he stood before Agrippa, I can say that I count myself happy to be given the privilege of giving the reason for my hope.

I am not unaware of the fact that the church of which I am a minister is looked upon as a kind of a nondescript among churches, and that few understand our position. In this also we are not out of harmony with the church of which Paul was a minister, for it is said of that church; "We desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect we know that everywhere it is spoken against."

Some of the evils of which we are accused can be readily accounted for, others cannot. I presume that we cannot blame the people for associating us with the people in the West. That is we cannot blame them in one way, and in another way we do. It is susceptible of proof that we have nothing in common with them except those things which are held in common by all Christian churches, and we blame any man for condemning us unheard. In this day of haste and bustle, and in the multiplicity of churches, it would take a life time, possibly, to look into the merits of all, but if one has not the time to examine, one should not condemn.

I am told by your committee on programs that I am to go back to the beginning of my church and give its doctrine and practice. That we may be able to fully understand some of the things connected with its rise and progress, it might be well for me to give a little of its history.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized on the sixth day of April, 1830, in Western New York, by a man by the name of Joseph Smith, and as I am not dealing with this man personally, I shall leave a discussion of his character out of this paper, and deal directly with the doctrine of the church he has left behind.

For fourteen years, or until 1844, when its organizer was killed, the church flourished, and something like one hundred and fifty thousand members were brought into it. On the death of its founder there were several men who, ambitious for place and power, tried to get the leadership. Brigham Young was one of the most successful of all of these ambitious men. He led away about ten thousand, and established the organization known as the Mormon Church of Utah. Others had more or less of a following, and several factions sprung up. All of these factions, to some extent, departed from the original faith. The fact that men of their selves arose and taught things contrary to the original doctrine is not sufficient reason for condemning the original church. Paul warned the church of old that such would be the case after his departure, and it was so.

There were hundreds, yes, thousands, of members scattered all over the country who looked with disfavor upon these ambitious leaders, and when they came to examine the doctrines they taught, rejected their pretensions for leadership. Some of these members were banded together in what we call branches or congregations. They believed that a leader would come from the family of their former leader, and they waited. In 1851 and 1852, they began to come together and organize that they might better keep the scattered fragments together. This organization was called, and is called today: "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." This organization looks upon all other organizations affected at the death of Joseph Smith, as departures from the faith, it, only, remaining faithful to the original doctrines of the church. Of course, as would be natural, the others look upon this Reorganization in the same light. This controversy has found its way into the courts in several instances and the decision has always gone in favor of the Reorganization, and its right to the possession of the property held by the original church has been recognized in every instance. I quote from the decision of Judge L. S. Sherman, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Lake County, Ohio, February 23, 1880, in whose court the Reorganization entered suit to recover from the Utah church the property formerly held by the original church, and known as the Kirtland Temple. The following is the decision:

"That the said Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is a religious society, founded and organized upon the same doctrines and tenets, and having the same church organization, as the original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, by Joseph Smith, and was organized pursuant to the constitution, laws and usages of said original church, and has branches located in Illinois, Ohio, and other states."

"That the church in Utah, the Defendant, of which John Taylor is President, has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and has incorporated into its system of faith the doctrines of Celestial Marriage and a plurality of wives, and the doctrine of Adam-God worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of the said original church."

"And the Court do further find that Plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the true and lawful continuation of, and Successor to the said original Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, and is entitled in law to all its rights and properties."

In the famous Temple Lot Suit, tried before Judge Phillips of Kansas City the same decision was rendered. Judge Phillips says:

"Beyond all cavil, if human testimony is to place any matter forever at rest, this church was one in doctrine, government, and purpose from 1830 to June, 1844, when Joseph Smith its founder was killed. It had the same federal head, governing bodies, and faith. During this period there was no schism, no secession, no 'parting of the ways' in any matter fundamental, or affecting its oneness."

Then, speaking of the breaking up of the church, and the forming of the various factions, he says of that portion of which Brigham Young became the leader:

"There can be no question of the fact that Brigham Young's assumed presidency was a bold and bald usurpation. . . . Brigham Young's assumption of this office (under the claim of something like a transfiguration) was itself a departure from the law of the church."

This he says of Brigham Young's assumption that his church was a continuation of the original church, and goes on in his decision to show that he and his followers departed from the faith by introducing polygamy, and other corrupt and criminal doctrines which were no part of the original faith.

The people in general have made the mistake in accepting Brigham Young's statement as true, and for that reason they have believed that the Latter Day Saint Church has taught, and practiced polygamy from the beginning, but this claim is proven false by the following portion of Judge Phillip's decision.

"Claim is made by the Utah church that this doctrine is predicated of a revelation made to Joseph Smith in July 1843. No such revelation was ever made public during the life time of Joseph Smith, and under the law of the church it could not become an article of faith and belief until submitted to and adopted by the church. This was never done."

You will remember that Judge Phillips prefaces his decision with, "Beyond all cavil, if human testimony is to place any matter forever at rest," these things of which he speaks are set at rest. You will readily perceive, then, that to look to Utah Mormonism as a correct representation of the doctrine and practice of the Latter Day Saint church is not doing justice to the people who hold to the original faith of that church, and yet everywhere we find the people believing that we are the same, and refusing to believe otherwise.

I will now take up the doctrine of the church and as briefly as I can present them to you for your consideration, with just a brief statement of the reasons why we believe as we do.

1st.—We believe in God the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost. Comment upon this doctrine is not necessary, perhaps, as all Christian churches hold this in common, I believe. All that is needful to say is that we believe that the Holy Ghost brings with it all of the gifts and blessings that anciently through his influence came to men. This will appear as we proceed.

2nd.—We believe that men will be punished for their own sins, and not for Adam's transgression. That is, we believe that Christ through the sacrifice he made placed us back in an innocent condition before God, just as though the sin of Adam had never been committed. Or, in other words, by the sacrifice which he made for us on the cross he placed us in at-one-ment with God, and made it possible for us to continue that at-one-ment by doing as Christ did, that is doing all things that please him.

3rd.—We believe that through the atonement of Christ all men may be saved by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel. These laws and ordinances of the gospel we believe to be: faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. We believe in the resurrection of the body; that the dead in Christ will rise first, and the rest of the dead will not live again, until the thousand years are expired. We believe in the doctrine of Eternal Judgment, which provides that men shall be judged, rewarded, or punished, according to the degree of good or evil they shall have done.

Of the principle of Faith it is not necessary for me to say anything, perhaps, as that doctrine is held in common with all churches, but we do not believe that faith alone will save us, but our faith must be coupled with our works. We must not only believe that God is, but we must believe that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him, and it is through this diligent effort that we are saved, and faith is simply the impelling force that causes us to seek God and good.

Our idea of repentance is that true repentance consists in an abandonment of sin as well as sorrow for sin. In fact sorrow for sin is not of any value to us unless it is of sufficient poignancy to cause us to abandon the sin, and hence one of the statements found in our books is as follows: "Behold, he who has repented of his sins, the same is forgiven, and I, the Lord, remembereth them no more. By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins. Behold, he will confess them and forsake them," From this we conclude that sins are forgiven when they are given up—abandoned.

Of the doctrine of Baptism and its object it is necessary for me to say but little. We believe that it is necessary to salvation. When I speak of salvation I understand it to be a relative term, just as I believe that hell is a relative term. If our position is correct, that men are rewarded or punished according to the degree of good or evil they shall have done, then there are degrees of salvation as well as degrees of punishment. I presume that no one will deny that Christ taught baptism. If he taught it, there must be some efficacy in it. To say that there was and is no virtue in it would be to charge Christ with folly. If there is virtue in it, the man who obeys the command is entitled to a higher degree of salvation than the man who does not. It is not difficult to find the virtue in it, however, if we stop and analyze its relation to other commands of the Master. We all believe that faith in Christ will save us, and I presume that all will agree that our salvation depends upon the degree of faith we possess. That being true, if I want to create the fullest faith in Christ, I must teach all that he taught. I must follow the command he gave to his disciples and teach the observance of all that he taught. If I, in any way, discredit a single doctrine he taught, I am not teaching the full and complete faith in Christ that would entitle one to a full and complete salvation. If I discredit one doctrine he taught, I, practically, discredit all that he taught, if I take the liberty to reject a principle he taught, I am opening the way for others to reject any principle they may think is not necessary for them to obey. Centuries before Christ came into the world in the form of flesh the world was informed of his mission by prophecy. In one of those prophecies I find the following:

"I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him." Deut. 18:18, 19.

Remembering this, I cannot, as a minister for this Wondrous Man, and standing in his stead before the people, throw discredit on a single thing he taught. Laying all controversies aside, then, it is obvious that there is but one safe way to obtain the fullest salvation, and that is by living by every word that comes from the mouth of God and Christ.

This is our only plea for implicitly following the doctrine mentioned.

The laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost was practiced by the Apostles of Christ, and hence we conclude was essential to its reception. The same argument for the necessity of baptism holds good in this ordinance, hence we place this in our system of doctrine and practice.

Of the doctrine of the resurrection I will not say anything. There may be some differences between the doctrine as held by us and others, but we will let that pass, with the simple statement of belief. We can look into that later if it is desired.

The doctrine of Eternal Judgment. It is upon this doctrine that we hold views which are radically different from some others. As I have already said, we believe that there are degrees of reward and degrees of punishment. We believe that these degrees are referred to by Paul when he says, "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars." This makes three general divisions in the apportionment of the rewards and punishments. One, the highest, is typified by the brightness the sun, the next by the moon, and the lowest by the stars. This last glory, however, seems to have different conditions within itself, as Paul continues, "For one star differeth from another star in glory."

At another time Paul said he knew a man who had been taken up into the third heaven. A third heaven compels us to believe that there were the first and second heavens. Heaven, we believe, is not a place only, but a condition into which men may enter, and hence these three heavens represented three conditions of men in the spirit world, the same as the three glories mentioned by Paul in the other quotation.

We hold different views, possibly, on the question of the object of punishment as inflicted by God. We believe that punishment is retributive, that is according to the sin, and also corrective. Punishment being corrective, the individual punished will be reeemed from that punishment as soon as he is willing to be corrected. We do not believe that God's mercy ceases to be operative when life in the flesh ceases, but it is as eternal as the soul of man, and that no matter when the soul makes up his mind that he wants God, God is ready to receive him.

Personally I believe that this is what is referred to by Christ when he said to Peter, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." No soul will be consigned to hell without hope of redemption therefrom. I believe that the poet Whittier was inspired by this thought when he penned the poem called the "Two Angels," two stanzas of which read:

"There Pity, shuddering, wept; but love with faith too strong for fear, Took heart from God's almightiness and smiled a smile of cheer.
And lo! that tear of Pity quenched the flame whereon it fell,
And with the sunshine of that smile hope entered into hell."

His poem "The Ministers's Daughter," also reflects the same thought. So great is God's love that the gates of hell cannot keep the soul that needs him and wants him.

We differ, perhaps, in the idea as to of what our punishment consists. I presume that most of the ministers here have given up the idea of a literal hell of fire and brimstone, as radical changes have been made along that line in the reconstructing of creeds in late years, and perhaps there will not be so much difference now as in the early years of the church I represent. From the beginning we have believed that our punishment will consist in a consciousness of what we have lost by our disobedience. Salvation means a fitness to dwell with God. If we fail to acquire that fitness and are thrust out from his presence, we can never cease to regret that we failed to get into harmony with him.

The eternity of punishment will perhaps consist in this, we can never attain to what we might have attained to, had we given ourselves to God in this life when we had the opportunity, and we will never cease to regret that we did not start sooner in our progress upward, but we will be happy in the thought that all opportunity is not denied us, but that we can to a certain degree atone for our negligence. To those who have never had the opportunity in this life the gospel will come with all its power in the life to come.

We believe that a man must be called of God, and ordained by the laying on of hands of those in authority, to entitle him to preach the gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof.

We presume that we are not different from others in this, but we may differ in regard to how one should be called of God. We believe that this call should be a direct revelation from God. Paul says, "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron." Heb. 5:4. It is not a call to oneself only, but it must come through a chosen instrument through which God reveals himself to the church. This involves a doctrine which will be considered a little further along—present revelation.

We believe in the same kind of organization that existed in the Primitive church: viz., Apostles, prophets, pastors, evangelists, etc.

Paul said, "God has set some in the church," and then enumerates some or all of those I have mentioned here. We believe that this means that these offices were established in the church by God, and the church, to be perpetuated, must, if fully organized, have these offices filled by men whom God calls to fill the positions named.

We believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God, so far as it is translated correctly. We believe that the canon of Scripture is not full, but God, by his Spirit, will continue to reveal his word to man until the end of time.

We believe in the powers and gifts of the Everlasting Gospel; viz.—The gift of Faith, discerning of spirits, prophecy, healing, visions, tongues, and the interpretation of tongues, wisdom, charity, brotherly love and so forth.

This commits us to the position that God is imminent in the church. We are not unique in the position that the Bible contains the word of God so far as it is translated correctly, for each church has its idea as to the correctness of the translation known as the Authorized Version, and there are none, I believe, who think that it is without its errors, hence when I say that we in common with other churches, have what we call a new translation of the Bible, you ought not to be horrified at it. We do not really claim that it is a translation but a correction of the Authorized Version. This correction we claim was made through this principle of belief that God is imminent in the church, and he directed in its production. In this we are unique no doubt. We are willing, however, to place this book upon its merits. It is not a production for the purpose of introducing a new doctrine, or to sustain some peculiar ideas of its translator. It makes no changes where vital principles of the doctrine of Christ are involved, and one who was not thoroughly versed in the Bible might read it and not discover that he was not reading the Authorized Version. For this reason our ministry use the Authorized Version in all the preaching services whether at home or abroad, calling attention to the other only where palpable errors are noticed, and in study, where greater light is needed in some passage. Lest I prove tedious I will not call attention, by comparison, to the two versions, but will leave that to some future time, should you become interested in the question enough to demand it. Or, if you desire to make the examination yourselves, the book can be purchased for one dollar in cloth, or one dollar and a quarter in full leather. It might prove interesting even if you were not willing to accede to its claim to being divinely produced.

Our belief in present revelation is another thing that makes us unique among churches. Believing in this doctrine, where other churches present to the world a discipline made by man, we present one made, as we believe, by God. This discipline stands on an equal basis with the Bible in the government of the church. Nothing enters into it that in any way conflicts with that which God has already revealed, however, but there must be, according to the rule of the church, the utmost harmony between that which God has revealed and that which he may reveal, for God will not contradict himself. On the same basis we accept the book called the Book of Mormon. Accepting them, not as a new revelation of God's will to man, but as two more witnesses for God, corroborating that which he has before revealed in the Bible. This gives us three witnesses for God, he thus, complying with his own instruction, that, "in the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established."

Next comes a statement of belief that has been made necessary because of the odium cast upon us by the departure of the people in the west from the principles as taught by the early church, and their declaration of belief in the doctrine of polygamy. This has been necessary to make a clear distinction between that church and ourselves. The sentiment of the first paragraph, however, was published as early as 1835 in our books in an article on marriage, but the latter part or paragraph is inserted for the purpose of drawing the line distinctly between those who hold to the doctrine of polygamy and those who do not.

We believe that marriage is ordained of God; and that the law of God provides for but one companion in wedlock for either man or woman, except in cases where the contract of marriage is broken by death or transgression. We believe that the doctrines of a plurality and a community of wives are heresies, and are opposed to the law of God.

We believe that the religion of Jesus Christ, as taught in the New Testament Scriptures, will, if its precepts are accepted and obeyed make men and women better in the domestic circle, and better citizens of town, county, and state; and, consequently, better fitted for the change which cometh at death.

We believe that men should worship God in "Spirit and in truth"; and that such worship does not require a violation of the constitutional law of the land.

Our organization consists of a general organization which directs the general affairs of the church, controls the missionary force, and has general oversight of the whole church, or the church as a whole. Under this government we have district organizations composed of various sized territories according to membership, and these district organizations are composed of local congregations. All of these lesser organizations are self-governing. They make their own rules and laws to govern them, but in all things must conform to the general constitution of the church. So the church may be said to be a confederation of local churches, and each local church has the right to send delegates to the general assemblies of the church, and everything is done by common consent, or vote of the people.

The general organization consists of three men at the head called the Presidency. These men have control over the missionary force of the church as well as the local force, through a set of twelve men called apostles. These men either work directly or through another set of men called Seventy. These Seventy are divided into seven bodies of seventy men each, or four hundred and ninety men. The Twelve and the Seventy are supposed to travel constantly, doing missionary work, and looking after the general welfare of the work and church, at home and abroad.

Then there are Bishops who are in charge of the finances of the church, and High Priests, Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons, who have charge of local organizations. In addition to this there is what is known as the Order of Evangelists. These men are supposed to hold revivals among the membership, primarily, and among others, when opportunity offers, or necessity demands it.

Our opposition to polygamy comes from not only an innate horror of its effects, but because our sacred books mention it as especially displeasing to God. One of the commandments given to the church as early as February 1831, says:

Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repeats not he shall be cast out. Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall be cast out.

Again in the following month there came to the church a similar statement. It says:

"I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh.

The Book of Mormon says:

"Wherefore, my brethren, hear me and hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none: For I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women. And whoredoms are an abomination before me: thus saith the Lord of hosts.

Three other places does this book inveigh against the abomination of polygamy, and the Reorganization, recognizing that those who would trample on God's laws would also trample on the laws of the land, began early to look with suspicion upon the pretensions of Brigham Young and his followers. Naturally they were the sufferers in the introduction of these abominations, for they knew that they would be classed with those who were steeped in this iniquity. So, in 1863 they established a mission in Utah to protest against the evils practiced there and to endeavor so far as possible to turn the people from the wrong. They found that their fears were well grounded. They found that the people out there were not only treating the laws of God with contempt, but they were trampling on the most sacred privileges of citizenship in the Republic. Consequently we took early measures to bring these things before Congress, and recommend legislation to put a stop to these abuses. On April 12, 1876, a memorial was sent to Congress pointing out the abuses and asking that such measures be taken that would in future bring about a better condition of things.

I mention these things to show that the organization of which I am member, and representative, preceded other religious organizations, not only in the field of religious endeavor to show these people the error of their ways, but preceded other bodies in recommending legislative enactments that would blot out this foul stain on the nation. This has caused many of the newspapers of the day to draw the distinction between us and the church in Utah. The people composing this organization were fully alive to the dangers lurking there, and not only did they begin in 1876, but they have continued to advocate national intervention looking to the blotting out of polygamy. The movement that is now agitating the State of Massachusetts and other states, asking for a constitutional amendment, was early regarded by the Reorganization as the only solution to the question. Eleven years ago this coming April, this body of religious workers met in general conference in Lamoni, Iowa, their headquarters. During that conference, on April 17th, the following resolution with its preambles was presented, and unanimously adopted.

"Whereas, it is currently reported that polygamy is still practiced in Utah and adjacent States and Territories, in defiance of the laws of God and the laws of the land; and,

"Whereas, the laws enacted by State legislation seem to be inadequate to prevent or prohibit the practice of polygamy without the intervention of Federal enactment; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in General Conference assembled, favor the enactment of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the practice of polygamy in all the States and Territories under the jurisdiction of the Republic."

As I said, this was unanimously adopted, and a copy was ordered sent to all of the Representatives from Iowa in Congress, with a request to present the same to that body.

What I say in regard to this matter is true of nearly all, if not quite all, of the reforms introduced in the last century, religiously or otherwise. It has only been in recent years, in fact within the memory of men who are listening to this paper, that any one has had the temerity to advocate the doctrine of probation after death. That is, I mean any one in the popular churches of today, but this church of which I am a representative, placed that doctrine in its discipline, or formula of faith in the very beginning of its existence nearly a century ago.

This church made the law of tithing, the paying of the tenth of one's increase, its financial law, and has lived to see other churches advocating it as the divinely appointed way of raising revenue for church purposes.

It declared its belief in the promise given by Christ that "these signs shall follow them that believe" in the very beginning of its career, and has watched with interest the increase in this belief in various forms since that time. It is true that few have come to the exact, or literal interpretation of that promise, but the principle back of it is the foundation of the great Christian Science movement as well as others.

Believing all things written by prophets, it advocated the gathering of the Jews back to the land of Palestine, and was ridiculed for its faith in those promises, but today it is acknowledged as an assured fact, and hundreds are pointing to it as another evidence of fulfilled prophecy.

It took its stand very early in its career for the cause of temperance, and anticipated by many years the crusade against tobacco in any form. I will quote to you a paragraph from one of the revelations upon this subject given as early as 1833.

"Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation, that inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together, to offer up your sacraments before him. And, behold this should be wine; yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine of your own make. And again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies. And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises, and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill."

This was accepted by them as a direct communication upon the subject from God, and this accounts for the fact that the Latter Day Saints are always at the front in any movement looking to the suppression of these evils, and you never find a drunkard among them, and very few tobacco users.

In 1907 Missouri voted upon the question of constitutional amendment. The temperance people wanted the good old State to 'show' the rest of the States that it could take the lead in a national reform in such matters, and had all Christian denominations voted as solidly for it as did the Latter Day Saints, Missouri would now be a prohibition State. Of the attitude of the Latter Day Saints upon this question the Missouri Issue, a paper published in St. Louis, in its issue of December 13, 1907, says:

"In Independence the results were not so satisfactory. Many old residents remembering the experience of years ago when the city was nominally dry for four years, but in reality very wet, and not realizing the vast change in public sentiment that has taken place in ten years, seemed to fear that should the town go 'dry' the old conditions would appear again. Hence they voted for the licensed saloons. Church members were far from being unanimous on the question. The Latter Day Saints, who are very numerous in the city, threw their undivided support in behalf of prohibition and so won great respect, but the same course was not followed by the rest of the church going people."

Perhaps the Latter Day Saints did not lead other people in their fealty to the government, but they took occasion very early to state their views on the question and to declare a separation of church and State. Quoting from one of their revelations given as early as 1831, I find the following:

"Let no man think that he is ruler, but let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will; or, in other words, him that counselleth or sitteth upon the judgment seat. Let no man break the laws of the land; for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet. Behold the laws which you have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light ye shall hold forth."

Quite a contrast this with the arrogant utterance of Brigham Young and others after they had gone to Utah, when they declared as follows:

"Our ecclesiastical government is the government of heaven, and incorporates all governments in earth and hell. It is the fountain, the mainspring, the source of all light, power and governments that ever did, or ever will exist. It circumscribes the governments of this world."—Brigham Young.

"The kingdom of God is an order of government established by divine authority. It is the only legal government that can exist in any part of the universe. All other governments are illegal and unauthorized. Any people undertaking to govern themselves by laws of their own making and by officers of their own appointment are in direct rebellion against the kingdom of God.—Orson Pratt.

As I said, we may not be in advance of others in our fealty to the government, but we were in advance of others in declaring our belief in the sacredness of the Constitution of the country. In one of the early revelations, given in December, 1833, I find the following:

"It is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood."

This declares the Constitution of the United States to be God given—inspired, and every true Latter Day Saint is bound to its support. In another revelation this support of the Constitution is enjoined upon them. It reads as follows:

"And now, verily I say unto you, concerning the laws of the land, it is my will that my people should observe to do all things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore I, the Lord, justify you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to the law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these cometh of evil. I, the Lord God, maketh you free; therefore ye are free indeed; and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn; wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for, diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these cometh of evil."

It is the carrying out of such sentiments as these which has caused the press of the Middle West to eulogize us as being above the ordinary in our fealty to the government, and leaders in reform movements. The Independence Daily Sentinel of April 7, 1888, had the following to say of the people who assembled there for a general conference:

"It is no longer excusable to charge upon the Reorganized Church sympathy with the polygamists. They regret the Salt Lake dogma with loathing and disgust, and teach and keep the marriage relation as sacredly as other Protestant people.

"The sobriety of the Mormon people of this community and their testimony against all forms of dissipation does them great honor and ought to silence the tongue of ignorant criticism."

Iowa stands first in the number of its citizens who are Latter Day Saints, and the Globe of Council Bluffs has this to say of them in its issue of October 13, 1892.

"At Logan tomorrow the Latter Day Saints will decide upon the next place of meeting for the next year. About fifteen thousand people attended the meeting at Logan, and it will be seen that the city that secures the meeting captures a big prize. Council Bluffs will make an effort to have the next meeting held here. . . . The people of Council Bluffs will gladly welcome them and the Globe speaks for them a generous and kind treatment in the event of their coming. The Latter Day Saints can rest assured that if they honor Council Bluffs by holding their next annual reunion here, and it is an honor to the city to be the scene of the meeting of such a body of respectable citizens, they will be given the best of treatment."

And the Missouri Valley News a paper published at Missouri Valley about ten miles from the place where this reunion was held said this:

"Many are the agencies that together are shaping the future of the great civilization now centering in this Garden Valley of the world, Silent and unnoticed are the forces moving into position for the final fulfillment of our destiny as a nation. . . . By disintegration the Latter Day Saints found themselves separated from the polygamous Mormons and left to develop into a moral civilizing force in the fertile valleys where Mormonism first found foothold, while the evil portion went on to its rapid rise to power and even more rapid fall to pieces. . . . These Latter Day Saints in camp in our country for their annual harvest of souls, point with pride to their open creed as evidence of their true Christian spirit and the world cannot but say: 'Ye have done well, abide with us.' Their devotions are genuine. Their moral lives of the best. Their presses are messengers bearing good tidings. Their loyalty leads them to place the national colors over their holy altars. It is well. . . . Tried by these signs the Latter Day Saints are worthy of a welcome as one of the forces that will at all times hold high the starry banner, honor the powers that in creating it gave them a home where freedom of conscience is the keystone of all liberty, of all Christianity, and of all civilization."

But why present more? It is suggested that having, like poor dog Tray, been caught in bad company that we change our name, so that people will not associate us with the people of the West. Is it not better for us to try and live down the scandal attached to the name of Latter Day Saint, and through upright conduct make the name a synonym for good instead of evil?

The present head of the Reorganized Church when he came to his majority, found not only the church which his father organized, besmirched by the foul doctrines taught in its name, but he found the name of his father besmirched and befouled by having attributed to him the teaching of these infamous doctrines, and he made a vow that he would clear that name from the shroud of filth that had been cast upon it. Where he is known and his church is known he has succeeded, as these testimonies already given and the following will show. Speaking of President Joseph Smith, the history of Decatur County, Iowa, where he lived for many years, says:

"His youth was passed amid trials, sorrows and afflictions that would have embittered one of less noble character against the world. His life has been saddened by the events of those years, but his manhood has not deteriorated, and it may be that the persecution of his family, which did not end with the death of his father, has had much to do with the forming of his character. No semblance of intolerance has place there. The same liberty of action and thought he exercises himself, he freely accords to all. . . . In religion, loyal to the faith of his father, he recognizes in every worker of good, a brother. As a citizen no man outranks him in fealty to the government. As a man his character of honor and integrity stands unquestioned. . . . He has with others labored diligently, . . . has seen the church over which he presides grow from a handful, obscure and unpopular, into a body of persistent workers of many thousands of honest, honorable men, known and loved of their neighbors, and loyal to their country."

Mr. Smith lived for many years in Plano, Ill., where the headquarters of the church were for the first years of its existence. In 1831 he left there and removed to Lamoni, Iowa. On his departure from his former home his town paper, The Kendall County Record has this to say:

"Mr. Smith leaves Plano, but carries the good will of Plano's citizens with him. He has lived here for the past fifteen years, and has always borne the reputation of a good citizen. Always to be found on the side of right, he maintained his position to the end, and goes to his future home with sad farewells and good wishes of his many friends."

This is the natural outgrowth of the religion taught by the Latter Day Saints. That which is known in the world by the name of Mormonism is a fungous excrescence, a barnacle which we would gladly see scraped from the bottom of the religious and political ship.

We court investigation of our claims. We believe that they will stand the closest scrutiny. We only ask that prejudice be laid aside and a careful, candid examination be made, and we believe that you will come to the same conclusion that honest investigators have come to in the past.

I presume that the question of Mormonism never had a more thorough investigation than it had during what is known as the Smoot trial, and the conclusion in regard to the origin of polygamy and its kindred doctrines was that these evil doctrines were palmed off upon the people as the product of Joseph Smith, by Brigham Young, when he, himself, was the real author. Of this, United States Senator, Julius C. Burrows, chairman of the committee of investigation says:

"In order to induce his followers more readily to accept this infamous doctrine, Brigham Young himself invoked the name of Joseph Smith, the Martyr, whom many sincerely believed to be a true prophet, and ascribed to him the reception of a revelation from the Almighty in 1843, commanding the saints to take unto themselves a multiplicity of wives, limited in number only by the measures of their desires. . . . Such the mythical story palmed off on a deluded people."—Congressional Record, Dec. 13, 1906.

Of the difference between the Reorganization and the people of Utah this same senator says, in another part of the same speech:

"The death of Joseph Smith in 1844, however, carried dismay and demoralization throughout the entire membership of the Mormon church, scattering its adherents in divers directions and for the time being seemed to prestage the complete overthrow and dissolution of the organization. Recovering, however, from the shock, the scattered bands soon reappeared in various parts of the country and promulgated their doctrines with increased zeal, and set to work to reassemble and reorganize their scattered forces, resulting finally in the formation of what is now known and recognized as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, and presided over by Joseph Smith, son of the Prophet. The courts have repeatedly declared this organization to be the legitimate successor of the original Mormon Church, and its adherents—numbering some fifty thousand, peaceable, patriotic, and law-abiding citizens scattered throughout the United States in small church societies, conforming to the laws of their country wherever they may be, and adhering to the faith of the founder of their creed, repudiating and denouncing the doctrine of polygamy and its attendant crimes, without temple, endowment house or secret order—worship in the open like other church organizations, unquestioned and unmolested."

On the 17th of the same month the Congressional Record contains a speech by Hon. Fred T. Dubois, Senator from Idaho in which he makes the following statement:

"It is only fair, I think, for me to say—and I am glad the distinguished Senator from Michigan (Mr. Burrows) treated upon it the other day—that there is a branch of the Mormons, called the "Josephites," who ought to be separated clearly in the minds of all Senators from the Brighamite Mormons. The Josephites claim that they are custodians of the church as it was founded. They claim that Brigham Young has interjected doctrines into the church which the Mormons did not accept in the beginning. At any rate, however that may be, the Josephite Mormons, with their headquarters at Lamoni, in the State of Iowa, and wherever they are, no matter in what part of the country, are among the best of our citizens in all respects."

These sentiments come from men who have thoroughly investigated the matter of which they speak, and it should be considered as carrying great weight in forming an opinion upon the subject.

The nickname Mormon, Mormonism, and so forth, was given to the early believers in the Book of Mormon, but it is just as absurd to call us Mormons, as to call believers in the Bible, Bibles. We as a people do not recognize the name as a proper one by which we should be called, but the world persists in so designating us. The stigma attaching to the name is very odious to us, however, and the name of Mormon is very offensive to a member of the Reorganization.

Some people think that it is not worth while to investigate the claims of the Latter Day Saints. They pass it by as a joke, as something that is beneath the notice of a thinking man, it is not worth while to give it a second sober thought, and look upon those who have cast in their lot with the movement as a deluded set, and yet those who have carefully examined, have seen in the movement begun by Joseph Smith nearly a century ago something of which they have prophesied great things, or at least great possibilities. The Hon. Josiah Quincy visited Joseph Smith just shortly before his death and of the man and his work he says:

"It is by no means improbable that some future textbook, for the use of generations yet unborn, will contain a question something like this: What historical American of the nineteenth century has exerted the most powerful influence upon the destinies of his countrymen? And it is by no means impossible that the answer to that interrogatory may be thus written: Joseph Smith the Mormon Prophet. And the reply, absurd as it doubtless seems to most men now living, may be an obvious commonplace to their descendants. History deals in surprises and paradoxes quite as startling as this. The man who established a religion in this age of free debate, who was and is today accepted by hundreds of thousands as a direct emissary from the Most High,—such a rare human being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets. Fanatic, impostor, charlatan, he may have been; but these hard names furnish no solution to the problem he presents to us. Fanatic and impostor are living and dying every day, and their memory is buried with them; but the wonderful influence which this founder of religion exerted and still exerts through him into relief before us, not as a rogue to be crimated, but as a phenomenon to be explained. . . . Joseph Smith, claiming to be an inspired teacher, faced adversity such as few men have been called to meet, enjoyed a brief season of prosperity such as few ever attained, and, finally, forty-three days after I saw him, went cheerfully to a martyr's death."—Figures of the Past, page 376.

No system of religion has ever had to pass through a more scathing ordeal than that through which the religion of the Latter Day Saint has passed. Against it on one side has been arraigned the forces of other Christian churches combined. The fight against it, I believe, in most instances, has been an honest fight against what they conceived to be a wrong,—an error, but it has not been entirely free from prejudice, and we will hail the day when that prejudice is done away, and honest, fair investigation takes its place, when the cry "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" shall cease and a man and his religion will be examined on merit.

On the other hand it has passed through one of the most death-dealing ordeals in the great apostasy under the leadership of Brigham Young which threatened at one time to destroy the faith entirely, and had it not been founded on something better than most of its enemies are willing to admit it would have gone down under the calamity that came upon it at that time. Never did the words of Peter have a more literal fulfillment when he said:

"But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that brought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of."

It has survived all this, and flourishes; not with a rapid growth but with a steady, even advance that nothing can check. It is not popular, and I am glad it is not, for, when not popular, men come to it not for the sake of pleasing their fellowman, but because of its intrinsic worth,—the love of truth.

I would not have it popular until that time shall come when Truth is popular; and when it shall be as stated by the Master, recorded in Luke 16:16, "Since that time the kingdom of God is preached and every man who seeketh truth presseth into it." I quote it as found in our new translation.

To me the theme is inspiring, and I know not where to stop, but as briefly as I can I present to you this outline of the history, doctrine, and practice of our church, hoping that you may be sufficiently interested to investigate further. Some of the doctrines presented may seem to you absurd, but to me they are vital, and not only to me but to thousands of others are they like a lamp upon the feet and a light on the path. Upon them we as a people are depending for a guide here in this life, and upon them hangs our hope of eternal life in the world to come.

HEARTS OF GOLD.

The law of association and fellowship has for its final apotheosis the realization of that which may be found only in the promises of God as indicated in His word,—such as for instance, that found in Rev. 21:1-4, the third verse of which we quote: "And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."

The thoughts to which I may give utterance are suggested to me by the reception through the mails of a post card photo of a group of women workers whose familiar forms and faces vividly remind us of the real meaning that attaches to the phrase, "the communion of saints;" and of the never to be forgotten times of social and spiritual uplift, and the meetings, and conferences, and "reunions" that seasoned so much of the Pentecostal Spirit and power.

"Dennisport" and "Cape Cod" sand dunes,—and scant sea blown vegetation may not have many charms for people born and reared upon the rich soil of the western prairies; but to the writer, who has, by the grace of God found "the bread of life" so freely distributed to souls that "hunger and thirst after righteousness" in the "Old Bay State," whose shores are swept by the Atlantic Ocean, is not ever prove a green and fertile spot where the choicest and purest affections are implanted and nourished into the life which is filled with the fullness of God's provision;—the life supernal, the glory and bliss unending.

"Hearts of Gold!"—Tried in the fires of temptation, and of affliction, denial of earthly pleasure or profit; if enforced it may be, perhaps, by the grace of God and consent of the sufferer for the purging or eliminating processes of God, that only the gold may remain. Who knows, but God? Who may most reasonably assume, but those who have "tasted of the sweets of self denial" and are in the heat of the conflict, "the fight of faith" in the struggle for the supreme good? "Who better than these, are qualified to say, in what "eternal riches" consist?

"Father, I will, that those whom thou hast given me, may be with me where I am." "Having loved them, ho loved them until the end"—of his earth life, and thus expressed his desire for continuance of fellowship in the great beyond.

We may never meet again this side of the tomb, these "Hearts of Gold;" we may never join with them again in repetition of the memory blessed "reunions" with the "Cape Cod folks;" but we shall never forget, we never can forget, the old and early friends and associations of our New England life, and we trust, and believe, our character for permanency with which these Godly men and women in our association have furnished us.

Life has no significance apart from personality; and "personality" has its attached dangers, as well as its blessings.

The companionship and "communion of saints!"—real saints; are companions and fellow travelers in the road that leads only to God;—to the everlasting and permanent good.

Hearts corrupted by fleshly and carnal desire or indulgence; by worldly and unprofitable association,—by getting over the line, and into the ranks of those who are "lovers of pleasure, more than lovers of God;"—to whom the attraction of the service of God in his house upon the Sabbath day;—the hour of private devotion, or public service has lost its charm, or has failed to attract, or to hold them to the safe life;—these are the hearts atrophied, diseased,—spiritually abnormal, or out of harmonious working with the designs of God.

In closing, I wish to pay tribute to the lives of these "Cape Cod" sisters—whose pictures are now before me,—as I have known them in the past, and believe them yet to be.

In these forms and faces taken evidently at the Massachusetts reunion, I see but little evidence of superficial pride, or worldly mindedness;—no silks, or satin brocade, no diamonds, or "picture hats." There "outward adornments" consisting not "of braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array," but of evidences to us of the unimpaired brilliancy of the gems that from the inward, and secret recesses of the soul, still shine out through their countenances from these "Hearts of Gold."

MISCELLANEOUS

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The conference at St. Charles, Mo., will hold its sessions in the St. Charles court house, between Washington and Jefferson streets. The priests meeting will be held Saturday evening in Huniag's Hall, our regular meeting place.
V. DeCoster.

WHAT WOULD THEY SAY NOW?

"Balloons and locomotives are all the ton in the East. If it were possible to steer the airy monitor, all passengers and the mail would soon be conveyed by 'space-boats' now vulgarly called balloons. As to locomotives, the 'John Little' of Philadelphia, ran 97 miles in 150 minutes, a few days since. Whew!"—New York Messenger, 1845.

TO THE THIRD SEVENTY.

Dear Brethren:—Will you please send your report to me soon, using the same blank furnished by the Twelve. I do not have the addresses of all the quorum. Let us all respond to this reminder.

Yours in service,

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

It has been arranged, nothing preventing, to hold the business session of the Woman's Auxiliary on Tuesday morning, April 8th, beginning at 9 o'clock. It is hoped the sisters will make a special effort to be present. We believe the work of this Auxiliary is of sufficient importance to demand the attention of every sister in the church.

The evening session of the Auxiliary has been appointed for Thursday evening, April 10th.

Advisory Board of W. A. for S. S.

RAILROAD RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Informal notice has been given that the Burlington Route has granted a rate of two cents per mile in each direction from points in the State of Missouri only to Lamoni, Iowa, to the April general conventions and general conference.

Dates of sale on going trips limited to April 1-7 inclusive. Final return limit, April 21.

Tariffs giving particulars to agents will not be issued until about March 15-20. Probably it will be necessary to obtain certificates with going tickets, to secure reduction on return trip. Make inquiry of agents for same; the undersigned will publish further items if received in time. Those coming from Missouri and those crossing the State in transit should take note of the reduction.

Trains Nos. 111 and 112 on the Chariton Branch, running between Chariton, Iowa, and St. Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri, will run direct to Lamoni April 1-7 inclusive, also on other dates at the close of conference.

Parties traveling together from Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, etc., should make arrangements with local agents for special car service.

R. S. Salyards,
Church Secretary.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 6, 1913.

NOTICES.

Since my letter in ENSIGN of the Curtis-Carlin debate I have had so many calls for the twenty verses read by Bro. Curtis at the close of said debate, I have decided to have 500 more printed so I can supply the demand of all who may wish them at five cents a copy or six for twenty-five cents by mail, by addressing Henry Sparling, R. 10, Springfield, Mo.

"WHY JUDGE YE NOT WHAT IS RIGHT?"

In the above words the Savior reproved the Jews of his day because they did not properly see and consider the evidences relative to his kingdom. He said to them, "When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, there cometh a shower; and so it is. And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, there will be heat; and it cometh to pass. Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth, and how is it that ye do not discern this time? Yea, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?"—Luke 12:54-57.

The work of God is never without proper and sufficient evidences to satisfy every soul who is willing to examine them and accept them for what they really are, and those evidences are of such an abundant variety that any man, no matter what may be his disposition and needs, will find in them such as will meet his legitimate demands. In support of their work, Jesus and the apostles often had occasion to refer to "It is written," and all the principal events of the work of God in that age had been previously revealed to the prophets and recorded by them in the Scriptures, so that the fulfillment of these prophecies furnished a strong line of evidence which none could justly reject.

PROPHECY FULFILLED TODAY.

The same prophets who told of the events of Christ's first coming and the work to be done in that day, also told of his second coming and of the work that should precede it in the last days. In the establishment and perpetuation of this work it is found that every principal event has been foreshadowed by the ancient prophets thus furnishing a line of evidence which could not be used in support of anything else than the work of God. These prophecies include such events as the revelation of God, the coming of angels, the coming of the Book of Mormon, the raising up of a prophet, the organization of the church, the gathering of the saints, the persecutions, the apostasy under Brigham Young, the preservation of the work, and others.

The time when such prophecies should have their fulfillment is pointed out relatively with other events which would transpire in the world such as the restoration of Palestine to a fertile condition and the gathering of the Jews to that land, which have had, or are having, their fulfillment. These events were not under the control of the men who participated in them, but have come through the developments of God's purposes by the working of his divine hand.

HARMONY WITH TRUTH.

Apart from the prophetic evidences by which the divinity of the latter day work can be established; there are the evidences which appear from a comparison with the Bible of those records which the church accepts as inspired, viz., the Book of Mormon, and the revelations. While even the Christian world is following doctrines that are out of harmony with the teachings of the Bible the teachings of these records show a wondrous harmony with those taught in the Bible, which forms another line of evidence tending to establish the divinity of the work in which these records have a place.

ARCHAEOLOGY.

The Book of Mormon being a historical record of two ancient nations who lived upon the American continent tells considerable of their travels and civilization. The researches of the archaeologists in various parts of the land have brought forth multiplied evidences of the truth of that book as a history. True some apparent conflicts have appeared at times but later researches have resulted in favor of the Book of Mormon, as for instance, that book says that the ancient inhabitants possessed the horse as one of their domestic animals, but scientists held that the horse was unknown in America until brought by the Spaniards. Twenty years after the publication of the book fossil remains of the horse were found, since which time over thirty species of the horse have been brought to light. In the field of archaeology there is an abundance of material which furnishes an array of evidence strongly in support of the Book of Mormon and the truth which it contains.

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Some may not have the ability or opportunity to enter into a thorough research of prophecy, doctrinal truth, archaeology, or other evidences requiring time, hard work, and to some extent learning, but there is a line of evidence which is open to all who are willing to put themselves in a condition to receive. That evidence is made available through the command and promise made by Christ, "Ask, and ye shall receive," and confirmed by James, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." (1:5). One of the revelations to the church says, "The Spirit lighteth every man through the world that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit," and the Book of Mormon speaking of the things contained therein says, "I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost." (Moroni 10). God has ever been the defender of his own work, and in all past ages the Holy Ghost has borne witness to the truth. It is the same today. The true seeker after truth is not dependent alone upon the natural evidences, nor upon the testimonies of his fellowmen, but God through his Spirit has provided a means by which every soul who has need and truly seeks for the truth with a proper motive, may receive assurance and satisfaction.

OTHER EVIDENCES.

In addition to these there are the confirmatory signs which Jesus said should follow the believer. As Christ's ministry of old went out into the world performing their work, it is said, the Lord worked with them confirming the word with signs following. The same signs have been with this church in fulfillment of the command and promise given soon after its organization in 1830, "Therefore, go ye into all the world . . . and as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you . . . that every soul who believeth on your words, and is baptized by water for the remission of sins, shall receive the Holy Ghost; and these signs shall follow them that believe." Doctrine and Covenants 83:10. These signs are not given for purposes of demonstration or experiment, but to meet the needs and emergencies of the believers, and that miracles, healings, tongues, prophecies, the casting out of devils, opening the eyes of the blind, etc., have followed this people is a well attested fact, if human testimony can be relied upon.

The trend of events among the nations of the world which are fulfilling many prophecies associated with those referring to the work of God through the church, also present a line of corroborative evidence. Again, in the fulfillment of prophecies found in the Book of Mormon and the revelations given through Joseph Smith, is found another line; but these are sufficient.

TACTICS OF OPPONENTS.

In the early days of the church most of the opposition was in the nature of persecution which assumed the most violent forms. Under it many who had accepted the faith were deprived of the sacred rights of property, liberty and life. Proper evidences were not considered, but instead, blind prejudice, falsehood, calumny, and violence, were used to frustrate the work and destroy those engaged in it.

In later years the more violent forms of opposition have almost entirely ceased, but misrepresentation and slander have continued to be the means by which defeat of the work is sought.

THE CHURCH INVITES INVESTIGATION.

The church cannot afford to maintain an error, knowing that the inevitable future will bring to light every secret thing. If the position of the church is untenable, or any portion of the faith of the saints is unfounded in truth, they would welcome the evidences showing such error, for they prefer to be right before God for time and eternity rather than to hold a false faith and hope, and meet with disappointment in eternity. But in the investigation of that faith they insist that fairness and justness be had, and that its integrity and divinity be determined according to the common rules of justice and equity in the evidence presented.

Books have been written, articles have appeared in cyclopedias, magazines, and newspapers, lectures and sermons have been delivered, and tracts and pamphlets have been sent broadcast over the land, in denunciation of the work represented in the church of Jesus Christ, but in most instances the real evidences have not been used except in perverted form. Characteristics and actions have been attributed to the leaders based altogether upon falsehood, the doctrines have been misrepresented, and the books garbled, and upon such evidences Joseph Smith and the church have been adjudged unworthy of acceptance. By such evidences as these Jesus was condemned and crucified, and his disciples imprisoned and killed, and by such evidences the saints of latter days have also been condemned.

JUSTIFICATION.

Such a course can not be justified before man, nor before the throne of God. If the work be worthy of condemnation, such methods of exposition would still be indefensible, but when they are used against the good and true, they not only cause injustice to the innocent, but blind the vision of others by which they are denied the privileges and blessings that the truth might bring them.

"Why judge ye not what is right?" Why take some isolated individual act as the measure of a whole system of faith and practice? Why pervert the facts and then condemn by such perversion? Why not judge according to the whole evidence and determine truth by truth rather than by a false measure? The Reorganized Church has placed its all upon the altar of investigation and is willing to stand or fall by a just judgment in which the word of God is used as the measure.

The Church Secretary requests that all delegate credentials to general conference be mailed to him promptly on appointment, that the report of the committee on credentials be made up and published before the opening date, as provided by conference action. Credentials should not be held to be forwarded by the hands of delegates.

A number of the eastern cities are being treated weekly to two or more pages of religious advertising in some of the great dailies. One of these papers—The Baltimore News—says the advertising is being written by two men, one of whom "is a thorough student in religion with a fair knowledge of advertising, and the other an experienced advertising man with a fair knowledge of church work and history." In Philadelphia the churches have an association known as the "Associated Churches of Philadelphia," including all the protestant and Catholic churches, with the Christian Scientist, and Latter Day Saints, Y. M. C. A., and other societies. A publicity committee is maintained to prepare the advertisements which appear in the papers each Saturday, and which are put in such form as to make people think. Christianity is good enough to be advertised.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The approach of general conference is drawing a number of missionaries whose homes are here from their mission-fields for a few days visit before entering upon the work of the conference. Some of these have been absent for over ten months and have proved their title to a visit to home and loved ones.

The "harbingers of spring," the general church auditors, have come and have labored the past week in the Eastern and bishop's offices. They are Bro. George Blair and John Garver of Lamoni, and Lester Haas of Independence. All the various departments of church work handling funds, have their accounts audited by this board of auditors appointed by the general conference.

Elder J. W. Peterson of Winnipeg, Canada, was the speaker Sunday morning, the service being in charge of Pres. F. M. Smith, recently returned from Florida. At the same hour Elder G. E. Harrington, president of the Independence Stake addressed the children in the lower auditorium. His subject had been specially prepared for the children and was illustrated by charts which helped to make it instructive and entertaining. Elder F. M. Slover was the evening speaker.

A musical program will be rendered at the brick church of the Second Independence Branch, Monday evening, March 24, at which a silver collection will be taken for the benefit of the Walnut Park Mission. Refreshments will also be served at Curtis Hall near by.

A general priesthood meeting was held Monday evening with a fair attendance, at which the subjects of healing, and representation in general conference were discussed. These meetings are profitable occasions and might be made more so by a more extended co-operation.

SAINT LOUIS, MO..

Owing to the district conference being held in St. Charles, Mo., Sunday school was the only service held here March 16th, all church services being dispensed with in order to give every one an opportunity to attend the conference.

Our assistant superintendent, Bro. Charles Tanner, had charge of the Sunday school and at the close of the lesson read the lesson on faith from the Exponent.

Bro. G. S. Trowbridge was the speaker the morning of March 9th, his theme being, Temptation. Many beautiful thoughts were expressed. His reading was from the first chapter of James. Bro. S. A. Burgess delivered an excellent sermon on baptism the evening of the same day.

The regular branch business meeting was held March 4th. A motion was passed to celebrate our 50th anniversary Feb. 7, 1914. Three were added by baptism and one by letter of removal. The priesthood reports were such as evidenced work on their part. An urgent request was made in a paper read by our pastor that more attention be paid to church services.

The morning of March 10th Bro. E. E. Bell, our able choir chorister, gave a talk to the Sunday school on music, and requested that all who have any ability in the musical line should cultivate the gift of song and assist in the choir work.

St. Winn of Kansas City, the mother of St. Walround, is visiting here and taking advantage of church services. Elizabeth Patterson.

2739 Greer Ave,

QUINDARO BRANCH.

Having returned home after being absent for some time I will again resume my share of the branch work, although being very ably assisted in my work while away.

Sunday morning, March 2d, Elder J. C. Foss from Independence was the speaker, his subject was: "It is not the breaker of the law that is justified." He also sang a very beautiful song for the benefit of the children.

The sacrament and prayer service which was presided over by Bro. James Kaplinger and C. S. Barron was very well attended, and the Spirit of our heavenly Father prevailed. The evening speaker was Bro. C. S. Barron, his talk being mostly to the young men.

Our monthly business meeting was held Monday night, March 3. Some business which was transacted some time ago was reminded. Letters of removal were granted to Bro. George Essig and family to the 2nd Kansas City Branch.

March 9th Elders Wm. Newton and Essig were the speakers, morning and evening. Bro. Essig using a chart made his talk very interesting.

The Wednesday night prayer meetings are very well attended considering the bad streets and muddy roads. Bro. Alvin Knisley gave an interesting talk at Religio last Friday night.

Last Saturday Sr. Snell was called to Lexington, Mo., to attend the funeral of her grandson who died very suddenly.

Last Sunday morning Bro. M. H. Bond of the stake presidency was with us and spoke on the spiritual gifts, using for his text I Cor. 12:1, connected with Acts 17:8. His talk was very profitable. Elder James Kaplinger was the speaker at the Bennington Heights Branch in the morning. Our pastor, Elder D. E. Hough occupied the evening hour with good liberty.

CORRESPONDENCE

LOVELAND, IOWA, Feb. 5.

Editor Ensign:—Wife and I came here to the fourth to hold meetings two miles west of this place. We had a nice crowd out last night. So many calls for preaching I can't fill them all. I have been laboring with N. V. Sheldon this year in the Pottawattamie District. I find a noble band of saints here, it is here like elsewhere, plenty of room for improvement; but I believe the majority are trying to come up higher. We are admonished to keep ourselves unspotted from the world and be ready to receive the great endowment of God's Holy Spirit, he has in store for us. So, dear saints, let us improve our opportunities while the day lasts.

I feel strong in the faith, and am happy in the Master's work. I have been blessed in presenting the word of the Lord. I got one of Bro. J. T. Curtis' charts of the two ways last month, and where I was holding meetings at Parish school house the people would crowd around me before and after meetings, and ask questions. I think they are just fine for new places. While we have not done any baptizing this year, we have made lots of friends for the cause, and broken down lots of prejudice. Some have told me they would be baptized soon; others say they never heard the like, or knew there was so much in the Bible. I know this work is true. I have had my prayers answered at one. Last winter I was taken sick very suddenly and I felt if I could get the elders to administer to me I would be healed. So I telephoned for Bro. S. Harding and Columbus Scott, and when they had laid their hands on me I got well immediately and the pain stopped at once. In June, 1912, when at Bro. John Carlyle's I took sick and was in bad shape. He administered to me and the pain was all gone in a few minutes; so you see the signs follow the believer.

In Doctrine and Covenants 10:6-7, we find "And now, verily, verily I say unto thee, put your trust in that Spirit which leadeth to do good; yea, to do justly, to walk humbly, to judge righteously, and this is my Spirit. Verily, verily I say unto you, I will impart unto you of my Spirit which shall enlighten your mind, which shall fill your soul with joy, and then shall ye know, or by this shall you know all things whatsoever you desire of me, which is pertaining unto things of righteousness, in faith believing in me that you shall receive."

Now, dear saints, is it not worth while to put forth our every effort to gain the higher and better life? It all lies in our power. Christ's statement is, if we will do the will of the Father we shall know. If there are any that do not know it is because they have not done the will of the Father.

In Doctrine and Covenants 58:6, "I command and a man obeys not." If we don't obey when he has warned us and we do not receive the blessings. Who is to blame?

We need spiritual food as well as physical food. Hoping and praying we may come up to the high standard in Christ Jesus, I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

H. N. Pierce.

McHUE, Ark., March 1.

Editor Ensign:—I will say that I have been receiving the ENSIGN and I am well pleased with it, and I will just say that I would like for you to still continue to send it for I would like to hear from the conference. I like to read the letters from all over the world, and it does me good to hear of so many coming to Christ, for I am a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, and I like to hear of any good work for it is of God, for all good cometh from God, and he is the only way by which we can get to that goodly land.

Well, it does me good to read a good paper that has the gospel in it, and the ENSIGN has lots of Christ's language in it, and Christ has all power over heaven and earth. So we must put our trust in him and he will do the rest. I remain as a brother in Christ but we don't belong to the same church here on earth but when we get to that better land we will be as one.

Lewis Webb.

SHEBESTA, Nebr., March 7.

Editor Ensign:—As I have not written for your columns for some time I will give a few statements to let you and the readers of our missionary paper know that I am still in the faith. I have been doing what I could for the Master in the mission in Utah. My time has been divided between the Master's work and some temporalities that it appeared necessary to care for.

My companion in the mission field was Bro. J. C. Christensen. I found him a good and congenial co-laborer. We found it difficult to accomplish much. The people, generally speaking, seemed to have no desire to hear our message.

I was called here to the bedside of my sister, Sr. E. J. Dickerson, who is very low and hardly expected to recover. I expect to visit one or two points on my way home and to conference.

Your as ever,

J. M. Stubbart.

BURLINGTON, IOWA, March 17.

Editor Ensign:—Some strangers have darkened the door of our little church here most every Sunday, but last night our hearts were made glad to see fifty strange faces. Many of them had never been in our church nor heard a sermon from our elders before. Sunday afternoon Bro. Miller and I attended a lecture down town. Bro. Miller announced the evening subject and extended an invitation. Many came gladly. May the work prosper in our earnest prayer.

Hopefully,

Mrs. O. R. Miller.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va.

Dear Ensign:—In renewing my subscription I thought I would write a few lines. We are among the isolated ones although I believe there are twenty-four Latter Day Saints in this city but no officers. Bro. Ullom visited us in the summer preached several sermons at my house also at Bro. Williams baptized seven; my three daughters and three children of Bro. William and his sister-in-law. The people here are very prejudiced and will not go out even to hear our sermons I wonder what excuse they will have to answer God, for he has told us to prove all things and hold fast to that which is good. I thank God he has permitted me to see the glory of this latter day work and I was glad when he answered my prayers and brought my children into the fold. My prayer is that he may choose out the honest hearted and establish a branch here.

If any of the elders pass through would be glad to have them call upon us. We are not rich in this world's goods but always welcome them in our home. My oldest daughter, Janie is teaching school near Ridgedale in Hampshire County. If any of the elders pass through there it might be a good place to preach as she wrote she had only been at church once since she has been there and that was in a school house. She is near the large orchard there boarding with a family by the name of Copeland. I do enjoy reading the ENSIGN for it is so seldom we have any one to preach for us. We go to the other churches, but it is chaff compared with a gospel sermon. Pray for us and your word may get more interested and study God's word more and that we may so let our light shine that others may see our good works and glorify God and that we may live faithful to the end.

Your sister in gospel bonds

Clara Call.

BUCHANAN, Mich., Feb. 19, 1913.

Dear Ensign:—I say dear for I don't know how I should get along without you, as you are about all the preaching I get to hear, we live 6 miles from Buchanan and 9 miles from Galien on a farm. But we have been having some fine sermons of late, Bro. Clyde F. Ellis came on the 23d of January and staid three weeks and preached at the Coven school house to a good crowd every night, and as a token of esteem the friends and neighbors presented him with a neat little sum of money on the last night of his stay, for which he was very thankful, I think some are very near the kingdom they expressed themselves as believing he spoke the truth for he proved it all by the Bible. The seed is sown, God will take care of the results. One lady asked me if we were taught wrong who would have to pay the debt, I told her if we never knew any better the teacher would have to pay, but after we had heard the gospel in its fullness and then did not obey we would have the debt to pay ourselves, she said she hoped and prayed we would convert her son. I said "how about you?" "Well" she said "I left the Dunkards and joined the Christian church and thought I would live and die in it but sometimes I don't know." So I think there is a chance yet that she may obey. There are only two saints here myself and daughter, my husband and three sons do not belong to the church, and I ask the saints one and all to pray for them that they may all be brought to a knowledge of the truth.

Bro. Ellis went from here to Gennora four miles west of us, he is holding forth to good crowds, which are very attentive.

Your sister in the one faith

Ida Burgoyne.

MOUNTAINVILLE, Me., Feb. 17.

Editor Ensign:—A few lines this morning to your very valuable and instructive pages, to say that we are still in the faith once delivered unto the saints, and trying to strive to live in that way that we may finally triumph through our dear Redeemer, and have a well-earned part in Zion—beautiful Zion—with the faithful saints of our Lord and King.

As the days pass, I realize, as never before, the necessity, of a strict compliance with the celestial law if we would receive and inherit the blessings of the celestial kingdom, and the present blessings, which our Father has in store for his saints here and now. All of the great blessings are promised to us are upon certain conditions—conditions of faithfulness along certain lines—to the end, and unless we as saints are willing to do our part, we need not pray to God to do his; if so, he would certainly not be a God of justice to require obedience in some and give blessings to others regardless of their works. May the dear Father above help us as wise children, to look these issues square in the face and not be hearers only but a doer of the word as well.

The work in these parts has made no visible, material change, according to our views. Men must yield up some of the things of mammon and the world—give space for the Holy Spirit to enter their hearts, before they can expect to be truly converted to the everlasting gospel of Jesus Christ.

Desiring the prayers of God's people everywhere, and determining to continue on to the end, I remain

Your Bro. in the work

Wallace A. Small.

PITTSBURG, Kan., Feb. 25.

Dear Ensign:—After reading your most beloved pages and enjoying the same very much I thought perhaps a few lines from this corner of the Lord's vineyard might interest some. We have a real nice branch in this place, and are striving to press on in the work as best we can. I truly love this latter day work and the gospel seems dearer to me each day. I have been a member of this church about 20 years and I can testify of the goodness of God in many ways by healings and blessings in many various ways, in dreams and visions.

I know this work is of the Lord I have had many evidences of it and I rejoice in the work. I was glad of having the opportunity of being present and enjoy the debate held at Joplin by Bro. J. T. Curtis and Rev. Carlin, and also very grateful for renewed evidences of the truthfulness of the gospel, and the good spirit that prevailed all through the debate, and also the conference in which much good was done. Trusting we may have the prayers of the saints that we may be faithful and do all the good we can in our humble way.

I remain your sister in gospel bonds,

Mrs. J. N. Madden.

LEROY, Ohio, Feb. 12.

Dear Ensign:—I desire to write a few lines to tell of the goodness of God, and his saints, to my daughter and little grand-daughter, and how much it is appreciated. My little grand-daughter, Mabel, was in a terrible condition, from the effects of tapeworm, and last November I thought she would surely not live many days. She is six years old. Different doctors had repeatedly tried to rid her of it, without success, and I saw her again Christmas time, and something says, "write to Bro. Joseph Luff," and I did so immediately, for my daughter, as she was sick in bed at the time. This dear brother answered immediately, and through his instrumen-tality the money was provided to get this child to him, where he got the horrible parasite in just three hours, and it was forty-five feet long. Tears of joy and gratitude filled my heart when I learned the good news.

Bro. Luff did this without charge, and they were kindly cared for by him and his wife while there, for which I want to thank them.

This is a portion of the letter I got from my daughter upon her return home: "I just got back last night all tired out, but happy, and thanking God in heaven for his goodness to me. Bro. Luff got the tapeworm, head and all, in three hours. And mother! Bro. Luff is the finest man living, so good and true, and, mother! he is doing the most wonderful work, and his work is all for God. He treats people all over the world, with the best success. Sr. Luff told me that every drop of medicine he used or sent out he prayed over; but mother! he is a poor, worn-out man. He has given his whole life to helping others. Oh, if there were only more like him!"

I refrain from writing more of this letter to me. Tears filled my eyes and a prayer arose from my heart for our Father in heaven to bless and strengthen this servant of the Most High that he may live to bless many others and have the Holy Spirit to abide continually with him, to comfort and cause him great joy.

truly rejoice in this glorious gospel, although I am one of the isolated ones and have many trials to endure. God's people will be a tried people; a peculiar people, zealous of good works; and may the Holy Spirit penetrate the hearts of saints that they may not withhold their means from the Lord's treasury, that the good work may not be hindered, but the coming of our Lord be realized.

Your humble sister in gospel bonds,
Mrs. Jennie A. Cleary.

P. O., Painesville, R. D. 2.

ROLLA, Mo., Feb. 19.

Dear Ensign:—I thought I would write a letter to this paper as I have never seen any letters from any saints anywhere around here, don't believe there are any saints near here as we have never heard of any.

My father, mother, four brothers, sister and myself came here in the spring of 1909, and we feel very lonesome as we lived in a good neighborhood of saints in Canada where we moved from, but we have some good neighbors here, for whom we are glad.

I am sixteen years old and am trying to always keep on the straight and narrow road though sometimes I fail to. I was baptized on my ninth birthday by Alvin Kniesley in Saskatchewan, Canada, and I have never regretted it and I hope I never shall.

I have often thought that children and young folks could not have as much faith or do as near right as older folks, because the Lord wouldn't answer their prayers or makethings known to them, but I have since thought different, for I know he will hear and answer children's prayers just as much as he will older people if they are just as sincere.

We would like to have the gospel spread in this part, and we expect to get a preacher to come here as soon as we are able to care for him right. We have handed out tracts and papers to some people here and have done as much to help along the cause as we can do.

I read Mr. Alvin Kniesley's letter in the Ensign and was very sorry to hear of his wife's death.

I hope this letter will be in print as it is the first I have ever tried to write to this paper. I always liked to read the letters in the Ensign better than other reading matter, though I like the other too.

Your hopeful little sister in the church,
L. L. Day.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.

Sr. Mary Butler passed away on Jan. 27th. She was the wife of J. F. Butler, mother of Mrs. D. M. Dalby and Mrs. Thomas Manning, and sister of Bro. Elam and J. D. Erwin.

She heard and embraced the gospel at Manchester, Texas, in 1879, and to her the restored gospel was ever after paramount to all else and she never grew weary in dwelling upon the bright hope it afforded her, or in assisting in every way possible for its accomplishment. Her loving ministrations will continue to live, though she has passed to her reward.

We'll do the writer recall one act about two years ago, that is illustrative of the courage and zeal of this sister. I had called at her home for a short visit knowing she was in feeble health, and just as I was taking my leave she put into my hand a package of money, about $50.00, mostly silver, saying, "Bro. Short, I want to make this an offering to assist in the building of the Lord's temple, and know when you receive this, that these small hands have earned and saved this by nickles and dimes, and I am so glad I can give it, it is a wonderful privilege, and to know that God permits man in this age to do so, is a great comfort to me."

Sr. Butler, just before passing from this life, requested that all property in which she held an interest be fully titled as provided for in the law. Her request was fully honored. A check for $520 was sent soon after her demise.

Funeral sermon by Elder Lee Quick. Thus passeth another of the worthy ones.

MAPLETON, KAN., March 3.

Dear Ensign:—Your pages are laden with good news which comes to us every week. We do not see how we could get along without you having been a reader ever since its first publication. I don't see how saints get along without the church papers. I look for the Herald and Ensign as eagerly as a hungry man would his dinner. I am afflicted with neuralgia, rheumatism and will ask the saints to pray for me that God our merciful Father may remove it from me that I may perform that which is required of me without suffering, if it is God's will.

I and Bro. John Lovell of Holden, Mo., have been holding meetings for eighteen successive nights five miles south of town, with good congregations and good interest. Bro. Lovell had to go home and Bro. J. E. Hughes came to the rescue and has done nobly.

Our Adventist friends have become jealous of our success and one, Samuel Odell went out and lectured against the Book of Mormon, and has sent for one of their divines to bury our efforts if possible. Poor, weak, short-sighted humanity! If they only knew they were fighting against God and his work they would not do it. We now have a regular appointment there every two weeks. Bro. W. R. Steels of Independence, Mo., was here and preached for us in our home school house one week, also lectured one night at Berlin, on the difference between Utah Mormonism and the Reorganized Church, all of which was enjoyed very much.

If any of the saints or friends want a good 80 acre farm two and one-quarter miles from town, come and see it, I would like to move into town close to the church and spend my time in the mission field as I feel more at home lifting my voice in defense of gospel truth. We have a good branch of from 125 to 150 saints here and more coming. Ever praying for the uplifting of God's work, I remain your brother in the gospel, Route 2.

VANCOUVER, Wash., March 2.

Dear Ensign:—Your pages are duly appreciated by me. I think a few lines from here will not be amiss. There are about forty of us saints living in and near town, and we have a half hired, and we have a very interesting Sunday school under the leadership of Sr. Mary Shippy, and Religio by Sr. Florence Hansen, and the regular services of the branch are usually well attended. We are hoping to build a church in the near future.

I have been in the church nearly twenty-one years, being baptized by Elder James Caffal, March 20, 1892. God has wonderfully fulfilled his promise in John 7:17. I can truly testify, this is God's work. Elder G. M. Shippy lately from Detroit, Mich., held a series of meetings here in December last, which were very instructive and a few obeyed.

I would like to speak a word in regard to our present lessons in both the Senior grade of the Sunday school and the Religio Quarterlies, they are very instructive and will help us so much in our defending our position before the world. I advise all isolated saints to procure both quarterlies and study them. Neither was ever better. Ever praying for the peace of Zion, I am your sister, Mrs. C. E. Williams.

IRONTON, Mo., Feb. 23.

Dear Editor:—I have been enjoying the Herald and Ensign, and thinking of the progress the church is making, and have thought how the saints could start the fire of swelling the Order of Enoch with financial funds by making offerings and by writing and encouraging others to do likewise through the church publications. Let us start the ball rolling, and your hearts will swell with joy. Let us awaken to the instructions of God's servants as they have been appealing to you and me for help.

Listen! This is God's work, and Brother R. Bullard says, when the land that has been purchased for homes for the saints, and for shops, and factories, has been paid for, then there will be shops and factories built for the benefit of the saints, (read Bro. E. Rannie's articles in some of the Herald's columns.) I have given a little for the Order and will give more, if every member could give a little, it would be better than a few giving it all.

My wife and I are isolated from church privileges, but I spent personally about $25.00 to get preaching here, and at Pilot Knob and Brother J. T. Davis came, held 10 nights meeting, and 4 were baptized, good interest was manifested by many others. Let us put our shoulders to the wheel and help redeem Zion, whether we wish to go there soon to live, or not, and God will help us. Who will be the next to donate and write upon this subject to encourage others, I think the editors would give us space to print such good letters.

Yours for truth,
Albert C. Richardson.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

SANDWICH, Ill., Feb. 25.

Dear Ensign:—I am convinced that many times it is impossible to put one's real feelings on paper. Now I have been laboring constantly in Sandwich since Jan. 21, and while our church there has not been very prosperous since the church building was burned some 11 years ago, however we have a small membership of good saints there.

The second week we got the use of the German Lutheran Church and have held forth 3 weeks of meeting with an audience of from 25 to 54. There are 3 or 4 who have decided to be baptized in the near future. There are quite a few who in the cloudy years of the past have become in a sense careless in their duties in the Kingdom of God. Some of these are glad to renew their covenants and are making things more as in days gone by, others are not so ready, or at least it takes longer to get started, while a few I fear never will awake to the sense of their real duty. The world and the deceitfulness of riches have blinded their eyes to duty, and I am sorry to say a few have yielded themselves to deep immoral sins, too grievous to mention here, the pruning hook of God's law must be applied. Now on the other hand there are numbers of good meaning people ready to hear the word at the preaching service and at their homes. The names of such men as W. W. Blair, I. L. Rogers Joseph Smith, Alex H. Smith, and many others we might mention are held in esteem. Also many of later years and the eldership in general of Plano are deeply regarded by the saints and friends of Sandwich. The church lot is still owned by the local branch and is gaining in value and some day if sold will make a good payment on a church if bought as we hope may be done in the future.

Bro. C. H. Burr, F. M. Cooper and L. O. Wildermuth of Plano have all assisted in the effort at Sandwich and last Sunday night Elder J. A. Bronson of Belvidere joined me and preached at 7:00 p. m. the closing sermon of the effort. We go from here to Mission Branch to hold a series of meetings if weather will permit, then returning will hold another week at Sandwich.

In closing these lines I find Bro. Bronson and the writer at the Mission Branch and made welcome at the home of Bro. W. E. Williamson. The weather is not very good. Last Thursday night this whole region was struck with a tremendous ice storm such as is seldom experienced. The storm of rain that froze to everything was followed by a heavy wind. Great damage was done to orchards, shade trees and still greater to all telephone lines. Miles of poles in a stretch all down. It will take weeks to get any service again.

As President of the N. Eastern Ill. district I wish to say to such parts of the district as I have not yet visited that we will come your way as soon after general conference as possible if continued in this field. I had hoped to reach all the branches by the close of the conference year but have not been able.

To the many friends and saints in Wisconsin will say that I have received your letters from time to time and have answered many. Should any not have received reply, please allow that we are busy and may have neglected some.

Hopefully trusting
Jasper O. Dutton.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Mrs. Annie M. Hollandsworth, Eldridge, Mo.—I know beyond any doubt that this is truly the church of Christ. I am thankful I have been led to see the truth and for the many blessings that I have received. I hope to live more faithful than ever though I am very weak and ask the prayers of the saints.

IN MEMORIAM—BISHOP GEORGE H. HILLIARD.

During the sessions of the Presiding Bishop's Court held at Independence, Missouri, extending from the third to the tenth of March, 1913, resolutions in memoriam of the late member of the court and counselor, Bro. George H. Hilliard, were spread upon the court records and copies directed placed in the hands of the widow and family of the deceased and also furnished the church publications.

Whereas in the wisdom and divine call of our heavenly Father, our associate and beloved brother in judicial and general gospel work, George H. Hilliard, has been called to fields of usefulness and rest beyond this present scene of warfare and labor, and

Whereas in every work and duty and ready sacrifice in his office and calling we ever found him faithful and ready in the performance of his work with a spirit of true devotion to the Lord and the good of the body—the church, therefore, be it

Resolved, that we enter upon our records this moment of the faithfulness of his life, the wisdom manifest in his work, and manly courage of his convictions and gospel hope ever found in his earnest labors in our own twenty-one years of pleasant and harmonious association.

RAILROAD RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Referring to previous notice of rate of two cents per mile by the Burlington railroad, from points in the state of Missouri only, to Lamoni, Iowa, to general conference and conventions; we are advised as follows, pending final issue of tariffs:

"The two-cent rate to the above meeting will be on return-trip tickets from points in Missouri. Those who get the benefit of the rate will have to buy their ticket from a Missouri point on the Burlington road, as the rates do not apply outside the state of Missouri."

We understand from this that round-trip tickets to Lamoni and return, must be purchased. Date of going tickets, April 1-7 inclusive; return limit until April 21. Make inquiry of agents for further advice.

Trains Nos. 111 and 112 on Chariton Branch, running between Chariton, Iowa, and St. Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri, will run direct to Lamoni, April 1-7, also on other dates at close of conference.

The mind of man is sensitive beyond all that we know of sensitiveness in material things. The photograph plate is not more sensitive to light than is the mind of the man to evil thoughts. The passage of one single evil thought through the mind leaves an indelible impression upon it. For this reason Christians should be careful to think no evil, but should think continually on the things that are noble, pure and good.—Sel.

FAITH—ITS MEANING AND OFFICE WORK.

BY ELDER W. H. DEAM.

"Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth."—Luke 18:8.

The language of the Savior here used would indicate a possibility of there being a time when there would be no faith on the earth. He knew there was faith on the earth at the time he was speaking. Just in the preceding chapter there is an account of him healing ten lepers, and one of them (a Samaritan) came and fell down at the Master's feet. The Savior told him that his faith had made him whole. He also told the woman who had sinned that her faith had saved her. Numerous instances might be cited where Christ recognized that individuals were in possession of faith. He criticised some, because they lacked faith, but commended others for their faith.

Let us consider the meaning of faith, and try to get a proper understanding of its office work, and in order to comprehend it rightly we shall associate it with other words having relation thereto. They are, first, Desire; second, Hope; third, Belief; fourth, Faith; fifth, Knowledge. To make them plainer we place them as rounds or steps on a ladder, thus:

We will begin at the bottom of the ladder. One may desire, wish, or covet something and have no hope, proof or expectancy that the desire will be realized. When hope comes to one there is some prospect or expectancy which brings some consolation and often joy, but still there is no certainty, and doubts and fears are not dispelled, although it may rest on reason. With belief there is confidence, reliance, and trust, but no assurance, and doubts may be connected therewith. It lacks positiveness and assurance. Webster says faith is a "complete surrender of the mind," a "firm and sure knowledge," "assurance," "authority," etc. Paul gives the most concise and comprehensive definition in Hebrews 11:1, as follows: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." That is from King James' translation. Another rendering makes it read "assurance of things hoped for," instead of "substance of things hoped for." The latter is better and more comprehensive. As before stated, Webster uses the word "assurance," and also speaks of it as a "sure knowledge."

Faith, then, is a knowledge, or assurance, or evidence of things not seen. With it there are no doubts. There is perfect confidence and reliance—a knowledge, but not a perfect knowledge, and consequently cannot occupy the fifth round in the ladder. It is an earnest of the perfect knowledge. It embraces both evidence and assurance, but it is "seen through a glass darkly," as Paul says, and is not perfect. When perfect knowledge comes the darkened glass will be removed and the fifth round in the ladder will have been reached, and there will be a clear vision of that of which there was an assurance in the fourth round.

Faith rests on a sure foundation, but its possession can hardly be described, except that there comes to one an indescribable "evidence of things not seen." All doubts and longings are swept aside, and a perfect satisfaction is realized as much as if comprehended with all the senses, although it may not be heard, felt, or seen.

Some people think they have faith when they "only believe," and consequently their supposed faith is often shattered, because there is no assurance with belief. Faith might be said to be an intuitive knowledge, so when one has a testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel and that Jesus is the Christ, he may say that he "knows," because he has an intuition, and yet may not be able to explain how he knows to another who does not understand the principle of faith. Some say that a knowledge of things spiritual comes through a coalition of the Spirit of God with the spirit of man, causing a knowledge of "things not seen." We may say that it was intuition that came to the woman who touched the Savior's garment, and said, "If I may touch but his clothes I shall be whole." She knew. She had "evidence of things not seen." It is safe to say that if any one had asked her how she knew she would be made whole, she could not have explained.

Then faith is a knowledge, but not a perfect knowledge. When a perfect knowledge comes there is no "glass darkly," and one is able to explain to the satisfaction of others, because we have realized it with one or all of our senses. There is a theory that there is a sixth sense which the physical man does not realize, and if that is true it may be that faith comes through that medium.

Having given the nature and office work of faith, we now consider the words of Jesus, as used at the beginning of this article. As before stated, Jesus intimates that there would be a time when faith would not exist on the earth, that is, faith concerning spiritual things. We take the ground that there was such a time, and that it began when the Church of Christ departed from the true principles as taught by Him and the apostles. During that time there was a belief in what is recorded in the Bible, but faith must have been a scarce quantity. Parrot-like one generation talked and acted like the preceding one, and, as it is said, men cannot stand still—they will either advance or go backward—they retrograded. And there was no advancement as regards invention, the arts and mechanical skill. Century after century passed with little or no improvement until along about the year 1807. In that year Robert Fulton launched his steamboat. In the year 1823 the first steam printing press was put into operation.

From that time on faith was instilled within individuals to the invention and putting into operation of wonderful things in the mechanical line that genius had been denied heretofore. The development of the two inventions mentioned, not saving anything about the many more marvelous things, we now have in the steamboat a great floating palace, with conveniences and luxuries which could not have been dreamed of even on land a hundred years ago, the daily paper printed in mid-ocean with the news of the world therein caught on ethereal waves; and the development of the power printing press to the extent that now five thousand complete papers can be delivered from one machine in the short time of one minute.

Nothing can be accomplished without faith in a greater or less degree. Christ said that if one possessed faith as a grain of mustard seed mountains could be moved. Certainly mountains of seeming impossibilities have been moved by modern genius. Without faith it could not have been done. If faith was lost or taken away during the dark ages, it must have been restored during the last century.

John the Revelator said he "saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth." This angel that John said was to bring the gospel to the earth, came and brought faith, which has been enjoyed both in a material and spiritual sense. There is nothing strange that God should choose an instrument through which to make known his will, and to whom the angel might deliver the message. Certainly it would do no good for the angel to fly with the gospel to preach to the dwellers on earth if no one knew anything about it. Faith in God's power and in his unchangeability has been restored and enjoyed in the last eighty years, and the primitive gospel in all its purity and completeness, according to God's unchangeable plans, has been brought to earth by the angel John saw, and this gospel is being preached by God's chosen servants.

Was it merely a coincident that Joseph Smith was born just when he was (1805) and grew to manhood just about the time when the wonderful achievements through faith began to be realized? Or was it a part of God's plans? God, no doubt, saw that it was the time for the restoration of the gospel, and saw in Joseph Smith a willingness to exercise faith as regards spiritual things and a determination to abide by what God had said or might say at that or any future time.

No one can have faith and refuse to be honest with himself by allowing prejudice or preconceived ideas to hinder a proper and thorough investigation as regards the restoration of the gospel. We are told in the Scriptures that the gospel is to be restored, and just how it is to be restored—by an angel. It had to come to some person. Why not to Joseph Smith? No other has made the claim, and his claim was made in the most propitious time according to transpiring events of which time will not be taken to consider herewith. The Christian world does not teach the gospel today as it was taught by Christ and the apostles. Protestants may claim that there was an apostasy, but where is the restoration? What has been restored by Protestantism?

Investigate primitive Christianity with an unbiased and unprejudiced mind and ask God to give you faith that you may know whether what you have believed in is true or not. Do not think that because you believe, you have faith. It is necessary to have something more than simple belief. Belief is good enough as far as it goes. We read in the Scripture: that faith is a "breastplate," that "through faith we inherit the promises," that faith is "counted for righteousness." James says that faith and works go together. Faith and works go hand in hand. Without faith there can be no real intelligent work in either a material or spiritual sense.

This is a period of great faith as regards material things, but how about the kind of faith that the Master admonished his followers to possess? And now the question asked by the Savior: "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" There is one body of believers that profess to be in possession of the old time faith, the faith that brought commendation from the Lord, the faith that is enjoyed in connection with the Holy Ghost, the faith that is associated with miracles and brings a knowledge that Jesus is the Christ and that the gospel believed in is of God. That body is known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

It will be observed that the claim is here made that faith is a principle not merely acquired, but that it is a gift from God, as Paul says in Ephesians, "it is a gift from God." The word faith is often used ill advisedly; for instance, people speak of having faith in an individual, when the word confidence or trust should be used, as, "I have confidence in his word," or "I trust him implicitly." Faith is an inspiration. In the 12th chapter of First Corinthians Paul enumerates faith as one of the gifts of the Spirit.

TWO CONDITIONS OF LIFE ON EARTH DURING THE MILLENIUM.

JAMES E. YATES.

For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them: which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout . . . and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air. Thess. 4:15-17.

Here are two distinct processes by which the Lord's people are to receive incorruptible bodies. One is by reconstruction and immortalizing of bodies from the dead for those who have slept in the tomb, and the other is an immediate change of physical condition for those who are still in the mortal life when the Savior shall appear.

This change is brought about instantaneously "like the twinkling of an eye" and will place the persons thus changed, in the same condition of life as those who are raised from the dead at the Lord's coming.

Romans 8:11 refers to this same great event when mortal bodies shall be changed to immortal. "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you."

In Acts 10:42 we read of God being the judge of the quick, and the dead, that is: those who are resurrected from the dead and those who are quickened. And in 2 Tim. 4:1 we read that the time the Lord Jesus Christ will judge the quick and the dead will be "at his appearing."

In connection with these texts cited let us read from 1 Cor. 15, then pass on to discover whether this one condition of life which is reached by those who are resurrected and those who are quickened is the only condition of life then to inhabit the earth or not.

"Behold I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

In the above, Paul says "the dead shall be raised incorruptible" but he did not mean all the dead for the "rest of the dead live not again until the thousand years are finished."—Rev. 20:5; this is the wicked dead. And so when Paul said: "we shall all be changed" the "we" here referred to does not include all people living on the earth when Christ appears for the wicked and rebellious are to suffer vengeance at that time instead of being gloriously quickened. See 2 Thess. 1:8.

The wicked are to be destroyed from off the earth by the brightness of his coming. Chap. 2, verse 8.

QUESTIONS.

Will there be no intermediate grade at Christ's coming between the righteous who are worthy of a quickening into immortality and the wicked who are ripe for destruction?

Will there be no honorable men of the earth who have neither obeyed the gospel nor yet rebelled against righteousness; who have neither taken the Holy Spirit for their guide nor participated in hell's campaign of wickedness?

Will there be no heathens who not having come in contact with the saving message of the true gospel of Christ are entitled by every rule of justice to some clemency before the vengeance of the great day but who are unfit to inhabit immortalized bodies with the redeemed?

Will there be none who have been honestly deceived by the craftiness of men, and who have given their fidelity to empty imitations of the truth?

And may there not be some even among the membership of the church militant who will be living when the Savior comes who have not made sufficient development to be quite ready for the promotion into the new and quickened bodies—some without the requisite preparation—oil in their vessels?

When the door is shut against the foolish virgins will they be abandoned to the fate of the very wicked, or would it not be more in harmony with the demands of equity that they be given their proper grading occupying somewhere between the grades of the very wicked and the worthy righteous?

That the Scriptures comprehend two grades or conditions of life to be on the earth during the millennium age, is we think, a safe conclusion.

The first grade, or superior condition we have mentioned as being the resurrected dead and the living who are "quickened" when the Lord appears. We note some of the conditions which will apply to the immortalized beings during the millennial age as mentioned by the Savior. Luke 12.

Here the Saducees were disputing the principle of the resurrection and in order to bring a strong point against it they told of a certain woman who had lost her husband, married another, lost him also and so on until she had been the wife of seven husbands; then said they: "in the resurrection whose wife shall she be?"

"And Jesus answering said unto them, do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the Scriptures neither the power of God?"

For when they shall rise from the dead they neither marry, nor are given in marriage but are as the angels which are in heaven."

Among this class or condition we see there is to be no marriages, and yet the Prophet Isaiah in speaking of that same period of time—when "the wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock and dust shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain." Also in this same connection says infants will be there, that children will not be subject to death like all are now, but that the children will grow up and will reach the age of a hundred years before they are changed or quickened or "die" as the prophet uses the term.

In this present life how many children are born in suffering only to live a short time and die.

How many thousands of suffering mothers labor in vain and bring forth children with hope like a flower of today to be blighted and buried tomorrow.

Hear the prophet tell us of things in this respect as they will be with one class of the Lord's people during the happy millennial age.—

"They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble; for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them." Isaiah 65:23.

Verse 22 says they shall reach an age like the age of a tree and enjoy all these years the work of their hands.

Verse 20 says there shall be no infant which has not filled his days (no premature deaths) but that the children shall grow up and reach the age of a hundred years before they die.

And this death even then will not be a source of sorrow and mourning like we endure now when laying away the silent forms of our loved ones.

It will be a happy change like the twinkling of an eye—for the preceding verse plainly says "the voice of weeping no more shall be heard, nor the voice of crying."

This is the class of people spoken of in Zech. 14: 16, 19. In this chapter the prophet describes the second coming of Christ when he shall set his feet upon Mount Olives, coming with all the saints with him to take vengeance on the wicked, and then to establish that glorious reign of peace, then Zechariah goes on to say that the heathen nations who are left in the land (that is to say, those not of the church of the first born, and of those not prepared to be quickened into immortal life) shall come up from year to year to worship the Lord and to keep the feast of tabernacles."

John the Revelator also indicated the two classes or conditions of life to be when he said: "we shall be kings and priests unto God" and that we shall "reign on the earth" Rev. 5:10. What kind of an arrangement would it be for everybody to be kings and priests no other population in the kingdom, and no people for the priests to minister unto?

That would be almost as bad a condition as the man would be in, who wished everybody dead but himself and his son John, and that they two would keep tavern and be happy.

But the Scriptures teach that there will be kings and priests of the immortal order and that there will be subjects who will need their ministrations under the blessed government of the "KING OF KINGS" and that they shall receive this perfect ministration at a time when Satan the deceiver shall be found.

CONCLUSION.

In happy harmony with the prophets latter day revelation touching upon these things says "And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection and it shall be tolerable for them."

And the other order of beings (not yet quickened) is mentioned in the following language—"And the earth shall be given them for an inheritance; and they shall multiply and wax strong and their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation, for the Lord shall be in their midst and his glory shall be upon them, and he will be their king and their law giver." Doc. and Cov. Sec. 45:10. And again, in Sec. 63:13 we read:

"And he that liveth when the Lord shall come, and has kept the faith, blessed is he; nevertheless it is appointed unto him to die at the age of man; wherefore children shall grow up until they become old, old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye; wherefore, for this cause preached the apostles unto the world the resurrection of the dead: these things are the things ye must look for, and speaking after the manner of the Lord, they are now nigh at hand, and in a time to come; even in the day of the coming of the Son of man, and until that hour, there will be foolish virgins among the wise."

Let us of the church rejoice in the exalted order of our calling, which is to qualify as kings and priests to be numbered with the resurrected and the quickened, and as we value the coronation exercises worth while to attend, let us help each other keep awake, and look well to our individual oil flasks.

SLEEP, THE THEATRE, ELECTRIC LIGHT, AND IMMORTALITY.

C. EDWARD MILLER.

It may be in extremely bad taste, or at least an evidence of poor judgement, for one of very limited talent and a modest accomplishment, to criticize a master mind whose genius has been felt to the ends of the earth. But such a mental Hercules, six cylinder 60 horse power brain, also places himself in the same unenviable position when he in turn ridicules the philosophy of a mind superior to his.

If the ordinary mortal can see in the mission of Jesus Christ that which appeals to him as being reasonable, and the master mind cannot see it thus, dogmatically we assert it is evidence of a big thing gone wrong but a bigger thing was right and the little thing instinctively perceived the truth.

Sometimes the common mortal, with his mental equipment, can more clearly perceive truth, than he of larger mentality, who can find so many more mental mazes to wander in. So here is a little criticism of Mr. Edison.

Mr. Edison thinks the human family is wasting years of valuable time in unnecessary sleep. Four hours a night is all that he and his family need. He boasts that he gets more out of life than the majority of people because he is wide awake more of the time than the ordinary person. When men had no artificial light, he says, they went to bed when it was dark and arose when it was light, thus the habit of much sleep was formed; But since we now have the electric light, and as the body does not require over four hours sleep, out of 24 to keep it in health therefore the human family is wasting centuries of valuable time in oversleeping!

Persons of little intelligence generally require the most sleep.

Mr. Edison, with many other eminent gentlemen, seem to take especial delight in trying to get rid of the brain: Persons of little intelligence try to accomplish this right here and now, by getting intoxicated, reading trashy literature, attending the lightest plays and "movies"—and over-sleeping. The whole object in these various indulgences is, for the time being, to get rid of the brain.

Mr. Edison wants people to quit wasting so much time in useless sleep, yet he believes in chloroforming a precious soul and keeping him asleep throughout the ages of eternity! Don't waste a minute here over-sleeping, but over there waste all of eternity! What royal spenders of time were Huxley, Spencer, Ingersoll! If the mental pigmy, wasting his time in excessive sleep, reading trash requiring no mental effort, squandering time that should be profitably used is a subject of contempt to the intelligent person, where does it place such as Mr. Edison who would have the master minds of all the whole human race waste all eternity in endless sleep.

Who? a soul stirring mission is this—trying to get rid of the human brain!

I prefer the philosophy of Jesus Christ, as expressed in the precious promise, "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." Again, we are told regarding the future life, "And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven; prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine, in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; for there shall be no night there."

Here we are not going to take even 4 hours sleep! No night there at all! No wasting of time in eternity but a glorious, intellectual consciousness,— "a more abundant life."

PROPHECY.

Delivered by Sr. Emma Kennedy, Sunday, Feb. 23, 1913, Independence, Mo.

"Yea, I repeat to you, my hand has been over you these many years. Yea, I say unto you, these many days have I listened to your pleadings, and have seen your negligences. O come unto me, and listen, for I am the God of Israel. I am he that drew the people out of the world, and as thou art mine, I say unto thee, come closer, and come up higher, for I will have a pure people, I will have a people that has been tried. Yea, my servants, I will have you clean both within and without, for I am the God of Israel, that can lead you triumphantly.

Hear my voice this day, for the Spirit of God is hovering over you; yea, there are many in this building today that are burning with the fire of the Spirit of God; and I say unto thee, Arise, O ye people of God, arise and do my bidding, else I will take from you these blessings and this Spirit that has been your comfort, and I will cause you to feel that of being alone. Hear my voice this day, O my people, I say unto thee. Amen.

PROPHECY.

Delivered by Elder Ammon White, Sunday, Feb. 23, 1913, Independence, Mo.

"Verily, I say unto you, The Lord has comforted the hearts of this people and has extended his arm over them and he has lengthened it out, full of mercy and long suffering and charity, and has waited long for them to come up higher and occupy on even ground, one with another. But the time of waiting is short, until he will come out of his hiding place and show his almighty power; and surely there will be those that will give their life upon the altar until he will demonstrate to them that these things which he has long given to the world as the means for the solving of the problems of life, is the practical solution of these things; and his people will be able to demonstrate it to the world successfully, and with the testimony that he will give, the world around will know that the Lord God of Israel once more has been heard from in these, the latter days."

THE ORIGIN OF GREED.

The Son of the morning in the bright dawn
Was an angel of light, whose first great wrong
Was letting his jealousy go to seed,
And raising from it his first crop of greed.

This doctrine of greed he spread far and near,
And caused one-third of the angels to hear;
Then God called a halt and made him take heed,
That in heaven he could allow no greed.

God sent him to earth with all of his kind,
So of course on earth is where we must find
This obvious fate, this troublesome weed,
This all absorbing, jeopardizing greed.

D. R. Baldwin.

THE ROUND TABLE.

I would like to know something about the "Pearl of Great Price." What is our attitude towards it?

The Pearl of Great Price is a pamphlet published in Liverpool, England, about 1851, under the authority of the Utah church. As a whole it has never been endorsed by the Reorganized church, though it contained some things which are generally accepted by our people such as the revelation on the civil war. It included the "Book of Abraham" which has never been endorsed by the Reorganized Church. The Utah church has re-published the book.

When will the redemption of Zion come?

A revelation in 1834 said it would be "after much tribulation." (D. C. 100:3) and it was further said that "Were it not for the transgressions of my people . . . they might have been redeemed even now," and that they "must needs be chastened until they learn obedience," and that "in consequence of the transgressions of my people, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion," and "this can not be brought to pass until mine elders are endowed with power from on high." (D. C. 102:2-3). 98:4 shows that it will be at the time that God's indignation is poured out upon all nations. The Lord has revealed no specific date, but from the above statements and others it is made clear that Zion will be redeemed when the saints are prepared to meet the new conditions through obedience and faithfulness, including an observance of the laws of equality in temporal things or at least a willingness so to do.

Will the "Lost Tribes" return before the second coming of Christ?

The gathering of Israel is a part of the great work which will precede the glorious coming of Christ, and no doubt the ten or "Lost Tribes" will be a portion of those gathered. Christ speaking of the establishment of the church upon this land in the last days, and the gathering of the Gentiles to be numbered with Israel says: that many of the remnants of this land, (the Indians, who are Israelites) shall also come in and help to build a city, which shall be called the New Jerusalem, "At that day shall the work of the Father commence among all the dispersed of my people; yea, even the tribes which have been lost . . . to prepare the way whereby they may come unto me." Book of Mormon, 3d Nephi 10.

What is the meaning of Matt. 5:29, 30 which reads: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee cut it off, and cast it from thee." etc?

The inspired version makes this plain in the following: "And now this I speak, a parable concerning your sins; wherefore cast them from you, that you may not be hewn down and cast into the fire." Matt. 5:34. Of a similar statement in Matt. 18:8, 9, Christ says: "A man's hand is his friend, and his foot also; and a man's eye are they of his own household." Verse 9, inspired version. In Mark 9: 42-48 the statement seems to apply to the church, and the inspired version reads: "If thy hand offend thee, cut it off; or if thy brother offend thee and confess not and forsake not, he shall be cut off . . . for it is better for thee to enter into life without thy brother, than for thee and thy brother to be cast into hell . . . And again if thy foot offend thee, cut it off; for he that is thy standard, by whom thou walkest, if he become a transgressor, he shall be cut off." Verses 40-42.

The Bible teaches us that an apostle was an eye-witness of Christ and his work, also of his death and resurrection. How then can we have apostles in the church today?

The Scripture upon which the above claim is based is Acts 1:21-22, "Wherefore of these men which have accompanied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from among us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection." This is not a statement of law, but of procedure in an emergency. The circumstances of the time made it necessary that the apostle chosen to fill Judas' place should be one that was familiar with Christ, his work, and resurrection, for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; but after the Holy Ghost came, men who had not been with Christ were qualified under its power to be witnesses for Christ. In this way Paul was qualified to become an apostle as no doubt Barnabas, also others. Since the Bible shows that there were several apostles who had not "accompanied" with Christ and yet were qualified for the apostleship, it is apparent that others may be qualified in the same way at any time and in any place. Men may have as certain knowledge of the divinity of Christ through the revelation of the Holy Ghost, as was had by those who were with him in person, and thus be qualified to be witnesses for him as apostles.

DISTURBING THE PUBLIC PEACE.

There are people who shudder at the idea of making people discontented with their institutions. Many public men complain that popular confidence in them is being undermined by criticism. The courts have had the same feeling. In fact, men in every department of life have believed that criticism of their particular calling was backing on pillars of the temple.

To such persons may be commended the maxim that John Ruskin wrote Mrs. Carlyle he had adopted early in life. "I have a great hope," he wrote, "of disturbing the public peace in various directions."

"Disturbing the public peace in various directions!" That is the only way progress is made. In China the public peace was undisturbed for centuries.—K. C. Star.

On Feb. 15, 1836 (A council met at Kirtland Ohio and adopted the report of a committee which had been appointed to draft rules for the maintaining of order in the house of the Lord, or temple. In these rules are found the following:

1. It is according to the rules and regulations of all regular and legally organized bodies to have a president to keep order.
2. The body thus organized, is under obligation to be in subjection to that authority.
3. When a congregation assembles in this house, they shall submit to the following rules, that due respect may be paid to the order of worship; viz:

No man shall be interrupted who is appointed to speak by the Presidency by any disorderly person in the congregation, by whispering, by laughing, by talking, by menacing gestures, by getting up and running out in a disorderly manner or by offering indignity to the manner of worship or to the religion, or to any officer of said church, while officiating in his office, in any wise whatsoever, by any display of ill breeding from old or young. And if any of the above insults are offered such measures will be taken as are lawful to punish the aggressor and eject them from the house.

All persons are prohibited from going upstairs in times of worship.

All children are prohibited from assembling in the house above or below, or any part of it, to play or for recreation at any time; and all parents, guardians, or masters shall be amendable for all damage that shall accrue in consequence of their children's misconduct.

All persons whether believers or unbelievers shall be treated with due respect by the authorities of the church. Church History, Volume 2, p. 8.

TRAINING CHILDREN TO BE HELPFUL.

Read at Mothers' Meeting, Kirtland Reunion, 1912.

The only way to ennoble the home and family life is to mould it on the ideal of the heavenly; and the ideal of heaven is loving service. We should start early to train our children to be helpful. Elizabeth Bryden says in an article written for the Mothers' Magazine: "Train your children to be helpful; teach them to have consideration for the comfort, pleasure and convenience of others—especially of their elders. In this way you will be developing the better side of nature, and will be fitting them for present as well as for future usefulness." Every child in the household, old enough to help, should be given some small share in the daily work.

Again there is another problem with mothers and that is to get their children interested in their work, and to do things willingly, and not through fear. They should be trained with patience and kindness. Train them so they will do their part because of their love for you and not through fear.

Another very wrong thing to do is to bribe or hire our children to do what we would have them do. Bribing or hiring our children to be helpful or obedient is the surest way of training them up to hard hearted selfishness. The best way is to get them interested, make their work interesting, for illustration: A visitor who called one morning on a neighbor, found her and her three little ones busy getting ready for dinner. The oldest child was washing potatoes, and the other two shelling peas. "You seem to be having a jolly time of it" the visitor remarked. "Yes indeed," said the mother, "Friends are coming on the next train so we're playing that this is a boarding house where new guests are expected." That was a wise mother who knew how to transform work into pleasure.

By training the children to be helpful you increase their sense of responsibility, and a sense of responsibility, we are told, underlies all true character.

Mrs. George Neville,

Akron, Ohio.

The father and mother of an unnoticed family who, in their seclusion, awaken the mind of one child to the idea and love of perfect goodness, who awaken in him a strength of will to repel all temptation, and who send him out prepared to profit by the conflicts of life, surpass in influence a Napoleon breaking the world to his sway.—William Ellery Channing.

MISCELLANEOUS

NOTICES.

To the saints in Clinton, Mo.; District—I have changed my location; my address now is 1220 North Ash St., Nevada, Mo. Hope to hear from every one in the district.

W. E. Reynolds, Bishop's Agent.

TO THE FIRST SEVENTY.

It is now the 15th of March and the following reports have not reached me: From A. M. Baker, J. J. Cornish, William Davis Fred B. Farr, John H. Hanson, John Harp L. E. Hills, R. M. Maloney, W. E. Peak, A. B. Phillips, C. H. Rich, Geo. M. Shippy, F. C. Smith, James M. Smith, S. K. Sorenson, O. B. Thomas, C. E. Willey and James E. Yates. Blanks were sent out to each one Feb. 18, and several did not receive theirs. It may be that some of the above have sent me their report and I have not received it. If such be the case, please to let me know at once by sending a duplicate report, or letting me know so that I can send you another blank and if you have not received the blank sent please to let me know by first mail. I expect that I will receive the reports of the foreign missionaries before the time of our convening, but should have all the other reports in sooner.

Those who are not coming to the conference will please remit to me their quorum dues. On the account of preparing the history of the seventy this year our expenses will be more than usual, and every one should do their part, which is but little.

Your co-laborer,
J. F. Mintun, Secretary.

CONFERENCE MINUTES

INDEPENDENCE STAKE.—Conference met at Independence, March 8, 1913. The stake presidency and missionary in charge were made the presidency of the conference; L. H. Haas and M. H. Siegfried secretaries. Minutes of last conference were read and approved. Reports were read from the stake presidency, Richard Bullard, personally as bishop, the secretary, the stake bishop's itemized financial report was read together with the report of the auditors and both were adopted, and the literary board reported.

Ministry reports were read from the First Quorum of Elders, First Quorum of Priests, Fourth Quorum of Priests, Seventh Quorum of Priests, First Quorum of Teachers, Fourth Quorum of Teachers, Sixth Quorum of Deacons, and from miscellaneous high priests, elders, priests, teachers and deacons. Patriarch Ammon White reported. Statistical reports were read from the 19 branches in the stake, showing a total membership of 5308, the total number holding the priesthood being 528.

212 delegates were elected to general conference with power to cast in case of division, majority and minority vote. Two brethren, Alma K. Dillie and Bernard Thompson were recommended to the office of elder, the ordination of each was provided for. A matter referred from the Independence Branch which came to them through the Stake Presidency, recommending a teacher who could devote his entire time to the work of his office and who would be at the command of the stake presidency for anywhere in the stake was read and its adoption moved. A substitute providing for the election of a president of the Independence Branch, separate from the stake presidency, that the latter might have opportunity for more pastoral work throughout the stake, was offered, when the whole matter was tabled. The Second Quorum of Elders was organized with Seth S. Sandy as president and L. A. Fowler, and C. A. Selbe counsellors and J. I. Kaplinger, secretary.

The following resolution from the First Quorum of Teachers was referred to general conference. "Resolved that in cases of adultery where the guilty member has repented of same, and the matter is not publicly known, a written confession duly signed and witnessed by two officers of the church and filed with the president of the branch, or district shall be sufficient to establish the first offence. Provided further that if the said crime be a matter of public knowledge, that the guilty member shall make public confession of same to be acted upon by the branch."

The branches were authorized to suggest the proportionate number of names as delegates to the general conference, to be elected by the stake conference. Conference authorized the changing of the name of the Bennington Heights branch to the Third Kansas City at such time as the branch may desire. The secretary was made chairman of a standing credential committee with power to choose assistants. The Presidency recommended that the stake bishop's report be printed prior to the convening of conference. After some discussion the recommendation was lost. The general conference of 1914 was invited to meet in Independence. Sunday services: 8:00 a. m. Prayer service; 9:30 Sunday school, 11:00 preaching by Elder J. A. Tanner, 2:30 prayer service, and preaching at 7:45 p. m. by Elder Wm. Aylor.

Seth S. Sandy, L. A. Fowler, C. A. Selbe and Bernard Thompson were ordained to the office before named. Alma K. Dillie not being ordained until Monday evening, March 10. Conference adjourned to meet at Independence the second Saturday and Sunday in September, 1913.

L. H. Haas, Sec.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.—Conference convened Saturday, March 1st, with a very good attendance including President Elbert A. Smith and High Priest Evan A. Davis and P. M. Hanson of the seventies. Reports from all members of the priesthood present show a wonderful possibility for effectual work the coming year if all the good desires are executed, and the reports of work done during the past six months show a great activity among the standing ministry and a good degree of harmony among all the officers of the district and branch organizations, also a good deal of work on the part of the missionaries especially Bro. Davis who has labored over practically all the district and held meetings in the outskirts as well as in branches. Delegates to general conference: Elbert A. Smith, F. M. Sheehy, Sr. Elbert A. Smith, Evan A. Davis, Sr. Clara C. Smith. Fred'k. Adam, Peter Kaufman, Chas. M. Salter, Tina Salter. Bro. Abner Anthony elected district chorister. Bishop's agent's report showed total receipts $5472.38; disbursements $3668.82; balance $1803.56. Reunion committee report showed receipts, $920.45; disbursements $904.90; paid; on 1911 debt $15.00; cash on hand 46c.

Bro. Geo. H. Wixom was ordained to the office of elder, Bro. W. O. Boren President of 8th Quorum of Priests, and Wm. Schade and H. C. Powell his first and second counselors.

Preaching by Paul M. Hanson, Evan A. Davis, and Nathaniel Carmichael. Besides the regular services a joint priesthood prayer meeting was held at 8:00 a. m. and there were three sessions of the 8th Quorum of Priests. Bro. Frederick Hogben was ordained first counselor to the president of the 7th Quorum of Deacons.

R. T. Cooper, Sec., Los Angeles, Cal.

CENTRAL OKLAHOMA DISTRICT.—Conference met with the Holdenville Branch, February 14-16, 1913. Bro. E. D. Bailey and R. M. Maloney, presiding. The committee to investigate the matter concerning Bro. Moore and Davis ordination reported. Branch reports from Holdenville, and Piedmont. Others failed to report. Ministerial reports: Elders J. S. Meyer, C. T. Sheppard, J. E. Yates, Wm. Aylor, R. M. Maloney, E. D. Bailey; Priest R. L. Herring, Teacher B. R. Hixon, Deacon E. T. Broughton.

It was moved that the secretary in reporting for publications the minutes of conferences held hereafter, also report the branches and officers failing to report.

Moved that this conference petition general conference to so change the district lines of the east side of Central Oklahoma. District so that all of Tulsa county be in Central Oklahoma district. Delegates to general conference, Bro. and Sr. H. about 20 peers and I can testify of the goodness of God in B. Gooch, Bro. E. D. Bailey, R. M. Maloney, W. M. Aylor, J. E. Yates, Bro. and Sr. Wm. Robinson, Ed Dillon Bro. and Sr. Peter Adamson, Minnie Page, T. L. McGeorge, Ed Fitzwater, H. K. Rowland, Henry Baylor, J. H. Hinkle, T. N. Berry, Bert Dimond. Adjourned to meet at call of district officers.

C. F. Sheppard, Dist. Sec.

OHIO DISTRICT.—Conference was held at Middletown, Ohio, Feb. 15, 16, 1913. The attendance was a little better than at any other previous conference, but hardly as good as could be desired. In the absence of the district president, the conference was presided over by Apostle R. C. Russell, Bishop J. A. Becker, and Bro. N. L. Booker. Routine business was attended to and delegates elected to general conference. The bishop's report for the district showed balance on hand and collections $1650.24. Expenses $1364.85, leaving balance on hand $285.39. The new district officers are: A. B. Kirkendall, Creola, Ohio, president; Francis May, Middletown, Ohio, vice president; D. R. Winn, Columbus, Ohio, secretary-treasurer; Gard Kirkendall, Creola, Ohio, member library commission. A motion carried to have our conferences semi annually after this, which will mean one each in the spring and fall. Time of next conference, also place left in the hands of the district president and minister in charge.

D. R. Winn, Sec.

NORTHERN WISCONSIN.—Semi-annual conference was held with the Frankfort Branch at Porcupine, Wis., Feb. 15th and 16th. The bishop's agent's report showed $949.62 received, against $551.77 last year. A gain of 33 members in the district does not indicate that we are standing still when we consider that many of the aged ones are passing over the river. The reunion buildings are to be completed for the next reunion, conference instructing the building committee also to see that sufficient funds are raised to do so. Please send remittances to Leroy Colbert, secretary of committee, receipt will be sent you at once. The foundations are completed, now and most of the material is on the grounds. The auditorium is to be 40x50, the dining hall 24x40. Remember it takes money to do this even though all of the work is donated.

Delegates to general conference: A. L. Whiteaker, I. V. Fisher, R. H. Moore, J. O. Dutton, S. E. Livingston, R. D. Davis, F. A. Smith, Bro. and Sr. Dennis, Mary Lee, Leroy

Colbert, Leda Colbert, M. O. Shedd, J. W. Hooker, Lester Wildermuth, W. A. McDowell, P. L. Richardson and Wm. Livingston. Moved and carried that the thirteen above names or whatever number is present in case of a division shall be empowered to cast a majority and minority vote. The conference adjourned to meet the last Saturday and Sunday of the reunion.

Leroy Colbert, Sec.

CONVENTION MINUTES

DIED.

LEEDHAM.—Maria Leedham, daughter of John and Sarah Leedham, was born Feb. 28, 1817, at Glendford Brigg, Lincoln Co., England; came to this country in 1818, and to Iowa in 1844. She united with the Universalist Church about 45 years ago and remained a member till death. For the last 40 years she has lived with Mr. Asa Anderson, (her nephew), near New London, Iowa. She died March 10, 1913. Funeral held in L. D. S. Church, Lawrence Willy in charge, sermon by O. R. Miller.

SHERMAN.—Robert LaRue, son of Bro. and Sr. D. W. Sherman born Nov. 23, 1912, died Feb. 1, 1913. He was blessed Jan. 7th by Elder A. G. Miller. Funeral service at the church Escatawpa by A. G. Miller.

RICKENBAUGH.—Near Richmond, Mo., Feb. 23, 1913. Sr. Anna Pearl Rickenbaugh. She was born Dec. 28, 1882, near Moberly, Mo. United in marriage with Edward Rickenbaugh Jan. 10, 1899. She united with the church Feb. 24, 1901, and tried to live a model life, and fill her place as organist and a saint in every way that she could to help the work. Two little boys preceeded their mother to their reward, and a little girl, Ruby, remains with her father to remember a kind mother and companion. Funeral services in charge of L. F. Ferguson, sermon by J. W. Metcalf.

PIEPERGERDES.—Sr. Lydia Daries, wife of Mr. Henry O. Piepergerdes, was born in Burlington, Iowa, Dec. 11, 1875; came to Stewartsville in 1878 with her parents; baptized when in her teens by Elder T. T. Hinderks; Feb. 23, 1913, aged thirty-seven years, two months, twelve days. She leaves a good and kind husband, four little boys, ages respectively, thirteen, nine, six and four years of age, and a baby girl ten days old, an aged father, Bro. John Daries, four sisters and one brother. She was a kind, affectionate wife and mother, a good saint. Services in charge of Elder A. W. Head, sermon by Elder Wm. Lewis.

GOFF.—Lyman C. Goff born Nov. 19, 1867, at Escatawpa, Miss. Was baptized Aug. 28, 1892, by Elder M. M. Turpen, ordained a priest June 3, 1906, by Elders J. K. McLain and Alma Booker; died Dec. 29, 1911, of the age of 44 years, one month and ten days. Funeral sermon in saints' church at VanCleave, Miss., March 2, 1913, by F. M. Slover. Bro. Goff leaves to mourn, wife, four daughters, two sons, one sister and two brothers. He had a firm belief in the great latter day work.

NEWFARTH.—Mr. Henry Newfarth was born at Ripley County, Indiana, Sept. 27, 1835. He married Miss Sophia Grossman, March 18, 1865, and came to Monroe Co., Iowa, and located upon a farm where he lived up to the time of his death which occurred Feb. 24, 1913. Three of the four children that blessed this union survive him. Mrs. Anna Walker, Mrs. Jennie Miller, and Mr. Edward Newfarth, and thirteen grand-children and a host of friends. He died at Sr. Walker's home near Hiteman, Iowa. Sermon by E. B. Morgan, assisted by Samuel Rowley. His faithful companion died twenty-two years ago.

GRAYBILL.—Levi Graybill was born March 12, 1818, at Bloomfield Township, Jackson Co., Ohio. Died Nov. 30, 1912, at the home of his daughter, Sr. Sydney Pitt, Sr., near Persia, Iowa, aged 94 years, 8 months, 18 days. Baptized Nov. 17, 1833, and ordained an elder in 1836. June 21, 1841, he married Patience Smith, the latter dying Aug. 14, 1895. Three sons and two daughters, besides numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren, remain to mourn his departure.

The funeral sermon was by J. W. Wight at the home of Bro. Sydney Pitt, Sr., and though a cold autumn rain was falling the house was crowded with neighbors and friends. The day following the remains were taken to Wheeler's Grove to rest beside his companion in life and to await the resurrection of the just. Coming to Pottawattamie County, Iowa, in June, 1846, he withstood the westward pressure, refusing to follow the mandates of the usurper and remained true to the standard erected in 1830, dying as he had lived, firm in the faith of the restored gospel. The following tribute by his son-in-law, Elder Sidney Pitt, Sr., is a fitting close to this brief obituary:

"Father Graybill was a wholesouled, noble, generous man, and it every one for whom he did some loving service during his long and eventful life could bring a single rose and place it upon his grave he would this day be buried beneath a monument of flowers! There was, there could not have been a nobler man! We leave the aged patriarch in the hands of the loving Savior, confident of his future that he is an heir of God!"

DOBSON.—Henry Dobson was born at Houghton Springs, England, April 12, 1846, died Sunday, March 2, 1913. He came to U. S. A. at the age of eleven. Was married Dec. 25, 1876, to Anna Swallow. He leaves to mourn their loss, a wife and nine children, one having died in infancy. He accepted the gospel when 14, and prior to his decease was for many years presiding elder of the Oak Ridge Branch. Funeral by J. B. Wildermuth of Osterdock, Iowa.

DUFFIELD.—Margaret J. Powell was born Aug. 27, 1849, married David S. Duffield, Jan. 1, 1872. She was baptized in 1868 at Rich Hill, Mo., by Enslay Curtis. Died Feb. 4, 1913, from heart failure. She leaves husband, one son and two daughters, one son and one daughter having died in childhood. Funeral in charge of A. I. Roberts and L. A. Lyon.

MERRIMAN-BARTLEY.—At the home of the bride's parents, Unionopolis, Ohio, January 13, 1913. Mr. Robt. Merriman and Sr. Georgia Bartley, Elder J. M. Bartley, officiating.

MILLS-WALLER.—At San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 26, 1913, Bro. J. H. Mills, of Los Alamitos, Cal., son of Elder D. S. Mills and Miss Henrietta Waller, daughter of Elder G. J. Waller, Elder J. M. Terry officiating. Their home will be in the South.

HUNTER-KINGHORN.—At the home of the bride's parents Salt Lake City, Feb. 6, 1913, Mr. J. R. Hunter and Sr. Mae Kinghorn both of Salt Lake City, Elder A. M. Chase officiating.

TRUMAN-HAAS.—At Lamoni, Iowa, February 27, 1913, Loren F. Truman and Flava Q. Haas, both of Lamoni, Elder Robt. M. Elvin officiating.

AUTHORITY AND REORGANIZATION.

A brother requests information upon the following statements and inquiries which arose over certain claims made by elders of the Utah church relative to the authority of William Marks under whose hands Joseph Smith the present president of the Reorganized Church was ordained, and to the disorganization and reorganization of the church.

According to Joseph Smith, when a man apostatizes, is cut off, or joins any other church, his authority immediately ceases. Now William Marks left the church and joined Jas. J. Strang's organization, acknowledging Strang as the prophet of the Lord and the one who should succeed Joseph Smith Jr. (Church History, Vol. 3, page 723). He so far departed from the true path as to be ordained to one position after another under Strang's hands, thus vitiating any priesthood he formerly received. Subsequently he joined other factions and ultimately in 1859 joined the Reorganization on his original baptism. Now where was his authority to ordain "Young Joseph?"

The true church as organized by the prophet Joseph Smith, and which required the ministrations of God the Father and the Son, Moroni, John the Baptist, Peter, James, and John, Moses, Elias, and others, to bring it about, and of which it was said that it should never be thrown down or given to another people—why did the kingdom thus founded prove to be so weak that at the death of but one man, it collapsed to rise no more for sixteen years? Why should the church fall at the death of one man when the twelve apostles—and in case the twelve should fall, the seventy—possessed the authority to ordain and set in order all the other officers of the church? Doctrine and Covenants 104:11.

Some of the positions assumed in the foregoing are unfounded. Wm. Marks never apostatized from the faith or the church which he accepted under Joseph Smith Jr., never was cut off, nor voluntarily left it to join any other church. He was one of the first to see the apostasy of Brigham Young and those who stood with him, and to refuse to follow them in their violations of the law. The fact that he favored Sidney Rigdon for a time, then J. J. Strang, accepting an ordination under the hands of Strang which he soon rejected, and rapidly passing from one leader to another does not necessarily show a vacillating spirit, but rather a fixed purpose to follow the right and the truth as he had learned them under the teachings of the martyred prophet, and as soon as he found that these leaders did not keep in harmony with those teachings he rejected them at once.

Accepting of an ordination under the hands of J. J. Strang did not of necessity invalidate his previous ordination, nor vitiate his priesthood. Priesthood is perpetual under the "everlasting" covenant, and since transgression is the only thing by which the covenant is broken, transgression is also the only thing which can vitiate a man's priesthood. It is he that "transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ," that is without God, and under such conditions he may lose the right to officiate for God. No act in the life of Wm. Marks indicates transgression or departure from the doctrine of Christ. Mistaken, he may have been in some of his actions, but as soon as his mistakes became apparent he repudiated them, and his whole life was a noble effort to abide within the doctrine of Christ.

At the instigation of Brigham Young and those who stood with him after the death of Joseph Smith Jr., Wm. Marks was dropped from his position as president of the Nauvoo Stake and member of the high council, not for any transgression but because he opposed what he believed to be an unlawful procedure, and advocated the right. In this however, his priesthood was not taken away, and so long as he worked righteousness and officiated in harmony with the law, his acts would be legal. No man's priesthood gives him the right to act contrary to the law either in his teachings or official actions, and the erring faction under Brigham Young had no power to deny any high priest the privileges of his priesthood unless he had been found guilty of transgression by the due process of law.

As to the breaking up of the church in 1844 and after, it is apparent that while the church had had a rapid growth numerically, its growth in righteousness and spirituality had not kept pace. In the revelations the Lord repeatedly reproved the church for her sins and warned her of the judgment to come, and in 1841 gave specific warning that if certain conditions were not complied with "Ye shall be rejected as a church." (D. and C. 107:11). This rejection evidently came in 1844 at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith when numerous leaders arose dividing the church into as many factions. But in these several factions were some of the priesthood and members who followed their leaders only so far as they could do so in righteousness, while some who belonged to the original church affiliated with no faction. These were the class of men who under the direction of the Holy Spirit associated together in the work of reorganizing the church, and it was to this body that Joseph Smith who had previously been designated by his father, Joseph Smith Jr., to be his successor, and who had followed no faction, went under the instruction of the Spirit that "The saints reorganizing at Zarahemla and other places, is the only organized portion of the church accepted by me. I have given them my Spirit, and will continue to do so while they remain humble and faithful," and was received into membership and ordained to the presidency of the church in strict harmony with the law.

In further answer to the question, the authority was inherent with the twelve to have held the church intact and to perpetuate the work, and had they as a quorum remained within the bounds of the law, they would have done so, likewise the seventy, but they failed to do this, and outside the law their authority ceased. Only one course was left for the preservation of the work which had been planted in 1830, viz., that a new beginning should be made, starting with the individuals who held the necessary authority and who had been faithful, and through them bring about a growth of healthy material by which the church could be rehabilitated.

Organization is a natural outgrowth of authority, and wherever the authority of God is found the power to organize exists when the necessity exists and the conditions are proper. Objection is sometimes urged against the term reorganization as if that was something impossible in relation to the Church of Jesus Christ, but every faction which urged the objection passed through a reorganization, and in the case of the one that followed Brigham Young the work of reorganizing was carried to the extreme of rebaptizing every member, and re-ordaining every minister, as well as reorganizing the leading quorums.

The history of the church may be likened to a precious tree planted in a goodly place which grew rapidly, but became corrupted and brought forth bitter fruit until it became necessary to cut it down. Men took of the branches of the rejected tree and planted them in distant places, saying, "Behold, here is the tree," but the branches soon withered for they had no life. But from the roots of the tree there came up a tender shoot which grew until it brought forth pleasant fruit, and thus the life of the tree was preserved. This is the Reorganization.

The late Robert Arthington of Leeds, England, consecrated his fortune of nearly $5,000,000 for the spread of the gospels of Matthew and Luke and the Acts of the Apostles in every heathen land and in every written language.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

THE LAW OF THE CHURCH.

The first steps which led up to the organization of the church in 1830 were based upon the teachings of the Bible, and later there were added the Book of Mormon, and the revelations, these last being as yet unpublished when the organization was effected. The principles found in these records were preached by the early ministers, and those who accepted them were received into the church. During the year revelation was received defining definitely the relationship of these Scriptures to the church and the way in which the church should hold them.

THE SCRIPTURES.

As early as 1828 it was said in a revelation concerning the Book of Mormon, "Behold, I do not bring it to destroy that which they have received, (the Bible), but to build it up." And again the Book of Mormon Scriptures "shall not deny that which you have received but they shall build it up, and shall bring to light the true points of my doctrine. . . and this I do, that I may establish my gospel, that there may not be so much contention." Doctrine and Covenants 3:12,15.

After the church had been organized the Lord said, "And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit." (D. C. 42:5). Still further emphasizing this command is the following: "Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my Scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church." D. C. 42:16.

These statements clearly show that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the revelations to the church, were to be the fundamental law of the church, and that the Bible was to retain its place as being the primary law which God had given, while the others were to supplement its teachings and to make plainer its doctrines. Thus nothing could be received or approved by the church which in anywise conflicted with the Bible.

Further revelations were received from time to time until a committee was appointed to arrange them for publication, which committee reported to a general assembly held August 17, 1835, when upon due consideration they were formerly adopted by the church under the title of "Doctrine and Covenants," to which were added an article on marriage which gave no latitude whatever for polygamy, and an article on "Governments and laws in general," requiring loyalty to the governments under which members of the church might live, both of which were adopted and ordered printed in that book.

SOME SPECIAL PROVISIONS OF THE LAW.

The ordinance of baptism over which there had been so much controversy in the world was made plain in both the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, showing that faith, humility, and repentance were essential in the candidate before being immersed in water for the remission of sins, by one who has authority.

The means of receiving the gift of the Holy Spirit is shown to be through the laying on of hands of the elders upon those who have been baptized in water, with prayer, by which means they are also confirmed members of the church, and entitled to all of its privileges and blessings.

Ordinations are to be performed by those who have authority by the laying on of hands upon those who have been called of God, and have received the endorsement of the church if it be where there is a church, though missionaries laboring outside of organized territory may ordain upon a call from God without a vote of the church. Officers which are not local are "to be ordained by the direction of a high council, or general conference." D. C. 17:17.

MARRIAGE.

The Book of Mormon denounces in strong terms the doctrine of polygamy with kindred evils, and maintains the principle of monogamy. The book of Doctrine and Covenants confirms the Book of Mormon upon this matter, and the two support the Bible. Those who have departed from these plain teachings always seek condonation from the things written in the Bible rather than the other books. The Book of Mormon says: "There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none," and the Covenants: "It is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh." The marriage ceremony adopted by the church in 1835, and used by the ministers to the present time is strictly monogamic.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

The rights of civil governments are acknowledged and it is declared "that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments, and that sedition and rebellion are unbecoming every citizen thus protected, and should be punished accordingly." As to the relation of the church to the state it is further said: "We do not believe it just to mingle religious influence with civil government, whereby one religious society is fostered and another proscribed in its spiritual privileges, and the individual rights of its members, as citizens denied."

Natural wisdom at that early day could hardly have foreseen the necessity of these plain declarations of the law, but in after years when the church became divided and led astray by false leaders, many of the principles of this fundamental law were trampled upon, and the faction under Brigham Young actually discarded the law of monogamic marriage, expunging it from the book and substituting a system in flagrant violation of all that had been previously received.

But men can not change the law of God, for though they choose to follow something else, the law of God still remains the same and they will be judged by it in the end. The Reorganized church has adhered to the law as originally adopted and has sought to follow out its provisions, and has found that in doing so it has led to the highest standards of moral and spiritual life, and citizenship.

A FAST PROCLAIMED.

In view of the convening of conference, April 6th, it is believed that the day set apart for the convening of the session should be set apart and observed as a day of fasting and prayer.

That the day may be devoted to supplicating the throne of Grace for grace and strength to accomplish the work set for the church to do in its business sessions, we advise therefore, that the day be so observed, omitting the morning and mid-day meals, fasting until the evening repast.

We advise that the church in its various branches observe this day, as well as those assembled at Lamoni for the purpose of engaging in the business of the conference. We believe that it will be conducive to good and that the Lord will be pleased to hear and answer the prayers that shall be offered where there is such a unity of purpose upon the part of the people constituting his church.

Assuming the authority vested in us as presiding officers, the presidency proclaim such a fast day, recommending its observance in the usual form wherever it is considered by the branch officers it should be observed. Commending your cause to the Master who has all supervising charge of his work, we are the servants of the church, for Christ's sake.

INDEPENDENCE ITEMS.

The storm which wrought such terrible havoc through the middle west on last Sunday passed Independence and vicinity about 9:30 p. m., manifesting itself in wind, hail, and rain, with vivid lightning. No serious damage is reported. All day the wind had been growing in velocity and in the evening ominous looking clouds covered the sky, but we were passed by, though the news of destruction of life and property from other places fills us with sorrow and sympathy for the sufferers. Fears are entertained for the safety of many saints and friends in Omaha who are known to have been in the path of the storm.

Elder John F. Garver, of the presidency of the Lamoni Stake, was the speaker on Sunday morning, giving good counsel and instruction to the saints. The evening service was occupied by a representative of the Volunteers of America. The afternoon prayer service was profitable the testimonies being abounding and strengthening. Some received personal instruction, advice and encouragement through the Spirit of prophecy.

The Sunday school was instinct with life and activity.

The orchestra occupying in the lower auditorium so that those meeting in that room might have its inspiring influence. The occasional absence of the orchestra from the upper auditorium shortens the appreciation.

At 1 p. m. Sunday the funeral of James Clemenson was held at the church in charge of Bro. Garrett, Bro. Harrington preaching the sermon. He was 91 years of age, and had been in Independence almost from the time the branch was organized in 1872.

A special service in the interest of the Book of Mormon and its translation into foreign languages will be held on Sunday afternoon, March 30th at the Stone church. There will be short talks made on the subject of the Book of Mormon by those who have preached its doctrine for years, and know the value of its testimony.

A late telegram to Bishop E. L. Kelley from Bro. Paul Craig, pastor at Omaha, says relative to the saints in the tornado "No injury—alright." Advices by mail to Bro. Rannic indicate the safety of a number of the saints, but no full particulars are as yet given.

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND.

The speakers occupying in the Bay cities on the 9th were G. S. Lincoln and C. E. Crumley, the latter speaking from Isa. 29. In the city, while the Oakland Branch was edited by Bro. C. E. Crumley in the morning and Elder E. Ingham at night. The services are all well reported of. The city branch has a young people's prayer, meeting once each month at 9 o'clock a. m. A splendid move we think.

Bro. J. A. Saxe held meeting at Irvington on last Sunday—administering the sacrament and giving spiritual counsel. Bishop C. A. Parkin remained in Sacramento over last Sunday speaking twice to the capitol city branch and doing other church work.

We filled our usual Windsor, Santa Rosa appointment Sunday—having two very spiritual services in Windsor and one in Santa Rosa. At Windsor there are some who are very near the kingdom—it is our prayer they may obey. We were welcomed here to the comfortable home of Sr. Minnie Misner and husband, also partaking at the hospitable board of Bro. and Sr. Archer. Bro. and Sr. Luther Bell were in the midst of chicken hatching—having 13 incubators at work containing 7544 eggs, if you doubt it ask Luther. Bro. and Sr. W. E. Case cared for us at Santa Rosa where we had an enjoyable meeting at night, also attending their Religio under the care of Sr. C. E. Landis who is convalescing from a severe sickness. We were sorry to learn of the illness of Mr. Case, husband of Sr. Case who was recently baptized. We hope he may be spared to be born into the kingdom.

Bro. G. J. Waller returned from his eastern trip and sailed on the Ventura for his Honolulu home and business on the 11th looking well and feeling hopeful—his son Gilbert who supplies his father's place in his absence, will proceed on the same vessel to Australia on a business trip for the company.

The speakers in the city last Sunday were Elder H. D. Simpson at 11 o'clock and Bro. E. E. Hartsough lately ordained, preached at night. At the young people's prayer meeting held at 9 o'clock there were 15 present and a spiritual time was enjoyed. The meeting was presided over by Bro. J. A. Saxe the pastor and his son Alma lately ordained.

Bro. C. A. Parkin spent Sunday at San Jose, Bro. Hawkins spending the day at Sacramento enroute home from conference.

At a recent business meeting of the Oakland Branch a motion prevailed to introduce individual glasses in the sacramental service, also a soliciting committee of six was appointed to obtain means to improve our church house. A good spirit prevailed in the meeting.

LAMONI, IOWA.

All the members of the quorum of Twelve excepting I. N. White and C. A. Butterworth assembled here week before last and have been transacting their annual business as a quorum in preparation for the coming general conference. Bro. I. N. White hopes to be well enough to come up about April 1, I understand.

On March 16, the sermons at the church were by Bro. Columbus Scott and Charles E. Willie, and those at the two Saints' Homes at 7 p. m. were by Bro. L. G. Holloway and Earl Hall. The speakers in nearby places were Bro. Amos Berve at Bloomington. Bro. August Johnson at Andover and Bro. A. L. Keen at Oland.

Two more deaths to record. The baby boy of Bro. and Sr. Silas Shippy died at St. Joseph, Missouri, March 12, and they came to Lamoni to lay his body to rest. His age was five months, pneumonia the cause of death. Also on March 13 there passed away from earth the spirit of Sr. Rebecca J. wife of Bro. J. E. Downey, at the age of 53 years, 10 months and 5 days. She was the mother of ten children and also had four step children to care for in the past, to all of whom she was equally faithful and true. Erysipelas for eight days, caused death, and for the last two she lost her mental powers. However before doing so she called her family to her and exhorted them to honesty, godliness and virtue, and to serve God steadfastly. Of both these funerals, March 13 and 14, Bro. John Smith had charge and offered the prayers, and Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached the sermons.

Later—Great sorrow has come to the home of Bro. and Sr. John Hatcher by the loss of their daughter, Effie Pearl, after an operation for gall stones. She lived less than one day. Not only do her parents, her brothers and sisters, and their families mourn her death but her many associates in the church and in Sunday school and Religio work will continue to miss her faithful service in the cause and their pleasant associations with her in the past. She was born in Green County, Iowa, May 11, 1876, and thus was nearly thirty-seven years old at death. Funeral was held yesterday afternoon. There was a very large attendance. Bro. J. R. Lambert preached the sermon and Bro. John Smith had charge and offered the prayers.

Yesterday at eleven the Easter day sermon was by Bro. J. W. Rushton whose topic was the resurrection of the dead, wherein is to be fulfilled the promises of God to the eternal joy and happiness of his people. The choir gave a choice selection of song; also there was a solo, and a quartette.

Bro. R. C. Russell preached at night and the evening sermons at the two Homes were by Bro. Amos Berve and J. D. Schofield.

At Bloomington chapel Bro. Columbus Scott spoke morning and evening; also at Andover Bro. Ed Hall twice.

The platform for the choir and the church officials has been enlarged by adding sections that can be moved when general conference is over.

SECOND ST. JOSEPH BRANCH.

We are one week late with our branch letter, but we waited till the four week's series of meetings conducted by Elder J. S. Roth were finished so would give a full report. The meetings were a grand success as his meetings always are, there being seven baptized Sunday afternoon consisting of four sisters and three brothers all heads of families but two. There were several others who were not quite ready to go into the water, but some promise to obey very soon. One good woman called for baptism but Bro. Roth learned that her husband would not consent to it, so he told her not to come in if her husband opposed it so she did not.

A conductor on the street railway was to have been baptized but there was a bass ball game going on at the same hour Sunday and several extra cars had to be put in service and the company told him when he objected to going out with a car that if he did not go he could quit. So it being wisdom he conducted his car but said to us the first time he got off he would be baptized.

These meetings were so well attended that there were no vacant chairs but instead twenty-five extra chairs were necessary to accommodate the large audience.

This branch and city has a scourge of measles and mumps the report is that two out of every five die. God's judgments are surely visiting the earth.

Confirmation took place immediately after baptism in which the Lord bore witness by the Spirit that he was well pleased with the work done. Nearly all the newly baptized bore testimony to the work immediately after confirmation at the prayer meeting.

Some of those who were bitter enemies when they first came were made warm friends under the powerful and spiritual sermons by Bro. Roth, several of the outsiders were surprised that a man past seventy years of age could preach four weeks without any relief and come out as good as he started in.

The prayer meeting preceding Bro. Roth's last sermon of Sunday evening was largely attended by Saints and many outsiders and was one of the most spiritual meetings the writer has attended for a long time. The Lord spoke in prophecy in recognition and commendation to Bro. Roth of the work just done at this series of meetings, and that still others would be gathered in here as fruits of this meeting.

Elder Roth always has a question box which proves very interesting, among the many, many questions which he answered; we will copy just one as follows:

"You said in your sermon the other evening that we need revelation, now why do we when we have the Bible? All church authorities schooled as they are say that the Bible is all we need now. Our sacred Bible is all sufficient, is it not, to know all things?"

Our pastor says the Bible takes the place of angels too now. What is the Holy Ghost?"

All those who heard the many questions fully answered will know how this one was answered.

Ministers and members of the Congregational, Presbyterian, Dunkards and even the Utah Mormons came out several nights as they were quite well interested and spoke kindly of the sermons.

Quite a good attendance of Utah people were present to hear the difference between the Latter Day Saints and the Mormons.

A. A. RICHARDSON.

March 24.

ST. JOSEPH, FIRST BRANCH.

The usual order of meeting has been faithfully observed during the last three weeks, with our pastor in the pulpit both morning and evening each Sunday with the exception of one Sunday morning, when Rev. Albert Bushnell of Kansas City was advertised to occupy the hour in defense of the temperance cause. He failed to keep the appointment but sent a substitute, whose name we do not recall, whose talk was well received.

Preaching services are well attended; prayer meetings of a devotional spirit; auxiliary services full of life and activity. Altogether onward is the word in all departments. Sickness among us has abated, the Lord blessing many with healing.

Seeing the wonderful manifestations of God's power among his people, and how he acknowledges them even by miracles before the world, we are led to marvel at the bitter, stubborn animosity of the people, especially those who profess to bear the name of Christ, toward us as a religious body. Miracles have been wrought at their very doors, through the faith and prayers of the saints, and yet they repudiate us, and in doing this, repudiate the God of heaven whose people we are.

Not long since Mrs. Day, the wife Dr. F. E. Day of the First M. E. Church of this city, delivered an address at their church in which she made a bitter and unwarranted attack on so-called Mormonism, vilifying the name of Joseph Smith the Martyr, and making many false and scandalous statements. This was published in a daily paper and so brought to the attention of our people. Bro. Goodrich and Robert Winning at once published articles refuting her charges and citing abundant proof of all they asserted. This called forth a storm of scurrilous and eminently unlay-like abuse, marked by a spirit of bitterness and hatred, altogether foreign to the gentle spirit of christianity and containing not one single atom of proof of any of the outrageous charges made. This was signed by Mrs. Day. In this scandalous trials she frequently made use of the expression "I know," but she failed to tell us how she knew or where she obtained her knowledge. When the brethren would have set us right before the people after this article was printed, they found the columns of the paper closed against them.

Such is the injustice and humiliation we are forced to endure because we love the gospel in its unchangeable purity, and seek to follow the "old path" marked out by our blessed Savior who himself suffered contumely and even death at the hands of the so-called righteous. As he in the agony of death prayed, "Father forgive them, they know not what they do," so we pity their ignorance and pray for their darkened condition.

Bro. Goodrich has preached two sermons bearing upon this attack, full of abundant testimony, to the falsity of her statements. Thank God that we as a people know what we believe.

On last Tuesday evening the Religio as a body was invited to the home of Sr. Repple where a delightful evening was spent in social converse, music, taffy pulling, and partaking of dainty refreshments. Our thanks are due this good sister for the very pleasant time spent. Religio has a fine program for next Friday evening. The young people are truly up and doing.

The Woman's Auxiliary have changed the time of meeting to the second Tuesday evening of each month. At the last meeting a goodly number was present, an exceptionally good program was rendered and refreshments were served. This was the last time our dear young sister Nell Scott, nee Niedorp, who has been so faithful in auxiliary work would meet with us as their home will be hereafter in Kansas City. We shall miss her.

On Easter Sunday our Sunday school "did itself proud" indeed. As we entered the room there seemed to be an air of exalted sacredness all around us. Ushers at the door handed us a neatly and beautifully printed little program. Cut flowers, blooming plants, red graceful ferns appealed to the sense of beauty, and the music by the orchestra (some of the best talent in the city) was sublime. Two solos by M.K. Kinnaman and Mrs. Newton Collins were rendered as only they can render them. Altogether the Sunday school hour was a joyful one, and we rejoice in the forward spirit of the school; and we cordially invite any of the saints coming our way to visit us. You will be well repaid.

Roney Anthon, infant son of Bro. and Sr. Roney Haden was blessed by Bro. Goodrich and Best, also Carl Albert, son of Mr. and Sr. John Marshall.

Pictures of the Children's Home will be given at the church, March 31st, by the Woman's Auxiliary. Bro. Alvin Kinsley will hold a series of meetings, beginning Monday the 24th, continuing through the week.

Ralph Joseph, infant son of Bro. and Sr. Shipley, died the 18th and was taken to Lamoni for burial.

THE ROUND TABLE.

Why is Israel spoken of as God's chosen people if he is no respecter of persons, and would the Gentiles have ever had any chance for salvation if the Jews had not rejected the Savior?

God chose Israel not to be the sole recipients of his blessings, but to be the instruments through which his blessings might go to all the world. He said to Abraham, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed," and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:3; 22:18. If the Jews had accepted Christ as a nation, the gospel would have gone to the Gentiles much more quickly than it did.

(1) Why are not convalescents and insane persons admitted to the Sanitarium? (2) Isn't God just as able to heal diseases of the lungs and mind as any others?

(1) Dr. Luff informs us that it is contrary to the laws of the state to admit persons with infectious or contagious diseases into hospitals or sanitariums where other sick are kept. Insane persons require special care, and in many cases special apartments, which can not be conveniently provided in the sanitarium. Besides the presence of such persons would injuriously effect other patients. Special institutions are provided by the state for both these classes though we know of nothing to hinder the church from making special provision for such when the demand is sufficiently strong.

(2) We do not question the power of God, but man's faith is often weak, and God acts largely according to men's faith.

Does John 4:2 mean that Jesus never baptized with water?

John 3:22 says "After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized." Verse 23, "And John also was baptizing in Aenon." 4:1, "... Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John." Here are three verses which state either directly or by implication that Jesus baptized, (by water), from which it must be apparent that the statement in 4:2 that "Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples," is an error either of translation or otherwise. The Inspired version renders this verse, "he himself baptized not so many as his disciples," thus making the several passages harmonize.

What river is that named "Sidon" in the Book of Mormon?

According to the report of the Archaeological Committee it is the Magdalena river in the northern part of South America.

Were the people who were discovered at Zarahemla part of the people who came from Jerusalem with Lehi?

No. They were the descendants of another colony who came eleven years later than Lehi and settled in the northern part of South America in a land they called Zarahemla, where nearly 400 years later they united with the Nephites. Read Book of Omni.

In Matt. 17:11. (1) Who is Elias who is to restore all things? and (2) what are the things to be restored?

Elijah was a prophet chosen and sent of God to ancient Israel to turn them from heathen idolatry and wickedness to the worship of the true God, and he was endowed with divine power enabling him to work miraculously in accomplishing his mission. Read 1 Kings, chapters 17 and 18. The Lord said 500 years later, "Behold I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." Mal. 4:5, 6. From this it appears that while Elijah had come once to Israel, he would come again before the coming of Christ in judgment as an angel and would minister in a work that would turn the hearts of the people to God.

Luke 1:13-17 says of John Baptist "He shall go before him in the Spirit and power of Elias, (the Greek form of Elijah), to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord." Christ's statement in Matt. 17:12 that "Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed," with Matthew's statement following, that "the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist," shows that John also was called Elias, probably from the similarity of his mission to that of Elijah. But Jesus says also in verse 12, "Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things." The King James version does not make it clear whether this restorer is Elijah or John Baptist, but the Inspired version says, "Who is Elias? Behold this is Elias, whom I sent to prepare the way before me." Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist, and also of another who should come and restore all things, as it is written by the prophets."

Matt. 17:14. Thus it appears that both John and the other Elias should come again. This is made plain in Doctrine and Covenants 26:2, "and also John the son of Zacharias . . . which John I have sent unto you, my servants, Joseph Smith, Jr., Oliver Cowdery, to ordain you unto this first priesthood which you have received, that you might be called and ordained even as Aaron, and also Elijah, unto whom I have committed the keys of the power of turning the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers, that the whole earth may not be smitten with a curse." (2) John the Baptist who acted under the spirit and power of Elias restored the Aaronic priesthood to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. While it is stated that Elijah held the keys of "bringing to pass the restoration of all things," it is not clear as to just what he restored upon his visit to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. It is probable that his work is not fully done.

CORRESPONDENCE

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., March 17.

Dear Ensign:—I have just ordered the doors and windows from the West Side Sash, Door and Lumber Company, of Independence, Mo., to be shipped to Hickory Co., for a new L. D. S. church at a place called Childers, Mo., near the home of Sr. Alice Locking and family, who have resided at that place for about sixteen years. Since that time they and a few others have not ceased to pray for God to advance the work in that place.

I lived at that place for a while and I know how dark seemed the way about fifteen years ago. Bro. A. White and Willie Mannering came preaching in the wilderness of prejudice and superstition, secured the Mulberry school house and began to sound the gospel trumpet, but the people could not endure that. I did not throw any stones as Paul of old, I was willing to the proceedings, so I and a Baptist persecutor were sitting on arick of wood near the school house and the first stone thrown missed the house and struck the wood at our feet. We ran into the house while the bombardment went on. The elder stopped preaching for awhile and when the noise stopped they resumed their preaching. But as soon as the mob got more ammunition they came with more noise than before. The elder ceased speaking again until the third volley when they said they could not preach any longer on account of the uproar. So they started to the home of Sr. Locking and they threw rocks at them for a quarter of a mile, cursing and threatening violence to them. But by faithful and prayerful living and by continued efforts of the elders, D. W. Palmer, Slower, Paxton, Brebe, Teeters, Mc-

Rae, Higden and Stuck, some were baptized at times, and prejudice gradually removed until now they have enough members and those interested to build a church. Elder Higden, a Mr. R. R. Hayden and Mr. O. S. Locking committee, and others helping as Mr. S. O. Obriant, Mr. Cotroen, Mr. Liley and others. So you can see not to yield to discouragements though the way may seem very much impossible and dark, but "For a faith that will not shrink, though pressed by every foe," and I know the Lord has heard the prayers of those humble, faithful saints. Pray in behalf of the Lord's work in that part of his vineyard. May the Lord bless this effort and crown his and their work with great success in his desire.

Yours for the truth,
E. Stafford.

P. S. I have a few more 3 months ENSIGN subscriptions for non-members who will send me their names and addresses, saying they will read the paper.

COLTON, Cal, Feb.

Dear Ensign:—Who is there who has tasted of the good work of God, that does not rejoice in the onward march of the latter day work. We all know that this glorious onward march is not obtained by keeping silent, sitting still, or even recounting the blessings of God, and rejoicing over them. It requires, push, pressing forward and sometimes almost fighting to hold one's own, and gain new ground. And we glory in the persistent vim and determination that is manifested in some of the workers to get the truth before the people, plant their standard and stand by their colors.

As I read today the newly arrived Herald and ENSIGN passing from one thing to another, my heart burned with the rekindled flame of more youthful days. And I inwardly exclaimed. Can there be anything better than to be actively engaged in this latter day work, or more properly speaking the work of the Lord in these latter days. When the work of the Lord is carried on? His purposes carried out, free from the mixture of the purposes of man. When indeed the march is onward. But humanity is easily deceived. The Lord is helping his people in this line, in giving to his faithful servants the Spirit of searching the deep things, "Yea the deep things of God." The searching deep into the things "the kingdom of God. I do not mean to search to find some new thing pertaining to the kingdom of God; but the making straight the old paths, and herein is our safety. It indicates that the sifting time is upon us. Yet it may be years before all things are sifted and thoroughly purged from accumulated dross.

It has been seen that even the music indulged in by the saints has need of its share of sifting and reattuning. I am one among a large number who hail with gladness the Spirit that prompts to make a difference between the music and also the reading matter of that on the Lord's day, and that of the days of the week, so that both the song and the reading matter may be of a spiritual nature.

Since Sunday as we call it—is the Lord's day, he requires that his people should not work upon that day as on other days, so there should be a difference in all things in his favour. In our conversation in our inclination to merit, especially in the house of God. But all these will undergo their sifting time when the chaff will be scattered, and the jewels will shine out clear and bright ready for Christ's gathering when he comes for that purpose viz. to "Make up His Jewels." Shall I be one of this number? Will you be? God grant it.

Editor Ensign:—The words of Rev. John Wesley, "What could God have done which he hath not done to convince you that the day is coming, that the time is at hand, when he (God) will fulfil this glorious promise, and will arise to maintain his own cause set up his kingdom." 71st sermon

"Almighty God of Love,
Set up the attractive sign
And summon whom thou dost approve,
For messengers divine,
"From favored Abraham's seed
The new apostles choose,
In isles and continents spread
The soul-reviving news."

About the time of the end; in all probability, a body of men will be raised up who will turn their attention to the prophecies, and insist upon their literal fulfillment in the midst of much clamor and opposition.

Some new revelation or some new development of the revelation of God must be made, before the hopes and expectations of all true Christians can be realized or Christianity save and reform the nations of this world? We want the old gospel back and sustained by the ancient order of things and this alone by the blessing of the divine Spirit is all that we do want, or can expect, to reform and save the world, and if this gospel as proclaimed and enforced on pentecost—cannot do this, vain are the hopes, and disappointed must be the expectation of the so called Christian world."

"I have found the glorious gospel that was taught in former years
With its gifts and blessings all so full and free;
And my soul is thrilled with gladness, and banished are my fears,
Since the glorious angel message came to me."

I went down into the water, Tuesday, Feb. 25, and baptized one beneath the cold icy wave. Today Feb. 27. I go to the water to baptize another young man that he may arise to walk in newness of life putting off the old man with his deeds. I am at the Hazel Dell school house and have been holding meeting there over two weeks near Xenia, Ill., expect to go to the Poplar Creek Branch from here, Points I wish to make before general conference Kinmundy Bellair and Cisue. The harvest will come in the sweet by and by. Pray for me.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

BUILDING UP ZION.

Sermon delivered Sunday morning, Feb. 23, 1913, at Independence, Mo., by Bishop Richard Bullard.

REPORTED BY SR. BELE R. JAMES.

Note.—Just preceding the announcement of the speaker the choir sang the beautiful anthem entitled "O for the wings of a dove," the theme of which is based upon the words found in Psalms 55:6; "O that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest."—Editor.

I hope we may be able to continue to enjoy the inspiration of the hour. David, the sweet singer of Israel and King, said, "Out of Zion the perfection of beauty, God hath shined." He had in memory what is now before us an object lesson of what the gospel can do and what has been purposed by our Father to do. "Out of Zion the perfection of beauty." He doubtless was looking back to the time of Enoch, when Zion had arisen and shone forth with lustre and splendor of light, which God intended should be a beacon light to the world; and his hope was centered in the thought that that occasion should be brought about by the same means that had perfected the church in the days of Enoch; and for this purpose, it seems, that part of the territory or part of that beautiful city called Jerusalem had been dedicated to that purpose and bore its name, but it fell short; and there is no period of history that records a repetition of that enjoyed in the days of Enoch. Prophets and seers looked forward to it and hoped for its accomplishment, but they have passed away to the dust without having realized their wonderful and exalted ideals.

But in the restoration of the truth, as we enjoy it, the same hopes are restored to modern Israel and we are looking forward with anticipation to the fulfillment of the promises of our heavenly Father relative to this estate; and there comes ringing to us through prayer and song, the same admonitions that were doubtless heard prior to this perfection in the days of Enoch, to consecrate our lives to the service of God and to keep in touch with the wonderful powers that the Lord has placed before us for this success. And it is with joy we hear that word—yea it comes with a measure of inspiration when we hear the word "Zion," and the word of preparation given to us repeatedly should be as sweet music also to our soul, that we may be prepared for the more perfect service that we are to render to our God.

I do not, for one moment, think that Zion in its perfection was built up in a short period of time. I believe that humanity is truly represented today in the aspects, the desires, the ambitions of men. We believe that mankind was the same in the days of Enoch as now, but there had to be a crucifixion of carnal desires and selfishness before the attainment of that perfection which David speaks of. And there must have been years of preparation, because as we read of this there was a sudden translation of the earthly as represented in flesh, to the heavenly, as represented in the church triumphant. Now if the church militant was to join the church triumphant—and where God is, harmony must exist—there must have been a union existing between those above and those below. So in song, as in all other departments of worship, there must have been perfection reached as far as it is possible here on this mundane sphere. There must have been arranged these songs of praise and anthems that were in accord with the mind of God and his purposes, that they could unite with those who had made a success of life and who had before departed to the realms of light and bliss, and that which is before us in the cultivation of song is similar to this.

We are looking not so much for a translation, although that will take place according to the Apostle Paul, that "these vile bodies will be changed," that those who may remain upon the earth at the coming of Christ will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, but that momentary change, that sudden transition, will not be of character, because the character must have been formed before. This will be but the transition of mortal to immortal, from the state of the flesh as we now have it, to a more improved condition, that will be able to bear the glory that is revealed and will be revealed, rather, in those who have been changed from glory to glory.

So the conditions prevailing now, doubtless are as they were in the days of Enoch, only we have not gotten so far advanced toward perfection as they were, but we are looking very anxiously for the necessary improvement in our condition. We desire to work just as assiduously as we exercise our anxiety to bring this about, and so we feel this now, as we felt in the early hours of the morning, that the message to the people, to God's people, is one of preparation as well as that of promise. As soon as the Lord can afford to cease reproving us and cease exhorting us to a higher standard of spirituality end life, he will do so, and he will begin to commend us as a body; he is commending his children as individuals, where they are trying to live in harmony with his will and purpose and making sacrifice for the spreading abroad of his truth and the bringing about of his purposes. This commendation comes with a degree of the Spirit of God that is resident with them. This is God's commendation to his people individually, but there is to be a time when he can stretch out his hand and send his messengers to us to show that he is really pleased with his people, and the movements that they adopt to bring about his purposes; and we love to dwell upon this theme because it is the one immediately before us now, to make preparation for this great event.

And this cannot all be met in the singing of Psalms and of hymns of praise. There belongs to this great work that which may have the label of drudgery upon it. There are duties that devolve upon us all where we have to step down from the exalted position of self satisfaction and get down where we can try to make an effort to lift up our weaker brethren and those less favored than we are. And so if we are willing to follow the footsteps of Christ who has led his church to victory, we must mark those foot-prints among the meek, among the lowly, among the poor of earth's people, and there we must tread as pleasantly the footsteps as we may when we follow him in the Mount of Transfiguration, where the visage of his countenance was changed and where glory surrounded him. And these footsteps, though they may be rugged; though we may have to press our way through thorns and briars and obstacles that to the human mind may look impossible to surmount, yet with the hand of God joined with ours, walking steadfastly by his law and his commandments, we shall ascend those heights where with Enoch, we can walk and talk with God.

In the fourth chapter of John we read, that Christ, speaking to his disciples, said, "Look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest." White for harvest, and he exhorted his servants to thrust in their sickles and reap. Now what was this harvest that Christ here referred to? Was it not the harvest of waiting souls? Was it not honest people that had been disappointed by the traditions of men who had looked for that they had never yet realized? Their hopes, their highest ambitions had been dashed aside, and they were losing hope in the God of Abraham, and of Isaac and of Jacob, because of the priestcraft that was so dominant among them. Was it not that there were among the poor of earth's children those who had not that which would gratify many of the desires that arose in their hearts for pleasure? That disappointed in this way, they were reaching out for something that would gratify the refined desires of the soul? Christ knew it, and he said, Yes, the field is white for the harvest. Go and labor. Go and work; go and brush aside whatever obstacle that may confront you. I will not promise you liberty in this work—that is the liberty of your body. I will promise you this: persecution, imprisonment and death. I promise you this, but I will promise you the liberty of the Spirit, and whether you are bound and shackled in the innermost recesses of the darkest dungeon, you shall have liberty. That is the liberty that Christ promises. Not so much the liberty to go where we please and do as we please, but the liberty of the Spirit that can ascend to God and commune with him, though the conditions surrounding us may be never so unfavorable. And this was promised his children, and they realized it. Do you not know that when Paul and Silas were bound, their feet made fast in the stocks, these lovers of liberty, these preachers of liberty, these great advocates of liberty; although taken from them, as far as man could take the liberty from his fellowman, but there the freedom of the soul was unfettered, and in that condition they sang praises to God and united with him, and the powers that God had promised to his people, to his faithful, obedient children, were sent there and the shackles were dashed from their hands and feet, and they were yet to thrust in their sickles and reap in the great harvest field of God, for their work was not yet complete.

Now we find recorded that the Father has spoken to the church through his Son, and he has repeated the words that he gave to his disciples then, to Joseph Smith senior, Joseph Smith junior, Oliver Cowdery, Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Knight this special message as directed, "Thrust in your sickles and reap;" and it must needs be that God saw the great harvest field and saw the waiting souls that could be harvested and cared for and saved under the proclamation of the gospel message. So he places upon his servants power in this dispensation and he says go forth and reap.

Now this command has not been revoked by our Father. The same message delivered to them is good now. The same results that followed those faithful men will follow the faithful service of his people now, and the Lord will work with them. There is then a work to do. There are possibilities before us. We are to occupy till he comes. Now, what has been the purpose of God in raising up these men for this specific work? What has God in view? An addition to his own exalted glory? No, because he has a fullness of it. That he may bring additional honor and glory to his Son? No, he is co-equal with the Father. Must it not be then for our blessing, for the blessing of humanity? Yes, that is why the church has been organized. That is why it is equipped as it is. That is why the Lord has encompassed it with power and has shielded it through the hours of darkness and persecution; because a day with the Lord is as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day with him. He will bring about his purposes, though he may have to tarry for you and for me. He may have to wait, which he has done so long, for us to prepare ourselves for this service, and he is still waiting.

Now he has ordained means whereby perfection can be brought about in his church, and he is going to apply the same laws that he has applied in the ages gone by. What brought about perfection in the days of Enoch will bring perfection today, nothing more, nothing less. He asks no more of us than he asked of that people, and if we defer it, the Lord will raise up others to do his work. You know he said years ago, "do not gather in haste." He may repeat that to us at times because of our undue anxiety to get where we may be defended and shielded by our heavenly Father, because of the promises he has made relative to Zion. But this, as he has said, is his hastening time, and there must of necessity be preparation made for the bringing about of his purposes; and as we heard in our brother's prayer this morning, we are living in a very peculiar age. No more peculiar age ever dawned upon this world than the one that confronts us now. Never was there greater disturbing elements, perhaps, in the world, than now. Never was it showing greater unrest than it is showing now. The war dogs are straining at their leashes, and almost every nation is ready, imbued with the spirit of war to pounce upon its weaker neighbor, and nothing but the restraining hand of God will keep this terrible conflict from coming to pass; and the day will come when the Lord will no longer stay his hand, but he is staying it, for his people's sake. He is waiting until they shall occupy holy places. He is waiting until the place of safety, the city of deliverance, the New Jerusalem, shall be built, so that his people who should have our earnest solicitation and care, though they may live in the remotest parts of the world, may come and gather with us. This is God's purpose and the glorious message of the gospel to us and to them is to make preparation for that, that God may establish what he has promised, as recorded in the 45th section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, paragraph 12, You read where the Lord commands his people to bring their treasures to Zion, to build up this city, the city of safety, a city of righteousness, where his people may dwell in peace, and this thought is inspiring God's people everywhere. There never was a time in the history of this re-organization that I can remember in these almost thirty years of membership, when this thought was so wonderfully surging itself through the minds of the people as now. And what is causing this? Is it not the Spirit of God working among his people that they may make preparation for this great event? Surely it is, and that is God's purpose in bringing about his gospel in this dispensation, that his people may be saved.

And before leaving this thought of the peculiar condition of the world now, we are reminded of the words of Jesus Christ, who said, unless these days are shortened, no flesh should be saved. Now that means surely that we are living in perilous times, in dangerous times when there is a necessity for God to work for and with us.

We are reminded through the revelations given recently that the Lord designs that we should organize and work. That we should unite our forces and concentrate our efforts under God's law, always in harmony with that, and he will bless such effort, that he may bring about his purposes. Now he told Enoch and his fellows the same, and said, it must needs be that you organize, and this was to be under a special order in the church, and that order was called The United Order of Enoch. Now this is to be emphasized in our day, because of its wonderful work. Why, the Lord says it is for the redemption or the salvation of his people, and we do not think that our Father has left anything out that is necessary for our salvation. We do not think that he has placed there anything that is unimportant for our consideration and our obedience but everything that relates to the salvation of man has been provided, and this comes to us with freshness because of direct revelation from God in this age, and we are advised and counselled to look into the commandments that relate to this order, the Order of Enoch. What is it for? To bring about these purposes that God places before his people; that lands might be purchased, that homes might be provided, that stewardships might be granted to the people of God, and that we who are here on this sanctified, this sacred spot, might unite our efforts, and that we might manifest our love for our neighbor, though he may live across the water; that where the peculiar conditions under which he lives preclude the possibility of accumulating that which would entitle him to what the Lord has promised his people, that we, who are a favored people, favored by the laws of our nation, and above all, favored by the promises of God's blessing, if working in harmony with his will, that we may make this provision. Oh, do not let us fold our arms, because we are comfortably located here, and have a good comfortable home! Do not let us fall away from the purposes that God has intended in our mission here! And make no provision for those whose eye and desire is turned towards this place; and as we were uniting our voices in singing that beautiful anthem this morning, "Oh that I had wings as a dove," was not that language used when the Psalmist had a desire for Zion? "Oh, that I had the wings of a dove, I'd fly there and be at rest." And so those who have traveled know that the earnest prayer of the souls of the people of God in the most remote parts of the world, is, "Oh, that I might have wings, that I might go to Zion." And unless preparation is made here, with sacrifice on our part they will never be able to come; because God has intended that his work shall be brought about through sacrifice, and it must needs be that we learn what that word "sacrifice" is to us; that we must begin to consider that all the powers granted us which we call ours, we have handed them over to God, to be sanctified to his purposes and to his work, and if we concede this, Oh the union, the bonds of love that will unite us together! And what is there that God cannot do with his people and through his people when they are united under his law? What is there that can be labeled an impossibility, an impossible thing for God to do through his people when united? Why, there is nothing. All things are yours, life, death, principalities, powers, things present and things to come, none of these that may prove to be an obstacle now can separate us from the work God has ordained we should do, nor separate us from him and the purposes that he is willing to bring to pass through us.

So this order is before us. We are trying to bring before you the needs of this order. What is it? It is an organization appointed of God to do his work. The Lord has to get from us a covenant, a promise because he knows how unstable mankind is, and we should be very careful what covenants we enter into with the Lord, because we will never have to blame him for not keeping his part, because he is always willing when the covenant is according to his mind to place his seal upon it; and we enter into that which should be a sacred bond with us; and so this order is, that we enter into covenant relationship with God and each other, that we will do all we can for the alleviation of distress, to the building up materially as well as spiritually the kingdom of God upon the earth; and we are, through this order, to purchase lands, build houses, find employment, erect factories and storehouses, and all that is necessary for the perfect equipment of this wonderful work of God among men.

This order is not a giant in its proportions dear saints. It is just a little babe. We have to feed it. It is crying for food from you and we want to raise it on its feet so that it can walk and so that bye and bye it can help instead of being helped. That is why we are extending to you this morning this invitation, "Come and help this order, that it may help you in return," help you to help some one else. That is its mission, that is its purpose; that those who have, may impart to those who have not, that we may lift up the poor; and we read in the days of Enoch there were no poor, among them. And take the wonderful statements of our Lord through the Holy Scripture and that comes to us through the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; it is charged with this command that we are to remember the poor and the needy and that we are to help them, and that is the work, the wonderful work of this order, to bring about equality. In the days of Enoch there were no poor among them.

Now all our efforts to bring about that same condition among his people need time; and so he told his servants to go among them and to heal the sick and cleanse the lepers, and what they had to give to give and impart of their substance to the poor; and what was the result? The Lord blessed them according to their efforts; and after that wonderful manifestation of the power of God upon the day of Pentecost, they came together; and all that had lands and houses (in the plural) sold them; those that had possessions brought them and laid them before the apostles and distribution was made to every man as he had need. There was the effort to lay the foundation of that which brought about perfection in the days of Enoch.

"Thrust in your sickles and reap." Go and tell them what wonderful things there are in the great garner of the Lord. Now we stand here upon this consecrated spot today, and we are calling upon the people to rally to the help of the Lord. We are asking them all to let themselves thus be a living example of sacrifice. Oh, let us arise as the children of light, that we may not only be able to sing the songs of Zion, but that we may live them, that our life may declare to the world that there is power in Christ, power in his gospel!

Now we ask this morning, that in order to help bring about the purposes of God in the establishing of this order, that you will help us. We have a heavy responsibility resting upon us. We want to liquidate the debt upon the land as soon as possible, [Referring to a piece of land purchased by the Order of Enoch and made an addition to the city of Independence, for the benefit of the saints.—Editor.] so that the land is free, and our poor can then procure the material to erect homes, those who have it within their power so to do; and where they have not, the order may provide the fund that they may begin to erect homes, that they may be deeded to the children of God and that their stewardships may be provided, as the Lord in his law has outlined for us, and the work then will take on new impetus. God is simply waiting for us. And dear saints it is not that there is not sufficient in this church to do this! We have more than we need, if it will only be placed where it belongs; there is no need for lack among us. It is not because God has not blessed us as a people that we are where we are. It is not. Indeed it is not. I have traveled from east to west and I know that what I declare to you is true. There is sufficient and all that is necessary in this day to do it. Why do we halt? Why do we tarry? Christ said as he looked at Jerusalem, beautifully built up, strong, but Oh, he saw its weakness, and he saw how soon it would fall. "Oh Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her brood under her wing, but ye would not." "Come and let me protect you. Let me save you. Harken to my message and I will save you and you shall be all that the prophets have predicted if you will do as I ask you to do. But Oh, if you will not, your house will be left unto you desolate." And what a terrible reaping that was of disobedience!

Do you think that our Father will spare his servants continually and urge upon us the necessity of willingness to sacrifice for his cause, and beat back the terrors that surround us that we will not be touched by them? I cannot see that this would correspond with history that has been made in the past. God is the same, and when he withdraws his protection from his people, Oh, it is a day of darkness and gloom and of sorrow and anguish of spirit! But when we rally to the Lord and do his will, then we rejoice because God can fulfill them his promises.

In closing I will relate what I saw this morning in the early hours. The Spirit was upon me in my waking, and it remained with me a long time; I saw the saints busy at work; I saw a little thin row of soldiers in glistening armor going out, equipped for war; sent from the center place here, and they were going over the prairies to a dark visaged people; and I saw them laboring there; and I saw them rallying, I saw them aroused, rather, from their lethargy and indifference, and I saw a host of people, an army of people, after their labors had ended, coming towards this place. I saw a multitude of them and their faces were white, and they were changed; and their garments were white and they looked beautiful. There was nothing repulsive about them. They were beautiful. And I heard them say, "We are going to build up Zion. We are going to build up Zion."

Now my soul was thrilled with delight when I saw them marching along towards us; and it looked, as I saw them, their garments were whiter than ours. They had been more faithful to the commandments of God than we had been. Paul says, "Let no man take your crown." Shall we? Shall we permit a people who have been scattered and driven out from the habitation of civilization and through all these ages been in benighted darkness; will we permit them in the few years perhaps of gospel influence, to outrun us in the race and step here and take that which we prize so much from us? And the honor and the glory and the majesty which belongs to the Father be brought to pass through them instead of us making the proper preparation and sacrifice that will present it to him through us?

I prayed God in my soul then that it might not be, but that we might unite our forces, and when they come to Zion as they want to, to build up Zion, that they might find here a people that will not disappoint them, but as they have that beautiful record the Book of Mormon with them and they are perusing it now, and they see what God's demands of his people were then, that when they come they may see that we have lived in harmony therewith. Now they are disappointed, many of them, with the traditions that have been taught to them. They are rejoicing, some of them, with the message that corresponds with even some of the traditions that have come to them through all their days since the time when the great Spirit that was with their fathers, and we see now, the Spirit is working among them and he is going to bring about his promises. Then Ephraim will rejoice and the wonderful welding together of the scattered tribe of the house of Joseph and the house of Ephraim shall be brought about and Christ shall be in their midst.

Let us then, respond to the call of the Lord to us, and gird on the whole armour and stand where God would have us, and victory will crown our efforts. May this be our desire and purpose in Christ's name. Amen.

BIBLE CHRONOLOGY.

I notice in the ENSIGN for Feb. 27, 1913, an article dealing with the above subject, but it is not all clear to me. The writer no doubt has spent considerable time getting at the facts he gives us, and generally speaking, I think, they may be relied on. Still there are some "missing links" that are merely guesses, and one item, I think, is based on a wrong conclusion.

The Bible says that "The sojourn of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years." Ex. 12:40. They were afflicted "four hundred years" (Gen. 15:13) of this time, thirty years having passed before their affliction began. Luke said they were "entreated evil" four hundred years." Luke 7:6. Their affliction and evil treatment must have been while in Egypt, and being four hundred years in duration, they must have been there more than 215 years, as the brother puts it. Besides, Moses said they sojourned in Egypt, as shown above, 430 years and left on, "ever the self same day," which was the 16th day of the first month. Read Ex. 12th chapter. That was surely the day when they entered 430 years previous.

The statement made by Paul that the law was given 430 years after the promise was made to Abraham (Gal. 3:16-18) is not sufficiently definite to prove that there were no more than 430 years between the giving of the promise to Abraham and the giving of the law on Sinai, and further to prove that the above quotations are not to be taken literally. Paul surely meant that there were at least 430 years between the promises and the giving of the law.

I do not desire to criticize, only so far as to get at the facts. If the brother can make the matter plain, I shall be pleased.

Yours respectfully,

J. M. STUBBART.

ISRAELITES IN EGYPT.

Gen. 46:8. "And these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt," etc. Verse 11. "And the sons of Levi, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari."

Exodus 6:16, 18, 20. "And these are the names of the sons of Levi according to their generations; Kohath; verse 18, Amram; verse 20, Moses. So the generation or genealogy is; Levi, Kohath, Amram, and Moses. Gen. 15:16 "But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again." And here we have the four generations, and Moses who is the fourth, delivers them. Again in Gen. 46:11 we discover that Kohath was one who went to Egypt. He may have been a man of mature years, as Levi was the third son of Jacob, and Kohath second son of Levi.

In Ex. 6:16-20, we discover that Levi was 137 years of age at death, Kohath 133, Amram 137; Moses was 80 at time of Exodus. We can not figure much on the age of Levi, and Kohath was born before going to Egypt. The combined ages of Kohath, Amram, and Moses (80) is only 350, but we shall have to allow some years for the age of father at birth of son, and it will be readily seen that the time will have to be shortened.

In Ex. 6:20 "Amram took him Jochebed his father's sister to wife." She was a daughter of Levi, and it is not given whether she was born in or out of Egypt, but allowing that she was born in Egypt and lived to be as old as her father, brother, or husband (137) and that Moses was born when she was exceedingly old: Then the combined ages of Jochebed (guessed at 117) and Moses 80 at time of Exodus only makes 237 years. The common chronology dates 1766 B. C. as the time when the Israelites moved to Egypt, and 1491 B. C. for their deliverance, difference is 215; with this, agrees some ancient historians.

As to their afflictions, they did not begin until after the death of Joseph. Then there rose up a king knowing not God, etc. Joseph was 30 years old when standing before Pharaoh, and was made governor soon afterward. He had been governor about 10 years (guessed at) when the Israelites moved to Egypt, making him about 40 years of age. He lived to be 110 years old. 110 minus 40 will leave 70 years rule of Joseph. During that time the Israelites had no afflictions.

All these quotations referring to time, were considered, by the writer, before the work on "Bible Chronology" was arranged. He also found that much allowance had to be made for discrepancies and that many statements could not be taken literally. The article on "Chronology" is an effort at harmonizing, avoiding, if possible, the extremes, and coming together on a middle or common basis. I hope that I have made the objections clear. If not, those that may not see the point, might do as the writer did, weigh the matter for about three years.

MORMON POLYGAMY.

Two Joseph Smiths and Two Latter Day Saints.

No deeper laid plot, and none of more diabolical dimension was ever hatched than the effort to slander Joseph Smith with the crime of polygamy. History does not deal with a greater surprise than the recent revelation of facts which exonerates him in that matter. It is a strange comment indeed on the civilization of this age of the world, when a man for nearly a century could be falsely accused of the very thing he most opposed.

The reason is plain and may be summed up in two words, "religious persecution." Ancient history groans with such injustice, but in this enlightened age we would hardly expect to find ourselves hurled back into the dark ages and find humanity still as unjust as those of that time. Satan has quite kept pace with the progress of the world and the civilization of the age in which we live. His long experience with human nature fully prepares him to deceive the civilized mind as readily as the uncivilized one.

A weapon he most conceals, and one least and last suspected by many, is exparte evidence. Because of this fact, many acting honestly but unwisely, believe Mr. Smith to have been guilty, without enquiring into the other side. One would think, in this age, the other side would be asked for, and Mr. Smith be given a chance to speak for himself. Many persons allow themselves to be influenced by exparte evidence and more especially if it appears in print. Until recently, many histories, encyclopedias and popular newspapers preferred to accept this kind of evidence on this question rather than attempt to correct a popular error. Even yet in many places their forced corrections are unwillingly made.

Religious Prejudice.

Had this matter been a business or political affair, the other side would not only have been asked for but demanded. But, being a religious question, religious prejudice played its part most adeptly. Joseph Smith has suffered most unjustly at the hands of religious zealots and not a little from biased writers and school instructors. Those who have stopped to examine both sides of this question not only find nothing to condemn him, but, on the contrary, much to commend him. For their pains, however, they are often frowned upon by the partizan pulpit and press. All the more, therefore, is the injustice deepened.

Another reason for the erroneous public opinion and antipathy against Joseph Smith was the financial inability of himself and friends to combat the prejudiced pulpit and press. The proofs of the noble character of the man had existed from the first, but few could pay for their publication, and few papers cared to correct public opinion and the errors of history.

One almost feels himself back several hundred years, when comparing facts with public opinion relative to the Smith origin of polygamy. The historian Bancroft said of this matter: "Never before has it been my lot to meet with such a mass of mendacity. The attempts of almost all who have written upon the subject seem to have been to make out a case rather than to state facts. Each author apparently endeavored to surpass his predecessor in the libertinism of abuse. Most of these books are written in a sensational style and for the purpose of deriving profit by pandering to a vitiated public taste, and are wholly unreliable as to facts."

After all, when one gets back to the ground, after aviating the hot air concerning Joseph Smith, he will conclude that humanity is yet human and still susceptible of being deceived. He was persecuted to death for no other reason than that, his opinions differed from those of his religious neighbors.

One Wife, One Husband.

His teachings can best be obtained in the faith of the church which he founded. It was only five years old in 1835, when the following declaration of faith was adopted by the only ecumenical council ever held in the church:

"Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and polygamy, we declare that we believe that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again."

That article of faith was in force and on the statute books of the church during the lifetime of Joseph Smith. It is still in force in the church presided over by his son. The Utah church however, not only repudiated it, but expunged it from the statute books without even the action of a quarterly conference, much less an ecumenical council.

The same council of 1835 which adopted the above article on marriage, also adopted the following marriage ceremony:

"You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition, that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others during your lives."

This ceremony has never been repealed, but is still in force, and, like the other, utterly prohibits polygamy. Joseph Smith's idea of this crime was stamped on his society.

An Analogy.

Had the President of the United States succeeded in getting congress to enact a law against race suicide, it would now be just as unreasonable to charge him with race suicide as to charge Joseph Smith with polygamy. An analogous position might be imagined as follows: Had there been only one political party during the last administration, and that party united in its opposition to race suicide, enacting laws against it, but dividing afterward on that principle, the old party with the president's son leading them, still opposing race suicide, but the deflection party advocating it and claiming the president as authority, what would the world think of this misrepresentation of the off party? As proof that the president was in favor of race suicide, suppose this party should produce a purported unsigned letter of his in the handwriting of one of their own members which taught race suicide, would not the world smile incredulously? From bad to worse, suppose they became still more strenuous and produce certain women who said they had been taught race suicide by the president. I am sure the world would be convulsed with laughter at such political chicanery. To make the analogy complete, suppose the public should accept the exparte and improbable evidence (?) of the off party and charge the president with originating race suicide, and print that assertion in public histories and encyclopedias. The matter would then be too serious for laughter and yet ridiculous in the extreme. This analogy exactly corresponds to the facts concerning Joseph Smith and his attitude toward polygamy.

As we have shown, the constitution of the church until the death of Joseph Smith was opposed to polygamy. Every public utterance, letter, book or pamphlet of his on this matter extolled the one wife system of marriage. His only wife, a noble woman of sterling worth unwaveringly maintained to the time of her death, that her husband had no other wife but herself. But a deflection under Brigham Young hied away to the Rocky Mountains and after becoming involved in lustful crime, the leaders began to assert that Joseph Smith, taught and practiced polygamy. They produced an unsigned document purporting to have Joseph Smith as its author, but in the handwriting of one of their own members, which declared polygamy to be the celestial road to future felicity. This document they inserted among the statutes of their church in lieu of the marriage ceremony quoted before. They even produced certain women who declared they had been the wives of Joseph Smith, although they could not show a child or a chick as the result of their celestial (?) relationship. Their testimony was contradictory, and was rejected by Judge Phillips of the United States Circuit Court. One of them is said to have married twice with no divorce between, and borne two children not twins, within seven months and twenty days!

Not until these women were deep in polygamy with other men, (a second start on the celestial road), did they remember that they had one time been the wives of Joseph Smith. That the effort of these Utah leaders to connect Joseph Smith with the doctrine of polygamy was in order to justify their own action is glaringly apparent.

Public opinion accepts this evidence (?) in preference to the facts, and prints it in histories and encyclopedias. Instructors together with the pulpit and the press hurl it broadcast. When one attempts to display the facts he is frowned upon and ostracised.

Two Smiths, Two Kinds of Latter Day Saints.

There are two Joseph Smiths and two kinds of Latter Day Saints. Many persons only interested enough to read exparte evidence fail to notice this fact. Each church is presided over by a Joseph Smith.

The son of the founder of the church bearing the same name, is his father's successor. He resides in Independence, Mo. He and his people are, and always have been opposed to polygamy. They form the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. They are organized on the same principles of faith as the original church, in fact are the original church. They are truly Bible orthodox and intensely Christian on every point. There are one hundred and twelve points of difference between this church and the Mormon church of Utah. When rightly considered, this church is worthy the respect of all true Christians and every moral and intellectual society.

The Utah Mormon church is also presided over by a Joseph (Fielding) Smith, who is a cousin of the Joseph Smith of Independence, Mo. The Utah people profess to have abandoned the practice of polygamy, but believe the doctrine to be as celestial as ever.

The original Joseph Smith was not the author of, nor responsible for Mormon polygamy. Its origin lays at the door of Brigham Young.

The Utah Mormon church does not represent Joseph Smith on this and many other points, neither was Brigham Young the successor to Joseph Smith; public opinion to the contrary notwithstanding.

However it matters little who was its author. He was guilty of crime whoever he was. It is not a question of authorship altogether, but the real thing is: Was it right? An angel preaching an error does not make it a truth. From every standpoint, polygamy is a sin against God, a crime against humanity, and repulsive to good society everywhere. It is a relic of the dark ages, and a twin brother of barbarism.

No man in all the world's history has written half so much against that evil as Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph Smith, president of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ.

J. W. PETERSON.

LAYING ON OF HANDS.

Much opposition has been directed against the Latter Day Saints for their faith and practice of laying on hands for the healing of the sick. Many other churches however have followed the practice of the saints in praying for the sick and more recently some have adopted the laying on of hands, and anointing with oil. The following from the Kansas City Star, informs us that the Bishop of London, of the established church, has adopted the practice.

A MIRACLE BISHOP SAYS.

London, March 15.—The Right Rev. Arthur Poley Wintongram, bishop of London, tells a story of the healing of a sick girl in response to prayer which may be interpreted as a miracle by those disposed to regard it that way.

The girl had heard the bishop preach before she became ill. When her illness became worse she asked her mother to petition the bishop to pray for her. The bishop went to the bedside of the girl. She had been raving in delirium, but recognized him and became calm. The bishop prayed for her and anointed her forehead with oil. He placed his hand on her head and blessed her. The girl, who had long been unable to sleep, immediately sank into a deep slumber, remained in that condition several hours and now is recovering. The bishop said:

"I knew Jesus was personally with us. It reminded me of the raising of the daughter of Jairus and it seemed to be almost the same thing repeated."

THE WAYS OF GREED.

D. R. BALDWIN.

Stockbrokers and mergers do all heads crown
With thorns, as they turn the world upside down.
Great wealth is prophetically sure to breed
Sin, woe, and misery, begotten by greed.
The workers make honey for a cold day,
But the gamblers quickly flitch it away,
And hoard it up till the day of great need,
Then fix their prices according to greed.
Thus they "heap treasures" up "for the last days."
To be millionaires is the world-wide craze.
So the world pays double for all their feed,
And these are the miserable ways of greed.

If thou art blest
Then let the sunshine of thy gladness rest
On the dark edges of each cloud that lies
Black in thy brother's skies.

If thou art sad
Still be thou in thy brother's gladness glad.

THE RELATION OF MOTHERHOOD TO CIVILIZATION.

When asked to write a few thoughts on this subject, I did wish someone who could have done justice to it, might have been chosen.

It seems to me that motherhood has everything to do with the strength of our nations. The Spartan mother realized the importance of her position, when she tried to preserve in her children, that which was bravest and strongest. She has brought down to us in history—one long memory of bravery and physical strength. Although much seems cruel to us with our more civilized ideas. But if so much can be done by motherhood for physical strength can not it also be done for mental and moral development.

We have all of us deplored the condition of the poor little mothers of India. Their debased condition. How little respect is shown them by their husbands and parents. Look at India's people as a nation, what a miserable condition they are in.

The people are small in stature and the moral and intellectual condition is of the lowest. One of the late bulletins says, "Native discontent has recently attained such proportions as to occasion some solicitude."

Japan too, is an example of how low the standard of morality becomes, where motherhood is not held in especially high esteem. Japan is called the country of divorces. The father may sell his daughter whenever he wishes. He may divorce his wife whenever he sees fit—retaining the children and his wife's possessions. Morality is rated lower in this country, than any other civilized country on the globe. Motherhood overworked, unloved, unrespected can bring forth but one result—a lower class of civilization and lack of mental and moral development.

When I see a mother with a small flock of little ones around her all clamoring for her attention in one way or another, I how with all respect to her, be she in ever so humble a position in life. She has not shirked her responsibilities and is trying to raise them as well as she can. Often the foreign mother will face difficulties here that would make many of us shrink. I wonder, if we as a people, realized that each one of these little ones, is a separate entity, an existence of its own, and it is up to us to make good, honest citizens of them, and keep up the high standard our country has been proud to possess.

What brave mothers our early frontiers' women were! How they taught and worked to bring forth a brave, strong, clean class of children, and what unsurpassed difficulties they overcame! And we women are living in more comfortable homes, rearing our children with less physical difficulties in consequence.

The mother who, in this day and age stands with a forest of young lives around her accepting her responsibilities, who does the best she can preparing her little ones to make unselfish men and women, is the world's greatest blessing. It is not easy to keep house and rear children but no family or nation ever came to greatness through ease. There is physical agony, mental torture, desperate weariness and much heartache as well as a sense of fulfillment and the happy mother love, of which the childless know nothing. Teach the child the laws of personal purity, above all exemplify in your life what you would have the child become. Nagging and scolding, destroy the child's finer feelings and you will have an impudent child of it.

When the little mind is forming beneath the mother's heart is the time for her to occupy herself with every uplifting, intellectual pursuit that is in her power. To try to banish all hatred, worry and unprofitable thoughts from her mind. Put your best thoughts on the immediate work that calls to you as necessary and be sure it is worth thought if it is worth doing.

I knew a mother who laughingly told me how easily she could fool her husband by taking small amounts from her husband's pockets, at odd times when he did not know it. He kept her very short of money when she needed it most. When the little son arrived and grew older—he was a very dishonest child not only by taking things from others but was very untruthful. We are compelled to say in the face of such evidence, that motherhood has all to do with civilization. It is a great privilege to add to the happiness of another. Where is there greater opportunity for this than in the home.

Then why should so many mothers shirk the duties of domestic affairs. The woman who has children wonders what she lived for before she had them.

The woman who will not have children because she says "They are such a care" and she wants to have a good time," is vulgar and selfish. Neither is the woman to be respected, who doesn't mind having them, because the stork is popular. Home is the place for all the real joys of life.

Blessed is the child who knows no fear of his mother and puts his faith in her advice. We wonder, many of us, just what the mother gets out of all this hard work, the unending effort, the sacrifice and pouring out of love and sympathy, the sleepless nights and untiring patience, that the mother with a large family and limited means must continually exert, to make a success of her calling. I know no better answer than "good children." A knowledge of trying to do your best.

Mrs. Ruth Bullard.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

NEW YORK-PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.—Conference met at Scranton, Penn., on Saturday and Sunday, March 1, 2, 1913. Officers elected were President; Archibald D. Angus; Counselors to the President, Walter W. Smith and Ephraim Squire, secretary, Herman Schwartz; treasurer, John Zimmermann, Sr.; representative on the Library Board, Anna Zimmermann.

Bishop John Zimmermann, and Archibald D. Angus and Benjamin R. McGuire, counselors, were sustained, and delegates to the general conference were chosen.

Notable among the events of the conference were the dedication of the newly built Scranton church and the ordination of Bro. John R. Lentell to the office of elder.

The completion of the church meant the realization of a hope long cherished by the Scranton saints that they would sometimes own a house of their own, dedicated to the Lord, where they might gather and do him service. Great indeed was the rejoicing and gratitude that were manifested and many were the prayers and testimonies of his mercies. The district now includes six branches with a membership of nearly 800.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE.

The following resolutions of sympathy were drafted by the Doctrine and Covenants Class of which Bro. Gaultier was a member and were adopted by the Star of Bethlehem Sunday school of Lamoni, Iowa, at its regular session on March 16, 1913.

Inasmuch as death has again invaded our midst and removed from our class and school our worthy brother, Lewis Gaultier, aged 95 years. We, therefore, feel to express our sorrow for the loss thus sustained, and extend to his aged companion and children our sincere sympathy in their hour of sorrow and trial.

Bro. Gaultier was a devoted follower of Christ, a lover of the children of God, a faithful father, and an exemplary member of society, a lover of the Sunday school and of little children.

Therefore, we feel that he has indeed merited the great reward offered to the faithful, namely, to come forth in the resurrection of the just.

Ruby E. Baggerly, Sec.

THE VOICE OF JUDGMENT.

Great has been the sorrow and mourning in various parts of the land in consequence of the loss of life through tempest, flood, and fire. The sympathy of the world is extended to the survivors of these disasters, not only in sentiment but in material assistance. Following such calamities it is natural to count the loss of life and property though it perhaps does not occur to many that there is any gain to be considered.

Men's souls are stirred by such disasters as recently occurred at Dayton and Omaha, and upon earlier occasions at San Francisco, Galveston, St. Pierre, and other places, and questions are frequently asked relative to such events, such as: Are they the result of the operation of fixed laws, or are they but the happenings of chance? Is there within or behind the natural elements any intelligent power, either good or bad, by which they are impelled in their movements? If there be any such intelligent power what may be the reason for the terrible disasters wrought by the elements? These are questions which are not easily solved, nor is it expected to solve them here, though perhaps a little light may be thrown upon them.

The Bible student and believer will hardly question the thought that God exercises controlling power over the whole world and that he "ruleth in the kingdom of men," while the student of history does not have to look far to discover that there has been an intelligent design by which the destinies of men and nations have been shaped. It is not to be taken for granted however that God is the prime mover in every event that transpires, for some of them have their origin in the mind of man, while others may be attributed to spirit forces other than those of God, of whose existence the world has abundant evidence.

Through his God-given agency man is permitted to choose for himself the course he will follow, and God does not arbitrarily stand in his way unless his actions are such as to deny others the rights which he himself possesses, when God may intervene, not for the purpose of taking away his agency, but for the purpose of maintaining the agency of multitudes of others. For this reason God has either permitted or brought about the downfall of nations who in their oppressions have brought the people under bondage, bondage which in some cases has been of a moral and spiritual nature rather than of physical slavery. The accumulated sins of generations have brought their harvest of disaster upon a nation, sometimes with a suddenness that gave no warning, under the law that "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Christ gave an instance of this in his statements to the Jews whom he reproved for their sins, pointing out their disposition and determination to persecute and kill the prophets whom he would send unto them, saying that upon them should "come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias . . . all these things shall come upon this generation." The desolation that was decreed and which came upon them was not the result of their own sins alone but the sins of their fathers also which they continued by perpetuating them. The sins of a man or a nation may accumulate until they result in suffering and sorrow in varying degrees, or even to destruction, which usually of necessity involves the innocent with the guilty.

The Bible teaches that there are two great spiritual powers contending for supremacy over man and the world, and that man through his agency can yield himself either to the government of God through obedience to his laws which are just and good, or to the government of Satan by following after his leading which is always opposed to God. Man is free to choose, though he must accept the consequences of his choice, of which God has fully advised him, and the results of that choice will effect his children and those who come after him.

God's hand is over his children to protect and prosper them so long as such protected prosperity proves a blessing to them, but when the powers of intelligence and wealth are used by man for the purposes of oppression, denying his fellowmen the privileges of life unrestrained, then God cannot consistently continue to prosper and protect, any more than a father would continue to furnish his son unlimited means who used them for immoral and criminal purposes. In such instances prosperity proves a curse rather than a blessing because it aids in the accomplishment of sin.

Paul speaks of Satan as being "the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience." (Ephesians 2:2). Through the disobedience of our first parents Satan gained power in the world, and that power is lessened or increased according as men obey or disobey the laws of God. Inspired instruction says, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you," and an observance of the principles of justice and equity among men will deny him the power to work in their midst; but when men walk in Satan's ways, choosing to follow him, the Spirit of God finds no place in their midst and the field is left free to the adversary to come in and work his will. He has power over the natural elements and controls them in such a way as to complete his own purposes—the destruction of humanity.

For decades past the larger concerns of business have been permitted to crush out their weaker competitors. Justice and right have been in numerous instances denied to the people by corrupt judges and legislatures and other officials. The hands of the oppressors have been fostered and upheld by the powers which have been appointed to protect the weak. The poor have cried out against the extortionate hand which has taken from them their homes and their food. Immorality in its most degraded forms has been permitted free hand almost without protest, until it has had to reach out and take by force thousands of pure and innocent girls in order to meet its insatiate greed for lust and money, and the cry of multitudes of these innocent victims has ascended to God unheard by man. All these things, and many others, the nation has permitted to exist, men have been sowing to the wind and need they be surprised if they reap the whirlwind? Will God forever permit these things?

The voice of judgment is the voice of nature, the voice of God, declaring that there has been transgression of nature's laws and the laws of God, and warning men of the judgment to come. It is God's protest. It turns men, if heeded, from the path of evil and points them to righteousness and love. It is time that the nation aroused itself to a full realization of the evils which exist in its midst, and hasten the work of cleansing if it would avoid greater calamities. More innocent girls are ensnared each year into lives of shame, and to deaths a thousand times more bitter, than all the victims of tornado and flood; more lives are wrecked and brought to drunkards' graves than are killed in all the national calamities; yet the nation takes little cognizance of them, and permits the work of daily enslavement and destruction to go on. Must God keep silence, or must he not permit the hand of judgment to warn men of the terribleness of these things? The welfare of thousands, yes millions, living and unborn, is at stake, and shall God be indifferent thereto, and permit the conditions which must inevitably lead them down to destruction, to remain without his protest and intervention? Hardly.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

EXTENDING THE CHURCH ORGANIZATION.

The organization of the church on April 6, 1830, must be understood in the sense that organization was begun at that time. A system had been outlined and provision made for various classes of officers some of them limited in number and others unlimited, but the original organization was effected with only six persons, not enough to fill the quorums which were limited in number.

At this time the highest office held was that of elder and this was held by two of the six, viz., Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith, and the history continues the account of the occasion of organization as follows: "We now proceeded to call out and ordain some others of the brethren to different offices of the priesthood, according as the Spirit manifested unto us; and after a happy time spent in witnessing and feeling for ourselves the powers and blessings of the Holy Ghost, through the grace of God bestowed upon us, we dismissed with the pleasing knowledge that we were now individually members of, and acknowledged of God, 'The church of Jesus Christ,' organized in accordance with commandments and revelations given by him to ourselves in the last days, as well as according to the order of the church as recorded in the New Testament."

Missionary work was soon started and carried on to an ever increasing extent, and as new members were brought into the church, some were ordained to the different offices as the Spirit indicated, and took up the work. One of the places early visited was Kirtland, Ohio, where the church was strengthened by the addition of Elder Sidney Rigdon, an independent minister, and almost his entire congregation. Elder Rigdon had already been preaching many of the doctrines, which he found were held by the new church; and which were held by no other organization. A branch of the church was organized here which ultimately became for a time the headquarters of the church.

HIGH PRIESTS ORDAINED.

"On the sixth of June (1831) the elders from the various parts of the country where they were laboring came in, and the conference before appointed convened at Kirtland, and the Lord displayed his power in a manner that could not be mistaken. The man of sin was revealed, and the authority of the Melchisedec priesthood was manifested, and conferred for the first time upon several of the elders. It was clearly evident that the Lord gave us power in proportion to the work to be done, and strength according to the race set before us." Hist. Vol. 1, pp. 192.

With the extension of the church work, and with increased opposition of the spiritual forces of evil, it became necessary that greater power and authority should be given, and in this account is briefly recorded the reception of the authority which is understood to belong to the high priesthood, and Lyman Wight writing of the occasion says that "the first high priests were ordained."

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

Joseph Smith was called and ordained president of the high priest-hood at a conference of high priests, elders and members, held at Amherst, Ohio, Jan. 25, 1832, and was again acknowledged in that office by a general council of the church at Independence, Mo., April 26, 1832, and on March 18, 1833 were the two counselors to the president ordained. They were Frederick G. Williams and Sidney Rigdon, who had been previously called by revelation for that position.

TWELVE APOSTLES CHOSEN.

Not until February 14, 1835, was the office of apostles which had been provided for in the beginning, filled. In harmony with a revelation given before the organization of the church, and under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit which was in their midst, twelve men were selected and ordained to the apostleship. The special duties of the twelve apostles were stated in a revelation: "The twelve are a traveling, presiding high council, to officiate in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven, to build up the church and regulate all the affairs of the same in all nations."

SEVENTIES CHOSEN.

After the apostles had been set apart, a selection was made of a number of men who were ordained to the office of "Seventy" and the First Quorum of Seventy was organized, "according to the visions and revelations which I have received." Of the duty of the Seventy the revelation says: "The seventy are to act in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the twelve, or the traveling high council, in building up the church, and regulating all the affairs of the same, in all nations."

OTHER OFFICERS.

In addition to these already noted, bishops had been ordained whose duties were to care for the temporal concerns of the church, such as holding the real estate, handling the finances; and also to act as judges in cases of difficulty between members, or in cases of transgression of the laws of the church. Each bishop is assisted by two counselors. A high council composed of twelve high priests, presided over by the presidency of the church had also been organized on February 17, 1834, which constituted a judicial body having supreme appellate jurisdiction, and in some cases original jurisdiction, in deciding cases of difficulty and transgression, and also in interpreting the law; and the law says that if there is not sufficient written in the Scriptures to warrant a clear interpretation, the president may enquire of the Lord and receive divine instruction.

DISTRIBUTION OF POWER.

The presidency being composed of three men gives no one man in that quorum absolute power of control. Here is a wise distribution of the ruling power of the church which as long as the law is followed prevents any man from becoming a dictator.

But it is possible that the three might operate together to arbitrarily control matters, but this is rendered impossible by the provision of the law that the quorum of the twelve apostles is made equal in power to the quorum of the presidency. The law says, "They form a quorum equal in authority and power to the three presidents previously mentioned."

But the full power of the church is not vested alone in these two quorums, for the law also makes the quorum of Seventy equal to each of the other two. "And they form a quorum equal in authority to that of the twelve especial witnesses, or apostles just named."

The wisdom of the law does not even stop there, for while the ruling power is so thoroughly distributed among these three quorums it is further provided that they shall be amenable to the whole body of the church in general assembly for their official acts. "And in case that any decision of these quorums is made in unrighteousness, it may be brought before a general assembly of the several quorums, which constitute the spiritual authorities of the church."

Those occupying in these three leading quorums are appointed to care for the spiritual affairs of the church, and have no control over temporal concerns, except in an advisory way or upon appeal. The temporal concerns of the church are directly under the control of the bishops, one of whom is a presiding bishop, for the church and who is the trustee of church property. Thus the one means through which ambitious men always seek to gain and exercise rule over their fellowmen, viz., material wealth, is placed in other hands than the leading spiritual authorities of the church. Here is a distribution of power so delicately arranged that its parallel can not be found in any other organization.

Had selfish ambition been the inspiring motive of Joseph Smith in the establishment of the church, there would have been no such distribution of power, but he had no such ambition and died a poor man. His son, the present president of the Reorganized Church after serving the church as president for fifty-three years is a poor man. In comparison with these almost every other religious leader has become wealthy, and some millionaires.

No one man can lead the church astray, nor can any one quorum, and only when the church as a whole has become darkened through transgression, and indifferent to the law as given, is there danger of apostasy. Every safeguard necessary has been given, which proves the divinity of the organization.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

On the morning of March 26th our Sunday-school superintendent gave a good talk on Easter, and Bro. Archibald delivered an excellent discourse on the resurrection. The evening sermon the same day was delivered by Bro. Geo. Reeves his subject being the regeneration.

March 30th was Cradle Roll and parents' day at Sunday-school and a good attendance enjoyed an appropriate program. One little boy, the babe of Mr. and Sr. Rodkins, was blessed under the hands of Bro. Archibald and added to the Cradle Roll. A noted feature of the program was a talk by Sr. S. R. Burgess, her theme being, to live so as to be in a position to go to God ourselves in prayer, not needing anyone on earth to intercede for us.

The morning sermon on "God is love," delivered by Bro. E. C. Bell was much enjoyed. His text was John 3:16; all the musical numbers of which Bro. Bell has charge were appropriate to the theme.

A most edifying and encouraging discourse was delivered in the evening by Bro. Archibald on "Life as it now is and the Life that is to come."

Elizabeth Patterson.

CORRESPONDENCE

ISLAND OF NIAU, South Pacific Ocean, Mar. 3.

Dear Folks in America—After a long time I am going to write again; the last time I wrote was just a few weeks after we lost our little boy, it is now about five months since, and while we still miss him and mourn for him yet that terrible feeling of desolation has somewhat lifted and we are taking more heart interest in the church work; one reason is we left Tahiti the scene of his sickness and place of burial and are now among the low islands; came here to Niau a little before Christmas and received a warm welcome from the saints, the president of the branch turned himself and family out of their house for us, and right in our front yard is the large assembly house built for the conference two years ago; it is so cool in comparison with our iron roofed house that we take our work and stay there the most of the time.

It is here that I am writing now beside the raised niau flaps that serve as doors and windows overlooking the ever moving ocean. Between me and the ocean is a native woman shelling the dried coconuts out of their cups ready for the market. Niau is not a pearl diving island but they raise a lot of coconuts and make kava. There are so many pigs running loose that they have to dry the nuts upon high racks. They first husk them leaving on a strip with which to tie them together then after splitting them they are suspended in bunches over the drying racks for a few days until they curl from the shell, then the women and children, and men too sometimes, finish shelling them and after another day or so of drying they are ready for the market. They get about seven cents a kilo, or two pounds.

We have been very busy in church work since coming to this island helping the saints get ready for the April conference together with our regular work. We got out three matutu's, I preparing one on Book of Mormon and Charlie two from the Bible, I spent two or three weeks making charts for them. We find our post-card projector a great help in making pictures; we find a small picture of what we want enlarge it upon the screen and outline it, then in the day time fill it in; it works fine; of course it would not look very well executed to artists in America, but to the untrained eye of the natives they are pretty fine. My matutu is divided into three parts, the first part is entitled "Joseph Smith The Seer," the second is "The office of a Seer, and The Urim and Thummim," the third part is "The Work accomplished by the Seer," and is founded upon those verses in 2nd Nephi, "For Joseph truly testified, saying: a seer shall the Lord my God raise up, who shall be a choice seer unto the fruit of my loins." References are taken from the Bible and D. C. It is a whole evening's work to recite. On the chart I have Joseph that was sold into Egypt, Joseph the Seer, our Joseph Smith, Lehi and his son Joseph, Metuaro to represent the Lamanites in this part of the world, and an Indian to represent the Lamanites in America, then the breastplate with the Urim and Thummim is pictured, the Book of Mormon and the Bible separately and then together, also the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon. The hymns also, four of them, were composed for the occasion.

It is quite a lot of work to get ready but it will be recited before several hundred of the natives at conference time and we find that they learn much quicker and remember longer if they have it pictured before their eyes. They are all finished now and learned and we are all ready to go—are just waiting for the vessel to take us. It is considerable work to get ready for conference, (for the natives I mean), to memorize all the class exercises, for the Sunday school entertainment, the Sunday school lessons for the yearly review, the Religio lessons for the review, beside the matutu's. Then the ordinary work of making new clothes, and as the whole family goes, sewing and weaving hats is quite an item. The hats especially are a lot of work; they gather a tall reed split one side and flatten it carefully then with a dull piece of steel scrape off all the green on both sides washing it in water during the process leaving just a thin fiber which when dry is like pure white satin, they split it fine and braid it; if you folks want a beautiful hat gather your squash vines before the frost nips them and make it just as I have written. The natives say that squash vines are ever better than the "pia" that they use, have more of a luster.

We spent Christmas here. I had been feeling so glum that I was in hopes we would be at sea until it was over but we got here right in the midst of preparations, and they were so glad to see us that I felt that I must make an effort to respond to their expectations; in their exercises the whole branch takes part, and consequently leaves no one for an audience, and so our arrival made somebody to perform for. We were generously remembered at their tree. Their Christmas offering amounted to twenty-three dollars. They baked fourteen hogs for the feast, not little ones either; it sounds rather gluttony I know. I could not help but compare our feast with the dinners in America; there were about 106 sat down to the tables spread with leaves; at each place was a loaf of bread and a stack of pork which all they had. After dinner several boxes of mangoes which we brought from Tahiti with us were distributed.

A week or two later we had a more elaborate feast following a wedding. The next day the same couple were baptized, and last Sunday another couple were baptized the second governor of the island and his wife, a promising couple. A number of others are waiting until they can get the consent of their parents to get married and then they will be baptized. We are stirring them up, there are seven or eight couples here in Niau living together unmarried, nearly all of them the children of the saints. We feel that we are having a good influence with them and they all seem willing to make an effort to free themselves. Some of them have to go to other islands to get their parents, consent and so have been content to let the matter wait, and it seems to make no difference to them until they want to join the church and then they bestir themselves to get married. We are having good interest at the meetings and teachings.

At one prayer meeting I had a peculiar experience. The leader of the meeting requested that the special thought in their prayers should be that God would send his Spirit among them, and in all their testimonies they were wondering why it was that they did not have more spiritual power among them. I arose to bear my testimony as usual and was talking along when I seemed to be lifted up as it were in mind and body and I began to talk fast, it seemed as though my tongue was controlled by some one else and I did not have to think at all; what I said during that time was exhorting them to cast away from among them their evil customs, and then they would be ready to ask for the Holy Spirit and receive it, and not to be content with the place and with the portion that they had already obtained for the length and breadth, height and depth of this work lay yet before them, and not to give the greater part of their mind and strength to the things of this world but to leave off those things, give more thought to the work of the Lord. I cannot remember just all that I said but that was the import; when I had finished I sat down sort of dazed and weak in body. I could see that the natives were affected, meeting was closed right after; that night and all the next day that same influence was with me. At the next meeting all who talked spoke of what was said, whether or not they noticed anything out of the ordinary, I do not know.

We enjoy our work among them and I would rather be here working among them than any other place I know of. It is a great privilege to be given the opportunity to work where I feel that of all places I am best fitted to occupy, not but that I might be better fitted to work here. We can only pray that the Lord will bless us above our deserts for the work's sake. The natives of this island are anxious that we come back here after conference and stay a long time with them, I would like to for my part. This is one of our largest branches.

I am devising continually in my mind how this people can best be helped and I can see no way that a new generation can be started aright except the children be taken away from their home influences for the greater part of the time; if it could be possible that we have a school established that would take the children in their infancy almost and train them up through the different stages of youth perhaps some of them might be saved from adultery, as it is not one single one that I know of has escaped—a terrible condition of affairs I know, and I do not believe it will ever be different preaching and talking. I am going to talk over the matter with our co-laborers when we meet at the conference, together with Bro. Pitt and wife. The natives would be glad to help any project that would benefit their children.

After we lost our boy I was a little fearful what effect it might have upon the natives in regard to myself, whether or not they would blame me, but they do not seem to, and we are frequently embarrassed to know how to refuse their proffered children without hurting their feelings. If they could only all be taken and brought up under right influences.

A vessel is here on its way to Tahiti, I will finish this and send it along, it will probably be the last chance before we go to conference. We have heard that Bro. Pitt and wife are in Tahiti and were gladly received by the natives there. We have not met them yet nor will we until we meet in Hao. At the conference we expect quite a large gathering, the saints are looking forward to the meeting with the patriarch with great anticipation, and so are we. About eighty or more of us will go from this island. I do not expect to derive much pleasure on the voyage, with crowded deck—only a sail vessel, and a distance of 350 miles. We only hope we will have favorable winds and a hapless passage. The vessel is about to go, will write of the conference later on. I hope the coming conference in America will show growth and prosperity along all lines. We will always be glad to hear from our friends in America.

Your sister in the faith,

Editor Ensign—When we are enabled to discern the signs of the times and see the latter day prophecies and promises being fulfilled we are built up in the most holy faith, possessing an undecidable testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel.

Times are becoming more perilous, pestilence, disaster and suffering are abroad in the land, but we, as the people of God, have the promise that the scourges will pass us by if we seek to stand in holy places. If there ever was a time when we should put on the whole armour of God and be diligent, careful and prayerful it is at the present time.

It means a great deal to us to become acquainted with the Lord and have him for our friend. He can and will supply our every need if we will but call upon him and keep his words.

When we have found a good friend among men and he has proven that he is our friend indeed, we desire to cultivate this friendship that it may develop to the greatest extent possible; we love such a friend almost as we love our own body, but earthly friends often disappoint us. Not so with our heavenly Father, his love is never withdrawn from his children, we may withdraw from his ways and stray into forbidden paths, but his love has not grown cold to usward. The man who puts his trust in the Almighty One will never suffer loss. It is nice to have many earthly friends, and the man who has many friends is blessed indeed, but twice blessed is he that has the Lord for his friend.

We who have, and do know him, let us cultivate the knowledge we have that our knowledge may increase and that we shall continue to have the Lord for our neighbor and friend. We thus may become the friends of God as one of old, who walked with God and was called the friend of God, and he was not because God took him.

Dear Ensign:—It will probably be most interesting to ENSIGN readers to hear of the cyclone and its terrible work as told through personal experience, hence the following will be in sort of story form and given as the writer witnessed it.

The choir was practicing in the church on Easter Sunday in the afternoon. The temperature had been rising all afternoon and about five o'clock became quite sultry. About this time the clouds so darkened the sky that it became necessary to light the lights and soon it turned so warm that the men began to open the windows. Suddenly during a pause in the singing one of the brethren noticed the peculiar appearance of the clouds in the west and went to the window. Others followed and as they looked to the southwest they were exceedingly alarmed to see a great gray whirling cloud lowered to the earth swirling with great speed toward the church. There was a cry, "To the basement, here comes a twister," and the men at the window keeping up the cry sped toward the stairs taking the others with them. There were about twenty saints in the church and they lost no time in getting to the basement.

Before making his flight to the more protected regions below, the writer, overcome with a desire to see a real cyclone, hastened to the west window and opened it. He will not soon forget the sight that he beheld. The great dark clouds seemed to lower almost to the earth at a point in the southwest only a few blocks away. At the centre of this mass of churning, smoky billows a great, blurred gray cloud projected to the earth like an enormous, greedy paw sweeping up into itself all that lay before it, for large, dark objects were mixed in the cloud and soaring about it. The noise it made was an awful grinding roar that made one shiver.

It did not take so long to get this picture thoroughly into the curious brain of the onlooker as it does for him to write it. And he was not inclined to inspect it long. His stay at the window resembled the pause of a frightened deer; in fact the first glimpse of the terrible thing sent him to the basement at full speed in a glorious panic for it was coming at "pell mell" speed directly toward the church and him. He no sooner reached the basement than things began rattling on the windows; then came crashes of glass, bangs and jolts, upstairs and all about us, increasing rapidly to a terrific, deafening roar. A few of the basement windows crashed in, and the little group of saints waited, stunned, for that which seemed most surely come and yet there seemed to be a feeling of security amid the terror of it all, but soon the awful noise dwindled to silence and only the cries in the basement could be heard. We knew then that we were safe and hastened out to behold our ruined church, for we had expected to find it almost a wreck, but we were indeed happy to find only the windows broken, the chimney down, some plaster off and a few minor damages done. It was coated with mud however and the lawn was strewn with debris.

As we looked about us there was but little that we could recognize of the scene of five minutes before. It was like suddenly awakening in one of those ancient ruined cities of which some of us have seen only the pictures. There were people running about terror-stricken and bleeding. At the top of the basement wall where a house had been could be seen the heads of a fortunate few. Some could be seen extricating themselves from an almost crumpled street car and all about us were terrified cries, more especially toward Twenty-fourth and Lake streets, where the most deaths and injuries occurred. This was one block south of the church. The cyclone had turned toward the east as it neared this point and the church was left on the edge.

The streets were piled with trees and wreckage. Straight east from the church on Ohio Street the houses were stripped of their roofs and porches and were lying a hopeless mass of rubbish piled against each other. Our fears began to rise for some of the saints who lived in that neighborhood. Soon some of them entered the church disheveled and drenched. Their houses had been destroyed but they had been uninjured and we were relieved to see them safe. Three of the saint's homes near the church were destroyed completely and most of their furniture and it seemed a miracle that they were spared. Six other saint's homes in other parts of the city were also destroyed and in some instances only a few articles of furniture and some clothing were recovered. But how thankful we were to find that none of the saints were harmed beyond a few scratches and bruises.

One saint's home in which were five young folks, the parents were at a friend's house a block or so away, was turned completely over; the roof blown away; the floor was stripped of its partitions and fortunately a door jam so propped up one side of the floor as to form a sort of tent over the young folks. The door jam was their salvation. They were wedged in among the furniture and debris so that they had to be pulled out. They were unharmed except for a few scratches and bruises. The house was lifted over fifty feet from the foundations and broken as easily as though it had been made of cardboard and was left a flat mass of kindling wood and it was only a miracle that kept all those five lives from being destroyed as was practically every article of furniture in the place. Another saint's home was entirely crushed in except the kitchen in which the brother had collected his four little boys about him.

The cyclone had struck the city in the southeast section and ploughed a path four or five blocks wide straight north-west through the city, bringing sudden destruction to the work that it had taken men so many years and so many millions of dollars to plan and build up. Frail and unimportant indeed are the material things in life that so easily perish but which we twine our hearts about, and sad indeed are we when such destruction comes if we have not been building a spiritual indestructible refuge in which all earthly losses are as a cloud which, seeking to hide the sun, is dissipated by its rays and melts into its material nothingness.

The saints who suffered loss of homes were Bro. S. E. Marmoy, A. D. Phillips, Chas. Trusler, J. H. Driscoll, Jesse Johnson, Robert Black, Mrs. Mary Black, Pearl Hill, Elizabeth Keck, Robert Eden.

We feel that the Lord has spared them all to us for an allwise purpose and we give him thanks from our hearts.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., March 3.

Dear Ensign:—As I do not often write for your columns, if you will grant me space I want to speak of a recent visit to Atchison Kansas my old home; where I first heard the glad message of the gospel restored. I was called there to attend the funeral of an aunt, who was associated with the Methodist people, she was always kind to me, but she would not permit me to even talk with her about our beautiful gospel, this often caused me pain and regret, and what seemed sadder still was the great ignorance of the minister who officiated at her obsequies. At the grave he prayed thus "We now commit this body of our sister to the earth, dust to dust; ashes; until the great and general resurrection of the dead, when the sea shall give up her dead," etc., Thus by his prayer he invoked upon her the wrath of God, and prayed that she might sleep through the great millennial reign of Christ, while his saints are rejoicing in his presence. Is this not pitiful? Such ignorance, and under the full blaze of gospel light!

Well, I am glad that I have something better and brighter to mark my memory of that visit, I refer now to a short visit with some of the saints who helped me and was kind to me when I was a babe in the work, and who were ready to excuse me when I blundered, in my endeavors to help this work, while my memory lasts they will have a warm place in my affections, then there were others whom I have not known so long, yet I believe them true and good, their friendship is prized above earthly treasures with me.

I want to speak also of the great improvement I observed in their singing under the splendid management of Sr. McNichols. She is doing a magnificent work, in creating a splendid choir, and I felt in my heart while I listened to them sing that largely through that choir the Atchison branch would receive an impetus or an uplift that will be felt for good farther and longer than they can now believe, may the good work go on in my desire. My heart is with them, if I cannot be in person, Bro. Cool is a good man well spoken of, I hope they will all support him, that the work may not be hindered.

In bonds,

C. E. Guinand.

P. S. I have just heard that the Atchison saints have purchased the Christian Science church, cor 9th and Santa Fee St. This is a good move, a nice brick church more centrally located, will certainly give prestige or bring the work into public notice. C. E. G.

Provo, Utah, March 3.

Dear Ensign:—We are trying to keep the flag flying, or the ENSIGN at the mast head, so that saint and sinner may know what we stand for, that is the Christianity of Christ as found in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, (original editions). We are willing to measure ourselves and all revelation (purported) since the death of the martyr, by that accepted as revelation before his death. Those who will not accept the original revelation of latter days as given in these books, to test all subsequent revelation and teaching by, are evidently not Latter Day Saints. They beg the whole question of Mormonism. They would rather test the original revelation by subsequent counterfeits, than test the new issues by the government (God's). I feel a little as though one could "chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight," when that one really knows the truth, and the fineness of the counterfeit. Give me the Bible (Inspired Translation), Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, and I can say not boastfully, but truthfully in my feelings, I fear no Brighamite foe. I would rather "lay the axe at the root of the tree," than waste time with a multitude of shoots or branches. I don't ask for a whole library to meet this fraud and deception. Just compare the counterfeit, Utah Doctrine and Covenants, Pearl of Great Price etc., with the genuine and original money, the three books aforesaid.

If Joseph Smith, Brigham Young or any one else taught or teaches any other gospel than that originally received by the church, they will be judged by the original, we know that Brigham Young did, and the testimony of these criminals need not weigh, as might that of honest, law abiding men, against a man who was never proven guilty of law breaking; never confessed to doing it either, as some of the so called prophets, seers and revelators of Utah have. "By their fruits shall ye know them," and "The inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion, . . . and they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known." Doc. and Cov. 64:7. "And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow, for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the house-tops, and their secret acts shall be revealed." Doc. and Cov. 1:1. Others may meet the issue between Josephite and Brighamite as they wish or like. We have our notion and conclusion after so long a time (two and a half years) in contact with the proposition, and will fight on the line we have marked out, whenever and wherever we have the enemy to meet.

Our experience we realize has been little in comparison with some; have wasted (?) more breath here over Saints than Mormons, but I have my convictions just the same as to how I shall deal with this issue wherever I may meet it. Had quite a successful meeting today in which I handled the matter according to my present view, using a chart adopted to my sermon and method. The meeting was new in every sense. It was exclusively Armenian. Had eleven of these people and some children to hear through an interpreter, one of their number who is more proficient in English than the rest. I was on my feet about two hours, as the interpreter together with the questions asked, occupied about half of the time. This is a different work and kind of success than Bishop Evans' (which I rejoice in) but to gain the ears and consideration of a new nation to this extent. I have worked quite faithfully for several months, the language barrier being quite an obstacle. The one who interprets is much more docile and teachable than at first contact. These people seem to be an honest, good hearted people. They have been oppressed and ruthlessly dealt with by the Turks, their language, nationality, and christianity rubbed out as much as possible. Most of them speak Turkish, only two or three, their own language (Armenian). There are several Mormon branches of them in Syria and Turkey, I am told. I do not think there are any better people among the Orientals than the Armenians, judging from my contact with them and some Syrians and Greeks. One remarked at the close of meeting, "well, I have come a long way to find the truth."

We shall do what we can while here, which may be right up to General Conference time, and then leave the work and field to whoever may be appointed to succeed us, that is for a time at least.

One of the young sisters said, "send a single missionary." I told her, yes and you saints will have to keep him, then you can court him. The Twelve please take notice, and pity on these single sisters, who must marry Mormons or remain as they are. But I think some of these families ought to be helped out of Utah. Oh, there is use for means, and those whose stewardships and callings are temporal, ought to delight to do their part, and all in their power.

Some of our dormant priests seem to be waking up. We hope they will come nobly and heartily to the rescue, from this on. We need workers who will never leave their post; fighters who will fight to a finish, be it death or life, victory or defeat, but the truth can never be defeated. And those who are on its side can never lose. Those who endure, stay with the battle, will surely win; each day brings the victory nearer, makes the triumph surer, and nothing can withstand our united effort. God will have respect to our firmness. I trust that many are developing the necessary soldierly qualities, and that our army in due time will be very strong, and very great in that sense at least. Peace and blessings upon all.

M. F. Gowell.

P. S. If one feels the need of a library to meet the issues in controversy with Bro. Chases' new book is quite a library of reference in one convenient loose leaf book. It is no harm to be equipped for emergency.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 13.

Editor Ensign:—All going about as usual with us, except that some of our number are making preparations to attend general conference and the conventions.

We were called to Malad last week end, Thursday rather, to officiate at the funeral of Wm. Morgan Evans, who died at the St. Marks Hospital, this city, Feb. 24th. About ten years since we performed the same office for his father, who, with his wife and some of the family were members of the church. Wm. M. Evans was a man of 34 years, and though he had not been baptized, he believed the work, and when we were called to administer to him, declared his determination to obey the work as soon as he was permitted to recover enough strength, but this was denied him. He leaves a wife and eight children.

The family were called to Malad with us, that we might furnish music as well as the sermon. The services were in the opera house and were largely attended. We held interesting series of meetings in the chapel, from Friday till Tuesday nights, and left Bro. J. C. Christensen to carry on the good work after we came away. We find much interest at Malad. May the Master give the increase.

Sincerely yours,

A. M. Chase.

Editor Ensign:—In making a criticism of the answer to the question as published in ENSIGN 20th inst., "When will Zion be redeemed?" I notice quotations from Doctrine and Covenants, and the answer of the writer says: "Doc. and Cov. 98:4, shows that it will be at a time that God's indignation is poured out upon all nations." After the above statement and quotations the answer is: "It is made clear that Zion will be redeemed when the saints are prepared to meet the conditions through obedience and faithfulness; including an observance of the laws of equality in temporal things, or at least a willingness to do so."

Now if we take the position that the redemption of Zion comes at the disrupting of nations, we must admit here is an incongruous statement in the last clause. For it would be foolishness upon the part of any to entertain a thought, that the civic governments of the world are governed by a providence, either of God or the devil, in their social and economic movements according to the diligence of a few poor Latter Day Saints in the manner of their living to a standard of morality.

Therefore in believing the first clause of the answer, we look for the disrupting of this Gentile government of the United States sufficiently to admit of the organization of the kingdom of Israel as a theocracy not amenable to any Gentile government.

This theocracy is the redemption of Zion and is not hastened neither delayed by the faithfulness or unfaithfulness of a few Latter Day Saints. We have noticed some, and the answer to the question in ENSIGN included, have placed the cart before the horse. The saints by a moral excellency will not bring about these conditions as referred to, neither hasten nor delay, but on the other hand, individually

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

WHAT IS IT?

M. H. Bond.

"And he said unto them, go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believed and is baptized shall be saved." etc., Mark 16:15, 16.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them." etc. Matt. 28:19. "And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, is more than whole burnt offerings and sacrifices." Mark, 12:38.

No attempt to prove that there has been in the past, and still is today, a world-wide misunderstanding, or a wide divergence of opinion and declaration by professed teachers or believers as to what really constitutes Christian baptism is necessary. Its mode of operation, or administration, its object, or even its necessity as a means of salvation having become, not only a question of disputations, but of doubt or open denial.

In view of these incontrovertible facts which religious history furnishes us, it would seem to be the part of wise caution to enquire, and if possible to ascertain, what was intended by the author of the Christian faith when he sent out his first authorized representatives with the commandment, or injunction to "teach all nations, baptizing them;" etc.

As to the visible form by which baptism may be properly expressed, understood, or conformed to, we have the statement by Dr. Smith 1st—"that baptism, properly and literally means immersion."—The language of the New Testament and of the early fathers sufficiently points to immersion as the common mode of baptism,"—and, we may add, that so far as the form or mode is concerned, that the figures in both Old and New Testament history, as well as the contention of many churches and theologians in succeeding times is, that the preservation of the form, is still necessary in order to fulfill the commandment.

That Saint Paul was, in his day, one of the best, if not altogether the best and most profound expositor of the real meanings of Christ's teachings, will not meet with serious opposition, we infer: but this will not prevent us from a grouping together of all the facts necessary to right conclusions as may be drawn from the teachings of all New Testament writers.

In 1st Cor. 12:13, we have the statement by Paul, that, "by one Spirit, are we all baptized into one body."

"One Spirit," does not permit other meaning or intent, than but one only. "One body," in order to preserve its identity may not assume different proportions or appearances, or the purposes for which he instituted it, when he declared, "I will build my church," may not be abrogated without an unwarrantable interference with the original plan.

In 1st Cor., 11:29, Paul, in speaking of the ordinance of the sacrament, says, "For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body."

Again, the attainment of a life that shall conform to the pattern set forth by Jesus Christ as recorded in the Scriptures can only be accomplished by an understanding and faithful observance of instruction as given by himself and those whom he elected to represent him; and among the first of its beginnings, we have this from St. Paul. "For ye are all the children of God, by faith in Christ Jesus, For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. 3:26, 27.

If this is true, baptism may not be safely rejected, or its true meaning be misunderstood.

If this be conceded, we may proceed to inquire as to the location of this "body," because, baptism into anything, or something which is not the body of Christ, but of a body or bodies of shape distorted, disfigured and unrecognizable as any counterpart of the original plan, might prove disastrous.

In this matter it would seem that none should be misled, save those whose imbibed traditions, or prejudices may have drawn them away from Bible teachings to the substitution of a more convenient or popular method of thought or service. To follow Paul, is, we think, to be preserved in this matter. 1st Cor. 27, 28

"Now ye are the body of Christ." Then follows a partial description in this matter which nothing but a failure to comprehend, or an unwillingness to recognize the word of the Lord will allow.—The "body," thus referred to, it will be noticed in Paul's opening address at the beginning of this chapter also, is designated by him as "the Church of God."

The object of this kind of an equipment in the "church of God," or "the body of Christ; is quite fully explained in Paul's letter to the Ephesian church, fourth chapter eleventh to fifteenth verses, and the popular and almost universal opinion that just such an organization has met in our day, should be noticed or taken into account as a potential reason for the universal and widespread demonstration of the fact that the "unity of the faith," has not been preserved or conserved, but that disunion and discord only mark the result of apostasy from the primitive order and a neglect to follow the pattern set by Jesus Christ when he said, "I will build my church."

Now to take up the thread of investigation as at the beginning, we must first allow that there is still a considerable recognition of practice as to the correct "Form" by which baptism is to be administered, but with a singular lack of affirmation as to its object, viz: the "remission of sins," leaving the explanation of the real utility of baptism as a "saving ordinance" of doubtful value, and perhaps the preparing of the way for an abandonment of the ordinance altogether in the not far distant future.

Our affirmation then, is, that there has been a serious abrogation or deflection from the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" by which Paul was made a "free man," and gives warrant for recognition upon the part of thinking people of its uselessness as a "saving ordinance," because of its failure to produce any practical results through its administration.

In the third chapter and twenty-first verse of his first letter we have the statement from the Apostle Peter:—

"The like figure, whereunto baptism doth also now save us, not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answering of a good conscience toward God."

Now the trouble, as we view it regarding this matter is largely a question as to what kind of a conscience we bring to bear upon this question.

"Conscience;" being so very largely a "creature of education," as all history affirms, it follows that our education being wrong, our conviction and action may partake of the same character. Having been "educated," that "baptism," is not a saving ordinance by our religious teachers, that "heaven is full of unbaptized believers or Christians," so, as in a thousand other matters has "conscience" moved mankind to war and strife, and a multitude of disastrous differences as pertaining to any question the truth about which, may only be determined by its sequence, or result, or the fruitage of a definite and demonstrably profitable character.

A believer in the "Dunkard" faith as understood by him in the reading of the "letter of the word" alone, makes answer to his conscience by a "triumphant immersion. The Baptist, because his sins have already been remitted, or pardoned; while our Disciple, or Christian friends immerse with an attenuated faith, and wavering conscience as to expediency under the old claim of its founders;—"for the remission of sins;" while thousands of others with untroubled conscience are resting under the conviction that pardon and full fellowship and acceptance with God, salvation from sin has been secured through the expediting process had at the "penitent forms," at popular revivals, thus being led, have logically concluded that "baptism" of any kind is largely if not altogether a superfluity, and thus conscience, is being educated away from the necessity of an obedience to the commandment of Jesus Christ.

Is then, immersion, or effusion or sprinkling, as practiced in the popular churches of the day followed by any clear and demonstrable signs of God's approval? Any indorsement through addition of spiritual light or power? Or is the more popular contention that the baptism of the spirit only, is necessary to salvation?

Popularly expressed, what is a "good conscience" anyhow? Why? It is that thing concealed about our system, and that belongs to our individual self only, which permits men to differ; go to war with one another; foment political and social discord,—religious strife and persecution, whose dynamic force has its voltage stored in what we have been led to believe to be the orders of our conscience.

Paul, at one time, "verily thought he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus Christ."

The great church of Rome cannot with truth or consistency be charged with solely a murderous spirit as we hold, because it has "delivered over to the buffetings of Satan" millions of men and women through the agency of the "Auto De Fe," or inquisitorial chambers, or elsewhere by fire or sword, and has, with what they honestly considered to be "a good conscience," sought to save the world from heresy that might engulf the world in an everlasting "hell fire" of a literal though almost indescribable sort.

What then is the remedy for the world's confusion and loss? Our answer should be God's answer. The gospel of Jesus Christ is the power that alone could have saved, or will save us from disaster.

Are we still unwilling to go back to the old way of access to it? Was it not the promise made by the Master long ago, to the true discipleship?

The truth as it alone reposes in the bosom of God must be our salvation. To "have the mind of Christ," is to know what God thinks about anything; and Christ is neither changed nor "divided," and it should not be wondered at if warring churches and divided, as Moshem, and other writers say they were in the day when Jesus said,—"Howbeit, in vain do ye worship, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men" are failing to hold the masses, or successfully challenge the attention and interest of thinking people to a "divided" Christ; at war with himself, so that, not only have "they parted his raiment, and for his vesture cast lots," but the spoilation or emasculation of "His body" which was, and still ought to be "the church" of his own building; a visible church to which we might point as a challenge and refutation of the claim of warrant for the strife and folly of the ages which a self or man-appointed leadership has brought us unto.

When the "infidels" and "unbelievers among the religious orders of the day who defend the popular and fashionable contentions of our present time are "converted" to Bible doctrine, or New Testament theology,—to a belief in God's unchangeable decrees—that Jesus Christ, the same, yesterday, today, and forever, is the one we ought to listen to,—That all of the promises are still "yea and amen" in him, as in days of old,—That the evidences or signs that indicated the presence and power of God with the true believer should be attested from heaven as in days of old,—when the originally patterned church, or "body of Christ" as restored in our day is presented, and is accorded a fair and candid attitude,—a scriptural and rational examination had; when Christian attitude and fair and honorable treatment of all these questions is had, then, and not till then, will the real understanding of, and union and fellowship with Christ, become a glorious reality.

To be "baptized into Jesus Christ," is the only "Christian baptism" possible by which we may rationally or Biblically attest its practicability or worth, and that can only, by any possible reasoning or proof which historical analysis or incontrovertible evidence adduce, be through the presence and power that belongs to the "one body" supplemented and attested by obedience to "one faith, one baptism" method.

Substitutes for "salvation" by other methods have been, are being, and will continue to be tried, and discarded as fast as the intelligence and honesty of the people will lead them to discover that so called "Christian" methods are not Christ-like, and that they have no warrant or indorsement of a defensible character from him, and that they have but little if any valid claim for the regeneration of the world that is superior to the ethical teachings of so called "heathen," or even agnostic teachers of our time.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

In answer to this I read Hebrews 5:9, "And being made perfect he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."

From these words we find that there is something for us to do to be saved. Let us see further. In James 1:20, we find these words: "But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed."

We find here then that there is a law and that if we are doers of it we will be saved. And as Jesus came to the earth to set up the kingdom of God, surely it has a law, for no kingdom can exist without law, and Jesus said in Matthew 6:33, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

So by obedience to this law we are saved—are rewarded according to our obedience to it.

In Christ's sermon on the mount he exhorted the people to observe this law, telling them to "Enter ye in at the straight gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. Because strait is the gate [one way] and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life and few there be that find it. (Matt. 7:13,14). Then for us to be saved is to first seek the kingdom of God; second, enter in by the strait gate which will make us members of that kingdom; third, obey all of its laws.

To get into this kingdom, or church, we must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ.

We find in reading the case of the jailer and his family. In Acts 16 the jailer asked the question of Paul and Silas, who were ministers for Christ: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" They answered, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house."

Now for them just to believe was not sufficient to save them. They had a work to do, for as Peter on the day of Pentecost when the question was asked the apostle, "What shall we do?" after they believed the teachings of them, and were desirous of being saved, answered: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Now this was a part of the law of that kingdom they had to comply with; not that the water washed their sins away, but the obedience to the law. Through obedience God re-mits the sins.

Now we find that Paul and Silas taught the jailer and his family these same things, for we find that they were baptized, (verses 32,33). Jesus answers this question also, as we read in St. John 3. In conversation with one of the rulers of the Jews; notwithstanding this man was counted as a saved man already, as some of our friends count themselves. Jesus said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (verse 5).

So Christ shows it to be impossible for us to be saved except we have been born of water first, and then of the Spirit. Now, Paul, Silas, Peter James and Christ all harmonize in their teachings of salvation.

As God through Christ gave the law by which all mankind could be saved, it was given with an if. Jesus said, "This doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:16,17).

We find in 2d John 9: "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." Except we are doers of his laws we are not his children, for Christ said, while upon the mount, in his sermon, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven: but he that doeth the will [law] of my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 7:21). From this reading we learn that we have to be doers of the law as well as hearers.

The Apostle Paul tells us what the gate of entrance is. Read Hebrews 6:1-3. He enumerates the principles as follows: Repentance, faith baptisms, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. Now these are the principles which will bring us to salvation. We cannot leave one of them out.

Christ makes plain the means of salvation in his commission to the apostles: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature: he that believeth [the gospel] and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16:15,16). Unless we have faith, repent of our sins, have been baptized by one who has been called of God by revelation, and ordained as was Aaron, (Heb. 5:4), and have hands laid on us for the gift of the Holy Ghost, we are not in a condition to be saved.

Christ said "I am the vine ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." (John 15:1-5). For us to know that Jesus is the Christ is by the Holy Ghost, (1 Cor. 12:3). If Christ be the vine then, we are the branches, we must know him. Except we are of the one vine (Christ) we cannot bear fruit as the vine. Except we have been grafted into Christ, we cannot be saved. We must be doers of his word we must bear fruit.

We find this in Eccl. 12:13,14. "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man, for God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."

As our friends tell, they are saved without baptism or the laying on of hands for the Holy Ghost, that is only hearing and obeying part of the law. We are not a branch of the vine unless we have been grafted into the vine.

Further on, in James 2:17,19,26. "Faith if it hath not works is dead being alone. Yea, a man may say, thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works. Thou believest that there is a God: thou doest well: the devils also believe and tremble. For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." This shows that faith alone will not save us. Read also James 1:22-25, Matt. 7:24,27; John 14:23,24.

Now in conclusion let me read what Paul said to the Galatian saints: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now, again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

May we all learn our duty to God and try and discharge it. Ever praying for the triumph of Zion.

YOUNG MAN, DON'T DRINK.

The young man who drinks strong liquor is like the commander of a fortified city who deliberately admits a known enemy within its walls.

Drink is more hostile and more deadly than any army. It has sent more men to destruction and death than have all the armies of the world. There is nothing in it. You can't gain by it; you may lose everything—health, position, reputation, self-respect, manhood, and soul which is the greatest loss. "A drunkard shall not inherit the kingdom of heaven."

The first drink admits a demon that every successive drink strengthens; until some day it may be strong enough to dominate and glut its ravenous appetite with your brain and blood. You may think yourself strong enough to resist taking too much. Don't deceive yourself about your strength, you know nothing about that until the test comes, and then it often too late. You may never be sure you have the strength to resist until you have asserted that strength by resistance. To resist once, or twice, or a dozen times, does not prove strength to resist always. It can be proved only by constant and unflinching resistance. Any man can resist sometimes. The only man who can have absolute confidence in his power to resist, is he who never drinks at all. If you have the strength use it, assert it now, one drink more is too much, be strong right now; it is your best chance.

Do not fall into dangerous delusions that only weak men over drink. Weak men do not, as a rule, over-do anything. It is the strong, self-confident man, who drinks as he does all else, with gusto and without fear, proud of his strength, who someday succumbs to the subtle, insidious poison that rots his body and palsies his brain.

Strong young man! If you can today mock at the assertion that one drink is too much, someday you may think the same of ten drinks, and later of twenty. And when that day comes the strength that could not resist one drink, before appetite was formed, will be but a straw in a whirlwind.

"If you have not the strength and sense to stop drinking right now, when will you have it? Will continued yielding give you added strength or better sense?"

When the ravelled nerves of a disordered stomach and the flacid tissues of a softened brain demand whisky will you, who could not resist when strength and sense were whole and craving was unknown—Will you be better able to resist then? It is not an abstruse question of pity, or ethics, or morality altogether; it is a simple question of common sense and health. That's why the "Word of Wisdom" was given by the Divine who foreknew the result.—Doc. and Cov. 86.

One does not need to become a drunkard in the gutter to be injured by whisky. It is poison even in small quantities. Few physicians prescribe it any more for any purpose except in hopeless cases to dull the sense at the approach of death. No physician of learning and honor administer it to the young in any case.

When impure, as most of the commercial whisky is, it is full of unknown dangers. When pure, it is more dangerous still. It is sometimes given to pups to stunt their growth and turn them into "freaks." The young man hoping for the highest possible mental and physical development should think seriously of this when tempted to put himself in the place of the pup.

Young man, don't drink! There is no good in it. The only possible result is hard to yourself and sorrow to those that love you best. The saloon man does not drink it as a rule, when treated in his own place of business he drinks a mineral water of some kind. It brings on "Bright's disease."

Refuse the first drink, or, if you have taken that or more, assert your strength now, and refuse to take another, and humble yourself in fasting and prayer before the Lord for strength, and the spirits of all dearest to you on earth or in heaven will lean and listen and smile.

Take it, and devils will laugh and leer and mock. God bless all the sons and daughters of Zion.

Yours in the gospel covenant and a believer in Section 86 Doctrine and Covenants.

A DYING EMPIRE.

Thirty-five years ago the Turkish Empire had territory in three continents amounting to 1,700,000 square miles, and a population of 42,000,000. In this short period she has grown rapidly and beautifully less. Her African domain has gone. It was her largest. England has Egypt, and Italy, this present year, sliced off Tripoli with its 1,100 miles of shore line. A serious loss this, with 875,000 square miles and 8,000,000 subjects.

The carving off her European possessions is finishing swiftly, in which the losses foot up 151,000 square miles and 11,000,000 people. The old Asiatic home remains with about 700,000 square miles and 23,000,000 subjects.

The symptoms of the sick man of Constantinople are very encouraging. The world will breathe freer when this ghastly, brutal and savage nation is no more. She never knew the appeal of reason, or conscience, or humanity. Glorifying lust and war, she has been the long terror and loathing of the nations. There are no mourners as she heads to doom.

Just seven centuries ago her virile progenitors came out of Persia and located in Asia Minor. They embraced Mohammedanism, whose crescent, sword and torch were congenial to native ferocity. Speedily they hewed and burnt their way to national organization, and in three hundred years, theirs was the mightiest power on earth. Europe's strongest nations feared and courted them. The new empire occupied one of the most favored regions in the temperate zone. It was an absolute despotism. Government was an armed camp, ruled by an irresponsible chief. Conquered territories were inned together with bayonets. It was triumphant barbarism. Civilization and the arts of peace—there were none. The nerves of the civilized world have long been familiar with the shock of its horrors. In every part of that groaning empire, there have been sickening butcheries, savage massacres, and fiendish cruelties. And now the nations hasten their war vessels, to protect helpless infancy and old age against the senseless fury of the heathen Turk. The gigantic old assassin responds only to the argument of force. The wrath of the twentieth century burns against him. The spirit of triumphant democracy pushes him off the globe. An aroused, long-slumbering divine justice is paying arrearsages to the arch criminal. So mote it be.

With the sudden spring of a tiger, the Balkan peoples have struck their old oppressor. The rapidity and brilliancy of their victories bring gladness and astonishment to the minds of men. Calamity thickens at multiplies into an inferno, as the Turk reels and staggers out of Europe. The volume of human distress, pain and anguish is terrible, indescribable, heart-rending. Such is the frightful cost of expelling the demon that has cursed Southwestern Europe for five hundred years.—W. R. L. Smith, Chapel Hill, N. C. in Biblical Recorder.

"Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded. Be afflicted and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your joy to heaviness. Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up."—James 4:8-10.

NOTE.—A careful reading of the question and answer as in Ensign for March 20th, says nothing of the disrupting, or destruction of governments. There is a difference between indignation upon the nations, and "the disrupting of this Gentile government." It is self-evident that if "Zion is this pure in heart" there can be no Zion until a sufficient body are at least prepared to be pure in heart in order to make it.—Editor.

GALES FERRY, COOK, Feb. 27.

Dear Ensign—It is with pleasant anticipation that we welcome you each week. Being among the scattered saints you are all the more dear to us. We take the Herald and Hope and also Autumn Leaves, and study the gospel quarterlies.

We have endeavored to keep the gospel before the people and have succeeded in getting a number interested.

Sunday night I took a number of church papers to a Mr. Shaffer's and read Sr. Alice Corson's article in Herald for Jan. 15. At the close of the interview he asked me to leave the papers which I gladly did. His son-in-law and daughter and wife listened attentively to my reading and I hope that the seed that is being sown may find good soil.

Bro. G. H. Gates of Providence, R. I. went with me to Mr. Shaffer about two weeks ago and they were favorably impressed with him. We expect him again March 9th. We as saints should remember that our church papers are supposed to be handed to those interested in the restored gospel and the articles which are written for publication should be of that character to enlighten and interest the seeker after truth.

Long drawn out proxy articles are seldom read by the seeker after truth or by saints either for that matter. What most interests me are the letters and those articles telling of the experiences of members that have been drawn into the church as Sister Corson was.

We have been reading Bro. Rannie's booklet "Marvelous Manifestations" and it is glorious to read of the wonderful works of God as recorded by Bro. Rannie. But if all the saints should write of the miracles and healings that they have seen it would make a very large book.

I have heard Bro. R. C. Evans relate of a sister being healed of cancer that isn't recorded in his autobiography. A Sister Atwell was healed of cancer in Providence. I was healed of appendicitis and my daughter of lockjaw. Bro. Gates was healed of scarlet fever in the evening and dismissed the doctor who told him that it would be two weeks before he could be around. But the next morning Bro. Gates dressed and went about his business, meeting the doctor on the street who seemed very much surprised.

I met a sister at our reunion who had been healed of hip disease? And her leg that had been shorter than the other was restored so that she walks like any other lady.

Also Sr. Gondolf of Providence told me that before coming into this church she had been seriously troubled by a large tumor on her side which was healed through the administration of the elders, though the best medical skill had done her no good and she was restored to good health. I am also acquainted with a sister that was restored to her reason instantly when she had been a raving maniac.

Brethren, we have that for which good old Roger Williams, John Wesley and all the righteous men who have gone before have longed to enjoy. The gospel of Christ restored by the angel of God. Let us therefore not be discouraged but press on and stand firm for the truth. And having done all to stand. And we may all be found clothed in clean linen pure and white having oil in our lamps so that when the bridegroom comes we may be allowed to go in with him to the feast prepared by our heavenly Father, in my prayer.

Your brother in the truth,

Thomas G. Whipple.

A REVIEW.

We have been instructed (though so late) by one of the Board that it would be well to write an article touching the work here, in Independence; so before we hand in our resignation, will try briefly to give a little review, and make a fair statement of some things that have been attempted, and in some cases, done.

We would like to say, first, however, as a parenthesis, that we were very glad to receive this instruction, and would like to make a counter suggestion, if we may, that in future the Board confer, at stated times, with its editors and perhaps the department superintendents for the purpose of mutual benefit, that the conditions might be talked over, their work outlined, not to place restrictions but merely as a guide in their special field of work. We know we would have had a clearer idea of what was expected of us if such had been done. We do not think any society is perfectly organized unless it has this oversight of all its departments of work.

We do not think it best to write in such a way as to give the false impression—that, because of a few changes which have been made, this has been a marked year, in the way of advancement. We do not say that; nor is it to be expected that much could be accomplished in the first year or two.

Things are in a state of transiency; new ideas are springing up and contending with the old; new desires budding into action, and some criticisms like bullets are whizzing hither and thither over the field of battle; all of which bode good for the future and may result in the lopping and pruning of dead twigs, in the nourishing of new and more fruitful branches, until, as a whole we stand forth a green and fruitful vine.

It is not so much the little handicaps that hinder our progress, as the standing impediments of our own fears at the dangers, in treading new paths. No one ever did any thing worth while by merely contemplating the dangers.

The first special work undertaken by the Child Welfare Department, was the four lectures on diseases and how to care for the sick, by Miss Weed, which we tried to give the main points of in these columns. Money has been collected each month for the Childrens Home and one benefit entertainment has been given, which also had mention in the column. We do not know of any other work of a practical kind done in this department; though we might mention one monthly meeting, the last, to give an idea of the program as carried out here which is the same as it has been, and suppose it is also carried out in smaller locals.

The leaflet discussed was entitled "Mothers," by Mrs. C. J. Clark. The discussion was quite typical. The deepest and best truths were not derived which were couched within it. There was a chance for a warm parley of what knowledge (as found in books) will do for the mother, in comparison with the knowledge which dependence upon the Spirit gives;—the author of the leaflet taking the ground of the good result accruing from reliance upon the latter source, not so much to the disparagement of the other kind of knowledge, for much of it has been inspired, but that the plea might be made to the mothers and the greater necessity born in upon them of the reverent atmosphere in the home and the worshipful attitude of the mother that grace and the light of holiness might surround her character and enrich her personality for the benefit of her children and all those who cross her threshold.

We could not help thinking, in this connection of two verses in "Cotters Saturday Night" by Burns, and would like to quote them:

"Then kneeling down to Heaven's Eternal King,
The saint, the father, and the husband prays
Hope "springs exulting on triumphant wing,
That thus they all shall meet in future days:
There ever bask in uncreated rays,
No more to sigh or shed the bitter tear,
Together hymning their Creator's praise,
In such society, yet still more dear;
While circling Time moves round in an eternal sphere."

Then here is the comparison between the worldly and man-made and the Godly and soul-expressed;

"Compared with this how poor Religion's pride,
In all the pomp of method, and of art,
When men display to congregations wide
Devotions ever green; except the heart!
The Power incensed, the pagan will desert,
The pompous strain, the sacerdotal stole;
But haply in some cottage far apart,
May hear well pleased, the language of the soul;
And in his Book of Life, the inmates poor enroll."

The poem quoted in the leaflet was a criticism upon motherhood as it is understood by many, which was rather refreshing than otherwise, for we hear too much of the mawkish sentiment about motherhood which we consider more of a detriment than an encouragement, a detriment to the bad and indifferent mothers of whom there are a great many, and to the injury of the good, noble and self-sacrificing mothers of whom, Oh, joy! there are also many, who do not need our thin veneer of praise and fawning to help them along their way, for the very best inspiration that can attend any one in this life is theirs; the consciousness of duty done. They are the spirit-led of earth, and pass, we hope, unscathed by the upstart tongues that sing to any wayward floating tune that lackeys make popular; it is merely a fad like any other of the "fads and jetsam" of our times.

We would not discourage the real tribute due, but we do deplore the silly, disgusting, we had almost said degrading sentiment, which pervades some of our literature and some of our discussions upon "Motherhood," which includes all—good, bad and indifferent in our vast jumble and chaos; we would not so debase the good nor so exalt the bad.

So we think (though we hope without partiality) this leaflet held seed-thoughts of very broad scope and came at a fitting time; at the close of the year and the beginning of another when new plans might be made and new thoughts taken up. It might be hoped that education of children might be studied according to the concrete principle and not to the abstract idea, as formerly. For instance, it is putting the "cart before the horse" to study and discuss "obedience" in its abstract form instead of studying the principle upon which all obedience is based and let each individual make her own application as her own circumstances will allow and the individuality of her child will permit. We can only apply principles; we cannot apply the experiences of others only in so far as they contain the fundamental truths.

One movement taken up this last year has met with success;—the literary class. The first part of the year was given up to miscellaneous work; the study of a primer in psychology—"Mental Growth and Control" under the direction of Sr. Ruth Smith, in which the women were interested; one book in sociology by Olive Shriner, and different literary productions were reviewed slightly; sort of a groping effort to find solid ground upon which to build, the greatest difficulty being to find a teacher who was both willing and able, but such a one was found in Bro. Bert McKim, and the last six months have been devoted to the study of that most wonderful book, "Les Miserables" under his able direction.

We believe all these branches of study might be included in this department, the greatest problem, as has been said being to find efficient teachers; but we hope in a year or so such might be developed who could lead out in the various branches.

This summary does not perhaps cover the ground, in detail of all that is being done, but gives some idea of our work and efforts here.

We would like to say something to encourage the smaller local societies to start something in the way of literary study, if only a reading class. We do need women in our societies who read and think. Magazine reading is a good start where no teacher could be found to direct any particular study. Begin something on the circulating library pass books around to each other, devise some way of starting the ball rolling.

In magazines we read of what other club women are doing all over the country; it often proves an inspiration to our own weaker efforts.

We read not long ago of one mother's club who made a move to co-operate with the school teachers in their town and get acquainted with the conditions surrounding their children during the school hours. They found miserable conditions and the result of the movement was vast improvement in sanitation, beauty, etc., intelligent aid to the teacher (who really has a hard time of it), and a better chance all round for the education of their children as well as a great deal of pleasure and benefit to themselves. The reading of this article stimulated enthusiasm in one individual for such noble work and a comparison in the mind of the idle tinkle of theories and the sound, practical working out of those theories. We wish the coming year might see in the larger locals, a committee of mother's for some practical work with teachers.

So, as the new year opens before us with a beckoning hand which says, come, try and achieve; it is yours, let us bend our wills, and band our efforts in one vast sisterhood for up-building.

MISCELLANEOUS

REUNION NOTICES.

The Western Iowa and Eastern Nebraska Reunion Association comprising the Pottawattamie, Gallands Grove, Iowa, and Northern Nebraska Districts will hold their reunion in the Missouri Valley, Iowa, City Park, August 22-31, 1913. The committee have engaged a large tent and settees which will accommodate more than fifteen hundred people. A dining hall is to be conducted on the co-operative plan as nearly as possible, also a confectionary stand on the camp ground. Provisions are being made for an interesting and instructive Institute work to be conducted by able auxiliary workers. Good speakers, good music, good meetings from the first to the last.

Missouri Valley has thirty-six daily passenger trains, and the beautiful park is only ten blocks from the depot. The names of S. Harding, J. L. Butterworth and M. M. Bilyus have been added to the reunion committee.

J. M. Baker, Pres.
J. A. Hansen, Treas.
C. J. Hunt, Secretary.

The ninth annual reunion of the Southern Nebraska District will be held in Morton Park, Nebraska City, Nebraska, Aug. 8th to 17th. Fremont District in Iowa is earnestly requested and expected to join with us in this meeting.

E. D. Briggs, Chairman Com.

The Ohio, Pittsburg, Kirland, and West Virginia Districts joint reunion will be held at Tuscora Park, New Philadelphia, Ohio, Aug. 7th to 17th. This park surpasses any previous locations we have had for reunions. Details will be published later or will be furnished by

C. Edward Miller, Sec.

R. F. D. 2, Willoughby, Ohio.

NOTICES.

QUORUM OF HIGH PRIESTS.—I am under instruction to give notice that the sessions of the quorum for 1913 will be held in the Methodist church; and that the first meeting will convene at eight o'clock, Monday morning, April 7th, for preliminary business, the appointment of necessary committees, and a prayer service.

Your fellow-servant, Rob't. M. Elvin, Sec.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 27, 1913.

OFFICIALS OF ELDER'S QUORUMS.

I have today sent out requests for a list of the names of the elders composing the quorums of which John A. Gardner, Wm. H. Smart, and J. F. Keir are presidents, and of which C. J. Clark, W. S. Hudson, A. L. Sanford, Frank Gray, W. R. Adams are secretaries. If there are any other Elders' quorums not included in these eight above mentioned, please to send me a list of the names of the elders composing the same by first mail, addressing me at Lamoni, Iowa, care of C. Scott. These lists are for the use of the presidents of the Seventy and as we meet the 27th inst., we cannot get these lists too soon for our use.

J. F. Minton, Sec. of the Pres. of the Seventy.

CONFERENCE MINUTES

KENTUCKY and TENNESSEE.—Conference met with the High Hill Branch, March 1, 1913, President J. R. McClain in the chair. The following officers reported, Elder J. R. McClain, W. S. Shupe, W. L. McClain and S. E. Dickson. Priest H. R. Shupe; Teachers G. E. Jones, J. K. Powers and J. R. Cook. Branches reporting:—Liberty Hill, present number 74; Farmington 152; Foundry Hill, 174; High Hill, 110. Bishop's agent reported receipts $421.30, paid out $421.30. Audited and found correct. Delegates to general conference, H. E. Moler, J. R. McClain, S. E. Dickson, J. H. Kelton, W. L. McClain, J. A. Roberts and W. S. Shupe. Next conference with Bethel saints at call of president.

S. E. Dickson, Sec.

NORTHERN NEBRASKA.—Conference convened at Omaha, Feb. 8th, at 9 a. m., for prayer service; business session at 10 a. m. A motion prevailed that we request General Conference to give us permission to change the name of our district to Northeastern Nebraska District instead of Northern Nebraska district. A motion also prevailed that we purchase a district tent provided sufficient missionary help be given us to operate same. Officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: J. M. Baker president, M. A. Peterson associate president, Anna Hicks secretary and treasurer, Alice C. Schwartz member library board, Paul N. Craig chorister. Those elected as delegates to General Conference are as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Paul N. Craig, J. M. Baker, Alta Butts, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Murie, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Coffeen, H. A. Scott, Anna Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lowe, H. E. Stolt, H. S. Lytle, Martin Case, Elizabeth Watkins, L. Marteeny, J. L. Parker, J. E. Butts, A. C. Schwartz. Next conference at Decatur, Neb., May 31st, 1913 at 9 a. m. Anna Hicks, Dist. Sec.

2805 No. 25th St., Omaha, Neb.

FLORIDA DISTRICT.—Sunday school association met at Alafaha church near Dixonville, Ala., Feb. 28, 2:30 p. m. Schools reporting viz., Ala. Flora, Fair View and Cold Water. Officers elected, Sr. C. J. Clark, superintendent, E. M. McCall, assistant, Sidney McCall, secretary. Helon Jernigan, treasurer, Sidney McCall, librarian and Sr. West superintendent home department. A program was rendered consisting of talks debates etc., which was highly instructive and was also a patent factor in the success of the convention, which was one among the best yet held in the district.

EASTERN COLORADO.—Semi-annual conference assembled at Denver, Colo., March 1, 1913. Prayer service at 9 a. m., business session at 10, Samuel Twombly, district president, presiding. Branches reporting: Denver 258, Trinidad 54, Highland 23, California Mesa 25, Delta 51, Colorado Springs 124, Wray 149, total 684. Baptisms 16. Ministerial reports: high priests, B. J. Scott, Samuel Twombly; elders, E. J. Clarke, J. I. Young, Geo. W. Beobe, S. J. Hovey, Josephus Hubbard, E. D. Bullard, A. E. Tabor, T. B. Nerron, Chas. E. Everett, M. W. Sampson, E. J. Williams, M. L. Schmid, T. Cheney; priests, Hobart W. Berry, T. A. Park, B. H. Blowers, Don A. Harris, F. R. Brown, Clyde W. Baker, J. W. Huppi; teachers, Lyman L. Hubbard; deacons, J. Leroy Park, W. S. McBurney, W. E. Boyd. The following is a summary of their labors: pastoral visits and fireside talks 122, sick calls 85, whole number of services 522, sermons preached 163, assisted and in charge 191, baptisms 6, confirmations 5, children blessed 6, ordinations 2, administered, to sick 87, marriages 1, official visits 13, new openings 4, new organizations—branches 1, Religio 1.

Reports from the following were received too late for tabulation: high priest, E. F. Shupe, elders, J. E. Landolf, F. B. Shumate, A. E. Tabor; priests, I. C. Edwards, Fenner Bullard, Geo. F. Bullard; teachers, Homer Shupe, Coral Willis, F. E. Bullard. Bishop's agent, Chas. E. Everett reported: Receipts from tithes and offerings $1184.16; cash on hand last report $13.60; notes on hand last report $116.51; total $1314.27; expenditures $993.55; balance due church $320.72. District secretary's financial report: Balance on hand last report $4.62; quarterly collection, California Mesa $1.60, Denver $6.51, Delta $1.25, Colorado Springs 60 cents; total $14.58. Expended for postage $1.07, statistical reports 80 cents; total $1.87; balance on hand $12.71.

The Highland Branch was declared disorganized, and the district secretary was authorized to issue letters of removal to all resident members to the Wray Branch.

The following were elected delegates to represent this district at general conference: Samuel Twombly, B. J. Scott, L. G. Holloway, O. Z. Thomas, Frank Russell, Sr. N. A.

Tabor and Sr. Ellen Tabor; in case of division to cast majority and minority vote. Owing to the fact that he is compelled to be away from home the greater part of the time, Elder Chas. E. Everett resigned as Bishop's Agent, and the conference recommended the appointment of B. J. Scott to fill the vacancy. A resolution was passed requesting the return to this field of Elder B. J. Scott, with Denver as the objective point.

The attention of the members of the priesthood of the Eastern Colorado District is called to the following resolutions passed by the conference: "Resolved, that it is the judgment of this conference that the proper construction to be placed upon sections 4 and 5 of the By-Laws of the district is that all members of the priesthood residing in the district shall report to the district secretary as provided. Resolved, that the reports of the different members of the district priesthood shall be presented to the district conference only in the secretary's tabulated report.

Conference adjourned to meet at Wray, Colo., the first Saturday and Sunday in September, 1913.

In writing concerning subscriptions, always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been going, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address, always give the old as well as the new address, and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription.

In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to

THE GENERAL RELIGIO CONVENTION.

A prayer and social service constituted the introduction of the Twenty-first Annual Convention of the Zion's Religio Literary Society, an auxiliary organization in the church, at Lamoni, Ia., April 2d. The meeting was held in the lower auditorium of the church and was in charge of Elder J. A. Gunsolley, president of the society, and Elder John F. Garver, both of Lamoni.

The many delegates and visitors from various parts of the country entered into the spirit of the service with energy and keen interest, and the time was too short for all to occupy who desired.

The first business session was held in the upper auditorium of the church beginning at 10:30 a. m., with Pres. J. A. Gunsolley in the chair. After singing, prayer was offered by Elder T. J. Elliott of St. Louis, followed by another hymn.

A printed report of a previously appointed committee on credentials was placed in the hands of the delegates and others present, and two members of the committee not in attendance, viz., M. H. Siegfried and R. B. Trowbridge, were substituted by the appointment of B. W. Taylor of Chicago and John Lentell of Independence, Mo. Corrections were offered, and the report was adopted subject to further corrections.

By motions and vote Pres. J. A. Gunsolley and Vice-president T. J. Elliott were chosen to preside, and Secretary Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser of Independence with her chosen assistant, Miss Louise Giesch of Independence were chosen as secretaries, and further organization referred to the presidency.

The chair announced that by appointment of the program committee, Elder and Mrs. Paul N. Craig of Omaha, Neb., would be in charge of the music of the convention.

The appointment of committees was taken up, and the convention approved of the appointment of such committees as had been outlined in the published program, the appointment of members for such committees being left in the hands of the presidency with the exception of the committee on nominations which was left with the body. R. S. Salyards of Lamoni, J. O. Dutton of Minnesota, F. A. Russell of Colorado Springs, J. W. Wright and Mrs. R. S. Salyards of Lamoni were elected committee on nominations, and the chair announced that other committees would be named later.

Elder S. A. Burgess of St. Louis, Mo., gave a brief address on "The appeal of the Religio," which was responded to by Elder J. W. Wright in behalf of the church, after which the session adjourned.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Pres. J. A. Gunsolley called the afternoon session to order at two o'clock. The invocation was offered by Elder James C. Page.

The chair announced the appointment of the following committees:—

On Resolutions, H. J. Davidson of Stockton, Cal., W. W. Scott of St. Joe, Mo., Mrs. Daniel MacGregor of St. Clair, Mich., Sr. O. E. Pratt of Lamoni, Iowa, and J. O. Dutton, of Minnesota.

On appropriations, J. A. Gardner of Independence, Mo., Harvey Sandy of Kansas City, Mo., Mrs. S. R. Burgess of St. Louis, Mo., T. J. Elliott of St. Louis, and Edward Rannie of Independence.

Press Committee, Charles Fry of Independence and Israel A. Smith of Lamoni, Ia. On notification E. W. Taylor of Chicago and R. Ellis.

Pres. J. A. Gunsolley read the following report:—

ANNUAL REPORT.

To the Convention Greeting:

As for a number of years past, my work has been only such as could be performed in connection with my duties in Graceland College. These duties have been such that most of the time I have been unable to attend the sessions of the local Religio, so as to keep in touch with the practical workings of the Society and its program and lesson features to the extent I should have liked, much to my regret. From September to June, I am busy with college duties, and from June to September away from home in field work, leaving me small opportunity for regular attendance at local meetings. I have tried as best I could under the circumstances not to lose interest and become a back number.

Immediately upon close of college work, I planned for field work, my first point being Port Huron, Mich., where I arrived June 17th. I spent Sunday in Detroit enroute, speaking twice, and visiting the Sunday school. At Port Huron, the work was ably represented by a goodly number of capable young saints, besides the district officers. Both the Sunday school and Religio were in the hands of energetic and capable officers who were magnifying their calling. A new venture was started at this reunion, in the matter of organizing an Association of District Presidents.

The next point was Chetek, Wis., arriving on June 21th. The attendance at this place was small, but there were quite a number who were deeply interested in the work, and the good Spirit was present to encourage and bless the humble efforts put forth. A number of sessions were held to the enjoyment and edification of those present.

The homeward trip was by way of Sioux City, Iowa, where I attended the little gathering that ventured out on that sultry July 1, evening.

After a little over two weeks at home engaged in college work the place next claiming attention was Stewartsville, Mo., where a two days institute was held by the Far West District, July 19 and 20. This was a very fine meeting, many good papers and addresses being given, some of which were procured for publication.

July 26 found me with the family encamped upon the Reunion grounds at Lamoni, Iowa. The time heretofore just spent in attending meetings, and giving attention to the duties of the college office, I occupied one service and took part in a college program.

August 8 found me alighting from the slowest train on the crookedest road known to my experience, at Wilburton, Oklahoma. But, once there, you soon forget how you arrived, for there is certainly a hospitable and earnest band of Saints there, and such meetings were held as were found practicable. There is an opportunity for doing much good among the saints in this locality as there is a willingness to learn, and they have not enjoyed the advantages had in many other places.

Pittsburgh, Kansas, Reunion has in some respects the most nearly ideal place for a reunion had anywhere. I reached there August 13th and soon found the saints beautifully located in Lincoln park. Sr. Florence McNichols had the Religio work in full blast, having come at the invitation of her father, one of the committee. I did little more here than to sell books and attend to the interests of the college. Sr. McNichols had Sr. Stebbins conduct the Sunday school and Religio work.

My last stopping place for field work was at Council Bluffs, Iowa, where at the request of the officers of the association formed from the several districts, I had charge of the Sunday school and Religio work. The plan here was to a goodly extent an experiment. An organization was effected in the nature of a school, consisting of the following departments, each with its teacher at its head: Primary, Intermediate, Senior, Doctrine and Covenants, Music, Normal and Literary. A daily program was arranged consisting of, in addition to the general opening and closing exercises, and lesson, a lecture, or address, on some live topic, representing the various departments, and review, or special exercises. This was pronounced a splendid success by those present, and might with profit be tried by others.

A number of brethren and sisters have done field work, among whom are Sr. M. A. Etzenhouser, Sr. Alta Deam, Sr. Florence McNichols, Sr. Eliza Chase and daughter Alice, Sr. Madden, Bro. J. F. Garver, Bro. C. R. Wells, Bro. J. B. Terry, Bro. Salyards, Bro. Daniel Macgregor, Bro. H. J. Davidson and doubtless many others whose work has not been especially called to my attention. Certain it is that most of the brethren of the missionary quorums do what they can in the interest of the auxiliaries, recognizing them as "help" indeed, and an effort is being made to bring about a more general effort by the missionaries and to afford them more as instance in preparing for the work. To such end the appointing quorums are being asked to consider the needs more fully of the auxiliary departments in the various fields, and to make appointments with these needs in view, the Religio pledging to sustain such appointees financially and giving them other aid.

The demands of the office touching correspondence are somewhat heavier than hitherto, and same has been carried on by means of my helpers in the college office. I cannot report the number of letters and the number written, as I have enough details with out burdening myself with such as these, but they are not a few.

I have acted as a member of the committee on lesson revision in connection with Bro. Heman C. Smith, and Sister Flora L. Scott. This work has been pleasant, and the utmost harmony and good feeling is enjoyed by the members of the committee towards each other, and between the committee and the editor upon the one hand and the publishers upon the other.

I have assisted in revising the constitution as ordered by the convention and getting it again printed. I have written a number of brief articles for publication in the Arena and secured a number of papers from others for that purpose.

The writing of the Parliamentary lessons has continued to be my task, and sometimes it has truly been a task. I have felt at a loss to know what to give next, and am wondering just how the lessons on our Constitution will be received. The Executive Committee held two days' sessions of meetings during the holidays. In addition to the full Executive Committee there were present by invitation the Supt. of the Normal Department, Sister D. H. Blair, Supt. of the Gospel Literature Bureau, Bro. Harvey Sandy both of Kansas City, Mo., and John W. Rushton, of Independence, Mo. This was a very enjoyable session and very important measures were discussed, and some of them adopted. But the proceedings of this meeting have been published some time since in the Arena, and do not need repeating here.

I have tried to keep a sharp outlook in behalf of the general interests of the work, surveying the field from end to end, advising here and counseling there. One's comprehension of possibilities grows the more his mind is put to it.

The various departments have been carried forward with reasonable vigor and wisdom. Everyone in charge of special work or department is employed in other work which in itself might claim about all his time, and yet by willing sacrifice of time, which might be given to other things, and not by employing idle moments, the work is taken care of.

In historical work the two grades of quarterlies are written by a missionary who is caring for the church work entrusted to him by conference appointment. Our official organ, the Religio's Arena, a department in Autumn Leaves, is edited by one of the First Presidency, assisted by the managing editor of the Hope.

The Quarterlies have been undergoing a trial the past year, or rather the course of study has been in the crucible. A large number of people have developed a feeling of dissatisfaction. They seemed to have acquired the habit of thinking the Religio was a synonym for Book of Mormon, and vice versa, that there is no text for study so nice as the record of ancient America. They said, "We cannot get interested in the new lessons, and we cannot interest the non-members of the church in these lessons, like we could in the old," and so on. But upon due consideration it appears that the real difficulty in the situation lies in the fact that more study and effort is required in the preparation of these lessons, than were required for those. And it would seem that it ought to be apparent to all that the study of the law dealing directly with work, lying immediately in hand; namely, Zion and her redemption, ought to be considered the thing of paramount importance. How long would it take one to learn his duty touching his part in the redemption of Zion, from study outside of the revelations to the church? He could never do it. He would continue wandering in the wilderness, and only being able at times, if faithful, to ascend some mountain peak and enjoy a brief glimpse of the promised land. He would not be qualified to enter. It is so with the church. She will never come fully out of the wilderness until she learns the law, not only to say but to do. And this learning will come only from study and practice. The Bishops and other ministers should expound it, of course, but we of the members must study it, and get it into our minds and hearts.

It is admitted that the lessons have been very imperfect; but it should be remembered too, that it is a much more difficult task to write lessons upon the revelations than upon the Bible or even the Book of Mormon. This has not only been pioneer work, but based upon matter that is not historical as are the other records largely, but upon revelations which many of them, contain a score of topics in a single paragraph. The convention, in my judgment took a mighty stride in advance when it authorized the change, and it will do well to stand firm. Time will fully vindicate the wisdom of the change.

The Junior quarterly relieved the situation to a large extent, with the little folks, and the lessons on the biographies of the noble men and women so prominent in the founding of the work, ought to be an inspiration to our young people. The Junior Quarterly has met with much favor, and the circulation of both is gratifying.

The Religio's Arena still continues to occupy fourteen pages—more or less—of the Autumn Leaves. But it seems that the editors have had great difficulty in obtaining matter to fill the space allotted. The news from societies has been entirely too brief. One would think from what appears from time to time in the Arena that we have about a dozen local organizations. The officers and heads of departments might have been heard from more frequently. We can scarcely expect the editors to drum up patronage, especially since we pay them no salary.

The various departments have done excellent service this year. The one in charge of each has kept things moving. The Home Department has demonstrated its usefulness in bringing blessings to many stay-at-homes and isolated ones. Since each of these departments will have its own individual report, this report will only speak of generalities. This department merits the encouragement and support of all Religions and all members of the church.

The Gospel Literature Bureau has prospered notwithstanding the obstacles of indifference has been a hard one to surmount, and can scarcely be counted as removed entirely. By a little effort upon the part of many who now are not interested, the church publications could be more widely circulated and read. In very many places subscribers to the church papers could by a little thought and effort pass them

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The General Sunday School Association of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints met at Lamoni, Iowa, April 4th. The convention was begun by a prayer service at 9 a. m. in charge of John Smith of Lamoni and A. B. Phillips of Massachusetts.

MORNING BUSINESS SESSION.

The first business session was opened with a song service in charge of Hale W. Smith of Independence. President Daniel MacGregor being in the chair. Prayer was offered by George W. Robley of Massachusetts. A vocal solo was rendered by Miss Stella Bandy of Lamoni, accompanied upon the piano by Miss Yerrington.

The chairman read a greeting from Joseph Smith, president of the church.

GREETING FROM PRESIDENT SMITH.

To the Officers and Delegates of the General Sunday School Association in Convention Assembled; Greeting: As a one-time worker and promoter of the Sunday school work,— begun so long ago by that humble and farseeing philosopher and humanitarian, Robert Raikes, the benefit of whose work for humanity has not yet been fully estimated and will not be until time passes and eternity under the blessings of God shall pay due respect to him and other great benefactors of the race,—I greet you as one whose activities have been cut short by the passing of time but whose wishes still go out to the followers of those who have preceded them, and hopes and prays for the continued divine favor and complete success of the Sunday school work.

With sentiments of continued esteem for those who still believe that it is the glory of God to bring to pass the redemption of man, I give you the soldierly greeting, as a fellow worker in the great Sunday school cause.

Ever your brother,

JOSEPH SMITH.

Independence, Missouri, March 24, 1913.

By separate motions and vote the general superintendent, Daniel MacGregor was chosen to preside over the convention, and being authorized chose D. J. Krahl of Independence, and F. B. Farr of Cameron Mo., and D. J. Krahl was elected to act as secretary, choosing F. A. Russell of Colorado Springs, and Miss Estella Wight assistants.

A printed report of the credential committee and with some corrections and recommendations was approved.

The superintendency was empowered to appoint such committees as were necessary to complete the organization. The following were announced:

Committee on resolutions: George Thorburn of Washington, Arthur Allen of Detroit, Mich., and John Zahnd of Independence.

Press Committee: W. H. Garrett of Independence, H. E. Moler of Holden, Mo., H. J. Dovison of California.

Notification Committee: George W. Robley, and F. J. Ebeling of Ohio.

By motion the superintendent, secretary, and treasurer were made members of the appropriating committee.

The printed report of the general secretary, D. J. Krahl, was presented and distributed, and explanations and comments were made by the secretary.

The interests of the Beginner Department of the Sunday school was discussed by Mrs. G. T. Griffiths of Columbus, Ohio, followed by a paper by Mrs. F. B. Farr of Cameron, Mo., on "Teaching intermediates; obstacles, and how to overcome."

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Elder T. W. Chatburn of Independence offered the opening prayer of the afternoon session, following the song service.

A piano solo was rendered by Miss Florence Thompson, of Lamoni, after which was read a greeting from the president of the Quorum of Twelve.

To the Sunday-school Association:

Our authoritative textbooks teach that "whatever is good or leadeth to good is of God." No one doubts but that the Sunday-school movement has a good object in view and that the workers enlisted in it are animated with the best of intentions. This at once places it in harmony with the divine code as cited above. All people of whatever name are instinctively led to care for, train, and develop their offspring as wisely as they know how.

To the Christian of thought, having a knowledge of the truth, this is intensified as a first duty, so can not be set aside or ignored. This educating and training the youth along moral, intellectual, and spiritual lines, is a first duty and those engaged in this service are to be commended in their work.

The Quorum of Twelve, one and all, are in sympathy with this work, and may be depended upon to encourage the movement, and commend those devoted to it in every way they consistently can.

May God speed the work and bless those engaged in it.

Respectfully,

William H. Kelley.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 30, 1913.

A roll call of registered delegates was read. The chair announced the names of M. H. Bond of Independence, and T. A. Hougas of Henderson, Iowa, as additional members of the appropriations committee of which the superintendent, secretary, and treasurer had been made members by the morning session.

The report of the home department superintendent, Mrs. Florence McNichols, of Atchison, Kas., was read:

The home department is no longer experimental. It is here to stay and is one of the growing features of the church as evidenced by statistical reports. With 4216 reported members now, with 480 reported transferals to local schools during the year, with 12 organized districts failing to report their members, we may consistently conclude our membership has reached, if not actually passed the 5000 mark for the year 1912.

600 "Hopes" and 3110 Quarterlies have been utilized by the department, and $681.80 is the year's offering according to incomplete reports. We quote from last years report "Home department correspondence is growing to such magnitude that it requires a vast deal of time to handle it. Originating and planning for an extension of the work has had to be abandoned to some extent in order to meet the current demands. The superintendent of the home department is also the assistant, and the secretary, corresponding, financial and otherwise and we believe the time is right now when one person cannot do justice to the growing needs of the department." We have written more than 1000 letters in the interest of the home department this year and yet we feel that we have covered very little ground compared to the vast area it were our privilege to cover, had we the time to forge into the unexplored. The capacity of the home department is unlimited as the whole world is its field. True it is, that district superintendent of home classes are doing a noble work but there are thousands of families outside of their limited territory some of whom could, and would be reached yes, many of whom would be glad to be reached if the General Superintendent were not literally tied to current demands.

We are not pleading for less work for the superintendent whoever it may be, but we are pleading for relief in one direction that more efficient work may be accomplished in general, for the home department. And it is our hope that the general association may find the way, the best way, the way that will permit this great asset of the Sunday-school, and therefore of the church, to get into the very heart of the big possibilities lying all around it.

Mrs. Florence McNichols, Gen. Supt.
Atchison, Kans.

A report of Mrs. D. H. Blair of Kansas City, superintendent of the normal department was read, being the same as being reported to the Religio convention.

The report of John Smith treasurer, was read showing a balance March 19, 1912, of $2602.09. Receipts $6133.58, total $8735.67. Expenditures $5964.51, leaving a balance on hand March 15, 1913, of $2771.16. An auditing committee reported the accounts correct.

Mrs. D. H. Blair discussed the subject of "Training for service."

An address was made by Joseph Arber of Independence on the subject of "Practical methods for senior teachers," following which a paper written by Mrs. Florence McNichols on "Home department work," was read by Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser.

The report of the general superintendent D. MacGregor was read by himself:

One year ago as you are aware, we launched on an un-sailed sea, that of graded lessons, and withal graded schools. The voyage was not undertaken without fore-thought and consideration. For several years the matter had been before us.

Unaccustomed as we were to voyages of this character, some of us have become sick, but this was to be expected, as disorders of this description are but natural.

We shall not say, however, that this sickness was not quickened by unskillful work on the part of the crew. It was a new experience to us all, and so perhaps we may be pardoned for our imperfections.

But this does not destroy the fact that our graded gospel boat is seaworthy, nor that we shall not reach the haven of satisfaction. As we hasten on, working off the bile of antiquated customs, and taking on the sea legs of progress, our voyage will become the pleasanter.

True we have not as yet reached our port of destination; we have not perfected the grading of our system, so that the reward that awaits us is not to be measured by the trial along the way. But we have this to offer by way of assurance, that if the cross of inconvenience has been severe the crown of triumph will be correspondingly the brighter.

So far as my personal observations have permitted me to note the conditions of the schools at home and abroad I have this to say, that the whole association is at work. The hum of industry noted in class work, committee, and counsel is heard on every hand.

With this unusual activity the cry for skilled teachers is resounding far and wide. It is a cry for teachers of understanding, teachers of inspiration, teachers of love, and teachers of enthusiasm. Let me emphasize this as the greatest need of the school today.

In view of this fact I submit that steps should be instantly taken to aid the Normal Department. As you may be aware the present incumbent is called upon to occupy for both societies, the Religio and school. The burden is too great for one, help should be extended.

With a view to strengthening our relationship to the church and solidifying our forces, I recommend that this association add to its general executive force a member of the First Presidency, and a member of the Quorum of Twelve who representing the parent body may serve us in an advisory way. As we understand it, it is the duty of these presiding quorums to extend their help and labors into all the world and in all the church.

Further affiliation with the parent body may be practicable and profitable by associating district president with the directing staff of the district association, and the branch president with the executive of the local school. It is a little premature, however, to inaugurate this latter measure, time and experience will soon determine.

The help rendered by my esteemed associates, Bro. G. R. Wells, Sr. Anna Reynolds, has been rendered in a magnanimous and efficient way. I appreciate to the full their sympathy and support.

The work of the Normal department has been cared for in an admirable manner by our long proved worker, Sr. D. H. Blair. The good resulting from her untiring toil is being demonstrated in a competent staff of teachers constantly coming to the front.

The Home Department, that awakened giant of the church, extending his far reaching arms from shore to shore, reaching into every hamlet and hill is proving an indefatigable toiler, and wonderfully successful. Being such a ponderous fellow, needless to say his wardrobe is extensive and requires constant attention.

Sr. McNichols is doing splendidly in the office of Home Department superintendent.

The general secretary, known to all through years of faithful service, has served us excellently, but his burdens are increasing with the growth and development of the associations. Some help should be extended him, for the work's sake.

Of the other officers, committees and editors, time and occasions prevent us giving to each due consideration, but each and all have endeavored to render the association their best service, which cannot but result in a crowning success.

Respectfully,

Daniel MacGregor.

The resolutions committee reported as follows:

Our Committee on Resolutions beg leave to report as follows:

Resolution No. 1 which reads, Resolved that a committee of 3 be appointed to consider the question of combining the Sunday-school and Religio Society, such committee to act in connection with the committee appointed by the Religio organization to report to the convention of 1914.

We recommend to table indefinitely.

It was moved to adopt. A substitute was offered that the recommendation of the committee be adopted. Considerable discussion followed when the previous question was called, the vote on the substitute resulting in 68 for, and 109 against. The motion to adopt prevailed by a vote of 103 to 54.

Nominations were made resulting in the election of D. MacGregor, D. J. Krahl, and T. A. Hougas.

The resolution committee further reported a petition from the Saskatchewan Canada, District requesting a division of the district, with a recommendation that it be granted, subject to the action of general conference. The recommendation was adopted.

A request from Southern California District for a field worker to be appointed to the district, the district to do what it could to support such worker. was referred to the executive committee with power to act.

Miss Doris Anderson of Independence sang a solo, and the session adjourned to 7 p. m.

FRIDAY EVENING SESSION.

The song service was led by the young people's choir, with Mrs. May Skinner of Lamoni, as leader. The choir was assisted by the Graceland College orchestra.

Prayer was offered by T. A. Hougas of Henderson, Iowa.

The Mandolin club entertained the audience with two excellent numbers, after which the children gave a drill entitled "March of the Nations." This was a very interesting number, consisting of 48 children each with a flag representing one of the nations. From this number those representing the nations in which the gospel had been preached were called from the group upon the platform to the front.

Upon this Elder MacGregor read the text, "And again this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness and then shall the end come, or the destruction of the wicked." Matt. 24. Inspired Translation, and the convention sang "From Greenland's Icy Mountains." After the withdrawal of the children, the boy with the American flag remained waving the same while "My country, 'tis of thee,

Sweet land of liberty, was sung by the audience.

W. W. Scott addressed the convention on the "Qualifications of a Teacher."

By appropriate speeches Rudolph Etzenhouser of Independence and S. A. Burgess of St. Louis presented the offices of Sunday school and Religio associations conjointly, with a gavel and mace, the gavel being made of wood from the last stump left on the hill Cumorah where the Book of Mormon plates were found, and the mace from olive wood from Jerusalem.

A paper on "Teaching" by Miss Annie Reynolds, of Los Angeles, not present, was read by F. M. Sheehy.

"Interest in the class" was a subject discussed by Albert Carmichael of Lamoni.

Miss Frances White sang "A Little While," accompanied by Mrs. May Skinner, upon the piano, and with a violin obligato by Albert N. Hoxie, jr., of Philadelphia.

The general superintendent, Daniel MacGregor, with a few fitting remarks presented diplomas to a number who had completed the prescribed course in bible normal lessons, and John W. Rushton gave an address for the benefit of the graduates.

Benediction: E. F. Robertson of Australia.

SATURDAY MORNING SESSION.

The morning prayer was offered by Chief Three Fingers of the Cheyenne Tribe of Indians of Oklahoma, who is not only a member of the church but holds the Aaronic priesthood. He spoke in his native tongue, not having an extensive familiarity with the English.

A piano solo was rendered by Mrs. A. N. Hoxie of Philadelphia.

An auditing committee reported the accounts of the treasurer.

A financial report of the normal department was read:

Resolution committee reported the following from the Nauvoo District with recommendation.

"That we petition the General Convention to reconsider and return to the uniform text."

Resolutions Committee recommended as follows:

"We do not favor the passage of this resolution for the following reasons.

1st The present lesson system has not had time to prove its merits or demerits.

2d The present system, before being put in force, was submitted to all the districts, hence it would be unfair to change without submitting to all the districts again."

Motion to adopt the Resolutions Committee's report carried.

The recommendation was adopted.

Resolution on Beginner's quarterly was reported:

"Resolved that the Beginner's Quarterly be prepared for the teachers' use only, with such helps and suggestions as may be necessary for their work and that a small leaflet containing the lesson story be published to be given to the pupil on the day when the lesson story is presented in the school. It should also contain the Golden Text for the following Sunday to be memorized at home."

Resolutions Committee recommended to refer to the Lessons Committee with power to act.

Motion to adopt Resolution Committee report carried.

Miss Annie Allen was re-elected member of auditing committee.

J. A. Gunsolley was re-elected member of the lessons committee.

It was moved to sustain the present committee on lesson revision.

Upon a desire being expressed that others might be nominated, the chair stated that the present members, R. S. Salyards, A. Carmichael and John Smith would be considered in nomination and other nominations would be in order. Other nominations were Charles Fry and R. M. Elvin, resulting in the election of R. S. Salyards, A. Carmichael and John Smith.

The Lessons Committee reported:

To the Convention Meeting:

Pursuant to an action of the convention of 1912 by which the issuing of graded lessons was referred to the Executive Committee and the Lessons Committee, joint sessions were held with the Executive Committee, resulting in the adoption of a plan to issue five grades of quarterlies, each with its separate editor.

In response to a call by the chairman of the committee, a meeting of the committee and the editors was held at Lamoni, Iowa, July 5th to 8th. There were present at this meeting, general superintendent of the Association, Daniel MacGregor, St. Clair, Mich., chairman; J. A. Gunsolley, Lamoni, Iowa, secretary; Christiansa Salyards, Lamoni, editor of the Senior Quarterly; Lucie H. Sears, New Bedford, Mass., editor of the Intermediate Quarterly; Margaret MacGregor, St. Clair, Mich., editor of the Junior Quarterly; Anna Zimmerman, Philadelphia, Penn., editor of the Primary Quarterly; Hattie R. Griffiths, Columbus, Ohio, editor of the Beginners Quarterly; Heman C. Smith, Lamoni; Jno. F. Garver, Lamoni; and Gomer R. Wells, Lamoni, assistant superintendent and editor of the Exponent.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"Moved that it be the sense of this body that all editors of the various grades of quarterlies should be considered members of this committee by virtue of the action of the convention making the editor of the quarterly a member at the time there being only one editor, the other four having since been provided for; and that this action be reported to the next convention."

"Moved that G. R. Wells, editor of the Exponent, be invited to sit with the committee, and that he have voice and vote in our deliberations."

The five editors were then appointed a sub-committee to arrange the various grades of lessons, they to work independently or conjointly, as they found necessary, and present their report to the whole committee for further consideration. This was done with the result that outlines for lessons for three years in each of the five grades were adopted. This outline was published, and appears on pages 42 and 43 of the Exponent for October, November and December, 1912.

A meeting of the committee was held this morning at nine o'clock with the following persons present: Daniel MacGregor, chairman; J. A. Gunsolley, secretary; Christiansa Salyards, editor of the Senior Quarterly; Maggie MacGregor, editor of the Junior Quarterly; Hattie R. Griffiths, editor of the Beginner's Quarterly; Heman C. Smith and John Garver.

Each of the editors present reported lessons for the third quarter written and ready for the printer, prepared in harmony with the outlines previously adopted. Said reports are submitted herewith.

J. A. Gunsolley, Sec. Com.

G. H. Harrington of Independence spoke on "The school in its relation to the church."

A. M. Chase of Salt Lake City related the conditions of the Sunday-school and church work in Utah.

A vocal duet entitled "Forever with the Lord," was sung by Mr. and Mrs. Paul N. Craig of Omaha accompanied by Mrs. B. M. Anderson of Independence.

A number of short addresses given by the following:

Mrs. S. R. Burgess of St. Louis on "Personality of the Superintendent," G. W. Blair of Lamoni, "Managing a Sunday-school," Miss Oleta Smith of Lamoni, "How the superintendent can help the teacher," A. L. Keen of Lamoni, on "Need of District Superintendent to visit schools," D. MacGregor, on "The work of the superintendent."

A critic's conference was held and being free for all, a number took part discussing various matters of interest, and the session closed.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON SESSION

After the usual song service, prayer was offered by F. A. Smith of Lamoni, following which the convention was resolved into an "everybody's conference" in which questions were freely asked and answered until 3:35 p. m., when the body resolved to proceed with the business. A violin solo was rendered.

The revising committee reported, that they had revised all manuscript up to Oct. 1st, 1913, and that the spirit of unity was in their work.

A resolution providing for the appropriation of $500 for a perpetual educational fund was read. It was referred to the appropriation committee.

Resolved that an appropriation of $500 be made for the purpose of aiding young men and young women to secure an education at Graceland College said money to be expended under direction of the Trustees of Graceland College and subject to the following restrictions:

1st The amount furnished any student shall not exceed $60 for the year.

2d This amount shall be considered as loaned without interest to the recipient and shall be returned by the student as soon after he leaves school as practicable.

3d Said money when returned shall again be loaned to a needy student, returnable as above, thus making a permanent fund.

The following was adopted unanimously:

Resolved that the General Association in Convention assembled express their hearty appreciation of Sr. R. S. Salyards efficient faithful and consecrated devotion to the arduous task we have imposed upon her during the last twenty years.

The following from the appropriations committee was read with their recommendation.

"Whereas the work of the church in the city of Salt Lake City is under a very serious handicap of having no church or other suitable building for Sunday-school, Religion or other church work and realizing not only the present need for such an equipment, but the earnest interest of the Sunday-school Association in our work. Therefore we earnestly petition this body to appropriate the sum of $1000, or such other sum as they may deem expedient to assist in providing a suitable church or head quarters building for the work in that city.

Appropriations committee recommended that $500 be appropriated for the purpose of the erection of church building in Salt Lake City, said money to be expended under the direction of the First Presidency, Presiding Bishopric and Salt Lake City branch."

It was moved to adopt the report of the appropriations committee.

Moved as a substitute that the General Sunday-school Association turn over the sum of $2000 to the general church funds.

It was moved that the substitute be amended to read that $500 be appropriated on behalf of the Salt Lake chapel to be expended according to the descretion of the joint council of the presidency, twelve and bishopric, and that $500 be donated to the general church fund.

The substitute as amended carried.

The convention proceeded to the election of officers and the following were nominated for superintendent. Daniel MacGregor, J. A. Gunsolley, J. A. Gardner and G. R. Wells.

Before a vote was taken the session adjourned to 7 p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The song service beginning at 7 o'clock was led by Albert N. Hoxie and the newly assembled church choir composed of over one hundred. Prayer was offered by Hale W. Smith. The election pending at the afternoon adjournment was taken up, and after some discussion the vote was ordered. Daniel MacGregor received 136 votes, J. A. Gunsolley, 55, and G. R. Wells 34, resulting in the election of Daniel MacGregor.

For the office of 1st assistant superintendent G. R. Wells and W. N. Robinson were nominated, the former receiving 79 votes and the latter 12. G. R. Wells was declared elected.

For second vice-president Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, F. B. Farr, Annie Reynolds, and D. J. Krahl were nominated. The vote stood for Mrs. Etzenhouser 134, F. B. Farr 14, Annie Reynolds 4 and D. J. Krahl 57, and Mrs. Etzenhouser was declared elected.

For secretary W. N. Robinson received 119 votes, Mrs. Pearl Gardner 6, Cyril Wight 18, Merrill Etzenhouser 34, Bro. Robinson declared elected.

For the office of treasurer John Smith was elected, receiving 171 votes, and J. A. Gardner 5 votes.

The following were the only nominees for the respective offices and were elected unanimously:

Ralph W. Farrel of Mass., member social purity board, E. H. Fisher, Boston, Mass., member of library commission. Florence McNichols, Atchison, Kas., home class superintendent.

The resolution relative to appropriating $500 for a perpetual fund to help college students, and which was previously referred to the committee on appropriations was reported with a recommendation that the amount be appropriated. The recommendation was adopted.

E. H. Fisher, Sunday school member of the joint library commission made a verbal report, following which an appropriation of $100 was made for the use of the library commission.

An appropriation of $50 was also made for the use of the social purity board.

The following on district social committees was presented and referred to the social purity board:

Resolved that we favor the appointment by the stake and district conventions of a Temperance and Social Purity committee, who shall have charge of the Temperance and Social Purity work throughout their stakes and districts by appointing local committees, or seeing that such local committees are appointed. Such local committees are to carry out the work under the direction of the stake or district committee.

$50 were appropriated to the normal department, and $750 for general expenses.

A recommendation in the superintendent's report requesting that a member of the Presidency of the church, and a member of the Quorum of the Twelve be made advisory members of the executive committee, was moved. It was deferred one year.

A request for extra help in the normal department was referred to the executive committee.

"Resolved that it be the sense of this body that the general superintendent give his entire time to the work and that he be supported from the general fund." The foregoing was referred to the Presidency of the church and the Quorum of Twelve.

The minutes of the day were read and approved with some correction.

A ladies quartette composed of Misses Zylphia Fenn, Doris Anderson, Mable Carlisle, and Frances White.

A demonstration of the methods of teaching entitled "The old and the new," was conducted by Miss Mable Knipschild, and Miss Lydia Thomas.

Doxology was sung, benediction by D. J. Krahl and the convention stood adjourned.

THE END OF GREED.

God sent his own Son into the world
Who came, and the message of love he unfurled;
And showed how souls thrive when on love they feed,
But shrivel and dwarf when they canker with greed.

Elders and angels and the still small voice
Of God's Holy Spirit now give the world choice,
All nations are choosing now to be freed
From this all absorbing monstrosity, Greed.

This message is spreading by means untold,
Its heralds becoming aggressive and bold,
Love links forging for the chain the world needs,
The chain to bind Satan and cancel his greed.

along to their neighbors. Then a little more thought and effort might bring about a report to the superintendent of the department near at hand.

The Normal Department continues to train for teaching and other service. There is a mistaken notion held by some that the benefits of this work are applicable only to those who may teach; they should be a means of help in any work requiring a knowledge of the Scriptures and a knowledge of mind development and activity. In addition to gaining a certain outline knowledge of the sacred records and of the fundamentals of the laws of teaching and mind development, the habit of systematic study and analysis is of untold value, and should encourage more studiousness, resulting in higher order of intelligence among God's children.

The matter of library work is causing some inquiry along the line of suitable books for children of various ages. If lists could be prepared, giving quite a number of books suitable for children of the different grades, and such lists made available to those desiring them, the department would be of greater usefulness to the people. This department deserves to be sustained and encouraged.

The effort to raise funds for translating the Book of Mormon into foreign languages has been vigorously pushed. We do not know the results. They will be reported by the treasurer. But it will be a matter of disappointment if a better showing is not made than for any previous year.

A movement has been inaugurated by the Booster club of Graceland College looking toward a closer affiliation between our educational institution and the young people's society. This plan contemplates the appointment by each local of a committee to be designated as Graceland Booster Committee to furnish certain data to a committee appointed by the Graceland Booster Club designated as Graceland's Religio Booster Committee. These committees are to co-operate in disseminating information to the Religions by the college committee, assisting them in giving entertainments and so on, and the Religio committee furnishing the college with names and addresses of prospective students, gathering funds for the purchase of scholarships, offerings, etc. A closer touch thus brought about should be mutually helpful, and should be encouraged. It would be only a consistent thing to do, if each local and district that could do so, (and all could) would take at least one annual scholarship. This would give a material boost to the educational work and relieve the church of a part of the burden of debt.

There has been a material slump in attendance and interest in some localities, but not so bad as when a change was made from so much entertainment in a more sincere study. We have believed this condition would only be temporary, and already signs of a revival are apparent. We predict that ere long a larger attendance and a better interest will be realized than ever before.

It has been felt by some that the general society should be made to benefit more the work in the districts and locals. To this end, the work of the Executive Committee has been subdivided, or apportioned, so that each member of the committee represents a department that is placed under his charge. Then, too, institutes and convention programs should be given more attention and be made of more practical value.

A closer affiliation with the general church through its quorums and ministry is being sought. To this end request had been made by the Executive Committee of the Quorum of Twelve and First Presidency, that in the appointment of missionaries the needs of auxiliary work be considered. The great help given in the past by these brethren is not by any means overlooked, and is much appreciated, but this is an effort to secure more of what has proved a good thing.

Concluding, I wish just simply to say that I have enjoyed the thought of being held in so great confidence and esteem by the young people. None knows it better than I how poorly the duties have been performed. I have seen how little has been done compared to what might have been done, and perhaps ought to have been done. But I have enjoyed thoroughly what I have done, and hope more may be done in the future. God's work is worthy our very best service, and I desire to render whole-hearted service in all that is undertaken for the Master's cause.

Thanking all co-workers therefore, for their love, confidence and co-operation, and working and praying for the progress of the work destined to bring about the Zion of God on earth to meet the Zion from above, I am

Sincerely,

J. A. Gunsolley.

An address was given on the subject of "Legitimate phases of program work", by the president.

Elder H. O. Smith of Providence, R. I., Paul N. Craig of Omaha, Neb., and John F. Carver of Lamoni, gave three minute speeches on "The censorship of Religio programs by branch officers," followed by an address on "The attitude of pastors toward Religio work," by M. H. Bond of Independence, and one on the "Attitude of the Religio toward the pastor," by Mrs. S. R. Burgess.

The report of the vice-president was read.

A paper on the "need of an organized social committee and the results to be sought," by vice-president T. J. Elliott was read.

Mrs. Heman C. Smith read a paper on "The value of Social Work in the lives of our young people."

The report of the executive committee was read:

To the Convention:—

In the matter of providing maps for the Society Islands Mission and widening the circulation of Autumn Leaves referred to the Executive, our report is that these matters were submitted with the result that the following is reported by the sub-committee:

"In the matter of Z. R. L. S. report of executive committee, would respectfully report for the committee on increasing circulation of Autumn Leaves, that we approached the Herald Publishing House with various propositions, but finally reached the conclusion from their expression that they fear we would hinder them by any of the offers we have planned. We should, however, strongly urge upon all Religions that they subscribe for and read that paper, and encourage and secure as many subscriptions as they can in their respective localities. We may add that we are still trying to see what can be done in a practical way, but have nothing further to report at this time.

"On the matter of maps for the South Sea Islands, we spoke to Mrs. Lake and have written since their departure but although it is now some months since, we have heard nothing in reply. Doubtless after they are located they will find time to arrange what they wish and send it in, so that a committee should be continued and provision made for carrying out this work the coming year if possible."

In the matter of Junior Lessons referred to this committee, we have to report that it was decided to issue separate Junior Quarterly, to be edited by the present lesson editor. Three quarters lessons have been published and circulated.

In the matter of additional translations of the Book of Mormon, we have to report that we have not been called into council upon the matter.

Having been authorized to appoint a Society Historian, Sr. Pearl Gardner was selected for that position.

The Thanksgiving Offering to the Translation Fund was authorized to be continued and the treasurer instructed to carry it out. This having been referred to this committee.

Signed for the committee,
J. A. Gunsolley, Chairman.

A verbal report of the revising committee was given by J. A. Gunsolley, and E. Rannie reported verbally by the constitutional committee.

A report of the editor of the Arena was read:—
To the Convention of the Zion's Religio Literary Society Greeting:—

During the past year I have continued as editor of the Arena Department in Autumn Leaves. Sr. Estela Wight has acted as Associate Editor, and has done most of the editorial work. She has solicited special articles from various sources, particularly from the General Officers of the Society. This policy will probably be continued during the coming year, should the present editors be continued. As editor of Autumn Leaves I have endeavored to make the entire magazine useful and valuable to Religions. Many interesting and instructive articles have been secured from competent writers in response to a systematic campaign for such material. Some of these have been published during the year, others will appear later. We solicit the aid of all Religions in securing subscribers. Every Religion should boost for Autumn Leaves, the Young People's Magazine.

Wishing you a profitable convention and a successful year's work.

I remain yours in the conflict for truth,

Elbert A. Smith.

Lamoni, Ia., April 2.

The historian's report was read:—

Report of the Historian to the General Religio Association:—

At this time we have notes concerning the early years of the Religio ready to be compiled into suitable form for publication.

In writing the history of the Religio it became necessary to learn from its originators the need which incited its organization also the original plan. Hence last May we immediately got in communication with those, who, as we could learn, could give us the most information.

Our main difficulty has been to get correct information concerning the origin of the movement. This difficulty will be lessened in writing the history of later years, as the secretary's account will contain much of the information needed, while the secretary's account in early years is very meagre.

Mrs. J. A. Gardner.

The convention adjourned to separate conferences, one in charge of J. A. Gunsolley to discuss program work, one in charge of T. J. Elliott to discuss social work, and one in charge of Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser to consider the work of the lookout committee.

EVENING SESSION.

A song service of about fifteen minutes was conducted by the chorister after which Elder G. T. Griffith of Columbus, Ohio, offered prayer. A male quartette composed of Messrs. F. A. Rüssel, Paul N. Craig, Hale W. Smith, and J. O. Dutton sang an excellent number.

The secretary's report was read:

SECRETARY'S COMMENTS ON STATISTICAL REPORT OF 1913.

A glance at the totals of our report would give one the impression that the year 1912 had been a very poor year for Religio work, but sometimes figures are deceiving, though it is true that this is the first year since I have been keeping the records (1906) that a loss has been shown in the number of active locals and the enrollment of the Home Department.

We first wish to call your attention to the fact that though our active locals show a loss of 3 our average attendance shows the splendid gain of 431. This is the third highest gain shown during the last seven years. The banner year being shown in our report of 1912 when our gain in average attendance was 620 and the lowest in our 1911 report when our average attendance only showed a gain of 180.

Though our Home Department shows a loss this year of 131, a great many of its members have been transferred to locals, thereby cutting down the enrollment of the Home Department and building up the enrollment of locals. The enrollment of this department is now almost five times as great as it was in 1907, it having grown from 459 in 1907 to 2273 in 1913. Enrollment of locals has increased from 6249 in 1907 to 10984 in 1913. Average attendance has increased from 3296 in 1907 to 5748 in 1913.

We can report one new district organized, Southern Nebraska. We were unable to get report from them, though we wrote to both the president and secretary in reference to the matter. Last year we received an incomplete report from the Portland, Ore., district, and this year we have heard nothing from them. No report has been received from Oklahoma. We received a letter from St. James Yates saying that if there were any active locals in Oklahoma she had not heard of them.

We are pleased with the steady growth the Religio is making, and though our enrollment does not show any marked increase this year, we account for it by the fact that the amendment to our constitution that was passed last year has been taken advantage of, which was, "Those who have become lost to the society by moving from local or through failure to report, after an absence of three months shall be dropped from membership in said local society." The membership has been weeded out, and as a consequence this year's report shows a higher percentage of attendance than ever before since I have been keeping the records!"

Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Gen. Sec.

Address by Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser on "Special qualifications of members of the lookout committee, and their objective work."

Several musical numbers were rendered, with pleasure to the delegates, viz., by Graceland College orchestra. Vocal solo, followed by a piano solo. A paper written by Miss Floralice Miller of Dunville, Canada, not present, on "The value and purpose of reporting," was read by F. A. Rüssel.

A report of the committee on resolutions was read and a motion to refer the matter of appropriations to the appropriating committee, was adopted.

A request for free quarterlies for the local at Jerusalem, Palestine, under the present emergency was referred to the executive committee, with power to act.

A recommendation of the committee to indefinitely postpone action on a resolution providing for the adoption of a society emblem pin, was adopted.

APRIL THIRSD.

The morning session on the 3rd, opened at 8 a. m., prayer being offered by B. W. Taylor.

The report of the treasurer was read.

A paper on "The gospel work of the Religio," was read by J. A. Gardner, followed by an address by Edward Rannie on "Extension of relief work."

A report of the committee on appropriations was read recommending appropriations of $300 for the benefit of Graceland College, $300 for general expenses, $50 for the social purity committee, $50 for the home department, $50 for the normal department, $75 for the gospel literature committee, $100 for the publication of tracts in Hebrew.

The several recommendations were taken up separately.

An amendment was moved to provide for the election of the committee, one for one year, one for two years and one for three years, and thereafter one to be elected each year, for a term of three years. After considerable discussion the amendment prevailed, as also the recommendation by a vote 34 to 28.

Further consideration of the report was deferred and the report of the librarian was read.

To the General Convention of Zion's Religio Literary Society:

As your librarian, we respectfully report that we have represented your honorable body on the library commission and have answered all letters sent us, whether concerned with general Religio work or with the library work.

The department of the commission has been maintained by the secretary, E. H. Fisher, in the Sunday-school Exponent. He also has in hand a revised leaflet. We have been working on the list of books as time would permit and expect to see to its publication immediately after conference.

A full report will be given by the commission to the General Conference and for that reason we shall not burden your records with further details.

Respectfully submitted,
S. A. Burgess.

Lamoni, Ia., March 31.

An address on "Our library—its history, its value, its support, its purpose, and its future," was made by S. A. Burgess of St. Louis.

The report of the home department superintendent was read.

To the Convention, Greeting:

We cannot give a complete report as 12 districts are still to be heard from, but from those received our department has supplied members for ten Religions, transferred 98 to locals, leaving a membership of 2275. Greatly increased interest was reported from the Spring River district last year and as a result they have made the greatest gain. Enrollment 102, net gain of 75.

Eastern Michigan comes second with a real live wire for superintendent who is doing splendid work (Anna M. Isles), Enrollment 113, net gain 53.

Chatham, Canada, sends a good report with a gain of 51 against nothing from last year. Patience and perseverance finally wins.

Independence Stake has the largest enrollment but shows a loss of 64, but to offset that two Religio have been organized from their numbers. Lamoni Stake has second largest enrollment and shows a loss of 24 with one Religio organized from their membership.

Toronto, Canada, is steadily growing with gain of 35. N. California leads in contributions, having $14.05. Colorado second with $10.28. Total contributions $100.40.

22 districts show a decided gain. Special mention should be made of the work of Sr. E. L. Madden in Oregon and Idaho, who organized 3 locals and reports 30 Home Class members. Also Sr. Hazel Kuisley who did much work in Idaho but owing to her death we were unable to get any records.

Nearly all districts show a decided gain. The lessons are well liked and the interest has greatly increased.

Some of the time was spent in field work under the direction of President Gunsolley and Supt. MacGregor. Was away six weeks and attended the reunions at Clitheral, Minn., Logan, N. Dakota, and Rich Hill, Mo. By invitation of the officers we represented the Religio and Sunday-school work at Minneapolis, Minn.

We were given every courtesy by both the ministry and reunion committees. We drafted several of the ministry into helping us and they gave us splendid service. This was realized in the spirituality manifested during the meetings as nearly everybody took part.

Traveling expenses were $70.11. Cash received $83.50. Balance of $13.39 returned to general treasurer as per itemized statement in hands of treasurer.

We also represented Graceland College and the Woman's Auxiliary. As one of the Lessons Committee met with them in their sessions.

Respectfully submitted,
Altha R. Deam.

March 25.

A blackboard review was given by Mrs. W. H. Deam of Independence.

After a song the report of the good literature committee was read:

The possibilities of good literature work was discussed under the topics named by the following. The object was discussed by Harvey Sandy, followed by Mrs. A. M. Chase of Salt Lake City, on "Ways and means." A paper by Vernon Lee of Independence, not present, on "Results and testimonials," was read by Mrs. W. H. Deam. Also a paper by A. L. Keen of Lamoni, not present, on "relation to missionary and branch work," was read by Harvey Sandy.

The normal superintendent reported. "The value of trained teachers" was discussed by Mrs. D. H. Blair, Mrs. A. M. Chase, and John F. Sheehy.

The deferred business of the recommendations committee was taken up, and the convention proceeded to elect the committee previously provided for, to have charge of college fund resulting in the election of J. A. Gardner for the three-year term, J. Becker of Willoughby Ohio for the two-year term, and Mrs. Mammie E. Cowan of Denver, Colorado, for the one-year term.

The following appropriations were made by the body upon recommendation of the appropriating committee: For general expenses $300, for social purity work. (Committee) $50, home department $50, normal department $50, gospel literature department $75, to Jerusalem workers for translating and publishing tracts in the Hebrew, $100.

AFTERNOON SESSION

Elder Daniel MacGregor offered the opening prayer following the usual opening song.

Report of committee on revision of normal lessons reported:

To the Z. R. L. S. Convention:

The Religio part of the joint committee of the Religio and Sunday-school on the Bible Normal book, report the work well in hand but not yet fully completed. The committee divided the work among themselves, but the part assigned to the Sunday-school committee has not materialized. We could have the work ready for the revising committee in a short time if the Sunday-school convention will add a committee that have time to devote to their part of the work.

We suggest that the work be published in book form and not in the Religio Arena.

J. W. Peterson,
Anna Salyards,
S. A. Burgess.

(Chair stated committee will be continued unless objected to)

Additional report of the committee on appropriations was read, and a recommendation to appropriate $100 for the use of the library commission was adopted. A further recommendation to appropriate $200 to the relief committee of the Omaha Branch for the benefit of the saints who suffered loss in the tornado, was adopted.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The nominating committee reported the names of T. J. Elliott, F. A. Russell and J. A. Gunsolley as being nominations for president. F. A. Russell withdrew and the vote by ballot gave T. J. Elliott 51 votes and J. A. Gunsolley 84 votes resulting in the election of J. A. Gunsolley.

The names of Paul N. Craig, T. J. Elliott and R. V. Hopkins were presented as nominees for the office of vice president resulting in the election of T. J. Elliott.

For Secretary the names of Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Miss Louise Giesch and Miss Mary Steele were nominated and Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser was elected.

M. H. Siegfried, John Smith and J. A. Gardner were nominated for treasurer, J. A. Gardner being chosen.

The nominees for librarian were S. A. Burgess, and Mrs. Mammie E. Cowan, Bro. Burgess being the choice of the convention.

For Superintendent of the home department Mrs. Eva Holsworth of Independence received 74 votes and Mrs. Floyd McDowell of Lamoni 62 votes, Mrs. Holsworth being elected.

Elder J. W. Rushton was permitted to make an address on "The Renaissance," which was omitted from the morning program.

PROPOSED MERGING

The following resolution was read with the recommendation of the resolution committee.

Resolved that we favor merging the Religio society and Sunday school association into one organization.

That a committee of three be appointed to act for the Religio in connection with similar action that may be taken by the Sunday school Association or general conference.

Resolved further that we believe a ruleshould be adopted to provide that the president or superintendent of the consolidated organization be nominated by; the joint council of the Presidency and Twelve, subject to confirmation, other officers to be nominated by the organization.

R. S. Salyards,
F. A. Russell.

After a careful, serious deliberation upon the foregoing resolution, with all that it involves we have concluded that, in our judgment it involves an entire change in the constitution and would therefore be unconstitutional without the required month's notice.

H. J. Davidson, Chairman Res. Com.
Margaret MacGregor, Sec. Com.

It was moved to adopt the resolution, and after some discussion the matter was deferred until the evening session and the assembly divided into the several conferences provided for in the program.

THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 3RD.

After singing J. A. Becker offered prayer.

The report of the lessons committee was read:

To the Convention:

Your Lessons Committee reports that it was decided to continue as the basis of study, Latter day revelations for the Senior, and biographies of prominent men and women of the church for the Juniors, was adopted.

The committee held sessions after the close of the convention of 1912, and during the holidays in December.

The committee favors continuing the present lesson basis.

For the committee,
J. A. Gunsolley.

QUESTION OF MERGING

The deferred matter of merging Religio and Sunday School organizations was taken up and discussion continued, after which it was moved to refer the whole matter to a committee of three for consideration and report to the convention of 1914. After further discussion the vote was taken on the motion to refer, which prevailed. R. S. Salyards, J. W. Rushton and F. M. Smith were elected as such committee.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

A proposed amendment to provide for a standing nominating committee was moved and laid up on the table without discussion.

A proposed amendment relating to the appointment of Superintendent of the normal department by the joint executives of the Sunday School and Religio executives, was adopted.

Further amendments were offered providing that the branch president be made an advisory president of the Religio, were tabled.

Article 3 section 1 of the constitution was amended to provide for the election of officers by other means than by ballot as may be desired by the convention, was adopted.

MUSICAL NUMBERS

Graceland College glee club rendered an excellent number, followed by a piano solo by Miss Laura Kelley, both of which were highly appreciated.

LESSONS COMMITTEE

A motion that the present lessons committee be retained for another year prevailed. The present committee is composed of F. M. Smith, J. A. Gunsolley, Sr. M. A. Etzenhouser, Sr. W. H. Deam, and the editor of the Quarterly.

SOCIAL PURITY COMMITTEE

C. B. Woodstock was re-elected member of the social purity committee. This committee is a joint committee of three, elected by the Religio, Sunday School association and church.

APPROPRIATION FOR CHINESE MISSION

An appropriation of $500 made last year as the Religio's offering to help in the erection of a Chinese mission house in Hawaii, not having been used, was by motion renewed.

ADDRESSES

Elder Heman C. Smith gave an address on "Home training" which was highly appreciated, followed by an address by Pres. J. A. Gunsolley.

Elder J. M. Baker, representing the relief committee of the local church at Omaha, expressed thanks for the contribution given for the relief of the tornado sufferers.

Miss Anna May Morgan, teacher of music at Graceland College sang two numbers to the delight of all, accompanied by Miss Laura B. Kelley of Independence.

The College glee club rendered the closing number, after which T. J. Elliott offered the benediction, and the convention adjourned.

MAN AND HIS POWER.

The disasters in Omaha and in Ohio bring thought to the sluggish mind. Man is mighty puny and ineffective when the great forces of nature touch his efforts. Wind and water and fire destroy the work of a lifetime in a moment. Wealth as we count it, is invoiced in an evening and has disappeared when morning comes. Men rose in heroic deeds in the Dayton flood who were scorned the day before by the millionaire whose life was saved that night. Reduced to the beginning of things the worker in the factory was the better man when disaster came and his employer was helpless. From it all must come the thought that perhaps we are setting up a false standard of wealth and power. Perhaps success is not after all the piling up of money and the holding of others enslaved to do our work for us. Perhaps after all the most useful man is not the one who has made a success in accumulating dollars. And above it all must come the knowledge that we are in hands mighty and that we own nothing. In the recorder's office are our written deeds to lands and houses and we say we own them. The flood and the fire and the wind directed by a hand mightier than ours takes away the accumulated wealth. Man is man and his accumulations are artificial.

And now the world mourns the death of the mightiest of financiers. He breathed his last in a foreign hotel and the centres of wealth in many nations trembled that the master should loose the grip of his hand. Yet that hand lies nerveless today. None who has life so poor as he. His great property is of no use to him and he faces his Maker stripped of all power, as naked as the tramp who died unknown in the wreck of a fright train.

Do these lessons teach us truly? Heed we the obvious warnings? Thousands of years ago a man who had gotten rich said: "I will pull down my barns and build greater; and there will I bestow all my grain and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry." But God said unto him, "Thou foolish one, this night is thy soul required of thee; and the things which thou hast prepared, whose shall they be?"—Editorial in Independence Examiner.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

THE COMING OF THE LORD.

JAMES E. YATES.

"And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgement that I have executed and my hand that I have laid upon them. So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day and forward." Ezek. 39:21, 22.

Here is an event spoken of in prophecy which is clearly yet in the future. When this shall have had its fulfillment Israel shall know the Lord, from that day forward, and even the heathen shall know him. Much of literal Israel at this time are in heathendom themselves in that they do not accept Jesus as the Christ but are still looking forward for the coming of their Messiah.

But at the time when the Lord manifest himself unto all nations, some of Israel who have hitherto been unbelieving as to Jesus who was crucified being the true Messiah will ask the Lord "What are these wounds in thine hands? Then shall he answer, those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." Zech. 13:6. This will occur at Christ's second coming. This advent is to be different from the first coming in many ways. He is to come this time in power and great glory, and will take "vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel."—2 Thess. 1:8. It is to be a time of disaster and destruction to some, verse 9. He will be glorified in his saints and admired in all them that believe. Verse 10. The prophet Moses, more than fourteen hundred years B. C., mentioned the same event in Deut. 18 where he said the Lord would raise up a prophet like him (Moses) and that if any other or opposing prophet should attempt to turn the people aside from this great prophet (meaning Christ) they should die.

Such condition did not obtain when Christ came the first time but it will be so when he comes again, and then all people will not only be persuaded to yield to the supremacy of the Christ as now, but will be required to do so. Verse 19.

The same event is also mentioned in Acts of the apostles chapter three, verses 20-23 as follows:

"And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you. Whom the heaven must receive until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people."

In the former personal ministry no such destruction of the wicked from among the people occurred.

Note the statement above that all the holy prophets since the world began have spoken of this great event to be: namely the restitution of all things to their peaceful and holy estate and the coming of our Lord with power, and of the calamity and destruction which is to overtake the wicked just prior to the reign of peace.

Then as this great event to be, this climax of time, this majestic inaugural of the one superb Governor for eternity has been the theme of all the holy prophets from the beginning of the world, what shall we say of modern prophets, preachers, teachers or churches who do not speak the same thing? What is the matter with modern prophets and churches who have lost the theme of all the holy men of old concerning the greatest event that would ever be known? Many churches are asleep to this vitalizing issue of Christ's personal return and literal reign on the earth.

The holy men who surrounded the Master in his former personal ministry asked him, as is recorded in the 24th chapter of Matthew, concerning the sign of his coming and of the end of the world, and he proceeded to tell them of disasters and calamities, etc., and finally told them he would come as "a thief in the night," in other words he would surprise the world by his arrival. He told the disciples that it is going to be as it was in Noah's day—a few would be ready but the many would not. So we need not be surprised to note that many men and churches, claiming to be the followers of Christ are either asleep to this issue of the hour, or are directly arrayed against the doctrine of Christ's real return to earth, and have set themselves squarely against the word spoken by Christ himself and of all the holy prophets.

Let us hear Peter, who was of those holy men, as he speaks upon this subject.

"Knowing this first that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation. . . . But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God, when the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. 2 Peter 3.

John the revelator confirms the word of the former holy prophets on this subject by describing in the 16th chapter of his revelation the calamities, hail, earthquake and storm which is to precede the Lord's coming, verifying the words of Ezekiel 38 and 39 and of Zech. 14, and of Mal. 3:1; 4:1, mentions the reign of the righteous with Christ, chapter 5:10, and chapter 20 connects the resurrection of the dead with the coming of the great day of the Lord, and closes the book with the Lord's statement to him: "surely I come quickly," or "suddenly" as Malachi worded it.

There Bible History closes. Silence reigns! The voice of living prophets among the people declaring the word of God direct to the people was not heard for hundreds of years until the prophet Joseph Smith arose and not only claimed a prophetic calling but proved the divinity of his commission by speaking in exact harmony with all that the holy prophets had spoken since the world began; also by suffering persecution and death as other prophets and holy men had suffered before him.

In the year 1831 Joseph Smith gave to the world a revelation from the Lord which contained the following: "Wherefore hearken and I will reason with you, and I will speak unto you and prophesy as unto men in days of old; and I will show it plainly as I showed it unto my disciples as I stood before them in the flesh, and spake unto them saying, as ye have asked concerning the signs of my coming in the day when I shall come in my glory in the clouds of heaven to fulfill the promises that I have made unto your fathers." Doc. and Cov. Sec. 45.

And in such plainness was this prophet Joseph inspired to speak that the words of the old prophets were given new life and rescued from the dust-covering traditions of men so that crooked paths were straightened and obscure places made plain.

And while the "little flock," Church of Jesus Christ, composed of Saints in this latter day have enjoyed the glory and endured the cross of being in the focal searchlight at the direct point of contact between heaven and earth, all the world has received a measure of blessing through the spiritual illumination which was given to the people by God's word to the prophet Joseph Smith.

Religious tolerance and sweeping reform in the great trunk lines of thought have been more due to the eleventh hour restoration of the everlasting gospel than the reform leaders, or even the saints may be aware.

It is true that "evil men and seducers are waxing worse and worse" as the prophets said they would, but all who are not of the church are not evil,—all who are outside of the "little flock" are not seducers and deceivers by any means, and it is a more splendid fact than many suppose that by the gospel renewal to the world through the prophet Joseph Smith the light has not fallen from heaven in vain.

And by the word of God to the prophets ancient and modern the time speedily cometh when the Lord will set his glory among the heathen, and all people shall know him from that day and forward, and who shall be worthy to stand when he appears.

Lord speed the day of glory, and may we also be ready.

DUTIES OF PARENTS.

In this age when ignorance of the Scriptures is so characteristic and the rage for human opinions and traditions so rampant, it is a duty doubly imperative on our brethren to give themselves much more to the study of the three books and then one of them will put a host of aliens to flight, and what is still more desirable he will have communion with God all the day, and ever rejoice in his salvation.

In the second place, there is a lack among Saints, who are heads of families, in making proper effort to bring up their children in the correction and instruction of the Lord. The children of all saints should be taught the first principles of the gospel of Christ, from the first dawning of reason. The good seed should be sown in their hearts before the strong seed of vice can take root.

From a child Timothy knew the Holy Scriptures and they were able to make him wise unto salvation, through the Christian faith. How many more Timothies might we have if we had a few more of the daughters of Lois, and a few more mother's like Eunice! Most saints in this generation appear more zealous that their children should shine on earth, than in heaven, and that they may be rich here, at the risk of eternal bankruptcy. They labor to make them rich and genteel, rather than pure and holy; and spend more time fashioning them to the foolish and wicked taste of polished society than in teaching them by precept and example, the word that is better than gold and more precious than rubies. Well, they sow darnel and they cannot reap wheat. They may have a mournful harvest and years of bitterness and sorrow may reward them for their negligence and error.

If only a tithe of the time and labor and expense that it costs to fit a son or a daughter to shine in the middle or front ranks of genteel society were spent in teaching them to fear God and keep his commandments how many more virtuous, solid and useful citizens, how many more valuable members of the family of God, how many more faithful and able witnesses for the truth of God would be found in all the land. Every Christian family ought to be a nursery for God. Their offspring should be trained for heaven for such are the promises of God, such are the facts on record, and such is the experience of Christians, that every parent who does his duty to his children may expect to see them inherit the blessings. Their didactic labors, aided by their example and their constant prayers, will seldom or ever fail of success in influencing their descendants to walk in their ways. The very commandment to bring up their children in the Lord implies its practicability. And all three books furnish us with all assurance that such labors will not be in vain. The men of high renown in sacred history were generally the sons of such parentage. The numerous failures which we witness are to be traced either to great neglect or to some fatal notion which paralyzes all effort.

I never knew but a very few families that made it their daily business to train up their children in the knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, to cause them every day to commit to memory a portion of God's word; but these few instances authorize me to think and to say that such a course, persisted in and sustained by the good example of parents, will very generally, if not universally result in the salvation of their children. And before anyone says, I have found an exception to the proverb of Solomon which says, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it," let him be shown that his children were trained up in the way they should go.

In the third place there is a wanting among the children of God. A strict regard to relative duties; we mean not only the duties which justice, truth and moderation claim, but all relative duties, so long as Christians live after the manner of men in the flesh, according to the fashion of this world, they must, like other men, contract debts which they cannot promptly pay, make covenants and bargains, give promises which they cannot fulfill and stake pledges which they are unable to redeem. All this is wholly incompatible with our profession.

A co-worker in the gospel

John Sallee.

THE END OF GREATNESS.

Take the four greatest rulers, perhaps, that ever sat upon a throne. Alexander, when he had so completely subdued the nations that he wept because there were no more to conquer, at last set fire to a city, and died in a scene of debauch. Hannibal who filled three bushels with the gold rings taken from the slaughtered knights, died at last by poison administered by his own hand, unwept and unknown, in a foreign land. Caesar, having conquered eight hundred cities, and dyed his garments with the blood of one million of his foes, was stabbed by his best friends in the very place which had been the scene of his greatest triumph. Napoleon, after being the scourge of Europe, and the desolator of his country, died in banishment, conquered and a captive.—Bowes.

Bro. W. T. Miller writes from Nance in the Southern part of Missouri, that any of the elders who could come to that place would be welcomed. He believes good could be done.

CORRESPONDENCE

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., March 2.

Editor Ensign:—As we have not seen anything from this part of the country I write a few lines hoping it may benefit some.

We are among the isolated ones and are trying to live as best we can but with the surroundings we have we realize we make a great many mistakes but with the prayers of the saints, and the help of the Lord we hope to be found among the worthy.

We take the Ensign and get the Herald and Hope from my folks and do not see how we could get along without them.

This is a thinly settled district and a very expensive mission for the elders, so we seldom see any of them except our worthy Bro. C. W. Prettyman and that not as often as we would like. He has made several attempts to present the gospel to this community but with little or no avail. We live right in the midst of a "Holiness" settlement and they are too prejudiced to either read or listen.

Wife and I were baptized two years ago last October and can truly say we are glad we have thus far obeyed the gospel of Christ but realize being baptized is only the first step in the kingdom.

There are only two other families of saints near here and it seems they are more or less indifferent in regard to their soul's salvation.

We are striving to pay our tithing but as we are very poor in this world's goods and have so much other indebtedness it is hard to get much money for that purpose but trust with the help of the Lord we will be able to pay the rest this summer, also to send some to the Order of Enoch as we believe that as essential as tithing.

Dear saints, pray for us that we may be able to live a life worthy of imitation for the two little boys' God has entrusted to our care.

Your brother in the gospel of Christ, E. R. Sivits.

FARMINGTON, Ky., Feb. 28.

Dear Editor:—As I never see anything in your columns from the Farmington Branch, I will try in my weak way to write a few words. I live near Oakland and have been in the church only a short while. My husband has been a member of the church for a number of years. We take the Ensign and enjoy reading it very much.

I must say that I know this latter day work to be true. We have had things in our home to that effect. Our baby was taken seriously ill with pneumonia last fall, so we called an elder who administered to her and was almost instantly healed and has never been sick an hour since that time. We are giving the Lord all the praise.

We always try to attend church each time there are services at our little church. We have quite a few members while several have lately moved to Independence and we miss them so much here but are glad to see the upbuilding of Zion. Now hoping these few lines may be the means of some one learning as I have learned, I sincerely ask the prayers of the saints that I may ever be faithful and raise my little girl right.

Your sister in truth, Mrs. Pearl Fields.

WOODWARD, Okla., Feb. 23.

Dear Ensign:—We ask space in your valuable paper to report the progress of the work at Fern, Okla., our old home in which the writer assisted. Elder J. H. Baker came to Fern on the 8th inst. and commenced to preach there to the saints and people. I joined him on the 13th and on the 14th we baptized my brother-in-law and wife, who called me by phone to be there. We held forth over Sunday and held sacrament meeting at 3 o'clock after the regular Sunday school and morning service then Bro. Baker started to Fringy the 17th, came back the 18th and preached at Bro. O. Williams to a house full. After service my sister asked for baptism and on the following day her husband joined her at the water and was baptized making a total of 19, that has obeyed the gospel from Fern in the last 5 years. The saints with one accord agreed to petition the missionary in charge for the return next year of Elder J. H. Baker. They are talking for a branch of the church now at Fern.

We also had the pleasure of entertaining Bro. Hubert Case and Bro. Alva Christensen. Now an Elder, at our Woodward home 1302 2d street. They held forth five nights here. We got the court house and had a good interest though the crowd was small in comparison to the amount of room. The good seed was sown and will later bring two more into the church, another of my sisters and husband told us they expect to obey ere long—the good work goes on.

Woodward is being talked of as the next plausible place for the reunion of the Western District of Okla. Freedom branch wants it here and Bro. Baker says he will bring his big tent for that purpose. Let all the western saints get busy and help. Get the reunion nearer home. With the Wichita Falls Railroad now into Woodward from the south going out northwest and the Santa Fe east and west we have ample Railway accommodations. We feel that Woodward should have the consideration of all parties concerned.

Yours for the rescue of the truth, A. H. Mooney.

IN THE REGIONS ROUND ABOUT.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., March 29.

Editor Ensign:—I write from Stewartsville, Mo., to which place I came a day ago. About the second General Conference I attended some few years ago, I roomed at a place where there was another roomer, very genial, by the name of Charlie Faul. He said: "You come to Stewartsville and I will show you a good time." This has been my first opportunity. Coming home from Idaho in December, it was too expensive to return there for so short a time, which together with some business changes necessary at home has kept me from getting far away, though I insist that I am not an interloper by any means and never wish to be the victim of a transfer from the office I now hold to that of a high priest on account of forcing local opposition; in other words, the assumption on my part as a seventy of the prerogatives of a high priest.

Here I find old veterans of both the civil and the gospel war. Among them I. N. Roberts who insists on my feet being under his table before I go away, who has fought under both Robert Lee and Jesus Christ. And I was interested today in hearing him relate how when the war cloud had fled away he returned as a soldier of the cross to the very field where he with others had grappled for supremacy with carnal weapons, and thereon presented the message of peace on earth, good will toward men. And here lives A. W. Head who was a boy with our Joseph, and John Davis who was my co-laborer the past year.

Stewartsville is about the center of a district which has a population of between one and two thousand Saints. It is sixty or seventy miles from Independence, and land here, as good as shone upon by the sun of nature, is purchasable for from $90 to $100 per acre.

Enroute hither I delivered addresses in Atchinson and in the brick church in St. Joseph. At the former place I was the guest of Dr. McNichols and wife; at the latter, of V. M. Goodrich and wife, whose (Bro. G's) return for the ensuing year is the prayer of his congregation, notwithstanding he has been there six years.

Dr. McNichols is not a member of the church, but his wife, spare bed, automobile, and purse are. And I desire to make this passing observation in reference to Atchison branch and Sunday-school, that in the conduct of the latter and as to the musical aspect of both, they are not one whit behind Independence—only where numbers would make the difference—and I am quite sure that flattery is a distant stranger to me when I say, that in musical excellency, for a band of its size, they surpass anything I have observed in my travels. Sr. McNichols is Sunday-school superintendent and chorister, and Elder Cool very coolly administers the affairs of the branch as its chief executive.

Before closing I desire to include a very unique document in print which was handed me here by Sr. Madge Head, whose father is a war veteran. It is of historical value as well as amusing and interesting:

A SALE BILL OF 67 YEARS AGO.

A copy of a sale bill advertising a sale in Pike Co., Mo., 61 years ago came into possession of one of our readers recently. Pike Co. was headquarters for the outfitters to California during the gold craze. The bill is as follows:

"PUBLIC SALE.

"State of Missouri, county of Pike, to whom it may concern: The undersigned will on Tuesday, Sept. 29th, A. D. 1846, sell at public outcry for cash on premises where Coon Creek crosses the old Mission road, the following chattel, to-wit: 6 yoke oxen, with yoke and chains, two wagons with beds, 3 nigger venches, 4 buck niggers, 3 nigger boys, 2 prairie plows, 25 steel traps, 1 barrel pickled cabbage, 1 hogs-head tobacco, 1 lot of nigger shoes, 1 spinning wheel, 1 loom, 13 fox hounds, a lot of coon, mink and skunk skins, and a lot of other articles. Am gwine to California.

JOHN DOE.

Richard Doe, cryer. Free, head-cheese, apples and hard sard."

ALVIN KNISLEY.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 21.

Editor Ensign:—As I have never seen a letter from this place I am writing this with the hopes of some one in this city who is more able to give a correspondence taking it up. We have a good many members in Columbus, and seldom have a sacrament meeting that we don't see the power of God made manifest. We have a mission in the south end where we expect to have a branch sometime in the near future. Have a nice Sunday-school and Religio in the north end of city where most of the members live and also have a very nice Sunday-school and Religio in South Columbus where the mission is. Most all the members in Columbus are faithful and trying to promote the work. There has been a very exciting time over religion, as we have had the Rev. Wm. A. Sunday here for the last seven weeks.

I give a few reference here to read, When you have the blues read the 27th chapter of Psalms. When your pocket book is empty read the 37th Psalms. When people seem unkind read the 15th chapter of St. John. When discouraged with the work read 126th Psalm. When you are out of sorts read the 12th chapter of Hebrews. If you are loosing confidence in your brethren read the 13th chapter of First Corinthians. If you can't have your own way keep silent and read the 3rd chapter of James.

This is the first time I have written to any of the papers, I have been in the work about 18 months and am thankful that the gospel has come to me. I know the work is true and have no desire to turn back.

Hoping if this goes to print it will strengthen some brother or sister who isn't as strong in the faith as they should be. Let us pray for one another, and go on to perfection is the prayer of your brother,

W. H. MOORE.

TRIDRE, Sask., Feb. 22.

Dear Ensign:—It is a great pleasure for me to read the letters and sermons in the ENSIGN. I noticed a letter in the last paper from Bro. Long and I see he has the same trouble as we have in this part and that is indifference. We very seldom get an outsider into our meetings. The greater part of the people being Lutherans and their minister will tell them to have nothing to do with us as we are a very bad people. Our branch is scattered so much this winter we do not hold regular meetings some going to Montana some in Dakota and the writer about ten miles from the branch meeting place. Hope to be able to get our people together again as soon as spring opens up. It seems queer to me how some people can go on reading their Bible and not see where they are wrong. It seems so plain to me.

My wife and I and family are striving to keep the camp fire burning and do what we can for the work. I expect to open up meetings in this new town as soon as the weather will permit. I preached one sermon here last Sunday but there was not many out as the members of the branch took us by surprise on Sunday morning and came over for Sunday-school and preaching. Ever praying for the advancement of the work I am yours,

H. A. SPRAGUE.

CALVERT CITY, Ky.

Dear Ensign:—As I have been reading some interesting letters in the ENSIGN, I was spiritually helped very much. I enjoy reading them for they increased my faith. I live in an isolated place, just my mother, aunt and myself are the only Saints around here.

We are always pleased to meet one of our faith but we seldom ever do. I was in Independence, Mo., five months and attended the Sunday-school and prayer meetings regular. I learned to love the Saints there, and miss being with them on Sundays. I am looking forward when I may have the opportunity of meeting them again.

I would be pleased to hear from any of the Saints as I love to read letters from them.

I am your sister in the gospel faith, Lola Cooper.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Miss Winnie Upton, Owasso, Okla.—I am still trying to keep the covenant that I made with God when I went into the waters of baptism. I feel that my weakness is great, and being young in the faith as well as years, I meet with many temptations. I ask the saints to remember me in their prayers, and if there are any saints living in or near Owasso I would like to hear from them. I came here from my home in Johnson City, Ill., last month.

Mrs. Warren Woods, South Portland, Me.—Enclosed you will find $1 for the ENSIGN. I have lately been born into the kingdom, being baptized by Elder George Robby, March 9th. I do thank my kind heavenly Father for this true gospel of Jesus, and that I have heard it and heeded it in time. My husband has not as yet, but I am in hopes he will soon obey.

Mrs. Ada F. Keith, Scottsville, Mich.—We are sending in our renewal to the ENSIGN which we feel as though we could not get along without. It is always full of good instruction to those who will take it, and encouragement to those who are in need, which is many times oftener than we are aware of, and often when we are through reading them we pass them on for others to hear the good story as well as ourselves. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and that the coming conference will be a happy, peaceful and instructive one with much good to all.

CONFERENCE MINUTES

SOUTHWESTERN TEXAS.—Pursuant to the appointment of last August the conference was held at Pipe Creek in Bandera County, beginning on the evening of the fourteenth and lasting through the following Sunday. Although nothing unusual can be recorded of this conference, it was quite a success. Besides attending to the routine work, six services were held and these were generally well attended. Among the elements contributing to the success of the conference might be mentioned the prevalence of fine weather and the presence of two of our missionaries, Bro. Glau R. Kaykendall and W. H. Manning.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

According to custom April 6th, the anniversary of the organization of the church, was the day for the convening of the sixtieth annual conference. The delegates and ex-officio met at Lamoni, Iowa, the assembly being called to order at 11 a. m. by Frederick M. Smith of the First Presidency. Associated with him upon the platform was his father, Joseph Smith, president of the church, and Elbert A. Smith, also of the first presidency. E. L. Kelley presiding bishop, W. H. Kelley president of the apostles, Charles Derry of the patriarch, T. W. Chatburn of the high priests, and H. O. Smith of the presidents of seventy.

"Redeemer of Israel" was sung and prayer was offered by Pres. E. A. Smith. The assembly proceeded to organize and by motion and vote the First Presidency were chosen to preside over the conference, and were authorized to make all appointments necessary to complete the organization, and to arrange the order of services and appoint speaker, etc.

The choir of one hundred voices sang the anthem "Unfold, Ye Portals" from "The Redemption," by Gounod, being led by Albert N. Hoxie, Jr.

The chairman then announced the following appointment: Secretary, church secretary, R. S. Salyards, assisted by F. A. Russell and M. H. Siegfried. Stenographer, Mrs. Belle R. James, chorists, Albert N. Hoxie, Mrs. May Skinner, and Mrs. Audentia Anderson. Ushers, local deacons with power to choose assistants.

Committee on credentials F. A. Russell, C. E. Harpe, and Roy V. Hopkins.

Organists, Miss Pauline Anthony, Miss Laura Kelley and Paul N. Craig.

The chairman stated that it being the Sabbath day no other business would come before the body until the following day, and that the time would be devoted to addresses.

Elders W. H. Kelley, H. O. Smith, E. L. Kelley and Charles Derry spoke briefly, followed by the chairman Pres. F. M. Smith. Announcements were made of the services of the day, a hymn sung, and President E. A. Smith offered the benediction.

At the same hour an overflow meeting was held in the lower auditorium in charge of Elders F. A. Smith and Amos Berve, the sermon being preached by Elder F. A. Russell.

Two services were held at 2:30 p. m. A prayer service in the upper auditorium in charge of C. J. Hunt and V. M. Goodrich and a prayer service for the Melchisedec priesthood in the lower room in charge of three cousins, F. M. Smith, Elbert A. Smith and F. A. Smith. The sacrament was administered in both meetings. At the latter service H. O. Smith of the presidents of Seventy was ordained to the office of High Priest by F. A. Smith and F. M. Sheehy, provision for the same having been made by the conference of 1912.

In the evening F. M. Sheehy preached, assisted by Wm. Bradbury, and T. W. Chatburn preached in the lower auditorium assisted by Alvin Knisley.

MONDAY 7.

While the various quorums of officers were in session at their appointed places, a prayer service was held at the church at 9 a. m. in charge of J. A. Tanner and G. Harrington, and at 10:45 a. m. Bishop E. Lillard preached assisted by Lester Haas.

BUSINESS SESSION.

Pres. F. M. Smith called the assembly to order at 2 p. m. After singing, prayer was offered.

Chair announced that Sr. Belle R. James had chosen as her assistants Raymond Scott, Miss Ruth Lewis and Miss Blanch Allen. Also that I. A. Smith and Charles Fry, would be press committee.

The printed report of the credential committee was distributed and after some corrections and additions was adopted.

The reports of ministers in charge of missions were read, viz.:

W. H. Kelley, G. T. Griffiths and J. W. Wight for mission number one; J. F. Curtis and I. N. White for No. two. U. W. Greene, number three; R. C. Russell number four; F. M. Sheehy, Pacific Slope mission; J. W. Rushton, Rocky Mountain mission; W. H. Greenwood, British Isles mission; H. N. Hansen, Scandinavian mission; C. A. Butterworth, Australian mission; C. H. Lake, Society Island mission; F. A. Smith, Great Lakes mission; Reese Jenkins, Palestine mission.

President Joseph Smith spoke a short time as follows:

SPEECH BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

April 7, 1913.

Brother President, Members of the Conference—I regret exceedingly that I am in such a condition, that I may not be able to make you hear me, for the message that I have is of importance to us all, and of peculiar and striking importance to a goodly number of us; and I should be sorry, that, if at the opening of this business session, I should forget the pit whence I was dug, the quarry whence I was gathered, the position from which I was called, and the one unto which I was entrusted, with interests of paramount importance to me, and as I have believed and now believe of great importance to the world.

My message is one of warning, and I want to warn some of these tempestuous spirits which are among us, and who feel it strongly their duty to watch over the spiritual and temporal interests of the church, that the time has come for every man who speaks or attempts to speak in the name of God, to remember who he is, and the Master whom he is essaying to serve, and to put the question of self out of sight. The Master said we could not serve two masters; we could not serve God and Mammon; and at the same time, Master said that the children of this world are wiser in their day and generation than the children of the kingdom; and if we have made a mistake in the past, if we have failed to understand the duties devolving upon us in either the spiritual or the temporal departments of the church, and if for this reason apparent disaster has come upon us, or is looming up before us. It is far, far more important for us to quietly and manfully assume the consequences of what we have essayed to do in good faith, and may possibly have come short of doing than it is for us to quarrel among ourselves, and seek with all the vigor in us to fasten the blame of our condition upon somebody who has been at work in the same interests that we have, and as we ought to admit, as honestly serving as ourselves. This latter course can only produce continual distrust, does not help us in the least to lift or shift the heavy burdens that are resting upon us, but it only adds to these unfortunate burdens, the condition of a man serving in dejection and serving in misapprehension, and serving in dejection of his own spirit, that he can not force conditions to comply to his ideas of what they should be. You will understand what I have been saying, when some of these questions that have vexed and annoyed us in the past, shall again arise in our midst, to vex and annoy us, not only in this session, but possibly for years to come. One thing that I refer to is the apparent condition of the great indebtedness of the church.

It is beyond question true that as a body, as an organized body, we are in debt. Which is wiser for us to nag each other, to trouble ourselves and others in throwing blame upon those who are working with us, and thereby disturb those relations of amity and good will that should rule among co-workers professing to be men of God; or assuming a portion of the responsibility as resting upon us, willingly accept a portion of the blame, and do what we can to meet the indebtedness of either a spiritual or temporal nature, as men of God should? I can not forget that the body, the larger part of the body before me, especially that recognized as the spiritual officers and forces of the church, are spenders of the church's money rather than those who are at work temporarily, to gather that which is essential unto the welfare of the church? I know, and I have had reason for the last two years to contemplate some of this condition, that too many of us assume in our actions, at least, that the church is an organic body, which by virtue of its organization, may assume rank among associations as a millionaire organization, and that if we can, by any possibility become creditors of that church, sooner or later, we arrive at the condition that the church is under obligation to us, and that they who dispense moneys of the church are under obligations to meet our demands, our necessities, our wants; and I have known that there are individuals, and I trust that if I speak plainly, and the words that I utter, reach tender hearts, that they will at the same time reach discriminating minds and honest purposes, as I know full well that this body is composed of. I say and repeat, I know that we too often neglect to remember whence, and how the church moneys are gathered, and how it is that they are spent for the good of the body in its different departments, and to meet its different obligations to the general body, and the public services of the ministry. We forget the sums that are to be accumulated, sums of material aid and comfort that are needful; we forget how they are gathered, that it is simply the result of faith in the single membership, and the meeting of an obligation of a pecuniary character taken upon the individual by virtue of his becoming united with the church, in the spiritual form of baptism, and becoming associated with the body of Christ in carrying out a great work. I say, we forget the little streams whence these sums, that are to fall into the general coffers of the church, come, where they have their rise, and how they reach the general coffers of the church, and we ought to remember that every man, who like myself, is dependent upon the church, should use that which comes from the general body, with a far more honest purpose, with a far greater devotion of self-abnegation and self-sacrifice than one should do if they were laboring with their hands, for their own support, and have won from the world in their labors that which sustained them from day to day. I have seen, I have known, that we are in this respect far too neglectful, and we forget, seriously forget the sources whence these moneys of material support for the ministry and its work, for the comfort of the Homes, and the educational interests that we have, we forget where they come from and how they reach us and how they accumulate, and too frequently we spend them more freely and without a thought whence they came, which we should by no means neglect.

I have now been engaged in this work, as you know from the history, fifty-three years, and the jubilee year I was greeted with confidence and affection by the body. My usefulness, my days of usefulness are past, and it is only on this borrowed time, that I am permitted the satisfaction and the honor of your association, and the blessings which flow from that, and I know, looking back along the history of my life, in connection with the church that I have, but on two occasions, ever left my home with the idea of dropping my spiritual work for the purpose of having a good time, to minister unto the lusts of the eyes and the imaginations of the heart. In other words, I have been engaged in the Master's cause, and I always felt that I could not afford to spend the church's money for gratifying the sensations of my body in seeing the world. God knows that I have seen enough of the evil of it, without seeking among its frivolities (?) for the idle pleasures and gratification of the senses that in these business sessions we will, each and all of us, remember the thought that I have suggested, not with a view of finding fault with my brethren and sisters, either upon this or any other occasion, but fore-warning them, warning them to be against the fact which will present itself by which undue service of self or undue crimination of others or an undue censure may be put upon others, who have served the church in the past. The day has been, as many of you will remember, when I have always stood first in the defence of a defenceless man, if he were attacked in his absence before the body called the church. I can not now hear what goes on around me, I only know that which comes to my special attention, by reason of it being told that I may in some sense help those who are engaged in the work. I shall do what I can.

I have thought it better and I think so still, that it is better for a man, a soldier to perish at his post, than it is for him to lie down supinely under evil conditions, and allow those things which he should meet in a manly fashion to pass over him unchecked, and unnoticed. May God help us, my brethren, that we who strive to do business here for the church, may remember who we are, how we are striving to serve Him, and how with the injunction for us to help each other, and to help our neighbor comes first in its exhibition in our field of service to the man who stands next to us in the great battle at our right or left hand. And when we shall have done that in its true sense we will understand what it is that we are called upon to do in this respect, and I feel thankful to God, that I have been permitted to meet you once again, as I had little hope to do two years ago, when I was here.

I leave my thoughts with you, and wish you to understand and continue to understand that the vow that I took upon myself April 6, 1860, still stands recorded in the archives of heaven and will face me, and alas, it will face others who have for a time stood with me, who have drifted away upon the waves of unfortunate mental reservation, and mental misunderstanding, mental inability to comprehend the force and value of the evidences of this work which we have so abundantly received. I should feel if I should now give way to doubt as I heard a sister express herself only a few days ago when in a feeling of reverence, she said "Brother Joseph, I should be ashamed to get down upon my knees and ask God to give me an evidence that this work is true after all that I have passed through and have been permitted to see and know."

May God's blessing be with us all is my prayer.

A petition from the Hamilton conference, New South Wales, asking for an expression as to the kind of wine—whether fermented or unfermented—that should be used at the sacrament, was referred to the first presidency and twelve.

Several petitions relating to division, and boundary lines of districts were referred to a committee composed of R. S. Salyards, C. I. Carpenter, J. F. Garver, O. W. Newton, and F. A. Smith.

REVELATION RECEIVED

By word from the Editor we learn that there has been a revelation received, but he was unable to get a copy of it in time for this issue. It will appear in our next. The revelation releases Apostles W. H. Kelley, I. N. White, J. W. Wight and F. A. Smith, the latter to be presiding Patriarch. The new apostles to be W. M. Aylor, J. E. Kelley, Paul M. Hanson and J. A. Gillen. E. A. Blakeslee is to be ordained a bishop, and to give his whole time in the presiding bishopric.

NOTES ON THE CONVENTIONS AND CONFERENCE.

President Joseph Smith was able to attend the business sessions but twice during the first week on account of the continued rain. He is in his eighty-first year.

The business of the church is growing to such an extent that the conference is under the necessity of referring many matters, such as were formerly done in open session, to the quorums or special committees.

The attendance is perhaps the largest ever known at a general conference. Delegates are present from every part of the United States and Canada.

Elders J. W. Davis and E. F. Robertson are delighted with their opportunity of attending conference again, having just returned from a four years' mission to Australia via Egypt and Palestine.

The church choir has rendered excellent service under the leadership of Albert N. Hoxie and his associates. The general church choir has come to stay, i. e. for general conferences, and the movement indicates growth in church work. A goodly number of talented musicians assist along the musical line with solos, etc.

The Religio and Sunday school conventions covered a wide range of work evidencing progress during the year, though in some points there seemed to exist a tendency to return to earlier methods. Is it possible to progress too fast?

One feature of the conventions which has caused some unfavorable comment is the effort to crowd too much work into the available time. The sessions were too long, and much on the program had to be omitted.

A very interesting service was held on the morning of Friday the 11th when two Indians of the Cheyenne tribe of Oklahoma, both elders in the church spoke of how the gospel was brought to them by the elders of this church, and how they had received the Spirit by which they knew it was true. We hope to publish these addresses soon.

During the business session of Saturday 12th, when the chairman had presented Chief Three Fingers, and Philip Cook with copies of the Book of Mormon and they had made simple but appropriate replies of acceptance, there was a touching meeting between the Chief and Joseph Smith, the aged president of the church. The dignified Chief who did not understand English was interpreted by Philip Cook, and President Smith being blind and largely deaf because of advanced years, was under the necessity of having the interpreted words repeated to him by Bro. T. W. Chatburn. The situation was somewhat difficult, but the meeting was none the less cordial for the two leaders held each other's hand during the introduction and conversation.

CORRESPONDENCE

Blockow, Mo., March 2.

Editor Ensign—It has been a long time since I last wrote to the columns of our dear missionary paper. I have often looked and waited long for some more ready writer to give you the news from this part of the Lord's vineyard. Since none have ventured I will assay the task. The ENSIGN is a very welcome visitor and has been coming ever since 1900, laden every week with good news from every part of God's vineyard. I have sent out several subscriptions of the ENSIGN. Last year I sent the paper to A. J. Hoyt of Rosendale. After reading it about one year and such other church literature as he could get hold of he confessed that he believed this was to be of God and the writer was permitted to baptize him, with three others during our district conference last October. Now he rejoices in the latter day work.

I know this work is of God; if I did not I could not stand against some of the trials that I have been called upon to pass through.

Man is weak and is often false and tries to display his genius to the injury of the work as well as of others of his fellow men. If it were not for the divine part of this work—had I not the evidence that this church was from a source higher than man—Bro. Torrance would not do all that he does in the interest of this work. But I am satisfied that the work is of God and that it will triumph over all regardless of false brethren and the "I am it" that manifests itself now and then.

Since the early dawn of the history of man he has been inclined to wander away from God, and devise ways of his own in which to do what God wants him to do.

Because of envy, jealousy and evil designs man has gotten away so far from God, until Christianity is broken up into a multitude of bands endeavoring to worship God. "But God's ways are not man's ways." "As the heavens are higher than the earth so are God's ways higher than man's ways." Let us seek for God's ways. Jesus says, (Matt. 7:7). Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, and knock and it shall be opened unto you.

It is the carnal man that must be subjugated and no one else can do it but the individual himself so there is plenty for each one to do and have no time for idleness. The numerical strength of the Guilford branch is 103, we are located 30 miles north of St. Joseph, Mo., on the C. G. W. R. R., we have Sunday-school every Sunday at 10 a. m., superintended by Bro. R. M. Jeffries. The majority are farmers and some are quite a distance from our place of meeting, so that some are not regular attendants; however we have good school and had we more room could double our school soon. We hold meeting every Sunday, preaching every second and fourth Sundays, prayer and sacrament the first Sunday, and testimony meeting the third Sunday of each month. The officers of the branch are Pres. T. A. Ivie, Priest W. B. Torrance, Teacher W. T. Ross and Deacon A. O. Beck. Bro. W. T. Ross is leader of the choir. There are young people here that are musically talented which if developed will be a help to the work of God. Young brothers and sisters put forth every effort you can to develop your God-given talents and labor to the advancement of the work of God.

Oh! that we might always work together; blend our energies together in the interest of each other and the work of God. May selfishness, jealousy, pride of life, evil ambition and every trait of carnality be obliterated, driven from the lives of God's people, and the various Christian graces be cultivated and cherished. This we can do, and must do if we are to be the people of God. Young people have advantages and opportunities today that were not enjoyed by our fathers and mothers thirty years ago.

So young people try and avail yourselves of these privileges and opportunities to increase your mental and spiritual abilities unto the honor and glory of our heavenly Father.

Bro. C. E. Willey held a few meetings the last week in February; the weather hindered some. Bro. Willey is a good preacher and is enthusiastic and courageous in the work.

May God bless his people is the prayer of your brother, W. B. Torrance.

ROCK ISLAND, TEXAS, March 8.

Dear Editor—It is now almost five months since we broke up our home in Holden, Mo., to come to this south land and I have thought frequently to write of our trip and experiences. We left Holden on Sunday, Oct. 13th, there being a number of saints and friends at the depot to bid us goodby and success and health in our new home. We left the three oldest children in Holden until the close of school, and wended our way to the home of Sr. Jessie Allen, at Independence, attending services at the stone church, not knowing when we would have the pleasure of again meeting the saints in services there. Monday we bade adieu to the center place, stopping off at Girard, Kansas, visiting a few days with my kin, and my old home, then on to Kragfisher, Okla., met Bro. Hubert Case and family, T. J. Smith and others, then on to Reading, near our old homestead, where the gospel found us, visiting with Bro. J. L. Vanvalkenburg and family, and Bro. H. H. Rowland and family. It seemed strange to hear of the interest in the gospel around there, after the freezing out that the elders got just before we left there. The experiences which we got while in Holden are of great help to us now that we are isolated. There is one saint, a Sr. Harter living about 4 miles from here.

The 4th of January, Bro. W. E. Peak made us a visit on his way to San Antonio, and we tried to get the M. E. church also the Baptist church but was refused, "As Christ said, . . . you are the servant of him whom you list to obey." In the religious world the rule holds good, that the offspring partakes of the characteristics of its parent, and we find the same spirit manifested as was in the old Roman church. You can't tell the people the gospel of Christ in any other way than we see it, you must believe the Bible as we teach it or you are not christian. Rock Island is now having its second revival, this winter—a great big empty noise—a very poor grade of husks, is all the feeding the people get at their hands. All the food we get now is from the church papers. Meeting the different people we are forced to see how little regard and time they have for religion. If there are any saints near here we would like to meet them, or any passing through would be glad to have them stop off. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion and the spread of the gospel.

Yours in Christ,

Dr. Geo. M. Hiles.

JERRY CITY, Ohio, March 9.

Dear Ensign—I thought a few lines from this part of the Master's vineyard might not be amiss. The work at this place is not in a very flattering condition, although there have been many efforts made to get the gospel before the people, but the people seem to be satisfied with their idols. Just at present we are mourning the loss of Sr. Thatcher, who departed this life March 4th. The funeral was held in the Christian church at Rudolph, Bro. W. S. Heltrick of Toledo, Ohio, preached the funeral assisted by the writer. The singing was rendered by the choir of said church. The sermon by Bro. Heltrick was very good and seemed to be well received. He paid a glowing tribute to the Christian life of Sr. Thatcher who had endeared herself to the hearts of the saints and those that knew her. She had been a great sufferer but was very patient through it all, and was very calm when she realized the end was near. Her zeal and love for the church was unbounded—no task or sacrifice too great for her to perform. She was baptized by U. W. Greene, in 1904 and was an apt student from that time on, and an able defender of the work. She was ever on the alert to tell the glad story of the restored gospel to others. We shall miss her, but her influence still lingers. She leaves six sons (who have grown to manhood) to mourn their loss. Her husband Paul Thatcher was buried on election day and she died on inauguration day.

Your brother,

E. Patten.

ENDOWMENTS OF "POWER EROM ON HIGH."

The term endow signifies to give, bestow, empower, authorize, to clothe with, invest with power, some favor, gift, talent, etc. It may pertain to temporal or spiritual things." We will now consider it as pertaining to things spiritual. All power comes from God, whether physical, mental or spiritual; whether in the heavens or on the earth. We recognize that we are in a world of conflict between two opposing influences, good and evil, and of necessity we must stand on the one side or the other, "as the Savior declares, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

As a church and as individual members of the church we have enlisted in the service of the Lord. When we entered into the church we consecrated all our powers of body and spirit to the service of God—to engage in the great conflict between truth and error, against evil in every form, and to continue in that warfare to the end. But we find the enemy is subtle, cunning and powerful; we are weak and unskilled. Unable to cope with the enemy alone and of ourselves either as a church or as individuals. Our great Captain has foreseen the lack on our part and has made ample provisions to meet every necessity, both of the individual and of the church as a whole. He says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments, and I will pray the Father and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of truth." "The Comforter which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you." John, chapters 14, 15, 16. Again he says, "He shall guide you into all truth," etc. From this promise we learn that the Spirit will dwell in us and abide with us, guide us into all truth, open the future to our view, testify of the Messiah, even Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

That this glorious promise belongs to every true believer. See Peter's statement, speaking under the divine influence, (Acts 2:38,39), "And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you and to your children, and all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." To show further, that this promise was not confined to the Apostles, Peter declares, God hath given the Holy Ghost to them that obey him. Acts 5:32. With this endowment came the power to heal the sick, cast out devils, etc. Mark 16, as Jesus there promises, to them who believe and are baptized. Similar blessings were enjoyed by God's people on this Western Continent and especially after Christ appeared to them, (See Book of Nephi B. M.), and through that power mighty works were done in the name of the Lord Jesus, proving that "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation, he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." Acts 10:34, 35.

There were special endowments given to some of the people of God to enable them to cope successfully with the peculiar conditions surrounding them in their day. Adam, Enoch, Noah, Moses, Abraham, Joseph, Daniel, the three Hebrew children, etc., etc. Christ received an endowment at the commencement of his public career. Matt. 3 and Luke 4. He received a special one on the Mount of Transfiguration. Peter, an eye witness, says, Christ "received from God the Father, honor and glory, when there came such a voice from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." 2d Peter 1:16, 17, 18. Paul recounts the mighty works wrought by the ancient worthies through the endowment of power given to them. Heb. 11. The Brother of Jared was highly favored of God because of his exceeding faith.

He was permitted to see the Lord. Enoch walked with God. Isaiah saw the Lord sitting upon a throne. Such was the power with which holy men of God were endowed, in ancient times, and since he is no respecter of persons, he is equally willing to endow his people now, according to their needs and faith. The great endowment given on the Day of Pentecost was a wonderful fulfillment of his promise to his disciples, not alone to the Twelve, for Luke informs us "The number of names together were about a hundred and twenty;" (Acts 1: 15), and both Joel and Peter foretold the great endowments that God has decreed shall come to his people in the last days. Joel foretold the gathering of the nations against Israel, Israel's deliverance by the hand of God and he told of the great endowments that shall follow; and Peter using almost the same words says, "And it shall come to pass in the last days saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams; and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy." Acts 2:17, 18. Isaiah foretells the glorious effects of this endowment. Isaiah 11, also 64; Joel 2:14, 23. The Scriptures teem with evidence that in the last days God will abundantly pour out upon his people, the Spirit of power, light and peace. The Prophet Nephi in the Book of Mormon, says, "And it came to pass that I, Nephi, beheld the power of the Lamb of God, that it descended upon the Saints of the church of the Lamb; and upon the covenant people of the Lord who were scattered upon all the face of the earth, and they were armed with righteousness and with the power of God in great glory. 1 Nephi 3:230, 231. (Authorized Edition.)

But before this great endowment can come in the last days there must be a preparation in the hearts and minds of men to receive it. Forasmuch as there has been a great departure from the path of righteousness and men deny the apparition of the Holy Ghost, as enjoyed in ancient days, there must needs be a restoration of the gospel in its purity as taught by Christ and his apostles, and as foreseen by John when on the Isle of Patmos. Rev. 14:6. And as many as shall receive the restored gospel with their whole hearts are to be made partakers of this power. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Saints, stands as a witness that the gospel has been restored and the work of the Holy Spirit has begun to be manifest therein. And thousands have been made to rejoice in its life-giving power, in proportion to their faithfulness to the covenant they have made with God.

These are what may be termed special endowments and general endowments. I understand a special endowment to be one to enable its recipient to meet some special, or great requirement, or trial, or duty, such as Moses, Daniel, Jesus and others of the ancient worthies were called upon to perform or endure, a general endowment may be that portion of the Holy Spirit given to each and every member who lives rightly before God. Special endowments were given to those whom God had chosen as his instruments to inaugurate this great latter day work, and to carry it on to completion, under Divine direction.

That such special endowment was promised and enjoyed, see Doctrine and Covenants, sections 17, 38, 91, 92, 102, 107, and Church History. A general endowment is that promised, Acts 2:17, 18, 38, 39. Paul says, "The Manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit with all." It is manifest in giving us wisdom, to more fully understand the things of God, increasing our knowledge, our faith, brightening our hope, and in many ways comforting our hearts. Other outward manifestations of the Spirit are in tongues, prophecies, healing, etc., as the Spirit may deem wisdom to bestow for the edification of the body of Christ, in our assemblies for the worship of God. But while we as a church, or as individuals, enjoy the blessings promised we must see to it that we bear the fruit of the Spirit, which is, love, joy, peace, longuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance, (Gal. 5:22, 23), or we will be found among that class of whom Christ speaks (Matt. 7:21, 22, 23.) Thence the necessity of our cultivating the excellencies and graces of the gospel, as well as cherishing its gifts. Then we shall be prepared for the great endowment of eternal life.

MANNERS IN BUSINESS.

Courtesy is a necessary asset to a successful business. All large concerns recognize the necessity of their employees being obliging and mannerly. To some it is not natural to be polite, and it is a virtue they can acquire only by being placed in a position where their success depends on it.

Although the business world is actuated mainly by selfish motives in the requirement of their employees that they exercise the most manly and ladylike demeanor towards customers, it has its effect in a degree at least in overcoming the tendency of the age towards irreverence and unmannerly conduct, because all nature is influenced by environment, custom and habit. If employees could not profit by being required to be polite in a degree at least, the same might be said in regard to parents teaching their children to be polite to others. Children are more irreverent and show a lack of proper training to a greater degree today than they did a few decades ago. The polite child who always says, "Yes mam," and "Yes, sir," "Thank you," etc., is not so common today as a few years back. Now frequently we hear such expressions, in speaking of the father as "the governor," or the "old man."

It would be rather unjust to say that there is not some soul and sincerity connected with politeness in business in varied degrees according to the character of the individual making such requirement. There are those who are distinctively selfish in business or out of business, but there are also those who are kind and considerate by nature and they are polite because it is right to be as well as because it is profitable. To say that all is superficial is to deny the force of habit and example as affecting one's nature and that there is no good to come from being taught to be polite, obliging and mannerly.

Railroads are now instructing train men to not only be polite and obliging but to acquire the ability to entertain, to laugh and be jolly, to be able to tell a story, so they can make the time of the lonely traveler pass pleasantly and quickly. Is not this a feature of railroading with some soul in it? Or does selfishness entirely prompt it?

The common term in business in addressing men is "Mr." and that for the gentler sex as "Lady." Sometimes "Sir" is used in addressing a man. Primarily the term "Lady" was used to designate a woman whose husband was of some high rank in government or social life, but now it is used in a respectful way as applied to all women, whether a young miss, old maid, married woman or widow. It is considered a mark of civility in the one addressing the lady. It is far more pleasant to deal with an obliging, mannerly person than with one who is a grouch, and the person who cannot appreciate gentlemanly or ladylike treatment must himself be a grouch.

HYGIENE IN THE HOME.

Hygiene has been defined by one noted writer on medicine as "the knowledge of instituting such a mode of living as is best calculated to preserve health." This would naturally comprise: cleanliness (personal and in our homes), pure air, pure water, good ventilation, wholesome food, proper clothing, sleep, regularity and in moderation in all things.

There are many ideas advanced in one generation called "science" that are as flatly denied by another generation of scientists so that it is wise to give thorough attention to the fundamentals, and not seek to follow every idea advanced.

This is especially true in diet. Those in the financial circumstances of the majority of our people cannot afford to follow all the fads of the dietitians, nor is it necessary. We are so constituted that we require animal food as well as vegetable, liquid as well as solid. The waste of the body must be repaired by proper food and drink. Food must be nutritious and digestible, and to be so must be well selected, well prepared and well masticated.

In very many cases now the philanthropic demands, one way and another, upon woman's time, do not leave her free to properly attend to this branch of her duties. It is easy to rush home and send to the bakers for bread, pies, etc., and to the grocers for many of the prepared foods, and here lies a danger. This kind of food cannot take the place of good home-baked bread and pastry, well-cooked meat and vegetables.

Pause and consider this, sisters, it is much more prevalent than is generally thought.

Meat supplies heat to the body, hence it is more generally eaten in the cold weather than warm. However there are cases when meat may be necessary in warm weather, and it the condition of the body demands it, it does no harm, if partaken in moderation.

Beef is the most nutritious and digestible, pork the most indigestible, besides having a tendency to cause skin dis-cases. It may be eaten with impunity, however, so far as digestion is concerned by those who perform hard manual labor, as this greatly aids digestion.

Fish may take the place of meat in warm weather. Its digestibility is greatly interfered with if used with acid.

It has been proven that a higher degree of intellect prevails where the diet combines both animal and vegetable foods. I will submit a table from which you may draw.

I feel to emphasize that we need more wholesome food than fancy dishes, as the lack of it makes us easy prey to disease.

Pure air, winter and summer is one important adjunct to good health. In the summer we generally have an abundance of it, but it is not always pure. Decayed vegetation, bad odors, etc., are very pernicious to health. Especially our sleeping rooms must be removed from such. It is only in exceptional cases that such conditions need exist. In the winter time we should never be without a current of fresh air, day and night. In ventilating it is desirable to lower your window from the top, never allowing a draught to pass over a bed or to fall upon us when sitting.

Rain water is considered the most healthful beverage.

It is, of course, needless that cisterns be kept clean and our roofs well washed before permitting the water to enter the cistern. Where cistern water is unavailable, river water is considered more to be desired than well water.

The free use of good cold water is a great promoter of health and it will be found advantageous if a glass of water is partaken first thing upon rising in the morning and last thing at night.

We can learn a lesson from the animals in regard to clothing our bodies. It is a mistaken idea some have formed in recent years, that light clothing in cold weather is a promoter of health. We see this contradicted by God's creatures who are subject to law they cannot control. A proper amount of clothing (not too much) in cold weather is necessary as our vitality is lowered by being imperfectly or unsuitably clad for the season. This and the indifferent attention paid to proper food are great friends of our modern foe—tuberculosis.

We all know that tight clothing, whether corsets, gloves or shoes, are harmful. Keep the head and breast cool, the feet and stomach warm.

Our sleep, exercise and food should be as regular as our circumstances will permit, for herein lies one secret of good health.

RIGHT TO THE POINT.

Woman! as baptism is by immersion for the remission of sins, what did you have that innocent baby sprinkled for?

In some cities, Latter Day Saints have the smallest church in town but the biggest thing on earth!

You can't jimmy some people away from their false traditions, that is why they can't see truth when it comes.

A lot of professed Christians are only 16th carbon copies of the genuine article.

If you can get the Holy Ghost without a man of authority placing his hands on your head, so could those upon whom the apostles and others laid their hands. Then what did they do it for, anyway?

Alexander Campbell said: "We have the gospel restored on paper and in speech," then he sent out tons of more paper and made more speeches, but he didn't restore the gospel Paul preached, which was a gospel of power, not paper, and demonstration, not assertion.

Christ was baptized to fulfill all righteousness. If you think it unnecessary that you be baptized, then you assume that you can fulfill all righteousness but the immaculate Son of Mary could not!

Christ only organized one church, it had a great many different officers in it, who each had his particular work to do. WHERE IS THAT CHURCH? And what about the many different organizations today, with their two or three officials?

A sollogism is a proposition containing a major and minor premise. If these are correct the conclusion is considered an absolute demonstration. To illustrate:

All men will die, Mr. Taft is a man, therefore Mr. Taft will die. There is a specimen of good logic. Now is not the following equally good?

God is a divine Creator, God formed a church, therefore it was a Divine creation. Man is a human creator, man has formed churches, therefore they are human creations.

Friend, can those weak, human institutions save you? If so why did God form his church? Can humanity success fully compete with Divinity?

C. EDWARD MILLER.

TRUTH.

Truth is eternal. Truth is sublime, Unchanged ever by the lapse of time; Agrees with what were, the prophets say; Expressions of God in olden day.

'Tis the power of God to save the race, To prepare them here, to see His face; Revealing its power to mould our life, By planting peace and uprooting strife.

Dispels the darkness of human creeds, Like a mirror reflects our evil deeds, Searchlight it is to illumine our way, Aids us to walk in the light of day.

With Truth at hand, we need never fear, Though battles rage and defeat seems near; Not a thing can live nor long endure, Which hath not Truth—a foundation sure.

GENERAL CONFERENCE

A communication from the first quorum of teachers relating to dealing with certain offenses was referred to the presidency and twelve.

A resolution from the Lamoni stake on the manner of reporting officers who hold more than one office, was referred to committee composed of C. I. Carpenter, L. H. Haas, and E. H. Fisher.

A petition from Utah district asking that provision be made for the erection of a church building in Salt Lake City was referred to the presidency, twelve and bishopric for consideration and report.

A petition from the Little Sioux District reunion committee protesting against other districts holding a reunion in close proximity to the district reunion was read. It was referred to a committee composed of J. W. Rushton, J. A. Tanner and E. A. Blakeslee.

A petition from the Eastern Michigan District asking for the establishment of a mail order store was referred to the general bishopric with the bishops.

Some announcements were made and the session adjourned in the usual manner.

Elder E. E. Long was the speaker at 7:45 p. m. assisted by O. Salisbury. The choir rendered assistance which was helpful and uplifting.

TUESDAY APRIL 8th.

Elders Wm. Sparling and R. J. Parker were in charge of the morning prayer service at 9 o'clock and the sermon at 10:45 was delivered by Elder E. F. Robertson of Australia, assisted by Elder J. O. Dutton.

THE BUSINESS SESSION.

The business session was opened at 2 p. m., by Pres. Elbert A. Smith. "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love" was sung and prayer was offered by Bishop Joseph Roberts of Lamoni.

Following the reading of the minutes, the secretary read the report of the church recorder, C. I. Carpenter:

To the General Conference, Greeting:
During the past year the work of this office shows the following results: We have recorded as gains by Baptism 3,383, received by letter 2513; losses by letter 2483, by expulsion 81, by death 536; making a net gain of 2,796 which added to our total of 65,415 gives us a present number of 68,211. The number of baptisms exceeds last year by 321; the losses by death and expulsion were not unusually large, but the number of transfers exceeds by far any previous year.

Missouri leads with the number of baptisms having 690 to her credit, but this is larger than it would otherwise have been because it includes nearly two years reports from the Independence Stake, the reports having been delayed by reason of a change in their system of records having been effected. Iowa follows with 366 and Michigan with 322, all others are less than 300.

Missouri also leads in the matter of net gains having 708; this item also being affected by the conditions above mentioned. Michigan follows with 233, Kansas 217 and Illinois 200; all others are under 200.

The reports show 4,123 members holding the various orders of the priesthood. 314 ordinations were reported and 368 marriages. 27,787 are reported as absent from the branches of the church. 1,014 Certificates of Blessing of children were reported.

The totals for Canada, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah and West Virginia do not represent the work done in these fields for the reason that the reports from them were not received in time to be recorded before closing our books for the year, some arriving as late as April 1st. They are all in the office at the time of this writing except from Canada and we are informed that the district secretaries are at work upon them and we are to receive them soon.

It will be noted that one new foreign country is added to our list this year, that of New Zealand, they having a branch of 15 members at Dunedin; and one new State, New Hampshire with 1 member baptized there by Elder J. H. Baker.

We have the work of perfecting the records of the quorums of elders, priests, teachers and deacons well under way but not sufficiently completed to give any date at present.

During the year we have added the following branches as new to the records: Dunedin, N. Z., Lowell, Arkansas, Spring River district; California, Mesa, Colo., Delta, Colo., in the Colorado district; Fairview, Florida, Florida district; Weiser, Idaho, Idaho district; Troy, Illinois, Alton, Illinois, O'Fallon, Ill., St. Louis district; Indianaapolis, Ind., Southern Indiana district; Anamosa, Iowa, Eastern Iowa district; Quindaro, Kans., Independence Stake; Clear Springs, Mich., Lachine, Mich., Northern Michigan district; Centropolis, Mo., Second Independence, Mo., Lexington, Mo., Independence Stake; Bourbon Mo., St. Charles, Mo., St. Louis district; Warm Springs, Mont., Montana district; Lincoln, Neb., Southern Nebraska district; Buffalo, New York, New York district and Centralia, Washington, Seattle and British Columbia district. Besides these which have been recorded there are a number of others shown on the related reports which have been received.

The records of this department manifest two weaknesses in our system of transferring members from one branch to another, which in our judgment are serious. First, Members are permitted to obtain letters of removal and for reasons of their own retain them in their possession indefinitely; they are reported as removed by the branch granting the letter and they are deducted from our total numerical strength. The transfer is not effected, the system has failed to accomplish its object and the church has suffered numerical loss. Second—Members are permitted to change their residence from one branch to another and for reasons of their own fail or even refuse to obtain letters of removal to the branch where they reside; they are reported as absent members by the branch where their membership is recorded, though in fact are living in and participating with an organized branch, and recognized by the law as amenable to the authorities of the branch where they reside. As a result the number of absentees as shown by the reports does not represent the facts, and few branches are credited with their actual numerical strength of resident members and many members do not enjoy the voting privileges of the branches where they reside unless by courtesy. Since the church claims the right of jurisdiction over its members by the authorities of the branches where the member resides, we believe it should assume the right to transfer the membership of such members upon their change of residence whether requested so to do by the member or not. Because of the above conditions which are emphasized by the records of this office we would recommend that a system of transferring our members be adopted which will be effective, and will relieve the undesirable condition above referred to.

Our work has been hindered by lack of proper office facilities, valuable papers and reports being misplaced and some even lost, for want of suitable desk room in which to keep such papers until finally disposed of in the permanent files. We need a desk. The increased range of work being done by this department greatly increases the volume of correspondence, and the constantly increasing amount of recording which must be done demands the use of more than one typewriting machine much of the time in order to handle the work to the best advantage. We need two typewriters.

We have enjoyed our work and desire to more thoroughly perfect it in all its details.

Respectfully submitted,
C. I. Carpenter, Church Recorder.

April 3, 1913.

The report of the church secretary, R. S. Salyards was read.

Church Historian Heman C. Smith reported as follows:

HISTORICAL REPORT FOR 1912.

GENERAL ORGANIZATION.

During the year the personnel of the church organization remained practically as at last report. There have been no changes in the First Presidency, the Quorum of the Twelve, or Presidents of Seventy.

The High Priest's Quorum lost by death George H. Hilliard a member of the Presiding Bishopric and Ebenzer Keeler, a member of the Order of Evangelists.

The following ordinations were provided for at the General Conference, James C. Page, Edward Rannie, William Anderson, John F. Petre, Parley T. Plumb, and Francis L. Sawley to the office of seventy; William Sparling, Eli Mayer, Hugh W. Gould, Thomas J. Elliott, Andrew St. Louis, and William E. Winkworth, Senior, to the office of High Priest; John Shields, Henry Greenwood, and Josiah E. Matthews to the office of Evangelical minister.

RIVAL ORGANIZATIONS.

There are now but two organizations disputing our claims to succession, of sufficient activity to demand notice: One the organization in Utah under the presidency of Joseph F. Smith, and the one in Independence known as the Church of Christ. Though both have continued active opposition, neither have made any material progress. The latter has suffered severe loss in the death of Elder John R. Haldeeman.

AUXILIARY ORGANIZATIONS.

The General Sunday school Association as in the past has been actively engaged in its line of work and has prospered. The officers placed in charge at the annual meeting were: Daniel MacGregor, superintendent; Gomer R. Wells and Anna Reynolds, assistants; David J. Krahl, secretary; Florence McNichols, superintendent of the Home Department; John Smith, treasurer; Edmund H. Fisher, Member of Library Commission; Mrs. Maggie Blair, superintendent of Normal Department; Richard S. Salyards, John Smith, and Albert Carmichael, Revising Committee; John F. Garver on Lessons Committee; Ralph W. Farrell, Member of Social Purity Board.

Zion's Religio Literary Society has made commendable effort and progress. The last meeting of the society elected as officials: Jeremiah A. Gunsolley, president; Thomas J. Elliott, vice-president; Ida Etzenhouser, secretary; John A. Gardner, Treasurer; Altha Deam, Superintendent Home Department; Jeremiah A. Gunsolley, Ida Etzenhouser, Ralph W. Farrell, Altha Deam and Frederick M. Smith, lessons committee; Jeremiah A. Gunsolley, Heman C. Smith and Flora Scott, Revising Committee; Pearl Gardner, historian, Maggie Blair, Superintendent of Normal Department.

Women's Auxiliary for Social Service has continued it's ministrations and active co-operation with the church in it's special lines. The work of the organization was divided into several departments and superintendents of departments appointed as follows: Home and Child Welfare, Mollie Davies; Literary and Educational, Vida E. Smith; Domestic Science, Bertha Donaldson; Eugenics, Clara Curtis; Sewing and Aid societies. Minnie B. Nicholson; Lucy L. Ressegue, Minnie B. Nicholson and Callie B. Stebbins, Members of the Board of Trustees of the Children's Home. The officers are Mrs. Emma E. Smith, president; Ruth L. Smith, vice president; Grace Krahl, Secretary, Letha Tilton, treasurer.

MISSIONARY WORK.

Members of the First Presidency have been engaged to the extent of physical ability so far as special duties would permit. Office duties have developed principally upon Frederick M. Smith, Joseph Smith and Elbert A. Smith have served as editors of Church publications, and the latter has been engaged in church service in California, the most of the year. Edmund L. Kelley and George H. Hilliard of the presiding Bishopric have extended aid to the ministerial force so far as the special duties of their positions would permit.

The general mission field was placed in charge of members of the Quorum of the Twelve and others as follows: John W. Wight and Gomer T. Griffiths: Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa.

James F. Curtis and Peter Anderson: Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Missouri Central and Southern Illinois.

Ulysses W. Greene: Maritime Province, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and District of Columbia.

Robert C. Russell: Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Southern Indiana, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida.

Francis M. Sheehy: British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Mexico, and Hawaii Territory.

John W. Rushton: Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado and Utah.

William Greenwood: British Isles.

Hans N. Hanson: Scandinavia and Germany. Cornelius A. Bultwerth: Australasia. Charles H. Lake: South Sea Islands.

Frederick A. Smith: Ontario, Quebec, Wisconsin, Michigan, Northern Illinois and Northern Indiana.

Kees Jenkins: Palestine, Asia.

The fields occupied have been about the same as the year previous. The results of missionary work according to the report of the church recorder has been 3378 baptisms, against 3062 of the year previous, a gain of 316. A net increase of 2796 against 2325 of the year before, a gain in net increase of 471.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

There has been no change in the personnel of this Board. The following periodicals have been regularly published: Saint's Home, Journal of History, Autumn Loves, and Zion's Herald from Lamoni, Iowa; Zion's Ensign from Independence, Missouri, Gospel Standard from Rozelle, Australia; and Sanhedrin's Banner from Porsgrund, Norway.

Other periodicals and books are issued by private persons or associations in the interest of the church.

The Board of Publication maintains an Electric Power Plant which furnishes light for Lamoni, Kellerton and Davis City, and arrangements are making to extend its field of operation.

GRACELAND COLLEGE.

The terms of office of trustees, Richard J. Lambert and Clarence F. Smith expired, and Frederick M. Smith resigned, John F. Garver was elected for one year to succeed F. M. Smith, Thomas A. Hougas for three years to succeed Richard J. Lambert, and Frederick W. Newcombe for three years to succeed Clarence F. Smith.

The terms of John F. Garver, Frederick B. Blair and Samuel A. Burgess will expire at this conference, those of Daniel Anderson and Albert Carmichael in 1914 and those of Thomas A. Hougas and Frederick W. Newcombe in 1915.

HOUSES FOR THE AGED.

There are five of these homes under the general oversight of the Bishopric; two at Lamoni, Saints' Home, and Liberty Home under the direct control of a committee consisting of Lorenzo Hayer, Joseph Roberts, and John Migarden; two at Independence, Bonheim and Kensington, and one at Kirtland, Ohio. No details have been reported to this department.

CHILDREN'S HOME.

A change was made in the policy of operating this institution by the appointment of a Board of seven Trustees, Richard Bullard and Callie B. Stebbins were elected for a term of three years each, and Heman C. Smith and Lucy L. Ressegue for a term of two years each, and Joseph Roberts, Oscar Anderson and Minnie B. Nicholson for a term of one year each.

The Home is still operated under the superintendency of Brother W. P. Robinson and family.

The first half the year was discouraging from a financial standpoint, but later the Saints and friends responded nobly to the call for help, and the institution not only met the running expenses but has paid several hundred dollars on arrears. This board organized by selecting Heman C. Smith, president, and Joseph Roberts treasurer, Oscar Anderson secretary.

SANITARIUM.

This institution has continued its work, and good reports reach us of its success, but we are not informed regarding details of the work accomplished. The trustees elected were Edmund L. Kelley, Joseph Luff, Richard Bullard, George E. Harrington, Buford J. Scott, Ellis Short, and John W. Rushton.

ORDER OF ENOCH.

This institution has maintained its organization at Independence Missouri; but it has not been established elsewhere. The officers chosen at the last annual meeting were Edmund L. Kelley, Fredrick M. Smith, G. H. Hilliard, George E. Harrington, David J. Krahl, J. T. Curtis, Ellis Short, Buford J. Scott, Alonzo H. Parsons, Winfred B. Kelley, David T. Reese and William R. Dexter. The Board chose Edmund L. Kelley, President; Ellis Short, Treasurer, and William R. Dexter, Secretary.

GENERAL LIBRARY.

There has been no change in the personnel of the Library Commission. The General Conference placed all libraries purchased directed or indirectly by Church funds under the supervision of the Commission.

PRESIDENT SMITH RESIGNS FROM COMMITTEES

ON account of failing physical powers and in order to bestow more time upon other affairs of vital importance, Pres. Joseph Smith resigned his chairmanship and membership in the following committees:

Incorporation in States; Revision of Church History; Memorial to the Martyrs; Clergy Credentials Committee; on Choosing Auditors. The conference passed fitting resolutions of appreciation for his long services on these committees, to which he replied in an able and pleasing address.

RULES OF REPRESENTATION

The General Conference decided to revise these rules and provided for a committee for the purpose consisting of one of the First Presidency, one of the Quorum of Twelve, one of the High Priests, and the Presiding Bishop. The appointment of the committee was referred to the First Presidency who subsequently appointed Frederick M. Smith of the First Presidency; Francis M. Sheehy of the Quorum of Twelve, Hyrom O. Smith of the Seventy and Joseph A. Tanner of the High Priests in addition to the Presiding Bishop provided for in the resolution.

LOCAL WORK

Some of the force of Local Historians are doing faithful and acceptable work, a work that will be more fully appreciated as time passes.

This department however has not yet secured representatives in some parts of the church.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S HISTORY

The manuscript for this work up to 1852 is still in the Historian's Office awaiting the action of the Committee on Revision.

No one has yet been selected to write the history after 1852.

PRESS AND PULPIT

There has been a revival of the spirit of opposition of late which has found expression from the pulpit, and resulted in the production of several new books.

A Bishop Spalding has recently made quite a scholarly attack on the accuracy of the translation of the Book of Abraham. But this does not directly concern the Reorganized Church as the church has never adopted the Book of Abraham as a standard work. The bishop's criticism however received able attention from those to whom the Book of Abraham is standard work. Though the controversy has not yet closed at the present status of the argument the translation of the book has not been seriously discredited.

OFFICE WORK

It will be recognized by all who have had experience in historical work that it is of that nature that it can never be said to be finished. The more there is accomplished the more the possibilities develop so that even now a large force of helpers could be employed with profit to the church were the finances available to sustain the effort.

We have offered our services to many authors and publishers to enable them to get reliable and authentic information concerning the latter day work. In some instances we have been treated courteously and we have had a respectful hearing which has resulted in placing our position before the public. In some instances we have been ignored, but the disposition to treat us fairly is growing and those who do not recognize our right to speak in self defense are coming into disfavor.

We have written many articles for periodicals and several critiques on books most of which has been favorably received.

The proofs of the articles mentioned in our last report written for the American Biographical Encyclopedia have been submitted to this office for examination.

Through the courtesy of Mr. L. L. McShane of Kansas City representing Dodd, Mead and Company "The New International Encyclopedia has been submitted to us for examination and criticism. Our criticisms were received with gentlemanly courtesy and consideration. We hope future editors of the work will give us the proper proper attention.

Many invitations reached us to attend historical gatherings but much to our regret finances are not available to comply in every case.

January 14, 15 and 16 of the present year we attended the Nebraska State Historical Convention at Lincoln and on the 16th accepted an invitation to deliver an address which was received with every mark of respect both for the speaker and the church he represented.

The Journal of History remains the chief medium through which we reach the influential circles in the historical world and has done more to get proper recognition in such circles than any other venture ever made.

Though we feel our work has been very imperfect, we are profoundly grateful for the recognition and respect shown us by our co-workers in the church, and for the Divine guidance so manifestly felt at times. We are willing to continue to serve in this capacity, or give place to another as shall best advance the interest of the work growing dearer to us year by year.

SUGGESTIONS

There will be a great gathering at Keokuk, Iowa, in the autumn of the present year for which extensive preparation is making. President Wilson, the Governors of all states, and other notable persons are to be invited.

The Trans-Mississippi Congress which met at Salt Lake City, Utah, in September, 1912, endorsed a plan for a celebration in the fall of 1913 to celebrate:

- 1st The opening of the dam.
- 2d The Home Coming of the Mormons at Nauvoo.
- 3d The centenary of the evacuation of old Fort Madison.

The Utah people will doubtless make special provision to be represented at the Home Coming. Should we not be suitably represented?

Is it not also an opportune time to push the erection of the monument under contemplation?

As early as June, 1831, the Lord instructed two of the best educated men of the church (Doctrine and Covenants Section 55) to write schoolbooks. Because the work was not accomplished we have been humiliated and embarrassed. Should not this matter receive our serious attention? Since we have established an institution of learning should we not have textbooks based upon the Divine declaration "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them?" instead of using borrowed books based upon "science falsely so called."

The use of which creates a demand for instruction and influences to counteract impressions received in our own school, should we not have text books based upon the great scientific principles revealed in the book of Doctrine and Covenants? Respectfully submitted,

A communication from I. N. White was read expressing a desire to renew his labors in the church after a period of inactivity due to ill health and to spend the remainder of his days in the work.

The committee on compilation of general conference resolutions reported that all resolutions to date had been compiled.

The order of evangelists reported:

To the First Presidency:—We herewith submit the annual report of "The Order of Evangelists" closing with March 1st, 1913, as follows: During the past year Josiah E. Matthews was added to our number by ordination, and Ebenezer Keeler was removed by death, leaving the present number of our order at seventeen. Some of our members are aged and infirm, yet they have attended 2319 services, preached 1149 discourses, baptized 53, confirmed 82, ordained 4, blessed 72 children, solemnized 7 marriages, administered to 626 sick persons, and have given 1713 patriarchal blessings.

They express, as we represent them in few words, an earnest desire that the Lord by his Spirit may bless the "Order" and all the deliberations of the coming general conference. E. C. Briggs and Joseph Greenwood have not reported and the work referred to above have been done by the fifteen members that have reported. We attach itemized report, thinking you might desire something of the kind.

Respectfully submitted,

J. R. Lambert, Pres.
Chas. E. Butterworth, Sec.

A report from the quorum of high priests was read, showing that among its 158 members were 18, patriarchs, 12 high counselors, 30 stake counselors, 15 bishops, 4 counselors, 11 bishops' agents, 2 stake presidents, 4 counselors to stake presidents, 41 pastors, 28 district presidents, 42 branch presidents. The sermons reported were 7115, baptisms 490.

The committee appointed by the last conference to have inscribed the memorial address to Pres. Joseph Smith reported that it had been "suitably inscribed, embossed and illuminated, and then framed." "The design is a wide, conventional border of intricate pattern, after the best class of book plates, in the three primary colors, red, yellow and blue, illuminated with pure gold leaf, and emphasized with black." The committee were Thomas W. Williams, R. C. Evans, and S. A. Burgess. The work reported was approved.

A report from the council of seven presidents was read, and the recommendation for the ordination of A. B. Phillips as one of the council was approved and the ordination provided for.

To the General Conference:

The council of the presidents of the seventy have held fourteen sessions, at which all the council were present except James McKiernan, who has been hindered by sickness. Since the beginning of the conference one of our number, H. O. Smith, has been ordained to the office of high priest, thus leaving a vacancy.

This vacancy has been filled by the selection of Bro. Arthur B. Phillips to be ordained to the office of a president of the seventy, and we ask that this selection be approved and his ordination be provided for.

The council is now composed of Bro. C. Scott Sr., president, James McKiernan, J. F. Mintun, W. E. Peak, T. C. Kelley and J. A. Davis.

Respectfully,

J. F. Mintun,
Sec. of the Pres. of Seventy.

Lamoni, Ia., April 9.

A communication from Joseph Smith president of the church, requesting that the right of nomination of directors be vested in the board of directors, or with the physician in charge, and that the nomination of the assistant physician be placed in the hands of the physician in charge. The matter was referred to the joint council of the presidency, twelve and bishopric.

The board of college trustees reported.

Four members of the standing high council (the supreme court of the church) being absent, the presidency was authorized to choose others to temporarily fill the vacancies that the council might be prepared to hear matters to come before it.

A report from the presidency, twelve, and bishopric, on a matter from New South Wales relative to the kind of wine to be used in the sacrament was read as follows but no action taken:

To the General Conference, Greeting:

In regard to the petition from New South Wales, we are authorized to present to you the action of the joint council of the first presidency, twelve and presiding bishopric as follows:

Resolved, in reply to the new South Wales resolution touching the kind of wine to be used in sacrament services of the church, we are of the opinion that fermented wine should not be used but either unfermented wine or water should be used, and so be in harmony with the spirit of the revelations. See Doctrine and Covenants 26:1. 86:1 and 119:5.

Fred'k M. Smith, Sec. First Pres.
F. A. Smith, Secretary of Twelve.

Elder Richard Baldwin was the evening speaker assisted by T. W. Thomas.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9th.

The morning prayer service was in charge of G. A. Smith and W. H. Garrett, and at 10:45 J. W. Davis addressed the conference, being assisted by Wardell Christy.

BUSINESS SESSION.

President F. M. Smith called the assembly to order at 2 p. m., and after singing "Yes we feel the clouds are breaking, and the light begins to shine," Patriarch Ammon White offered prayer.

A letter from a committee of the Wheeling, W. Va., Branch, relating to the losses of individual members, as well as damage to church property, through the disastrous floods, and asking for aid in restoring the church building to usable condition.

It was moved that a collection be taken up for this purpose, but a substitute was offered that the bishop be authorized to pay for such purposes $500. After some discussion the matter was referred to the presiding bishopric with power to act.

The committee to which was referred several matters relative to division and boundary lines of districts reported. The report was adopted and the recommendations concurred in.

To the General Conference Assembled, Greeting:

We your committee appointed to consider petitions on boundary lines beg to report as follows:

1 We recommend that the Saskatchewan district be divided in harmony with their petition, the dividing line being the line between the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and that Alberta be organized into a new district.

2 That the petition of the Spring River district be granted and that the counties of Cowley and Butler be severed from the Spring River district and annexed to the unorganized territory of Southern Kansas.

3 That the petition from the Central Michigan district, concurred in by the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district, be granted and that Gratiot County be annexed to the Central Michigan district.

4 That the petition of the Northern Nebraska district be granted, and the name changed to Northeastern Nebraska district.

5 That the petition from the Seattle and British Columbia district be granted, and that portion of Kittitas County lying west of the 121st meridian be annexed to the Seattle and British Columbia district.

6 Owing to a division of one of the counties in the panhandle of Idaho, it becomes necessary for us to correct our records and record the two new counties. Lewis and Clearwater, organized from what was formerly Nez Perce Co., along with what is now known as Nez Perce Co., as a part of the Spokane district.

7 That the dividing line between Eastern Oklahoma district and Central Oklahoma, the 96th meridian be continued south to the north line of the Central Texas district, and that portion of Texas lying west of this line which was formerly in Eastern Oklahoma district be annexed to Central Oklahoma district.

8 In regard to the petition of the Central Oklahoma district for a change of line between them and the Eastern Oklahoma district, we suggest that the matter be referred back to the district with the recommendation that they confer with the Eastern Oklahoma district authorities and reach some agreement as to just where they would like to have the line, and then present their petition to conference for ratification.

Respectfully submitted,

Frederick A. Smith,
Chairman of Com.
O. W. Newton, Sec.

Lamoni, Ia., April 8.

A report of the Independence Sanitarium was read, showing total assets $65345.50, total liabilities $68047.81, loss, $2695.31. The receipts were $9655.43, and expenditures $12350.74. The liabilities consist of accounts payable $1455.34, due general church $9744.49, and present worth $56847.98. The report tells of the work of the institution, and improvements, also the Christian spirit manifested in carrying out the purposes designed.

A communication from the first presidency was read as follows:

To the General Conference, Greeting:—

Brother C. I. Carpenter, the church Recorder, has called the attention of the Presidency to the fact that reports of blessings of children which come to the Recorder's office show that there seems to no recognized age limit above which a child should not be entitled to the ordinance of blessings. The Church Recorder, as a consequence, has raised the question as to whether the church should take any action in the matter of placing such limit. He has submitted to the Presidency a partial list of cases in point showing that children of twelve and even fourteen years of age have been blessed by members holding the priesthood.

The presidency are of the opinion that the ordinance of the blessing of children is designed for children who have not reached the age of accountability. It would therefore follow that the ordinance of blessing should not be administered to children who are old enough to be baptized—whether the limit for blessing children should be placed below the age of eight we are not prepared to say.

Respectfully submitted,

The First Presidency,

Frederick M. Smith, Secretary.

Lamoni, Iowa, April 9.

It was moved to adopt as a safe rule for the guidance of the church. The motion prevailed.

The presiding bishop's report of the financial condition and business of the church. The report was printed and distributed among the delegates, and showed total receipts by the bishops of $322,824.54, expenditures $320,371.33, on hand $2,453.21. The report will appear in the conference minutes.

The library commission reported the library interests of the church.

The report of the joint council of the presidency, twelve, and bishopric on the kind of wine that should be used in the sacrament, and which was read on the 8th, was taken up and its adoption moved. Some discussion followed, and the motion prevailed. Hymn 223 was sung, the benediction being offered by Bishop Kelley.

At the evening service Elder F. B. Farr was the speaker, being assisted by J. C. Page.

THURSDAY APRIL 10TH.

Patriarchs Wm. Lewis and Ammon White led the morning prayer service at nine o'clock, and at 10:45 Russell Archibald of St. Louis preached the sermon assisted by T. J. Elliott.

BUSINESS SESSION.

President E. A. Smith occupied the chair at the opening of the afternoon session. After singing, J. A. Gunsolley offered prayer.

The committee on library building reported that the general needs of the church in other directions had rendered the erection of a library building inadvisable. It was signed by E. L. Kelley, Bishop; E. A. Blakeslee, and Elbert A. Smith, S. A. Burgess, E. H. Fisher, and Heman C. Smith.—Library Commission.

By F. M. Smith secretary, the presidency reported on the organization of quorums. The report showed the organization of eight quorums of elders during the year, six quorums of priests, four quorums of teachers, and one quorum of deacons.

Church Physician Joseph Luff reported as follows but no action was taken:

To the General Conference Assembled at Lamoni, Iowa, Greeting:

My report is brief. As church physician I have filled the office to the best of my ability. My health has been very poor at times and I have almost feared a collapse but it is somewhat improved again at present.

No distinction between members and non-members of the church has been made by me, and all appeals from everywhere have been met with the best I had of skill and means. Some are thinking better of the church in consequence, I learn. Medical details would not interest you, so I withhold them.

The Sanitarium work has been separately reported through the board. The house physician Dr. W. E. Messenger (who is also business manager) has had the details of service and management in his hands. During the winter months I was able to visit the Institution but a very few times, but acted as consultant with Dr. Messenger when appealed to. A vast and ever increasing amount of the work required there is of a character that I am incapable of and does not come under my directorate even suggestively, as the institution is in every practical sense a public hospital.

Should you wish to further sustain me in the office of church physician the Sanitarium and responsibilities connected therewith must be placed in other hands as my work outside of it is all I can stand up under. My opinion is that whoever performs the practical work in and over that institution should have the credit for it and be recognized as its superintendent.

Should this separation be not approved by you, please do not consider me as available for office of church physician as I cannot serve.

Should further explanation be required I hope to be with you in time to furnish it. My present thought is to be in Lamoni by the 11th or 12th.

In gospel hope yours as ever,

Joseph Luff.

A report of the social purity board was read indicating progress in the formative period of the work. Considerable research had been made, and literature distributed with due caution, and some original matter prepared.

The term of J. F. Garver as member of this board having expired, he was elected to succeed himself, and $50 were allowed to assist the committee in its work.

The committee on Book of Mormon concordance reported:

To the General Conference:

The committee on Book of Mormon Concordance reports that progress has been made on the work committed to us. By the assistance of Elder Duncan Campbell a compilation of every important word in the Book of Mormon, alphabetically arranged, has been provided and which will constitute the basis of the subsequent work of compiling the concordance.

The committee has been hindered in its work because of other duties, also because of financial conditions.

Respectfully submitted,

Frederick M. Smith,

Heman C. Smith,

R. S. Salyards,

Committee.

The joint council of the presidency, twelve and bishopric to whom was referred the matter relating to the building of a church in Salt Lake City, reported as follows. The report was adopted:

To the General Conference Greeting.

The Joint Council has instructed us to return to you the petition from Utah for a church building at Salt Lake City with the following report which has been adopted by the Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric:

1st We favor the erection of such a building which will provide both a place for public meetings and also apartments for the minister who may be appointed there, but would advise that the whole amount expended in such scheme do not exceed $5000.

2d We favor the investment of $3000 out of the general church treasury, out of which a suitable lot may be purchased; and with the balance together with the appropriation from the Sunday-school association of $500 together with what the local congregation may be able to supply a plain and substantial building shall be erected.

3d We advise that the selection of the lot, the plans, material and equipment of the building, be placed in the hands of the Presidency, Presiding Bishopric and the member of the Quorum of the Twelve who shall be in charge of that mission, with whom the local building committee shall co-laborate.

Very respectfully submitted,

Fred'k. M. Smith, Sec. 1st Pres.

Fred'k. A. Smith, Sec. Twelve.

Lamoni, Ia., April 10.

The following was received:

Lamoni Iowa, April 10, 1913.

To the general conference:—

In behalf of the board of trustees, we respectfully report, that pursuant to notice previously given in the Saints Herald, and also to your honorable body, the said board has this day taken up and adopted the proposed amendments to article viii of the articles of incorporation of Graceland College, except that in lieu of the last clause thereof, the following was adopted:—

"Provided further, that two-thirds of the whole Board of Trustees, present and voting in favor of such employment, may elect a professor or teacher at any time for a term of years, not exceeding five (5)."

As previously published unanimous consent was required, the present amendment requires only two-thirds vote, that is five out of the whole seven members of the board of trustees. No action by the conference is necessary, unless so desired by you.

Respectfully submitted,

A. Carmichael, Chairman.

S. A. Burgess, Sec.

The board of auditors reported and by motion and vote the report was adopted:—

To the church is conference assembled.

The board appointed to audit the accounts of the presiding bishop, and of the various institutions of the church hereby reports:

The board have completed their work, having checked the books and accounts of the bishop's office, the Independence Sanitarium, the Herald Publishing House, the Ensign Publishing House, Graceland College, the Children's Home, the Kirtland Hotel, and the various homes for the aged, verifying same with the reports and summary statements as furnished. In every instance the books and accounts are found to be correct and in agreement with statements.

A new set of books is found adopted at Graceland College, which furnish a very complete record of the business done, each department of the college appearing in separate account.

The board has been treated with courtesy by those in charge of the various offices and institutions.

Following the custom of the past, reports have been made to those in charge of church institutions; Herald Publishing House, Ensign Publishing House, Independence Sanitarium, Children's Home, and Graceland College; also to the Presiding Bishop and First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve.

Respectfully submitted,

G. W. Blair,

J. F. Garver,

L. H. Haas,

Board of Auditors.

The following was moved:

"Resolved that the Bishopric of the church is composed of men holding the office of Bishop under a presiding head as defined in Doctrine and Covenants, 129:8 and that the Order of Bishops consists of the Presiding Bishopric and the other Bishops and their counselors."

It was moved to refer to the presiding bishop, the bishops, and agents, before being considered by the conference. The motion prevailed, after which the session adjourned in usual manner.

The evening session was under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary for social service, with Mrs. B. C. Smith in charge. Interesting talks interspersed with literary readings and musical numbers, followed by a general round table.

FRIDAY, APRIL 11.

The prayer service at 9 a. m. was in charge of J. M. Baker and J. S. Snively.

The preaching hour at 10:45 was occupied by several missionaries who had been laboring among the Indians of Oklahoma. Hubert Case spoke giving an account of the work done among the Indians during the past three years, and then introduced Chief Three Fingers of the Cheyenne tribe who spoke through an interpreter, telling how the gospel had been brought to them by the elders of the Reorganized church, and that they had found in it divine assurance that it was the gospel of Christ. He was followed by Philip Cook, a leading man of the tribe who spoke in excellent English describing the religion of his people, and declaring his faith in an allegiance to the church. Other missionaries among the Indians, A. H. Christensen and J. E. Yates also spoke of their work.

BUSINESS SESSION.

Hymn 109 was sung at the opening of the business session, and Sidney Pitt offered prayer. After the reading of the minutes a report of a committee appointed by the conference of 1912 to revise the rules of representation, was read as follows:

To the General Conference, Greeting:—

We, the majority of the committee to whom was referred by the General Conference of 1912, the matter of revision of the rules of representation, (See Conference Minutes, page 1629), report that after due consideration we recommend that the following be adopted as our rules of representation, they being substantially the ones submitted some years ago by Pres. Joseph Smith, except that among the general officers specified as being entitled to ex-officio vote we have included the Presiding Patriarch and the Church Historian:

1 That the general officers of the church known as the presidency, the twelve, the high council, the seventy, the presiding patriarch, the church historian and the presiding bishopric are ex-officio members of conference, and entitled to a voice and vote as representatives of the spiritual authorities of the church at large.

2 That high priests, elders and priests engaged in the ministry and under missionary appointment of General Conference, or the general authorities of the church, and not laboring in and by the authority of organized districts, are hereby declared to be entitled to voice and vote in General Conferences when present.

3 That organized districts be authorized to appoint from their members, at their last quarterly session of district conference next preceding the session of General Conference, delegates to said sessions of General Conference, who shall be entitled to represent said districts, which delegates so appointed shall be declared members of said General Conference entitled to voice and vote.

Provided: That the choice and appointment by said districts shall be made by a majority of those present and voting, in regular or called session of district conference, of the holding of which due notice shall have been given, as to time and place within the district, to each and every branch composing said district; together with a statement of any important business or action that is to be presented to, or likely to be had by said general session, affecting said district, and to which their consent or denial is desired, that instructions to said delegates may be given as to their action.

And provided further: That the only qualifications to eligibility to the office of delegate from district to General Conference shall be membership and good standing.

Provided further: That no less than one, nor more than five delegates may be sent from any one district; but that said delegate, or delegates, shall be entitled to voice and vote in such General Conference to which they may be appointed, upon a presentation of a certificate from the clerk of district conference to the said General Conference, upon their organization at the time specified for their assembling.

And provided further: That said delegate or delegates shall be entitled to cast one vote for each branch of six members; and one vote for each twenty members in excess of six, that there may be in the branches of their said districts, in all cases where such a vote may be necessary, or desired, to secure the common consent designed in the law; but that in the common routine of business said delegates may vote as units, each in his own right, and in cases of division, the majority of the delegation from a district shall cast the whole vote of said district.

4 That each branch of six or more members, not included in an organized district, be authorized to appoint one delegate to the General Conference, who may or may not be a member of said branch, but who shall be a member of the church and in good standing, whose qualifications to eligibility shall be the same as those required in districts, and who shall represent said branch and be entitled to voice and vote in said conferences to which he may be appointed; and who shall be entitled to cast one vote for the six members required to appoint, and one for each twenty members in excess of six composing said branch.

Provided further: That two or more branches in near proximity to each other, not in organized district, may unite in choosing a delegate, who shall cast their vote, one vote for six members of each branch, and one vote for each twenty members in excess of the number six, multiplied by the number of branches represented; the manner of casting their votes in cases of importance and common routine of business to be as provided in cases of districts.

Provided further, That due general notice to the members of branches of the time and place of meeting for the choosing of said delegate be properly given, as required in cases of districts; certificate of appointment of branch delegate to be signed by the president or clerk of branch, and to be presented as provided in cases of districts.

5 That in all questions of grave importance, affecting the polity and faith of the church; districts and branches may instruct delegates to cast a majority and a minority vote, for and against; but in no case shall the number of the votes cast by said delegates so instructed, exceed the number to which the district appointing him or them shall be entitled as hereinbefore provided, and in cases of a tie in districts or branches on questions presented to them, certified to said delegates, the votes of said districts or branches shall be cast in equal numbers by the delegates.

In all questions of debate, incidental motions, and routine business, representatives, ex-officio, and delegates, appointed, shall speak and vote as units and in their own separate and personal right.

That the foregoing rules on representation may be altered and amended at any General Conference of the church, and that all the provisions of said report on representation may be altered or amended at the next conference of the church to be held at —, on —, which shall be composed of members as provided by the rules adopted for the purpose of obtaining the voice of the whole people of the church.

Provided, that at least six months' notice of the nature of such amendment or amendments shall be given in the official church publication before the date of the sitting of the session of conference at which such amendment or amendments will be presented, giving manner and form in which such amendments are desired.

Respectfully submitted,

Frederick M. Smith,
H. O. Smith,
F. M. Sheehy,
Of the Committee.

A minority report was also read:

Minority Report.

The undersigned members of your committee, after having carefully examined the instruction of the Lord given to the church touching further change in the rules of representation are firmly of the opinion that any change made at the present time further than providing for an enlargement of the number entitled to delegate as stated in Section 125, paragraph 7, will be another violation of the later instruction to the church upon representation which reads:

"The direction of the Spirit is that they be left as they now are until such time as the increased numbers of the members of the church shall require either an enlargement of the number entitled to delegate or that there may be a closer line drawn as to the number of delegates which the church shall require to meet. Such time has not arrived, nor does it exist, and to adopt the majority report would disfranchise a large number of the active and helping officers of the church who now have voice and vote with us to the great detriment of the church and its work.

The undersigned, therefore respectfully present this minority report as a substitute for the majority report of the committee already read before the conference.

J. A. Tanner,
E. L. Kelley.

It was moved that these reports be made the special order for Tuesday 15th, and that printed copies be placed in the hands of the delegates.

A substitute was offered moving the adoption of the majority report.

It was moved to amend to strike out "majority" and insert "minority."

Discussion upon this matter occupied the remainder of the session and was pending when the assembly adjourned.

Hymn 172 was sung and R. Bullard offered prayer.

The evening session was devoted to the interests of the college.

SATURDAY, APRIL 12TH.

The morning prayer service was in charge of Elders Sidney Pitt and Eben Miller, and at 10:45 Elder R. T. Cooper was the speaker assisted by Elder J. E. Kelley.

BUSINESS SESSION

The afternoon session was in charge of Pres. F. M. Smith. "How firm a foundation ye Saints of the Lord," was sung, and prayer was offered by V. M. Goodrich.

After the reading of the minutes the chair stated that the matter of representation pending at yesterday's adjournment was before the body, and discussion of the same was continued.

Moved to defer until the Lord sees fit to give additional revelation upon the matter.

The discussion continued until the closing hour.

Before adjournment Pres. Elbert A. Smith in a fitting address presented Chief Three Fingers and Philip Cook of the Cheyenne Tribe with copies of the Book of Mormon which purports to be a sacred history of the fathers.

Each made a brief reply of appreciation:

PHILIP COOK.—I want to say to the conference that this is just what I am looking for, and I have stated in my speech the other day that I was hungry after the word of God and I thank the Lord and thank you people that I am indeed happy that I have received what I am searching for. I thank you more than words can tell.

CHIEF THREE FINGERS.—I thank the Lord that he has given me a blessing today that I may take it back to my people and that the Lord might so bless me that I might have such a broad influence in me that I might turn the minds of the Indians unto the true church by taking this gospel to them. I thank you ever so much and will always appreciate your loving kindness towards me.

The assembly sang, "All hail the power of Jesus name" and Joseph Luff offered the closing prayer.

At the evening service the speaker was A. B. Phillips, assisted by H. E. Moler.

SUNDAY, APRIL 13TH.

The usual Sunday services were held with Sunday-school at 9 a. m., in charge of the local officers.

Church Historian, Heman C. Smith was the speaker at 11 o'clock the service being in charge of Arthur Allen. The afternoon prayer service was in charge of John Smith and G. E. Harrington, presidents of the Lamoni and Independence Stakes, respectively. The spiritual gifts were manifested. The evening service was largely devoted to music, though Pres. F. M. Smith gave an address touching upon music.

Overflow meetings were held in the lower auditorium, Patriarch Ammon White preaching in the morning, assisted by his father, I. N. White of the twelve. The priesthood met in the afternoon for prayer, the meeting being in charge of Frederick A. and Elbert A. Smith. Daniel MacGregor spoke in the evening, the meeting being in charge of L. E. Hills.

MONDAY, APRIL 14TH.

The morning prayer service was in charge of D. E. Powell and F. M. Weld. The speaker at 11 o'clock was J. A. Dowker assisted by Wm. Anderson.

BUSINESS SESSION

The session opened at 2 p. m., with Pres. F. M. Smith in charge. "Lift up your heads, ye heirs of glory," was sung and G. T. Griffiths offered prayer.

After the reading of the minutes, a report of the board of trustees of the Children's Home was read and approved.

LAMONI, IOWA, April, 1913.

To the General Conference:—

The Board of Trustees of the Children's Home at Lamoni, Iowa, have held eleven meetings since our last report.

The regular meetings of the Board are held four times a year on the third Tuesday of the months of April, July, October and January.

The present officers of the Board are Heman C. Smith, president; Oscar Anderson, Secretary; and Joseph Roberts, treasurer.

Since the Board of Trustees were appointed, four children have been placed in homes, two in Iowa, one in Michigan, and one in Montana, and another had been placed in a home in Lamoni, Iowa, before the trustees were appointed, making a total of five children placed in private homes. Fifteen have returned to their former homes, and one removed by death, leaving the present number now in the home twenty-nine.

By arrangements with the Board of Trustees of Grace-land college, the children of the home are receiving free schooling at the college.

Those of the Board of Trustees whose term of office expires at this conference time are Sister Minnie B. Nicholson and Bro. Joseph Roberts and Oscar Anderson.

A committee on incorporation was appointed by the board to carry out the resolution of last General Conference to incorporate. It was thought best by the trustees to defer the incorporating until more experience was had in managing the home, hence the incorporation has not yet been effected.

Much encouragement has been received from many of the Saints and from many of those outside of the church by their freely giving in different ways to help maintain the institution so much needed in the church.

Very respectfully,

Oscar Anderson, Secretary.

The financial summary of the treasurer attached to the above report showed total assets $18805.75, total liabilities $3962.07, net worth $14843.68. Receipts: balance on hand $170.55, donations $4800.89, earnings $406.02, total receipts $5377.46, total expenditures $5377.46. The average cost of caring for the children was $2.79 per week.

Minnie B. Nicholson, Bishop Joseph Roberts, and Oscar Anderson were separately re-elected to fill vacancies upon the Board of Trustees of the Children's Home.

The matter of the rules of representation pending at Saturday's adjournment was taken up and the discussion continued. At 3:15 p. m. the previous question was ordered. The motion to postpone was lost.

A yea and nay vote was asked for upon the amendment, and motion to adopt the report of the committee. The assembly divided into delegations to determine the vote and upon their return the vote was taken, which, for the amendment to strike out "majority" in the motion to adopt the majority report and insert "minority," stood 113 for and 949 against, the ex-officio vote on the same amendment stood 111 for and 86 against, the total vote being 1224 for and 1035 against, and the amendment was declared carried.

The vote then being taken upon the motion as amended resulted in for and against and the minority report was declared adopted.

It was then moved that the number of members entitled to delegate be made 50 instead of 25.

An amendment was offered to strike out 50 and insert 100. The previous question being ordered the amendment prevailed and also the motion as amended.

A motion also prevailed directing that the Book of Rules be corrected to conform to the resolutions passed as above.

The doxology was sung and Bishop Kelley dismissed the assembly with prayer.

A Theological Point.—A revival was being held at a small colored Baptist church in Southern Georgia. At one of the meetings the evangelist, after an earnest but fruitless exhortation, requested all of the congregation who wanted their souls washed white as snow to stand up. One old darty remained sitting.

"Don' yo' want y' soul washed w'ite as snow, Brudder Jones?"

"Mah soul done been washed w'ite as snow, pahson."

"Whah wuz yo' soul washed w'ite as snow, Brudder Jones?"

"Over yander to de Methodis' chu'ch 'across de railroad."

"Brudder Jones, yo' soul wa'nt washed—hit were dy-cleaned." —Life.

Reginald DeKoven told at a musical in Chicago a pretty story in praise of modesty.

"A group of tourists," he said, "visited Beethoven's house in Bonn. One of the tourists, a girl of twenty or so, sat down at Beethoven's piano and played the 'Moonlight Sonata,' none too well. Beethoven's own work, in his own room, on his own piano!

"When the girl had finished she rose and said to the old caretaker:

"I suppose lots of famous musicians have been here and played on this instrument?"

"Well, miss,' the caretaker answered gravely, Paderewski was here last year and his friends urged him to play, but he shook his head, and said: 'No, I am not worthy.'" —Washington Star.

Be not swift to take offence,
Let it pass!
Anger is a foe to sense,
Let it pass!
Brood not darkly o'er a wrong,
Which will disappear ere long;
Rather sing this cheery song,
Let it pass!

One of the greatest lessons in life is to learn to take people at their best, not their worst; to look for the divine, not the human, in them; the beautiful, not the ugly; the bright, not the dark; the straight, not the crooked side.

In writing concerning subscriptions always give the name of the Post Office to which your paper has been sent, as by so doing the loss of hours in looking for it may be avoided.

When desiring a change of address always give the old as well as the new address, and when sending subscriptions always state whether it is a renewal or a new subscription. In making remittances Money Orders are preferable. If coin is sent it should be folded in a card so it will not lose out and then enclosed in an envelope with your letter. Be sure and sign your name and give your full address. All business letters should be addressed to the Ensign Publishing House, and do not put matter intended for publication on same sheet with that which is of a business nature.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to

NOTES ON THE CONFERENCE.

Discussion upon the roles of representation occupied three days, and among other things proved that in the Reorganized church there is full freedom of thought and utterance. While the church believes in revelation, the Lord has never assumed the task of directing the church in every detail, leaving such matters to be worked out by the body according to the wisdom of its members as based upon the things revealed. One of such matters is the rules of representation, and it is not strange that the many members should have different opinions, and claim the right of expressing them. In expressing their views, the members of the church present as delegates stood equally with the apostles or even the president, so that the discussion was full and free. Every member of the conference was also free from any official restraint in voting upon this, as upon all other questions.

Loyalty to the work and the spirit of self-sacrifice was shown by many of the high priests and elders in voting for the majority report from the committee on revising the rules of representation, knowing that if it carried they would be deprived of any ex-officio rights in the general conference.

One of the interesting and entertaining features of the conference is the illustrated hymns sung by the choir preceding the evening services, illustrated by stereopticon views by Rudolph Etzenhouser. Such helps relieve the strain of studiously listening to papers, speeches, and sermons which so soon weary the mind.

The adoption of the revelation brings a radical change to the quorum of the twelve. Four young men are called to occupy in the place of others of greater years who are called to other positions, or released because of old age. One of these is: William H. Kelley who was called to be an apostle by the revelation of 1873, thus completing forty years of active service in that responsible position. I. N. White and J. W. Wight also released were called to that office in 1897 and thus spent sixteen years in the quorum. Frederick A. Smith entered the quorum in 1902 and labored as an apostle eleven years. He has scarcely passed middle age, and his present call to the evangelical work leaves him many years of vigorous manhood for that service if his life shall be spared.

Three of the young men, viz., J. E. Kelley who is a son of W. H. Kelley, Wm. Aylor, and Paul M. Hanson are well known in the church, having spent a number of years in missionary work. The fourth, James A. Gillen, though having not been engaged in the active missionary field, has labored locally and has been successful. Bro. Hanson and Gillen were not in attendance at the conference but came in answer to telegraphic call, the former from Los Angeles, Cal., and the latter from Independence, Mo.

The male chorus which rendered excellent service at former conferences has been revived and during the year the individual members will prepare for more efficient service at the next conference.

ADDRESS OF H. O. SMITH AT THE FIRST SESSION OF CONFERENCE, APRIL 6TH

Twenty-five years ago this spring I was selected to be ordained to the office of Seventy, and I have been in the field continually from that time until the present occupying in that particular office. My association with the work and its needs has taught me quite a number of things. One of the things that is confronting us today is the development of the church itself. We sometimes wonder why it is that the world seems to be indifferent, and I believe that one of the reasons why that this condition of things exists, is that we are expecting too much of the ministry, and the lay members are not doing their part of the work entrusted to us all.

I look upon the organization of the church in branches and districts as homes for those whom we bring into the church, and until these branches and districts become so far advanced that they may take the raw material that is gathered from the world and educate them and make them latter day saints indeed, we are not hoping for any great progress to be made in the preaching of the word outside. And hence I believe, that while in the inception of the work, the burden of its success largely depended upon those whom the church sent out to preach the gospel today, to a large extent that burden has rolled from the shoulders of the ministry and rests upon the membership. And until we recognize the fact that any position in this church is a sanctified one, just as holy a position as can possibly be occupied by the man that stands behind the sacred desk, and that any position in this church that we may hold, whether it shall be the highest office within the gift of the people or the calling of God, or simply a membership in the church, should be consecrated to the service of God fully and completely, we shall not succeed to the extent that we hope to succeed.

We are wont to look upon the individual that stands behind the sacred desk, or one who holds that mysterious position to some, called the priesthood as the only one who can work in the church, and that we have not very much to do; but I believe in that revelation that has been given to the church in recent years where it is said, "The responsibility or care of this work rests upon all; and each and every individual should occupy according to the gifts of God unto them." And I believe that the man who can live his religion, the individual who may, by example, show to the world the benefits of the gospel of Jesus Christ, is doing a mighty work for the advancement of this work, a mightier work than the individual can do who goes out into this world and preaches the gospel unto the people.

The local man comes in contact directly with those with whom he is thoroughly acquainted. I may go into a neighborhood and be a perfect stranger unto the people; they may recognize that I can present the gospel of Jesus Christ eloquently and convincingly, but one of the little lines of poetry that has impressed itself upon my mind many times is the thought presented—I don't know who the author is, but in a little poem called Eastertide—the last line of the first verse reads:—

"But we watch for the signs of his living, in the lives of the children of men."

The eyes of the world are upon us, and they are watching for the signs of the value of our message in the lives of the children of men; and I believe that that is the essential thing for us to hold always before the people, that every calling, though humble it may be, occupying even as a member of the church, is just as sacred, just as worthy of being sanctified, as the individual who occupies in the priesthood. And until we can come to that conclusion and work upon that line, and so place ourselves in the condition that we may be an example to those who come in from the outside, we shall fail to magnify our calling as a church.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The evening service was preceded by a number of songs by the men's chorus, and illustrated with stereopticon views. M. H. Bond presided and V. M. Goodrich preached the sermon.

TUESDAY, APRIL 15TH.

B. J. Scott and Wm. Bradbury had charge of the morning prayer service, and the sermon at 10:45 was by H. N. Hansen, assisted by John Harp.

BUSINESS SESSION.

The afternoon session was opened by Pres. F. M. Smith, R.C. Russell offered prayer.

After the reading of the minutes, a report was read from the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service. This report showed the existence of the following departments; home and child welfare, literary and educational, eugenics, domestic science, sewing and aid, young woman's department. Forty-four new locals had been organized during the year, and two district organizations, making in all sixty-nine locals and four district organizations. The officers for the ensuing year are president, Mrs. Mrs. B. C. Smith; vice-president, Mrs. S. R. Burgess; secretary, Mrs. D. J. Krahl; treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Gardner.

The Religio-Literary society reported the work of the convention held April 2-3.

A report from F. M. Smith, secretary of the First Presidency relative to the general choir movement was read. The report embodied an account of the work done by Albert N. Hoxie, Jr., appointed last year as general chorister showing that the choir movement had spread to many branches throughout the church. The purpose is to continue the work and bring the various musicians and choirs to a unity of work. The appointment of Bro. Hoxie by the presidency as general chorister was approved by the body.

The chair announced the reception of a telegram from J. A. Gillen, Independence, Mo., in which he stated willingness to accept the apostleship in harmony with the revelation. This in reply to a dispatch from the president of the conference.

A communication from Pres. F. M. Smith, was read:

Lamoni, Ia., April 14.

To the General Conference:

It will be remembered that the presidency appointed a delegate to the Third National Peace Congress which was held at Baltimore in May, 1911, and our appointment was later approved by the Conference of 1912. The Fourth National Peace Congress will be held in St. Louis next month, and we think it to our interest to have delegates in attendance at that Congress. The Presidency desires that the conference shall authorize them to appoint delegates to this Congress who may go with credentials showing that the appointment is authorized by our annual conference. While in Washington last month the undersigned had the matter under discussion with Benjamin Trueblood, Secretary of the American Peace Society, and he requested that we have delegates in attendance.

Respectfully submitted,

Frederick M. Smith,
Secretary Presidency.

A motion prevailed that the presidency be authorized to appoint delegates to the peace conference at St. Louis.

A report from the quorum of twelve was presented as follows:

A question arising in one of our districts touching what is required of a candidate requesting baptism and the method to be pursued to make that desire known, was presented to the Quorum of the Twelve and the following action had thereon, and is hereby submitted to your honorable body for approval:

Resolved that we are of the opinion that all that is necessary is for the candidate to satisfy the church authorities that he is worthy and that it is not necessary to make a public request.

Very respectfully submitted,

F. A. Smith, Sec. Twelve.

The report was adopted.

The committee to which was referred a matter of uniformly reporting the priesthood, recommended that the report forms be left as they are. A motion to adopt was lost.

That part of the historians report relating to the celebration of the opening of the Keokuk dam was called for and read. The matter of sending a representative was referred to the presidency, minister in charge, presiding bishop, and historian.

The executive committee of the general Sunday school association presented a plea for the publication of the Juvenile History of the church. It was referred to board of publication and historian.

A communication from the joint quorums of elders providing that letters of removal be issued by branches to other branches direct, rather than to the members removing and that the officers of branches shall see that such transfer is made. It was adopted.

The following on revision of the Book of Rules was moved.

Whereas, the rules of parliamentary practice as now used by the church are incomplete in many respects, and

Whereas, some confusion has arisen in regard to points of procedure that are not therein contained, or are not sufficiently set forth, therefore be it

Resolved, that a committee be appointed at this conference for the purpose of making a thorough revision of the book of Rules of Order and Debate; to rearrange, under a single heading, all matter pertaining to any particular subject, or division of subject in said book; to add such other matter as may be found advisable which is not now contained therein; and to prepare a concise and comprehensive chart or map, as an aid to parliamentary usage. Said committee to report their work in detail to the General Conference of 1914 for action thereon.

A. B. Phillips,
U. W. Greene.

It was moved to adopt.

It was moved to refer to the committee on representation appointed last year, consisting of F. M. Smith, E. L. Kelley, J. A. Tanner, F. M. Sheehy, and H. O. Smith. It was so referred, after which A. B. Phillips was added to the committee. They are to report to the next conference.

INDEPENDENCE TIMES.

The editor with others who had been in attendance at the general conference at Lamoni, Iowa, returned home on Monday evening, the conference having adjourned at 11 a. m. of that day. The consensus of opinion was that the conference just closed was the best ever held by the Reorganization.

Bro. Peter Peterson, father of J. V. Peterson, died on Sunday morning, closing an eventful life. The funeral was held at the church on Monday at 3 p. m., Bro. T. W. Chaburn preaching the sermon.

Other recent deaths are Sr. Carrie Helena Sterrott who died April 15th at the age of 51 years, and Bro. L. N. Totty who died April 18th aged 50 years.

SACRED CONCERT.

This coming Sunday evening instead of the regular preaching service, there will be given a sacred concert at the stone church, by a chorus of the combined choirs of the K. C. churches and Independence churches. Several chorus numbers will be given, assisted by instrumental numbers and under the direction of our general chorister, Albert N. Hoxie, Jr. of Philadelphia. Bro. Hoxie is here in the interest of the general chorus movement for the coming year, and which started with such grand success with the conference just closed.

Choir members of above churches who have been working on the "conference series" anthems please notice—that their attendance is requested at rehearsal this Thursday evening and Sunday afternoon at 4:15, (both rehearsals).

HOLDEN BRANCH.

Some have returned from general conference and report a good conference. Saints are feelings thankful that once more God has spoken to us through our aged worthy president, Bro. Joseph.

Easter Sunday two buds of promise were buried beneath the liquid waves to follow our Lord and Savior; May, the daughter of Bro. and Sr. H. E. Moler, and the eldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. J. Paxton, the Spirit of the Master being present accepting the act of the little girls.

Since last report Bishop Bullard has been with us teaching us the temporal law, also giving a good sermon on the resurrection; Bro. Harold Bullard who is always a welcome visitor, especially among the younger saints, was with us on the 13th.

Our prayer meetings are encouraging and are marked with a good degree of the Spirit of God. On the 13th the Spirit counseled us not to slacken our efforts and God would be with us in power. Two young brothers were also spoken to, encouraging them in their efforts, which was not only a comfort to them but to us as a branch. Diligence and activity were required of the youth of the branch. All felt to lift up their voices and sing "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning."

On the 20th we enjoyed a sermon from our former president, Bro. A. H. Parsons.

Religio prayer service on the 11th after lesson study showed signs of activity and life among our Religians. Bro. and Sr. Runnells from Illinois, and Bro. and Sr. M. Madden from Kansas City participated in the same.

CORRESPONDENCE

WARREN, Ohio, March 8.

Editor Ensign:—We are neither dead nor asleep. We were isolated from the work for a long time but God sent some of his good servants to preach to us. Brother Brown and Bro. Becker and R. C. Miller came with the tent and stayed six weeks and what a good time we had. May God bless his servants everywhere. They may be with the Holy Spirit, is my prayer.

Then before the elders went away they organized a Sunday school, and a Book of Mormon class. Preaching every Sunday night by Brother Johnnie Baldwin of Niles. Oh he is a fine man, a good shepherd over his flock. May God bless him in his efforts in this work.

Again the death angel has entered our home and taken my brother-in-law to his longed for home. He did not belong to the church. He was deaf so he could not hear very well, and I suppose that gave less interest in preaching.

I have not been very well of late. I ask the interest in all the saints' prayers that I may get strong again. My wife is crippled up with rheumatism.

We remain your brother and sister in the one faith.
Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fishel.

FISHER, Ark., March 13.

Editor Ensign:—As I have been in the church eight years and have not troubled your columns before I cannot keep from expressing my gratitude to Him who is evidently ruling this church and kingdom.

Bro. J. T. Riley and W. R. Smith just closed a three week's meeting Sunday night, March 9. There was good interest all through the meetings and many were convinced of the truth of the angel's message but only four obeyed. We feel a special interest in one young lady of tender years, Miss Helen Dixon who at the time of the meetings was visiting her brother at this place was convinced this was the Lord's work and demanded baptism. We trust the Spirit of the Master will go with her to her home, to the convincing of her friends and relatives.

This town, you may remember, was the battle-ground last summer between Bro. Riley and a Mr. Stickland of the Christian faith. At that time we had but two members, Bro. I. M. Goodin and wife, but those two did their duty in warning their neighbors. Our branch was organized February 28, with 21 members, to be known as the Fisher Branch. We have two officers, Bro. Goodin, priest and myself teacher.

While the brethren were preaching there were two notices tacked on the church and one on the house where the elders were staying, warning the Mormon preachers "to get out of town before sun-down, and telling them they must not organize a branch or Sunday school or they would get lead. The brothers had intended leaving the next day, but that night Bro. Riley said he had received an invitation to stay longer and then read the notice. They stayed another week, and had good crowds. One night while Bro. Riley was on his way home some one began stoning him, only one stone hitting him.

It does me good after being in the far northwest "where I found this gospel" to return and find many of my old associates interested along with myself. How many times have I prayed the Master, that the truth might be planted here. Ever praying that we may all strive to overcome all evil desires and practices and to come up higher.

Your co-laborer for Christ

Geo. Gordon.

BELLEVILLE, Kan., March 11.

Editor Ensign:—We have been denouncing the paper for quite awhile and I do love to read them over, that is all we have to help us along in this grand work.

We have no branch here as there are only six saints here and very seldom do we hear any preaching. Bro. Showers was here last fall and preached one sermon, and it did seem so grand that we could even hear one sermon for our souls to feed upon. I wish the ministers could come to this place oftener, for this place is very much in need of true gospel workers. They call us Mormons here.

I am passing our Ensign around to our neighbors and friends. I thought it might possibly do some good, and I ask the prayers of all the saints that the Lord's blessing may rest upon this place.

Your sister in gospel bonds,

Mrs. C. E. Stillwell.

BLUE ISLAND, Ill., March 11.

Dear Ensign:—Just a few lines to let you know we are still alive and doing business at the same old stand (West Pullman). At present we are holding a series of meetings, Bro. David Dowker our Chicago missionary being the speaker. So far a few outsiders have attended, but we feel that we are giving the people an opportunity to hear the gospel if they will but come.

There are no saints in this place that I know of. If any one knows of any living here let us know and we will hunt them up, or if you have friends whom you think would listen to the truth write us and we will try and interest them.

Should any saints know of families or members of the church living in West Pullman, Pullman, or Rosland, please give me their address and we will hunt them up.

Ever praying for the progress of the truth, in bonds,

R. N. Burwell.

MILROY, March 13.

Dear Ensign:—As I have no church to go to to bear my testimony I will write a few words to your columns to tell the brothers and sisters what the Lord is doing for us. He is blessing us with good health and we are trying to live as near right as we can. I sometimes think I am not doing all I can, but what else can I do only to put my whole trust in God? The people here seem hardened against this latter day work and will not try to learn the difference between our church and the Utah church. There are Christian people here and they are good people in their faith and trying to do the right thing.

I hope some day there will be an elder come around and preach some of this true gospel to them. I have been reading Bro. J. S. Roth's sermon in the Ensign of February 20th. I do not see why if people would read this sermon how they could deny this latter day gospel, it is so plain. There is nothing that could turn me, because I know it is true. I wish we could live where we could go to church and Sunday school every Sunday. The saints who have these privileges do not know what it is to be without a church of the true gospel, but we will watch and pray for the better time to come and live the best we can.

Ever your brother,

John Eulitt.

THOMPSONVILLE, Ill., March 20.

Editor Ensign:—I wish to write a few lines this evening. I don't know much about the saints. I have heard Bro. Fields and two Bro. Smiths. Bro. Fields preached some good doctrine. He preached you could go to hell and get out. How can any one believe such doctrine as that? I am so sorry to think some people has put Joseph Smith ahead of God. I think God is first of all. The saints will lay the Bible down, pick up little pamphlets and take them just because they have Joseph Smith's name. I wish some one would tell me where Joseph Smith's name could be found in the Bible. The saints have printed that "Christian" was not given by God. I never have read Latter Day Saints in the Bible. I have seen saints. I don't think God put latter-day to saints. Please tell me where to find Latter Day Saints in the Bible and Joe Smith's name. I want to hear from you. I say if there is no religious people but Latter Day Saints, I say God has nothing to do with religion. So I wish to hear from you soon and you can answer these questions written by Eva Clem.

Our friend is quite mistaken in regard to Latter Day Saints putting Joseph Smith ahead of God. Joseph Smith was but a man whom God called and used in the work of restoring the gospel, and re-establishing his kingdom again upon earth, and in no wise takes the place of God or Christ. All his teachings pointed men to Christ as their Savior, and to the gospel as taught in the Bible as the means of salvation. It is not essential that the names of Joseph Smith, and Latter Day Saints should be found in the Bible, any more than that the names of Martin Luther, John Wesley and others, or the names of Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, etc. Even the name of Jesus Christ is not found in the Old Testament, and not until the time of his coming does the Bible mention it. The name "Christian" is mentioned but three times in the Bible, and is shown to be a term of derision. (Acts 11:26; 26:28; 2 Peter 4:16). God's people were called "saints" in all ages, and the name is found in all parts of the Bible. We hope our sister will continue her investigations until she learns all the facts and comes to a knowledge of the truth.—Editor.

KILGORE, Neb., March 18.

Dear Ensign:—I feel I would like to say a few words to the saints although my few words may not be as interesting as others. My daughter and myself are the only Latter Day Saints here. All the sermons we hear we get in the Ensigns. We enjoy reading the sermons and also the letters from the brothers, and we ask the saints to pray for us.

We have many trials. My baby is twenty-three years old in June, and she is partly blind. She is the only child of my family that belongs to the church. Dear brothers and sisters, pray for us that we may overcome and all be one in Christ Jesus the living Head.

Your isolated sisters,

Alice I. and Amanda J. Rogers.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 24.

Dear Ensign:—As it has been some time since I have troubled your grand and good pages I thought I would drop you a few more lines as some of your readers may like to hear something from this part of the great field of labor.

I am still among the living and am glad of it for it gives me great pleasure to do what little I can in my weak way to assist in the spread of this great latter day work. I am now at the hot place in Arkansas but hope to be liberated this evening and return home to visit loved ones for a few days, then on to conference if the Lord wills.

I left home just after Christmas for the southern part of my field. Stopped at Mansfield, La.; had a good meeting there, some seemed to get interested at that place. I went from there to Lake Charles, then from there to Sweet Lake. Visited Bro. and Sr. Helms who lives at that place; preached awhile there, had some very good meetings but the most of the people there are French and belong to the Catholic church. Some of them liked the sound of the gospel and said it was the best that they ever heard. While I was in that place I took a trip out on the "Big Waters"—the Gulf of Mexico, and saw many things that I never saw before. I visited the great light house, watched the fishermen catch oysters and they watched the preacher eat them. I also visited the orange orchards and ate oranges till I was satisfied that I could not eat them all. Sent some to my wife by parcel post.

I found plenty of mosquitoes which were very large and yet very friendly to a missionary, but I did not send any of them home to my wife.

I went from there to Eros, La., where I joined Bro. I. M. Smith. We have a small branch of the church there which was organized by the writer five years ago—the only branch in Louisiana. Some few faithful saints there and some who are not so faithful. We had some very good meetings there but Bro. Smith was called home from there so I was left alone again.

I remained there a few days then went from there to Fisher, Ark., where the writer met one Rev. F. M. Stricklin of the Church of Christ in debate last June. At the time of the debate we only had three saints at that place but at the close of the debate we baptized six and in October we visited them again and baptized four more, and while there this time we baptized five more and the end is not yet for a number said to us, "When you come again we are going to be baptized."

Bro. W. R. Smith joined me at Fisher and we had a fine meeting, a house full to preach to every night, the crowd running from 75 to 150, and Fisher is only a small place, not over 200 in the town.

But with all that good time we raised the devil, and he sent us a notice to leave Fisher and not let the sun go down on us in Fisher, and save trouble and lead. This was on Sunday morning and we were going to close our meet that night, but when we got that notice we changed our minds so that night instead of closing I read the notice to the crowd and told them we would just take that as an invitation to stay another week. So we gave out meetings to close.

It was a shock to the town when I read the notice, the people were all worked up over it. It made us more friends. Nine-tenths of the people are on our side and we are friends. There are but a very few that are against us, and they are sore over the debate, for they had tried several times to organize a church there but could not and to talk we were getting ahead of them it was hard for them to stand. But thank the Lord we had the privilege of organizing a branch of twenty-one noble saints there, and a Sunday school of forty-one to start with. And we did not let any lead either.

But the writer got a Campbellite rock on the way home one night but we stayed with them just the same and the best citizens of the town are all stirred up and say they will get the parties that wrote the note and threw the rock yet.

While it is not all sunshine and flowers along the pathway of the missionary I am thankful that I am able to be among them that have to suffer persecution for the gospel's sake, and I hope and trust that I may be able to stand all that may be required of me as a servant of Christ that at the end I may with the rest of the saints receive a crown with the redeemed.

I will close by saying good bye to all the saints and friends in Arkansas and Louisiana. May God's blessings be with you all and may we all labor for the spread of the gospel and the redemption of Zion.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

J. T. Riley.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 17.

Editor Ensign:—After so long a time wife and I have been enabled under the blessing of God to locate in Independence, Mo. Happily we are located very near the Spirit's church, being on a part of the old temple lot. I was a patient of the saints at the Sautitarium. I don't want to anyone speak against it, as I was there over twelve months and was greatly blessed both spiritually and otherwise. Some say, "O, it is no noisy there!" True there is some noise, but how could it be otherwise when there are so many sick and the nurses constantly looking after them. How could it be otherwise in an institution of this kind? When one goes there for treatment they must determine to put their trust in God and not to worry about anything. God bless the Sanitarium, Graceland College and all these institutions in the church, for they are of Him and are therefore worthy of our heartiest support both morally and otherwise.

I hope while I live to win souls to Christ. Life is too short to fool it away. I would like the prayers of those who have known me in the past. I want to so live that we shall do what we can for Zion's redemption. May God bless us all whether we be in Zion or elsewhere that we may fulfill the design of God, in my desire and prayer.

C. J. Spurlock.

BELLAIR, Ills., March 18.

Dear Ensign:—I am young in this work, just one year the 25th of February, since I was baptized, by Elder L. C. Moore, and I am thankful for the many blessings received since that time. This is my first letter to our paper, and I hope I may say something that will encourage those that need a word of cheer. Saints let us be up and doing, and not slumber for "The great day of the Lord is near and hasteth greatly." Zeph. 1:14.

As a band of workers we are trying to make our new home as pleasant as possible; it seems that our task has been "slow" but we hope to be "sure." The local elder has preaching every two weeks. We have Sunday school every Sunday; prayer meeting on Wednesday nights.

We hope to push onward and upward, and be among those that shall be gathered home to Zion.

Bro. S. S. Smith was with us not long ago and baptized two precious souls, and many more seemed interested. God would have us be valiant soldiers in this warfare, so let us humbly do what He commands.

Ever praying for the advancement of this work,
I am your sister in gospel bonds

Mrs. Lucy Harris.

PANA, Ill., April 13.

Dear Ensign:—It has been many years since I contributed to your columns, but I have just been reading Bro. Bulard's sermon in the Ensign of March 27th and I felt impressed to write a few lines and express my desires and hopes in the gospel. I have been a member of the church twenty-three years, having been baptized by Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser when I was but fourteen years old. I have enjoyed many blessing both spiritual and temporal. I realize the hand of God over me and mine at all times, and ever since my earliest recollection I can see where my life has been spared at different times when to all human appearances I was beyond recall, but God saw a purpose away beyond what the human could discern and spared my life and I trust it has been for a grand and noble purpose in Him. I have passed through some of the dark and cloudy scenes of life as well as through many bright ones. Over a year ago I was called upon to give up dear companion and I felt at that time that it was almost more than I could bear as I was left with a family to care for and although some of them were old enough to make a living yet I felt that the burden of teaching them and bringing them up in gospel ways was more than I was fitted for alone, but I have striven to keep them in Sunday School and have done my best to instruct them in the ways of the Lord and they have been a great stay to me and their advice in spiritual things are better perhaps than many older in years would give as they seem to see the necessity of keeping our tithing and offerings paid up. They all belong to the church but the youngest boy and he is not old enough until September.

While I have felt many times that my burdens were very heavy I have also been made to realize that God has been a father indeed unto us and I praise Him for his goodness. I am very anxious to locate my family in the regions round about Zion as our hearts and souls long to be in a brae where we can have good church privileges and we want to so live and prepare ourselves so that when an opportunity is offered we may be able to abide in Zion by keeping the whole law. I truly rejoice in the gospel and I want to so live that neither I nor my children will ever bring reproach upon this glorious work.

Hoping that Zion will prosper and arise and put on her beautiful garments and that her triumph will soon be complete I beg to remain a well wisher and a hopeful saint.

Mrs. Nellie Sharrock.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

HAVE NOTHING IN COMMON.

Latter Day Saints of This City Strongly Opposed to the Mormons of Utah.

To the Editor of the News: In the lecture delivered in the First Baptist church last night by Mrs. George W. Coleman of Boston, frequent mention was made of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and to the uninitiated it might appear that she referred to the Latter Day Saints in Fall River, who have been worshippers for a great many years on Claffin street, Flint village.

We do not know what might have been in the mind of the lecturer, but we can say that nothing said by her can in any sense apply to the local church. The church in Utah, known by a similar name, and the organization of which the local Latter Day Saints church is a part, are separate and distinct bodies, and have no affiliation whatever, and do not hold anything in common any more than other Christian churches may hold doctrines common to the Utah church, except, possibly, in origin, and name. Both churches are known as the Latter Day Saints church.

This came about because of a common origin. The church represented by the local congregation worshipping on Claffin street, was organized in 1830 in western New York, and continued as one church until the year 1844. In this year one Brigham, becoming ambitious to lead the church, and, as we believe, desiring to introduce doctrines, or practices of a criminal nature, withdrew from the church, and with what followers he could persuade to go with him (about 10,000) went West and established what is now known as the Mormon Church of Utah. The migration to Utah occurred in 1847, or to speak accurately it began in 1845 and '46, and the first settlers entered Utah July 24, 1847.

Utah was unorganized territory, at that time, and here, away from civilization, the doctrine of polygamy, blood atonement, and similar criminal doctrines and practices were introduced.

Those who refused to follow Brigham Young to the West, came together and formed what is now known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This organization has persistently with great zeal, oppose the doctrines of a criminal nature practiced by the people in Utah. It established a mission in Utah in 1863, preceeding other Christian churches by at least two years, and has maintained that mission uninterruptedly since that time.

It early recognized the dangerous doctrines, politically, of the Mormon church, and took steps to put itself upon record as opposed to them. At a semi-annual conference held in Council Bluffs, Iowa, September 8, 1875, a committee was appointed to draft a memorial to Congress setting forth the views of the church upon this question. Six months after this committee brought in its report, and on the 12th day of April, the memorial was adopted by the church in general conference. I quote from this memorial as follows:

"We would respectfully represent that from our knowledge of the teachings and practices of the Utah church organization, it is opposed to all free governments, and especially to the government of the United States; in proof of which we refer to the following declarations from their leading men, and published by themselves:"

"Our ecclesiastical government is the government of heaven, and incorporates all governments in earth and hell. It is the fountain, the main-spring, the source of all light, power and governments that ever did, or ever will exist. It circumscribes the governments of this world." Brigham Young.

"The Kingdom of God is an order of government established by Divine authority. It is the only legal government that can exist in any part of the universe. All other governments are illegal and unauthorized—any people attempting to govern themselves by laws of their own making and by officers of their own appointment are in direct rebellion against the Kingdom of God." Orson Pratt.

"We, your memorialists, while representing the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, throughout the United States; we, also, represent those members of the said church now resident in Utah, which constitutes no inconsiderable part of the population of that territory, as before stated, in common with those of other sects, and no sect; have felt, and still feel, the pernicious effects of this unwarranted and unnatural union of church and state, sought to be forced upon us by an oligarchy of priests; who, declaring against human governments, assume to be the government of God, and rule the legislature and territorial courts, to the detriment of all law-abiding citizens."

This shows the early attitude of the Reorganized church upon these vital issues, and it has consistently held to this attitude since that time, and in every effort to legislate for the suppression of these evils it has been in the lead, no matter whether it has been from an ecclesiastical or legislative standpoint, and I can pledge the support of the membership to any movement that may look toward a settlement of these difficulties, and the doing away with the evils of the church in Utah.

The writer of this article spent five years in Utah, and studied the situation thoroughly at close range. He was impressed then, and still holds to that view, with the inadequacy of the local laws to deal with the question. He believed then, and believes now, that the only solution of the question is a constitutional amendment forbidding the practice of polygamy. Make it a crime against the federal law, and it will be enforced, but as long as it continues under the regulation of local forces it will be winked at.

DILIGENCE.

"Wherefore then rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure."—2 Pet. 1:10.
"Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."—Pro. 4:23.

The first definition given by Webster to the word diligence is "Steady application," therefore we desire to bear this thought in mind as we examine in brief a few of the thoughts contained in the foregoing texts, as they are pregnant with good thoughts and we would like to draw especial attention to at least one or two that seem to be paramount.

Paraphrasing the language of Peter we have him admonishing those to whom he wrote (and it was unto all them that have obtained like precious faith with us that he is addressing his epistle) to make a steady application to make sure their salvation, in other words, don't expect to reach the perfect standard in one bound, but apply yourselves steadily with the things that make for life that as the days go by you may approach nearer the divine ideal and thus build wisely and well a character that will stand the test of time and insure to us life here and hereafter. It will hardly do for us to rest our case in the mere observance of outward ordinances, nor yet in the idea that the gospel is true and that therefore, if we nominally become a member of the church, we are insured the blessed gift of eternal life.

The text suggests to us the thought of steadily applying ourselves to become acquainted with the Christ life and Christ character, that we might know the real merits thereof; become acquainted with the forces that develop such a life, and then study out a means by which those characteristics may be implanted in our own lives. If we thus learn of the Christ, become familiar with his laws, and through obedience become a partaker of his divine Spirit, and then diligently apply those things to our every day lives, we will make quite sure our calling and election.

A steady application then of the things that were taught by the Christ to our lives is the only safe method—it will not do then for us to think of those virtues once a week or at such times as the preacher is around, but it requires our attention daily to insure us success.

It may be well for us to, here connect the thought suggested by the wise man as found in the second text, and we are going to paraphrase it in the same way: "Keep thy heart with 'steady application' for out of it are the issues of life." That is, apply your heart to the things of God, not only once in a great while but steadily—keep the fountain of your heart pure at all times, let desires thereof be such that your life will be lifted daily to nobler things, that is, let your heart dwell constantly on that which is uplifting, the pure, the true, virtues of life, and let your heart be applied steadily, for it is the steady application that counts, a constant growth a perfect unfolding of the life until it blooms into a perfect character like unto the divine Master.

"HIS AUTHORITY."

Benjamin F. Butler, Judge Hoar's chief adversary at the bar in the early fifties as council for the defence, once closed with this appeal: "We have the highest authority for saying 'Everything that a man hath will he give for his life.'" When Hoar's turn came, he said: "It has for a long time been suspected by those who have watched Mr. Butler's career that he recognized as the highest authority the individual upon whom he now relies. For, gentlemen, as you well know, the statement which he quotes from the Book of Job was made by Satan."—Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

A cable from Berlin, Germany, states that the discovery of what is believed to be the real "Mount Sinai" of Holy Scripture is reported to the academy of science by one signing himself Prof. Dr. Al Musil from Damascus. Prof. Musil believes that the extinct volcano Hal-al-Bedr is the Biblical mountain where the Ten Commandments were given to Moses.

GENERAL CONFERENCE

REVELATION.

A document having been presented to the various quorums by the president of the church, Joseph Smith, and considered by them was presented, and the action of the quorums thereupon was read. The quorum of Twelve, the Seventy, the high priests, the elders, the Aaronic priesthood, and the bishopric, reported their acceptance of the communication as a revelation from God. It was read as follows:—

To the Elders and Members of the Conference assembled:

Greeting:—

In obedience to the spirit and design of the day of fasting and prayer I observed the day with the church. I have hitherto made supplication to the God whom we serve and renewed my supplication in the spirit of the desire of the church, for instruction and light. I am now prepared to lay before the church what has come to me as the presiding officer, through whom the Master may speak to his people.

Thus saith the voice of the Spirit: In order that the Quorum of Twelve may be placed in better condition to carry on the work of the ministry in various fields of occupation, it is expedient that Elders W. H. Kelley, I. N. White and J. W. Wight be released from active duties of the apostolic quorum, on account of increasing infirmities of age and incapacity, caused by illness of body, and stand with their associates among the high priests and patriarchs of the church for such special service as may be open to them, according to wisdom and the call of the Spirit.

It is also expedient that Elder Frederick A. Smith be released from the quorum activities that he may take the place of his father, Elder Alexander H. Smith, as the presiding patriarch of the church. According to the tradition of the elders he should be chosen and ordained to this office, thus releasing Elder Joseph R. Lambert from the onerous duties in which he has faithfully served since the death of the presiding patriarch.

To fill the vacancies caused by the release of these elders from the apostolic quorum, Elders James E. Kelley, William Aylor, Paul M. Hanson, and James A. Gillen may be chosen and ordained as apostles to take with others of the quorum active oversight of the labors in the ministerial field. Those servants, so called, and chosen if faithful, will receive the blessings which those have enjoyed who have preceded them in the apostolic quorum and will be entitled to receive such ministrations of the Spirit as will continue to qualify them for the discharge of the duties of the position whereunto they are called. The Twelve in its reorganization for its work may choose its own officers (president and secretary) by nomination and vote.

The Spirit saith further: Elder E. A. Blakeslee is hereby called into the more active participation of the duties of the bishopric than he has hitherto engaged in, in order that he may give such assistance to the Bishop, E. L. Kelley, as is essential unto the success of the work entrusted to the bishopric. It is also expedient that he be ordained unto the office of bishop, that he may serve as did his father, George A. Blakeslee, who has preceded him.

The Spirit saith further: That the bishopric may be still further put in condition to perform the duties of the office of caring for the temporalities of the church, the imminent necessity of which appears clear to all, the church should authorize the presiding bishop to make choice of some one who may be qualified to take active participation in the work of the bishopric and become in due time a part thereof; and this one so chosen should receive the support and sanction of the church until he shall have approved or disapproved himself as a servant of the Master, in the office whereunto he shall be called.

The Spirit saith further unto the church assembled and at large: In order that the temporal affairs of the church may be successfully carried on and the accumulated debt of the church in its respective departments where debts have accumulated may be properly met and in due time discharged, the church is instructed both as members and as the body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment or otherwise expending the tithes and offerings of the church in that which may not be essential unto the continued forward progress of the general work; and both in private and public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be needful to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body. And the Spirit counseleth the church in this regard.

The Spirit saith further: that the elders and delegates assembled in business capacity are counseled to cease permitting the spirit of recrimination and accusation to find place in their discourse either public or private, as it tends to destroy confidence and create distrust not only in those present at councils where these occur, but to those to whom the knowledge of such a course of procedure comes by the voice of those who are present and witness what is said and done. There should be harmony and the Spirit enjoins it upon all that the Master may be remembered as in meekness and in due sobriety be carried on the great work to which he was called.

The Spirit saith further: That the church has been warned heretofore that the sons of the leading officers of the church are called and may be chosen to the respective offices to which the Spirit may direct and the church should be prepared when necessity arises to properly choose such officers as may be pointed out as those who should fill the position to which they are respectively called. There are others still in reserve who are fitted through the testimony that Jesus is the Christ and the doctrine is true to serve as those who are sent as apostles of peace, life and salvation to those who are laboring in the valleys of humiliation and distress of spirit.

Joseph Smith.

Given at Lamoni, Iowa, April 14, 1913.

It was moved that the communication be adopted by this conference, for what it purports to be—a revelation from God.

Remarks were made by a number of the brethren, and upon the vote being taken it carried.

The chair stated that if there were no objection the revelation would be printed in the Doctrine and Covenants.

A motion prevailed that the presidency be authorized to provide for the ordination of those named in the revelation for the several offices.

Wm. Aylor, J. E. Kelley, of the seventy expressed willingness to accept the offices to which they were called. Elders J. A. Gillen and P. M. Hanson being absent.

The assembly sang "We Thank Thee Oh God for a Prophet" and prayer was offered by H. C. Smith.

The evening sermon was preached by H. O. Smith, assisted by Charles Fry.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16TH.

The morning prayer service was in charge of M. M. Turpen and J. S. Snively, and at 11 o'clock James E. Yates preached, being assisted by Burton McKim.

BUSINESS SESSION.

Pres. F. M. Smith called the conference to order at 2 p. m., and after singing, prayer was offered by Bishop R. Bullard. The minutes were read.

The chair called upon the brethren present, named in the revelation, who had not previously spoken, to speak as to their willingness to accept the changes.

E. A. Blakeslee, W. H. Kelley, I. N. White, J. W. Wight, J. R. Lambert and J. A. Gillen personally accepted by the changes provided in the revelation, declared their willingness to abide by the same and the will of the body.

A report from the joint council of the Presidency and Twelve was read as follows:

The Joint Council of the Presidency and Twelve have had under consideration for some little time the special report of the auditors which was made to the body, and we are instructed to report the following as their action on said report and touching the financial policy of the church.

1. The Bishop assures us that he already has measures in hand to meet the increased demands of his work by reason of the settlement of the saints and the extended missionary work, and we recommend that these measures be prosecuted and that the financial department of the church be rearranged and the work of the department be put upon a thoroughly up-to-date business basis. We recommend that the necessary departmental help be secured; that Bishop Blakeslee, in harmony with the late revelation, give as much of his time as is possible to the work of the Presiding Bishopric, and that the Bishop select some other man in whom the church has confidence to assist him in this work.

2. The Bishop assures us that he has under consideration the formation of an organization that can hold properties and still be within the provisions of the Laws of Missouri, and we here recommend that this organization be completed within the conference year and necessary transfer of titles be made, and in this matter the Presiding Bishopric co-operate with a committee of the Presidency and Twelve, as suggested by the Bishop.

3. The Joint Councils recommend that the Presiding Bishop's annual report embrace the several reports of the church institutions known as the college, sanitarium, and the Church Homes, and also a statement or budget outlining, so far as practicable, the minimum amount that may be required for the ordinary work of the ministry, the general church administration and the several institutions named.

Respectfully submitted,

F. M. Smith, Sec. Presidency.
F. A. Smith, Sec. Twelve.

Moved to adopt the report.

Moved to defer until action be had upon the resolution read yesterday relative to the report of the board of auditors. Motion to defer prevailed.

The board of trustees for the Children's Home reported that Heman C. Smith had been chosen president, Oscar Anderson secretary, Joseph Roberts treasurer.

A report from the Order of Evangelists was read recommending that the request of W. H. Greenwood for release from the work of evangelist be concurred in. The recommendation was adopted.

The United Order of Enoch presented a report showing trustees—E. L. Kelley, B. J. Scott, G. E. Harrington, Ellis Short, Richard Bullard, Mark H. Seigfried, G. H. Hilliard (diseased), W. R. Dexter, J. F. Curtis, D. J. Krahl, W. B. Kelley and A. H. Parsons.

The joint council of the Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric presented a report touching the work of bishop's counselors. The report was approved.

A report from the Board of Publication was read including statements of the Herald Publishing House and Ensign Publishing House.

The Second Quorum of Seventy reported 27 members present, one having been expelled upon decision of a bishops' court. T. C. Kelley has been chosen to preside over the third quorum, and A. B. Phillips transferred from the first to the second quorum. 6881 sermons had been preached and 459 baptisms. The expulsion was approved by the conference.

The resignation of J. R. Lambert as member of the standing committee on revision of church history was presented and accepted. J. W. Wight was elected to fill vacancy.

A resolution from the second quorum of Seventy asking that the board of auditors be required to furnish the conference copies of all reports made by them, was tabled.

The standing committee on American Archaeology presented a report dealing with recent discoveries. The report is too lengthy to include here, but it will be given complete in the conference minutes.

"Sovereign and transforming grace" was sung and T. W. Chatburn offered the closing prayer.

At 7:45 Elder L. E. Hills was the speaker assisted by Alma Booker.

THURSDAY APRIL 17TH.

Elders John Garver and G. W. Blair presided over the prayer service at 9 a. m., and A. M. Chase preached the sermon at 11, assisted by George Thorburn.

BUSINESS SESSION.

At 2 p. m. Pres. E. A. Smith called the assembly to order. "Shout the tidings of salvation" was sung and A. B. Phillips offered prayer.

Minutes of yesterday's sessions were read.

A report from first quorum of Seventy was read showing 33 members present. There had been 7423 sermons preached, 466 baptisms, 5 branches organized. One member had been expelled for transgression, one had died, and two had been called to other offices.

The Quorum of Twelve recommended the names of H. O. Smith, Archibald D. Angus, James Davis and J. A. Beckham for ordination to the evangelical order. The recommendations were approved.

The Presidency recommended B. S. Lambkin, A. R. Crippen, O. Salisbury, W. R. Armstrong and G. W. Burt for ordination to the office of high priest. The recommendations were approved.

The council of seven presidents recommended Lester O. Wildermuth, John R. Lentell, Clyde F. Ellis and Alvin R. Ellis for ordination to the office of seventy to be enrolled in the first quorum, and J. A. Bronson, Ernest N. Burt and J. L. Parker to the same office, to be enrolled in the second quorum, and R. D. Davis, Myron A. McCnley and J. August Koehler to be enrolled in the third quorum. The recommendations were adopted.

W. A. McDowell was recommended by the Quorum of Twelve for ordination to the evangelical office, and was approved by the body.

The following was presented:

Moved that the chairman appoint a committee whose duty shall be to consider the advisability of publishing proper text books for our college course of study, said committee to report to this body next year.

It was adopted.

Preambles and resolutions from the Quorum of Twelve touching the publishing of books by individual members was moved and discussed, but was referred back for revision.

"In the sweet by and bye" was sung and the closing prayer was offered by E. A. Blakeslee.

FRIDAY, APRIL 18.

A special feature of the morning prayer service was the blessing of the Lamanite brethren and sisters by Pres. Joseph Smith. By their request the aged president laid his hands upon their heads in connection with Patriarch J. R. Lambert and Frederick A. Smith who had just been called by revelation to the patriarchy, and blessed them. The incident was one of marked interest, especially in its relationship to prophecy, ancient and modern. We will write more upon this later. Charles J. Hunt and C. A. Parker were in charge.

The sermon at eleven was preached by T. J. Elliott, assisted by Alva Chrestensen.

BUSINESS SESSION

The assembly sang "Am I a soldier of the cross" and G. A. Smith offered prayer. Pres. F. M. Smith occupied the chair. After the reading of the minutes the name of J. F. Petre who had been approved for the office of Seventy by a previous conference, but had not been ordained, was again presented and reaffirmed.

Also Samuel Harding having been previously approved for the office of high priest but not having been ordained, expressed his willingness to now accept. The chair stated that there being no objection the ordination would be provided for.

A report from the Third Quorum of Seventy was read. T. C. Kelley had been chosen president to succeed H. O. Smith who had been ordained a high priest. Sixteen members were present out of a membership of twenty-four. There were reported 2735 sermons, 223 baptisms.

The Quorum of Twelve reported the following which was adopted:

To the General Conference, Greeting:

We are authorized to present the following report on the matter referred back to Quorum of Twelve on the 17th inst.

Whereas, the collection of prophecies and statements other than those which are accepted and approved by the General Church claiming to be of spiritual origin some of which may be of doubtful character, and the records of such may be regarded as miracles and the publishing of such in books or pamphlets and so parading them before the public partakes of the nature of boasting, which is contrary to the instruction of the Master, "But a commandment I give unto them, (that they shall not boast themselves of these things, neither speak them before the world; for these things are given you for your profit and for salvation." See Doc. and Cov. Sec. 83:11; also 102:4; and

Whereas, we believe that such publications are detrimental to the best interests of the church and encourage an undue desire for such experiences, therefore be it

Resolved, that we look with disfavor upon such publications and recommend that the resolutions which are already on record have the respectful consideration and observance of the brethren who are affected thereby.—See General Conference Resolutions Nos. 288, 368, 550 and Conference Minutes of 1912, page 1622.

Respectfully submitted,
Frederick A. Smith,
Sec. of Twelve.

The order of the bishopric reported having held four sessions. The presiding bishopric was recognized as the presidency of the order, and J. A. Becker was elected secretary.

The order of the bishopric also reported upon a referred matter relative to the establishment of a mail-order business, stating the inadvisability of entering upon such a work.

A report from the order of the bishopric on a referred resolution as to the meaning of the term "bishopric," was read. It was included in the following:

The term "The Bishopric" as used in the revelations to the church, refers to the presiding bishopric, and also to the association of men holding the office of bishop under a presiding head, therefore

1. Be it resolved that when reference is made to the presiding bishop and his counselors, the term "the presiding bishopric" be employed.

2. Be it further resolved that when reference is made to the bishop of a stake and his counselors, the title "Stake bishopric" should be used.

3. Be it further resolved that when the association of all the bishops and their council is referred to the term, "The bishopric" or "Order of bishops" be applied.

It was adopted.

A committee composed of John W. Rushton, J. A. Tanner and E. A. Blakeslee to whom was referred the matter of reunions in the Little Sioux District reported. The recommendation was adopted as follows:

We now recommend to the Little Sioux District reunion committee the advisability of reconsidering their reunion's location and the date, with a view to joining with the consolidated reunion to be held at Missouri Valley, August 23-31. Should this prove to be not practicable we advise that for this year, the Little Sioux District reconsider date and arrange the reunion so as not to be held at the same time as the consolidated reunion.

The report of the joint council of Presidency and Twelve was taken up and its adoption moved. An amendment was offered to follow paragraph numbered 1, to the effect the selection should be reported to this conference for approval. The amendment was lost. The report was adopted, as follows:

Lamoni Iowa, April 16, 1913.

To the general conference, Greeting—

The joint council of the presidency and Twelve have had under consideration for some little time the special report of the auditors which was made to this body, and we are instructed to report the following as their action on said report, and touching the financial policy of the church:—

1. The Bishop assures us that he already has measures in hand to meet the increased demands of his work by reason of the settlement of the saints and the extended missionary work; and we recommend that these measures be prosecuted and that the financial department of the church be rearranged, and the work of the department put upon a thoroughly up-to-date business basis. We recommend that the necessary departmental help be secured that Bishop Blakeslee, in harmony with the late revelation, gives as much of his time as is possible to the work of the presiding bishopric; and that the bishop select some other man in whom the church has confidence to assist him in this work.

2. The Bishop assures us that he has under consideration the formation of an organization that can hold properties and still be within the provisions of the laws of Missouri, and we recommend that this organization be completed within the conference year and necessary transfer of titles be made, and in this matter the presiding bishopric co-operate with a committee of the presidency and twelve, as suggested by the bishop.

3. The joint council recommend that the presiding bishop's annual report embrace the several reports of the church institutions, known as the college, sanitarium, and church homes, and also a statement or budget outlining so far as practicable the minimum amount that may be required for the ordinary work of the ministry, the general church administration, and the several institutions named.

Respectfully submitted
Frederick M. Smith, Sec. Presidency.
Frederick A. Smith, Sec. Twelve.

Some announcements were made, and the session adjourned in the usual order.

The evening speaker was S. A. Burgess of St. Louis, Mo.

SATURDAY, APRIL 19th.

ORDINATION MEETING.

A session was held at 8 a. m. for the purpose of ordaining the men called to the several offices. "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah" was sung and G. T. Griffiths offered prayer.

The following ordinations were then performed by the laying on of hands with prayer:—

E. A. Blakeslee to the office of bishop by E. A. Smith and F. M. Smith.

J. E. Kelley to the office of apostle by G. T. Griffiths, F. A. Smith and J. W. Rushton.

Wm. Aylor to the office of a apostle by J. W. Rushton, G. T. Griffiths and F. A. Smith.

J. A. Gillen to the office of apostle by F. A. Smith, J. W. Rushton, and G. T. Griffiths.

B. S. Lambkin to the office of high priest by J. W. Wight and F. M. Sheehy.

I. N. White to the office of evangelical minister by J. F. Curtis and Peter Anderson.

H. O. Smith to the office of evangelical minister by F. M. Sheehy and J. W. Wight.

G. W. Burt to the office of high priest by Peter Anderson and J. F. Curtis.

The following were ordained to the office of seventy:

C. F. Ellis by F. A. Smith and J. W. Wight.
L. O. Wildermuth by U. W. Greene and R. C. Russell.

J. L. Parker by J. Wight and F. A. Smith.
J. A. Bronson by R. C. Russell and U. W. Greene.

BUSINESS SESSION.

At 9:15 a. m., Pres. F. M. Smith called the assembly to order, "My Faith Looks up to Thee" was sung and W. H. Kelley offered prayer.

The secretary stated that the ordination of Samuel Harding to the office of high priest had taken place at the presidency's office, Bro. Harding having to leave before the ordination service was ordained on the evening of the 18th by F. M. Sheehy, U. W. Greene, and J. F. Curtis.

The general Sunday school association reported the work of the year. There were 31,666 members in the Sunday schools, with 628 schools, and 69 districts. The membership gain for the year was 1121.

A report was read from the joint council of the Presidency, Twelve and Bishopric, on the referred matter touching what constitutes the first offense in cases of adultery. It provided that confessions made before the officers of the branch, and filed with the presidency's office shall be counted as the first offense.

The work of the committee on railroad credentials having become so small, the committee was abolished, and the work left in the hands of the church secretary.

A number of other committees were sustained including committees on memorial to the martyrs, on general conference resolutions, on reorganization of quorums, on building church offices, trustees for children's home. Daniel Macgregor was elected to succeed Lester Haas (term expired) as member of board of auditors, and the board sustained.

The tract committee reported that they had examined a number of manuscripts submitted to them. A number of these have been approved and published, and others are yet to appear. The report was approved and committee sustained.

The committee on archaeology was sustained. It was moved that the presidency and secretary be a committee to prepare and print all such reports as are practicable prior to conference. The motion prevailed.

Committee on revision of church history were sustained.

The committee on Church of Christ was sustained after the name of R. Bullard had been substituted for R. May.

The committee on a teacher's edition of the inspired translation stated it was not ready to report,

Committee on Book of Mormon concordance was sustained as also the committee on Juvenile History.

J. F. Garver was re-elected member of board of trustees of Graceland college to succeed himself. J. W. Wight was elected to succeed F. B. Blair, and S. A. Burgess to succeed himself. Other members are Daniel Anderson, A. Carmichael, T. A. Hougas and F. W. Newcomb.

The presidency reported that the names of J. A. Saxe of San Francisco and H. A. Higgins of Nebraska City had been approved and recommended to the office of high priest. The conference approved and ordered that the ordinations be provided for.

The library commission was sustained. The committee on translation of the Book of Mormon was sustained.

Committee on revision of Book of Rules was sustained and T. A. Hougas added.

Committee on historical relics was sustained, also the committee on erection of library building, and social purity board.

It was moved to adopt the bishop's financial report presented on a previous day. Discussion was had until time to close, when the doxology was sung, and prayer was offered by Bishop E. A. Blakeslee, and the session adjourned.

At 3 p. m. "The Lord is my Shepherd" was sung and prayer was offered by John Smith.

Discussion on the adoption of the bishop's report continued when a vote was called and the adoption prevailed.

The following resolution was laid upon the table:

Resolved:—That an information bureau be established to be under the charge of the church historian, with auxiliary departments in the various missions or districts of the church, the object of which shall be to promulgate the interests of the church in regard to its teaching, practice, and history, and to allay prejudice that may exist or be aroused by misrepresentation either through the press or otherwise.

A report from the council of seven presidents of seventy was read:

The matter of sustaining the board of trustees of the Independence Sanitarium was taken up and deferred until a report be received from the joint council relative to some points relating to the sanitarium.

Bro. Paul M. Hanson having arrived from California, upon request made a statement expressing a willingness to accept ordination to the apostleship, as previously approved by the body.

John Lentell also expressed willingness to accept the office of Seventy as previously provided.

These two brethren were then called to the platform, and prayer was offered by Pres. E. A. Smith, when Paul M. Hanson was ordained an apostle by U. W. Greene and J. W. Rushton, and J. Lentell was ordained a Seventy by J. W. Rushton and U. W. Greene.

Albert N. Hoxie, Jr., church chorister, was granted power to appoint district choristers.

"Glorious things are sung of Zion" was sung and prayer was offered by E. L. Kelley.

At the evening hour J. A. Becker was the speaker, assisted by Joseph Roberts.

SUNDAY, APRIL 20.

The four young men recently called and ordained to the apostleship made their maiden efforts in the new office on this occasion. J. A. Gillen spoke at 11 a. m. being assisted by William Aylor, and Paul M. Hanson spoke in the evening, assisted by J. E. Kelley, all acquitted themselves well.

The afternoon prayer service was excellent as to spirituality and peacefulness. It was in charge of W. H. Garrett and John Garver. In the early part of this service, Frederick A. Smith was ordained presiding patriarch by Joseph Smith and J. R. Lambert. Gomer T. Griffiths was ordained president of the apostolic quorum by Joseph Smith, J. R. Lambert and F. M. Smith having been selected by the quorum for that office; and J. W. Wight to the office of evangelical minister by F. M. and F. A. Smith.

An overflow meeting was held at 11 a. m. in the lower auditorium at which Wardell Christy was the speaker, being assisted by Roy Sly.

MONDAY, APRIL 21st.

Pres. F. M. Smith occupied the chair at the opening of the 9 o'clock business session "God will take care of you" was sung and prayer was offered by Albert Carmichael.

Minutes were read. A report was read from the joint council on matter referred relative to changes on the board of trustees for the sanitarium. More time was asked for which was granted.

The quorum of Twelve reported that they had chosen G. T. Griffith as president and J. W. Rushton as secretary.

F. A. Smith ex-officio member of the committee for choosing members of board of auditors in cases of exigency, being released through ordination to the patriarchate, the twelve reported that J. W. Rushton had been selected by them to succeed.

Bishop Kelley nominated O. E. Prall as member of committee on saints homes, to succeed John Midgorden. It was approved.

SCHMILE.

Schmile, ud the world schmiles mit you;
Laugh, und the world vill roar;
Howl, und the world vill leat you,
Undt nefer come back any more;
For all of us couldn't peen handsome,
Nor all of us veer' goot clothes;
But a schmile was not expensive,
Undt covers a vorld of voes.—Gospel Advocate

"And let every man deal honestly, and be alike among this people, and receive alike, that ye may be one, even as I have commanded you."—Doctrine and Covenants 51:2.

"Remember, faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence."

The only person killed in the earthquake in the City of Mexico was a man who stopped on a railroad track to pray and was run over. He forgot the other half of the injunction and didn't watch.—St. Louis Republic.

RICHES AND CONTENTMENT.

"Contentment is better than riches," said the ready made philosopher.

"True," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "but my observation is that a man who is rich has a better chance of becoming content than a man who is contented has of becoming rich."—Washington Star.

More things would come to him who waits if they were not captured on the way by the man who won't wait.—Lippincott's.

"There is nothing more true in connection with human life than that we grow into the likeness of those things we contemplate."—Ralph Waldo Trine.

MISCELLANEOUS

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Montana District Sunday school convention will convene at Bozeman, Friday, May 30, 1913. We want every school in the district represented if possible. Secretaries please forward your reports at least one week previous.
William J. Murray, Dist. Sec.
Bozeman, Mont.

CORNER STONE LAYING.

The basement of the second Philadelphia church, (The Beacon Light Chapel) is nearing completion. The corner stone was laid April 6th, in the presence of a large gathering of saints and friends. Bishop John Zimmerman of Philadelphia, Pa., in charge of services. Elder Benj. R. McGuire of Brooklyn, N. Y., made the principal address and laid the corner stone. Elders Daniel T. Shaw, W. W. Smith, A. D. Angus and E. B. Hull also took part in the services. It is expected that the basement will be ready for occupancy about June 1st; in the meantime services will continue at the Mission building, 1825-East Cambria St.

UNITED ORDER ENOCH.

A general meeting of the United Order of Enoch will be held at the stone church, Independence, Mo., at 2 p. m., May 5th.
W. R. Dexter, Sec.

"Faith is not the antithesis of reason: the two travel together up to a certain point, when reason, because man is finite, can go no further and faith journeys on alone."

The spirit of liberty is not, as multitudes imagine, a jealousy of our particular rights, but a respect for the rights of others.

CONFERENCE MINUTES

Seattle and British Columbia District semi-annual conference convened with the Seattle Branch, February 8, 1913, District President and Vice-President, Wm. Johnson and P. W. Premo, presiding. Secretary F. W. Holman at the desk. Leonard S. Rhodes, assisting. Branches reporting: Seattle showing 220 members; New Westminster 33, a gain of 3; Chilliwack 41, a gain of 5; Centralia 78, a gain of 8, aggregating 372. This together with the enrollment of the disorganized branches, Tacoma, Castle Rock and Nainaimo, numbering 25, 29 and 7 respectively, makes a total of 433 for the district, a net gain of 34. Bishop's agent, Wm. Johnson of 3618 Evanston Ave., Seattle, Wash., reported on hand last report $675.62, with subsequent receipts after an expenditure of $1989.87 to leave a balance of $501.45 on hand February 1st, 1913. District Book agent, Leonard S. Rhodes of Centralia, Wash., reported $21.85 received from the sale of books for the past 6 months. Ministry reporting as follows: Elders S. P. Cox, P. T. Plumb, P. W. Premo, Henry Stade, I. S. McMullen, Samuel Pope and F. W. Holman. Also Priests, Leonard S. Rhodes and Norris Heading. Officers elected for the ensuing year were Wm. Johnson, president, P. W. Premo, vice-president; F. W. Holman, secretary, and Sr. Bertha S. Enslie member of Library Board. Evana E. Insee was elected director of the district choir movement, to work together, and in harmony with the new general movement.

In accordance with previous arrangements that a reunion should be held jointly with the Portland District at Vancouver, Wash., sometime during the coming August, a measure was adopted that the summer conference would convene at Centralia, Wash., three days prior to the opening of said Reunion.

A petition was ordered sent to the First Presidency and Quorum of Twelve that Bro. George W. Thorburn might be returned to the district the coming conference year. A petition from the Roslyn Branch to be reinstated in the district was granted, subject to the ratification of general conference. The usual preaching services were held on Sunday, also a sacrament service in the afternoon wherein a goodly degree of the Holy Spirit was manifested. At this meeting Leonard S. Rhodes was ordained to the office of an elder, in compliance with a petition from his home (Centralia) branch, under the hands of Elders Wm. Johnson, P. T. Plumb and S. P. Cox. Let all remember, whose names are enrolled upon the records of disorganized branches, Tacoma, Castle Rock and Nainaimo, they may obtain letters of removal when desired, by applying to the undersigned, stating what branch they wish to join. Fred'k. W. Holman, Sec., 4233 Bagley Ave., Seattle, Wash.

CORRECTION.

In my article, "Endowments" in April 17, in the first column, on page 3, and in line 42, from top of that column is the word "apparition," which should be operation, and in line 56, of same column is the word "these", which should be there, and in the 89th line of the same column is the word "thence" which should be hence.—Charles Derry.

REED.—At Kansas City, Mo., March 29th, 1913, Mr. Perry L. Reed. Mr. Reed was born at Davenport, Iowa, but has resided in Kansas City for the past 28 years. During his residence here he has been a cripple from paralysis and the three last years of his life was confined to his bed. The funeral services were conducted from the Odonald undertaking rooms, March 31st, by Elder J. A. Tanner. He was 74 years old at death.

LINGUEST.—Bernice Izetta, infant daughter of Bro. and Sr. Linquest, died January 7, 1913, after a very brief illness. She was 14 months old at death, lacking six days. She was the only child and was unusually bright for her age. Funeral services were held in the home and the address was made by Elder F. M. Cooper of Plano, Ill. The gospel hope of immortality is the only parental solace to these grief-stricken young people.

BASS.—John M. Bass was born March 26, 1846, near Vandalia, Ill., and died near Kimmunity, Ill., March 10, 1913, aged 67 years, 11 months and 13 days. On January 29th, 1865, he was married to Sarah Card and to this union were born two children, one dying in infancy and his wife died March 31, 1868. He was married again on April 7, 1868, to Josephine Barren, and to this union were born nine children, four daughters and five sons, all of whom survive him. He was baptized July 11, 1870, by Elder I. A. Morris, ordained a deacon in 1884 and a priest in 1892. Funeral sermon by Sam Hoover, assisted by Cullin Moore.

EDITORIAL

A BACKWARD GLANCE.

The experiences of the late general conference have impressed our mind deeply with this thought:—The church is fulfilling, and will fulfill, the divine purposes designed in its establishment. It is not difficult for one who has followed the progress of the church work for some time to see in that work the provident hand of God, for there has never been a time of real urgent need but that men have been found ready to step in and occupy, or means have been provided by which the need has been met.

For eighty years or more some of the prophecies given in the Book of Mormon, and the revelations to the church have been in process of fulfillment, while others have awaited fulfillment up to the present time, but the signs of the times as indicated by what was seen and heard at the conference, point quite clearly to a fulfillment of some of those prophecies in the near future. We refer especially to those which state that after the gospel has been preached to the "Gentiles" it is to go to those of the house of Israel. The change is also to mark the fulfilling of the "times of the Gentiles."

The recent planting of the gospel of the kingdom among the Jews at Jerusalem, and also among the Indians of Oklahoma whom the church believes to be Israelites, is of no small significance in the light of the prophecies mentioned. The revelations declare that many of the Indians would come in, and efforts have been made from time to time in their behalf with little or no success, but of late the Spirit of God has been working with them in Oklahoma, and the missionaries there have been followed in their work by its manifestations so that many have been brought into the church. While the present magnitude of the work among them is small, it nevertheless points to that which the future may render possible, and in due time the work will be fully established among them.

The Lord said: "Therefore when these works, and the works which shall be wrought among you hereafter, [as recorded in the Book of Mormon] shall come forth from the Gentiles unto your seed, . . . and when these things come to pass, that thy seed shall begin to know these things, it shall be a sign unto them, that they may know that the work of the Father hath already commenced unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made unto the people who are of the house of Israel."—Book of Mormon. Thus when the Lord's work commences among the Indians as referred to in the above statement it is a sign for the commencement of that work among other portions of Israel. So it is not strange that concurrently with the planting of the gospel among the remnants of Israel in America, it should also be planted among the Jews at Jerusalem.

The changes wrought by the conference have placed many of the departments of church work upon an improved basis. The quorum of apostles was strengthened by the addition of four young men chosen to take the places of others most of whom had grown aged in the work. Every man in the quorum now is capable of almost any service that might be required of him, the oldest G. T. Griffiths who was chosen president of the quorum, being appointed upon a mission to Australia.

The patriarchal order whose especial duties are to preserve and strengthen the spiritual life of the members of the church, were strengthened by the addition of several new members by ordination, who were men of experience and faith in the work. The presiding bishopric was put in better condition for service by the call of E. A. Blakeslee into more active service and his ordination to the office of bishop, and the provision that the presiding bishop choose some other to assist in the work of the office.

The scope of the church work is broadening, and the progressing times are constantly making new demands which must be met. The divine counsel which comes from time to time enables the church to meet these demands and move forward in wise and safe lines, some of which might not have been otherwise discovered.

In addition to the changes made in the quorums, the revelation accepted by the conference warned the church against the influences working within tending to retard the work, and pointed out a safe course of procedure by which the temporal affairs of the church would be brought into better condition, requiring economy in public and private expenditure, and the spirit of sacrifice in rendering the proper support to the church work.

Prospects for future growth and the ultimate accomplishment of all that has been indicated in prophetic revelation, were never brighter, and the evidences that the Spirit of God is with his people, give abiding faith and patient assurance that the kingdom is safely founded, and will outride all the storms of opposition.

ACCEPTING A REVELATION.

The doctrine of present and continued revelation has been held by the church from the time of its organization in 1830, though the attitude of the church toward it has been very much misunderstood by those who believe differently.

Revelation is not restricted to one man in the church, though the law of the church as given by revelation provides that only those revelations coming through the head of the church shall be received as law to the church. This is consistent and necessary, and but follows the custom had by earthly governments in dealing with each other through their chosen representatives. The head of the church is recognized by the church as a prophet, and as such he is properly God's representative through whom communications designed to govern the church in its procedure should come.

To the minds of many the claim of present revelation implies superstition or even fanaticism upon the part of those making the claim probably because there have been some few religionists in the world, (not of the Latter Day Saints however), who have become unduly enthusiastic over some forms of spirit manifestation, and without controlling reason or law have been carried away into fanaticism. That some have been deceived in this regard furnishes no just argument against the principle of revelation. God did reveal his will to men anciently as conceded by all Bible believers and there is no consistent reason why he should not continue to do so, except that through unbelief and transgression men are unwilling to accept him.

Revelation does not destroy reason, nor is the church required to accept what comes from the prophet purporting to be revelation without examination and consideration. For this reason when the head of the church presents a communication of this kind, it goes to the various quorums for examination,—the presidency of whom there are three including the head of the church, the twelve apostles, the seventy, the high priests, the bishopric, and the elders; and if approved by them it is then presented to the body in general conference, and only upon endorsement by the body does it become a rule of action, or law for the government of the church. In this way the revelations given before the organization of the church and after up to 1835, were passed upon and accepted by a general assembly of the church in that year. The later revelations have been received in the same way including the one given at the late conference.

This has been a rule of the church, and the faith and doctrine of the church can only be judged by those things which it has accepted in this way. The purported revelation first brought to light by Brigham Young among his people in the West in 1852 with the claim that it was given by Joseph Smith, and which advocated the doctrine of plural marriage with other abominations, was never presented either to the quorums or the church, and under the rule of the church relating to the acceptance of revelations, never became a law to the church nor binding upon its people, and the church under Joseph Smith was in wise responsible for it.

The purpose of carefully examining a revelation is not to question the integrity of the Lord, nor the wisdom of what is revealed, but to guard against human frailties, for prophets are but human, and there might come a time when one standing at the head might fall into transgression, and either deliberately, or under the deception of a false spirit, give to the church that which was false. In examining a revelation comparison is made with previous revelations as contained in the Bible and other accepted scripture, and complete harmony found or it cannot be accepted. Such a document as the one brought to light by Brigham Young could not have passed the quorums had it been presented to them, for nearly every doctrine found therein was in direct conflict with the revelations already accepted by the church as found in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, as well as the Bible.

The early revelations warned the church against deceivers and the warning was found to be timely after the death of Joseph Smith when numerous deceivers sprung up leading away such as would follow them. But those who adhered to the teachings of the early church as were contained in the accepted revelations, were saved from the shame and disappointment of being deceived. In harmony with the divine principles the Reorganized Church has moved wisely and safely, and the fact that no revelation ever offered by the first president or his successor the present head of the church, has been rejected, speaks well for the faithfulness of these men, and the confidence which the church has in them.

PEACE.

Where peace doth reign how sweet is life
For in the soul and all around,
The things of life are seeming fair
And like the cool and balmy air,
Peace makes the soul with joys abound.

Peace is the richest gift to man
For where it reigns, no troubled sea
Will come to give our souls the pain
And greater peace than gold or fame
For peace brings joy incessantly.

Some nations now, are on in war,
Oh cruel war where men are slain
And blood from mortal veins does flow,
And round is scattered grief and woe
For many hearts do ache with pain.

Why must the hearts of parents break
Or wives and children groan and weep?
While loved ones round are shot to death
For God did give the mortal breath
And blood and what makes man complete.

Peace in the soul, peace in the soul,
Is what the nations need today,
Shake hands, make up and lay aside
Your armour and be satisfied,
And peace will come and come to stay.—The Truth.

VICTORY.

When you are content with any food, any raiment, any climate, any society, any solitude, any interruption by the will of G.J.—That is victory.

When you can lovingly and patiently bear with any disorder, any irregularity, any unpunctuality or any annoyance.—That is victory.

When you can stand face to face with waste, folly, extravagance, spiritual insensibility, and endure it all as Jesus endured it.—That is victory.

When you never care to refer to yourself in conversation or to record your own good works, or to rich after commendations, when you can truly love to be unknown.—That is victory.

When your good is truly spoken of, when your wishes are crossed, your taste offended, your advice disregarded, your opinions, ridiculed, and you take it all in patient, loving silence.—That is victory.

We are receiving many more letters for publication than we are able to use so that we are under the necessity of selecting. Preference is given to the shorter letters, other conditions being equal, hence we urge upon our correspondents to condense their communications into as small space as possible. Trivial and uninteresting matters should be avoided.

INDEPENDENCE TIMES.

The beautiful spring weather of last Sunday brought out a large attendance at all the services. Elder J. A. Gillen, recently ordained to the apostleship in harmony with the call in the late revelation, was the morning speaker. The effect of the service was a general assurance that the call was divine. The usual order of evening service was changed, the time being occupied with an excellent program of musical numbers rendered by the united choirs with special vocal and instrumental selections interspersed. Elders W. H. Garrett and F. M. Smith also gave short addresses upon the place of music in the church service. The afternoon prayer service was unusually good.

A movement has been started by the commercial club of Independence looking toward the placing of Independence under the city government of Kansas City, and a committee has been appointed to investigate its feasibility. The interests of the two cities are too widely distinct to justify annexation.

Sr. Mary Bowen died Monday at the sanitarium at the age of 78 years, following about six weeks after the amputation of a limb necessitated through cancer.

Sr. M. M. Peterson and family extend their sincere thanks to the many friends who, by their many tokens of love and sympathy in the time of bereavement, helped to ease the burden and assuage the sorrow due to the loss of husband and father, Bro. P. Peterson.

Bro. and Sr. A. A. Christensen express sincere thanks to those who so kindly assisted them by applying the golden rule following the loss of their home and furnishings by fire.

Bro. F. C. Keck who has been at the Independence Sanitarium for the past six weeks wishes us to say to his many friends that he is improving in health. He appreciates the many letters received though he cannot answer them all.

Bro. E. C. Briggs who was one of the first missionaries in the Reorganization, and now quite aged, has been quite ill at the home of Sr. Jules Turnour, in this city. His condition at present is much improved.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

We trust that as God's ministry start another year's work, that ways will be opened whereby much good will be accomplished both in and out of the church, and that abundance of strength will be given them to live as Holy men of God should live.

We that were not privileged to attend general conference were pleased to hear the good news of the work transacted through the church periodicals and those recently returned from there.

At our sacrament service the first Sunday of the month according to request our branch met in fasting and prayer and we are pleased to hear that the general effort was acknowledged by our heavenly Father blessing the assembled conference.

Since last report we have enjoyed as well as have been strengthened in sermons preached by Bro. Geo. Reeves his reading being from Isaiah 11 also 53d. The evening of April 6th. Bro. Geo. Barraclough of Lansdowne, Illinois preached on the deceitfulness of riches. Bro. George in former days was one of our St. Louis workers and we were glad of the privilege of hearing him.

The morning of April 13th. Bro. Billinsky gave a good talk to the Sunday school. And at the 11 o'clock service Bro. G. S. Trowbridge delivered a good historical discourse on ancient Israel.

Bro. T. J. Elliott gave an interesting talk pertaining to the Sunday school work conducted at the general Sunday school convention the morning of April 20th, and Bro. Archibald delivered the morning discourse on "Echoes from Conference," also recalling the late revelation. Bro. Archibald also spoke in the evening his theme being the process through which man passes to bring him to perfection.

The morning of April 6th, Bro. Geo. Reeves baptized Sr. Walker's brother, James Earl Doolin, he was confirmed at the sacrament service by Bro. Chas. Peat and J. J. Blinsky.

Bro. Archibald and Elliott presented little baby Juanita Ruth Lane, to our heavenly Father for his blessing and protection.

We are pleased that Sr. Noah Cooke who has been quite ill is now improved and she with Bro. Cooke are visiting in Voshall for one month.

The regular priesthood meeting was held April 20th.

CORRESPONDENCE

STOCKTON, Calif.

Dear Ensign.—It affords the writer no little pleasure to record the good things concerning the Stockton Branch. It is not a large branch, but is moving forward on about all lines of church work. Some lines are not ready in operation but are under contemplation and plans are being made for their accomplishment.

A beautiful Easter exercise was arranged and successfully carried out. The church was beautifully decorated in appropriate white and silver, with the green of lily foliage.

From the very beginning the Spirit of the original cause for such celebrations fell upon the audience as well as upon the performers. The committee who would naturally feel some little anxiety concerning the success of the occasion spoke of a peace that came in our midst and made us all rejoice.

There are some good souls who are members who seemingly do not realize the responsibility and importance of actual and continuous work in this great cause. We are looking forward to the time when they too may feel the joy of having accomplished something in this regard.

We also wish to report concerning the "cloud" that burst upon and settled down and around the pastor a few evenings before his departure for general conference. It was a bright "cloud" and yet was not without its "silver lining." The "lining" was left with the pastor while the "cloud" returned. Needless to say the "cloud" with its brightness, silver lining, and all were much appreciated by said pastor.

It is a source of a heart full of pleasure to feel the unmistakable evidences of appreciation when leaving a firm where labor and sincere desire for good has been expended.

May the good Spirit of the Master continually brood over Stockton Branch with all the Israel of God.

H. J. Davison.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., March 24.

Dear Ensign.—It has been some time since I heard the old Jerusalem gospel preached in this large city. I have never met anyone of our faith in Newburg, Ind., and vicinity. I met two Brighamite families and had quite an argument with one of them, with several Methodists and a Baptist present. They knew something about our faith. I am thankful for the gospel and the many blessings I have received all along life's journey. I have had some trials as all saints do. We are not to travel on flowery beds of ease. I hope to live humble and faithful, discharging every duty, so I may enjoy more of God's Holy Spirit, and when my life's work is ended I may dwell with the pure in heart. Dear saints, pray for me. I often feel my weakness. I desire to be humble and faithful as all of God's children. I love to meet with the saints.

Your sister,

M. J. McMurtry.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., March 23.

Editor Ensign.—I have just been reading the good letters and testimonies of so many of the saints; I will say as Bro. O. Dutton said I cannot express my feelings on paper for I feel rejoiced to see the faith of the saints expressed in so many ways and places. I cannot make known my great desire to be among those good people who write so interestingly of our dear Savior's blessings and his goodness toward them. I realize my weakness, yet I feel the help of our Lord each day. When reading the letters of the isolated ones my eyes fill with tears to overflowing for I am experiencing the same longing and loneliness. It is a daily thought to me how long will we have to remain in this isolated condition. Not long I pray. I am ever praying to God that we may have the privilege of hearing the gospel in its beauty and simplicity.

We have a good family of saints moved into our town, a Bro. and Sr. Moore, young in years and in the cause, yet they are fine people.

Dear saints, my children are becoming scattered, some away from the church, and in bad health. I feel my sorrows are many and I humbly ask the saints to join me in prayer that they may soon come into the church and regain health.

Dear boys, if by chance you see this, think of mother's pleadings and mother's prayers and advice in the bye-gone days, and obey.

Praying for God's people the whole world over, and his great cause. Your sister in the one faith,

Mrs. Virginia Boyd.

STEVENSON, Ont., March 31.

Editor Ensign.—I came to this part after the holidays, deeming it wise, for it had been impressed on my mind for some time to do so, Bro. Jesse Hardin of Unionopolis accompanying me, it being his virgin effort in missionary work.

We found the saints and friends busy in the effort to build a church in which to worship. Prior to this they worshipped in a Grange Hall, but they concluded it better to build than to pay rent, and have the bother of clearing the hall of tobacco stains every time they used it. The rent would pay the interest on enough money to build a house, so set to work, appointed a building committee, got several hundred dollars subscribed, and all the help wanted to put up the building. Mr. J. M. Floro donated enough land for the church to sit on, also contributing some money. A friend who was a carpenter made a bill of the material.

The size of the building was to be 40x28 with walls 14 ft. high. So by the time I got there the foundation was laid of cement blocks, the frame up and some of the sheathing on. We remained with them till it was closed in and ready for plastering, a Mr. Williams and Mr. Floro doing the plastering, putting on one coat of Egyptian fibre, making a very neat job of it. So in the course of two weeks it was ready for the casing. During this time I was called to Connautville, also calling at Sharon, doing labor at both of these places.

When I returned I helped put the casings on and finished the wood work inside, doing some of the painting and making a pulpit. They have ordered the seats from a firm in Chicago and it may be about a month or six weeks before they arrive, so by that time it will be ready for occupancy, and the saints and all who desire to worship have the opportunity to worship unmolested by creedology. So trust it will long stand to unfurl the banner of King Immanuel.

They have an up-to-date frame structure, three windows on each side, circle tops, and a double door in the end and a belfry with a seven hundred pound bell in it, so as to give due notice of the meetings. The neighbors and friends did well both with their means and labor for which we feel grateful. So rolls on the good work.

Your co-laborer,

Samuel Brown.

New Boston, Ill.

Dear Ensign.—At the present time realizing my position and standing with our Lord Jesus Christ and thinking my testimony might cause some poor soul to rejoice, I communicate to your readers a little of my experience which I hope if you haven't room for all of it, you might publish according to your judgment the most necessary part.

When I was only a boy, how old I do not know; I should judge about eleven, I began smoking cigarettes. I continued three or four years when I got the idea that a pipe would be better for me, so went and bought one. After smoking it for a while, I began to think I was better off without tobacco at all, so I made the resolution to quit, the resolution which I found easy to make but requiring more power than was in my ability to keep. This experience was repeated several times without success.

Finally a feeling came over me that I ought to be better and try and serve God. I would read the Bible but without meaning and understanding. One day I told mother I was going to join the church. The Presbyterian of which I supposed they were members, and she thought it a fine thing and a good step, so I gathered up all the courage I could to march up to the altar on the following Sunday to be baptized. Sunday came around and I was there for what I believed to be so solemn an act. When my name was called I was ushered to the front, and was baptized by being sprinkled.

After church I was turned loose to fight for myself without even a congratulation. I began to lose spirit and feel a little indifferent toward the people of the church. After I had been a member for awhile, I began to think I had not gone through the right process, for every time I would read about baptism, it would appear to me that a person had to go under the water and I couldn't get rid of the thought. Finally I began to think the church wasn't right anyway for the more I read the more I could see it was lacking, and little by little I drifted away thinking I had just as good a chance for heaven as they had.

About three years ago when the Lord led me out of New York toward the west, I landed in Muscatine, Iowa. Soon after leaving I began again to smoke and do other things which were not right.

One Sunday morning after finishing chores, I was left alone I picked up the book again with an honest heart and a determination to serve Christ. The day passed by with continual reading until about 4 o'clock when the folks returned and I began to rejoice in my soul. The man I was working for at that time told me the saints were holding meetings. That night I went out to church again hoping I might hear some good. Bro. O. E. Sade of Joy, Ill., was doing the preaching and inside of fifteen minutes I felt easier and was ready to be baptized. I slept little that night for the struggle that was going on in my soul; and on Wednesday morning I again made the resolution to quit the use of tobacco and asked the Lord to help me. I threw smoking and chewing tobacco and pipe into the stove. The Lord took away the desire for chewing the same day, but it was impossible for me to conquer smoking until the morn of my baptism which was the 3d of November last, and through the grace and power of our Lord Jesus Christ, I have never touched it since. I have had many trials and hardships, but my persecutions as yet are light for which I can dearly thank Christ and God. As a young member, both in membership and age, I haven't had the chance for much experience. Still for all I rejoice and have great pleasure in the work as well as sadness.

I remain a brother in Christ Jesus,

Robert G. Ayres.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, March 17.

Editor Ensign.—I indeed enjoy reading the good news from the different parts of the Lord's vineyard and to hear how the gospel is progressing.

I did not have the opportunity of associating and working with the saints until about five years ago when we moved to Stewartsville, Mo., living there 2 years, then moved to St. Joseph, Mo., living there four years, but I had united with the church a number of years prior.

I was correspondent of the First St. Joseph Branch, for a long time, later, becoming district secretary of the Sunday school, of the Far West District. Circumstances were such that we were compelled to move here, nearly one year ago, not a saint have we seen, since so we can certainly sympathize with those that are isolated. Being young and out in the world again there are many trials and temptations that have come before me, but I have tried to be faithful and prayerful and not yield, and I know the Lord has been my helpers.

The people, I find are very prejudice here, not much for church. One lady living near me has asked me to explain our church to her and she wants to read our Ensign so, I let her have it every week.

I hope that I shall be able to lead many to embrace the gospel. If there are any saints in this city, and sees this, would like if they would look us up.

Ever praying for the advancement of this work.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 23.

Editor Ensign.—We enjoy reading letters of the saints, and we gather courage and strength to go on with the good work and make a greater effort, after hearing of so many cheerful letters. We feel greatly encouraged with the future prospects for our little branch of 53 members. We are not very "many", but we feel very "much alive" and have no intention of becoming discouraged, or giving up.

Elder J. W. Metcalf of Independence, Mo., has been with us several weeks and just returned home. He is a great, big bunch of enthusiasm and full of the Spirit and in his very efficient way, makes the good old gospel story so plain that many outsiders have become interested and several, will be baptized soon, and the saints have been strengthened, by reason of his stay with us. He made many friends while in Topeka who will long remember his sojourn amongst us.

The daily papers have been printing my sermons showing the difference between the two churches. Truly Paul's prophecy has come to pass 1st Tim. 4:1: "In the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to 'seducing spirits' and Doctrines of Devils; also 2nd Peter 2:2, 11 and many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." We get our sermons in three papers, so we feel the Lord is blessing our efforts.

We expect to keep the ball rolling.

Yours for greater effort

E. T. Lucas.

NEARER, MY SAINTS, TO ME.

Hymn sung by Elder Joseph Luff at the afternoon prayer service, Sunday, April 13, 1913, Lamoni, Iowa, just after the saints had sung "Nearer, my God, to thee."

Nearer, my Saints, to me,

Nearer to me,

Doat thou in verity

Desire to be?

Hail! at thou with joy the cross;

Pain, grief, or worldly loss,

If they but purge thy dross

And lead to me?

Though be thy pilgrimage

Dreary and lone,

And here thy heritage

To joy unknown;

Content by these 'tis ead,

Wilt thou to me commend

Thy course, and to the end

Trust me alone?

Wilt thou, to nearer be,

Pleasures forego?

And give thy store 'relieve

Another's woe?

Spend not for laughter brief

What may thy neighbor's grief

Assuage, and sweet relief

In gladness sow?

Daily I speak, but few

My voice have learned.

I stand within thy view,

Yet undiscerned.

Each human tear and plea

That asks relief from thee,

Invites thee near to me,

As thou hast yearned.

Pillows of down or stone

Lead not to me;

Nor deeds, nor gifts alone,

But charity.

Whate'er, where'er, thou art—

Wealth, want, or woe, thy part,

If love but rule thy heart,

Thou'rt near to me.

No station, rank, or gift,

More than is thine,

Need'st thou thy life to lift

Nearer to mine.

From every state and sphere

Ascending steps appear

To sight by love made clear,

Steps all divine.

Each, by the store be hath—

Time, wealth or skill;

Rugged or smooth his pat'

On plane, or hill;

May in his service be

Close, always close to me,

And my companion be Eternally.

HARSHAW, Wis., April 2.

Dear Ensign:—Find inclosed one dollar for the renewal of my subscription, I do not want to do without it, for it is the only preacher we have. I long to be where we can have church privileges. We have a nice little Latter Day Saints Sunday school now, for which we are very thankful! There were only three saints here. We organized a Union Sunday school; there were Quakers, Methodists, and others who did not belong to any church. Two families were using home class quarters, so we used them for our school. Bro. Robinson came and preached for us and made things very plain, and seven more were led to see the true gospel. We hope to live faithful that others may see the way and be added to our number.

When we read about the terrible floods and calamities all over the world I am led to say, "O, will the saints live so these things will pass them by." Dear saints, we must live humble knowing the crown lies at the end of the race. I find no comfort on this earth so grand as serving my Master, and it is something that never grows old or tiresome to me.

I started in this work when a child and I thank God he called me to serve him. When a child of seven I had the pleasure of seeing my mother healed of a cancer, because of which she had not put her feet to the floor for a year and a half and was not out of bed only as she was lifted out to another bed to have her bed fixed up. She was carried in a rocking chair to the river and baptized. She said, "Oh I cannot describe the joy of my heart." She was carried to the door, she said, "Put me down and let me walk." She walked across a large room praising God. Another day God be praised. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion and God's people. Your sister in the gospel,

Mrs. Flora Loomis.

GREEN CITY, Mo., March 5.

Dear Ensign:—It has been fifteen years since husband and I, with several others, obeyed the glorious restored gospel, and was organized into a branch by T. W. Chaburn. We had a prosperous little branch for about five years, and I remember with love God's servants who have taught the gospel here, but the spirit of unrest came into our midst and four families including some of the officers went west, which took the larger part of our little branch. So the few of us that remained were so scattered our branch became disorganized, though my husband, the priest of our branch, still preached as circumstances permitted.

Oh! how often has my mind wandered back to the blessed and spiritual meeting we used to enjoy, and to the absent ones whom we first learned to love by the Spirit of the Master in the restored gospel. Though our loss is others gain in some other parts of God's vineyard. I hope we can have an elder come after conference as there has been several requests for meetings by outsiders, and five are ready for baptism. I do pray that our branch may be organized again, for which I sincerely ask the prayers of the saints, for in the unity of the Spirit there is strength. One of the five who are ready for baptism is our son, ten years old, our only child living. Two have gone on to the paradise of God. I have had sorrow and many spiritual blessings since I accepted the restored gospel.

I feel I am the most unworthy of God's children and sincerely ask the prayers of the saints, also that the honest in heart may be gathered in out here and a branch be organized. May we all live worthy of God's blessings in my prayer in Jesus' name.

GEARY, Okla., March 25

We have a good branch in this neighborhood though there are many against our belief, but that makes our faith that much the stronger. We have prayer meeting nearly every two weeks with good attendance.

There are quite a few of the Lamanites (Indians) across the river have joined the church and there is one among them that has the lung trouble and has been very ill for the past two weeks and has given up of living very much longer. But his people do pray and fast that he might recover or be relieved of his disease and I would like to make the request that all pray and fast in the behalf of this Lamanite brother that has the lung trouble.

Yours very truly,

James Williams.

As I attempt to take Sr. Goodwin's place among you, dear workers, I feel my inexperience and inability. My desire is to serve and to benefit and to be benefited, so I shall be glad to hear from our readers and to receive their suggestions and aid.

MOTHER AND CHILD.

I was privileged to attend an early morning prayer service on "Mothers Day," some months ago,—here in Independence.

A striking feature was the presence of the carnation or other flowers on the breast of almost all present. "In memory of mother!" This alone, indicated that unity of mind, and heart existed among us. Often more than one at a time attempted to pray, speak or sing. And from all, we heard of mother! (If only such sublime unity of thought and purpose could always characterize us in our labors! The flower of love adorning our hearts, in reverence for the wishes of the Father of us all.) Many a mother would have rejoiced to see the fear of God hold fast the heart of her child, and that he was consequently humbled and realized his weakness.

Young people do not realize until the care free days of the teens, and almost all of the twenties, have past,—what opportunities, what privileges and blessings have been theirs as a result of a mother's sacrifices and training.

And this means sadness, the keen sadness of regret and remorse; for seldom do they take the things of life, worked out and planned by fond parents and the guiding hand of Providence, as any thing but their just dues, and as a matter of course.

Worse—it seems the world of young get more heedless and exacting. My thoughts wandered to a member of the sweet sixteens—a charming Miss, whose mother had wept as she told me of her girl's wonderfully good characteristics and abilities, and how so often they were eclipsed by a selfishness and pride apparently born in her.

I was dumb at the time because of her grief and my inexperience, but I lost no time later, in relating my experiences at this service, and I said to her, that had the child been present, at that meeting she would have received the good she needed. Or if she were even accustomed to attending one of this nature occasionally, for there are not many of life's experiences, that affect one, young or old, such as do the testimonies of the young and the humble public confessions of their weaknesses and struggles.

Soon after the service opened, eight or ten young men filed silently down the aisle from a back room. And they all wore some white button-hole flower. And I thought, "They realize now—her worth; and maybe they always have: I hope so."

And I thought again of their meeting in the back room, and remembered similar services by other young men barely out of their teens, some few years ago; and which finally developed into this very eight o'clock Sunday morning prayer meeting, so largely attended now, by young and old.

They first met in the timber near the church, previous to prayer meetings, and prepared themselves through prayer to help liven the larger service. Next, they invited some of the girls to meet with them; and in one of the lower rooms of the church this dozen or so young people met regularly at eight o'clock on Sunday morning, a member of the priesthood in charge. Such feasts as we enjoyed!

But the influence of that hour did not end there; it went with us into our homes and from week to week we were thus strengthened; for we learned that one who realizes his weakness and tries to overcome, gains strength at each effort, even though he fail and fail—just so he keep on trying. A start like this "in the days of their youth" will prove a boon to the anxious parents; also, the Lord rejoices at an added opportunity to answer their prayers, by the sure striving of his Spirit with the young hearts.

EXPERIMENTS IN COOKERY

The main results of the experiments in the ENSIGN for January 30th may be summarized as follows:—

1. All foods named in experiment 1, contained some starch.
2. The temperature for cooking starches must be at or above the boiling point.
3. The starch particles of pure starch and flour must be separated by a cold liquid or by fat or sugar before being combined with a hot liquid as in gravies, etc. if a smooth product be desired.
4. Both rice and potatoes should be well cooked but not allowed to stand in water or overcook because they lose shape, become "soggy" or water soaked, due to the starch dissolving.
5. The presence of a large amount of cellulose, (woody fibre,) and unlike starches they must be cooked a longer time than otherwise.

Besides starches, fats also produce fuel for the body and, when used for deep fat frying should be hot enough to produce a deep brown on uncooked foods in 60 minutes and in 40 minutes on cooked foods.

What will be the effect on the temperature of the fat if too large an amount of food be tried at once? What is the effect on deep fat fried foods, when the fat is not hot enough?

The principal tissue building foods are as follows:—Milk, eggs, cheese, meat, nuts, and legumes, (peas, beans, lentils,) and unlike starches they must be cooked at a low temperature, as the following experiments will show:—

- Experiment 1. Heat one-fourth cup sour milk to the luke warm temperature; heat one-fourth cup sour milk to the simmering temperature; boil one-fourth cup sour milk 10 minutes. Compare results.
- Experiment 2. Dissolve the white of an egg in twice its volume of water. Strain through a cheese cloth to remove undissolved particles, if any are left. Heat the filtered or strained portion slowly to the boiling point and note all changes. Remove a part of the white as soon as it has coagulated sufficiently to do so. Compare this part with that which remains at the time of boiling. Which temperature gives the more tender product? Drop some egg white into cold water and a like amount into "near-boiling" water. What is the result? What should be the temperature of water in which eggs are poached? Why?
- Experiment 3.
 - (a) Cover an egg with cold water. Heat to 80 degrees C. Keep at this temperature 6 minutes. Note the appearance of the water.
 - (b) Place an egg in a pint of boiling water, cover, remove immediately from heat; let stand 5 minutes.
 - (c) Boil an egg 3 minutes in enough water to cover it. Open each egg at the expiration of the time and compare results.
- Experiment 4. Melt a small piece of cheese at a low temperature and compare with a like amount melted at high temperature.
- Experiment 5. Compare results in meat cooked as follows:—
 - (a) By placing 3 lbs. of beef rump in water at 100 degrees centigrade, (boiling,) maintaining this temperature one-half hour, then finishing in a freless cooker (4 hrs.)
 - (b) Repeat the conditions of (a), maintaining the boiling temperature 10 minutes, then reducing to the simmering point, to finish cooking (4 hrs.)
 - (c) Repeat the conditions of (a), maintaining the boiling temperature during the whole process of cooking (4 hrs.)
 Compare results as to tenderness, color, juiciness, and flavor.
- Experiment 6. Cut stewing meat into small squares, and divide into two portions,
 - (a) Cover one with cold water and let stand one-half hour. Then heat slowly to the boiling point.
 - (b) Place the second portion in boiling water; boil 3 minutes. Cut open one piece from each and compare.
 Explain differences in broth.

Why do we sear meats before beginning to roast or broil them?

N. B. Most of the experiments given above are taken from "The Application of Heat to Food Materials," issued by the Department of Household Administration, University of Chicago.

SERMONS AND ARTICLES

OUR WORK AMONG THE LAMANITES:

For several years past efforts have been made among the Indians of Oklahoma tending toward the establishment of the church among them, and not without success. Last year the work of baptizing began and the church has a respectable following among that people, the Cheyenne Tribe taking the lead in their acceptance of the true gospel.

Representing this people at the late general conference of the church, held at Lamoni, Iowa, were four persons of the Cheyennes, viz., Three Fingers, Chief of the tribe; Phillip Cook, known as the "Medicine Man," but whose relation to his people is that of spiritual advisor; his wife, Leah Cook; and a grand-daughter of the chief—Lulu Bearshield. Chief Three Fingers and Phillip Cook are not only members of the church, but have been ordained to the office of elder, and the latter being educated in English is quite capable of becoming a minister of the gospel to his people.
